Then Mr. Latimer firſt repeating the Reaſons of Dr. Buckneham, whereby he would prove it a dangerous Thing for the vulgar People to have the Scripture in the vulgar Tongue, ſo refuted the Friar, ſo anſwered to his Objections, ſo dallied with his bald Reaſon of the Ploughman looking back, and of the Baker leaving his Bread unleavened, that the Vanity of the Friar might to all Men appear, well proving and declaring to the People, that there was no ſuch Fear nor Danger for the Scriptures to be in Engliſh, as the Friar pretended; at leaſt requiring this, that the Scripture might be ſo long in the Engliſh Tongue, till Engliſhmen were ſo mad, that either the Ploughman durſt not look back, or the Baker ſhould leave his Bread unleavened. And proceeding moreover in his Sermon, he began to diſcourſe of the myſtical Speeches and figurative Phraſes of the Scripture; which Phraſes he ſaid were not ſo diffuſe and difficult, as they were common in the Scripture, and in the Hebrew Tongue are commonly uſed and unknown; and not only in the Hebrew Tongue, but alſo every Speech (ſaith he) hath his like Metaphors and figurative Significations, ſo common and vulgar to all Men, that the very Painters do paint them on Walls and on Houſes.

As for Example (ſaith he, looking toward the Friar that ſate overagainſt him) when they paint a Fox preaching out of a Friar's Cowl, none is ſo mad to take this to be a Fox that preacheth, but know well enough the meaning of the Matter; which is to paint out unto us, what Hypocriſy, Crafts, and ſubtle Diſſimulation lieth hid many times in theſe Friars Cowls, willing us thereby to beware of them. In fine, Friar Buckneham was ſo daſh'd with this Sermon, that he durſt never after peep out of the Pulpit againſt Mr. Latimer.

Another barking Friar againſt Mr. Latimer.

Beſides this Buckneham, there was alſo another railing Friar, not of the ſame Coat, but of the ſame Note and Faction, a grey Friar and a Doctor, an outlandiſh Man, named Dr. Venetus, who likewiſe in his brawling Sermons railed and raged againſt Mr. Latimer, calling him a mad and brainleſs Man, and willing the People not to believe him, &c. To whom Mr. Latimer anſwering again, taketh for his Ground the Words of our Saviour Chriſt, Matt. 5. Thou ſhalt not kill, &c. But I ſay unto you, Whoſoever is angry with his Neighbour ſhall be in Danger of Judgment; and whoſoever ſhall ſay unto his Neighbour Racha, (or any other like Words of rebuking) ſhall be in Danger of Council: and whoſoever ſhall ſay unto his Neighbour, Fool, ſhall be in Danger of Hell-fire.

Mr. Latimer's Anſwer.

In diſcuſſing of which Place, firſt he divideth the Offence of killing into three Branches. One to be with Hand, the other with Heart, the third with Word. With Hand, when we uſe any Weapon drawn, to ſpill the Life of our Neighbour. With Heart, when we be angry with him: With Word, when in Word or Countenance we diſdainfully rebuke our Neighbour, or deſpitefully revile him. Words of rebuking are, when we ſpeak any opprobrious or unſeemly thing, whereby the Patience of our Neighbour is moved, as when we call him mad (ſaid he) or brainleſs, or ſuch like, which are guilty of Council: Words of Spite, or Reviling are, when we call him Fool; which Chriſt ſaith is guilty of Hell-fire. Anno 1555.

Thus Mr. Latimer in handling and trimming this Matter, after that with the Weight of Chriſt's Words, and the explaining of the ſame, he had ſufficiently born the Friar clean down, then he turned to the fifth Chapter of the Book of Wiſdom. Out of which Chapter he declared to the Audience, how the true Servants and Preachers of God in this World, commonly are ſcorned and reviled by the proud Enemies of God's Word, which account them here as Madmen, Fools, brainleſs and drunken: So did they (ſaid he) in the Scripture call them which moſt purely preached, and ſet forth the Glory of God's Word. But (ſaid he) what will be the End of theſe jolly Fellows, or what will they ſay in the End? We Madmen, we mad Fools, we, we ourſelves, &c. And that will be their End except they repent. And thus ending his Sermon, he ſo confounded the poor Friar, that he drave him not only out of Countenance, but alſo clean out of the Univerſity.

But why ſhould I here ſtand decyphering the Names of his Adverſaries, when whole Swarms of Friars and Doctors flocked againſt him on every Side, almoſt through the whole Univerſity, preaching and likewiſe barking againſt him? Amongſt whom was Dr. Watſon, Maſter of Chriſt's-College, whoſe Scholar Latimer had been before; Dr. Notaries, Maſter of Clare-Hall; Dr. Philo, Maſter of Michael-Houſe; Dr. Metecalfe, Maſter of St. John's; Dr. Blithe, of the King's-Hall; Dr. Bullock, Maſter of the Queen's-College; Dr. Cliffe, of Clement-Houſe; Dr. Donnes, of Jeſus-College; Dr. Pſalms, Maſter of St. Nicholas Hoſtel; Bain, Rudd, and Greenwood, Batchelors of Divinity, all three of St. John's-College; alſo Brickenden, Batchelor of Divinity, of the ſame Houſe, and Scholar ſometime to the ſaid Latimer. In ſhort, almoſt as many as were Heads there of Houſes, ſo many Impugners did this worthy Standard-bearer of Chriſt's Goſpel ſuſtain.

Dr. Weſt Biſhop of Ely forbidding Mr. Latimer to preach.

Then came at laſt Dr. Weſt, Biſhop of Ely; who preaching againſt Mr. Latimer at Barwell Abbey, forbad him within the Churches of that Univerſity to preach any more. Notwithſtanding, ſo the Lord provided, that Dr. Barnes, Prior of the Auguſtine Friars, did licenſe Mr. Latimer to preach in his Church of the Auguſtines, and he himſelf preached at the Church by, called St. Edward's Church, which was the firſt Sermon of the Goſpel that Dr. Barnes preached, being Sunday and Chriſtmas Eve. Whereupon certain Articles were gathered out of his Sermon, and were commenced againſt him by Mr. Tyrell, Fellow of the King's-Hall, and ſo by the Vice-Chancellor preſented to the Cardinal.

This Mr. Latimer (as you have heard) being baited by the Friars, Doctors, and Maſters of that Univerſity, about the Year aforeſaid, 1529. notwithſtanding the Malice of theſe malignant Adverſaries, continued yet in Cambridge preaching for the Space of three Years together with Favour and Applauſe of the godly, alſo with ſuch Admiration of his Enemies that heard him, that the Biſhop himſelf coming in, and hearing his Gift, wiſhed himſelf to have the like, and was compelled to commend him upon the ſame.

So Mr. Latimer and Mr. Bilney after this

Anno 1555. continued in Cambridge for ſome Time, where they ſo frequently conferred together, that the Fields wherein they uſually walked, was for a long Time after called, The Hereticks Hill.

The Society of theſe two, as it was much noted by many in that Univerſity, ſo it was full of many good Examples, to all ſuch as would follow them, both in viſiting the Priſoners, relieving the Needy, and in feeding the Hungry. Mr. Latimer maketh mention of a certain Hiſtory which happened about this Time in Cambridge between them both and a certain Woman then Priſoner in the Caſtle or Tower of Cambridge, which I thought here worthy to be mentioned. The Story is this: It ſo happened, that after Mr. Latimer had been ſo acquainted with the aforeſaid Mr. Bilney, he went with him to viſit the Priſoners in the Tower of Cambridge, and being there, among other Priſoners, there was a Woman who was accuſed that ſhe had killed her own Child, which Act ſhe plainly and ſtedfaſtly deny'd. Whereby it gave them Occaſion to ſearch for the Matter, and at length they found that her Husband loved her not, and therefore ſought all Means he could to make her away. The Matter was thus:

A Child of hers had been ſick a whole Year, and at length died in Harveſt Time, as it were in a Conſumption: Which when it was gone, ſhe went to have her Neighbours to help her at the Burial, but all were Abroad in the Harveſt; whereby ſhe was enforced with Heavineſs of Heart, alone to prepare the Child for the Burial. Her Husband coming Home, and not loving her, accuſed her of murdering rhe Child. This was the Cauſe of her Trouble, and Mr. Latimer, by earneſt Inquiſition, of Conſcience thought the Woman not guilty. Then immediately after he was called to preach before King Henry the Eighth at Windſor, where after his Sermon the King's Majeſty ſent for him, and talked familiarly with him. At which Time Mr. Latimer, finding an Opportunity, kneeled down, opened this whole Matter to the King, and deſired her Pardon, which the King moſt graciouſly granted, and gave it to him at his Return homeward. In the mean Time the Woman was delivered of a Child in the Priſon, whoſe Godfather was Mr. Latimer, and Mrs. Cheek Godmother. But all the while he would not tell her of the Pardon, but laboured to have her confeſs the Truth of the Matter. At length the Time came when ſhe expected to ſuffer, and Mr. Latimer came, as he was wont, to inſtruct her; unto whom ſhe made great Lamentation and Moan, to be purify'd before her ſuffering, for ſhe thought ſhe muſt be damned if ſhe died without Purification.

Mr. Latimer.

Then Mr. Bilney being with Mr. Latimer, both told her, that that Law was made for the Jews, and not for us, and that Women be as well in the Favour of God before they be purify'd as after; and rather it was appointed for a civil and politick Law, for natural Honeſty ſake, than that they ſhould any Thing the more be purify'd from Sin thereby, &c. So thus they argued with this Woman 'till they had better inſtructed her, and at length ſhewed her the King's Pardon, and let her go.

This good Act, among many others about that Time, happened in Cambridge by Mr. Latimer and Mr. Bilney. But this was not all, for many more like Matters were wrought by them. But as it is commonly ſeen in the natural Courſe of Things, that as the Fire beginneth more to kindle, ſo the more Smoke ariſeth withal, in much like Sort it happened with Mr. Latimer; whoſe Towardneſs the more it began to ſpring, his Virtues to be ſeen, and his Doings to be known, the more his Adverſaries began to kick and ſpurn againſt him.

Mr. Latimer called up to the Cardinal.

After Mr. Latimer had thus travelled in preaching and teaching in the Univerſity of Cambridge about the Space of three Years, at length he was called up to the Cardinal for Hereſy, by the Procurement of ſome of the ſaid Univerſity, where he was content to ſubſcribe and grant to ſuch Articles as then they propounded to him, &c.

Dr. Buts a worthy Favourer of God's Word.

After that he returned to the Univerſity again, where ſhortly after by the Means of Dr. Buts the King's Phyſician, a ſingular good Man, and a ſpecial Favourer of good Proceedings, he was in the Number of them which laboured in the Cauſe of the King's Supremacy. Then went he to the Conrt, where he remained a certain Time in the ſaid Dr. Buts Chamber, preaching then in London very often. At laſt being weary of the Court, having a Benefice offered by the King, at the Sute of the Lord Cromwel and Dr. Buts, was glad thereof, ſeeking by that Means to be rid out of the Court, wherewith in no Caſe he could agree; and ſo having a Grant of the Benefice, contrary to the Mind of Dr. Buts, he would needs depart, and be reſident at the ſame.

This Benefice was in Wiltſhire, under the Dioceſe of Sarum, the Name of which Town was called Weſt Kingſton, where this good Preacher did exerciſe himſelf with much Diligence of teaching to inſtruct his Flock, and not only to them his Diligence extended, but alſo to all the Country about. In fine, his Diligence was ſo great, his Preaching ſo powerful, the Manner of his teaching ſo zealous, that there in like Sort he could not eſcape without Enemies. So true it is that St. Paul foretelleth us, Whoſoever will live godly in Chriſt, ſhall ſuffer Perſecution. It ſo happened, that whereas he preaching upon the Bleſſed Virgin Chriſt's Mother (whom we call our Lady) had thereupon declared his Mind, referring and reducing all Honour only to Chriſt our only Saviour, certain popiſh Prieſts being therewith offended, wrought much Trouble againſt him, drawing out Articles and Impoſitions which they untruly, unjuſtly, falſly, and uncharitably imputed unto him: Firſt, that he ſhould preach againſt our Lady, for that he reproved in a Sermon the ſuperſtitious Rudeneſs of certain blind Prieſts, which ſo held together upon the Bleſſed Virgin, as tho' ſhe never had any Sin, nor were ſaved by Chriſt the only Saviour of the whole World.

Mr. Latimer troubled for preaching Chriſt only to be our Saviour, and not our Lady.

Item, That he ſhould ſay, that Saints were not to be worſhipped.

Matter deviſed againſt Mr. Latimer by popiſh Prieſts.

Item, That Ave Maria was a Salutation only, and no Prayer.

Item, That there was no material Fire in Hell.

Item, That there was no Purgatory, in ſaying, that he had rather be in Purgatory than in Lollard's Tower.

The chief Impugners and Moleſters of him, beſides theſe Country Prieſts, were Dr. Powel of Salisbury, Dr. Wilſon ſometime of Cambridge, Mr. Hubberdin, and Dr. Sherwood. Of whom ſome ſome preached and ſome wrote againſt him; inſomuch that by their Procurement he was cited up, and called to appear before W. Warham Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and John Stokeſly Biſhop of London, Jan. 29, 1531. The Copy of which Citation (as now tranſlated from Latin) here followeth.

The Copy of a Citation ſent to the ſaid Mr. Latimer by the Chancellor of Sarum, at the Interceſſion of the Biſhop of London.

RICHARD HILLEY, Doctor of the Decrees of the moſt Reverend Father in God, Laurence, by divine Providence Biſhop of Sarum, and Vicar General in ſpiritual Affairs throughout England, To all and ſingular Rectors, Vicars, Chaplains, Curates, and the reſt of the Clergy and learned Perſons throughout the whole Dioceſs of Sarum, Health in our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Together and apart we commit and firmly command, that ye immediately cite or cauſe to be cited, Mr. Hugh Latimer, Vicar of Weſt Kingſton in the County of Wilts and Dioceſs of Sarum, that he may appear before the Reverend Father in God, John, by divine Providence Biſhop of London, or his Vicar General in Spirituals, or before the Chapter held in the Church of St. Paul, London, on Monday the 29th of this Inſtant January, between the Hours of Nine and Eleven in the Forenoon of the ſame Day, there perſonally to anſwer to certain Articles or Queſtions concerning grievous Crimes and Miſdemeanours by him committed, and under Cognizance of the Biſhop of London, and furthermore to receive condign Puniſhment for the ſame: And that ye certify us at Sarum of what is done on the Premiſſes before the 22d of the ſame Month of January, that we may be able to certify the ſame to the abovеſaid Reverend Father, the Lord Biſhop of London, on or before the ſaid 22d of January, according as the ſame Reverend Father having pray'd and required it of us, in Aid of the Law, and out of mutual Kindneſs.

Given at Sarum under the Seal of the aforeſaid Father in God, the 10th Day of January 1531.

Mr. Latimer appealed from the Biſhop of London's Citation, to his own Ordinary.

Againſt this Citation, although Mr. Latimer did appeal to his own Ordinary, requiring by him to be ordered, yet all that notwithſtanding, he was had up to London before Warham the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and the Biſhop of London, where he was greatly moleſted, and detained a long Time from his Cure at Home. There he being called thrice every Week before the ſaid Biſhops, to make Anſwer for his Preaching, had certain Articles or Propoſitions drawn out and laid to him, whereunto they required him to ſubſcribe. At length he not only perceiving their practical Proceedings, but alſo much grieved with their troubleſome Unquietneſs, who neither would preach themſelves, nor yet ſuffer him to preach and do his Duty, writeth to the aforeſaid Archbiſhop, partly excuſing his Infirmity, whereby he could not appear at their Commandment, partly expoſtulating with them for ſo troubling and detaining him from doing his Duty, and that for no juſt Cauſe, but only for preaching the Truth againſt certain vain Abuſes crept into Religion, much needful to be ſpoken againſt. Which all may appear by his Epiſtle ſent to a certain Biſhop or Archbiſhop, whoſe Name is not expreſſed; the Copy of which Epiſtle is now tranſlated from Latin, and is as followeth. Anno 1555.

A Copy of the Epiſtle written by Mr. Latimer to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

Moſt Reverend Governour,

HAD not Sickneſs prevented me, I had myſelf waited on you at your Palace; but theſe freſh Troubles have brought on me a ſharp Return of an old Diſtemper, ſo that I can't be able to wait on you to Day, I can't (I ſay) without great Pain, but that your Lordſhip might no longer in vain expect my coming, I have ſent theſe Lines ſcribled with mine own Hand to your Grace, as to a moſt upright Judge, of my Excuſe, in which I wiſh I had more Time or more Judgment to frame a juſt Expoſtulation with your Grace for detaining me ſo long againſt my Will from my Cure, and that ſo unſeaſonably, at a Time when it moſt behoves every Paſtor to-be with his Flock. But what ſhall I ſay, if it is lawful for ſo mean a Priſoner to plead with ſo great a Father? If we eſteem a Prieſt good for doing his Duty, who while he remains in this earthly Tabernacle, never ceaſeth to teach and admoniſh his Congregation, and ſo much the more as he draws nearer his laſt Home, what muſt we think of thoſe who neither preach themſelves now (at which I ſhould not wonder had they not been uſed to it before) nor permit thoſe who are deſirous to do it, unleſs they are bound to do and ſay nothing but what they pleaſe. At firſt I thought it ſafe to ſubmit myſelf entirely to your Clemency, but now it ſeems as ſafe to juſtify myſelf a little, ſince one Thing was pretended in the Beginning, but now another, and what will be the End I have great room to doubt; but I hope Truth only will be uſed. St. Jerome on theſe Words (which I hope I ſhall never forget) The Lord who preſerveth Truth, for ever ſhall deliver thee, writes thus, Whatſoever I ſuffer for Truth's ſake ſhall never trouble me, for the Lord liveth and careth for me. Firſt I was ſent to London, where I was before the Court of Canterbury, then all was ſtopped that had been done, and the Matter had Bounds and Limits ſet to it by him who ſent me, but ſo the Buſineſs was handled and brought into doubt, that at length there ſeemed no End to it, but that it muſt be infinitely prolonged. For while, without either Method or Deſign, I was queſtioned of one Thing after another, whether pertinent or impertinent, now by one and then by another, if I gave them no Anſwer, or if I anſwered them to the Purpoſe (which I thought was not imprudent ſometimes to put an End to the Diſpute) I was equally uncivil; while one anſwers to many and of many Things, he may inadvertently ſay ſomething that may prejudice the moſt righteous Cauſe. None ought to judge me wicked for what at moſt they can call but an Error of Conſcience, and to remember all Things it behoves a Man to remember the Foundation of the other World. When a Man acts againſt Conſcience he doth it to gain, to maintain, or defend his own, but what they charge me with is far different, and I believe without Example, wickedly requeſting to know the Cauſe of my Confinement. If any Perſon is diſpoſed to attack my Sermons, that they are obſcure, or not cautiouſly enough worded, I am prepared either to explain or vindicate them, for (to the beſt of my Knowledge) I never preach'd any Thing againſt the Truth, againſt the Councils of the Fathers, or againſt the catholick Faith. All that my

Anno 1555. Adverſaries or Detractors truly charge me with, is what I have long deſired, and do deſire, namely, the improving the common Peoples Judgment. I heartily deſire that all Men might know and comprehend the Diſagreement of Things, the Worth, Place, Time, Degrees and Order proper for each, and how much they are concerned in thoſe Things which God has prepared for them to walk in: Every Man ought to be very diligent in doing the Works of his Calling, after which, Things indifferent may be done with equal Diligence, amongſt which are all Things which no Law has forbid, unleſs we forbid them to ourſelves: 'tis lawful to uſe Images, to go on Pilgimages, to invocate Saints, to remember the Souls in Purgatory, but theſe which are voluntary Acts are to be ſo reſtrained that they diminiſh not the juſt Eſteem the Precepts of God (which beſtow eternal Life on thoſe who do them) ſhould neceſſarily have; they who uſe them otherwiſe, are ſo far from gaining the Love of God, that they rather incur his Hatred. The true Love of God is to keep his Commandments, as our Saviour ſays, He who heareth my Words and doth them, he it is who loveth me. Let no Man then have ſo mean an Opinion of the Laws of God, as to make them equal with the Fancies of Men, ſince by thoſe at the laſt Day before the Tribunal of Chriſt we ſhall all be judged, and not by theſe; as Chriſt ſays, The Word that I ſpeak that ſhall judge you at the laſt Day; and what Man is able to make Amends for the Breach of one of thoſe Commands, by any or all of theſe ſpecious Additions. O that we would be but as ready, as diligent, as devoted to do his Will, as we are to follow our own empty Notions. Many Things done with an upright Heart God accepts of, making Allowance for our Infirmities, though he has not commanded or required them; but theſe Things ought to be taken away when they begin to have the Force of Commands, leſt while we do theſe we omit thoſe that are abſolutely neceſſary, and what can be more abſurd than to revere as Ordinances of God, the idle Fancies of Men, whilſt his true Ordinances are neglected; whence I in behalf of the Commandments of God ſtand hitherto immovable, not ſeeking my own but Chriſt's Gain, not my own but God's Glory, and whilſt I live I will ſtand ſtedfaſt: So all the German Divines have hitherto complained of the intolerable Abuſe of theſe Things, that no Man deſirous of the Glory of Chriſt can accept of the Miniſtry without doing Things againſt his Conſcience, and if ſome have (for I won't ſay none) ſubmitted to this Hardſhip purely to do good, yet what doth the chriſtian Religion ſuffer by it? Unleſs we are ſo miſerably blinded as to think that theſe Things are to be diſpenſed with for our own filthy Gain, though they are not for the Honour of God. Now who can juſtify the conſtant Practice of ſuch Things which in themſelves are highly criminal? Some Things are conſtantly performed which ought never, while others are omitted which ought always to be done: Now who cannot ſee this manifeſt Abuſe? and who ſees, and don't grieve? and who grieves, that would not labour to remove it? and when ſhall it be removed, while it is conſtantly preached and commended? why 'tis hardly poſſible for it not to be univerſal. It is one Thing barely to permit, and another to inforce as Law. Go (ſays Chriſt) and teach all Things, but what are thoſe all Things? why all that ye have heard of me, not all that ſeems fit to yourſelves. Let us therefore by the Help of God, go and do likewiſe: Let us employ our whole Strength to preach the ſincere Word of God, not to flatter or cook up our Sermons to Men's depraved Taſte, then ſhall we be true Preachers of God's Word. As careleſs as Men are in what relates to God, they are diligent enough in what relates to themſelves, to this they want no Spurs; but they are miſerably deceived by an unjuſt Eſteem of Things, and an early Superſtition received in their tender Years from their Fore-fathers, which we are hardly able to remedy by any Preaching, how frequent, how earneſt, how ſincere and pure ſoever, which God doth not now permit; for in theſe evil Days they who ought to preach themſelves (for to us, ſays St. Peter, has he given to preach the Goſpel) forbid them to preach who are willing and able, and on the contrary, compel Time-ſervers, who damnably detain the miſerable People in Superſtition and falſe Confidence; but Lord have Mercy upon us, and grant we may know thy Way upon Earth, not to be found amongſt thoſe to whom the Lord ſays, My Ways are not your Ways, neither are my Thoughts your Thoughts; hence I dare not ſubſcribe to theſe Propoſitions moſt honoured Father, becauſe I would no way be acceſſary to the longer Continuance of theſe popular Superſtitions, leſt I ſhould be the Author of my own Damnation. Was I worthy, I'd give even you ſome Advice, but that little impertinent Thing the Heart, can do little elſe than gueſs, none knowing the Things of a Man but the Spirit of a Man which is in him. 'Tis not any Pride that hinders me from ſubſcribing to theſe Propoſitions, on the contrary, I am very ſorry I can't wholly perform your Requeſt. I know how great a Crime it is to diſobey the Fathers and Governors of the Church, but then Regard is to be had to what they command, in which Caſe we ought always to obey God rather than Man.

My Head aches ſo much, and my Body is ſo weak, that I can neither come, nor write over again and correct theſe Lines; but your Lordſhip, I hope, will approve, if not the Judgment, yet the Endeavours of Your Lordſhip's devoted Servant.

In this aforeſaid Epiſtle (as ye hear) he maketh mention of certain Articles or Propoſitions, whereunto he was required by the Biſhops to ſubſcribe. The Copy and Effect of thoſe Articles or rude Propoſitions (as he calleth them) are theſe:

Articles deviſed by the Biſhops for Mr. Latimer to ſubſcribe unto.

I Believe that there is a Purgatory to purge the Souls of the Dead after this Life.

That the Souls in Purgatory are holpen with the Maſſes, Prayers, and Alms of the Living.

That the Saints do pray as Mediators now for us in Heaven.

That they are to be honoured of us in Heaven.

That it is profitable for Chriſtians to call upon the Saints, that they may pray as Mediators for us unto God.

That Pilgrimages and Oblations done to the Sepulchres and Relicks of Saints are meritorious.

That they which have vowed perpetual Chaſtity may not marry, nor break their Vow, without the Diſpenſation of the Pope.

That the Keys of binding and looſing delivered to Peter, do ſtill remain with the Biſhops of Rome his Succeſſors, although they live wickedly, and are by no Means nor at any Time committed to Laymen.

That Men may merit and deſerve at God's

Hand by Faſting, Prayer, and other good Works of Piety.

That they which are forbidden by the Biſhop to preach, as ſuſpect Perſons, ought to ceaſe until they have purged themſelves before the ſaid Biſhop, or their Superiours, and be reſtored again.

That the Faſt which is uſed in Lent, and other Faſts preſcribed by the Canons, and by Cuſtom received of the Chriſtians (except Neceſſity otherwiſe require) are to be obſerved and kept.

That God in every one of the ſeven Sacraments giveth Grace to a Man, rightly receiving the ſame.

That Conſecrations, Sanctifyings and Bleſſings, by Uſe and Cuſtom received in the Church are laudable and profitable.

That it is laudable and profitable, that the venerable Images of the Crucifix and other Saints, ſhould be had in the Churches as a Remembrance, and to the Honour and Worſhip of Jeſus Chriſt and his Saints.

That it is laudable and profitable to deck and to cloath thoſe Images, and ſet up burning Lights before them to the Honour of the ſaid Saints.

To theſe Articles, whether he did ſubſcribe or no, it is uncertain. It appeareth by this Epiſtle above written to the Biſhop, that he durſt not conſent unto them, where he writeth in theſe Words, I dare not ſubſcribe to theſe Propoſitions, becauſe I would no Ways be acceſſary to the longer Continuance of theſe popular Superſtitions, leſt I be the Author, &c. But yet whether he was compelled afterwards to agree through the cruel Handling of the Biſhops, it is in doubt. By the Words and the Title in Tonſtal's Regiſter prefix'd before the Articles, it may ſeem that he did ſubſcribe. The Words of the Regiſter are theſe: Hugh Latimer, Batchelor of Divinity, of the Univerſity of Cambridge, in a Convocation held at Weſtminſter before the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, John Lord Biſhop of London, and the reſt of the Clergy, has acknowledged and made the following Confeſſion of his Faith, as in theſe Articles, Mar. 21. 1531. If theſe Words be true, it may be thought that he ſubſcribed. And whether he ſo did, no great matter nor marvel, the Iniquity of the Time being ſuch, that either he muſt needs ſo do, or elſe abide the Biſhop's Bleſſing, that is, cruel Sentence of Death, which he at that Time (as he himſelf confeſſed preaching at Stamford) was loth to ſuſtain for ſuch Matters as theſe were, unleſs it were for Articles neceſſary of his Belief; by which his Words I conjecture rather that he did ſubſcribe at length, albeit it was long before he could be brought ſo to do. Yet this by the Way is to be noted, concerning the crafty and deceitful Handling of theſe Biſhops in his Examinations, what ſubtle Devices they uſed the ſame Time to entrap him in their Snares. The Truth of the Story he ſhewed forth himſelf in a certain Sermon preached at Stamford, Octob. 9. 1550. his Words be theſe:

The crafty Handling of the Biſhops in examining Mr. Latimer.

I was once (ſaith he) in Examination before five or ſix Biſhops, where I had much turmoiling; thrice every Week I came to Examinations, and many Snares and Traps were laid to get ſomething. Now God knoweth I was ignorant of the Law, but that God gave me Anſwer and Wiſdom what I ſhould ſpeak; it was God indeed, for elſe I had never eſcaped them. At laſt I was brought forth to be examined into a Chamber hanged with Arras, where I was wont to be examined: But now at this Time the Chamber was ſomewhat altered. For whereas before there was wont always to be a Fire in the Chimney, now the Fire was taken away, and an Arras hanged over the Chimney, and the Table ſtood near the Chimney's End. Anno 1555.

There was amongſt the Biſhops that examined me, one with whom I have been very familiar, and took him for my great Friend, an aged Man, and he ſate next the Table's End.

Then amongſt all other Queſtions he put forth one, a very ſubtle and crafty one, and ſuch an one indeed as I could not think ſo great Danger in. And when I ſhould make Anſwer, I pray you, Mr. Latimer, ſaid one, ſpeak out, I am very thick of Hearing, and here be many that ſit far off. I marvelled at this that I was bid to ſpeak out, and begun to ſuſpect, and give an Ear to the Chimney; and, Sir, there I heard a Pen walking in the Chimney behind the Cloth. They had appointed one there to write all mine Anſwers; for they made ſure that I ſhould not ſtart from them; there was no ſtarting from them. God was my good Lord, and gave me Anſwer, I could never elſe have eſcaped it. The Queſtion there and then objected to him was this; Whether he thought in his Conſcience, that he hath been ſuſpected of Hereſy? This was a captious Queſtion. There was no holding of Peace would ſerve; for that was to grant himſelf faulty. To anſwer, it was every Way full of Danger: But God, which alway giveth in Need what to anſwer, helped him, or elſe (as he confeſſed himſelf) he had never eſcaped their bloody Hands. Albeit what was his Anſwer, he doth not there expreſs. And thus hitherto you have heard declared the manifold Troubles of this godly Preacher, in the Time not only of his being in the Univerſity, but eſpecially at his Benefice, as partly in his own Words abovementioned does appear.

A ſubtle and captious Queſtion put to Mr. Latimer by the Biſhops.

In theſe ſo hard and dangerous Straits, and ſuch Snares of the Biſhops, hard it had been for him, and impoſſible to have eſcaped and continued ſo long, had not the Almighty helping Hand of the Higheſt, as he ſtirred him up, ſo preſerved him through the Favour and Power of his Prince; who with much Favour embraced him, and with his meer Power ſometime reſcued and delivered him out of the crooked Claws of his Enemies. Moreover, at length alſo through the Procurement partly of Dr. Buts, partly of the good Lord Cromwell, he advanced him to the Dignity and Degree of a Biſhop, making him the Biſhop of Worceſter, which ſo continued a few Years, inſtructing his Dioceſe, according to the Duty of a diligent and vigilant Paſtor, with wholſome Doctrine and Example of perfect Converſation duly agreeing to the ſame. It were a long Matter to ſtand particularly upon ſuch Things as might here be brought to the Commendation of his Pains; as Study, Readineſs, and continual Carefulneſs in Teaching, Preaching, Exhorting, Viſiting, Correcting, and Reforming, either as his Ability could ſerve, or elſe the Time would bear. But the Days then were ſo dangerous and variable, that he could not in all Things do that he would. Yet what he might do, that he performed to the uttermoſt of his Strength, ſo that although he could

Mr Latimer Preaching before King Edward VI. at Weſtminſter.

Anno 1545. not utterly extinguiſh all the ſparkling Relicks of old Superſtition, yet he ſo wrought, that tho' they could not be taken away, yet they ſhould be uſed with as little Hurt, and with as much Profit as might be. As for Example, in this Thing, and in divers others it did appear, that when it could not be avoided, but holy Water and holy Bread muſt needs be received, yet ſo he prepared and inſtructed them of his Dioceſe, with ſuch Informations and Leſſons, that in receiving thereof Superſtition ſhould be excluded, and ſome Remembrance taken thereby; teaching and charging the Miniſters of his Dioceſe, in delivering the holy Water and the holy Bread, to ſay theſe Words following:

Words ſpoken to the People in giving them Holy Water.

Words uſed in Biſhop Latimer's Dioceſe in giving holy Water.

Remember your Promiſe in Baptiſm,
Chriſt his Mercy and Blood-ſhedding,
By whoſe moſt holy Sprinkling,
Of all your Sins you have free pardoning.

What to ſay in giving Holy Bread.

Words uſed in giving holy Bread.

Of Chriſt's Body this is a Token,
Which on the Croſs for our Sins was broken:
Wherefore of your Sins you muſt be Forſakers,
If of Chriſt's Death ye will be Partakers.

By this it may be conſidered what the diligent Care of this Biſhop was in doing the Duty of a faithful Paſtor among his Flock. And moreover it is to be thought, that he would have brought more Things elſe to paſs, if the Time then had anſwered to his Deſire; for he was not ignorant how the Inſtitution of holy Water and holy Bread, not only had no Ground in Scripture, but alſo how full of profane Exorciſms and Conjurations they were, contrary to the Rule and Learning of the Goſpel. Thus this good Man behaved himſelf in his Dioceſe. But (as before) both in the Univerſity and at his Benefice, he was toſs'd and troubled by wicked and evil-diſpoſed Perſons; ſo in his Biſhoprick alſo he was not free from ſome that ſought his Trouble. As among many other evil Willers, one eſpecially there was, and that no ſmall Perſon, who accuſed him then to the King for his Sermons. The Story becauſe he himſelf ſheweth in a Sermon of his before King Edward, I thought therefore to uſe his own Words, which be theſe:

The Troubles of Mr. Latimer in his Biſhoprick.

In the King's Days that is dead, a great many of us were called together before him, to ſpeak our Minds in certain Matters. In the End one kneeleth down and accuſeth me of Sedition; and that I had preached ſeditious Doctrine. A heavy Salutation, and a hard Point of ſuch a Man's doing, as if I ſhould name ye would not think.

Mr. Latimer accuſed to King Henry for his preaching.

The King turned to me, and ſaid; What ſay you to that, Sir? Then I kneeled down, and turned firſt to my Accuſer, and required him; Sir, what Form of Preaching would you appoint me in Preaching before a King? Would you have me preach nothing as concerning a King in the King's Sermon? Have you any Commiſſion to appoint me what I ſhall preach? Beſides this, I asked him divers other Queſtions, and he would make no Anſwer to any of them all; he had nothing to ſay.

Mr. Latimer anſwereth his Accuſer.

Then I turned to the King, and ſubmitted myſelf to his Grace, and ſaid, I never thought myſelf worthy, nor did I ever ſue to be a Preacher before your Grace, but I was called to it, and would be willing (if you miſlike me) to give Place to my Betters; for I grant there be a great many more worthy or the Room than I am. And if it be your Grace's Pleaſure ſo to allow them for Preachers, I could be content to carry their Books after them. But if your Grace allow me for a Preacher, I would deſire your Grace to give me Leave to diſcharge my Conſcience, give me Leave to frame my Doctrine according to my Audience. I had been a very Blockhead to have preached ſo at the Borders of your Realm, as I preach before your Grace.

Mr. Latimer's Words to the King.

And I thank Almighty God (who hath always been my Remedy) that my Sayings were well accepted of the King; for like a gracious Lord he turned into another Communication. It is even as the Scripture ſaith, The Lord directeth the King's Heart. Some of my Friends came to me with Tears in their Eyes, and told me they expected I ſhould have been in the Tower the ſame Night.

The King's Heart relenteth toward Biſhop Latimer.

It were a long Proceſs to declare all the Doings, Travels, and Writings of this Chriſtian Biſhop, neither yet have we expreſſed all all that came to our Hands; but this I thought ſufficient for this preſent. Thus he continued in his laborious Function of a Biſhop ſome Years, till the coming in of the ſix Articles. Then being diſtreſſed thro' the Straightneſs of Time, ſo that either he muſt loſe the Quietneſs of a good Conſcience, or elſe forſake his Biſhoprick, the latter of which he freely did, and Dr. Shaxton the Biſhop of Salisbury reſigned likewiſe with him. At which Time he threw off his Rochet in his Chamber among his Friends, and ſuddenly gave a Skip on the Floor for Joy, feeling his Shoulder ſo light, and being diſcharged (as he ſaid) of ſuch an heavy Burden. However, he was not ſo lightened, but that Troubles and Labours followed him whereſoever he went. For a little after he had renounced his Biſhoprick, he was much bruiſed by the Fall of a Tree; then coming up to London for Remedy, he was moleſted and troubled by the Biſhops, whereby he was again in no little Danger, and at length was ſent to the Tower, where he continually remained Priſoner, till the Time that bleſſed King Edward entered his Crown, by which Means the golden Mouth of this Preacher, long ſhut up before, was now opened again. And ſo he beginning afreſh to ſet forth his Plough again, continued all the Time of the ſaid King, labouring in the Lord's Harveſt moſt fruitfully, diſcharging his Talent at Stamford, and before the Dutcheſs of Suffolk, and many other Places in this Realm, as alſo at London in the Convocation-Houſe, and eſpecially before the King at the Court: In the ſame Place of the inward Garden, which was before apply'd to laſcivious and courtly Paſtimes, there he diſpenſed the fruitful Word of the glorious Goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt, preaching there before the King and his whole Court, to the Edification of many.

Mr. Latimer preaching before King Edward.

And thus he ſpent his Time in King Edward's Days, preaching, for the moſt part, twice every Sunday, to the Shame of all other unpreaching Prelates, who occupy great Rooms, and do little good; and ſo much the more to their Shame, becauſe he being a Man ſo bruiſed by the Fall of a Tree, and above 67 Years of Age, took ſo little Eaſe and and Care of ſparing himſelf, to do the People good.

As the Diligence of this Man of God never ceaſed all the Time of King Edward, to profit the Church both publickly and privately, ſo it is likewiſe to be obſerved, that the ſame good Spirit of God that aſſiſted and comforted him in preaching the Goſpel, did alſo enable him evidently to foretel all thoſe Kinds of Plagues, which afterwards enſued; if England ever had a Prophet, he ſeemed to have been one. And as touching himſelf, he ever affirmed, that the Preaching of the Goſpel would coſt him his Life, to which he no leſs chearfully prepared himſelf, than certainly was perſuaded, that Wincheſter was kept in the Tower for the ſame Purpoſe, as the Event did too truly prove the ſame. For after the Death of the ſaid pious King Edward, not long after Queen Mary was proclaimed, a Purſuivant was ſent down (by the Means, no doubt, of Wincheſter) into the Country, to call him up, of whoſe coming although Mr. Latimer lacked no forewarning, being premoniſhed about ſix Hours before by one John Careles (whoſe Story hereafter followeth) yet he was ſo far from endeavouring to eſcape, that he prepared himſelf for his Journey before the ſaid Officer came to his Houſe.

Mr. Latimer called up to London.

At which when the Purſuivant marvelled, ſeeing him ſo prepared for his Journey, Mr. Latimer ſaid unto him, My Friend, you be a welcome Meſſenger to me. And be it known unto you and to all the World, that I go willingly to London at this preſent, being called by my Prince to render a Reckoning of my Doctrine, as ever I went to any Place in the World. I doubt not but that God, as he hath made me worthy to preach his Word before two excellent Princes, ſo will he enable me to witneſs the ſame unto the Third, either to her Comfort or Diſcomfort eternally, &c. When the Purſuivant had delivered his Letters, he departed, affirming that he had Commandment not to tarry for him. By whoſe ſudden Departure it was manifeſt that they would not have him appear, but rather to have fled out of the Realm. They knew that his Conſtancy ſhould deface them in their Popery, and confirm the Godly in the Truth.

Mr. Latimer's Words to the Queen's Meſſenger.

Thus Mr. Latimer being ſent for, and coming up to London, (entering Smithfield, he merrily ſaid, That Smithfield had long groaned for him) was brought before the Council, where he patiently bearing all the Mocks and Taunts given him by the ſcornful Papiſts, was again ſent to the Tower, where he being aſſiſted with the heavenly Grace of Chriſt, patiently ſuſtained Impriſonment a long Time; notwithſtanding the cruel and unmerciful Uſage of the lordly Papiſts, who then thought their Kingdom would never fall, yet he ſhewed himſelf not only patient, but alſo merry and cheerful in and above all that which they could work againſt him; yea, ſuch a valiant Spirit the Lord gave him, that he was able not only to deſpiſe the Terribleneſs of Priſons and Torments, but alſo to deride and laugh to Scorn even the cruel Proceedings of his Enemies. It is well known to many what Anſwer he made the Lieutenant when he was in the Tower. For when the Lieutenant's Man upon a Time came to him, the aged Father kept without Fire in the Froſty Winter, and well nigh ſtarved for Cold, he bade the Man tell his Maſter, That if he did not look better after him, perchance he might deceive him.

Mr. Latimer chearful in Impriſonment.

His merry Meſſage to the Lieutenant of the Tower.

The Lieutenant hearing this, and not knowing what to make of ſo odd a Speech, and fearing that he would in earneſt make his Eſcape, began to look more ſtrictly to his Priſoner, and ſo coming to him, beginneth to charge him with his Words, reciting the ſame unto him which his Man had told him before; That if he were not better looked unto, perchance he might deceive him. Yea, Mr. Lieutenant, ſo I ſaid, quoth he, for I ſuppoſe you expect that I ſhould burn; but except you let me have ſome Fire, I am like to deceive your Expectation, for I am like here to ſtarve for Cold. Anno 1555.

Many ſuch-like Anſwers and Reaſons, merry, but ſavory, coming not from a vain Mind, but from a conſtant and quiet Reaſon, proceeded from that Man, declaring a firm and ſtable Heart, little minding all this bluſtering of their terrible Threats, but rather deriding the ſame.

Mr. Latimer removed to Oxford.

Thus Mr. Latimer paſſing a long Time in the Tower, with as much Patience as a Man in his Caſe could do, from thence was removed to Oxford with Dr. Cranmer Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and Dr. Ridley Biſhop of London, there to diſpute upon Articles ſent down from Gardiner Biſhop of Wincheſter, as is before mentioned; the Manner and Order of which Diſputation between them and the Univerſity Doctors, is alſo before ſufficiently expreſſed. Where alſo is declared, how and by whom the ſaid Latimer with his other Fellow-Priſoners were condemned after the Diſputations, and ſo committed again to the Priſon, and there they continued from the Month of April till the Month of October; where they were moſt godly occupied, either with brotherly Conference, or with fervent Prayer, or with fruitful Writing.

Albeit Mr. Latimer, by reaſon of the Feebleneſs of his Age, wrote leaſt of them all in this latter Time of his Impriſonment; yet in Prayer he was fervently occupied; wherein oftentimes ſo long he continued kneeling, that he was not able to riſe without Help: And amongſt other Things, theſe were three principal Matters he prayed for.

Three Requeſts of Mr. Latimer's Prayer.

Frſt, That as God had appointed him to be a Preacher of his Word, ſo alſo he would give him Grace to ſtand to his Doctrine until his Death, that he might give his Heart Blood for the ſame.

Secondly, That God of his Mercy would reſtore his Goſpel to England once again; and theſe Words ONCE AGAIN, ONE AGAIN, he did ſo inculcate and beat into the Ears of the Lord God, as though he had ſeen God before him, and ſpoke to him Face to Face.

Mr. Latimer's Prayer for Queen Elizabeth.

The third Matter was, to pray for the Preſervation of the Lady Elizabeth, whom in his Prayer he uſed to name, and even with Tears deſired God to make her a Comfort to this comfortleſs Realm of England.

Theſe were the Matters he prayed for ſo earneſtly. Neither were theſe Things of him deſired in vain, as the good Succeſs thereof after following did declare; for the Lord moſt graciouſly did grant all thoſe his Requeſts.

Firſt, Concerning his Conſtancy, even in the moſt Extremity the Lord graciouſly aſſiſted him. For when he ſtood at the Stake without Bocardo-Gate at Oxford, and the Tormentors about to ſet the Fire to him, and to the learned and pious Biſhop Dr. Ridley, he Anno 1555. he lifted up his Eyes towards Heaven with an amiable and comfortable Countenance, ſaying theſe Words, God is faithful, which doth not ſuffer us to be tempted above our Strength; and ſo afterward ſhed his Blood in the Cauſe of Chriſt, which Blood ran out of his Heart in ſuch Abundance, that all thoſe that were preſent, did marvel to ſee the moſt Part of the Blood in his Body to be gathered to his Heart, and with ſuch Violence to guſh out, his Body being opened by the Force of the Fire; by which Things God moſt graciouſly granted his Requeſt, which was, That he might ſhed his Heart Blood in the Defence of the Goſpel.

How mercifully the Lord heard his ſecond Requeſt, in reſtoring his Goſpel once again unto this Realm, theſe Days can bear Record. And what then ſhall England ſay now for her Defence, which being ſo mercifully viſited and refreſhed with the Word of God, ſo ſlenderly and unthankfully conſidereth either her own Miſery paſt, or the great Benefit of God now preſent? The Lord be merciful unto us Amen.

Again, concerning his third Requeſt, it ſeemeth likewiſe moſt effectually granted, to the great Praiſe of God, the Furtherance of his Goſpel, and to the unſpeakable Comfort of this Realm. For whether at the Requeſt of his Prayer, or of other God's Holy Saints, or whether God was moved with the Cry of his whole Church, the Truth is, that when all was deplorable and in a deſperate Caſe, and ſo deſperate that the Enemies mightily flouriſhed and triumphed, God's Word was baniſhed, Spaniards received, no Place left for Chriſt's Servants to cover their Heads, ſuddenly the Lord called to Remembrance his Mercy, and forgetting our former Iniquity, made an End of all theſe Miſeries, and wrought a marvellous Change of Things; at the Change whereof the ſaid Queen Elizabeth was appointed and anointed, for whom this Gray-headed Father ſo earneſtly pray'd in his Impriſonment: Thro' whoſe true, natural, and imperial Crown, the Brightneſs of God's Word was ſet up again to confound the dark and falſe vizored Kingdom of Antichriſt, the true Temple of Chriſt reedify'd, the Captivity of ſorrowful Chriſtians releaſed, which ſo long was wiſhed for in the Prayers of ſo many good Men, eſpecially of this faithful and true Servant of the Lord, Mr. Latimer.

God's gracious Help in Time of Need, upon the Realm of England.

Touching the memorable Actions of this worthy Man, among many others this is not to be neglected, what a bold Enterprize he attempted, in ſending to King Henry a Preſent, the Manner whereof is this. There was then and remaineth ſtill an old Cuſtom received from the old Romans, that upon New-years Day, being the firſt Day of January, every Biſhop with ſome handſome New-years Gift ſhould gratify the King; and ſo they did, ſome with Gold, ſome with Silver, ſome with a Purſe full of Money, and ſome one Thing, ſome another: But Mr. Latimer, being then Biſhop of Worceſter, among the reſt, preſented a New Teſtament for his New-years Gift, with a Napkin having this Poſy about it, Fornicators and Adulterers God will judge.

And thus haſt thou (gentle Reader) the Life both of Dr. Ridley and Mr. Latimer, two worthy Fathers in the Church of Chriſt, with their Writings, Diſputations, Sufferings, their painful Travels, and faithful Preachings, ſtudious Service in Chriſt's Church, their patient Impriſonment, and conſtant Fortitude in that which they had taught, with all their Proceedings from Time to Time, ſince their firſt ſpringing Years to this preſent Month of Queen Mary, being the Month of October, Anno 1555. In which Month they were brought forth together, to their final Examination and Execution. Wherefore as we have heretofore declared both their Lives diſtinctly one from another; ſo now jointly to couple them both together, as they were both together joined in one Society of Cauſe of Martyrdom, we will by the Grace of Chriſt proſecute the reſt that remaineth concerning their laſt Examination, degrading and conſtant ſuffering, with the Order and Manner alſo of the Commiſſioners, and what were their Words, their Objections, their Orations there uſed, and what again were the Anſwers of theſe Men to the ſame, as in the Proceſs here followeth to be ſeen.

The Order and Manner of the Examination of Dr. Ridley and Mr. Latimer in September 1555.

The laſt Examination of Dr. Ridley and Mr. Latimer.

FIRST, after the appearing of Thomas Cranmer Archbiſhop of Canterbury before the Pope's Delegate, and the Queen's Commiſſioners in St. Mary's Church at Oxford, about the 12th of September, whereof more ſhall be ſaid (by God's Grace) when we come to the Death of the ſaid Archbiſhop; ſhortly after, on the 28th of the ſaid Month, another Commiſſion was ſent down to Oxford from cardinal Poole, to John White Biſhop of Lincoln, Dr. Brooks Biſhop of Glouceſter, and Dr. Holyman Biſhop of Briſtol. The Contents and Vertue of which Commiſſion was, that the ſaid Biſhops of Lincoln, Glouceſter, and Briſtol, or two of them, ſhould have full Power and Authority to cite, examine and judge Mr. Hugh Latimer and Dr. Ridley, for divers and ſundry erroneous Opinions, which the ſaid Hugh Latimer and Nicholas Ridley did hold and maintain in open Diſputations had in Oxford, in the Months of May, June and July in the Year 1554, as long before in the Time of Perdition, and ſince. Which Opinions, if the named Perſons would now recant, giving and yielding themſelves to the Determination of the Univerſal and Catholick Church planted by Peter in the bleſſed See of Rome, that then the deputed Judges, by the ſaid Authority of their Commiſſion, ſhould have Power to receive the ſaid penitent Perſons, and forthwith adminiſter unto them the Reconciliation of the Holy Father the Pope; but if the ſaid Hugh Latimer and Nicholas Ridley would ſtoutly and ſtubbornly defend and maintain theſe their erroneous Opinions and Aſſertions, that then the ſaid Lords by their Commiſſion ſhould proceed in form of Judgment, according to the Law of Hereticks; that is, degrading them from their Promotion and Dignity of Biſhops, Prieſts, and all other eccleſiaſtical Orders, ſhould pronounce them as Hereticks, and therefore clean cut them off from the Church, and ſo yield them to receive Puniſhments due to all ſuch Hereſy and Schiſm.

Wherefore the laſt of September the ſaid two Perſons Nicholas Ridley aud Hugh Latimer, were cited to appear before the said Lords in the Divinity-school at Oxford, at Eight of the Clock. At which Time the Lords repaired thither, placing themselves in the High Seat made for publick Lectures and Disputations, according to the Usage of that School, being then fair set and trimmed with Cloth of Tissue, and Cushions of Velvet: And after the said Lords were placed and set, the said Latimer and Ridley were sent for. And first Dr. Ridley appeared, and by and by Mr. Latimer. But because it seemed good severally to examine them, Mr. Latimer was kept back until Dr. Ridley was throughly examined. Therefore soon after the Coming of Dr. Ridley into the School, the Commission was published by an appointed Notary, and openly read. But Dr. Ridley standing bareheaded, humbly expecting the Cause of that his Appearance, as soon as he had heard the Cardinal named, and the Pope's Holiness, put on his Cap. Wherefore after the Commission was published, the Bishop of Lincoln spake as followeth.

Dr. Ridley putteth on his Cap at the Hearing of the Pope's Name.

Lincoln. Mr. Ridley, although neither I, neither my Lords here, in respect of our own Persons do look for Cap or Knee, yet because we bear and represent such Persons as we do, that is, my Lord Cardinal's Grace, Legate a Latere to the Pope's Holiness, as well in that he is of a noble Parentage (and there Dr. Ridley moved his Cap with lowly Obeisance) descending from the Royal Blood, as in that he is a Man worthy to be reverenced with all Humility, for his great Knowledge and Learning, noble Virtues and godly Life, and especially in that he is here in England Deputy to the Pope's Holiness, it should have becomed you at this Name to have uncovered your Head. Wherefore except you will of your ownself take the Pains to put your Hand to your Head, and at the Nomination, as well of the said Cardinal, as of the Pope's Holiness, uncover the same, lest that this your Contumacy, exhibited now before us, should be prejudicial to the said most reverend Persons, (which Thing we may in no Case suffer) you shall cause us to take the Pains to oblige some Man to pluck off your Cap from you. To whom Dr. Ridley (desiring Licence) answered:

The Words of the Bishop of Lincoln to Dr. Ridley for not putting off his Cap.

Ridley. As touching what you said, my Lord, that you of your own Persons desire no Cap nor Knee, but only require the same in Consideration that you represent the Cardinal's Grace's Person, I do you to wit, and thereupon make my Protestation, that I did put on my Cap at the naming of the Cardinal's Grace, neither for any Contumacy that I bear towards your own Persons, neither for any Derogation of Honour toward the Lord Cardinal's Grace. For I know him to be a Man worthy of all Humility, Reverence, and Honour, in that he came of the most regal Blood, and in that he is a Man indued with manifold Graces of Learning and Virtue, and as touching these Virtues and Points, I with all Humility (therewith he put off his Cap, and bowed his Knee) and Obeisance that I may, will Reverence and Honour his Grace; but in that he is Legate to the Bishop of Rome (and therewith put on his Cap) whose usurped Supremacy and abused Authority I utterly refuse and renounce, I may in no wise give any Obeisance or Honour unto him, lest that my so doing might be prejudical to mine Oath, and Derogation to the Verity of God's Word: And therefore that I might not only by Confession profess the Verity in not reverencing the renounced Authority, contrary to God's Word, but also in Gesture, in Behaviour, and all my Doings express the same, I have put on my Cap, and for this Consideration only; and not for any Contumacy to your Lordships, neither Contempt of this worshipful Audience, neither Derogation of any Honour due to the Cardinal's Grace, both for his noble Parentage, and also his excellent Qualities, I have kept on my Cap. Anno 1555.

Dr. Ridley's Answer.

Lincoln. Mr. Ridley, you excuse yourself of that with which we pressed you not, in that you protest you keep on your Cap, neither for any Contumacy towards us (who look for no such Homage from you) neither for any Contempt of this Audience: Which although justly they may, yet (as I suppose) in this Case do not require any such Obeisance of you; neither in Derogation of any Honour due to my Lord Cardinal's Grace, for his regal Descent (at which Word Dr. Ridley moved his Cap) and excellent Qualities; for although in all the Premisses Honour be due, yet in these Respects we require none of you, but only in that my Lord Cardinal's Grace is here in England, Deputy of the Pope's Holiness (at which Word the Lords and others put off their Caps, and Dr. Ridley put on his) and therefore we say unto you the second Time, that except you take the Pains yourself, to put your Hand to your Head, and put off your Cap, you shall put us to the Pains to cause some Man to take it from you, except you alledge some Infirmity and Sickness, or other more reasonable Cause, upon the Consideration whereof we may do as we think good.

Ridley. The Premisses I said only for this End, that it might as well appear to your Lordships, as to this worshipful Audience, why and for what Consideration I used such kind of Behaviour, in not humbling myself to your Lordships with Cap and Knee: And as for my Sickness, I thank my Lord God, that I am as well at Ease as I have been this long Time; and therefore I do not pretend that which is not, but only this, that it might appear by this my Behaviour, that I acknowledge in no Point that usurped Supremacy of Rome, and therefore contemn and utterly despise all Authourity coming from him. In taking off my Cap, do as it shall please your Lordships, and I shall be content.

Then the Bishop of Lincoln, after the third Admonition, commanded one of the Beadles (that is an Officer of the University) to pluck his Cap from his Head; Dr. Ridley bowing his Head to the Officer, gently permitted him to take it away.

After this the Bishop of Lincoln in a long Oration exhorted Dr. Ridley to recant, and submit himself to the universal Faith of Christ, in this Manner.

Lincoln. Mr. Ridley, I am sure you have sufficiently pondered with yourself the Effect of this our Commission with good Advice, considering both Points thereof, how that Authority is given to us, if you shall receive the true Doctrine of the Church, which first was founded by * Peter at Rome immediately after the Death of Christ, and from him by lineal Succession hath been brought to this our Time, if you will be content to renounce your former Errors, recant your heretical and seditious Opinions, content to yield yourself to the undoubted

* Nay, the Faith of Christ may be proved to have been at Rome in Tiberius's Time before Peter came there.

Anno 1555. undoubted Faith and Truth of the Goſpel, received and always taught by the Catholick and apoſtolick Church, which the King and Queen all the Nobles of this Realm, and Commons of the ſame, all Chriſtian People have and do confeſs, you only ſtanding alone by yourſelf: You underſtand and perceive, I am ſure, that Authority is given us to receive you, to reconcile you, and upon due Penance to join and aſſociate you again into the Number of the Catholicks and Chriſt's Church, from which you have ſo long ſtrayed, without which no Man can be ſaved, which Thing I and my Lords here, yea and all as well Nobles and Commons of this Realm moſt heartily deſire, and I for my Part [here he put off his Cap] moſt earneſtly exhort you to do.

Though the Country of Rome be not ſtrange, yet the Doctrine Rome is ſtrange.

Remember, Mr. Ridley, it is no ſtrange Country whither I exhort you to return. You were once one of us, you have taken Degrees in the School. You were made a Prieſt, and became a Preacher, ſetting forth the ſame Doctrine which we do now. You were made Biſhop according to our Laws; and to be ſhort, it is not ſo long ago ſince you ſeparated yourſelf from us, and in the Time of Hereſy became a Setter forth of that deviliſh and ſeditious Doctrine which in theſe latter Days was preached amongſt us. For at what Time the new Doctrine of only Faith began to ſpring, the Council willing to win my Lord Chancellor, ſent you to him (I then being in my Lord's Houſe unknown as I ſuppoſe to you) and after you had talked with my Lord ſecretly, and were departed, immediately my Lord declared certain Points of your Talk, and Means of your Perſwaſion, and amongſt others this was one, that you ſhould ſay, * Tuſh, my Lord, this Matter of Juſtification is but a Trifle, let us not ſtick to condeſcend herein to them; but for God's Love, my Lord, ſtand ſtoutly in the Verity of the Sacrament: For I ſee they will aſſault that alſo. If this be true (as my Lord is a Man credible enough in ſuch a Matter) hereby it is declared of what Mind you were then, as touching the Truth of the moſt bleſſed Sacrament.

* The Words of Dr. Ridley falſly reported.

Alſo in a Sermon of yours at Paul's Croſs, you as effectually and as catholickly ſpake of that bleſſed Sacrament, as any Man might have done, whereby it appeareth that it is no ſtrange Thing, nor unknown Place whereunto I exhort you. I wiſh you to return thither from whence you came: That is, with us to acknowledge the Church of God, wherein no Man can err, to acknowledge the Supremacy of our moſt Reverend Father in God, the Pope's Holineſs, which (as I ſaid) lineally taketh his Deſcent from Peter, upon whom Chriſt promiſed before his Death, to build his Church; which Supremacy or Prerogative, the moſt Antient Fathers in all Ages, in all Times did acknowledge: And here he brought a Place or two out of the Doctors, but eſpecially ſtaid upon a Place of St. Auguſtine, who writeth in this Manner: All the Chriſtian Countries beyond the Sea are ſubject to the Church of Rome. Here you ſee, Mr. Ridley, that all Chriſtendom is ſubject to the Church of Rome. What ſhould hinder you therefore to confeſs the ſame as St. Auguſtine and other Fathers.

Then Dr. Ridley deſired his Patience to ſuffer him to ſpeak ſomewhat of the Premiſſes, leſt the Multitude of Things might confound his Memory; and having Leave granted him, he ſaid in this Manner:

Ridley. My Lord, I moſt heartily thank your Lordſhip as well for your Gentleneſs, as alſo for your Sobriety in Talk, and for your good and favourable Zeal in this learned Exhortation, in which I have marked eſpecially three Points, which you uſed to perſuade me to leave my Doctrine and Religion, which I perfectly know and am throughly perſuaded to be grounded not upon Man's Imagination and Decrees, but upon the infallible Truth of Chriſt's Goſpel, and not to look back and to return to the Romiſh See, contrary to mine Oath, contrary to the Prerogative and Crown of this Realm, and eſpecially (which moveth me moſt) contrary to the expreſſed Word of God.

The firſt Point is this, that the See of Rome taking his Beginning from Peter, upon whom you ſay Chriſt hath built his Church, hath in all Ages lineally from Biſhop to Biſhop been brought to this Time.

Secondly, That even the holy Fathers from Time to Time have confeſſed the ſame.

Thirdly, That in that I was once of the ſame Opinion, and together with you I did acknowledge the ſame.

Firſt, As touching the Saying of Chriſt, from whence your Lordſhip gathereth the Foundation of the Church upon Peter, truly the Place is not to be underſtood as you take it, as the Circumſtance of the Place will declare. For after that Chriſt had asked his Diſciples whom Men judged him to be, and they had anſwered, that ſome had ſaid he was a Prophet, ſome Elias, ſome one Thing, ſome another, then he ſaid, Whom ſay ye that I am! Then Peter ſaid, I ſay that thou art Chriſt the Son of God. To whom Chriſt anſwered, I ſay, Thou art Peter, and upon this Stone I will build my Church; that is to ſay, Upon this Stone, not meaning Peter himſelf, as tho' he would have conſtituted a mortal Man, ſo frail and brittle a Foundation of his ſtable and infallible Church; but upon this Rock-ſtone, that is, this Confeſſion of thine, that I am the Son of God, I will build my Church. For this is the Foundation and Beginning of all Chriſtianity, with Word, Heart and Mind to confeſs that Chriſt is the Son of God. Whoſoever believeth not this, Chriſt is not in him; and he cannot have the Mark of Chriſt printed in his Forehead, which confeſſeth not that Chriſt is the Son of God.

Therefore Chriſt ſaid unto Peter, that upon this Rock, that is, upon this his Confeſſion, that he was Chriſt the Son of God, he would build his Church; to declare, that without this Faith no Man can come to Chriſt: So that this Belief, that Chriſt is the Son of God, is the Foundation of our Chriſtianity, and the Support of our Church. Here you ſee upon what Foundation Chriſt's Church is built, not upon the Frailty of Man, but upon the ſtable and infallible Word of God.

Now as touching the lineal Deſcent of the Biſhops in the See of Rome, true it is, that the Patriarchs of Rome in the Apoſtles Time, and long after, were great Maintainers and Setters forth of Chriſt's Glory, in which, above all other Countries and Regions, there eſpecially was preached the true Goſpel, the Sacraments were moſt duly adminiſtred; and as before Chriſt's coming it was a City ſo valiant in Power, and martial Affairs, that all the World was in a Manner ſubject to it, and after Chriſt's Paſſion divers of the Apoſtles there ſuffered Perſecution for the Goſpel's ſake: So after that the Emperors, their Hearts being illuminated, received the Goſpel, and became Chriſtians, the Goſpel there, as well for the great Power and Dominion, as for the Fame of the Place, flouriſhed moſt, whereby the Biſhops of that Place were had in more Reverence and Honour, moſt eſteemed in all Councils and Aſſemblies, not becauſe they acknowledged them to be their Head, but becauſe the Place was moſt reverenced and ſpoken of, for the great Power and Strength of the ſame. As now here in England, the Biſhop of Lincoln in Seſſions and Settings hath the Preheminence of the other Biſhops, not that he is the Head and Ruler of them; but for the Dignity of the Biſhoprick (and therewith the People ſmiled). Wherefore the Doctors in their Writings have ſpoken moſt reverently of this See of Rome, and in their Writings preferred it; and this is the Prerogative which your Lordſhip did rehearſe the ancient Doctors to give to the See of Rome.

The See of Rome, ſo long as it continued in ſound Doctrine, was worthy to be reverenced.

Semblably, I cannot, nor dare not but commend, reverence, and honour the See of Rome, as long as it continued in the Promotion and ſetting forth of God's Glory, and in due preaching of the Goſpel, as it did many Years after Chriſt. But after that the Biſhops of that See, ſeeking their own Pride, and not God's Honour, began to ſet themſelves above Kings and Emperors, challenging to them the Title of God's Vicars, the Dominon and Supremacy over all the World, I cannot but with St. Gregory, a Biſhop of Rome alſo, confeſs that the Biſhop of that Place is the very true Antichriſt, whereof St. John ſpeaketh by the Name of the Whore of Babylon; and ſay with the ſaid St. Gregory, He that maketh himſelf a Biſhop over all the World, is worſe than Antichriſt.

Now whereas you ſay St. Auguſtine ſhould ſeem not only to give ſuch a Prerogative, but alſo Supremacy to the See of Rome, in that he ſaith all the Chriſtian World is ſubject to the Church of Rome, and therefore ſhould give to that See a certain Kind of Subjection: I am ſure that your Lordſhip knoweth, that in St. Auſtin's Time there were four Patriarchs, of Alexandria, Conſtantinople, Anticch, and Rome, which Patriarchs had under them certain Countries; as in England the Archbiſhop of Canterbury hath under him divers Biſhopricks in England and Wales, to whom he may be ſaid to be their Patriarch. Alſo your Lordſhip knoweth right well, that at what Time St. Auſtin wrote that Book, he was then Biſhop in Africa. Farther, you are not ignorant, that between Europe and Africa lieth the Sea called the Mediterranean Sea, ſo that all the Countries in Europe to him which is in Africa, may be called Countries beyond the Sea. Hereof St. Auſtin ſaith, All the Chriſtian Countries beyond the Seas and remote Regions, are ſubject to the See of Rome. If I ſhould ſay all Countries beyond the Sea, I do except England, which to me now being in England, is not beyond the Sea. In this Senſe St. Auſtin, ſaith, All the Countries beyond the Sea are ſubject to the See of Rome; declaring thereby that Rome was one of the Sees of the four Patriarchs, and under it Europe, by what Subjection I pray you? Only for a Preheminence; as we here in England ſay, that all the Biſhopricks in England are ſubject to the Archbiſhopricks of Canterbury and York.

Rome may be Mother of Churches, and yet not ſupream Head of Churches.

For this Preheminence alſo the other Doctors (as you recited) ſay, that Rome is the Mother of Churches, as the Biſhoprick of Lincoln is Mother to the Biſhoprick of Oxford, becauſe the Biſhoprick of Oxford came from the Biſhoprick of Lincoln, and they were once both one; and ſo is the Archbiſhoprick of Canterbury Mother to the other Biſhopricks which are in her Province. In like Manner the Archbiſhoprick of York is Mother to the North Biſhopricks; and yet no Man will ſay, that Lincoln, Canterbury, or York, is ſupream Head to other Biſhopricks; neither then ought we to confeſs the See of Rome to be ſupream Head, becauſe the Doctors in their Writings confeſs the See of Rome to be Mother of Churches. Anno 1555.

Now where you ſay, I was once of the ſame Religion which you are of, the Truth is I cannot but confeſs the ſame. Yet ſo was St. Paul a Perſecutor of Chriſt. But in that you ſay that I was one of you not long ago, in that I doing my Meſſage to my Lord of Wincheſter, ſhould deſire him to ſtand ſtout in that groſs Opinion of the Supper of the Lord; in very Deed I was ſent (as your Lordſhip ſaid) from the Council to my Lord of Wincheſter, to exhort him to receive alſo the true Confeſſion of Juſtification; and becauſe he was very refractory, I ſaid to him, Why my Lord, what make you ſo great a Matter herein? You ſee many Anabaptiſts riſe againſt the Sacrament of Altar; I pray you, my Lord, be diligent in confounding of them: For at that Time my Lord of Wincheſter and I had to do with two Anabaptiſts in Kent. In this Senſe I willed my Lord to be ſtiff in the Defence of the Sacrament againſt the deteſtable Errors of Anabaptiſts, and not in the Confirmation of that groſs and carnal Opinion now maintained.

In like Sort as touching the Sermon which I made at Paul's Croſs, you ſhall underſtand that there were at Paul's, and divers other Places, fixed railing Bills againſt the Sacrament, terming it Jack of the Box, The Sacramenr of the Halter, Round Robin, with ſuch unſeemly Terms, for which Cauſes, I to rebuke the unreverend Behaviour of certain evil diſpoſed Perſons, preached as reverendly of that Matter as I might, declaring what Eſtimation and Reverence ought to be given to it, what Danger inſued the miſhandling thereof, affirming in that Sacrament to be truly and verily the Body and Blood of Chriſt, effectually by Grace and Spirit: Which Words the Unlearned underſtanding not, ſuppoſed that I had meant of the groſs and carnal Being which the Romiſh Decrees ſet forth, that a Body having Life and Motion, ſhould be indeed under the Shapes of Bread and Wine.

Here the Biſhop of Lincoln interrupting ſaid:

Lincoln. Well, Mr. Ridley, thus you wreſt Places to your own Pleaſure; for whereas St. Auguſtine ſaith, That the whole Chriſtian World is ſubject to the See of Rome without any Limitation, and uſeth theſe Words, Beyond the Seas, and remote Regions, only to expreſs the Latitude of the Dominion of the Sea of Rome, willing thereby to declare that all the World, yea Countries far diſtant from Rome, yet nevertheleſs are ſubject to that See, yet you would wreſt it, and leave it only to Europe. I am ſure you will not deny, but all the Countries is more than Europe.

Ridley. Indeed, my Lord, if St. Auguſtine had ſaid ſimply, All the Countries, and not added, Beyond the Seas, it had been without Limitation; but in that he ſaid, All the Countries beyond the Seas, he himſelf doth limit the universal Proposition, declaring how far he meant by All the Countries.

The Bishop not staying for his Answer; proceeded, saying:

Lincoln. Well, if I should stay upon this Place, I could bring many more Places of the Fathers for the Confirmation thereof; but we have certain Instructions according to which we must proceed, and came not hither to dispute the Matter with you, but only to take your Answers to certain Articles, and used this in the Way of Disputation, in which you interrupted me; wherefore I will return thither again.

Ye must consider that the Church of Christ lieth not hid, but is a City on the Mountain, and a Candle on the Candlestick. Ponder with yourself, that the Church of Christ is Catholick, and universally spread throughout the World, not contained in the * Alligation of Places, not comprehended in the Circuit of England, not contained in the Compass of Germany and Saxony as your Church is.

* And why then do you alligate it to the City of Rome?

Wherefore, Mr. Ridley, for God's Love be ye not singular; acknowledge with all the Realm the Truth, it shall not be (as you alledge) prejudicial to the Crown; for the King and Queen their Majesties have renounced that usurped Power taken of their Predecessors, and justly have renounced it. For I am sure you know there are two Powers, the one declared by the Sword, the other by the Keys. The Sword is given to Kings and Rulers of Countries; the Keys were delivered by Christ to Peter, and of him left to all the Successors. As touching our Goods, Possessions, and Lives, we with you acknowledge us Subjects to the King and Queen, who hath the temporal Sword; but as concerning Matters of Religion, as touching God's Quarrel and his Word, we acknowledge another Head: And as the King and the Queen their Highness do in all worldly Affairs justly challenge the Prerogative and Primacy, so in spiritual and ecclesiastical Matters they acknowledge themselves not to be Heads and Rulers, but Members of Christ's Body. Why therefore should you stick at that Matter, which their Majesties have forsaken, and yielded.

Wherefore, Mr. Ridley, you shall not only not do Injury to the Crown, and be prejudicial to their Majesties Honour, in acknowledging with all Christendom the Pope's Holiness to be supreme Head of Christ's Church Militant here on Earth, but do a Thing most agreeable to them, and most desired of his Holiness. Thus if you will do, revoking together all your Errors, acknowledging with the Residue of the Realm the common and publick Fault, you will do what all Men most heartily desire; you will bring Quietness to your Conscience, and Health to your Soul; then shall we with great Joy, by the Authority committed to us from the Cardinal's Grace, receive you into the Church again, acknowledging you to be no longer a rotten, but a lively Member of the same; but if you shall still be singular, if you shall still obstinately persevere in your Errors, stubbornly maintaining your former Heresies, then we must against our Will, according to our Commission, separate you from us, and cut you off from the Church, lest the Rottenness of one Part in Process of Time putrify and corrupt the whole Body, then must we confess and publish you to be none of ours; then must we yield you up to the temporal Judges, of whom, except it otherwise please the King and Queen's Highness, you must receive Punishment by the Laws of this Realm; due for Hereticks.

Wherefore, Mr. Ridley, consider your State; remember your former Degrees, spare your Body, especially consider your Soul, which Christ so dearly bought with his precious Blood, do not you rathly cast away that which was precious in God's Sight; enforce not us to do all that we may do, which is not only to publish you to be none of us, to cut you off from the Church: We do not, nor cannot condemn you to die (as most untruly hath been reported of us) but that is the Office of the temporal Judges*; we only declare you to be none of the Church, and then you must, according to the Tenor of them, and Pleasure of the Rulers, abide their Determination, so that we, after we have given you up to the temporal Rulers, have no further to do with you.

* But that Office you yourselves have assigned unto them.

But I trust, Mr. Ridley, we shall not have Occasion to do what we may. I trust you will suffer us to rest in that Point of our Commission, which we most heartily desire, that is, upon Recantation and Repentance to receive you, to reconcile you, and again to adjoin you to the Unity of the Church.

Then Dr. Ridley, with often Interruption, at length spake.

Ridley. My Lord, I acknowledge an unspotted Church of Christ, in which no Man can err †, without which no Man can be saved, which is spread throughout all the World, that is, the Congregation of the Faithful; neither do I alligate or bind the same to any one Place, as you said, but confess the same to be spread throughout all the World; and where Christ's Sacraments are daily administred, his Gospel truly preached and followed, there doth Christ's Church shine as a City upon an Hill and as a Candle in the Candlestick: But rather it is such as you that would have the Church of Christ bound to a Place, who appoint the same to Rome, that there and no where else is the Foundation of Christ's Church. But I am fully persuaded that Christ's Church is every were founded, in every Place where his Gospel is truly received, and effectually followed. And in that the Church of God is in doubt, I use herein the wise Counsel of Vincentius Lyrinensis, whom I am sure you will allow, who giving Precepts how the catholick Church may be in all Schisms and Heresies known, writeth in this Manner: When (saith he) one Part is corrupted with Heresies, then prefer the whole World before that one Part; but if the greatest Part be infected, then prefer Antiquity.

† He meaneth, in which general Error can be finally.

In like Manner now when I perceive the greatest Part of Christianity to be infected with the Poison of the See of Rome, I repair to the Usage of the primitive Church, which I find clean contrary to the Pope's Decrees; as in that the Priest receiveth alone, that it is made unlawful to the Laity to receive in both Kinds, and such like: Wherefore it requireth, that I prefer the Antiquity of the primitive Church, before the Novelty of the Romish Church.

Lincoln. Mr. Ridley, these Faults which you charge the See of Rome withal, are indeed no Faults. For first it was never forbid the Laity, but that they might, if * they demanded, receive under both Kinds. You know also, that

* The Bohemians required that, but were deny'd it.

Christ after his Resurrection, at what Time he went with his Apostles to Galilee, opened himself by breaking of Bread. You know that St. Paul after his long sailing towards Rome brake Bread, and that the Apostles came together in breaking of Bread, which declareth that it is not unlawful to administer the Sacrament under the Form of Bread only: And yet the Church had just Occasion to decree, that the Laity should receive in one Kind only, thereby to take away an Opinion of the Unlearned, that Christ was not wholly both Flesh and Blood under the Form of Bread. Therefore to take away their Opinion, and to establish better the Peoples Faith, the Holy Ghost in the Church thought fit to decree, that the Laity should receive only in one Kind; and it is no News for the Church upon just Consideration to alter Rites and Ceremonies. For you read in the Acts of the Apostles, that St. Paul writing to certain of the Gentiles, who had received the Gospel, biddeth them to abstain from Things stifled, and from Blood, so that this seemeth to be an express Commandment; yet who will say but that it is lawful to eat Bloodings? How is it lawful but by the Permission of the Church.

Argument. The Church did abrogate the Precept of the Apostles of strangled and bloodings: Ergo, the Church likewise hath Authority touching the Ministration of the Sacrament under both Kinds.

Ridley. My Lord such Things as St Paul enjoyned to the Gentiles for a Sufferance, by a little and little to win the Jews to Christ, were only Commandments of Time, and respected not the Successors: But Christ's Commandment, Do this (that is, that which he did in Remembrance, which was not to administer in one Kind only) was not a Commandment for a Time, but to persevere to the World's End.

Answer. The Precept of the Apostles was but for a Time, and for a Purpose, by little and little to win the Jews.

But the Bishop of Lincoln, not attending to this Answer, without any Stay proceeded in this Oration.

So that the Church seemeth to have Authority by the Holy Ghost, whom Christ said he would send after his Ascension, which should teach the Apostles all Truth, to have Power and Jurisdiction to alter such Points of the Scripture, ever reserving the Foundation: But we came not, as I said before, in this Sort to reason the Matter with you, but have certain Instructions ministred unto us, according to the Tenor of which we must proceed, proposing certain Articles, unto which we require your Answer directly, either affirmatively, or negatively to every of them, either denying them or granting them without farther Disputations or Reasoning; for we have already stretch'd our Instructions, in that we suffer'd you to debate and reason the Matter, in such Sort as we have done: Which Articles you shall hear now, and to morrow at Eight of the Clock in St. Mary's Church we will require and take your Answers; and then according to the same proceed: And if you require a Copy of them, you shall have it, Pen, Ink, and Paper, also such Books as you shall demand, if they be to be gotten in the University.

The Articles.

IN the Name of God Amen. We John of Lincoln, James of Gloucester, and John of Bristol, Bishops, &c.

1. We do object to thee Nicholas Ridley, and to thee Hugh Latimer, jointly and severally, First, that thou Nicholas Ridley in this high University of Oxford, in the Year 1554, in the Months of April, May, June, July, or in some one or more of them, hast affirmed and openly defended and maintained, and in many other Times and Places besides, that the true and natural Body of Christ, after the Consecration of the Priest, is not really present in the Sacrament of the Altar. Anno 1555.

2. Item, That in the Year and Months aforesaid thou hast publickly affirmed and defended, that in the Sacrament of the Altar remaineth still the Substance of Bread and Wine.

3. Item, that in the said Year and Months thou hast openly affirmed, and obstinately maintained, that in the Mass is no propitiatory Sacrifice for the Quick and the Dead.

4. Item, That in the Year, Place, and Months aforesaid, these the aforesaid Assertions solemnly had been condemned, by the scholastical Censure of this School, as heretical and contrary to the catholick Faith, by the worshipful Dr. Weston, Prolocutor then of the Convocation-house, as also by other learned Men of both the Universities.

5. Item, That all and singular the Premisses be true, notorious, and famous, and openly known by publick Fame, as well to them near Hand, and also to them in distant Places far off.

All these Articles I thought good here to place together, that as often as hereafter Rehearsal shall be of any of them, the Reader may have Recourse hither and peruse the same, and not to trouble the Story with several Repetitions thereof.

Examination upon the said Articles.

AFTER these Articles were read, the Bishops took Counsel together. At last the Bishop of Lincoln said, These are the very same Articles you in open Disputation here in the University did maintain and defend. What say you unto the First? I pray you answer affirmatively, or negatively.

Dr. Ridley examined upon the Articles aforesaid.

Ridley. Why, my Lord, I supposed your Gentleness had been such, that you would have given me Space until to morrow, that upon good Advice I might bring a determinate Answer.

Lincoln. Yea, Mr. Ridley, I mean not that your Answers now shall be prejudicial to your Answers to-morrow. I will take your Answers at this Time, and yet notwithstanding it shall be lawful to you to add, diminish, alter, and change these Answers to morrow what you will.

Ridley. Indeed, in like Manner at our last Disputations I had many Things promised, and few performed. It was said, that after Disputations I should have a Copy thereof, and License to change mine Answers, as I should think good. It was meet also that I should have seen what was written by the Notaries at that Time. So your Lordship pretended great Gentleness in giving me a Time; but this Gentleness is the same that Christ had of the High-priest. For you, as your Lordship saith, have no Power to condemn me, neither at any Time to put a Man to Death: So in like Sort the High-priests said, that it was not lawful for them to put any Man to Death, but committed Christ to Pilate, neither would suffer him to absolve Christ, altho' he sought all the Means for it that he might.

The Catholicks promise fair, but they perform nothing.

Then spake Dr. Weston, one of the Audience, What, do you make the King Pilate?

Ridley.

Anno 1555. Ridley. No, Mr. Doctor, I do but compare your Deeds with Caiaphas his Deeds and the High-priests, which would condemn no Man to Death, as ye will not, and yet would not suffer Pilate to absolve and deliver Christ.

Lincoln. Mr. Ridley, we mind not but that you shall enjoy the Benefit of answering to-morrow, and will take your Answers now as now, to-morrow you shall change, take out, add, and alter what you will. In the mean Season we require you to answer directly to every Article, either affirmatively or negatively.

Dr. Ridley's Protestation. Ridley. Seeing you appoint me a Time to answer to morrow, and yet will take mine Answers out of Hand: First, I require the Notaries to take and write my Protestation, that in no Point I acknowledge your Authority, or admit you to be my Judges, in that Point you are authorized from the Pope. Therefore whatsoever I shall say or do, I protest I neither say it, neither do it willingly, thereby to admit the Authority of the Pope; and if your Lordship will give me Leave, I will shew the Causes which move me thereunto.

Lincoln. No Mr. Ridley, we have Instructions to the contrary. We may not suffer you.

Ridley. I will be short; I pray your Lordships suffer me to speak in few Words.

Dr. Ridley cannot be suffered to speak. Lincoln. No Mr. Ridley, we may not abuse the Hearers Ears.

Ridley. Why, my Lord, suffer me to speak three Words.

Lincoln. Well Mr. Ridley, to-morrow you shall speak forty. The Time is far past; therefore we require your Answer determinately. What say you to the first Article? and thereupon rehearsed the same.

Ridley. My Protestation always saved, that by this mine Answer, I do not condescend to your Authority, in that you are Legate to the Pope, I answer thus: In a Sense the first Article is true, and in a Sense it is false; for if you take really for truly, for spiritually by Grace and Efficacy, then it is true that the natural Body and Blood of Christ is in the Sacrament really and truly; but if you take these Terms so grosly, that you would conclude thereby a natural Body having Motion, to be contained under the Forms of Bread and Wine, really and truly, then really is not the Body and Blood of Christ in the Sacrament, no more than the Holy Ghost is in the Element of Water in our Baptism. Because this Answer was not understood, the Notaries knew not how to note it; wherefore the Bishop of Lincoln desired him to answer affirmatively or negatively, either to grant to the Article, or deny it.

Ridley. My Lord, you know that where any Equivocation (which is a Word having two Significations) is, except Distinction be given, no direct Answer can be made; for it is one of Aristotle's Fallacies, containing two Questions under one, the which cannot be satisfied with one Answer. For both you and I agree herein, that in the Sacrament is the very true and natural Body and Blood of Christ, even that which was born of the Virgin Mary, which ascended into Heaven, which sitteth at the Right Hand of God the Father, which shall come from thence to judge the Quick and the Dead, only we differ in the Way and Manner of Being; we confess all one Thing to be in the Sacrament, and dissent in the Manner of being there. I being fully by God's Word thereunto perswaded, confess Christ's natural Body to be in the Sacrament indeed by Spirit and Grace, because that whosoever worthily receiveth that Bread and Wine, receiveth effectually Christ's Body, and drinketh his Blood, that is, he is made effectually Partaker of his Passion; and you make a grosser Kind of Being, inclosing a natural, a lively, and a moving Body, under the Shape or Form of Bread and Wine.

Now, this Difference considered, to the Question thus I answer, that in the Sacrament of the Altar is the natural Body and Blood of Christ really and truly, for spiritually by Grace and Efficacy; for so every worthy Receiver receiveth the very true Body of Christ; but if you mean really and indeed, so that thereby you would include a lively and a moveable Body under the Forms of Bread and Wine, then in that Sense is not Christ's Body in the Sacrament really and indeed.

This Answer taken and penned of the Notaries, the Bishop of Lincoln proposed the second Question or Article. To whom he answered:

Ridley. Always my Protestation reserved, I answer thus; that in the Sacrament is a certain Change in that Bread, which was before common Bread, is now made a lively Representation of Christ's Body, and not only a Figure, but effectually representeth his Body, that even as the mortal Body was nourished by that visible Bread, so is the internal Soul fed with the heavenly Food of Christ's Body, which the Eyes of Faith seeth, as the bodily Eyes seeth only Bread. Such a Sacramental Mutation I grant to be in the Bread and Wine, which truly is no small Change, but such a Change as no mortal Man can make, but only that Omnipotency of Christ's Word.

Then the Bishop of Lincoln desired him to answer directly, either affirmatively or negatively, without further Declaration of the Matter. Then he answered:

Ridley. That notwithstanding the sacramental Mutation of the which he spake, and all the Doctors confessed, the true Substance and Nature of Bread and Wine remaineth: With which the Body is in like Sort nourished, as the Soul is by Grace and Spirit with the Body of Christ. Even so in Baptism the Body is washed with the visible Water, and the Soul is cleansed from all Filth by the invisible Holy Ghost, and yet the Water ceaseth not to be Water, but keepeth the Nature of Water still: In like Manner in the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper the Bread ceaseth not to be Bread.

Then the Notaries penned, that he answered affirmatively to the second Article. The Bishop of Lincoln declared a Difference between the Sacrament of the Altar and Baptism, because that Christ did not say by the Water, This is the Holy Ghost, as he did by the Bread, This is my Body.

Then Dr. Ridley cited St. Augustine, which conferred both the Sacraments one with the other: But the Bishop of Lincoln notwithstanding, thereupon recited the third Article, and required a direct Answer. To whom Ridley said:

Ridley. Christ, as St. Paul writeth, made one perfect Sacrifice for the Sins of the whole World, neither can any Man reiterate that Sacrifice of his, and yet is the Communion an acceptable Sacrifice to God of Praise and Thanksgiving;

Thanksgiving; but to say that thereby Sins are taken away (which wholly and perfectly was done by Christ's Passion, of which the Communion is only a Memory) that is a great Derogation from the Merits of Christ's Passion: For the Sacrament was instituted, that we receiving it, and thereby recognizing and remembring his Passion, should be Partakers of the Merits of the same. For otherwise doth this Sacrament take upon it the Office of Christ's Passion, whereby it might follow, that Christ died in vain.

The Notaries penned this his Answer to be affirmative.

Lincoln. Indeed as you alledge out of St. Paul, Christ made one perfect Oblation for all the whole World, that is, that bloody Sacrifice upon the Cross; yet nevertheless he hath left this Sacrifice, but not bloody, in the Remembrance of that by which Sins are forgiven; which is no Derogation of Christ's Passion.

Then the Bishop of Lincoln recited the fourth Article. To which Dr. Ridley answered:

Ridley. That in some Part the fourth was true, and in some Part false; true, in that those his Assertions were condemned as Heresies, although unjustly; false, in that it was said, they were condemned Scientia Scholastica, in that the Disputations were in such Sort ordered, that it was far from any School Act.

This Answer being penned by the Notaries, the Bishop of Lincoln rehearsed the fifth Article. To which Dr. Ridley answered:

Ridley. That the Premisses were in such Sort true, as in these Answers he had declared. Whether that all Men spake Evil of them, he knew not, in that he came not so much abroad to hear what every Man reported.

When this Answer also was taken by the Notaries, the Bishop of Lincoln said:

Lincoln. To-morrow, at eight of the Clock, you shall appear before us in St. Mary's Church, and then because we cannot well agree upon your Answer to the first Article (for it was long before he was understood) if it will please you to write your Answer, you shall have Pen, Ink, and Paper, and Books, such as you shall require; but if you write any thing more than your Answers to these Articles, we will not receive it: So he charging the Mayor with him, declaring also to the Mayor, that he should suffer him to have a Pen and Ink, dismissed Dr. Ridley, and sent for Mr. Latimer, who being brought to the Divinity-School, there tarried till they called for him.

Mr. Latimer appeareth before the Commissioners.

NOW after Dr. Ridley was committed to the Mayor, then the Bishop of Lincoln commanded the Bayliffs to bring in the other Prisoner, who as soon as he was placed, said to the Lords.

Latimer. My Lords, If I appear again, I pray you not to send for me until you be ready. For I am an old Man, and it is great Hurt to mine old Age to tarry so long gazing upon the cold Walls. Then said the Bishop of Lincoln:

Lincoln. Mr. Latimer, I am sorry you are brought so soon, although it is the Bayliff's Fault, and not mine; but it shall be amended.

The Order of Mr Latimer's Apparel.

Then Mr. Latimer bowed his Knee down to the Ground, holding his Hat in his Hand, having a Kerchief on his Head, and upon it a Night-cap or two, and a great Cap (such as Townsmen use, with two broad Flaps to button under the Chin) wearing an old thread-bare Bristow Frize Gown girded to his Body with a Penny Leather Girdle, at which hanged by a long String of Leather his Testament, and his Spectacles without a Case, depending about his Neck upon his Breast. After this the Bishop of Lincoln began on this Manner. Anno 1555.

The Bishop of Lincoln's Oration to Mr. Latimer.

Lincoln. Mr. Latimer, you shall understand, that I and my Lords here have a Commission from my Lord Cardinal Pool's Grace, Legate a latere, to this Realm of England, from our most reverend Father in God, the Pope's Holiness, to examine you upon certain Opinions and Assertions of yours, which you as well here openly in Disputations in the Year of our Lord 1554, as at sundry and at divers other Times did affirm, maintain, and obstinately defend. In which Commission be specially two Points; the one which we must desire you is, that if you shall now recant, revoke, and disannul these your Errors, and together with all this Realm, yea, all the World confess the Truth, we, upon due Repentance on your Part, shall receive you, reconcile you, acknowledge you no longer a stray'd Sheep, but adjoin you again to the Unity of Christ's Church, from which you in the Time of Schism, fell. So that it is no new Place to which I exhort you; I desire you to return thither from whence you went.

But this Church then standeth upon the Truth of God's Word, and not upon the Fantasies of Man.

Consider, Mr. Latimer, that without the Unity of the Church there is no Salvation, and in the Church can be no Errors. Therefore what should hinder you to confess that which all the Realm confesseth, to forsake that which the King and Queen their Majesties have renounced, and all the Realm recanted: It was a common Error, and it is now of all confessed; it will be no more Shame to you than it was to us all. Consider, Mr. Latimer, that within these twenty Years this Realm also with all the World confessed one Church, acknowledged in Christ's Church an Head, and by what Means, and for what Occasion it cut off itself from the rest of Christianity, and renounced that which in all Times and Ages was confessed, it is well known, and might be now declared upon what good Foundation the See of Rome was forsaken, save that we must spare them that are dead, to whom the Rehearsal would be opprobrious; it is no usurped Power, as it hath been termed, but founded upon Peter by Christ, a sure Foundation, a perfect Builder, as by divers Places, as well of the ancient Fathers, as by the express Word of God may be proved.

How you spared the Dead, your own Acts can bear Witness.

With that Mr. Latimer, who before leaned his Head on his Hand, began to remove his Cap and Kerchief from his Ears. The Bishop proceeded, saying,

For Christ spake expressly to Peter, saying, Feed my Sheep, and rule my Sheep, which Word doth not only declare a certain ruling of Christ's Flock, but includeth also a certain Preheminence and Government; and therefore is the King called a King from Ruling: So that in saying Rule, Christ declared a Power which he gave to Peter, which Jurisdiction and Power Peter by Hand delivered to Clement, and so in all Ages hath it remained in the See of Rome. This, if you shall confess with us, and acknowledge with all the Realm your Errors and false Assertions, then will you do what we most desire, then shall we rest upon the first Part of our Commission, then shall we receive you, acknowledge you one of the Church, and according to the Authority given unto us, minister unto you, upon due Repentance, the Benefit of Absolution, to which the King and Queen their Majesties were not ashamed to submit themselves, although they of themselves were unspotted, and needed no Reconciliation: Yet lest the Putrifaction and Rottenness of all the Body might be noisome, and do Damage to the Head also, they (as I said) most humbly submitted themselves to my Lord Cardinal's Grace, by him, as a Legate to the Pope's Holiness, to be Partakers of the Reconciliation. But if you shall stubbornly persevere in your Blindness, if you will not acknowledge your Errors, if you, as you now stand alone, will be singular in your Opinions, if by Schism and Heresy you will divide your self from your Church, then must we proceed to the second Part of the Commission, which we would be loth to do, that is, not to condemn you, for that we cannot do (that the temporal Sword of the Realm, and not we*, will do) but to separate you from us, acknowledge you to be none of us, to renounce you as no Member of the Church, to declare that you are the Son of Perdition, a lost Child, and as you are a rotten Member of the Church, so to cut you off from the Church, and so to commit you to the temporal Judges, permitting them to proceed against you, according to the Tenor of their Laws.

* He that delivereth me unto thee hath the greater Sin, saith Christ.

Therefore, Mr. Latimer, for God's Love consider your Estate, remember you are a learned Man, you have taken Degrees in the Schools, born the Office of a Bishop; remember you are an old Man, spare your Body, accelerate not your Death, and especially remember your Soul's Health, and the Peace of your Conscience; consider that if you should die in this State, you shall be a stinking Sacrifice to God; for it is the Cause that maketh the Martyr, and not the Death: Consider that if you die in this Sate, you die without Grace, for without the Church can be no Salvation. Let not Vain-glory have the upper Hand, humble yourself, captivate your Understanding, subdue your Reason, submit yourself to the Determination of the Church; do not force us to do all that we may do, let us rest in that Part which we most heartily desire, and I, for my Part (then the Bishop put off his Cap) again with all my Heart exhort you.

These Reasons may perswade the Flesh, but cannot satisfy the Conscience.

After the Bishop had somewhat paused, then Mr. Latimer lift up his Head (for before he leaned on his Elbow) and asked whether his Lordship had done speaking; and the Bishop answered, Yea.

Latimer. Then will your Lordship give me leave to speak a Word or two?

Lincoln. Yea, Mr. Latimer, so that you use a modest kind of Talk, without Railing or Taunts.

Mr. Latimer hath leave to sit down.

Latimer. I beseech your Lordship, license me to sit down.

Lincoln. At your Pleasure, Mr. Latimer, take as much Ease as you will.

Answer of Mr. Latimer to the Bishop of Lincoln.

Latimer. Your Lordship gently exhorted me in many Words to come to the Unity of the Church. I confess (my Lord) a Catholick Church, spread throughout all the World, in which no Man can err, without which Unity of the Church no Man can be saved, but I know perfectly by God's Word, that this Church is in all the World, and hath not its Foundation in Rome only, as you say; and methought your Lordship brought a Place out of the Scriptures to confirm the same, that there was a Jurisdiction given to Peter, in that Christ bade him govern his People. Indeed, my Lord, St. Peter did his Office well and truly, in that he was bid to govern; but since the Bishops of Rome have taken a new Kind of Government. Indeed they ought to govern, but how my Lord? not as they will themselves: But this Government must be hedged in and ditched in. They must rule, but according to the Word of God.

The universal Church hath not its Foundation only in Rome. Argument. Christ bade Peter govern his People: Ergo, the Pope must reign over Kings and Emperors.

But the Bishops of Rome have turned the Rule according to the Word of God, into the Rule according to their own Pleasures, and as it pleaseth them best: As there is a Book set forth which hath divers Points in it, and amongst others, this Point is one which your Lordship went about to prove by this Word, Rule, and the Argument which he bringeth forth for the Proof of that Matter, is taken out of Deuteronomy, where it is said, If there ariseth any Controversy among the People, the Priests of the Order of Levi shall decide the Matter, according to the Law of God; so it must be taken. This Book perceiving this Authority to be given to the Priests of the old Law, taketh Occasion to prove the same to be given to the Bishops and other the Clergy of the new Law: But in proving this Matter, whereas it was said there, as the Priests of the Order of Levi should determine the Matter according to God's Law, that (according to God's Law) is left out, and only is recited, as the Priests of the Order of Levi shall decide the Matter, so it ought to be taken of the People; a large Authority, I ensure you. What gelding of Scripture is this? what clipping of God's Coin? with which Terms the Audience smiled. This is much like the Ruling which your Lordship talked of. Nay, nay, my Lords, we may not give such Authority to the Clergy, to Rule all Things as they will. Let them keep themselves within their Commission. Now, I trust, my Lord, I do not rail yet.

Deut. 21. Clipping of God's Scriptures by the Papists.

Lincoln. No, Mr. Latimer, your Talk is more like Taunts than Railing: But in that I have not read the Book which you blame so much, nor know not of any such, I can say nothing therein.

Latimer. Yes, my Lord, the Book is open to be read, and is intituled to one which is Bishop of Glouceſter, whom I never knew, neither did at any Time see him to my Knowledge. With that the People laughed, because the Bishop of Glouceſter sate there in Commission.

Then the Bishop of Glouceſter stood up, and said it was his Book.

Latimer. Was it yours, my Lord? Indeed I knew not your Lordship, neither ever did I see you before, neither yet see you now, through the Brightness of the Sun shining betwixt you and me. Then the Audience laughed again; and Mr. Latimer spake unto them, saying, Why my Masters, this is no laughing Matter. I answer upon Life and Death. Wo unto you that laugh now, for ye shall weep.

The Bishop of Lincoln commanded Silence, and then said: Mr. Latimer, if you had kept yourself within your Bounds, if you had not uſed ſuch Scoffs and Taunts this had not been done.

Brooks Biſhop of Glouceſter ſpeaketh.

After this the Biſhop of Glouceſter ſaid in excuſing of his Book: Mr. Latimer, hereby every Man may ſee what Learning you have.

Then Mr. Latimer interrupted him ſaying: Do you look for Learning at my Hands who have gone ſo long to the School of Oblivion, making the bare Walls my Library, keeping me ſo long in Priſon without Book, or Pen and Ink; and now you let me looſe to come and anſwer to Articles. You deal with me as though two were appointed to fight for Life and Death, and over-night the one thro' Friends and Favour, is cheriſhed, and hath good Counſel given him how to encounter with his Enemy. The other, for Envy or lack of Friends, all the whole Night is ſet in the Stocks. In the Morning when they ſhall meet, the one is in Strength and luſty; the other is ſtiff in his Limbs, and almoſt dead for Feebleneſs. Think you, that to run thorough this Man with a Spear is not a goodly Victory?

But the Biſhop of Glouceſter interrupting his Anſwer, proceeded, ſaying: I went not about to recite any Places of Scripture in that Place of my Book; for then if I had not recited it faithfully, you might have had juſt Occaſion of Reprehenſion: But I only in that Place formed an Argument a Majore, in this Senſe; that if in the old Law the Prieſts had Power to decide Matters of Controverſy, much more then ought the Authority to be given to the Clergy in the new Law: And I pray you in this Point what availeth their Rehearſal, According to the Law of God?

Latimer. Yes, my Lord, very much. For I acknowledge Authority to be given to the Spirituality to decide Matters of Religion, and as my Lord ſaid even now, to Rule; but they muſt do it according to the Word and Law of God, and not after their own Will, after their own Imaginations and Fancies.

The Biſhop of Glouceſter would have ſpoke more, ſaving that the Biſhop of Lincoln ſaid, that they came not to diſpute with Mr. Latimer, but to take his determinate Anſwers to their Articles, and ſo began to propoſe the ſame Articles which were propoſed to Dr. Ridley. But Mr. Latimer interrupted him, ſpeaking to the Biſhop of Glouceſter; Well, my Lord, I could wiſh more faithful dealing with God's Word, and not to leave out a Part, and ſnatch a Part here, and another there, but to rehearſe the whole faithfully.

But the Biſhop of Lincoln, not attending to this Saying of Mr. Latimer, proceeded in rehearſing the Articles in Form and Senſe as I declared before in the Examination of the Articles, propoſed to Dr. Ridley, and required Mr. Latimer's Anſwer to the Firſt. Then Mr. Latimer making his Proteſtation, that notwithſtanding theſe his Anſwers it ſhould not be taken that thereby he ſhould acknowledge any Authority of the Biſhop of Rome, ſaying, that he was the King and Queen's Majeſty's Subject, and not the Pope's, neither could ſerve two Maſters at one Time, except he ſhould now renounce one of them; required the Notaries ſo to take his Proteſtation, that whatſoever he ſhould ſay or do, it ſhould not be taken as though he did thereby agree to any Authority that came from the Biſhop of Rome.

The Proteſtation of Mr. Latimer.

The Biſhop of Lincoln ſaid, that his Proteſtation ſhould be ſo taken; he required him to anſwer briefly, affirmatively, or negatively to the firſt Article, and ſo recited the ſame again: And Mr. Latimer anſwered as followeth:

Mr. Latimer's Anſwer to the firſt Article.

Latimer. I do not deny, my Lord, that in the Sacrament by Spirit and Grace is the very Body and Blood of Chriſt, becauſe that every Man by receiving bodily that Bread and Wine, ſpiritually receiveth the Body and Blood, and is made Partaker thereby of the Merits of Chriſt's Paſſion: But I deny that the Body and Chriſt is in ſuch a Manner in the Sacrament as you would have it.

Lincoln. Then Mr. Latimer you anſwer affirmatively.

Latimer. Yea, if you mean of that groſs and carnal Being which you do take.

The Notaries took his Anſwer affirmatively.

Lincoln. What ſay you, Mr. Latimer, to the ſecond Article? and recited the ſame.

Mr. Latimer's Anſwer to the ſecond Article.

What Change is in the Bread and Wine in the Sacrament, not in the Nature, but in the Dignity of repreſenting.

Latimer. There is, my Lord, a Change in the Bread and Wine, and ſuch a Change as no Power, but the Omnipotency of God can make, in that that which before was Bread, ſhould now have the Dignity to exhibit Chriſt's Body, and yet the Bread is ſtill Bread, and the Wine ſtill Wine: For the Change is not in the Nature, but in the Dignity, becauſe now that which was common Bread hath the Dignity to exhibit Chriſt's Body: For whereas it was common Bread, it is now no more common Bread, neither ought it to be ſo taken, but as holy Bread ſanctify'd by God's Word.

With that the Biſhop of Lincoln ſmiled, ſaying: Lo, Mr. Latimer, ſee what Steadfaſtneſs is in your Doctrine. That which you abhorred and deſpiſed moſt, you now moſt eſtabliſh: For whereas you moſt railed at Holy Bread, you now make your Communion Holy Bread.

Latimer. Tuſh, a Ruſh for your Holy Bread. I ſay the Bread in the Communion is an Holy Bread indeed.

But the Biſhop of Lincoln interrupted him, and ſaid: O, you make a Difference betwixt Holy Bread and Holy Bread (with that the Audience laughed). Well, Mr. Latimer, is not this your Anſwer, that the Subſtance of Bread and Wine remaineth after the Words of Conſecration?

Latimer. Yes verily, it muſt needs be ſo. For Chriſt himſelf calleth it Bread, St. Paul calleth it Bread, the Doctors confeſs the ſame, the Nature of a Sacrament confirmeth the ſame, and I call it Holy Bread, not in that I make no Difference between your Holy Bread and this, but for the Holy Office which it beareth, that is, to be a Figure of Chriſt's Body, and not only a bare Figure, but effectually to repreſent the ſame.

So the Notaries penned his Anſwer in the Affirmative.

Lincoln. What ſay you to the third Queſtion? and recited the ſame.

Latimer. No, no, my Lord, Chriſt made one perfect Sacrifice for all the whole World, neither can any Man offer him again, neither can the Prieſt offer up Chriſt again for the Sins of Man, which he took away by offering himſelf once for all (as St. Paul ſaith) upon the Croſs, neither is there any Propitiation for our Sins ſaving his Croſs only.

So the Notaries penned his Anſwer to this Article alſo affirmatively.

Lincoln.

Anno 1555. Lincoln. What ſay you to the fourth, Mr. Latimer? and then recited it. After the Recital whereof, when Mr. Latimer anſwered not, the Biſhop asked him whether he heard him or no?

Latimer. Yes, but I do not underſtand what you mean thereby.

Lincoln. Marry, only this, that theſe your Aſſertions were condemned by Dr. Weſton as Hereſies: Is it not ſo, Mr. Latimer?

Mr. Latimer's Anſwer to the fourth Article. Latimer. Yes, I think they were condemned. But how unjuſtly, he that ſhall be Judge of all, knoweth.

The Notaries alſo took this Anſwer affirmatively.

Lincoln. What ſay you, Mr. Latimer, to the fifth Article? and recited it.

Latimer. I know not what you mean by theſe Terms. I am no Lawyer, I wiſh you would propoſe the Matter plainly.

Lincoln. In that we proceed according to the Law, we muſt uſe their Terms alſo. The Meaning only is this, that theſe your Aſſertions are notorious, evil-ſpoken of, and yet common and frequent in the Mouths of the People.

Mr. Latimer's Anſwer to the fifth Article. Latimer. I cannot tell how much, nor what Men talk of them. I come not ſo much among them, in that I have been ſecluded a long Time. What Men report of them I know not, not care not.

This Anſwer taken, the Biſhop of Lincoln ſaid, Mr. Latimer, we mean not that theſe your Anſwers ſhall be prejudicial to you. To Morrow you ſhall appear before us again, and then it ſhall be lawful for you to alter and change what you will. We give you Reſpite till to Morrow, truſting that after you have pondered well all Things againſt to Morrow, you will not be aſhamed to confeſs the Truth.

Latimer. Now, my Lord, I pray you give me Licence in three Words, to declare the Cauſes why I have refuſed the Authority of the Pope.

Lincoln. Nay, Mr. Latimer, to Morrow you ſhall have Licence to ſpeak forty Words.

Latimer. Nay, my Lords, I beſeech you to do with me now as it ſhall pleaſe your Lordſhips: I pray you let not me be troubled to Morrow again.

Lincoln. Yes, Mr. Latimer, you muſt needs appear again to Morrow.

Latimer. Truly, my Lord, as for my Part, I require no Reſpite, for I am at a Point; you ſhall give me Reſpite in vain: Therefore I pray you let me not trouble you to Morrow.

Lincoln. Yes, for we truſt, God will work with you againſt to Morrow. There is no Remedy, you muſt needs appear again to Morrow at eight of the Clock in St. Mary's Church. And forthwith the Biſhop charged the Mayor with Mr. Latimer, and diſmiſſed him, and then brake up their Seſſion for that Day, about one of the Clock in the Afternoon.

The ſecond Seſſion.

THE next Day following (which was the Firſt of October) ſomewhat after eight of the Clock, the ſaid Lords repaired to St. Mary's Church, and after they were ſet in a high Throne well trimm'd with Cloth of Tiſſue and Silk, then appeared Dr. Ridley, who was ſet at a framed Table a good Space from the Biſhop's Feet, which Table had a Silk Cloth caſt over it, and the Place was encompaſſed about with framed Seats in quadrate Form, partly for Gentlemen who repaired thither (for this was Seſſion-Day of Gaol-Delivery) and Heads of the Univerſity to ſit, and partly to keep off the Preſs of the Audience: For the whole Body, as well of the Univerſity as of the Town, came hither to ſee the End of theſe two Perſons. After Dr. Ridley's Appearance, and the Silence of the Audience, the Biſhop of Lincoln ſpake in Manner following:

Lincoln. Mr. Ridley, yeſterday when we challenged you for not uncovering your Head, you excuſed yourſelf of that whereof no Man accuſed you, in ſaying you did not put on your Cap for any Obſtinacy towards us, who as touching our own Perſons deſired no ſuch Obedience of you, but only in reſpect of them whoſe Perſons we bear; neither (you ſaid) for any Contempt that you bear to this worſhipful Audience, which, although juſtly may, yet in this Caſe, require no ſuch Humility of you; neither for any Derogation of Honour to my Lord Cardinal's Grace, in that he is deſcended from the royal Blood, in that he is a Man moſt noble, both for his excellent Qualities and ſingular Learning: For as touching thoſe Points, you ſaid, you would with all Humility, honour, reverence and worſhip his Grace; but in that he is Legate to the moſt reverend Father in God the Pope's Holineſs (with that the Biſhop with all then preſent put off their Caps, but Dr. Ridley moved not his) you ſaid you neither could, nor would by any Means be induced to give him Honour: But foraſmuch as this is the Point we told you of yeſterday, why we require Honour and Reverence of you, we tell you now as we did then, except you take the Pains to move your Bonnet, we will take care to cauſe your Bonnet to be taken from you, unleſs you pretend Sickneſs, as yeſterday you did not.

Ridley. I pretend now none other Cauſe, than I did yeſterday, that is, only that hereby it may appear, that not only in Word and Confeſſion, but alſo by all my Geſture and Behaviour, in no Point I agree or admit any Authority or Power that ſhall come from the Pope, and not for any Pride of Mind (as God is my Judge) neither for Contempt of your Lordſhips, or of this worſhipful Audience, neither for Derogation of Honour due to my Lord Cardinal's Grace, as concerning thoſe Points which your Lordſhip ſpake of, that is, his noble Parentage and ſingular Graces in Learning. And as for taking my Cap away, your Lordſhip may do as it ſhall pleaſe you, it ſhall not offend me, but I ſhall be content with your Ordinance in that Behalf.

Lincoln. Foraſmuch as you do now anſwer as you did yeſterday, we muſt do alſo as we did then, and forthwith one of the Beadles very haſtily ſnatched his Cap from his Head.

After this the Biſhop of Lincoln began the Examination in the following Manner.

Lincoln. Mr. Ridley, yeſterday we took your Anſwer to certain Articles, which we then propoſed unto you: But becauſe we could not be thoroughly ſatisfy'd with your Anſwer then to the firſt Article, neither could the Notaries take any determinate Anſwer of you, we (you requiring the ſame) granted you Licence to bring your Anſwer in writing, and thereupon commanded the Mayor that you ſhould have Pen, Paper, and Ink, yea, any Books alſo that you would require, if they were to be gotten: we licenſed you then alſo to alter your former

Anſwers

Answers this Day at your Pleasure: Therefore we are come now hither, to see whether you are in the same Mind now that you were in Yesterday (which we would not wish) or contrary, contented to revoke all your former Assertions, and in all Points consent to submit yourself to the Determination of the universal Church, and I for my Part most earnestly exhort you (and therewith he put off his Cap) not because my Conscience pricketh me, as you said Yesterday, but because I see you a rotten Member, and in the Way of Perdition.

Yesterday I brought forth amongst others, St. Augustine, to prove that Authority hath always been given to the See of Rome, and you wrested the Words far contrary to St. Augustin's Meaning, in that you would have all the World to be apply'd only to Europe, which is but a third Part of all the World; whereas indeed the Process of St. Augustin's Words will not admit of your Interpretation. For he saith not, All the christian Countries beyond the Seas, &c. but First, All the christian Countries is subject to the Church of Rome, and afterward addeth, Beyond the Sea, but only to Augment the Dominion of the See of Rome.

But Dr. Ridley still persevered in his former Answer, saying; I am sure, my Lord, you have some Skill in Cosmography, in which you shall understand that there is a Sea called The Mediterranean Sea, cast between Europe and Africa, in which he meant Europe beyond the Sea, even as if I should say the whole World beyond the Sea, excepting England in which I stand: And here many Words were spent upon the Interpretation of the same Place of St. Austin.

After long Disceptation, the Bishop of Lincoln said, the Meaning of St. Augustine might be known by the Consent of the other Doctors, and rehearsed divers.

But Dr. Ridley required the Rehearsal of the Places, and to read the very Words of the Doctors, saying, that perhaps those which the Bishop rehearsed, being proponed in other Terms in the Doctors, would admit a contrary Meaning and Interpretation: But in that Book, out of which the Bishop rehearsed them, was none of the Doctors, but only the Sentences drawn out of the Doctors by some studious Man: He could not recite the very Words of the Doctors.

Then after the Bishop of Lincoln mentioned Cyrill, who (as he said) made against Mr. Ridley in the Sacrament, even by Philip Melancthon his own alledging in his common Places, and forthwith called for Melancthon, but in vain, because all such Books were burned a little before, where he passed it over.

Cyril also in another Place proving to the Jews that Christ was come, useth this Reason, Altars are erected in Christ's Name in Britain, and in far Countries: Ergo, Christ is come. But we may use the contrary, of that Reason; Altars are plucked down in Britain: Ergo, Christ is not come. A good Argument a contrariis. I will stand to it in the Schools by and by with any Man. Ye see what a good Argument this your Doctrine maketh for the Jews, to prove that Christ is not come.

Altars be erected in Christ's Remembrance in Britain, Ergo, Christ is come.

Altars be now pluckeddown in Britain: Ergo, Christ is not come.

Dr. Ridley smiling, answered: Your Lordship is not ignorant that this Word Altar, in the Scripture signifieth as well the Altar whereupon the Jews were wont to make their burnt Sacrifices, as the Table of the Lord's Supper. Cyril meaneth there by this Word Altars, not the Jewish Altar, but the Table of the Lord, and by that Saying (Altars are erected in Christ's Name: Ergo, Christ is come) he meaneth, that the Communion is administred in his Remembrance: Ergo, Christ is come: For the Strength of his Argument is, because the Remembrance of a Thing cannot be, except it self be past: Then could not all Countries celebrate the Communion in Remembrance of Christ's Passion, except Christ had been come and suffered. As for the taking down of the Altars, it was done upon just Considerations, for that they seemed to come too nigh to the Jewish Usage. Neither was the Supper of the Lord at any Time better administred, or more duly received, than in those latter Days, when all Things were brought to the Rites and Usage of the primitive Church.

Answer. This Argument is not A sensu contrario: For erecting of Altars in the Antecedent, and plucking down Altars in the Consequent, be not contrary. In the Antecedent, Cyril meaneth the Table, or else the Celebration of the Lord's Supper in his Remembrance. In the Consequent, by plucking down of Altars, is meant the taking away of Places and Monuments serving not to the Lord's Supper, but to Idolatry, whereby the true Table of the Lord's Supper, in his Remembrance may be erected again.

Lincoln. A goodly receiving, I promise you, to set an Oyster-table instead of an Altar, and to come from Puddings at Westminster to receive; and yet when your Table was constituted, you could never be content, in placing the same, now East, now North, now one Way, then another, until it pleased God of his Goodness to place it clean out of the Church.

Ridley. Your Lordship's unreverend Terms do not elevate the Thing. Perhaps some Men came more devoutly from Puddings, than other Men do now from other Things.

Lincoln. As for that, Mr. Ridley, you ought to be judge of no Man: But by this your Reasoning you cause us to stretch and inlarge our Instructions. We came not to reason, but to take your determinate Answers to our Articles, and then he read the first Article in Manner above specify'd.

Now, Mr. Ridley, what say you to the first Article? If you have brought your Answer in writing, we will receive it: But if you have written any other Matter, we will not receive it.

Then Dr. Ridley took a Sheet of Paper out of his Bosom, and began to read that which he had written, but the Bishop of Lincoln commanded the Beadle to take it from him. But he desired License to read it, saying, that it was nothing but his Answers, but the Bishop would in no wise suffer him.

Ridley. Why, my Lord, will you require my Answer, and not suffer me to publish it? I beseech you, my Lord, let the Audience bear witness in this Matter. Your Lordships may handle it at your Pleasure: Therefore let the Audience be witness to your Doings.

Lincoln. Well, Mr. Ridley, we will first see what you have written, and then if we shall think it good to be read, you shall have it published; but except you will deliver it first, we will take none at all of you.

With that Dr. Ridley, seeing no Remedy, deliver'd it to an Officer, who immediately delivered it to the Bishop of Lincoln, who after he had secretly communicated it to the two Bishops, declared the Sense, but would not read it as it was written, saying, that it contained Words of Blasphemy: Therefore he would not fill the Ears of the Audience therewithal, and so abuse their Patience: Notwithstanding Dr. Ridley desired very instantly to have it published, saying, that except a Line or two, there was nothing contained but the ancient Fathers Saying for the Confirmation of his Assertions.

After the said Bishops had secretly viewed the whole, then the Bishop of Lincoln said: In the first Part, Mr. Ridley, is nothing contained but your Protestation, that you would not have these your Answers so to be taken, as though you seemed thereby to consent to the Authority or Jurisdiction of the Pope's Holiness.

Ridley. No, my Lord, I pray you read it out that the Audience may hear it: But the Bishop of Lincoln would in no wise, because (he said) there was contained Words of Blasphemy.

Then the Bishop of Lincoln recited the first Article, and required Dr. Ridley's Answer to it. Then Dr. Ridley said, that his Answer was there in writing, and desired that it might be published: But the Bishop would not read the Whole, but here and there a Piece of it. So the Notaries took his Answer, that he referred him to his Answer in writing exhibited now, and also before at the Time of Disputation, Dr. Weston being Prolocutor.

In like Manner the Bishop of Lincoln recited the second Article, and required an Answer, and Dr. Ridley referred him to his Answer in writing exhibited now, and also before at the Time of Disputation: And like Answers were taken to all the rest of the Articles.

These Answers in this Manner rehearsed, taken and penned by the Notaries, the Bishop of Gloucester began an Exhortation to move Dr. Ridley to turn.

Gloucester. If you would once empty your Stomach, captivate your Senses, subdue your Reason, and together with us consider what a feeble Ground of your Religion you have, I do not doubt but you might easily be brought to acknowledge one Church with us, to confess one Faith with us, and to believe one Religion with us. For what a weak and feeble Stay in Religion is this I pray you? Latimer leaneth to Cranmer, Cranmer to Ridley, and Ridley to the Singularity of his own Wit: So that if you overthrow the Singularity of Ridley's Wit, then must needs the Religion of Cranmer and Latimer fall also. You remember well, Mr. Ridley, that the Prophet speaketh most truly, saying, Wo, wo be them which are singular and wise in their own Conceits.

But you will say here, it is true that the Prophet saith: But how know you that I am wise in mine own Conceit? Yes, Mr. Ridley, you refuse the Determination of the Catholick Church; you must needs be singular and wise in your own Conceit, for you bring Scripture for the Proof of your Assertions, and we also bring Scriptures; you understand them in one Sense, and we in another. How will you know the Truth herein? If you stand to your own Interpretation, then you are singular in your own Conceit: But if you say you will follow the Minds of the Doctors and ancient Fathers, likely you understand them in one Meaning, and we take them in another; how will you know the Truth herein? If you stand to your own Judgment, then are you singular in your own Conceit, then can you not avoid the Wo which the Prophet speaketh of.

Wherefore if you have no Stay but the Catholick Church in Matters of Controversy, except you will rest upon the Singularity and Wisdom of your own Brain, if the Prophet most truly saith, Wo, wo be to them that are wise in their own Conceit: Then for God's Love, Dr. Ridley, stand not singular, be not you wise in your own Conceit, please not yourself overmuch. How were the Arians, the Manichees, Eutychians, with divers other Hereticks which have been in the Church, how I pray you were they suppressed and convinced? By reasoning in Disputations? No truly, the Arians had no more Places for the Confirmation of their Heresy, than the Catholicks for the Defence of the Truth. How then were they convinced? Only by the Determination of the Church. And indeed except we do constitute the Church our Foundation, Stay, and Judge, we can have no End of Controversies, no End of Disputations. For in that we all bring Scriptures and Doctors for the Proof of our Assertions, who should be Judge of this our Controversy? If we ourselves then be singular and wise in our own Conceits, then cannot we avoid the Wo that the Prophet speaketh of.

The Determination of the Church is only that, whereupon our catholick Men do ground their Faith.

It remaineth therefore that we submit our selves to the Determination and Arbitrement of the Church, with whom God promised to remain to the World's End, to whom he promised to send the Holy Ghost which should teach it the Truth. Wherefore Mr. Ridley, if you will avoid the Wo that the Prophet speaketh of, be not you wise in your own Judgment: If you will not be wise and singular in your own Judgment, captivate your own Understanding, subdue your Reason, and submit yourself to the Determination of the Church.

This is briefly the Sum of the Oration of the Bishop of Gloucester, by which he endeavoured in many more Words, amplifying and enlarging the Matter eloquently with sundry Points of Rhetorick to move Affections, to persuade Dr. Ridley to recant and forsake his Religion.

To whom Dr. Ridley answered in few Words, That he said most truly with the Prophet, Wo be to him that is wise in his own Conceit; but that he acknowledgeth no such Singularity in him, nor knew any Cause why he should attribute so much to himself. And whereas he said Dr. Cranmer leaned to him, that was most untrue, in that he was but a young Scholar in Comparison of Dr. Cranmer; for when he was but a young Scholar, Mr. Cranmer was then a Doctor; so that he confessed Mr. Cranmer might have been his Schoolmaster for many Years. It seemed that he would have spoke more, but the Bishop of Gloucester interrupted him saying:

Bishop Ridley's brief Answer to the Bishop of Gloucester's Tale.

Why, Mr. Ridley, it is your own Confession, for Mr. Latimer at the Time of his Disputation, confessed his Learning to lie in Mr. Cranmer's Books, and Mr. Cranmer also said that it was your Doing.

The Bishop of Lincoln likewise with many Words, and gently holding his Cap in his Hand, desired him to turn. But Dr. Ridley made an absolute Answer, That he was fully persuaded the Religion which he defended to be grounded upon God's Word, and therefore without great Offence towards God, great Peril and Damage of his Soul, he could not forsake his Master and Lord God; but desired the Bishop to perform his Grant, in that his Lordship said the Day before, that he should have License to shew his Cause, why he could not with a safe Conscience admit the Authority of the Pope. But the Biſhop of Lincoln ſaid, that whereas then he had demanded Licence to ſpeak three Words, he was contented then that he ſhould ſpeak forty, and that Grant he would perform.

Then ſtepped forth Dr. Weſton, who ſate by, and ſaid, Why my Lord, he hath ſpoken four Hundred already.

Dr. Ridley confeſſed he had, but they were not of his preſcribed Number, neither of that Matter. The Biſhop of Lincoln bade him take his Licence; but he ſhould ſpeak but forty, and he would tell them upon his Fingers, and preſently Dr. Ridley began to ſpeak: But before he had ended half a Sentence, the Doctors ſitting by, cried out, and ſaid, that his Number was out; and with that he was put to Silence.

Mark the Cruelty of the Papiſts.

After this the Biſhop of Lincoln, who ſat in the midſt, began to ſpeak as followeth:

Now I perceive, Mr. Ridley, you will not permit nor ſuffer us to ſtay in that Point of our Commiſſion which we moſt deſired: For indeed for my Part, I take God to witneſs, I am ſorry for you. Whereupon Dr. Ridley anſwered:

I believe it well, my Lord, foraſmuch as one Day it will be burdenſome to your Soul.

Lincoln. Nay, not ſo, Mr. Ridley, but becauſe I am ſorry to ſee ſuch Stubbornneſs in you, that by no Means you may be perſwaded to acknowledge your Errors, and receive the Truth: But ſeeing it is ſo, becauſe you will not ſuffer us to perſiſt in the firſt, we muſt of Neceſſity proceed to the other Part of our Commiſſion. Therefore I pray you hearken to what I ſhall ſay, and forthwith he read the Sentence of Condemnation, which was written in a long Proceſs: The Tenor of which, becauſe it is already ſufficiently expreſſed before, we thought meet in this Place to omit, foraſmuch as they are rather Words of Courſe, than Things deviſed upon Deliberation. Howbeit indeed the Effect was, that foraſmuch as the ſaid Nicholas Ridley did affirm, maintain, and ſtubbornly defend certain Opinions, Aſſertions and Hereſies, contrary to the Word of God, and the received Faith of the Church, as in denying the true and natural Body of Chriſt, and his natural Blood, to be in the Sacrament of the Altar: Secondly, in affirming the Subſtance of Bread and Wine to remain after the Words of the Conſecration: Thirdly, in denying the Maſs to be a lively Sacrifice of the Church for the quick and the dead, and by no Means would be brought from theſe his Hereſies; they therefore, the ſaid John of Lincoln, James of Glouceſter, John of Briſtol, did judge and condemn the ſaid Nicholas Ridley as an Heretick, and ſo adjudged him preſently, both by Word and alſo in Deed to be degraded from the Degree of a Biſhop, from Prieſthood and all eccleſiaſtical Order; declaring moreover the ſaid Nicholas Ridley to be no Member of the Church, and therefore committed him to the ſecular Powers, of them to receive due Puniſhment according to the Tenor of the temporal Laws; and further excommunicating him by the great Excommunication.

THIS Sentence being publiſhed by the Biſhop of Lincoln, Dr. Ridley was committed as a Priſoner to the Mayor, and immediately Mr. Latimer was ſent for: But in the mean time the Carpet or Cloth which lay upon the Table whereat Dr. Ridley ſtood was removed, becauſe (as Men reported) Mr. Latimer had never the Degree of a Doctor, as Dr. Ridley had. But as ſoon as Mr. Latimer appeared, as he did the Day before, perceiving no Cloth upon the Table, he laid his Hat, which was an old Felt, under his Elbows, and immediately ſpake to the Commiſſioners, ſaying: Anno 1555.

Latimer. My Lords, I beſeech your Lordſhips to ſet a better Order here at your Entrance; for I am an old Man, and have a very evil Back, ſo that the Preſs of the Multitude doth me much Harm.

Lincoln. I am ſorry, Mr. Latimer, for your Hurt. At your Departure we will ſee to better Order.

With that Mr. Latimer thanked his Lordſhip, making a very low Courteſy. After this the Biſhop of Lincoln began on this Manner:

Mr. Latimer, although yeſterday after we had taken your Anſwers to thoſe Articles which we propoſed, we might have juſtly proceeded to Judgment againſt you, eſpecially in that you required the ſame; yet we having a good Hope of your returning, deſiring not your Deſtruction, but rather that you would recant, revoke your Errors, and turn to the catholick Church, deferred farther Proceſs till this Day; and now according to the Appointment, we have called you here before us, to hear whether you are content to revoke your heretical Aſſertions, and ſubmit yourſelf to the Determination of the Church, as we moſt heartily deſire, and I for my Part, as I did yeſterday, moſt earneſtly do exhort you, or to know whether you perſevere ſtill the Man that you were, for which we would be ſorry.

It ſeemed that the Biſhop would have farther proceeded, if Mr. Latimer had not interrupted him by ſaying:

Mr. Latimer ſhort with the Commiſſioners.

Your Lordſhip doth often repeat the catholick Church, as though I ſhould deny the ſame. No, my Lord, I confeſs there is a catholick Church, to the Determination of which I will ſtand, but not the Church which you call catholick, which ought rather to be termed diabolick. And whereas you join together the Romiſh and catholick Church, ſtay there, I pray you. For it is one thing to ſay Romiſh Church, and another thing to ſay Catholick Church: I muſt uſe here in this mine Anſwer the Counſel of Cyprian, who when cited before certain Biſhops, that gave him Leave to take Deliberation and Counſel, to try and examine his Opinion, he anſwereth them thus: In ſticking and perſevering in the Truth, there muſt no Counſel or Deliberation be taken. And again, being demanded of them ſitting in Judgment, which was moſt like to be of the Church of Chriſt, whether he who was perſecuted, or they who did perſecute? Chriſt, ſaid he, hath foreſhewed, that he that doth follow him, muſt take up his Croſs. Chriſt gave Knowledge that his Diſciples ſhould have Perſecution and Trouble. How think you then my Lords, is it like that the See of Rome, which hath been a continual Perſecutor, is rather the Church, or that ſmall Flock which hath continually been perſecuted by it, even to Death? Alſo the Flock of Chriſt hath been but few in Compariſon to the Reſidue, and ever in Subjection: Which he proved, beginning in Noah's Time even to the Apoſtles.

Lincoln.

Anno 1555.

Lincoln. Your Cauſe and Cyprian's is not one, but clean contrary: For he ſuffered Perſecution for the Sake of Chriſt and his Goſpel; but you are in Trouble for your Errors and falſe Aſſertions, contrary to the Word of God, and the received Truth of the Church.

Mr. Latimer interrupted him, ſaying, Yes verily, my Cauſe is as good as St. Cyprian's: For his was for the Word of God, and ſo is mine.

Lincoln. Alſo at the Beginning and Foundation of the Church, it could not be but that the Apoſtles ſhould ſuffer great Perſecution. Further, before Chriſt's coming continually there were very few which truly ſerved God: But after his coming began the Time of Grace, then began the Church to increaſe, and was continually augmented, until it came unto this Perfection, and now hath juſtly that Juriſdiction, which the unchriſtian Princes before by Tyranny did reſiſt: There is a diverſe Conſideration of the State of the Church now in the Time of Grace, and before Chriſt's coming. But Mr. Latimer, altho' we had Inſtructions given us determinately to take your Anſwer to ſuch Articles as we ſhould propoſe, without any Reaſoning or Diſputations, yet we hoping by Talk ſomewhat to prevail with you, appointed you to appear before us Yeſterday in the Divinity-ſchool, a Place for Diſputations. And whereas then notwithſtanding you had Licenſe to ſpeak your Mind, and where anſwered to every Matter, yet you could not be brought from your Errors; we thinking that from that Time ye would with good Conſideration ponder your State, gave you Reſpite from that Time Yeſterday, when we diſmiſſed you, until this Time, and now have called you again here in this Place, by your Anſwers to learn, whether you are the ſame Man you were then or no? Therefore we will propoſe unto you the ſame Articles which we did then, and require of you a determinate Anſwer, without further reaſoning, and he immediately recited the firſt Article.

Latimer. Always my Proteſtation ſaved, that by theſe mine Anſwers it ſhould not be thought that I did condeſcend and agree to your Lordſhip's Authority, in that you are legaced by Authority of the Pope, ſo that thereby I might ſeem to conſent to his Juriſdiction: To the firſt Article I anſwer now as I did Yeſterday, that in the Sacrament the worthy Receiver receiveth the very Body of Chriſt, and drinketh his Blood by the Spirit and Grace. But after a corporal Being, which the Romiſh Church preſcribeth, Chriſt's Body and Blood is not in the Sacrament under the Forms of Bread and Wine.

The Notaries took his Anſwer affirmatively. For the ſecond Article he referred himſelf to his Anſwers made before.

After this the Biſhop of Lincoln recited the third Article, and required a determinate Anſwer.

Latimer. Chriſt made one Oblation and Sacrifice for the Sins of the whole World, and that a perfect Sacrifice; neither needeth there to be any other, neither can there be any other propitiatory Sacrifice.

The Notaries took his Anſwer affirmatively.

In like Manner did he anſwer to the other Articles, not varying from his Anſwers he made the Day before.

After his Anſwers were penned by the Notaries, and the Biſhop of Lincoln had exhorted him in like Sort to recant as he did Dr. Ridley, and revoke his Errors, and falſe Aſſertions, and Mr. Latimer had anſwered, that he neither would nor could deny his Maſter Chriſt, and his Verity, the Biſhop of Lincoln deſired Mr. Latimer to hearken to him: And then Mr. Latimer hearkening for ſome new Matter and other Talk, the Biſhop of Lincoln read his Condemnation, after which the ſaid three Biſhops brake up their Seſſions, and diſmiſſed the Audience.

Mr. Latimer will not deny his Maſter Chriſt.

Mr. Latimer's Condemnation.

But Mr. Latimer required the Biſhop to perform his Promiſe, in ſaying the Day before that he ſhould have Licenſe briefly to declare the Cauſe why he refuſed the Pope's Authority.

But the Biſhop of Lincoln ſaid, that now he could not hear him, neither ought to talk with him.

Then Mr. Latimer asked him, whether it were not lawful for him to appeal from this his Judgment. And the Biſhop asked him again, to whom he would appeal. To the next general Council, ſaid Mr. Latimer, which ſhall be truly called in God's Name. With that Appellation the Biſhop was content: But he ſaid it would be a long † Seaſon before ſuch a Convocation as he meant would be called.

† Long indeed before ſuch a Council will be called by the Papiſts.

Then the Biſhop committed Mr. Latimer to the Mayor, ſaying, Now he is your Priſoner, Mr. Mayor. Becauſe the Preſs of the People was not diminiſhed, each Man looking for farther Proceſs, the Biſhop of Lincoln commanded Avoidance, and deſired Mr. Latimer to tarry till the Preſs was diminiſhed, leſt he ſhould take Hurt at his going out, as he did at his Entrance. And ſo Dr. Ridley and Mr. Latimer continued in durance till the 16th Day of the ſaid Month of October.

A Communication between Dr. Brooks Biſhop of Glouceſter, and Dr. Ridley, in the Houſe of Mr. Iriſh, Mayor of Oxford, October 15. 1555. at which Time he was degraded.

ON the 15th Day in the Morning, Dr. Brooks Biſhop of Glouceſter, and the Vice-chancellor of Oxford, Dr. Marſhal, with divers others of the Chief, and Heads of the ſame Univerſity, and many others accompanying them, came to the Houſe of Mr. Iriſh then Mayor of Oxford, where Dr. Ridley late Biſhop of London was cloſe Priſoner. And when the Biſhop of Glouceſter came into the Chamber where the ſaid Dr. Ridley did lie, he told him for what Purpoſe their coming was unto him, ſaying, That yet once again the Queen's Majeſty did offer unto him by them, her gracious Mercy, if that he would receive the ſame, and come Home again to the Faith which he was baptized in, and revoke his erroneous Doctrine, that he of late had taught Abroad to the Deſtruction of many. And further ſaid, That if he would not recant and become one of the catholick Church with them, then they muſt needs (againſt their Wills) proceed according to the Law, which they would be very loth to do, if they might otherwiſe. But, ſaith he, we have been oftentimes with you, and have requeſted that you would recant this your fantaſtical and deviliſh Opinion, which hitherto you have not, altho' you might in ſo doing win many, and do much good. Therefore, good Mr. Ridley, conſider with yourſelf the Danger that ſhall enſue both of Body and Soul, if that you ſhall ſo wilfully caſt yourſelf away in refuſing Mercy offered unto you at this Time.

No Mercy to be had without conſenting to Iniquity.

My Lord, ſaid Dr. Ridley, you know my Mind fully herein; and as for the Doctrine which I have taught, my Conſcience aſſureth me that it was ſound, and according to God's Word; (to his Glory be it ſpoken) which Doctrine, the Lord God being my Helper, I will maintain ſo long as my Tongue ſhall wag, and Breath is within my Body, and in Confirmation thereof ſeal the ſame with my Blood.

O worthy Champion of Chriſt's Church.

Brooks. Well, you were beſt, Mr. Ridley, not to do ſo, but to become one of the Church with us. For you know this well enough, that whoſoever is out of the catholick Church cannot be ſaved: Therefore I ſay once again, that while you have Time and Mercy offered you, receive it, and confeſs with us the Pope's * Holineſs to be the chief Head of the ſame Church.

* With that their Caps went off, but Dr. Ridley held on his Cap.

Ridley. I marvel that you will trouble me with any ſuch vain and fooliſh Talk. You know my Mind concerning the uſurped Authority of that Romiſh Antichriſt. As I confeſſed openly in the Schools, ſo do I now, that both by my Behaviour and Talk I do no Obedience at all unto the Biſhop of Rome, nor to his uſurped Authority, and that for divers good and godly Conſiderations. And here Dr. Ridley would have reaſoned with the ſaid Brooks Biſhop of Glouceſter of the Biſhop of Rome's Authority, but could not be ſuffered, and yet he ſpake ſo earneſtly againſt the Pope therein, that the Biſhop told him, if he would not hold his Peace, he ſhould be compelled againſt his Will. And ſeeing, ſaith he, that you will not receive the Queen's Mercy now offered unto you, but ſtubbornly refuſe the ſame, we muſt againſt our Wills, proceed according to our Commiſſion to degrading, taking from you the Dignity of Prieſthood. For we take you for no Biſhop, and therefore we will the ſooner have done with you: So committing you to the Secular Power, you know what doth follow.

Ridley. Do with me as it ſhall pleaſe God to ſuffer you, I am well content to abide the ſame with all my Heart.

Brooks. Put off your Cap, and put upon you this Surplice.

Ridley. Not I truly.

Brooks. But you muſt.

Ridley. I will not.

Brooks. You muſt, therefore make no more ado but put this Surplice upon you.

Ridley. Truly if it come upon me, it ſhall be againſt my Will.

Brooks. Will you not put it upon you?

Ridley. No, that I will not.

Brooks. It ſhall be put upon you by one or other.

Ridley. Do therein as it ſhall pleaſe you, I am well content with that, and more than that; the Servant is not above his Maſter. If they dealt ſo cruelly with our Saviour Chriſt, as the Scripture maketh Mention, and he ſuffered the ſame patiently, how much more doth it become us his Servants? and in ſaying theſe Words they put upon the ſaid Ridley a Surplice, with all the Trinkets appertaining to the Maſs. And as they were putting on the ſame, Dr. Ridley did vehemently inveigh againſt the Romiſh Biſhop, and all that fooliſh Apparel, calling him Antichriſt, and the Apparel fooliſh and abominable, yea too fooliſh for a Vice in a Play; inſomuch that Brooks was exceeding angry with him, and bade him hold his Peace, for he did but rail. Dr. Ridley anſwered him again, and ſaid, So long as his Tongue and Breath would ſuffer him, he would ſpeak againſt their abominable Doings, whatſoever happened unto him for ſo doing. Anno 1555.

Brooks. Well, you had beſt hold your Peace, leſt your Mouth be ſtopped. At which Words one Edrige, the Reader then of the Greek Lecture, ſtanding by, ſaid to Dr. Brooks; Sir, the Law is, that he ſhould be gagged, therefore let him be gagged. At which Words Dr. Ridley looking earneſtly upon him that ſo ſaid, ſhook his Head at him, and made no Anſwer; but ſaid with a Sigh, Oh well, well, well.

So they proceeded in their Doings, yet nevertheleſs Dr. Ridley was ever ſpeaking Things not pleaſant to their Ears, although one or other bade him hold his Peace, leſt he ſhould be cauſed againſt his Will.

But when they came to that Place were Dr. Ridley ſhould hold the Chalice and the Wafer Cake (called the Singing-bread) they bade him hold the ſame in his Hands: Said Dr. Ridley, They ſhall not come in my Hands; for if they do, they ſhall fall to the Ground for all me. Then there was one appointed to hold them in his Hand, while Biſhop Brooks read a certain Thing in Latin, touching the Degradation of ſpiritual Perſons, according to the Pope's Law.

Then they put a Book in his Hand, and read another Thing in Latin, the Effect whereof was, We do take from thee the Office of preaching the Goſpel, &c. At which Words Dr. Ridley gave a great Sigh, looking up towards Heaven, ſaying, O Lord God forgive them this their Wickedneſs.

Having put on him the Maſs-gear, they began to take it away (beginning with the uppermoſt Garment) again reading a Thing in Latin, according to the Order contained in the Pope's Law. Now when all was taken from him, ſaving only the Surplice left on his Back, as they were reading and taking it away, Dr. Ridley ſaid unto them, Lord God, what Power be you of, that you can take from a Man that which he never had? I was never Singer in all my Life, and yet you will take from me that which I never had.

So when this their Degradation was ended, Dr. Ridley ſaid unto Dr. Brooks, Have you done? If you have done, then give me leave to talk with you a little concerning theſe Matters. Brooks anſwered and ſaid, Mr. Ridley we may not talk with you, you be out of the Church, and our Law is, that we may not talk with any that be out of the Church. Then Dr. Ridley ſaid; Seeing that you will not ſuffer me to talk, neither will vouchſafe to hear me, what Remedy but Patience? I refer my Cauſe to my heavenly Father, who will reform Things that be amiſs, when it ſhall pleaſe him.

At which Words they would have been gone, but Mr. Ridley ſaid, My Lord, I would wiſh that your Lordſhip would vouchſafe to read over and peruſe a little Book of Bertram's writing, concerning the Sacrament. I promiſe you, you ſhall find much good Learning therein, if you will read the ſame with an indifferent Judgment. To which Dr. Brooks made no Anſwer, but was going away. Then ſaid Dr. Ridley, Oh, I perceive you cannot away with this Manner of Talk. Well, as it is to no Purpoſe, I will ſay no more; I will ſpeak of worldly Affairs. I pray you therefore, my Lord, hear me, and be a Means to the Queen's Majeſty, in Behalf of a great many poor Men, and eſpecially my poor Siſter and her Husband who ſtandeth there. They had a poor Living granted unto them by me, when I was in the See of London, which is taken away from them, by him that occupieth the ſame Room, without all Law or Conſcience.

Here I have a Supplication to the Queen's Majeſty in their Behalf. You ſhall hear the ſame read, ſo ſhall you perceive the Matter the better. Then he read the ſame, and when he came to the Place in the Supplication that touched his Siſter by Name, he wept, ſo that for a little Time he could not ſpeak for weeping. But recovering himſelf, he ſaid, This is Nature that moveth me, but I have now done; and with that read out the reſt, and delivered the ſame unto his Brother, commanding him to put it up to the Queen's Majeſty, and to ſue not only for himſelf, but alſo for ſuch as had any Leaſes or Grants by him, and were put from the ſame by Dr. Bonner then Biſhop of London. Whereunto Brooks ſaid, Indeed, Mr. Ridley, your Requeſt in this Supplication is very lawful and honeſt; therefore I muſt needs in Conſcience ſpeak to the Queen's Majeſty for them.

Ridley. I pray you for God's Sake do ſo.

Brooks. I think your Requeſt will be granted, except one thing hinder it, and that is (I fear) becauſe you do not allow the Queen's Proceedings, but obſtinately withſtand the ſame, that it will hardly be granted.

Ridley. What Remedy? I can do no more but ſpeak and write. I truſt I have diſcharged my Conſcience therein, and God's Will be done.

Brooks. I will do what lieth in me.

A Copy of the Supplication written to the Queen.

Dr. Ridley to the Queen's Majeſty,

MAY it pleaſe your Majeſty for Chriſt our Saviour's Sake in a Matter of Conſcience (and not for myſelf, but for other poor Men) to vouchſafe to hear and underſtand this humble Supplication. It is ſo (honourable Princeſs) that in the Time while I was in the Miniſtry of the See of London, divers poor Men, Tenants thereof, have taken new Leaſes of their Tenantries and Holdings; and ſome have renewed and changed their old, and therefore have paid Fines and Sums of Money, both to me and to the Chapter of Paul's, for the Confirmation of the ſame.

This Biſhop was Dr. Bonner.

Now I ſay, that the Biſhop who at preſent occupieth the ſame Room, will not allow the aforeſaid Leaſes, which muſt redound to many a poor Man's utter Ruin and Decay. Wherefore this is mine humble Supplication unto your honourable Grace, that it may pleaſe the ſame for Chriſt's Sake to be unto the aforeſaid poor Men their gracious Patronneſs and Defender, either that they may enjoy their aforeſaid Leaſes and Years renewed, as I ſuppoſe when their Matter ſhall be heard with Conſcience, both Juſtice, Conſcience, and Equity ſhall require, for that their Leaſes ſhall be found (I truſt) made without Fraud or Cunning, either of their Part, or of mine, and always alſo the old Rents reſerved to the See without any kind of Damage thereof: Or if this will not be granted, then that it may pleaſe your gracious Highneſs, to command that the poor Men may be reſtored to their former Leaſes and Years, and to have rendred to them again ſuch Sums of Money as they paid to me, and to the Chapter-houſe for their Leaſes and Years, ſo now taken from them. Which Thing concerning the Fines paid to me, may be eaſily done, if it ſhall pleaſe your Majeſty to command ſome Portion of thoſe Goods which I left in my Houſe when I fled in Hope of Pardon for my Treſpaſs towards your Grace, which Goods (as I have heard) be yet reſerved in the ſame Houſe. I ſuppoſe that half the Value of my Plate that I left in mine Offices, and eſpecially in an Iron Cheſt in my Bed-Chamber, will go nigh to reſtore all ſuch Fines received, the true Sums and Parcels whereof are not ſet in their Leaſes; and therefore if that Way ſhall pleaſe your Highneſs, they muſt be known by ſuch Ways and Means, as your Majeſty by the Advice of Men of Wiſdom and Conſcience ſhall appoint; but yet for Chriſt's Sake I crave and humbly beſeech your Majeſty of your gracious Pity and Mercy, that the former Way may take Place.

I have alſo a poor Siſter that came to me out of the North, with three fatherleſs Children, for Relief, whom I married after to a Servant of mine own Houſe: She is put out of that which I did provide for them. I beſeech your honourable Grace, that her Caſe may be mercifully conſidered, and that the rather, in Contemplation that I never had of him, which ſuffered Indurance at my Entrance into the See of London, not one Penny of his moveable Goods, for it was almoſt half a Year after his Depoſition, before I entered into that Place: Yea, and alſo if any were left, known to be his, he had Licence to carry it away, or there for his Uſe it did lie ſafe, as his Officers do know. I paid for the Lead which I found there, when I occupied any of it to the Behoof of the Church, or of the Houſe. And moreover, I had not only no Part of his moveable Goods, but alſo (as his old Receiver, and then mine, called Mr. Stanton, can teſtify) I paid for them towards his Servants common Liveries and Wages, after his Depoſition, 53 or 55 Pounds, I cannot tell which.

Notwithſtanding theſe goodly and juſt Requeſts, no Juſtice could be had, until that now of late ſome of theſe ſhameful Injuries have been redreſſed.

In all theſe Matters I beſeech your honourable Majeſty to hear the Advice of Men of Conſcience, and eſpecially the Archbiſhop of York; which for that he was continually in my Houſe a Year and more, before mine Impriſonment, I ſuppoſe he is not altogether ignorant of ſome Part of theſe Things, and alſo his Grace doth know my Siſter, for whoſe Succour, and ſome Relief, now unto your Highneſs I make moſt humble Suit.

October 16, 1555. N. R.

This Degradation being paſt, and all Things finiſhed, Dr. Brooks called the Bayliffs, delivering to them Dr. Ridley, with this Charge, to keep him ſafely from any Man ſpeaking with him, and that he ſhould be brought to the Place of Execution when they were commanded. Then Dr. Ridley in praiſing God, burſt out in theſe Words, and ſaid: God I thank thee, and to thy Praiſe be it ſpoken, there is none of you all able to lay to my Charge any open or notorious Crime; for if you could, it ſhould ſurely be laid in my Lap, I ſee very well. Whereunto Brooks ſaid, he play'd the Part of a proud Phariſee, exalting and praiſing himſelf.

But Dr. Ridley ſaid, No, no, no, as I have ſaid before, to God's Glory be it ſpoken. I confeſs myſelf to be a miſerable wretched Sinner, and have great Need of God's Help and Mercy, and do daily call and cry for the ſame; therefore I pray you have no ſuch Opinion of me. Then they departed, and in going away a certain Warden of a College, of whoſe Name I am not ſure, adviſed Dr. Ridley to repent and forſake that erroneous Opinion. Whereunto Dr. Ridley ſaid; Sir, repent you, for you are out of the Truth: And I pray God (if it be his bleſſed Will) have Mercy upon you, and grant you the Underſtanding of his Word. Then the Warden being in a Paſſion thereat, ſaid; I truſt that I ſhall never be of your erroneous and deviliſh Opinion, either yet to be in that Place whither you ſhall go. He is, ſaith he, the moſt obſtinate and wilful Man that ever I heard talk ſince I was born.

THE Night before he ſuffered, his Beard was waſhed and his Legs, and as he ſate at Supper, the ſame Night at the Houſe of Mr. Iriſh, (who was his Keeper) he bade his Hoſteſs and the reſt at the Table to his Marriage: For, ſaith he, to-morrow I muſt be married, and ſo ſhewed himſelf to be as merry as ever he was at any Time before. And wiſhing his Siſter at his Marriage, he asked his Brother ſitting at the Table, whether ſhe could find in her Heart to be there or no: And he anſwered, Yea, I dare ſay, with all her Heart. At which Word he ſaid, He was glad to hear of her ſo much therein. At this Diſcourſe Mrs. Iriſh wept.

Mrs. Iriſh weepeth for Dr. Ridley.

But Dr. Ridley comforted her, and ſaid, O Mrs. Iriſh, you love me not now, I ſee well enough; for in that you weep, it doth appear you will not be at my Marriage, neither are content therewith. Indeed you be not ſo much my Friend, as I thought you had been. But quiet yourſelf, though my Breakfaſt ſhall be ſomewhat ſharp and painful, yet I am ſure my Supper ſhall be more pleaſant and ſweet.

When they aroſe from the Table, his Brother offered to watch all Night with him. But he ſaid, No, no, that you ſhall not. For I intend (God willing) to go to Bed, and to ſleep as quietly to Night, as ever I did in my Life. So his Brother departed, exhorting him to be of good Cheer, and to take his Croſs quietly, for the Reward was great, &c.

The Behaviour of Dr. Ridley and Mr. Latimer at the Time of their Death, October 16, 1555.

UPON the north Side of the Town, in the Ditch over-againſt Baliol-College, the Place of Execution was appointed: And for Fear of any Tumult that might ariſe to hinder the Burning of them, the Lord Williams was commanded by the Queen's Letters, and the Houſholders of the City to be there aſſiſtant, ſufficiently appointed; and when every thing was in a Readineſs, the Priſoners were brought forth by the Mayor and the Bayliffs.

Dr. Ridley had a fair black Gown furred, and faced with Foins, ſuch as he was wont to wear being Biſhop, and a Tippet of Velvet furred likewiſe about his Neck, a velvet Night Cap upon his Head, and a Corner Cap upon the ſame, going in a Pair of Slippers to the Stake, and going between the Mayor and an Alderman, &c. Anno 1555.

After him came Mr. Latimer in a poor Briſtow Frize Frock much worn, with his buttoned Cap, and a Kerchief on his Head, all ready to the Fire, a new long Shroud hanging over his Hoſe down to the Feet: Which at the firſt Sight ſtirred Mens Hearts to pity them, beholding on the one Side the Honour they ſometime had, and on the other the Calamity whereunto they were fallen.

Dr. Ridley, as he paſſed toward Bocardo, looked up where Dr. Cranmer lay, hoping belike to have ſeen him at the Glaſs-window, and to have ſpoke unto him. But Dr. Cranmer was then buſy with Friar Soto and his Fellows diſputing together, ſo that he could not ſee him through that Occaſion. Then Dr. Ridley looking back, eſpied Mr. Latimer coming after. Unto whom he ſaid, Oh, be ye there? Yea, ſaid Mr. Latimer, Have after as faſt as I can follow. So he following a pretty way off, at length they both came to the Stake, the one after the other, where firſt Dr. Ridley entering the Place, marvellouſly and earneſtly holding up both his Hands, looked towards Heaven: Then ſhortly after ſeeing Mr. Latimer, with a wondrous chearful Look he ran to him, embraced and kiſſed him, and as they that ſtood near reported, comforted him, ſaying, Be of good Heart, Brother, for God will either aſſwage the Fury of the Flame, or elſe ſtrengthen us to abide it. Dr. Ridley and Mr. Latimer going to the Stake.

The Behaviour of Dr. Ridley and Mr. Latimer at the Stake.

With that he went to the Stake, kneeled down by it, and earneſtly prayed, and behind him Mr. Latimer kneeled, as earneſtly calling upon God as he. After they aroſe, the one talked with the other a little while, till they which were appointed to ſee the Execution, removed themſelves out of the Sun. What they ſaid I can learn of no Man.

Then Dr. Smith began his Sermon to them upon this Text of St. Paul, in the 13th Chapter of the Firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians: If I yield my Body to the Fire to be burnt, and have not Charity, I ſhall gain nothing thereby. Wherein he alledged, that the Goodneſs of the Cauſe, and not the Order of Death, maketh the Holineſs of the Perſon; which he confirmed by the Examples of Judas, and of a Woman in Oxford that of late hanged herſelf, for that they and ſuch like as he recited, might then be adjudged righteous, which deſperately ſundered their Lives from their Bodies, as he feared that thoſe Men that ſtood before him would do. But he cried ſtill to the People to beware of them, for they were Hereticks, and died out of the Church. And, on the other Side, he declared their Diverſities in Opinions, as Lutherans, Oecolampadians, Zuinglians, of which Sect they were he ſaid, and that was the worſt: But the old Church of Chriſt, and the catholick Faith believed far otherwiſe. At which Place they lifted up both their Hands and Eyes to Heaven, as it were calling God to witneſs of the Truth. Which Countenance they made in many other Places of his Sermon, where they thought he ſpake amiſs. He ended with a very ſhort Exhortation to them to recant and come home again to the Church, and ſave their Lives and Souls, which elſe were condemned.

Anno 1555. condemned. His Sermon was ſcarce in all a Quarter of an Hour.

Dr. Ridley ſaid to Mr. Latimer, Will you begin to anſwer the Sermon, or ſhall I? Mr. Latimer ſaid, Begin you firſt I pray you. I will, ſaid Dr. Ridley.

Then the wicked Sermon being ended, Dr. Ridley and Mr. Latimer kneeled down on their Knees to my Lord Williams of Tame, the Vice-chancellor of Oxford, and divers other Commiſſioners appointed for that Purpoſe, who ſate upon a Form thereby. Unto whom Dr. Ridley ſaid, I beſeech you my Lord, even for Chriſt's ſake, that I may ſpeak but two or three Words: And whilſt my Lord bent his Head to the Mayor and Vice-chancellor, to know (as it appeared) whether he might have Leave to ſpeak, the Bailiffs and Dr. Marſhal the Vice-chancellor, ran haſtily unto him, and with their Hands ſtopped his Mouth, and ſaid, Mr. Ridley if you will revoke your erroneous Opinions, and recant the ſame, you ſhall not only have Liberty ſo to do, but alſo the Benefit of a Subject, that is, have your Life. Not otherwiſe, ſaid Dr. Ridley? No, quoth Dr. Marſhal: Therefore if you will not do ſo, then there is no Remedy but you muſt ſuffer for your Deſerts. Well, quoth Dr. Ridley, ſo long as the Breath is in my Body, I will never deny my Lord Chriſt, and his known Truth: God's Will be done in me. And with that he roſe up, and ſaid with a loud Voice, Well, then I commit our Cauſe to Almighty God, who will indifferently judge all.

Dr. Ridley not ſuffered to anſwer Dr. Smith's Sermon.

To whoſe Saying, Mr. Latimer added his old Poſy, Well, there is nothing hid but it ſhall be opened: And he ſaid, he could anſwer Smith well enough, if he might be ſuffered. Incontinently they were commanded to make themſelves ready, which they with all Meekneſs obeyed. Dr. Ridley took his Gown and his Tippet, and gave it to his Brother-in-law Mr. Shipſide, who all his Time of Impriſonment, altho' he might not be ſuffered to come to him, lay there at his own Charges to provide him Neceſſaries, which from Time to Time he ſent him by the Serjeant that kept him. Some other of his Apparel that was little worth, he gave away, the others the Bailiffs took.

He gave away divers other ſmall Things to Gentlemen ſtanding by, and divers of them pitifully weeping, as to Sir Henry Lea he gave a new Groat, and to divers of my Lord William's Gentlemen, ſome Napkins, ſome Nutmegs, and Races of Ginger, his Dial, and ſuch other Things as he had about him, to every one that ſtood next him. Some plucked the Points of his Hoſe. Happy was he that might get any Rag of him.

Mr. Latimer gave nothing, but very quietly ſuffered his Keeper to pull off his Hoſe, and his other Array, which to look unto was very ſimple: And being ſtripped into his Shrowd, he ſeemed as comely a Perſon to them that were there preſent, as one could well ſee; and whereas in his Cloaths he appeared a withered and crooked ſilly old Man, he now ſtood bolt upright, as comely a Father as one might behold.

Then Dr. Ridley, ſtanding as yet in his Truſs, ſaid to his Brother, It were beſt for me to go in my Truſs ſtill. No, quoth his Brother, it will put you to more Pain: And the Truſs will do a poor Man good. Whereunto Dr. Ridley ſaid; Be it in the Name of God, and ſo unlaced himſelf. Then being in his Shirt, he ſtood upon the aforeſaid Stone, and held up his Hand and ſaid; Oh heavenly Father, I give unto thee moſt hearty Thanks, for that thou haſt called me to be a Profeſſor of thee, even unto Death; I beſeech thee Lord God take Mercy on this Realm of England, and deliver the ſame from all her Enemies.

Then the Smith took a Chain of Iron, and brought the ſame about both their Middles: And as he was knocking in a Staple, Dr. Ridley took the Chain in his Hand and ſhaked it, for it did gird in his Belly; and looking aſide to the Smith, ſaid Good Fellow knock it in hard, for the Fleſh will have its courſe. Then his Brother brought him a Bag of Gun-powder, and ty'd it about his Neck. Dr. Ridley asked him what it was; his Brother ſaid Gunpowder. Then, ſaid he, I will take it to be ſent of God, therefore I will receive it as ſent from him. And have you any, ſaid he, for my Brother? (meaning Mr. Latimer.) Yea Sir, that I have, quoth his Brother. Then give it unto him, ſaid he, betime, leſt you come too late. So his Brother went and carry'd ſome Gunpowder to Mr. Latiuer.

Gunpowder given to the Martyrs.

In the mean Time Dr. Ridley ſpake unto my Lord Williams, and ſaid, My Lord, I muſt be a Suter unto your Lordſhip in the Behalf of divers poor Men, and eſpecially in the Cauſe of my poor Siſter: I have made a Supplication to the Queen's Majeſty in their Behalfs. I beſeech your Lordſhip for Chriſt's ſake, to be a mean to her Grace for them. My Brother here hath the Supplication, and will reſort to your Lordſhip to certify you hereof. There is nothing in all the World that troubleth my Conſcience (I praiſe my God) this only excepted. Whilſt I was in the See of London, divers poor Men took Leaſes of me, and agreed with me for the ſame. Now I hear ſay, the Biſhop that now occupieth the ſame room, will not allow my Grants to them made, but contrary to all Law and Conſcience, hath taken from them their Livings, and will not ſuffer them to enjoy the ſame. I beſeech you, my Lord, be a Means for them: You ſhall do a good Deed, and God will reward you.

Bp. Ridley's Sute to the Lord of Tame, for Leaſes of poor Men.

Then they brought a lighted Faggot, and laid it at Dr. Ridley's Feet. Thereupon Mr. Latimer ſaid, Be of good Comfort, Mr. Ridley, and play the Man, we ſhall this Day light ſuch a Candle by God's Grace in England, as I truſt ſhall never be put out. When Dr. Ridley ſaw the Fire flaming up towards him, he cry'd with a wonderful loud Voice, Into thy Hands, O Lord, I commend my Spirit; Lord receive my Spirit; and after repeated this often, Lord, Lord, receive my Spirit. Mr. Latimer cry'd as vehemently on the other Side, O Father of Heaven receive my Soul: Who received the Flame as it were embracing of it: After he had ſtroaked his Face with his Hands, and as it were bathed them a little in the Fire, he ſoon died (as it appeareth) with very little or no Pain. And thus much concerning the End of this old and faithful Servant of God, Mr. Latimer, for whoſe laborious Travels, fruitful Life, and conſtant Death, the whole Realm hath Cauſe to give Thanks to Almighty God.

The Church enlightened by the Martyrdom of Saints.

But Dr. Ridley by the ill making of the Fire, the Faggots being green, and built too high about the Furz, ſo that the Fire being kept down by the green Wood, burned fiercely beneath, which put him to ſuch exquiſite Pain, that he desired them for God's sake to let the Fire come unto him; which his Brother-in-law heard, but not well understood, intending to rid him out of his Pain (for which Cause he gave Attendance) as one in such Sorrow, not well advised what he did, heaped Faggots upon him, so that he clean covered him, which made the Fire more vehement beneath, that it burned clean all his neather Parts, before it touched the upper, and that made him leap up and down under the Faggots, and ofen desire them to let the Fire come to him, saying, I cannot burn. Which indeed plainly appeared: For after his Legs were consumed by reason of his struggling through the Pain (whereof he had no Release, but only the Comfort he had from God) he shewed that Side towards us clean, Shirt and all untouched with Flame. Yet in all this Torment he forgot not to call upon God still, having in his Mouth, Lord have Mercy upon me; intermingling his Cry, Let the Fire come unto me, I cannot burn. In which Pains he laboured 'till one of the Standers by with his Bill pulled off the Faggots above, and where he saw the Fire flame up, he wrested himself to that Side. And when the Fire touched the Gunpowder, he was seen to stir no more, but burned on the other Side, falling down at Mr. Latimer's Feet: Which some said, happened by reason that the Chain loosed, others said, that he fell over the Chain by reason of the Poise of his Body, and the Weakness of his neather Limbs.

Dr. Ridley long in burning.

Some said that before he was like to fall from the Stake, he desired them to hold him to it with their Bills. However it was, surely it moved hundreds to Tears, in beholding the horrible Sight. For I think there were none that had not clean banished all Humanity and Mercy, which would not have lamented to behold the Fury of the Fire so to rage upon their Bodies. Signs there were of Sorrow on every Side. Some took it grievously to see their Deaths, whose Lives they held full dear. Some pitied their Persons, that thought their Souls had no need thereof. His Brother moved many Men, seeing his miserable Case, seeing him (I say) compelled to such Infelicity, that he thought then to do him best Service when he hastened his End. Some cried out of the Luck to see his Endeavour, who most dearly loved him, and sought his Release, turn to his greater Vexation, and increase of Pain. But whoso considered their Preferments in Time past, the Places of Honour that they sometime occupied in this Commonwealth, the Favour they were in with their Princes, and the Opinion of Learning they had, could not choose but grieve with Tears, to see so great Dignity, Honour and Estimation, so necessary Members sometime accounted, so many godly Virtues, the Study of so many Years, such excellent Learning, to be put into the Fire, and consumed in one Moment. Well, dead they are, and the Reward of this World, they have already. What Reward remaineth for them in Heaven, the Day of God's Glory, when he cometh with his Saints, shall shortly I trust, declare.

The lamenting Hearts of the People at the Martyrdom of these two Saints.

Anno 1555.

A Letter written by Dr. Ridley, instead of his last Farewel, to all his true and faithful Friends in God, with a sharp Admonition withal to the Papists.

AT the Name of Jesus let every Knee bow, both of Things in Heaven, and Things in Earth, and Things under the Earth, and let every Tongue confess that Jesus Christ is the Lord, unto the Glory of God the Father, Amen.

As a Man intending to take a far Journey, and to depart from his familiar Friends, commonly and naturally hath a Desire to bid his Friends farewel before his Departure; so likewise now, I looking daily when I should be called to depart hence from you (O all ye my dealy beloved Brethren and Sisters in our Saviour Christ that dwell here in this World) having a like Mind towards you all, to bid you all, my dear Brethren and Sisters (I say in Christ) that dwell upon the Earth, after such Manner as I can, farewel.

Farewel my dear Brother George Shipside, whom I have ever found faithful, trusty, and loving in all States and Conditions, and now in the Time of my Cross over all others to me most friendly and stedfast, and that which pleased me best over all other Things, in God's Cause ever hearty.

A Commendation of George Shipside his Brother-in-law.

Farewel my dear Sister Alice his Wife. I am glad to hear of thee, that thou dost take Christ's Cross which is laid now (blessed be God) both on thy Back and mine, in good Part. Thank thou God that hath given thee a godly and loving Husband: See thou honour him and obey him, according to God's Law. Honour thy Mother-in-law his Mother, and love all those that pertain unto him, bieng ready to do them good as it shall lye in thy Power. As for thy Children, I doubt not of thy Husband, but that he who hath given him an Heart to love and fear God, and in God them that pertain unto him, shall also make him friendly and beneficial unto thy Children, even as if they had been begotten of his own Body.

Farewel my dearly beloved Brother John Ridley of the Waltoun, and you my gentle and loving Sister Elizabeth: Whom besides the natural League of Amity, your tender Love which you were said ever to bear towards me above the rest of your Brethren, doth blind me to love. My Mind was to have acknowledged this your loving Affection, and to have acquitted with Deeds, and not with Words alone. Your Daughter Eli abeth I bid Farewel, whom I love for the meek and gentle Spirit that God hath given her, which is a precious Thing in the Sight of God.

Farewel my beloved Sister of Unthank*, with all your Children, Nephews and Nieces, since the departing of my Brother Hugh, my Mind was to have been unto them instead of their Father, but the Lord God must and will be their Father, if they would love and fear him, and live according to his Law.

* The Wife of his Brother Hugh, dwelling at a Place called Unthank.

Farewel my welbeloved and worshipful Cousins, Mr. Nicholas Ridley of Willimounswike, and your Wife, and I thank you for all your Kindness both shewed unto me, and also to all your own Kinsfolk and mine. Good Cousin, as God hath set you in our Stock and Kindred (not for any respect of your Person, but of his abundant Grace and Goodness) to be as it were the Bell-weather to Order and Conduct the Rest, and hath also endued you with his Anno 1555. his manifold Gifts of Grace both heavenly and worldly above others; ſo I pray you, good Couſin, (as my Truſt and Hope is in you) continue and increaſe in the Maintenance of the Truth, Honeſty, Righteouſneſs, and all true Godlineſs, and to the uttermoſt of your Power, to withſtand Falſhood, Untruth, Unrighteouſneſs, and all Ungodlineſs which is forbidden and condemned by the Word and Laws of God.

Farewel my young Couſin Ralph Whitfield. Oh! your Time was very ſhort with me. My Mind was to have done you good, and yet you caught in that little Time a Loſs, but I truſt it ſhall be recompenſed as it ſhall pleaſe Almighty God.

Farewel all my whole Kindred and Countrymen, farewel in Chriſt altogether. The Lord who is the Searcher of Secrets, knoweth that according to my Heart's deſire, my Hope was of late that I ſhould have come among you, and to have brought with me abundance of Chriſt's bleſſed Goſpel, according to the Duty of that Office and Miniſtry, whereunto among you I was choſen, named and appointed by the Mouth of that our late peerleſs Prince, King Edward, and ſo denounced openly in his Court, by his privy Council.

I warn you all my beloved Kinsfolk and Countrymen, that ye not amazed or aſtoniſhed at the Kind of my Departure or Diſſolution; for I aſſure you I think it the greateſt Honour that ever I was called to in all my Life: And therefore I heartily thank my Lord God for it, that it hath pleaſed him to call me of his great Mercy unto this high Honour, to ſuffer Death willingly for his Cauſe and for his Sake; unto which Honour he hath called the Holy Prophets, and dearly beloved Apoſtles, and his bleſſed choſen Martyrs.

Martyrdom God's ſingular and rare Promotion.

Ye know that be my Countrymen dwelling upon the Borders, where (alas) the true Man ſuffereth oftentimes much Wrong at the Thief's Hand, if it chance a Man be ſlain of a Thief (as it often doth there) which went out with his Neighbour to help him to reſerve his Goods again, that the more cruelly he be ſlain, and the more ſtedfaſtly he ſtuck by his Neighbour in the Fight againſt the Faith of the Thief, the more Favour and Friendſhip ſhall all his Poſterity have for the ſlain Man's Sake, of all them that be true, as long as the Memory of this Fact, and his Poſterity doth endure: Even ſo ye that be my Kinsfolk and Countrymen, know ye, I ſay, that both before God, and all them that be godly, and that truly know and follow the Laws of God, ye have, and ſhall have by God's Grace, ever Cauſe to rejoice, and to thank God highly, and to think good of it, and in God rejoyce of me your Fleſh and Blood, whom God of his Goodneſs hath vouchſafed to aſſociate unto the bleſſed Company of his holy Martyrs in Heaven.

Now alſo know ye, all my true Lovers in God, my Kinsfolk and Countrymen, that the Cauſe for which I am put to death, is even after the ſame Sort and Condition, but touching more near God's Cauſe, and in more weighty Matters, but in the general Kind all one: For both is God's Cauſe, both is in the Maintenance of Right, and both for the Common-wealth, and both for the Weal alſo of the chriſtian Brother, although yet there is in theſe two no ſmall Difference, both concerning the Enemies, the Goods ſtoln, and the Manner of the Fight. For know ye all, that like as there when the poor Man is robbed by the Thief of his Goods truly gotten (whereupon he and his Houſhold ſhould live) he is greatly wronged, and the Thief in ſtealing and robbing with violence the poor Man's Goods, doth offend God, doth tranſgreſs his Law, and is injurious both to the poor Man, and to the Common-wealth: So I ſay, know ye that even here in the Cauſe of my Death, it is with the Church of England, I mean the Congregation of the true choſen Children of God in this Realm of England, which I acknowledge not only to be my Neighbours, but rather the Congregation of my ſpiritual Brethren and Siſters in Chriſt, yea, Members of one Body, wherein by God's Grace I am and have been grafted in Chriſt. This Church of England hath of late of the infinite Goodneſs and abundant Grace of Almighty God, great Subſtance, great Riches of heavenly Treaſure, great Plenty of God's true ſincere Word, the true and wholeſome Adminiſtration of Chriſt's Holy Sacraments, the whole Profeſſion of Chriſt's Religion truly and plainly ſet forth in Baptiſm, the plain Declaration and Underſtanding of the ſame, taught in the Holy Catechiſm, to have been learned of all true Chriſtians.

The Church had alſo a true and ſincere Form and Manner of the Lord's Supper, wherein according to Jeſus Chriſt's own Ordinance and holy Inſtitution, Chriſt's Commandments were executed and done. For upon the Bread and Wine ſet upon the Lord's Table, Thanks were given, the Commemoration of the Lord's Death was had; the Bread, in the Remembrance of Chriſt's Body torn upon the Croſs, was broken, and the Cup in the Remembrance of Chriſt's Blood ſhed, was diſtributed, and both communicated unto all that were preſent, and would receive them, and alſo they were exhorted of the Miniſter ſo to do.

All was done openly in the vulgar Tongue, ſo that every Thing might be moſt eaſily heard, and plainly underſtood by all the People, to God's high Glory, and the Edification of the whole Church. This Church had of late the whole divine Services, all common and publick Prayers ordained to be ſaid and heard in the common Congregation, not only framed and faſhioned to the true Vein of Holy Scripture, but alſo ſet forth according to the Commandment of the Lord, and St. Paul's Doctrine, for the Peoples Edification, in their vulgar Tongue.

It had alſo holy and wholeſome Homilies in Commendation of the principal Virtues, which are commended in Scripture: And likewiſe other Homilies againſt the moſt pernicious and capital Vices that uſe (alas) to reign in this Realm of England. This Church had in Matters of Controverſy, Articles ſo penned and framed after the holy Scriptures, and grounded upon the true Underſtanding of God's Word, that in ſhort Time if they had been univerſally received they ſhould have been able to have ſet in Chriſt's true Religion, and to have expelled many falſe Errors and Hereſies, wherewith this Church, alas, was almoſt overgone.

But alas, of late into this ſpiritual Poſſeſſion of the heavenly Treaſure of theſe godly Riches, are entered in Thieves, that have robbed and ſpoiled all this Treaſure away. I may well complain on theſe Things, and cry out upon them with the Prophet, ſaying, O Lord God, the Gentiles, heathen Nations, are come into thy Heritage: They have defiled thy Holy Temple, and made Jeruſalem an Heap of Stones, that is, they have broken and beaten down to the Ground thy Holy City. This heatheniſh Generation, theſe Thieves be of Samaria, theſe Sabæi and Chaldæi, theſe Robbers have ruſhed out of their Dens, and have robbed the Church of England of all the aforeſaid holy Treaſure of God; they have carried it away and overthrown it, and inſtead of God's Holy Word, the true and right Adminiſtration of Chriſt's Holy Sacraments, as of Baptiſm and others, they mixt their Miniſtry with Man's fooliſh Fantaſies, and many wicked and ungodly Traditions withal.

The Lord's Supper turned to the Maſs.

Inſtead of the Lord's Holy Table, they give the People with much ſolemn diſguiſing a Thing which they call their Maſs, but in Deed and in Truth,

Truth, it is a very maſking and mockery of the true Supper of the Lord; or rather I may call it a crafty juggling, whereby theſe falſe Thieves and Jugglers have bewitched the Minds of the ſimple People, that they have brought them from the true Worſhip of God unto pernicious Idolatry, and make them to believe that to be Chriſt our Lord and Saviour, which is neither God nor Man, nor hath any Life in it ſelf, but in Subſtances is the Creature of Bread and Wine, and in Uſe of the Lord's Table is the Sacrament of Chriſt's Body and Blood: And for this Holy Uſe, for which the Lord hath ordained them in his Table, to repreſent unto us his Bleſſed Body torn upon the Croſs for us, and his Blood there ſhed, it pleaſed him to call them his Body and Blood: Which underſtanding Chriſt declareth to be his true Meaning, when he ſaith, Do this in remembrance of me. And again, St. Paul likewiſe doth ſet out the ſame more plainly, ſpeaking of the ſame Sacrament, after the Words of Conſecration, ſaying, As often as ye ſhall eat of this Bread and drink of this Cup, ye ſhall ſet forth (he meaneth with the ſame) the Lord's Death until his coming again. And here again theſe Thieves have alſo robbed the People of the Lord's Cup, contrary to the plain Words of Chriſt written in his Goſpel.

Luke 22. 1 Cor. 11.

Now for the Common publick Prayers which were in the vulgar Tongue, theſe Thieves have brought in again a ſtrange Tongue, whereof the People underſtand not one Word. Wherein what do they elſe, but rob the People of their divine Service, wherein they ought to pray together with the Miniſter? And to pray in a ſtrange Tongue, what is it but (as St. Paul calleth it) Barbarouſneſs, Childiſhneſs, unprofitable Folly, yea, and plain Madneſs.

For the godly Articles of Unity in Religion, and for the wholeſome Homilies, what do theſe Thieves place in the ſtead of them, but the Pope's Laws and Decrees, lying Legends, feigned Fables, and Miracles to delude and abuſe the Simplicity of the rude People? Thus this Robbery and Theft is not only committed, nay Sacrilege, and wicked Spoil of heavenly Things, but alſo in the ſtead of the ſame, is brought in and placed the abominable Deſolation of the Tyrant Antiochus, of proud Senacherib, of the ſhameleſs faced King, and of the Babylonical Beaſt. Unto this Robbery, this Theft and Sacrilege, for that I cannot conſent, nor (God willing) ever ſhall ſo long as the Breath is in my Body, becauſe it is Blaſphemy againſt God, high Treaſon againſt Chriſt our heavenly King, Lord, Maſter, and not our only Saviour and Redeemer, it is plainly contrary to God's Word, and to Chriſt's Goſpel, it is the Subverſion of all true Godlineſs, and againſt the Salvation of mine own Soul, and of all my Brethren and Siſters, whom Chriſt my Saviour hath ſo dearly bought, with no leſs Price than with the Effuſion and ſhedding forth of his moſt precious Blood: Therefore all ye my true Lovers in God, Kinsfolk and Countrymen, for this Cauſe, I ſay, know ye that I am put to Death, which by God's Grace I ſhall willingly take, with hearty Thanks to God therefore, in certain Hope without any doubting, to receive at God's Hand again, of his free Mercy and Grace, everlaſting Life.

And thus much, dear Lovers and Friends in God, my Countrymen and Kinsfolk, I have ſpoke for your Comfort, leſt at my Death ye might be abaſhed, or think any Evil: whereas ye have rather cauſe to rejoyce (if ye love me indeed) that it hath pleaſed God to call me to a greater Honour and Dignity, than ever I did enjoy before, either in Rocheſter, or in the See of London, or ever ſhould have had in the See of Durham, whereunto I was laſt laſt of all elected and named: Yea, I count it greater Honour before God indeed to die in his Cauſe (whereof I nothing doubt) than is any earthly or temporal Promotion or Honour that can be given to a Man in this World. And who is he that knoweth the Cauſe to be God's, to be Chriſt's Quarrel, and of his Goſpel, to be the common Weal of all the Elect and choſen Children of God, of all the Inheritors of the Kingdom of Heaven; who is he (I ſay) that knoweth this aſſuredly by God's Word, and the Teſtimony of his own Conſcience (as I through the infinite Goodneſs of God, not of myſelf, but by his Grace acknowledge myſelf to do) who is he, I ſay, that knoweth this, and both loveth and feareth God in Deed and in Truth, loveth and believeth his Maſter Chriſt, and his bleſſed Goſpel; loveth his Brotherhood, the choſen Children of God, and alſo luſteth and longeth for everlaſting Life: Who is he, I ſay again, that would not or cannot find in his Heart in this Cauſe to be content to die? The Lord forbid that any ſuch ſhould be that ſhould forſake this Grace of God. I truſt in my Lord God, the God of Mercies, and Father of all Comfort through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, that he which hath put this Mind, Will, and Affection by his Holy Spirit in my Heart, to ſtand againſt the Face of the Enemy in his Cauſe, and to chuſe rather the Loſs of all my worldly Subſtance, yea, and of my Life too, than to deny his known Truth; that he will comfort me, aid me, and ſtrengthen me evermore even unto the End, and to the yielding up of my Spirit and Soul into his Holy Hands, whereof I moſt heartily beſeech his moſt Holy Sacred Majeſty of his infinite Goodneſs and Mercy, through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, Amen.

Anno 1555.

Now that I have taken Leave of my Countrymen and Kinsfolk, and the Lord doth lend me Life, and giveth me Leiſure, I will bid my other good Friends in God of other Places alſo, farewel. And whom firſt or before other, than the Univerſity of Cambridge, where I have dwelt longer, found more faithful and hearty Friends, received more Benefits (the Benefits of my natural Parents only excepted) than ever I did even in mine own Country wherein I was born.

A farewel to the Univerſity of Cambridge.

Farewel therefore (Cambridge) my loving Mother and tender Nurſe. If I ſhould not acknowledge thy manifold Benefits, yea, if I ſhould not for thy Benefits at leaſt love thee again, truly I were to be accounted too ungrateful and unkind. What Benefits hadſt thou ever, that thou uſeſt to give and beſtow upon thy beſt beloved Children, that thou thoughteſt too good for me? Thou didſt beſtow on me all thy School-degrees, the common Offices, the Chaplainſhip of the Univerſity, the Office of the Proctorſhip, and of a common Reader; and of thy private Advantages and Emoluments in Colleges; what was it that thou madeſt me not Partner of? Firſt to be Scholar, then to be Fellow, and after my Departure from thee, thou calledſt me again to a Maſterſhip of a right worſhipful College. I thank thee, my loving Mother, for all this thy Kindneſs, and I pray God that his Laws, and the ſincere Goſpel of Chriſt may ever be truly taught and faithfully learned in thee.

Farewel Pembroke-Hall, of late mine own College, my Cure and my Charge: What Caſe thou art in now God knoweth, I know not well. Thou waſt ever named ſince I knew thee, which is not thirty Years ago, to be ſtudious, well learned, and a great Promoter of Chriſt's Goſpel, and of God's true Word; ſo I found thee, and bleſſed be God ſo I left thee indeed. Wo is me for thee mine own dear College, if ever thou ſuffer thyſelf by any Means to be brought from that Trade. In thy Orchard (the Walls, Buts, and Trees, if they could ſpeak, would bear me witneſs) I learned without Book almoſt all St. Paul's Epiſtles, yea, and I think all the canonical Epiſtles, ſave only the Apocalypſe. Of which Study, although in Time a great Part did depart from me, yet the ſweet Smell thereof I truſt I ſhall carry with me into Heaven: For the Profit thereof I think I have felt in all my Lifetime ever after, and I think of late (whether they abide now or no, I cannot tell) there were others that did the like. The Lord grant that this Zeal and Love toward that Part of God's Word, which is a Key and true Commentary to all the holy Scripture, may ever abide in that College ſo long as the World ſhall endure.

Dr. Ridley called into Kent by Archbiſhop Cranmer, to the Pariſh of Herne in Kent.

From Cambridge I was called into Kent by the Archbiſhop of Canterbury Thomas Cranmer, that moſt Reverend Father, and of him preferred to be Vicar of Herne in Eaſt-Kent. Wherefore farewel Herne, thou worſhipful and wealthy Pariſh, the firſt Cure whereunto I was called to preach God's Word. Thou haſt heard of my Mouth oftentimes the Word of God preached, not after the popiſh Trade, but after Chriſt's Goſpel: O that the Fruit had anſwered to the Seed. And yet I muſt acknowledge me to be thy Debtor for the Doctrine of the Lord's Supper, which at that Time I acknowledge God had not revealed unto me: But I bleſs God in all that godly Virtue and Zeal of God's Word, which the Lord by preaching of his Word did kindle manifeſtly both in the Heart and in the Life and Works of that godly Woman there, my Lady Phines; the Lord grant that his Word took like Effect there in many others.

His farewel to the metropolick See of Canterbury.

Farewel thou cathedral Church of Canterbury, the metropolick See, whereof once I was a Member. To ſpeak Things pleaſant unto thee I dare not for danger of Conſequence, and Diſpleaſure of my Lord God, to ſay what lieth in my Heart were now too much, and I fear were able to do thee now but little good. Nevertheleſs for the Friendſhip I have found in ſome there, and for Charity ſake, I wiſh thee to be waſhed clean of all Worldlineſs and Ungodlineſs, that thou mayſt be found of God after thy Name Chriſt's-church, in Deed and in Truth.

To the See of Rocheſter.

Farewel Rocheſter, ſometime my cathedral See, in whom (to ſay the Truth) I did find much Gentleneſs and Obedience, and I truſt thou wilt not ſay the contrary, but I did uſe it to God's Glory, and into thine own Profit in God. O that thou hadſt and mighteſt have continued and gone forward in the Trade of God's Law wherein I did leave thee; then thy Charge and Burthen ſhould not have been ſo terrible and dangerous, as I ſuppoſe verily it is like to be (alas) the latter Day.

To Weſtminſter.

To Weſtminſter other Advertiſement in God I have not now to ſay, than I have ſaid before to the cathedral Church of Canterbury, and ſo God give thee of his Grace, that thou mayſt learn in Deed and in Truth to pleaſe him after his own Laws: And thus fare you well.

To the See of London.

O London, London, to whom now may I ſpeak in thee, or whom ſhall I bid farewel? Shall I ſpeak to the Prebendaries of St. Paul's? Alas, all that loved God's Word, and were the true Setters forth thereof, are now (as I hear ſay) ſome burnt and ſlain, ſome exiled and baniſhed, and ſome confined in hard Priſon, and appointed daily to be put to moſt cruel Death for Chriſt's Goſpel ſake. As for the reſt of them, I know they could never brook me well, nor could I ever delight in them.

Anno 1555.

Bp. Ridley unjuſtly depoſed from the See of London.

Shall I ſpeak to the See thereof, wherein of late I was placed almoſt, and not fully the Space of three Years? But what may I ſay to it, being (as I hear ſay I am) depoſed and expulſed by Judgment as an unjuſt Uſurper of that room. O Judgment, Judgment. Can this be juſt Judgment to condemn the chief Miniſter of God's Word, the Paſtor and Biſhop of the Dioceſs, and never bring him into Judgment, that he might have heard what Crimes were laid to his Charge, nor ever ſuffer him to have any Place or Time to anſwer for himſelf? Thinkeſt thou that hereafter when true Juſtice ſhall have Place, this Judgment can ever be allowed either of God or Man? Well, as for the Cauſe or whole Matter of my Depoſition, and the Spoil of my Goods which thou poſſeſſeſt yet, I refer it unto God who is a juſt Judge; and I beſeech God, if it be his Pleaſure, that that which is but my perſonal wrong, be not laid to thy Charge in the latter Day, this only I can pray for.

The See of London worthily rebuked.

O thou now wicked and bloody See, why doſt thou ſet up again many Altars of Idolatry, which by the Word of God were juſtly taken away? Why doſt thou daily delude thy People, maſking in thy Maſſes inſtead of the Lord's Holy Supper, which ought to be common as well (ſaith Chryſoſtom, yea the Lord himſelf) to the People as to the Prieſt? How dareſt thou deny to the People of Chriſt, contrary to his expreſs Commandment in the Goſpel, his Holy Cup? Why bableſt thou to the People the Common-Prayer in a ſtrange Tongue, wherein St. Paul commandeth in the Lord's Name, that no Man ſhould ſpeak before the Congregation, except it ſhould be by and by declared in their common Tongue, that all might be edify'd? Nay, hearken thou whoriſh Bawd of Babylon, thou wicked Limb of Antichriſt, thou bloody Wolf, why ſlayeſt thou down, and makeſt havock of the Prophets of God? Why murdereſt thou ſo cruelly Chriſt's poor ſilly Sheep, which will not hear thy Voice, becauſe thou art a Stranger, and will follow none other but their own Paſtor Chriſt his Voice? Thinkeſt thou to eſcape, or that the Lord will not require the Blood of his Saints at thy Hands? Thy God which is the Work of thy Hands, and, whom thou ſayeſt thou haſt Power to make, that thy deaf and dumb God, I ſay, will not indeed, nor can (although thou art not aſhamed to call him thy Maker) make thee to eſcape the revenging Hand of the High and Almighty God. But be thou aſſured, that the living Lord our Saviour and Redeemer, who ſitteth on the right Hand of his Father in Glory, he ſeeth all thy wicked Ways and Cruelty done to his dear Members, and he will not forget his holy Ones, and his Hands (O thou whoriſh Drab) ſhalt thou never eſcape. Inſtead of my farewel to thee, now I ſay, Fie upon thee, fie upon thee filthy Drab, and all thy falſe Prophets.

Biſhop Ridley's Prophecy upon the epiſcopal See of London.

Yet thou (O London*) I may not leave thee thus. Although thy epiſcopal See, now being joined in League with the Seat of* Satan, thus hath now both handled me and the Saints of God, yet I do not doubt, but in that great City there be many private Mourners, who do daily mourn for that Miſchief, who never did nor ſhall conſent to that Wickedneſs, but do deteſt and abhor it as the Ways of Satan. But theſe privy Mourners here I will paſs by, and bid them farewel with their Fellows hereafter, when Place and Occaſion ſhall more conveniently require. Among the worſhipful of the City, and eſpecially which were in Office of mayoralty, yea, and in other Cities also (whom now to name is not necessary) in the Time of my Ministry, which was from the latter Part of Sir Rowland Hills's Year, unto Sir George Barnes's Year, and a great Part thereof, I do acknowledge that I found no small Humanity and Gentleness as me thought: But (to say the Truth) that I do esteem above all other for true Christian Kindness, which is shewed in God's Cause, and done for his sake. Wherefore, O Dobs, Dobs, Alderman and Knight, thou in thy Year didst win my Heart for evermore, for that honourable Act, that most blessed Work of God, of the Erection and setting up of Christ's holy Hospitals, and truly religious Houses, which by thee and thro' thee were begun. For thou like a Man of God, when the Matter was moved for the Relief of Christ's poor silly Members to be holpen from extreme Misery, Hunger, and Famine, thy Heart, I say, was moved with Pity, and as Christ's high honourable Officer in that Cause, thou calledst together thy Brethren the Aldermen of the City, before whom thou breakest the Matter for the Poor; thou didst plead their Cause, yea, and not only in thine own Person thou didst set forth Christ's Cause, but to further the Matter, thou broughtest me into the Council-chamber of the City before the Aldermen alone, whom thou hadst assembled there together to hear me speak what I could say, as an Advocate by Office and Duty, in the poor Men's Cause. The Lord wrought with thee, and gave thee the Consent of thy Brethren; whereby the Matter was brought to the Common-council, and so to the whole Body of the City; by whom, with an uniform Consent, it was committed to be drawn, ordered, and devised by a certain Number of the most witty Citizens and Politick, endued also with Godliness, and with ready Hearts to set forward such a noble Act, as could be chose in all the whole City: And they like true and faithful Ministers both to their City and their Master Christ, so ordered, devised, and brought forth the Matter, that thousands of silly poor Members of Christ which else for extreme Hunger and Misery should have famished and perished, shall be relieved, holpen, and brought up, and shall have cause to bless the Aldermen of that Time, the Common-council, and the whole Body of the City, but especially thee, O Dobs, and those chosen Men, by whom this honourable Work of God was begun and wrought, and that so long throughout all Ages, as that godly Work shall endure; which I pray Almighty God may be ever unto the World's End, Amen.

And thou, O Sir George Barnes, the Truth is to be confessed to God's Glory, and to the good Example of others, thou wast in thy Year not only a Furtherer and Continuer of that which before thee by thy Predecessor was well begun, but also didst labour so to have perfected the Work, that it should have been an absolute Thing, and perfect Spectacle of true Charity and Godliness unto all Christendom. Thine Endeavour was to have set up an House of Occupations, both that all kind of Poverty, being able to work, should not have lacked, whereupon profitably they might have been occupied to their own Relief, and to the Profit and Commodity of the Common-wealth of the City, and also to have retired thither the poor Babes brought up in the Hospitals, when they had come to a certain Age and Strength, and also all those which in the Hospitals aforesaid had been cured of their Diseases. And to have brought this to pass, thou obtainedst, not without great Diligence and Labour, both of thee and of thy Brethren, and of that godly King Edward, that christian and peerless Prince's Hand, his princely Palace of Bridewel, and what other Things to the Performance of the same, and under what Condition it is not unknown. That this thine Endeavour hath not had like Success, the Fault is not in thee, but in the Condition and State of the Time, which the Lord of his infinite Mercy vouchsafe to amend when it shall be his gracious Will and Pleasure.

Bridewel obtained of King Edward by Sir George Barnes, to set poor People on Work.

Anno 1555.

Farewel now all ye Citizens that be of God, of what State and Condition soever ye be. Undoubtedly in London ye have heard God's Word truly preached. My Heart's Desire and daily Prayer shall be for you, as for whom, for my Time, I know to my Lord God I am accountable, that ye never swerve, neither for Loss of Life nor worldly Goods, from God's Holy Word, and yield unto Antichrist: Whereupon must needs follow the extream Displeasure of God, and the Loss both of your Bodies and Souls into perpetual Damnation for evermore.

To the Citizens of London.

Now that I have gone through the Places where I have dwelt any Space in the Time of my Pilgrimage here upon Earth, remembring that for the Space of King Edward's Reign, which was for the Time of mine Office in the Sees of London and Rochester, I was a Member of the higher House of the Parliament; therefore seeing my God hath given me leisure, and the Remembrance thereof, I will bid my Lords of the temporality farewel. They shall have no just Cause, by God's Grace, to take in ill Part what I intend to say. As for the spiritual Prelacy that now is, I have nothing to say to them, except I should repeat again a great Part of that I have said before now already to the See of London. To you therefore my Lords of the Temporalty will I speak, and this would I have you first to understand, that when I wrote this I looked daily when I should be called to the Change of this Life, and thought that this my Writing should not come to your Knowledge before the Time of the Dissolution of my Body and Soul should be expired; and therefore know ye, that I had before mine Eyes only the Fear of God, and christian Charity toward you, which moved me to write; for of you hereafter I look not in this World, either for Pleasure or Displeasure. If my Talk shall do you never so much Pleasure or Profit, you cannot promote me, nor if I displease you, can ye hurt me or harm me, for I shall be out of your Reach. Now therefore if you fear God, and can be content to hear the Talk of him that seeketh nothing at your Hands, but to serve God, and to do you good; hearken what I say. I say unto you as St. Paul saith to the Galatians: I wonder my Lords what hath bewitch'd you, that ye so suddenly are fallen from Christ to Antichrist, from Christ's Gospel to Man's Traditions, from the Lord that bought you, unto the Bishop of Rome. I warn you of your Peril; be not deceived, except you will be found willingly Consenters unto your own Death. For if you think thus; if we are Laymen, this is a Matter of Religion, we follow as we are taught and led; if our Teachers and Governours teach us and lead us amiss, the Fault is in them, they shall bear the Blame: My Lords, this is true (I grant you) that both the false Teachers and the corrupt Governour, shall be punished for the Death of their Subject, whom they have falsly taught and corruptly led, yea, and his Blood shall be required at their Hands: But yet nevertheless shall the Subject die the Death himself also; that is, he shall also be damned for his own Sin; for if the Blind lead the Blind, Christ saith, not the Leader only, but he saith, both shall fall into the Ditch. Shall the Synagogue and the Senate of the Jews (think ye) which forsook Christ, and consented to his Death, therefore be excused, because Annas and Caiaphas, with the Scribes and Pharisees and their Clergy, did teach them amiss? Yea, und also Pilate the Governour, and the Emperor's Lieu- tenant, by his Tyranny did without Cauſe put him Death: Forſooth no, my Lords, no. For notwithſtanding that corrupt Doctrine, or Pilate's waſhing of his Hands, neither ſhall excuſe that Synagogue, or Pilate; but at the Lord's Hand, for the Effuſion of that innocent Blood, all ſhall drink of the deadly Whip. Ye are witty, and underſtand what I mean, therefore I will paſs over this, and return to tell you how ye are fallen from Chriſt to his Adverſary the Biſhop of Rome.

And leſt, my Lords, ye may peradventure think, thus barely to call the Biſhop of Rome Chriſt's Adverſary, or (to ſpeak in plain Terms) to call him Antichriſt, that it is done in mine Anguiſh, and that I do but rage, and as a deſperate Man do not care what I ſay, or upon whom I rail; therefore that your Lordſhips may perceive my Mind, and thereby underſtand that I ſpeak the Words of Truth and Sobriety, (as St. Paul ſaid unto Feſtus) be it known unto your Lordſhips all, that as concerning the Biſhop of Rome, I neither hate the Perſon nor the Place. For I aſſure your Lordſhips (the living Lord beareth me witneſs, before whom I ſpeak) I do think many a good holy Man, many Martyrs and Saints of God have ſit and taught in that Place Chriſt's Goſpel truly, which therefore juſtly may be called Apoſtolici, that is, true Diſciples of the Apoſtles, and alſo that Church and Congregation of Chriſtians to be a right Apoſtolick Church: Yea, and that certain hundred Years after the ſame was firſt erected and built upon Chriſt, by the true apoſtolical Doctrine taught by the Mouths of the Apoſtles themſelves. If ye will know how long that was, and how many hundred Years, to be curious in pointing the preciſe Number of the Years I will not be too bold, but thus I ſay; So long and ſo many hundred Years as that See did truly preach and teach that Goſpel, that Religion, exerciſed that Power, and ordered every Thing by thoſe Laws and Rules which that See received of the Apoſtles, and (as Tertullian ſaith) the Apoſtles of Chriſt, and Chriſt of God; ſo long, I ſay, that See might well have been called Peter and Paul's Chair and See, or rather Chriſt's Chair, and the Biſhop thereof Apoſtolicus, or true Diſciple and Succeſſor of the Apoſtles, and a Miniſter of Chriſt.

Acts 26.

So long as the See of Rome followed the Rules of the Apoſtles, it might be called Peter's or Paul's Chair.

But ſince the Time that that See hath degenerated from the Trade of Truth and true Religion, which it received of the Apoſtles at the Beginning, and hath preached another Goſpel, hath ſet up another Religion, and hath taken upon it to Order and Rule the Church of Chriſt by other ſtrange Laws, Canons, and Rules, than ever it received of the Apoſtles, or the Apoſtles of Chriſt, which Things it doth at this Day, and hath continued ſo doing (alas) too long a Time; ſince the Time, I ſay, that the State and Condition of that See hath thus been changed, in Truth it ought of Duty and of Right to have the Names changed both of the See and of the Sitter therein.

The See of Rome hath degenerated from the Apoſtles Rules, and hath ſet up another Religion, that is, hath exerciſed another Power.

I know my Lords, and foreſaw when I wrote this, that ſo many of you as ſhould ſee this my writing, not being before endued with the Spirit of Grace and the Light of God's Word, ſo many (I ſay) would at theſe my Words lordlike ſtamp and ſpurn, and ſpit thereat. But ſober yourſelves with Patience, and be ſtill, and know ye that in my writing of this, my Mind was none other, but in God (as the living God doth bear me witneſs) both to do you Profit and Pleaſure. And otherwiſe, as for your Diſpleaſure, by that Time this ſhall come to your Knowledge, I truſt by God's Grace to be in the Hands and Protection of the Almighty, my heavenly Father and the living Lord, which is (as St. John ſaith) the greateſt of all, and then I ſhall not need, I ſuppoſe, to fear what any Lord, no nor what King or Prince can do unto me.

He ſpeaketh to the Lords temporal.

My Lords, if in Times paſt ye have been contented to hear me ſometimes in Matters of Religion before the Prince in the Pulpit, and in the Parliament-houſe, and have not ſeemed to have deſpiſed what I have ſaid (when as elſe if ye had perceived juſt Occaſion, ye might then have ſuſpected me in my Talk, though it had been reaſonable, either deſire of worldly Gain, or fear of Diſpleaſure) how hath then your Lordſhips more Cauſe to hearken to my Word, and to hear me patiently, ſeeing now ye cannot juſtly think of me, being in this Caſe appointed to die, and looking daily when I ſhall be called to come before the eternal Judge, otherwiſe but that I only ſtudy to ſerve my Lord God, and to ſay that Thing which I am perſuaded aſſuredly by God's Word ſhall and doth pleaſe him, and profit all them to whom God ſhall give Grace to hear and believe what I do ſay? And I do ſay even that I have ſaid heretofore both of the See of Rome and of the Biſhop thereof, I mean after this their preſent State at this Day, wherein if ye will not believe the Miniſters of God, and true Preachers of his Word, verily I denounce unto you in the Word of the Lord, except ye do repent betime, it ſhall turn to your Confuſion, and to your Smart on the latter Day. Forget not what I ſay, my Lords, for God's ſake forget not, but remember it upon your Bed. For I tell you moreover, as I know I muſt be accountable for this my Talk, and of my ſpeaking thus, to the eternal Judge (who will judge nothing amiſs) ſo ſhall you be accountable of your Duty in hearing, and you ſhall be charged, if ye will not hearken to God's Word, for not obeying to the Truth. Alas my Lords, how chanceth this, that this Matter is now anew again to be perſwaded unto you? Who would have thought of late, but your Lordſhips had been perſwaded indeed ſufficiently, or that ye could ever have agreed ſo uniformly with one Conſent to the Aboliſhment of the Uſurpation of the Biſhop of Rome? If that Matter were then but a Matter of Policy wherein the Prince muſt be obeyed; How is it now made a Matter wherein (as your Clergy ſaith now, and ſo ſaith the Pope's Law indeed) ſtandeth the Unity of the catholick Church, and a Matter of Neceſſity of our Salvation? Hath the Time, being ſo ſhort ſince the Death of the two laſt Kings, Henry the Eighth and Edward his Son, altered the Nature of the Matter? If it have not, but was of the ſame Nature and Danger before God then as it is now, and be now (as it is ſaid by the Pope's Laws, and the Inſtructions ſet forth in Engliſh to the Curates of the Dioceſs of York) indeed a Matter of Neceſſity to Salvation: How then chanced it that ye were all (O my Lords) ſo light, and ſo little paſſed upon the catholick Faith, and the Unity thereof, without which no Man can be ſaved, as for your Princes Pleaſure, who were but mortal Men, to forſake the Unity of your catholick Faith, that is, to forſake Chriſt and his Goſpel? And furthermore, if it were both then, and now is ſo neceſſary to Salvation, how chanced it alſo that ye, all the whole Body of the Parliament agreeing with you, did not only aboliſh and expel the Biſhop of Rome, but alſo did abjure him in your own Perſons, and did decree in your Acts great Oaths, to be taken both of the ſpirituality and temporality, whoſoever ſhould enter into any weighty and chargeable Office in the Common-wealth? But on the other Side, if the Law and Decree which maketh the Supremacy of the See and Biſhop of Rome over the univerſal Church of Chriſt, be a Thing of Neceſſity required unto Salva- tion by an Antichriſtian Law (as it is indeed) and ſuch Inſtructions as are given to the Dioceſs of York, be indeed a ſetting forth of the Power of the Beaſt of Babylon, by the Craft and Falſhood of his falſe Prophets, then my Lords never think other, but the Day ſhall come when ye ſhall be charged with this your undoing of that, that once ye had well done, and with this your Perjury and Breach of your Oath, which Oath was done in Judgment, Juſtice, and Truth agreeable to God's Law. The Whore of Babylon may well for a Time dally with you, and make you ſo drunken with the Wine of her filthy Stews and Whoredom (as with her Diſpenſations and Promiſes of Pardon for Puniſhment and Crime) that for Drunkenneſs and Blindneſs ye may think your ſelves ſafe. But be ye aſſured, when the living Lord ſhall try the Matter by the Fire, and judge it according to his Word, when all her Abominations ſhall appear what they be, then ye my Lords (I give your Lordſhips warning in Time) repent if ye will be happy, and love your own Souls Health; repent, I ſay, or elſe without all doubt, ye ſhall never eſcape the Hands of the living Lord, for the Guilt of your Perjury, and Breach of your Oath. As ye have banquetted and lain by the Whore in the Fornication of her whoriſh Diſpenſations, Pardons, Idolatry, and ſuch like Abominations; ſo ſhall ye drink with her (except ye repent betime) of the Cup of the Lord's Indignation and everlaſting Wrath, which is prepared for the Beaſt, his falſe Prophets, and all their Partakers. For he that is Partner with them in their Whoredom and Abominations, muſt alſo be Partner with them of their Plagues, and in the latter Day ſhall be thrown with them into the Lake burning with Brimſtone and unquenchable Fire. Thus fare ye well, my Lords all. I pray God give you underſtanding of his bleſſed Will and Pleaſure, and make you to believe and embrace the Truth, Amen.

If the Unity of the Pope's Church ſtandeth upon Neceſſity of Salvation, why did the Lords of this Realm abjure this Unity in King Henry and King Edward's Days? If it be otherwiſe, why then do they perjure themſelves, turning to it again.

Jerem. 6.

The Hiſtory of Stephen Gardiner Biſhop of Wincheſter.

THE next Month after the Burning of Dr. Ridley, and Mr. Latimer, which was the Month of November, Stephen Gardiner Biſhop and Chancellor, a Man hated of God and all good Men, ended his wretched Life. This Viper's Bird crept out of the Town of Bury in Suffolk, was brought up moſt Part of his Youth in Cambridge; his Wit, Capacity, Memory, and other Endowments of Nature were not to be complained of, if he had well uſed, and rightly apply'd the ſame; wherein there was no great want of God's Part in him, if he had not rather himſelf wanted to the Goodneſs of his Gifts. Through this Promptneſs, Activity, and Towardneſs of his, he profited not a little in ſuch Studies as he gave his Head unto, as firſt in the Civil Law, then in Languages, and ſuch other like, eſpecially in thoſe Arts and Faculties which had any Proſpect to Dignity and Preferment to be hoped for. Beſides other Ornaments or Helps of Nature, Memory chiefly ſeemed in him very beneficial, rather than Diligence of Study.

To theſe Gifts and Qualities were joined again his great or greater Vices, which not ſo much followed him, as overtook him, not ſo much burdened him, as made him burthenſome to the whole Realm. He was of a proud Stomach and high-minded, in his own Opinion and Conceit flattering himſelf too much; in Wit, crafty and ſubtil; toward his Superiors, flattering and fair ſpoken; to his Inferiors, fierce; againſt his Equals, ſtout and envious, eſpecially if in Judgment and Sentence he any Thing withſtood him, as appeared between the good Lord Cromwel and him in the Reign of King Henry the Eigth. Who, although he would give no Place to Men, yet notwithſtanding I wiſh he would have given Place to Truth, according as he ſeemed not altogether ignorant of that Truth. What his Knowledge was therein is evident, partly by his Book De vera Obedientia, as alſo by his Sermon before King Edward; alſo by his Anſwers to the Council the ſame Time, and moreover by his own Words it may be gathered in ſundry Places, as more plainly may appear by that which hereafter followeth. Anno 1555.

Upon his Eſtimation and Fame he ſtood too too much, more than was meet for a Man of his Coat and Calling, whoſe Profeſſion was to be crucified unto the World, which Thing made him ſo ſtiff in maintaining that which he once begun to take upon him.

What his Learning was in the Civil and Canon Law I have not to ſay: What it was in other liberal Arts and Sciences, this I ſuppoſe, that neither his Continuance in Study, nor Diligence of reading was ſuch (by reaſon of his too much intermeddling in Prince's Matters) as could truly well merit unto him the Title of a deep learned Man. But what learning or cunning ſoever it was he had, ſo it fared in him, as it doth in Butchers, which uſe to blow up their Fleſh: Even ſo he with Boldneſs and Stoutneſs, and eſpecially with Authority, made thoſe Gifts that he had, to appear much greater than they really were. Whereunto Ule peradventure, and Experience Abroad made no little Helps, rather than either Quickneſs of Wit, or Happineſs of Education.

And as touching Divinity, he was ſo variable, wavering with Time, that no conſtant Cenſure can be given what to make of him. If his Doings and Writings were according to his Conſcience, no Man can rightly ſay whether he was a right Proteſtant or Papiſt. If he wrote otherwiſe than he thought, for fear, or to bear with Time, then was he a double deep Diſſembler before God and Man, to ſay and unſay, to write and unwrite, to ſwear and forſwear ſo as he did. For firſt in the Beginning of Queen Anne Bullen's Time, who was ſo forward or ſo buſy in the Matter of the King's Divorce as Stephen Gardiner, who was firſt ſent to Rome, and then to the Emperor with Edward Fox, as chief Agent in the Behalf of the Lady Anne? By whom alſo he was preferred to the Biſhoprick of Wincheſter, and Edmund Bonner was preferred to the Biſhoprick of London. Again, at the aboliſhing of the Pope, who ſo ready to ſwear, or ſo vehement to write againſt the Pope as he, as not only by his Sermons, but alſo by his Book De Obedientia may appear? In which Book, leſt any ſhould think him drawn thereunto otherwiſe than by his own Conſent, he plainly declareth, how not raſhly nor on a ſudden, but upon a long Deliberation and Advertiſemnt in himſelf about the Matter, heat length uttered his Judgment: And more over, ſo he uttered his Judgment in writing againſt the uſurped Supremacy of the Pope, that coming to Lovain afterward, he was there accounted Anno 1555. accounted for a Perſon excommunicate and a Schiſmatick, inſomuch that he was not permitted in their Church to ſay Maſs; and moreover, in their publick Sermons, they openly cry'd out againſt him. Whereof read hereafter.

And thus long continued he firm and forward, ſo that who but Wincheſter during all the Reign of Queen Anne? After her Deceaſe, that Time by little and little carry'd him away, till at length the Emulation of the Lord Cromwell's Eſtate, and eſpecially (as it ſeemeth) for his ſo much favouring of Bonner (whom Wincheſter at that time in no Caſe could abide) made him an utter Enemy both againſt him, and alſo his Religion: Till again in King Edward's Days, he began a little to rebate from certain Points of Popery, and ſomewhat to ſmell of the Goſpel, as both by his Sermon before King Edward, as alſo by his ſubſcribing to certain Articles, may appear; and this was an half Turn of Stephen Gardiner from Popery again to the Goſpel, and (no doubt) he would have farther turned, had not the unlucky Decay of the Duke of Somerſet clean turned him away from true Divinity to plain Popery; wherein he continued a cruel Perſecutor to his dying Day.

And thus much concerning the Trade and Profeſſion of Stephen Gardiner's Popiſh Divinity. In which his Popiſh Trade, whether he followed more true Judgment, or elſe Time, or rather the Spirit of Ambition and Vain-glory, it is doubtful to ſay, and ſo much the more doubtful, becauſe in his Doings and Writings a Man may ſee him not only contrary to himſelf, but alſo in ſome Points contrary to other Papiſts. And furthermore, where he agreeth with them, he ſeemeth therein not ſo much to follow his own Senſe, as the Mind and Meaning of Pereſeus; out of whoſe Book the greateſt Part of Wincheſter's Divinity ſeemeth to be borrow'd.

Wincheſter never conſtant in himſelf, nor agreeing with other Papiſts.

And therefore as in the true Knowledge of God's holy Word and Scripture he appeareth no Body; ſo in his Pen and Style of Writing no leſs far is he from Commendation, than he is from all Plainneſs and Perſpicuity. In whoſe obſcure and perplex'd kind of Writing, altho' peradventure ſome Senſe may be found with ſome ſearching, yet ſhall no Reader find any Sweetneſs in his Reading.

What moved him to be ſo ſturdy againſt Mr. Cheek, and Sir Thomas Smith, for the Greek Pronunciation, others may think what they pleaſe; I ſpeak but what I think, that ſo he did, for that he ſaw it a Thing rather newly begun, than truly impugned. Such was the Diſpoſition of that Man (as it ſeemeth) that of Purpoſe he ever affected to ſeem to be a Patron of old Cuſtoms, tho' they were never ſo rotten with Age. Amongſt other Matters, this one Thing I cannot but marvel at in my Mind, when I ſee how proudly he braggeth, and vainly vaunteth himſelf (as well in his Letters to the Lord Protector, and others of King Edward's Council, as alſo in his long Matter articulated and exhibited by him unto the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and other the King's Commiſſioners) of the high Favour he had of the noble King of famous Memory, King Henry the Eighth, when indeed nothing was leſs true; neither did the King leſs favour any of his Council, than him, affirming very often, that he greatly ſuſpected the ſaid Biſhop to be a ſecret Maintainer of the Biſhop of Rome's uſurped Authority, and a ſtout Diſturber and Hinderer of his Proceedings in Reformation of Religion. And therefore he did ſo much diſlike him, that he did not only mind (if it had pleaſed God to grant his Highneſs longer Life) to have uſed the Extremity of the Law againſt him, upon very ſore and juſt Matter of old committed by him (and yet not taken away by any Pardon) thereupon often commanding the Lord Paget, then his Secretary, to keep ſafe certain Writings which he had againſt him; but alſo commanded that he ſhould be put clean out of his laſt Will and Teſtament, not ſuffering him either to be one of his Executors, or elſe in any Caſe of his Son's Council, no, altho' he were earneſtly intreated to the contrary by ſundry of the Lords, and others of his Highneſs's Council, ſaying, he was a wilful, troubleſome, and headſtrong Man, and not meet to be about his Son, or to have any thing to do by his Will. Now amongſt other Cauſes that moved the King thus to ſuſpect his Fidelity towards his godly Proceedings in Religion, I find this to be one. It pleaſed his Majeſty after his aboliſhing of the Biſhop of Rome's uſurped Authority (amongſt other Embaſſages to foreign Princes) to ſend the ſaid Biſhop of Wincheſter, and Sir Henry Knevet Knight, as joint Ambaſſadors to the Emperor, being then at a Diet or Council at Ratisbon, appointing alſo Sir John Barkley, Sir William Blunt, Knights, and Andrew Bainton Eſquire (his Highneſs's Servants) to give their Attendance upon the ſaid Sir Henry Knevet, for the more honouring of his Embaſſage. It happened alſo at that Time, that Sir Henry Knevet entertained into his Service (as Steward of his Houſhold) one William Wolfe, who had in the ſame Capacity before ſerved Sir Thomas Wyat Knight, the King's former Ambaſſador there, and by that Means had good Acquaintance in thoſe Parts, as well in the Emperor's Court, as elſewhere. This Wolfe, towards the latter End of the Diet or Council, happened to walk, as often he did, towards the Emperor's Palace to hear ſome News, where he met with one Ludovico, an Italian Merchant, one of his old Acquaintance. Who, ſuppoſing the ſaid Wolfe to have attended upon the Biſhop of Wincheſter, (not knowing of any other joint Ambaſſador) required Wolfe for old Acquaintance to do him a Pleaſure; whereunto he willingly granted. Whereupon Ludovico ſhewed him, that the Pope's Legate, or Ambaſſador to the Emperor (which was Cardinal Contarene) departing the Day before towards Rome, and having no Leiſure to end his Buſineſs himſelf, had put the ſaid Ludovico in Truſt for the accompliſhing of them: And amongſt all other Things he had eſpecially charged him that he ſhould repair to the Ambaſſador of England, and require of him an Anſwer of the Pope's Letters, which the Legate did of late ſend unto him, addreſſed to him from Rome, and that upon the Receipt thereof he ſhould ſend them after with all Speed; and therefore if his Lord Ambaſſador would write by that Courier, he pray'd Wolfe to tell him that it was Time to write, for the Courier went away within a Day or two. At this Tale Wolfe being abaſhed, and yet partly gueſſing which Ambaſſador he meant, thought it not meet to tell him whoſe Servant he was, but by other ſoothing Talk perceived that he meant the Biſhop of Wincheſter. And to the end that Ludovico ſhould ſuſpect nothing, he anſwered him, that he being not the Ambaſ-ſador's Secretary, could ſay little therein; howbeit he would not fail to put his Secretary in Remembrance of it: Which Thing Ludovico alſo deſired him to do, for that he had no other Acquaintance with the Ambaſſador, and ſo for that Time they departed. This Matter ſeeming to Wolfe of ſome Importance, he immediately reveal'd it to Sir Henry Knevet his Maſter: Who weighing alſo the Greatneſs of the Caſe, and what Diſadvantage it were upon one Man's ſo bare a Report to attempt ought, in a Place and Time whereby ſuch a Perſon was to be touched, charged Wolfe well to adviſe himſelf, that no Hatred, Diſpleaſure, or other Paſſion, did move him to diſcloſe this, but Truth only. Wolfe reply'd, That he weighed well the Weightineſs of the Cauſe, meet, as to his own Reſpect, to be paſſed over in ſilence, for avoiding of his private Diſpleaſure, if Duty of Allegiance bound him not otherwiſe. But Sir (quoth he) if you think not my hearing thereof, one to one, to be ſufficient, I warrant you to deviſe Means, that ſome others of your Servants ſhall hear the like Words from Ludovico's own Mouth as well as I. Upon which talk Sir Henry Knevet deviſed which of his Servants he might uſe to that Purpoſe, and at laſt reſted upon Mr. Thomas Chalenor his Secretary, becauſe he had the Italian Tongue. Not making him privy to any Matter, but deſired Wolfe to take him Abroad with him, as of his own private Motion, for they were very familiar Friends. Whereupon the next Morning, being Sunday, Wolfe came to Chalenor's Chamber, and pray'd him familiarly to take a Walk with him Abroad to the Piazza, or Market-ſtead, which he readily did, not knowing of any ſpecial Cauſe why. When they came to the Piazza, overagainſt the Emperor's Palace (near whereunto alſo the Pope's Legate had lodged) and had there walked a while together, there came thither the ſaid Ludovico, and eſpying Wolfe, ſaluted him very friendly, and enter'd into Talk about the Exchange, and ſundry other Matters, Chalenor being ſtill with them. At laſt upon Occaſion, they entered into like Talk about the former Letters that the Ambaſſador of England had received from Rome by the Pope's Legate, of which Ludovico had in Charge to receive an Anſwer, affirming, that the Poſt departed the next Day, and therefore pray'd Wolfe to put the Ambaſſador's Secretary in Remembrance of them. Whereunto Wolfe anſwered, That he would willingly do it; but he did not well know which Ambaſſador he meant, for that there were two: One, the Biſhop of Wincheſter, and the other, a Gentleman of the King's Privy-chamber. To whom Ludovico reply'd, That he meant not the Gentleman of the Privy-chamber, but the Biſhop. By which Talk, and much ſuch like (as upon the former Day) Mr. Chalenor being moved (and not knowing yet of his Maſter's and Wolfe's Purpoſe) after the Departure of Ludovico from them, ſaid unto Wolfe, that Ludovico had had but homely Talk with him, not to be paſſed over lightly, and therefore he would tell his Maſter of it. To whom Wolfe anſwered, Do as you will, if you think any Matter therein. And therefore at his return Home, he told Sir Henry Knevet what Speech he had heard at Ludovico's Mouth.

Sir Henry Knevet being thus farther aſcertained of the Matter, opened the whole to Sir John Barkley, Sir William Blunt, and to Mr. Bainton, who all agreed yet to make a farther Trial thereof. And therefore deviſed that Wolfe ſhould procure Ludovico to bring certain Velvet and other Silks, unto Sir Henry Knevet's Lodging, as well for himſelf as for the other Gentlemen, which that Afternoon he did accompliſh, and brought Ludovico unto Sir Henry, where alſo were the other Gentlemen. After they had a while viewed the Silks, and had had ſome Talk about the Price, Wolfe took Occaſion again to ask Ludovico, if Sir Henry were the Ambaſſador of whom he was to demand an Anſwer of the Letters ſent by the Pope's Legate? To whom the Merchant anſwered, No, it was not his Seigniory, but it was a Biſhop, terming him Reverendiſſimo, whereby they eaſily perceived whom he meant. Sir Henry Knevet hereupon ſomewhat diſſembling the Matter, entered into further Talk about it, whereby Ludovico opened as much in Effect to them as he had done before to Wolfe; but yet at laſt perceiving, that as well Sir Henry, as alſo the other Gentlemen, beheld him ſomewhat angrily, he brake off his Talk. Wherewith Sir Henry Knevet, making as tho' he had noted nothing, did lovingly diſmiſs him, praying him, that when he had received the Biſhop's Letters, he would alſo repair to him for a Packet to an Engliſh Gentleman of his Acquaintance at Milan; which he promiſed to do, and ſo departed again. When Sir Henry had thus made ſufficient Trial of this Matter, he forthwith wrote his Letters unto the King's Majeſty, ſignifying unto him the whole at large, as he had learned. In the mean while Ludovico the next Morning repaired to the Biſhop of Wincheſter's Lodging, to demand an Anſwer of thoſe Letters the Legate had ſent unto him: But how he uſed himſelf, or whether he uttered the Diſcourſe he had with Sir Henry Knevet and with Wolfe, whom he ſuppoſed at the firſt to be the Biſhop's Man, it is not certainly known. But the Biſhop perceiving that by miſtaking one for another, (and in ſuppoſing Wolfe to be the Biſhop's Servant) Ludovico had uttered all his Meſſage from the Legate unto Wolfe, and that thereby his Practices would come to Light; in great Haſte and Rage he cauſed Ludovico to be ſtay'd in his own Houſe, while in the mean Time himſelf went to Gravela, one of the Emperor's Council, and ſo practiſed with him, that Ludovico was ſecretly committed to Priſon, in the Cuſtody of one of the Emperor's Marſhals, ſo as he could be no more talked with all the Time of their Abode there. And then ſending in great Haſte to Sir Henry Knevet to come and ſpeak with him, (which he did) he fell into very hot Speech with him, ſaying, that he had Poiſon in his Diſh, and that a Knave was ſuborned to be his Deſtruction; with many ſuch like Words. Sir Henry told him again how he underſtood it; and prayed him that Ludovico might be brought Face to Face, to be examined in both their Preſences. Which the Biſhop would in no Caſe agree unto, affirming, that he had ſo declared the Caſe to Gravela, being indifferent (as he thought) to them both, that he would not meddle with Ludovico, nor ſpeak with him: But that the Emperor's Council ſhould examine him, and try what he was for him. To whom Sir Henry Knevet again very earneſtly objected, That he marvelled that the Biſhop in Matters touching the King's Majeſty their Maſter, would uſe the Aid or Means of

Anno 1555. Gravela a foreign Prince's Minister, to make him privy of their Question. But say and do what he could, he would never come to the Speech of Ludovico any more ever after. Whereupon there arose great and long Controversies between them (both writing Letters unto the King about that Matter) until at last the King's Majesty perceiving his Affairs otherwise to slack thereby, wrote unto them both that they should lay all those Things under Foot, and join together in his Service as before; which they did accordingly. But howsoever this Matter was afterward salved here with the King's Majesty, as either by the Death of Sir Henry Knevet, which I think was not long after, or by other Friends the Bishop had here at home, I know not: Yet Wolfe, who within two Months after died of a long Cough of the Lungs, upon his Death-bed did again affirm the Premisses to be most true; and therefore in the Presence of Sir Henry Knevet, and divers of his Servants, he protested, that he had not invented, sought or procured this at Ludovico's Hands, for any Malice or Displeasure born to the Bishop, but only for Discharge of his Faith and Duty unto the King's Majesty, desiring that the same his Protestation might be inserted in the End of his last Will and Testament, which was then presently done, and thereunto he set his Hand.

Now, whether this was the Matter that the King moved so often Mr. Secretary Paget (being after Lord-Keeper) to keep safe as sore Matter against the Bishop, I know not, but yet it appears by some Depositions of the Nobility, and others, in the Process had against him in King Edward's Days, that the King's Majesty Henry the Eighth, had this Matter ever in his Mind: For in every general Pardon that he granted by Parliament after this Practice, he did still except all Treasons committed beyond the Seas; meaning thereby, as it was supposed, that the Bishop should not take any Benefit by any general Pardon, if at any Time his Majesty would call him to Account: And therefore, all Things well weighed, he had small Cause to vaunt of his great Favour he had with King Henry his Master. Howbeit it seemeth he was brought into this Fool's Paradise by the Lord Paget; who, as he himself reporteth in his Depositions, in his Messages from the King to the said Bishop, deluded him, telling him much otherwise than the King had spoke, and concealing always the King's hard Speeches against him, which Thing puffed up this vain-glorious Thraso not a little.

But whosoever he was, seeing he is now gone, I refer him to his Judge, to whom he shall stand or fall. As concerning his Death and Manner thereof, I would they which were present thereat would testify to us what they saw. This we have all to think, that his Death happened so opportunely, that England hath a mighty Cause to give Thanks to the Lord for it: Not so much for the great Hurt he had done in Times past in perverting his Princes, in bringing in the six Articles, in murdering God's Saints, in defacing Christ's sincere Religion, &c. but also and especially for that he had thought to have brought to pass in murdering also the Lady Elizabeth. For whatsoever Danger it was of Death that she was in, it did, no doubt, proceed from the bloody Bishop, who was the Cause thereof. And if it be certain which we have heard, that her Highness being in the Tower, a Writ came down from certain of the Council for her Execution; it is out of Controversy that Winchester was the Framer of that Engine, who, no doubt, in that one Day had brought this whole Realm into woful Ruin, had not the Lord's most gracious Counsel, through Mr. Bridges then the Lieutenant, coming in Haste to the Queen, certified her of the Matter, and prevented his bloody Devices. For which Thanks be to the same our Lord and Saviour, in the Congregation of all English Churches, Amen.

The Lady Elizabeth preserved by Lieut. Bridges.

Of Things uncertain I must speak uncertainly, for lack of fuller Information, or else peradventure there are some in the Realm that can say more than I have here expressed. For as Bonner, Story, Thornton, Harpsfield, Dunning, with others, were occupied in putting the poor Branches of God's Saints to Death: So this Bishop for his Part bent all his Devices, and had spent all his Powder in assailing the Root, and in casting such a Platform, as he himself in Words at his Death is said to confess, to build his Popery upon, as he thought should have stood for ever. But, as I said before, of Things uncertain I can speak but uncertainly. Wherefore as touching the Manner and Order of his Death, how rich he died, what Words he spake, what little Repentance he shewed, whether he died with his Tongue swoln and out of his Mouth, as did Thomas Arundel Archbishop of Canterbury, or whether he stunk before he died as Cardinal Wolsey did, or whether he died in Despair as Latomus and others did, &c. All this I refer either to their Reports of whom I heard it, or leave it to the Knowledge of them which know it better.

Notwithstanding, here by the Way, touching the Death of this aforesaid Bishop, I thought not to over-pass a certain Hear-say, which not long since came to me by Information, of a certain worthy and credible Gentlewoman, and another Gentleman of the same Name and Kindred, which Mrs. Munday, the Wife of Mr. Munday, sometime Secretary to the old Lord Thomas, Duke of Norfolk, a present Witness of this that is testify'd, thus openly reported in the House of a worshipful Citizen, bearing yet Office in this City, in Words and Effect as followeth. The same Day as Bishop Ridley and Mr. Latimer suffered at Oxford, being about the 19th Day of October, there came into the House of Stephen Gardiner, the old Duke of Norfolk, with the aforesaid Mr. Munday his Secretary abovenamed, Reporter hereof. The old aged Duke there waiting for his Dinner, the Bishop being not yet disposed to dine, deferred the Time to three or four of the Clock in the Afternoon. At length about four of the Clock cometh his Servant posting in all possible Speed from Oxford, bringing Intelligence to the Bishop what he had heard and seen: Of whom the said Bishop diligently enquiring the Truth of the Matter, and hearing by his Man that Fire most certainly was set unto them, cometh out rejoycing to the Duke, Now, saith he, let us go to Dinner. Whereupon, they being set down, Meat immediately was brought, and the Bishop began merrily to eat. But what followed? The bloody Tyrant had not eaten a few Bits, but the sudden Stroke of God's terrible Hand fell upon him in such Sort, as immediately he was taken from the Table, and so brought to his Bed, where he continued the Space of fifteen Days in such intolerable Anguish and Torments, that all that mean while during the fifteen Days, he could not avoid by Urine or otherwise, any Thing that he received: Whereby his Body being miserably inflamed within (who had inflamed so many good Martyrs before) was brought to a wretched End. And thereof, no doubt, as most like it is, came the thrusting out of his Tongue from his Mouth so swoln and black, with the Inflammation of his Body. A Spectacle worthy to be noted and beheld of all such Bloody burning Persecutors.

But to proceed farther in the Sequel of our Story: I could name the Man (but I abstain from Names) who being then present, and a great Doer about the said Winchester, reported to us concerning the said Bishop, that when Dr. Day, Bishop of Chichester, came to him, and began to comfort him with Words of God's Promise, and with the free Justification in the Blood of Christ our Saviour, repeating the Scriptures to him; Winchester hearing that, What my Lord [quoth he] will you open that Gap now? then farewel altogether. To me, and such others in my Case, you may speak it, but open this Window to the People, then farewel all together.

Moreover, what Dr. Bonner then saw in him, or what he heard of him, and what Words passed between them about the Time of this Extremity, betwixt him and him be it. If Bonner did there behold any Thing which might turn to his good Example, I exhort him to take it, and to beware in Time, as I pray God he may. Here I could bring in the frivolous Epitaph that was made on his Death, devised by a Papist for a popish Bishop, but I omit it, and instead thereof I have here inserted certain Things gathered out of his Sermons, Words, and Writings, wherein may appear what an earnest and vehement Enemy he was to the Pope, if he would have been constant in himself; and how inconstantly he vary'd from himself; and also, how he standing upon a Singularity of his own Wit, varied from other Papists in certain Points. In the gathering whereof although there be some Pains, and Tediousness also in reading; yet I thought not to omit the same, upon certain Considerations, namely, for that so many yet to this Day there be, who stick so much to Gardiner's Wit, Learning and Religion, taking him for such a substantial Pillar of the Pope's Church. To the Intent therefore, that such as hitherto have been deceived by him, may not longer be abused therein, if they will either credit his own Works, Words, Sermons, Writings, Disputations; or else will be judged by his own Witnesses of his own Party produced, we have here collected such manifest Probations, which may notoriously declare how effectually first he withstood the Pope's Supremacy: And likewise afterward may declare the manifest Contrariety and Repugnancy of the said Gardiner, first with other Writers, and lastly with himself: First beginning with his Sermon preached before King Edward. The Sum and Effect of which Sermon briefly collected by Mr. Udal, hereunder followeth.

The Sum and Effect of Bishop Gardiner's Sermon preached before King Edward, Anno 1550.

MOST honourable Audience, I purpose, by the Grace of God, to declare some Part of the Gospel that is accustomably used to be read in the Church at this Day. And because that without the special Grace of God, neither can I speak any Thing to your edifying, nor ye receive the same accordingly, I shall desire you all that we may jointly pray altogether for the Assistance of his Grace. In which Prayer I commend to Almighty God your most excellent Majesty, our Sovereign Lord King of England, France and Ireland, and of the Church of England and Ireland, next and immediately under God here on Earth, the Supreme Head, Queen Katherine Dowager, my Lady Mary's Grace, my Lady Elizabeth's Grace, your Majesty's most dear Sisters, my Lord Protector's Grace, with all others of your most honourable Council, the Spiritualty and Temporalty, and I desire you to commend unto God with your Prayer, the Souls departed unto God in Christ's Faith, and amongst these most especially our late Sovereign Lord King Henry VIII. your Majesty's most noble Father. For these and for Grace necessary, I shall desire you to say a Pater Noster, and so forth.

Supreme Head.

The GOSPEL beginneth, MATTHEW XVI. 13, 14, 15, 16.

When JESUS was come into the Parts of Cesarea, a City that Philippus builded, he asked his Disciples, and said, Whom do Men say that the Son of Man is? They said, Some say that thou art John the Baptist, some that thou art Elias, some that thou art Jeremiah, or some one of the Prophets. He said to them, But whom do ye say that I am? Then answered Simon Peter, and said, Thou art CHRIST the Son of the Living GOD, &c.

I Cannot have Time, I think, to speak of the Gospel thoroughly, for other Matters that I have here now to say, but I shall note unto you such Things as I may, and first of the Diversity of Opinions concerning Christ, which were among the People variable: But among this, that is, the Disciples of Christ's School, there was no Variety, they agreed all together in one Truth, and among them there was no Variety. For when Peter had for all the rest, and in the Name of all the rest made his Answer, that Christ was the Son of God, they all confessed with one Consent, that he had spoken the Truth. Yet these Opinions of Christ that the People had of him, though they were sundry, yet were they honourable and not slanderous: For to say that Christ was Elias, and John the Baptist, was honourable:

For

For ſome thought him ſo to be, becauſe he did frankly, ſharply, and openly rebuke Vice. They that called him Jeremiah, had alſo an honourable Opinion of him, and thought him ſo to be, becauſe of his great Learning which they perceived in him, and marvelled where he had it. And they that ſaid he was one of the Prophets, had an honourable Opinion of him, and favoured him, and thought well of him.

But there was another Sort of People that ſpake Evil of him, and ſlandered him, and railed on him, ſaying that he was a Glutton, and a Drinker of Wine, that he had a Devil in him, that he was a Deceiver of the People, that he was a Carpenter's Son, as though he were the worſe for his Father's Craft. But of theſe he asked no Queſtion: For among theſe none agreed with the other. Wherein ye ſhall note that Man of his own Power and Strength can do nothing: No, nothing that good is he can do of his own Invention or Device, but erreth and faileth; when he is left to his own Invention, he erreth in his Imagination. So proud is Man, and ſo ſtout of his own Courage, that he deviſeth nothing well, whenſoever he is left to himſelf without God; and then never do any ſuch agree in any Truth, and wander and err in all that they do. As Men of Law, if they be asked their Opinion in any Point touching the Law, ye ſhall not have two of them agree in Opinion: If there be two or three of them asked their Opinion in any Matter, if they ſhould anſwer all one Thing, they fear leſt they ſhould be ſuppoſed and thought to have no Learning. Therefore be they never ſo many of them, they will not agree in their Anſwers, but deviſe each Man a ſundry Anſwer in any Thing that they are asked.

Diſagreement amongſt Men of Law.

Diſagreement amongſt the Philoſophers.

The Philoſophers that were not of Chriſt's School erred every one in their vain Opinions, and no one of them agreeth with the other.

Diſagreement amongſt the ſimple People.

Yea, Men of Simplicity, though they mean well, yet being out of Chriſt's School, they vary'd and agreed not in their Opinions of Chriſt, though they thought well of him. Some ſaid he was John, ſome Elias, ſome Jeremiah, but none made the right Anſwer. He that anſwered here, was Simon the Son of Jonas, and he ſaid, Thou art Chriſt the Son of the Living God.

Where ye ſhall note the Properties that were in Peter. He was called Simon, which is Obedience, and Jonas is a Dove; ſo that in him that is of Chriſt's School, muſt be theſe two Properties, Obedience and Simplicity. He muſt be humble and innocent as a Dove, that will be of Chriſt's School. Pride is a Hindrance of Chriſt's School: For as the wiſe Man ſaith, God reſiſteth the Proud, and giveth Grace to the humble and meek. And according to the ſame doth Chriſt in the Goſpel ſay, Oh Father, I confeſs unto thee, that is, I laud and magnify thee; for that thou haſt hidden theſe Things from the Wiſe, and haſt opened them unto the little Ones. Whereupon ſaith St. Auguſtine, that the Gifts of Learning and Knowledge of the Sciences are no Hindrance to Chriſt's School, but a Furtherance unto, if they be well apply'd and uſed as they ought to be: But he that is proud, and feedeth himſelf with his own Conceit and Opinion of himſelf, and abuſeth the Gifts of God, applying his Learning and Knowledge to the ſatisfying and following of his own Fantaſy, is no right Diſciple of Chriſt, but falleth into Error. When they ſaid and affirmed themſelves to be wiſe, they were made Fools.

Learning without humility, never findeth Chriſt's School.

The Philoſophers had every one a Sect of his own, and had many gay Sentences for the Commendation of their Opinions, and every Man thought his own Opinion to be beſt: But becauſe they apply'd all to their own Pride and Glory, and not to the Honour of God, nor humbled themſelves as they ought to have done, but followed their own Fantaſy, they erred, and fell out of the Way, and were not of Chriſt's School: And all that have gone out of Chriſt's School, Pride hath brought them out of it; and ſuch as have not entered, have kept themſelves out of it with Pride likewiſe: Therefore all ſuch as will be Scholars of Chriſt's School and Diſcipline, muſt be humble and meek; otherwiſe, When they ſaid and affirmed themſelves to be wiſe, they were made Fools.

He that cannot learn this Leſſon of Peter, and humbly confeſs with Peter, that Chriſt is the Son of the Living God, is no Scholar of Chriſt's School, be he otherwiſe never ſo well learned, never ſo well ſeen in other Sciences. But now concerning the Anſwer of Peter, Matthew here in this Place ſaith he anſwered, Thou art Chriſt the Son of the Living God. St. Luke ſaith he anſwered, Thou art the Chriſt of God. And St. Mark ſaith he anſwered, Thou art the Chriſt. But in all that is no Variety: For to ſay, Chriſt the Son of the Living God, and to ſay, The Chriſt of God, and to ſay, The Chriſt, is in Effect all one, and no Diverſity in it, for Chriſt alone is the whole, and he that confeſſeth thoroughly Chriſt, is thoroughly a chriſtian Man, and doth therein confeſs him to be the Lord and Saviour of the World. But now we muſt conſider what Chriſt is, Chriſt was ſent to be our Meſſias, our Saviour: He was ſent to be our Biſhop, and alſo our Sacrifice: He was ſent from the Trinity to be our Mediator between God and us, and to reconcile us to the Favour of God the Father: He was the Biſhop that offered for our Sins, and the Sacrifice that was offered: and as he is our Biſhop, ſo is he our Mean to pacify God for us, for that was the Office of a Biſhop, to ſacrifice for the Sins of the People, and to make Interceſſion for the People; and as he was our Sacrifice, ſo was he our Reconciliation to God again.

But we muſt confeſs and believe him thoroughly I ſay: For as he was our Biſhop then, ſo is it he that ſtill keepeth us in Favour with God: And like as his Sacrifice then made was ſufficient to deliver us from our Sins, and to bring us in Favour with God; ſo to continue us in the ſame Favour of God, he ordained a perpetual Remembrance of himſelf, he ordained himſelf for a Memory of himſelf at his laſt Supper, when he inſtituted the Sacrament of the Altar, not for another Redemption, as though the World needed a new Redemption from Sin, but that we might thoroughly remember his moſt Holy Paſſion, he inſtituted the Sacrament by his moſt Holy Word, ſaying, This is my Body, which Word is ſufficient to prove the Sacrament, and maketh ſufficiently for the Subſtance thereof. And this daily Sacrifice he inſtituted to be continued among chriſtian Men, not for need of another Redemption or Satisfaction for the Sins of the World, for that was ſufficiently performed by the Sacrifice of his Body and Blood done upon the the Cross; neither that he is now our Bishop for need of any further Sacrifice to be made for Sin, but to * continue us in the Remembrance of his Passion suffered for us, to make us strong in believing the Fruit of his Passion, to make us diligent in Thanksgiving for the Benefit of his Passion, to establish our Faith, and to make it strong in acknowledging the Efficacy of his Death and Passion suffered for us. And this is the true Understanding of the Mass, not for another Redemption, but that we may be strong in believing the Benefits of Christ's Death and Blood-shedding for us upon the Cross. And this it is that we must believe of Christ, and believe it thoroughly: And therefore by your Patience, as Peter made his Confession, so will I make Confession, wherein by your Majesty's Leave and Sufferance, I will plainly declare what I think of the State of the Church of England at this Day, how I like it, and what I think of it.

* Note here Winchester contrary to himself: For before he said the Sacrament was ordained to keep us in the Favour of God, and now he saith, it is to keep us in Remembrance of his Passion.

Where I said of the Mass, that it was a Sacrifice ordained to make us the more strong in the Faith and Remembrance of Christ's Passion, and for commending unto God the Souls of such as be dead in Christ (for these two Things are the special Causes why the Mass was instituted) the Parliament very well ordained Mass to be kept; and because we should be the more strong in the Faith and Devotion towards God, it was well done of the Parliament, for moving the People more and more to Devotion, to ordain that the Sacrament should be received in both Kinds: Therefore I say, that the Act of Parliament for receiving of the Sacrament of the Altar in both Kinds, was well made.

Winchester allowed the Sacrament in both Kinds.

I say also, that the Proclamation which was made, That no Man should unreverently speak of the Sacrament, or otherwise speak of it than Scripture teacheth them, was well made. For this Proclamation stoppeth the Mouths of all such as will unreverently speak of the Sacrament: For in Scripture there is nothing to be found that maketh any Thing against the Sacrament, but all maketh with it. Wherefore if they were the Children of Obedience, they would not use any unreverend Talk against the Sacrament, nor blaspheme the Holy Sacrament. For no Word of Scripture maketh any Thing against it.

But here it may be said unto me, Why Sir, is this your Opinion? It is good you speak plainly in this Matter, without any colouring or covert speaking. The Act for the dissolving and suppressing of the Chauntries seemeth to make against the Mass, how like you that Act? What say you of it? or what would you say of it, if you were alone? I will speak what I think of it, I will use no colourable or covert Words, I will not use a devised Speech for a Time, and afterward † go from it again. If Chauntries were abused by applying the Mass for the Satisfaction of Sin, or to bring Men to Heaven, or to take away Sin, or to make Men of wicked Just, I like the Act well, and they might well be dissolved, for the Mass was not instituted for any such Purpose: Yet nevertheless for them that were in them (I speak now as in the Cause of the Poor) it were well done that they were provided of Livings. The Act doth graciously provide for them during their Lives, and I doubt not but that your Majesty, and the Lords of your most honourable Council, have taken Order that they should be well looked unto, but yet how they shall be used at the Hands of other Officers, God knoweth, full hardly, I fear. But as for the Chauntries themselves, if there were any such Abuse in them concerning the Mass, it is no Matter if they be taken away.

† Whether ye did or not, let Queen Mary's Time judge.

Note, Winchester doth not allow Mass for Satisfaction to bring Men to Heaven, to take away Sin, or to make Men just, &c.

Anno 1555.

King Henry the Eighth, a noble and wise Prince, not without great Pain maintained the Mass, and yet in his Doctrine it was confessed that Masses of Scala Cœli were not to be used, or allowed, because they did pervert the right Use and Institution of the Mass. For when Men add unto the Mass an Opinion of Satisfaction, or of a new Redemption, then do they put it to another Use than it was ordained for. I that allow Mass so well, and I that allow praying for the Dead (as indeed the Dead are of christian Charity to be prayed for) yet can agree with the Realm in that Matter of putting down Chauntries.

But yet ye would say unto me, There be fewer Masses by putting away the Chauntries. So were there when Abbeys were dissolved: So be there when ye unite many Churches in one. But this is no Injury nor Prejudice to the Mass; it consisteth not in the Number, nor in the Multitude, but in the Thing itself: So that the Decay of the Mass by taking away the Chaunteries is answered by the Abbeys. But yet I would have it considered for the Persons that are in them. I speak of the poor Mens Livings.

I have now declared what I think of the Act of Parliament made for the receiving of the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of our Saviour Christ in both Kinds. Ye have my Mind and Opinion concerning a Proclamation that came forth for the same Act, and I have shewed my Mind therein even plainly as I think, and I have ever been agreeable to this Point, I have oftentimes reasoned in it, I have spoken and also written in it, both beyond the Seas, and on this Side the Seas; my Books be Abroad, which I cannot unwrite again. I was ever of this Opinion, that it might be received in both Kinds, and it was a Constitution provincial, scarce two hundred Years agone, made by Peckam, then Archbishop of Canterbury, that it should be received in both Kinds, or at least wise in the great Churches, for in the smaller Churches it was not thought to be so expedient. Thus have I ever thought of this Matter, I have never been of other Mind, nor have I changed my Conscience, but I have obeyed and followed the Order of the Realm, and I pray you to obey Orders as I have obey'd, that we may all be the Children of Obedience.

Now I will return to the Text. When Simon had answered, Thou art Christ the Son of the Living God: Then Christ said unto him, Blessed art thou Simon Barjona, for Flesh and Blood have not opened that unto thee, but my Father which is in Heaven; and I say unto thee, that thou art Peter, and upon this Rock will I build my Church, and the Gates of Hell shall not prevail against it. Blessed art thou (saith he) for Flesh and Blood hath not opened that unto thee. For otherwise in John, Andrew told of Christ, and said, I have found the Messias, which is Christ. But that is not enough. He that shall confess Christ must have an inward teaching, and must be spiritually taught by the Father of Heaven, for Andrew's Confession was nothing but a carnal Confession, and such a one as any other might have made by natural Reason: But

John 1.

Outward confessing without inward teaching is not enough.

Anno 1555. the Confeſſion of Peter was above the Reaſon of Man: For Chriſt was there a very Man, and Peter's Eyes told him that he was a Man, and nothing elſe; but he was inwardly taught by the Father of Heaven: And ſeeing this was above Reaſon, it is a marvellous Thing that Reaſon ſhould be uſed to impugn Faith, which is not within the Precinct of carnal Men, and ſuch as uſe groſs Reaſon.

Note what Wincheſter here ſaith, That upon the Confeſſion of Peter the Church is built.

But Peter had another Reaſon inwardly taught him, and becauſe he learnt his Leſſon, Chriſt gave him a new Name: For Petra is a Stone, a new Name of a Chriſtian Man, for upon this Confeſſion of thy Faith, here I will build my Church, that is, I will eſtabliſh all thoſe which I intend to gather unto thee, and the Devils ſhall not prevail againſt it: For he that with a good Heart and ſure Faith confeſſeth this, he is ſure from Evil: This World nor Satan can do him no harm.

Againſt the Pope's Supremacy.

But now for a farther Declaration, it is a marvellous Thing, that upon theſe Words the Biſhop of Rome ſhould found his Supremacy: For whether it be Super Petram, or Petrum, all is one Matter, it maketh nothing at all for the Purpoſe to make a Foundation of any ſuch Supremacy. For otherwiſe (when Peter ſpake carnally to Chriſt as in the ſame Chapter a little following) Satan was his Name, where Chriſt ſaid, get thee behind me, Satan: So that the Name of Peter is no Foundation for the Supremacy, but as it is ſaid in Scripture, Ye are built upon the Foundation of the Apoſtles and Prophets, that is, by Participation (for godly Participation giveth Names of Things) he might be called the Head of the Church, as the Head of the River is called the Head, becauſe he was the firſt that made this Confeſſion of Chriſt, which is not an Argument for Dignity, but for the Quality that was in the Man. For the firſt Man is not evermore the beſt. The Head Man of a Queſt is not always the beſt Man in the Queſt, but is choſen to be the head Man for ſome other Quality that is in him. Virtue may allure Men, ſo that the inferior Perſon in Dignity may be the better in Place, as the King ſometime chooſeth a mean Man to be of his Council, of whom he hath a good Opinion, yet is the King the King ſtill. And in ſome Caſe the King of England might ſend to Rome, and if the Biſhop of Rome were a Man of ſuch Wiſdom, Virtue and Learning, that he were able in matter of Controverſy concerning Religion, to ſet an Unity in the Church of England; the King might well enough ſend to him for his Counſel and Help, and yet ſhould not in ſo doing give the Biſhop of Rome any Superiority over the King. For if a King be ſick, he will have the beſt Phyſician: If he have War, he will have the beſt Captain, and yet are not theſe the Superiors but the Inferiors.

A Schoolmaſter is a Subject, a Phyſician is a Subject, a Captain is a Subject, Counſellors are Subjects, yet do theſe order and direct the King. Wherefore, leaving the Biſhop of Rome, this I ſay to declare what Opinion I am of. I do not now ſpeak what I could ſay. I have ſpoken beyond the Seas, I have written, my Books be Abroad. But this is not the Place here, I ſay that this Place maketh nothing for the Biſhop of Rome, but for Chriſt only, for other Foundation can no Man lay, than that is laid, which is Jeſus Chriſt.

But now to go forth declaring my Mind; in my Time had come many Alterations. Firſt a great Alteration it was to renounce the Biſhop of Rome's Authority, and I was one that ſtood in it. A great Alteration it was that Abbeys were diſſolved. A great Alteration it was that Images were pulled down: And to all theſe I condeſcended, and yet have I been accounted a Maintainer of Superſtition, and have been called a Maſter of Ceremonies and of outward Things, and I have been noted to take that Religion which conſiſteth in outward Things, as though he were a right Chriſtian that fulfilled the outward Ceremonies, whereof I promiſed to declare my Conſcience, and ſo will I, and how I have eſteemed Ceremonies, and that I have never been of other Opinion than I am concerning Ceremonies, and mine Opinion I have gathered of Auguſtine and Jerome, ancient Fathers and Doctors of the Church.

Wincheſter againſt the Pope, againſt Abbeys and Images.

Ceremonies ſerve to move Men to ſerve God, and as long as they be uſed for that purpoſe, they may be well uſed in the Church: But when Man maketh himſelf Servant to them, and not them to ſerve him, then be our Ceremonies brought to an Abuſe. If by over much Familiarity of them Men abuſe them, they do Evil. For we muſt not ſerve Creatures but God. We had Monkery, Nunnery, Friery, of a wonderous Number, much variety of Garments, variety of Devices in dwelling, many ſundry Orders and Faſhions in moving of the Body. Theſe Things were firſt ordained to admoniſh them of their Duty to God, to labour for the Neceſſity of the Poor, and to ſpare from their own Bellies to the Poor; and therefore was their Fare ordained and prepared. And becauſe they abuſed theſe Things, and ſet them in an higher Place than they ought to do, not taking Monition thereby the better to ſerve God, but eſteeming Perfection to conſiſt in them, they were diſſolved, their Houſes and Garments were taken away.

But one Thing King Henry would not take away, that was the Vow of Chaſtity. The Vow of Obedience he converted to himſelf, the Vow of Chaſtity he willeth ſtill to remain with them.

Wincheſter never againſt the taking down of Images, being abuſed with Idolatry.

We had many Images whereto Pilgrimages were done, and many Tombs that Men uſed to viſit, by reaſon whereof they fell in a Fancy of Idolatry and Superſtition, above the Things that they might have been taken for; and becauſe they had not the Uſe that they were ordained for, they were left. When Men put the Images in a higher Place than they ſerved for, then were they taken clean away: As give a Child a gay Book to learn upon, and then if he gaze upon the Gorgeouſneſs of his Book, and learn not his Leſſon, according to the Intent that that Book was given for, the Book is taken away from him: So the Images, when Men had them in higher Place and Eſtimation than they were firſt ſet up in the Church for, then they might be taken away: And I was never of other Mind, nor ever had any other Opinion of them. Divers Things there be in the Church which be in the Liberty of the Ruler to order as he ſeeth Cauſe; and he that is Ruler may either let them ſtand, or elſe may cauſe them to be taken away.

Two manner of Reformations, one where the Things cannot be taken away, but the Abuſe: The other both the Things and the Abuſe may be taken away.

There be two manner of Reformations. We have had of both Sorts. There be Things in the Church, which if they be abuſed, may not be taken away. As for Baptiſm, if it be abuſed, there may not another Thing be put in the Place of it, but the Thing muſt be reformed, and brought to the right Uſe again. Alſo preaching, if it be abuſed, may not be taken away, but muſt be reformed, and brought to the right Uſe: But there be other Things uſed in the Church, in which the Rulers have Liberty either to reform them or take them away. And becauſe it was an eaſier Way to take them away, than to bring them to the right Uſe that they were ordained for, they were all clean taken away, and ſo they might be. Yea, Sir, will ye ſay, but ye have maintained and defended them, and have preached againſt ſuch Perſons as deſpiſed them. It is Truth, I have preached againſt the Deſpiſers of them, and have ſaid, that Images might be ſuffered and uſed in the Church as Lay-men's Books, yet I never otherwiſe defended them, but to be uſed for ſuch Purpoſe as they were firſt ſet up in the Church for; but now that Men be waxed wanton, they are clean taken away, wherein our Religion is no more touched, than when Books were taken away for abuſing of them.

To take away all Images that lieth in the Liberty of the Rulers. If abuſing of Images by Idolatry becauſe Cauſe ſufficient to take away Images, why did Wincheſter hold with them before? If it be not Cauſe ſufficient, why doth he now grant to the taking of them away, being no more wantonly abuſed, than they were before time?

There was an Order taken for Books not to be uſed, wherein ſome might have ſaid, the Books are good, and I know how to uſe them, I may therefore uſe them well enough. I will therefore uſe them though they be forbidden: But if thou have any Charity, thou oughteſt to be contented rather to have them clean taken away, then to declare thyſelf to have another Opinion than thou oughteſt to have.

As touching Ceremonies, I eſteem them all as Paul eſteemeth them, Things indifferent, where he ſaith, That the Kingdom of God is not Meat and Drink, &c. So of Ceremonies. Nevertheleſs we have Time, Place, and Number, as a certain Number of Pſalms to be ſaid at Times, which may be done without Superſtition; but theſe Things muſt ſerve us, and not we ſerve them. Yet if an Order be ſet in them by ſuch as have Power, we muſt follow it, and we muſt obey the Rulers that appoint ſuch Time, Place, and Number to be kept. Ye may not ſay, if the Time will ſerve me, then I will come an Hour after. No, Sir, ye muſt keep this Time, and this Hour, becauſe it is ſo appointed by the Rulers, not for the Things, but for the Order that is ſet. I have been ever of this Opinion.

We had Palms and Candles taken away, which Things may indifferently have either of the two Reformations aboveſaid. When they were in Place, they ſhould have put Men in Remembrance of their Duty and Devotion towards God, but becauſe they were abuſed, they were and might be taken away. But the Religion of Chriſt is not in theſe Exerciſes, and therefore in taking away of them the Religion of Chriſt is nothing touched nor hindered. But Men muſt in ſuch Things be conformable, not for the Ceremony, but for Obedience ſake. St. Paul ſaith, that we ſhould rebuke every Brother that walketh inordinately. I have told you mine Opinion, and my Conſcience telleth me that I have ſpoken plainly, that ye may know what I am, and that ye may not be deceived in me, nor be ſlandered in me, nor make any further Search to know my Heart.

I like well the Communion, becauſe it provoketh Men more and more to Devotion. I like well the Proclamation, becauſe it ſtoppeth the Mouths of all ſuch as unreverently ſpeak or rail againſt the Sacrament. I like well the reſt of the King's Majeſty's Proceedings concerning the Sacrament. I have now told you what I like. But ſhall I ſpeak nothing of that I miſlike? ye will then ſay I ſpeak not plainly. I will therefore ſhew you my Conſcience plainly.

Anno 1555. Biſhop Gardiner liketh well King Edward's Proceedings.

I miſlike thoſe Preachers who preach by the King's Licenſe, and thoſe Readers which by the King's Permiſſion and Sufferance do read open Lectures, do openly and blaſphemouſly talk againſt the Maſs, and againſt the Sacrament. And to whom may I liken ſuch Readers and Preachers? I may liken them unto Poſts, for the Proverb ſaith, That Poſts do bear Truth in their Letters, and Lies in their Mouths; and ſo do they, and to ſpeak ſo againſt the Sacrament, it is the moſt marvellous Matter that ever I ſaw or heard of. I would wiſh therefore that there were a Stay and an Order in this Behalf, and that there might be but one Order and Rule. And let no Man of his own Head begin Matters, nor go before the King. They call it going before the King, and ſuch make themſelves Kings. Well, what miſliketh me elſe?

He miſliketh the Preachers in King Edward's Time, and why?

It miſliketh me, that Prieſts, and Men that vowed Chaſtity, ſhould openly marry, and avowed it openly: Which is a Thing that ſince the Beginning of the Church hath not been ſeen at any Time, that Men that have been admitted to any eccleſiaſtical Adminiſtration ſhould marry. We read of married Prieſts, that is to ſay, of married Men choſen to be Prieſts and Miniſters in the Church. And in Epiphanius we read, that ſome ſuch for Neceſſity were winked at. But that Men being Prieſts already ſhould marry, was never yet ſeen in Chriſt's Church from the Beginning of the Apoſtles Time. I have written in it, and ſtudied for it; and the very ſame Places that are therein alledged to maintain the Marriage of Prieſts, being diligently read, ſhall plainly confound them that maintain your Prieſts to marry, or at the fartheſt within two Lines after.

Againſt Marriage of Prieſts.

Thus have I ſhewed my Opinion in Order, proceeding from the Inferiors, and in Order proceeding from the higher Powers. And thus I have (as I truſt) plainly declared myſelf, without any covering or counterfeiting. And I beſeech your moſt excellent Majeſty to eſteem and take me as I am, and not to be ſlandered in me; for I have told you the plain Truth as it is, and I have opened my Conſcience unto you. I have not play'd the Poſt with you, to carry Truth in my Letters, and Lies in my Mouth: For I would not for all the World make a Lye in this Place; but I have diſcloſed the plain Truth as it lieth in my Mind. And thus I commit your moſt excellent Majeſty, and all your moſt honourable Counſellors, with the reſt of the devout Audience here preſent unto God. To whom be all Honour, Praiſe, and Glory, World without End.

Thus having compriſed the Sum and chief Purpoſe of his Sermon, with other ſuch Matters abovementioned, wherein may appear the double-fac'd Doings of this Biſhop in Matters of Religion: Now for the more Fortification of that which hath been ſaid, if any ſhall deny this aforeſaid Sermon, or any Part thereof to be true, to confirm therefore the ſame, we will Anno 1555. adjoin certain brief Notes, collected as well out of the Teſtimonies and Depoſitions of his own Friends and Servants, and others which were ſworn truly to declare their Knowledge in this Behalf, as alſo out of his own Writings and Works agreeing with the ſame.

The Pope's Supremacy impugned by Biſhop Gardiner.

FIRST, as touching the Confeſſion and Judgment of Stephen Gardiner againſt the Supremacy of the Biſhop of Rome, read in his Book De vera Obedientia.

Item, The ſaid Biſhop Gardiner in his Sermons and Preachings, as where he expoundeth the Place (Thou art Peter) nothing at all to make for the Authority of the Romiſh Biſhop, marvelled how the Pope could uſurp ſo much to take up that Place to build upon, when Chriſt had taken it up before to build his Church.

Item, The Confeſſion of Peter was the Confeſſion of all the Apoſtles, like as the Bleſſing given to Peter pertained as well to all the Apoſtles as to Peter.

Item, That the Place, Feed my Sheep, was not ſpecial to Peter alone, but general to all the Apoſtles. Alſo that the Greek Church did never receive the ſaid Biſhop of Rome for their univerſal Head.

Item, That the Church was built upon Chriſt's Faith, and not upon Peter.

And though Peter was called the Prince of the Apoſtles, that was nothing elſe but like as it is an Inqueſt, where the Foreman, or Headman is not ſo called, becauſe he is beſt or chiefeſt of that Company, but becauſe he ſpeaketh firſt.

The ſaid Biſhop in his Book De vera Obedientia, did not only write againſt the Pope's Supremacy, but alſo did defend the ſame at Lovain. And moreover in his Sermons did alledge and preach the ſame.

Wincheſter preached 14 Years againſt the Pope's Authority.

Item, For the Space of fourteen Years together he preached againſt the Pope's Supremacy in divers Sermons, and eſpecially in one Sermon before King Henry.

Ceremonies, Images, Chauntries, &c. impugned by Biſhop Gardiner.

Item, For Ceremonies and Images which were abuſed, to be taken away by publick Authority, he did well allow it, as a Child to have his Book taken from him when he abuſeth it, or delighteth only in the golden Cover.

Item, The diſſolving of Monaſteries and religious Houſes, he allowed and granted that they were juſtly ſuppreſſed.

Friars he never liked in all his Life.

Monks he counted but Belly-Gods.

The going about of St. Nicholas, St. Katherine, and St. Clement, he affirmeth to be Childrens Toys.

The taking away or tranſpoſing of Chauntry Obits, he referreth to the Arbitrement of the politick Rulers, granting that if they did diſſolve them, it might well be done.

Item, He wiſheth them to be committed to a better Uſe, and that Monaſteries were juſtly taken away.

The obſerving of Days, Hours, Number, Time, and Place, if they be orderly and publickly commanded by the Ruler, it is but to ſet the Church in an outward and publick Order; but if a Man inwardly and privately be admitted to the ſame, thinking his Prayer otherwiſe not available, but by obſerving thereof, it is an Error.

The Communion ſet out by King Edward he liked well.

The Book of Common Service he was content both to keep himſelf, and cauſe it to be kept by others.

For the Homilies, he exhorted the People in his preaching to come to the Church to hear them.

In Sum, to all Injunctions, Statutes, and Proclamations ſet forth by the King and ſuperior Powers, he yielded and granted.

Now (gentle Reader) lay theſe Writings, Preachings, and Doings of this Biſhop in the Days of King Henry and King Edward, with his Doings in Queen Mary's Time, and thou ſhalt ſee how variable he was, how inconſtant and contrary to himſelf, how perjured and falſe, and far differing from that which he was reported to be in a certain Engliſh Book ſet out in Queen Mary's Time, which ſaith, that there were three only in England, whoſe Conſcience had been never ſtained in Religion: Of whom he falſly ſaith, the aforeſaid Biſhop of Wincheſter was one.

Although Biſhop Gardiner in granting to theſe Points of Religion (as ye have heard) and other ſome again denying, could not therefore deſerve the Name and Fame of a perfect Chriſtian, yet notwithſtanding, if he had continued in his Judgment ſtill, and been conſtant in himſelf, he might have won more Commendation both with God and Men. But as ſoon as the Time began to alter, he likewiſe altering with the Time, was ſo far changed from that he ſeemed, that neither he agreed with other Papiſts, nor yet with himſelf, as Dr. Ridley in certain Treatiſes hath well noted of him: Wherein as in a Glaſs may be ſeen the manifeſt Contrariety and Repugnance in him, not only from the Truth of God's Bleſſed Word, but alſo how the ſaid Biſhop ſtanding ſo much in Singularity by himſelf, neither agreeth with other his Fellow-writers of his own Faction, nor yet fully accordeth with himſelf in certain Caſes of the Sacrament, as the aforeſaid Dr. Ridley in examining his Words and Works, hath well declared.

Here haſt thou (good Reader) this ſtout Prelate of Wincheſter, with all his Proſperities, Doings, and Qualifications, as in a certain Anatomy proportioned out unto thee, whereby thou mayſt boldly judge (and nothing err in thy Judgment) what is to be eſteemed of him by his Fruits, as who neither was true Proteſtant, nor right Papiſt: Neither conſtant in his Error, nor yet ſtedfaſt in the Truth: Falſe in King Henry's Time, a Diſſembler in King Edward's Time, double perjured, and a Murderer in Queen Mary's Time, mutable and inconſtant at all Times.

To deſcribe and paint out the unſtable Mutability of this Biſhop aforeſaid, no more need be added; yet notwithſtanding, ſeeing the Matter is not long, it may not be amiſs to annex a Piece of Driander's Letter written to one Criſpin Phyſician in Oxford, ſent from Antwerp, concerning the Doings and Behaviour of this Biſhop of Wincheſter, whoſe Story we have now in Hand. The Copy of which

Driander's

Driander's Letter, written to the ſaid Criſpin his Friend, being in Latin, is thus tranſlated into Engliſh.

BEfore my Departure from the City of Paris, I wrote unto you by our Friend the Engliſhman, &c.

Now you ſhall be contented only with the Narration of your Biſhop of Wincheſter, who (as appertained to the Ambaſſador of ſo noble a Prince) came to Lovain with a great Bravery, and was there received at one Jeremy's Houſe, and moſt honourably entertained, where the Faculty of Divines for Honour's ſake, preſented him Wine in the Name of the whole Univerſity. But our famous Doctors, and learned Maſters, for that they would more deeply ſearch and underſtand the Learning and Excellency of the Prelate, peruſed and ſcanned a certain Oration made by him, and now extant, intituled, De vera Obedientia, in which Oration he did impugn the Supremacy of the Biſhop of Rome, and preferr'd his Lord's and King's Authority before the Holy Apoſtolick See (as they term it) which being read and conſidered by them, they did not only repent that they had given him ſuch Honour, but alſo recanted that which they had done: And did not ſo much honour him before, but now they were as earneſt and as ſpiteful againſt him. Richard Lothomus, Interpreter of Terms, with the Favourers of that Fraternity, and other Champions of the falling Church, diſputed with him concerning the Pope's Supremacy. This Biſhop ſtoutly defended his ſaid Oration. The Divines contrary ſtiffly maintained their Opinion, and divers Times openly with Exclamations, called the ſaid Biſhop an excommunicate Perſon, and a Schiſmatick, to no little Reproach and Infamy of the Engliſh Nation. The Biſhop not long after minding to ſay Maſs in St. Peter's Church, they did deny unto him, as to an excommunicate Perſon, the Ornaments and Veſtments meet for the ſame; wherewith he being highly offended, ſuddenly haſted his Journey from thence. The next Day after the Dean made an eloquent Oration, wherein he openly diſgraced and defamed him. You have heard now a true Story, for our Doctor was a Beholder of the whole Tragedy, &c.

Accounted an excommunicate Perſon and a Schiſmatick at Lovain.

And this now being ſufficient for Gardiner's Story, to leave him to his Judge, and to let him go, we ſhall return and proceed (by God's Leave) as the Courſe of theſe doleful Days ſhall lead us, to proſecute the Reſidue of Chriſt's Martyrs, as now in Order followeth.

The Martyrdom of John Webb Gentleman, George Roper and Gregory Parke at Canterbury.

JOHN WEBB was brought before the Biſhop of Dover, and Nicholas Harpsfield, or ſome other deputed in their room, on the 16th of September, and there had propounded unto him ſuch Articles as were commonly adminiſtred by Bonner to thoſe of his Juriſdiction: And being willed for that preſent to depart, and to deliberate with himſelf upon the Matter, againſt the next Time of his Appearance, he made Anſwer that he would no otherwiſe ſay (by God's Grace) than he had already ſaid, which was this: As touching the Sacrament of Chriſt's Body, ſaid he, I do believe it to be left unto his Church (with Thankſgiving) in Commemoration of his Death and Paſſion, until his coming again. So that it is left in Remembrance of his Body, and not by the Words of Conſecration to be made his Body, really, ſubſtantially, and the ſame Body that was born of the Virgin Mary: I utterly deny that.

Anno 1555. Anſwer of Mr. Webb to the Biſhop's Articles.

After this (beſides ſundry other Times) the third Day of October, the ſaid John Webb, George Roper and Gregory Parke, were all brought together before the ſaid Judges; who there and then agreeing, and ſtedfaſtly allowing the former Anſwer made before by Mr. Webb, were by the bloody Prelates adjudged Hereticks; and therefore about the End of the ſame Month, they were brought out of Priſon together to the Place of Martyrdom; ſaying certain Pſalms mournfully as they were going to the Stake.

And being thus brought (as I ſaid) to the Stake, and there encompaſſed about with a Chain, were burnt altogether in one Fire at Canterbury, moſt patiently enduring their Torments, and accounting themſelves Happy and Bleſſed of the Lord that they were made worthy to ſuffer for Chriſt's Goſpel ſake.

William Wiſeman.

THE 13th of December William Wiſeman, a Clothworker of London, died in Lollard's-Tower, where he was in Priſon and Bonds for the Goſpel of Chriſt: Some thought, that either through Famine, or ill handling of ſome murdering Papiſts, he was made away. By reaſon whereof the Coroner, named John Gibbs, Gentleman, with an Inqueſt of 12 Men, were fain to ſit upon him, who although to the outward Appearance were ſaid to find nothing in him elſe but only God's Viſitation, yet what other privy Cauſes there might be of his Death, the Lord knoweth, I have not to ſay.

W. Wiſeman dead in Lollards Tower and caſt into the Fields.

After the ſaid William Wiſeman was departed (as is ſaid) in the Tower, the Papiſts caſt him out into the Fields, commanding that no Man ſhould bury him, according as their devout Manner is to do with all ſuch as die in like Sort, whom they account as prophane, and worthy of no Burial, but to be caſt to Dogs and Birds. And yet notwithſtanding this their mercileſs Commandment, ſome good Tobits there were which buried him in the Evening, as commonly they did all the reſt thrown out in like Manner, whom they were wont privily by Night to cover, and many Times the Archers in the Fields ſtanding by, and ſinging Pſalms together at their Burial.

In the ſame Month of December, James Gore alſo died in the Priſon at Colcheſter, laid there in Bonds for the Truth of God's Word.

James Gore died in Colcheſter Priſon.

The Hiſtory of Mr. John Philpot, who was examin'd, condemn'd, and martyr'd for the Defence of the Goſpel of Chriſt.

THE Troubles of Mr. Philpot have been partly related before, in the Beginning of Queen Mary's Time, in proſecuting the Diſputation in the Convocation-houſe. He came of a worſhipful Family, the Son of a Knight, born in Hampſhire, brought up at New College in Oxford, where he ſtudy'd the Civil Law about ſix or ſeven Years, beſides other liberal Arts, eſpecially Languages, and particularly he wonderfully advanced in the Hebrew Tongue. In Wit he was pregnant and happy, of a ſingular Courage, in Spirit fervent, in Religion zealous, and alſo well practiſed and exerciſed in the ſame (which is no ſmall Matter in a true Divine) of Nature plain and apert, far from all Flattery (as doth evidently appear in all his Behaviour) farther from all Hypocriſy and deceitful Diſſimulation. What his Learning was, his own Examinations penned with his own Hand can declare.

From Oxford, deſirous to ſee other Countries as Occaſion ſerved thereunto, he went over into Italy, and Places thereabouts, where he coming upon a Time from Venice to Padua, was in danger through a certain Franciſcan Friar accompanying him in his Journey, who coming to Padua ſought to accuſe him of Hereſy. At length returning into England, as the Time miniſtred more Boldneſs to him in the Days of King Edward, he had divers Conflicts with Biſhop Gardiner in the City of Wincheſter.

John Philpot Archdeacon of Wincheſter.

After that, having an Advowſon by the ſaid Biſhop, he was made there Archdeacon of Wincheſter under Dr. Poinet, who then ſucceeded Gardiner in that Biſhoprick. Thus he continued during the Time of King Edward, to the great Profit of thoſe Parts thereabouts. When that pious King was taken away, and Mary his Siſter came in Place, whoſe Study was wholly bent to alter the State of Religion in the woful Realm of England, firſt ſhe cauſed a Convocation of the Prelates and learned Men to be aſſembled for the Accompliſhment of her Deſire.

This Dr. Poinet fled into Germany, and there died Anno 1557.

In which Convocation, Mr. Philpot being preſent according to his Room and Degree, with a few others ſuſtained the Cauſe of the Goſpel manfully againſt the contrary Part (as has been already recited) for which Cauſe, notwithſtanding the Liberty of the Houſe promiſed before, he was called to account before Biſhop Gardiner the Chancellor, then being his Ordinary, by whom he was firſt examined, although that Examination came not to our Hands. From thence again he was removed to Biſhop Bonner and other Commiſſioners, with whom he had divers Conflicts, as may appear by the following Examinations.

The firſt Examination of Mr. John Philpot before the Queen's Commiſſioners, Mr. Cholmley, Mr. Roper, and Dr. Story, and one of the Scribes of the Arches, at Newgate Seſſions-Hall, Octob. 2. 1555.

BEFORE I was called into an inner Parlour where the Commiſſioners ſate, Dr. Story came out into the Hall where I was, to view me among others that were there; and paſſing by me, he ſaid, Ha, Mr. Philpot, and in returning immediately again, ſtayed againſt me, beholding me, and ſaying that I was well fed indeed.

Philpot. If I be fat, and in good liking, Mr. Doctor, it is no marvel, ſince I have been ſtalled up in Priſon this twelve Months and a Half in a cloſe Corner. I am come to know your Pleaſure wherefore you have ſent for me.

Story. We hear that thou art a ſuſpected Perſon, and of heretical Opinions, and therefore we have ſent for thee.

Philpot. I have been in Priſon thus long, only upon the Occaſion of Diſputation made in the Convocation-houſe, and upon Suſpicion of ſetting forth the Report thereof.

John Philpot impriſoned for the Diſputation in the Convocation-houſe.

Story. If thou wilt revoke the ſame, and become an honeſt Man, thou ſhalt be ſet at Liberty, and do right well; or elſe thou ſhalt be committed to the Biſhop of London. How ſayſt thou, wilt thou revoke it or no?

Philpot. I have already anſwered in this Behalf to mine Ordinary.

Story. If thou anſwereſt thus when thou comeſt before us anon, thou ſhalt hear more of our Minds; and with that he went into the Parlour, and I within a little while after was called in.

The Scribe. Sir, what is your Name?

Philpot. My Name is John Philpot. And ſo he intituled my Name.

Story. This Man was Archdeacon of Wincheſter, of Dr. Poinet's Preſentment.

Philpot. I was Archdeacon indeed, but none of his Preſentment; but by Virtue of a former Advowſon given by my Lord Chancellor that now is.

Story. Ye may be ſure that my Lord Chancellor would not make any ſuch as he is Archdeacon.

Roper. Come hither to me Mr. Philpot. We hear ſay that you are out of the Catholick Church, and have been a Diſturber of the ſame; out of which whoſo is, he cannot be the Child of Salvation. Wherefore if you will come into the ſame, you ſhall be received and find Favour.

Philpot. I am come before your worſhipful Maſterſhips at your Appointment, underſtanding that you are Magiſtrates authorized by the Queen's Majeſty, whom I own and will do my due Obedience to the uttermoſt. Wherefore I deſire to know what Cauſe I have offended in, for which I am now called before you. And if I cannot be charged with any particular Matter done contrary to the Laws of this Realm, I deſire your Maſterſhips that I may have the Benefit of a Subject, and be delivered out of my long wrongful Impriſonment, where I have lain a Year and a Half, without any Anſwer.

John Philpot a Year and a Half in Priſon before he was called to his Anſwer.

any Calling to anſwer before now, and my Living taken from me without all Law.

Roper. Though we have no particular Matter to charge you withal, yet we may by our Commiſſion and by the Law drive you to anſwer to the Suſpicion of a Slander going on you; and beſides this, we have Statutes to charge you herein withal.

Philpot. If I have offended any Statute, charge me therewithal, and if I have incurred the Penalty thereof, puniſh me accordingly. And becauſe you are Magiſtrates and Executors of the Queen's Majeſty's Laws, by Force whereof you do now ſit, I deſire that if I be found no notorious Tranſgreſſor of any of them, I may not be burdened with more than I have done.

Cholmley. If the Juſtice do ſuſpect a Felon, he may examine him upon Suſpicion thereof, and commit him to Priſon, though there be no Fault done.

Story. I perceive whereabouts this Man goeth; he is plain in Cardmaker's Caſe, for he made the ſame Allegations. But they will not ſerve thee; for thou art an Heretick, and holdeſt againſt the bleſſed Maſs: How ſayeſt thou to that?

Philpot. I am no Heretick.

Story. I will prove thee an Heretick. Whoſoever hath held againſt the bleſſed Maſs, is an Heretick: But thou haſt held againſt the ſame, therefore thou art an Heretick.

Philpot. That which I ſpake, and which you are able to charge me withal, was in the Convocation, where by the Queen's Majeſty's Will and her whole Council, Liberty was given to every Man of the Houſe to utter his Conſcience, and to ſpeak his Mind freely of ſuch Queſtions in Religion, as there were propounded by the Prolocutor; for which now I thought not to be moleſted and impriſoned as I have been, neither now be compelled by you to anſwer for the ſame.

Story. Thou ſhalt go to Lollard's Tower, and be handled there like an Heretick as thou art, and anſwer to the ſame that thou there didſt ſpeak, and be judged by the Biſhop of London.

Philpot. I have already been convented of this Matter before the Lord Chancellor mine Ordinary, who this long Time hath kept me in Priſon; therefore if his Lordſhip will take my Life away, as he hath done my Liberty and Living, he may; which I think he cannot do of his Conſcience, and therefore hath let me lie thus long in Priſon: Wherefore I am content to abide the End of him herein that is mine Ordinary, and do refuſe the Auditory of the Biſhop of London, becauſe he is an incompetent Judge for me, and not mine Ordinary.

Mr. Philpot appealeth to his Ordinary.

Story. But Sir, thou ſpakeſt Words in the Convocation-houſe, which is in the Biſhop of London's Dioceſe, and therefore thou ſhalt be carried to the Lollards Tower, to be judged by him for the Words thou ſpakeſt in his Dioceſe againſt the bleſſed Maſs.

Philpot. Sir, you know it is againſt all Equity, that I ſhould be twice vexed for one Cauſe, and that by ſuch as by the Law have nothing to do with me.

Roper. You cannot deny, but that you ſpake againſt the Maſs in the Convocation-houſe.

Story. Doſt thou deny that which thou ſpakeſt there, or no?

Phil. I cannot deny that I have ſpoken there, and if by the Law you may put me to Death for it, I am here ready to ſuffer whatſoever I ſhall be judged unto. Anno 1555.

The Scribe. This Man is fed of Vain-glory.

Cholmley. Play the wiſe Gentleman and be conformable, and be not ſtubborn in your Opinions, neither caſt yourſelf away. I would be glad to do you good.

Philpot. I deſire you, Sir, with the reſt here, that I be not charged further at your Hands, than the Law chargeth me for that I have done, ſince there was no Law directly againſt that wherewith I am now charged. And you Mr. Doctor (of old Acquaintance in Oxford) I truſt will ſhew me ſome Friendſhip, and not Extremity.

Mr. Philpot charged further by the Commiſſioners than the Law would bear.

Story. I tell thee, if thou wouldſt be a good catholick Man, I would be thy Friend, and ſpend my Gown to do thee good; but I will be no Friend to an Heretick, as thou art, but will ſpend both my Gown and my Coat, but I will burn thee. How ſayeſt thou to the Sacrament of the Altar?

Philpot. Sir, I am not come now to diſpute with your Maſterſhip, and the Time now ſerveth not thereto, but to anſwer to that I may be lawfully charged withal.

Story. Well, ſince thou wilt not revoke that thou haſt done, thou ſhalt be had into the Lollards Tower.

Philpot. Sir, ſince you will needs ſhew me this Extremity, and charge me with my Conſcience, I do deſire to ſee your Commiſſion, whether you have this Authority ſo to do, and after the View thereof I ſhall (according to my Duty) make you further Anſwer, if you may by the Vertue thereof burthen me with my Conſcience.

Mr. Philpot requireth to ſee their Commiſſion.

Roper. Let him ſee the Commiſſion: Is it here?

Story. Shall we let every vile Perſon ſee our Commiſſion?

Cholmley. Let him go from whence he came, and on Thurſday he ſhall ſee our Commiſſion.

Story. No, let him lie in the mean while in the Lollards Tower; for I will ſweep the King's-Bench and all other Priſons alſo of theſe Hereticks, they ſhall not have that Reſort as they have had, to ſcatter their Hereſies.

Philpot. You have Power to transfer my Body from Place to Place at your Pleaſure; but you have no Power over my Soul. And I mind not whither you commit me, for I cannot be worſe intreated than I am, kept all Day in a cloſe Chamber: Wherefore it is no Marvel that my Fleſh is puft up, wherewithal Mr. Doctor is offended.

Story. Marſhal, take him home with you again, and ſee that you bring him again on Thurſday, and then we ſhall rid your Fingers of him, and afterward of your other Hereticks.

Philpot. God hath appointed a Day ſhortly to come, in which he will judge us with Righteouſneſs, howſoever you judge of us now.

Roper. Be content to be ruled by Mr. Doctor, and ſhew yourſelf a catholick Man.

Philpot. Sir, if I ſhould ſpeak otherwiſe than my Conſcience is, I ſhould but diſſemble with you: And why be you ſo earneſt to have me ſhew myſelf a Diſſembler both to God and you, which I cannot do?

Mr. Philpot will not diſſemble againſt his Conſcience.

Roper. We do not require you to diſſemble with us to be a catholick Man.

Philpot. If I do ſtand in any Thing againſt that Anno 1555. that, wherein any Man is able to burthen me with one Jot of the Scripture, I ſhall be content to be counted no catholick Man, or an Heretick, as you pleaſe.

Story. Have we Scripture, Scripture? and with that he roſe up, ſaying; who ſhall be Judge, I pray you? This Man is like his Fellow Woodman, which the other Day would have nothing elſe but Scripture. And this is the Beginning of this Tragedy.

The ſecond Examination of Mr. Philpot before the Queen's Commiſſioners, Mr. Cholmley, Mr. Roper, Dr. Story, Dr. Cook, and the Scribe, October 24. 1555. at Newgate-Seſſions Hall.

AT my Coming, a Man of Aldgate of mine Acquaintance ſaid unto me, God have Mercy on you, for you are already condemned in this World; for Dr. Story ſaid, that my Lord Chancellor had commanded to do you away. After a little Conſultation had between them, Mr. Cholmley called me unto him, ſaying:

Cholmley. Mr. Philpot, ſhew yourſelf a wiſe Man, and be not ſtubborn in your own Opinion, but be conformable to the Queen's Proceedings, and live, and you ſhall be well aſſured of great Favour and Reputation.

Philpot. I ſhall do as it becometh a chriſtian Man to do.

Story. This Man is the rankeſt Heretick that hath been in all my Lord Chancellor's Dioceſe, and hath done more Hurt than any Man elſe there: And therefore his Pleaſure is, that he ſhould have the Law to proceed againſt him, and I have ſpoken with my Lord herein, and he willeth him to be committed to the Biſhop of London, and there to recant or elſe burn. He howled and wept in the Convocation-houſe, and made ſuch ado as never Man did, as all the Hereticks do when they lack Learning to anſwer. He ſhall go after his Fellows. How ſayeſt thou, wilt thou recant?

Philpot. I know nothing I have done that I ought to recant.

Story. Well; then I pray you let us commit him to the Lollards Tower, there to remain until he be further examined before the Biſhop of London; for he is too fine fed in the King's-Bench, and he hath too much Favour there; for his Keeper ſaid at the Door yeſterday, that he was the fineſt Fellow, and one of the beſt learned in England: And with this he roſe up and went his Way.

Cook. This Man hath moſt ſtoutly maintained Hereſies ſince the Queen's coming in, above any that I have heard of; therefore it is moſt meet he ſhould be adjudged by the Biſhop of London, for the Hereſies he hath maintained.

Philpot. I have maintained no Hereſies.

Cook. No, have you not? Did you not openly ſpeak againſt the Sacrament of the Altar in the Convocation-houſe? Call you that no Hereſy? Wilt thou recant that or not?

Philpot. It was the Queen's Majeſty's Pleaſure that we ſhould reaſon thereof, not by my ſeeking, but by other Mens procuring, in the Hearing of the Council.

Cook. Did the Queen give you Leave to be an Heretick? you may be ſure her Grace will not ſo do. Well, we will not diſpute the Matter with you; my Lord of London ſhall proceed by Inquiſition upon thee, and if thou wilt not recant, thou ſhalt be burned.

Philpot. My Lord of London is not mine Ordinary in this Behalf, and I have already anſwered unto mine Ordinary in this Matter; and therefore (as I have ſaid before) you ſhall do me great Wrong, to vex me twice for one Matter, ſince I have ſuſtained this long Impriſonment, beſides the Loſs of my Living.

Roper. You were a very unmeet Man to be an Archdeacon.

Philpot. I know I was as meet a Man as he that hath it now.

Cook. A meet Man, quoth he? He troubled Mr. Roper and the whole Country.

Philpot. There was never poor Archdeacon ſo handled at your Hands as I am, and that without any juſt Cauſe ye be able to lay unto me.

Cook. Thou art no Archdeacon.

Philpot. I am Archdeacon ſtill, although another be in Poſſeſſion of my Living; for I was never deprived by any Law.

Mr. Philpot deprived of his Archdeaconry without any Law.

Cook. No Sir, that needeth not: For a notorious Heretick ſhould have no ordinary Proceeding about his Deprivation; but the Biſhop may upon Knowledge thereof proceed to Deprivation.

Philpot. Mr. Doctor, you know that the common Law is otherwiſe: And beſides this, the Statutes of this Realm be otherwiſe, which give this Benefit to every Perſon, though he be an Heretick, to enjoy his Living until he be put to Death for the ſame.

Cholmley. No, there thou art deceived.

Philpot. Upon the Living I mind not. But the unjuſt Dealing grieveth me, that I ſhould be thus troubled for my Conſcience, contrary to all Law.

Cholmley. Why, will not you agree that the Queen's Majeſty may cauſe you to be examined of your Faith?

Philpot. Ask you Mr. Dr. Cook, and he will tell you that the temporal Magiſtrates have nothing to do with Matters of Faith, for Determination thereof. And St. Ambroſe ſaith, that the Things of God are not ſubject to the Power and Authority of Princes.

Cook. No? may not the temporal Power commit you to be examined of your Faith to the Biſhop?

Philpot. Yea Sir. I deny not that; but you will not grant that the ſame may examine any of their own Authority.

Cook. Let him be had away.

Philpot. Your Maſterſhip promiſed me the laſt Time I was before you, I ſhould ſee your Commiſſion by what Authority you do call me, and whether I by the ſame be bound to anſwer to ſo much as you demand.

Mr. Philpot again requireth to ſee their Commiſſion, and yet it could not be ſeen, and that alſo againſt the Law.

Roper. Let him ſee the Commiſſion.

The Scribe. Then he exhibited it to Mr. Roper, and was about to open the ſame.

Cook. No, what will ye do? He ſhall not ſee it.

Philpot. Then do you me Wrong, to call me and vex me, not ſhewing your Authority in this Behalf.

Cook. If we do you Wrong, complain on us; and in the mean while thou ſhalt lie in the Lollards Tower.

Philpot. Sir, I am a poor Gentleman; therefore I truſt of your Gentleneſs you will not commit me to ſo vile and ſtraight a Place, Place, being found no heinous Treſpaſſer.

Cook. Thou art no Gentleman.

Philpot. Yes, that I am.

Cook. An Heretick is no Gentleman: For he is a Gentleman that hath gentle Conditions.

Philqot. The Offence cannot take away the State of a Gentleman as long as he liveth, although he were a Traytor: But I mean not to boaſt of my Gentlemanſhip, but will put it under my Foot, ſince you do no more eſteem it.

Story. What will you ſuffer this Heretick to prate with you all this Day?

Cook. He ſaith he is a Gentleman.

Story. A Gentleman, ſaid he? he is a vile Heretick Knave: For an Heretick is no Gentleman. Let the Keeper of Lollard's Tower come in and have him away.

Keeper. Here Sir.

Mr. Philpot commanded to Lollard's-Tower by Dr. Story.

Story. Take this Man with you, to the Lollard's Tower, or elſe to the Biſhop's Cole-houſe.

Philpot. Sir, if I were a Dog you could not appoint mè a worſe and more vile Place: But I muſt be content with whatſoever Injury you do offer me. God give you a more merciful Heart; you are very cruel upon one that hath never offended you. I pray you Mr. Cholmley, ſhew me ſome Friendſhip that I be not carried to ſo vile a Place. And he called me aſide, and ſaid:

Cholmley. I neither underſtand their Doings nor their Laws; I cannot tell what they mean. I would I could do you good.

Philpot. I am content to go whither you will have me. There was never Man more cruelly handled than I am at your Hands, that without juſt Cauſe known ſhould thus be intreated.

Story. Shall we ſuffer this Heretick thus to reprove us? Have him hence.

Philpot. God forgive you, and give you more merciful Hearts, and ſhew you more Mercy in the Time of need; Do quickly that which you have in Hand.

Stoty. Do you not hear how he maketh us like Judas?

Philpot. That is after your own Underſtanding.

After this, I with four others were brought to the Keeper's Houſe in Pater-noſter-row, where we ſupped, and after Supper I was called up to a Chamber by the Archdeacon of London's Servant, and that in his Maſter's Name, who offered me a Bed for that Night. To whom I gave Thanks, ſaying, That it would be a Grief to me to lie one Night well, and the next Night worſe: Wherefore I will begin (ſaid I) as I am like to continue, to take ſuch Part as my Fellows do. And with that we were brought through Pater-noſter-row to my Lord of London's Coal-houſe; unto which is joined a little blind Houſe, with a great Pair of Stocks, appointed both for Hand and Foot: But Thanks be to God we have not played of thoſe Organs yet, although ſome fore us have tried them, and there we found a Miniſter of Eſſex, a married Prieſt, a Man of godly Zeal, with one other poor Man. And this Miniſter at my coming deſired to ſpeak with me, and did greatly lament his own Infirmity, for that that though Extremity of Impriſonment he was conſtrained by writing to yield to the Biſhop of London: Whereupon he was once ſet at Liberty, and afterward felt ſuch a Hell in his Conſcience, that he could ſcarce refrain from deſtroying himſelf, and never could be at quiet until he went to the Biſhop's Regiſter, deſiring to ſee his Bill again; which as ſoon as he had received, he tore it in Pieces, and after he was as joyful as any Man might be. Of which when my Lord of London had underſtanding, he ſent for him, and fell upon him like a Lion, and likely a manly Biſhop buffeted him well, ſo that he made his Face Black and Blue, and pluckt away a great Piece of his Beard: But now, Thanks be to God, he is as joyful under the Croſs as any of us, and very ſorry for his former Infirmity. I write this, becauſe I would all Men to take heed how they do contrary to their Conſcience; which is, to fall into the Pains of Hell. And here an End.

Anno 1555.

Bp. Bonner pluck'd away a great Part of Whittle's Beard, and made his Face Black and Blue.

Mr. Philpot laid in Biſhop Bonner's Coal-houſe.

This good Man was T. Whittle whoſe Story followeth.

Examples what an unquiet Conſcience doth.

The Manner of my being called firſt before the Biſhop of London, the ſecond Night of mine Impriſonment in his Coal-houſe.

THE Biſhop ſent Mr. Johnſon his Regiſter to me with a Meſs of Meat, and a good Pot of Drink and Bread, ſaying, That my Lord had no Knowledge before of my being here, for which he was ſorry: Therefore he had ſent me and my Fellows that Meat, knowing whether I would receive the ſame.

Biſhop Bonner's Charity ſent to Mr. Philpot.

I thanked God for my Lord's Charity, that it pleaſed him to remember poor Priſoners, deſiring Almighty God to increaſe the ſame in him, and in all others; and therefore I would not refuſe his Beneficence, and therewith took the ſame unto my Brethren, praiſing God for his Providence towards his afflicted Flock, that he ſtirred our Adverſaries up to help the ſame in their Neceſſity.

Johnſon. My Lord would know the Cauſe of your being ſent hither (for he knoweth nothing thereof) and wondereth that he ſhould be troubled with Priſoners that are not of his own Dioceſs.

Philpot. I declared unto him the whole Cauſe. After which he ſaid, My Lord's Will was, that I ſhould have any Friendſhip I would deſire, and ſo departed.

Within a while after one of my Lord's Gentlemen came for me; and I was brought into his Preſence, where he ſate at a Table with three or four of his Chaplains waiting upon him, and his Regiſter.

Bonner. Mr. Philpot, you are welcome; give me your Hand.

With that, becauſe he ſo gently put forth his Hand, I to render Courteſy for Courteſy, kiſſed my Hand and gave him the ſame.

Bonner. I am right ſorry for your Trouble, and I promiſe you before it was within theſe two Hours, I knew not of your being here. I pray you tell me what was the Cauſe of your ſending hither; for I promiſe you I know nothing thereof as yet, neither would I you ſhould think that I was the Cauſe thereof: And I marvel that other Men will trouble me with their Matters; but I muſt be obedient to my Betters, and I fear Men ſpeak otherwiſe of me than I deſerve.

Bonner made the common Inquiſitor againſt his Will.

Philpot. I ſhewed him the Sum of the Matter; that it was for the Diſputation in the Convocation-houſe, for which I was againſt all Right moleſted.

Bonner. I marvel that you ſhould be troubled bled for that, if there was none other Cauſe but this. But peradventure you have maintained the ſame ſince, and ſome of your Friends of late have asked, whether you do ſtand to the ſame, and you have ſaid, yea; and for this you might be committed to Priſon.

Philpot. If it ſhall pleaſe your Lordſhip I am burdened no otherwiſe than I have told you, by the Commiſſioners who ſent me hither, becauſe I would not recant the ſame.

Bonner. A Man may ſpeak in the Parliament Houſe, though it be a Place of free Speech, ſo as he may be impriſoned for it, as in caſe he ſpeak Words of High-treaſon againſt the King or Queen; and ſo it might be that you ſpake otherwiſe than it became you of the Church of Chriſt.

Philpot. I ſpake nothing which was out of the Articles which were called in Queſtion, and agreed upon to be diſputed by the whole Houſe, and by Permiſſion of the Queen and Council.

Bonner. Why, may we diſpute of our Faith?

Philpot. That we may.

Bonner. Nay, I think not, by the Law.

Philpot. Indeed by the Civil Law I know it is not lawful, but by God's Law we may reaſon thereof. For St. Peter ſaith, 1 Pet. 5. Be ye ready to render Account unto all Men of the Hope which is in you, that demand of you the ſame.

Bonner. Indeed St. Peter ſaith ſo. Why, then I ask of you what your Judgment is of the Sacrament of the Altar.

No Man is bound to render an Account of his Faith privately, unleſs it be to edify.

Philpot. My Lord, St. Ambroſe ſaith, that the Diſputation of Faith ought to be in the Congregation, in the hearing of the People, and that I am not bound to render Account thereof to every Man privately, unleſs it be to edify. But now I cannot ſhew you my Mind, but I muſt run upon the Pikes in danger of my Life for it. Wherefore as the ſaid Doctor ſaid unto Valentinian the Emperor, ſo ſay I to your Lordſhip; Take away the Law, and I ſhall reaſon with you. And yet if I come in open Judgment, where I am bound by the Law to anſwer, I truſt I ſhall utter my Conſcience as freely as any that hath come before you.

Bonner. I perceive you are learned, I would have ſuch as you be about me. But you muſt come and be of the Church, for there is but one Church.

Philpot. God forbid I ſhould be out of the Church, I am ſure I am within the ſame: For I know as I am taught by the Scripture, that there is but one catholick Church, one Dove, one Spouſe, one beloved Congregation, out of which there is no Salvation.

Bonner. How chanceth it then, that you go out of the ſame, and walk not with us?

Philpot. My Lord, I am ſure I am within the Bounds of the Church whereupon ſhe is built, which is the Word of God.

Bonner. What Age are ye of?

Philpot. I am Four and Forty.

The Faith promiſed by his God-fathers was the Faith of Chriſt, after his Creed only.

Bonner. You are not now of the ſame Faith your Godfathers and Godmothers promiſed for you, in which you were baptized.

Philpot. Yes, I thank God I am: For I was baptized into the Faith of Chriſt which I now hold.

Bonner. How can that be? there is but one Faith.

Philpot. I am aſſured of that by St. Paul, ſaying, There is but one God, one Faith, and one Baptiſm, of which I am.

Bonner. You were twenty Years ago of another Faith than you be now.

Philpot. Indeed my Lord, to tell you plain, I was then of no Faith, a Neuter, a wicked Liver, neither hot nor cold.

Bonner. Why, do you not think that we have now the true Faith?

Philpot. I deſire your Lordſhip to hold me excuſed for anſwering at this Time. I am ſure that God's Word throughly with the primitive Church, and all the antient Fathers do agree with this Faith I am of.

Bonner. Well I promiſe you I mean you no more hurt than to mine own Perſon: I will not therefore burthen you with your Conſcience as now; I marvel that you are ſo merry in Priſon as you be, ſinging and rejoycing, as the Prophet ſaith, Rejoycing in your Naugtineſs. Methinketh you do not well herein; you ſhould rather lament and be ſorry.

And why then began you ſo haſtily with him in the Sacrament of your Altars.

Philpot. My Lord, the Mirth that we make is but in ſinging certain Pſalms, according as we are commanded by St. Paul, willing us to be merry in the Lord, ſinging together in Hymns and Pſalms: And I truſt your Lordſhip cannot be diſpleaſed with that.

Bonner offended with John Philpot's ſinging in Priſon.

Bonner. We may ſay unto you as Chriſt ſaid in the Goſpel, Matth. 11. 17. We have piped unto you, and ye have not danced.——

Here my Lord ſtumbled, and could not bring forth the Text, and required his Chaplains to help, and to put him in Remembrance of the Text better; but they were mum: And I recited out the Text unto him, which made nothing to his Purpoſe, unleſs he would have us to mourn, becauſe they, if they laugh, ſing ſtill ſorrowful Things unto us, threatning Faggots and Fire.

Philpot. We are, my Lord, in a dark comfortleſs Place, and therefore it behoveth us to be merry, leſt, as Solomon ſaith, Sorrowfulneſs eat up our Heart. Therefore I truſt your Lordſhip will not be angry for our ſinging of Pſalms, ſince St. Paul ſaith, If any Man be of an upright Mind, let him ſing. And we therefore, to teſtify that we are of an upright Mind to God, (though we be in Miſery) do ſing.

Bonner. I will trouble you no farther as now. If I can do you any good, I ſhall be glad to do it for you. God be with you, good Mr. Philpot, and give you a good Night. Have him to the Cellar, and let him drink a Cup of Wine.

Thus I departed, and by my Lord's Regiſter I was brought to his Cellar Door, where I drank a good Cup of Wine. And my Lord's Chaplain Mr. Couſin followed me, taking Acquaintance, ſaying, that I was welcome, and wiſhed that I would not be ſingular.

Philpot. I am well taught the contrary by Solomon, ſaying, Wo be to him that is alone. After that I was carry'd to my Lord's Coalhouſe again, where I with my ſix Companions do rouſe together as in Straw chearfully (we thank God) as others do in their Beds of Down.

Thus for the third Fit.

The fourth Examination of Mr. Philpot in the Archdeacon of London's Houſe, in the Month of October, before the Biſhops of London, Bath, Worceſter, and Glouceſter.

BONNER. Mr. Philpot, it hath pleaſed my Lords to take Pains here to Day, to dine with my poor Archdeacon, and in the Dinner-time it chanced us to have Communication of you, and you were pity'd here by many that knew you at New College in Oxford: And I alſo do pity your Caſe, becauſe you ſeem unto me by the Talk I had with you the other Night, to be learned: And therefore now I have ſent for you to come before them, that it might not be ſaid hereafter, that I had ſo many learned Biſhops at my Houſe, and yet would not vouchſafe them to talk with you, and at my Requeſt (I thank them) they are content ſo to do. Now therefore utter your Mind freely, and you ſhall with all Favour be ſatisfy'd. I am ſorry to ſee you lie in ſo Evil a Caſe as you do, and would fain you ſhould do better, as you may if you pleaſe.

Bath. My Lords here have not ſent for you to fawn upon you, but for Charity ſake to exhort you to come into the right catholick Way of the Church.

Worceſter. Before he beginneth to ſpeak, it is beſt that he call to God for Grace, and to pray that it might pleaſe God to open his Heart, that he may conceive the Truth.

Philpot. With that I fell down upon my Knees before them, and made my Prayer on this Manner:

Almighty God, which art the Giver of all Wiſdom and Underſtanding, I beſeech thee of thine infinite Goodneſs and Mercy in Jeſus Chriſt, to give me (moſt vile Sinner in thy Sight) the Spirit of Wiſdom to ſpeak and make Anſwer in thy Cauſe, that it may be to the Contentation of the Hearers, before whom I ſtand, and alſo to my better Underſtanding if I be deceived in any Thing.

Bonner. Nay, my Lord of Worceſter, you did not well to exhort him to make any Prayer. For this is the Thing they have a ſingular Pride in, that they can often make their vain Prayers in which they glory much. For in this Point they are much like to certain arrant Hereticks, of whom Pliny maketh Mention, that did daily ſing Praiſe unto God before dawning of the Day.

Bp. Bonner here ſeemeth more skilful in his Law, than in Church Hiſtory.

Philpot. My Lord, God make me and all you here preſent ſuch Hereticks as thoſe were that ſung thoſe Morning Hymns: For they were right Chriſtians, with whom the Tyrants of the World were offended for their well doing.

Bath. Proceed to what he hath to ſay. He hath pray'd I cannot tell for what.

Bonner. Say on Mr. Philpot; my Lords will gladly hear you.

Philpot. I have, my Lords, been this Twelvemonth and a Half in Priſon without any juſt Cauſe that I know, and my Living taken from me without any lawful Order, and now I am brought (contrary to right) from my own Territory and Ordinary, into another Man's Juriſdiction, I know not why. Wherefore, if your Lordſhips can burden me with any Evil done, I ſtand here before you to purge me of the ſame. And if no ſuch Thing may be juſtly laid to my Charge, I deſire to be releaſed of this wrongful Trouble. Anno 1555.

Bonner. There is none here that goeth about to trouble you, but to do you good, if we can. For I promiſe you, ye were ſent hither to me without my Knowledge. Therefore ſpeak your Conſcience without any Fear.

Philpot. My Lord, I have learned to anſwer in Matters of Religion in the Congregation, being thereto lawfully called: But now I am not lawfully called, neither is here a juſt Congregation where I ought to anſwer.

Bonner. Indeed this Man told me the laſt Time I ſpake with him, that he was a Lawyer, and would not utter his Conſcience in Matters of Faith, unleſs it were in the hearing of the People, where he might ſpeak to vain-glory.

Philpot. My Lord, I ſaid not I was a Lawyer, neither do I arrogate to myſelf that Name, although I was a Novice in the ſame, where I learn'd ſomething for mine own Defence, when I am called in Judgment to anſwer to any Cauſe, and whereby I have been taught not to put myſelf further in Danger than I need, and ſo far am I a Lawyer, and no farther.

Bath. If you will not anſwer to my Lord's Requeſt, you ſeem to be a wilful Man in your Opinion. Wilful; becauſe he will not wilfully put himſelf in the Wolf's Mouth.

Philpot. My Lord of London is not mine Ordinary before whom I am bound to anſwer in this Behalf, as Mr. D. Cole (who is a Lawyer) can well tell you by the Law. And I have not offended my Lord of London wherefore he ſhould call me.

Bonner. Yes, I have to lay to your Charge, that you have offended in my Dioceſs by ſpeaking againſt the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar: And therefore I may call you, and proceed againſt you to puniſh you by the Law. This Offence was ſpeaking in Convocation, where every one had a right to ſpeak his Mind freely.

Philpot. I have not offended in your Dioceſs. For that which I ſpake of the Sacrament was in Paul's Church in the Convocation-houſe, which (as I underſtand) is a peculiar Juriſdiction belonging to the Dean of Paul's, and therefore is counted of your Lordſhip's Dioceſs, but not in your Dioceſs.

Bonner. Is not Paul's Church in my Dioceſs? Well, I think it coſteth me a good deal of Money by the Year, the Leading thereof.

Philpot. That may be, and yet be exempted from your Lordſhip's Juriſdiction. And albeit I had ſo offended in your Dioceſs, yet I ought by the Law to be ſent to my Ordinary, if I require it, and not to be puniſhed by you that are not mine Ordinary. And already (as I have told you) I have been convented of mine Ordinary for this Cauſe, which you go about to enquire of me.

Bonner. How ſay you Mr. D. Cole, may not I proceed againſt him by the Law, for that he hath done in my Dioceſs?

Cole. Me thinketh Mr. Philpot needeth not to ſtand ſo much with your Lordſhip in that Point as he doth, ſince you ſeek not to hinder him, but to further him: Therefore I think it beſt that he go to the Matter that is laid againſt him of the Convocation, and make no longer Delay.

Philpot. I would willingly ſhew my Mind of the Matter, but I am ſure it will be laid againſt me to my Prejudice when I come to Judgment.

Cole.

Anno 1555.

Cole. Why then you may ſpeak by Proteſtation.

Philpot. But what ſhall my Proteſtation avail in a Cauſe of Hereſy (as you call it) if I ſpeak otherwiſe than you will have me; ſince that which I ſpake in the Convocation-houſe, being a Place privileged, cannot now help me?

Bonner. But Mr. D. Cole, may not I proceed againſt him for that Offence he hath done in my Dioceſs?

Cole. You may call him before you my Lord, if he be found in your Dioceſs.

Philpot. But I have by Force been brought out of mine own Dioceſs to my Lord's, and required to be judged of mine own Ordinary: And therefore I know Mr. Doctor will not ſay of his own Knowledge, that your Lordſhip ought to proceed againſt me. And here Mr. Doctor would ſay nothing.

Worceſter. Do you not think to find before my Lord here as good Equity in your Cauſe, as before your own Ordinary?

Philpot. I cannot blame my Lord of London's Equity, with whom (I thank his Lordſhip) I have found more Gentleneſs ſince I came, than of mine own Ordinary (I ſpeak it for no Flattery) this Year and a Half before, who never would call me to anſwer, as his Lorſhip hath done now twice. No Man is forbid to uſe his own right due unto him; but I ought not to be foreſtalled of my right, and therefore I challenge the ſame for divers other Conſiderations.

Bonner. Now you cannot ſay hereafter, but that you have been gently communed withal of my Lords here, and yet you will be wilful and obſtinate in your Error, and in your own Opinions, and will not ſhew any Cauſe why you will not come into the Unity of the Church with us.

Philpot. My Lords, in that I do not declare my Mind according to your Expectations, is (as I have ſaid) becauſe I cannot ſpeak without preſent Danger of my Life. But rather than you ſhould report me by this either obſtinate or ſelf-willed without any juſt Ground whereupon I ſtand; I will open unto you ſomewhat of my Mind, or rather the whole, deſiring your Lordſhips, which ſeem to be Pillars of the Church of England, to ſatisfy me in the ſame: And I will refer all other Cauſes in which I diſſent from you, unto one or two Articles, or rather to one, which includeth them both; in which if I can by the Scriptures be ſatisfy'd at your Mouths, I ſhall as willingly agree to you as any other in all Points.

Bonner. Theſe Hereticks come always with their Ifs, as this Man doth now, ſaying, If he can be ſatisfied by the Scriptures: So that he will always have this Exception, I am not ſatisfied, although the Matter be never ſo plainly proved againſt him. But will you promiſe to be ſatisfied, if my Lords take ſome Pains about you?

Nay rather, theſe catholick Prelates will be ſatisfy'd with no reaſonable Offer.

Philpot. I ſay, my Lord, I will be ſatisfied by the Scriptures in that wherein I ſtand. And I proteſt here before God and his eternal Son Jeſus Chriſt my Saviour, and the Holy Ghoſt, and his Angels, and you here preſent that be Judges of that I ſpeak, that I do not ſtand in any Opinion of Wilfulneſs or Singularity, but only upon my Conſcience, certainly informed by God's Word, from which I dare not go for fear of Damnation: And this is the Cauſe of mine Earneſtneſs in this Behalf.

Bonner. I will trouble my Lords no longer, ſeeing that you will not declare your Mind.

Philpot. I am about ſo to do, if it pleaſe your Lordſhip to hear me ſpeak.

Bath. Give him Leave, my Lord, to ſpeak that he hath to ſay.

Philpot. My Lords, it is not unknown to you, that the chief Cauſe why you do count me, and ſuch as I am, for Hereticks, is becauſe we be not at Unity with your Church. You ſay you are of the true Church; and we ſay we are of the true Church. You ſay, that whoſoever is out of your Church, is damned: And we think verily on the other Side, that if we depart from the true Church, whereon we are grafted in God's Word, we ſhould ſtand in the State of Damnation. Wherefore if your Lordſhip can bring any better Authority for your Church than we can do for ours, and prove by the Scriptures that the Church of Rome now (of which you are) is the true catholick Church, as in all your Sermons, Writings and Arguments you do uphold, and that all chriſtian Perſons ought to be ruled by the ſame under the Pain of Damnation, (as you ſay) and that the ſame Church (as you pretend) hath Authority to interpret the Scriptures as it ſeemeth her good, and that all Men are bound to follow ſuch Interpretations only; I ſhall be as conformable to the ſame Church as you may deſire me, which otherwiſe I dare not; Therefore I require you for God's ſake to ſatisfy me in this.

The chiefeſt Controverſy in the Church of Chriſt now, is to know which is the true Church of Chriſt.

Cole. If you ſtand upon this Point only, you may ſoon be ſatisfied if you pleaſe.

Philpot. It is the Thing that I require, and to this I have ſaid I will ſtand, and refer all other Controverſies wherein I ſtand now againſt you, and will put my Hand thereto, if you miſtruſt my Word.

Bonner. I pray you Mr. Philpot, what Faith were you of twenty Years ago? This Man will have every Year a new Faith.

St. Paul 20 Years before his Converſion, and St. Peter before his Calling, was of another Faith than they were afterward; and yet it followed not that they would have every Year a new Faith.

Philpot. My Lord, to tell you plain. I think I was of no Faith, for I was then a wicked Liver, and knew not God then as I ought to do, God forgive me.

Bonner. No Faith? that is not ſo. I am ſure you were of ſome Faith.

Philpot. My Lord, I have declared to you on my Conſcience what I then was, and judge of myſelf. And what is that to the Purpoſe of the Thing I deſire to be ſatisfied of you?

Bonner. Mr. Dr. Cole, I pray you ſpeak your Mind to him.

Cole. What will you ſay, if I can prove that it was decreed by an univerſal Council in Athanaſius's Time, that all the chriſtian Church ſhould follow the Determination of the Church of Rome? but I do not now remember where.

Athanaſius miſalledged.

Philpot. If you Mr. Doctor can ſhew me the ſame granted to the See of Rome by the Authority of the Scripture, I will gladly hearken thereto. But I think you be not able to ſhew any ſuch Thing: For Athanaſius was Preſident of the Nicene Council, and there was no ſuch Thing decreed I am ſure.

Cole. Though it were not then, it might be at another Time.

Philpot. I deſire to ſee the Proof thereof.

And upon this Mr. Harpsfield, Chancellor to the Biſhop of London, brought in a Book of Irenæus, with certain Leaves turned in, and laid it before the Biſhops to help them in their Perplexity, if it might be: Which after the Biſhops of Bath and Glouceſter had read together, the

the Biſhop of Glouceſter gave me the Book, and ſaid:

Take the Book, Mr. Philpot, and look upon that Place, and there may you ſee how the Church of Rome is to be followed by all Men.

Philpot. I took the Book and read the Place, which after I had read, I ſaid it made nothing againſt me, but againſt the Arians and other Hereticks, againſt whom Irenæus wrote, proving that they were not to be credited, becauſe they did teach and follow after ſtrange Doctrine in Europe, and that the chief Church of the ſame was founded by Peter and Paul, and had to this Time continued by faithful Succeſſion of the faithful Biſhops in preaching the true Goſpel, as they had received of the Apoſtles, and nothing like to theſe late ſprung Hereticks, &c. Whereby he concludeth againſt them, that they were not to be heard, neither to be credited, which Thing if you my Lords be able to prove now of the Church of Rome, then had you as good Authority againſt me in my Cauſe now, as Irenæus had againſt thoſe Hereticks. But the Church of Rome hath ſwerved from the Truth and Simplicity of the Goſpel, which it maintained in Irenæus's Time, and was uncorrupted from that which it is now, wherefore your Lordſhip cannot juſtly apply the Authority of Irenæus to the Church of Rome now, which is ſo manifeſtly corrupted from the primitive Church.

Bonner. So will you ſay ſtill it maketh nothing to the Purpoſe, whatſoever Authority we bring, and will never be ſatisfied.

Philpot. My Lord, when I do by juſt Reaſon prove, that the Authorities which are brought againſt me do not make to the Purpoſe, as I have already proved, I truſt you will receive mine Anſwer.

Worceſter. It is to be proved moſt manifeſtly by all ancient Writers; that the See of Rome hath always followed the Truth, and never was deceived, until of late certain Hereticks had defaced the ſame.

The Church of Rome never deceived.

Philpot. Let that be proved, and I have done.

Worceſter. Nay, you are of ſuch Arrogancy, Singularity, and Vain-glory, that you will not ſee it be it never ſo well proved.

Philpot. Ha, my Lords, is it now Time, think you, for me to follow Singularity or Vain-glory, ſince it is now upon Danger of my Life and Death, not only preſently, but alſo before God to come? And I know, If I die not in the true Faith, I ſhall die everlaſtingly: And again I know, if I do not as you would have me, you will kill me and many thouſands more: yet had I rather periſh at your Hands, than to periſh eternally. And at this Time I have loſt all my Commodities of this World, and lie in a Coal-houſe, where a Man would not lay a Dog, with which I am well contented.

Cole. Where are you able to prove that the Church of Rome hath erred at any Time? and by what Hiſtory? Certain it is by Euſebius, that the Church was eſtabliſhed at Rome by Peter and Paul, and that Peter was Biſhop 25 Years at Rome.

I find not in Euſebius that Peter was Biſhop of Rome 25 Years.

Philpot. I know well that Euſebius ſo writeth: But if we compare that which St. Paul writeth to the Galatians, Chap. 1. the contrary will manifeſtly appear, that he was not half ſo long there. He lived not paſt 35 Years after he was called to be an Apoſtle: And St. Paul maketh mention of his abiding at Jeruſalem after Chriſt's Death more than 13 Years. Anno 1555.

Cole. What, did Peter write to the Galatians?

Philpot. No, I ſay Paul maketh mention of Peter, writing to the Galatians, and of his abiding at Jeruſalem: And further, I am able to prove, both by Euſebius and other Hiſtoriographers, that the Church of Rome hath manifeſtly erred, and at this preſent doth err, becauſe ſhe agreeth not with that which they wrote. The primitive Church did uſe according to the Goſpel, and there needeth none other Proof, but compare the one with the other.

Bonner. I may compare this Man to a certain Man I read of, who fell into a Deſparation, and went into a Wood to hang himſelf, and when he came there, he went viewing of every Tree, and could find none on which he might vouchſafe to hang himſelf. But I will not apply it as I might. I pray you (Mr. Doctor) go forth with him.

Obſerve my Lord's wiſe Parable.

Cole. My Lord, there be on every Side of me ſome who are better able to anſwer him, and I love not to fall into Diſputation: For that now-a-days a Man ſhall but ſuſtain Shame and Obloquy thereby of the People. I had rather ſhew my Mind in writing.

Neither you nor they are able in this Caſe.

Philpot. And I had rather you ſhould do ſo than otherwiſe, for then a Man may better judge of your Words, than by Argument, and I beſeech you ſo to do. But if I were a rich Man, I durſt wager an hundred Pounds, that you ſhall not be able to ſhew that you have ſaid, to be decreed by a general Council in Athanaſius's Time. For this I am ſure of, that it was concluded by a general Council in Africa many Years, that none of Africa (under pain of Excommunication) ſhould appeal to Rome: Which Decree I am ſure they would not have made, if by the Scriptures and by an univerſal Council it had been decreed, that all Men ſhould abide and follow the Determination of the Church of Rome.

Cole. But I can ſhew that they revoked that Error again.

Philpot. So you ſay, Mr. Doctor, but I pray you ſhew me where. I have hitherto heard nothing from you to my Satisfaction, but bare Words without any Authority.

Bonner. What I pray you, ought we to diſpute with you of your Faith? Juſtinian in the Law hath a Title, De fide Catholica, to the contrary.

Philpot. I am certain the Civil Law hath ſuch a Conſtitution: But our Faith muſt not depend upon the Civil Law. For as St. Ambroſe ſaith, Not the Law, but the Goſpel hath gathered the Church together.

Worceſter. Mr. Philpot, you have the Spirit of Pride wherewith ye be led, which will not let you yield to the Truth: Leave it for Shame.

Philpot. Sir, I am ſure I have the Spirit of Faith, by which I ſpeak at this preſent; neither am I aſhamed to ſtand to my Faith.

Glouceſter. What? do you think yourſelf better learned than ſo many notable learned Men as be here?

Philpot. Elias alone had the Truth, when there were four hundred Prieſts againſt him.

Worceſter. Oh, you would be counted now for Elias. And yet I tell thee he was deceived: For he thought there had been none good but himſelf himſelf; and yet he was deceived, for there were ſeven thouſand beſide him.

Philpot. Yea, but he was not deceived in Doctrine, as the other four hundred were.

Worceſter. By my Faith you are greatly to blame, that you cannot be content to be of the Church, which ever hath been of that faithful Antiquity.

Philpot. My Lord, I know Rome, and have been there, where I ſaw your Lordſhip.

A good Commendation for Rome by a Romaniſt.

Worceſter. Indeed I did fly from hence thither, and I remember not that I ſaw you there. But I am ſorry that you have been there; for the Wickedneſs which you have ſeen there, peradventure cauſeth you to do as you do.

Philpot. No, my Lord, I do not as I do for that Cauſe: For I am taught otherwiſe by the Goſpel, not altogether to refuſe the Miniſter for his evil Living, ſo that he bring ſound Doctrine out of God's Book.

Worceſter. Do you think the univerſal Church may be deceived?

Philpot. St. Paul to the Theſſalonians propheſieth, that there ſhould come an univerſal Departing from the Faith in the latter Days before the coming of Chriſt, ſaying, that Chriſt ſhould not come, 'till there come a Departing firſt.

Cole. Yea, I pray you, how take you the Departing there in St. Paul? it is not meant of Faith, but of the Departing from the Empire: For it is in Greek, APOSTASIA.

Philpot. Marry indeed you, Mr. Doctor, put me in good Remembrance of the Meaning of St. Paul in that Place, for APOSTASIA is properly a Departing from the Faith, and thereof cometh Apoſtata, which properly ſignifieth one that departeth from his Faith: And St. Paul in the ſame Place after ſpeaketh of the Decay of the Empire.

Cole. APOSTASIA doth not only ſignify a Departing from the Faith, but alſo from the Empire, as I am able to ſhew.

Philpot. I never read it ſo taken, and when you ſhall be able to ſhew it (as you ſay in Words) I will believe it, and not before.

Worceſter. I am ſorry that you ſhould be againſt the Chriſtian World.

Philpot. The World commonly, and ſuch as be called Chriſtians (for the Multitude) hath hated the Truth, and been Enemies to the ſame.

Glouceſter. Why, Mr. Philpot, do you think that the univerſal Church hath erred, and you only to be in the Truth?

Philpot. The Church that you are of was never Univerſal, for two Parts of the World, which is Aſia and Africa, never conſented to the Supremacy of the Biſhop of Rome, as at this Day they do not, neither do follow his Decrees.

Glouceſter. Yes, in the Florentine Council they did agree.

Philpot. It was ſaid ſo by falſe Report, after they of Aſia and Africa were gone Home: But it was not ſo indeed, as the Sequel of them all hitherto doth prove the contrary.

Glouceſter. I pray you by whom will you be judged in Matters of Controverſy which happen daily?

Philpot. By the Word of God. For Chriſt ſaith in St. John, The Word that he ſpake, ſhall be judge in the latter Day.

Glouceſter. What if you take the Word one Way, and I another Way: Who ſhall be judge then?

Philpot. The primitive Church.

Glouceſter. I know you mean the Doctors that wrote thereof.

Philpot. I mean verily ſo.

Glouceſter. What if you take the Doctors in one Senſe, and I in another: who ſhall be judge then?

Philpot. Then let that be taken which is moſt agreeable to God's Word.

Cole. My Lords, why do you trouble yourſelves to anſwer him in this Matter? It is not the Thing which is laid to his Charge, but his Errror of the Sacrament, and he to ſhift himſelf of that, brought in another Matter.

Philpot. This is the Matter, Mr. Cole, to which I have referred all other Queſtions, and deſire to be ſatisfy'd.

Worceſter. It is a Wonder to ſee how he ſtandeth with a few againſt a great Multitude.

Philpot. We have almoſt as many as you. For we have Aſia, Africa, Germany, Denmark, and a great Part of France, and daily the Number of the Goſpel doth increaſe: So that I am credibly informed, that for this Religion in which I ſtand, and for which I am like to die, a great Multitude doth daily come out of France through Perſecution, that the Cities of Germany be ſcarce able to receive them: And therefore your Lordſhip may be ſure, the Word of God will one Day take Place, do what you can to the contrary.

Mr. Philpot propheſieth of the increaſe of the Goſpel.

Worceſter. They were well occupy'd to bring you ſuch News, and you have been well kept to have ſuch Reſort unto you. Thou art the arroganteſt Fellow, and ſtouteſt fond Fellow that ever I knew.

Philpot. I pray your Lordſhip to bear with my haſty Speech: For it is Part of my corrupt Nature to ſpeak ſomewhat haſtily: But for all that, I mean with Humility to do my Duty to your Lordſhip.

Bonner. Mr. Philpot, my Lords will trouble you no farther at this Time, but you ſhall go from whence you came, and have ſuch Favour as in the mean while I can ſhew you: And upon Wedneſday next you ſhall be called again to be heard what you can ſay for the Maintenance of your Error.

Philpot. My Lord, my Deſire is to be ſatisfy'd of you in that I have required; and your Lordſhip ſhall find me as I have ſaid.

Worceſter. We wiſh you as well as ourſelves.

Philpot. I think the ſame (my Lords) but I fear you are deceived, and have a Zeal of yourſelves, not according to Knowledge.

Worceſter. God ſend you more Grace.

Philpot. And alſo God increaſe the ſame in you, and open your Eyes that you may ſee to maintain his Truth, and his true Church.

Then the Biſhops roſe up, and conſulted together, and cauſed a Writing to be made, in which I think my Blood by them was bought and ſold, and thereto they put their Hands; and after this I was carried to my Colehouſe again.

Thus ended the fourth Part of this Tragedy.
God haſten the End thereof to his Glory,
Amen.

Mr. Philpot to ſome that required him to write his Examinations.

Becauſe I have begun to write unto you of mine Examinations before the Biſhop and others, more to ſatisfy your Deſire, than it is any Thing worthy to be written; I have thought it good to write unto you alſo that which hath been done done of late, that the ſame might come to Light which they do in Darkneſs, and in privy Corners, and that the World now, and Poſterity hereafter, might know how diſorderly, unjuſtly, and unlearnedly theſe ravening Wolves do proceed againſt the ſilly and faithful Flock of Chriſt, and condemn and perſecute the ſincere Doctrine of Chriſt in us, which they are not able by honeſt Means to reſiſt, but only by Tyranny and Violence.

The fifth Examination of Mr. Philpot before the Biſhops of London, Rocheſter, Coventry, St. Aſaph, and one other whoſe See I know not, Dr. Story, Dr. Curtop, Dr. Saverſon, Dr. Pendleton, with ſeveral other Chaplains and Gentlemen of the Queen's Chamber, in the Gallery of my Lord of London's Palace.

BONNER. Mr. Philpot come you hither, I have deſired my Lords here, and other learned Men, to take ſome Pains once again to do you good, and becauſe I do mind to ſit in Judgment on you to morrow, as I am commanded, yet I would you ſhould have as much Favour as I can ſhew you, if you will be any thing conformable; therefore play the wiſe Man, and be not ſingular in your own Opinion, but be ruled by theſe learned Men.

Philpot. My Lord, in that you ſay you will ſit on me in Judgment to morrow, I am glad thereof: For I was promiſed by them which ſent me unto you, that I ſhould have been judged the next Day after: But promiſe hath not been kept with me, to my farther Grief. I look for none other but Death at your Hands, and I am as ready to yield my Life in Chriſt's Cauſe, as you be to require it.

Bonner. Lo, what a wilful Man is this? By my Faith it is but Folly to reaſon with him, neither with any of theſe Hereticks. I am ſorry that you will be no more tractable, and that I am compelled to ſhew Extremity againſt you.

Philpot. My Lord, you need not to ſhew Extremity againſt me unleſs you will: Neither by the Law (as I have ſaid) have you any Thing to do with me, for that you are not mine Ordinary, albeit I am (contrary to all right) in your Priſon.

Bonner. Why the Queen's Commiſſioners ſent you hither unto me, upon your Examination had before them, I know not well the Cauſe; but I am ſure they would not have ſent you hither to me, unleſs you had made ſome Talk to them, otherwiſe than it becometh a chriſtian Man.

Philpot. My Lord, indeed they ſent me hither without any Occaſion then miniſtred by me. Only they laid unto me the Diſputation I made in the Convocation-houſe, requiring me to anſwer the ſame, and to recant it. Which becauſe I would not do, they ſent me hither to your Lordſhip.

Bonner. Why did you not anſwer them thereto.

Philpot. For that they were temporal Men, and ought not to be Judges in ſpiritual Cauſes whereof they demanded me, without ſhewing any Authority whereby I was bound to anſwer them, and hereupon they committed me to your Priſon. Anno 1555.

Bonner. Indeed I remember now, you maintained open Hereſy in my Dioceſe: Wherefore the Commiſſioners ſent you unto me that I ſhould proceed againſt you, for this you have ſpoke in my Dioceſe.

Philpot. My Lord, I ſtand ſtill upon my lawful Plea in this Behalf; that though it were a great Hereſy, as you ſuppoſe it, yet I ought not to be troubled for it, in reſpect of the Privilege of the Parliament-houſe, whereof the Convocation-houſe is a Member, where all Men in Matters propounded may frankly ſpeak their Minds, and here is preſent a Gentleman of the Queen's Majeſty that was preſent at the Diſputation, and can teſtify the Queſtions which were then in Controverſy, were not ſet forth by me, but by the Prolocutor, who required in the Queen's Majeſty's Name, all Men to diſpute their Minds freely in the ſame that were of the Houſe.

Bonner ſeeketh Cauſe againſt him, and yet pretendeth to be ſorry for his Trouble.

Mr. Philpot's Defence for ſpeaking in the Parliament.

The Queen's Gentleman. Though the Parliament-houſe be a Place of Privilege for Men of the Houſe to ſpeak, yet may none ſpeak any Treaſon againſt the Queen, or maintain Treaſon againſt the Crown.

Philpot. But if there be any Matter which otherwiſe it were Treaſon to ſpeak of, were it Treaſon for any Perſon to ſpeak therein, eſpecially the Thing being propoſed by the Speaker? I think not.

The Queen's Gentleman. You may make the Matter eaſy enough to you yet, as I perceive, if you will revoke the ſame which you did there ſo ſtubbornly maintain.

St. Aſaph. This Man did not ſpeak under Reformation, as many there did, but as earneſtly and perſuaſibly as ever I heard any.

Philpot. My Lords, ſince you will not ceaſe to trouble me for that I have lawfully done, neither will admit my juſt Defence for what was ſpoke in the Convocation-houſe by me, contrary to the Laws and Cuſtom of the Realm; I appeal to the whole Parliament-houſe, to be judged by the ſame, whether I ought thus to be moleſted for that I have there ſpoken.

Mr. Philpot appealeth to the Parliament.

Rocheſter. But have you ſpoken and maintained the ſame ſince that Time, or no?

Philpot. If any Man can charge me juſtly therewith, here I ſtand to make Anſwer.

Rocheſter. How ſay you to it now? will you ſtand to that you have ſpoken in the Convocation-houſe, and do you think you ſaid then well, or no?

Philpot. My Lord, you are not mine Ordinary to proceed Ex Officio againſt me, and therefore I am not bound to tell you my Conſcience of your Demands.

St. Aſaph. What ſay you now? Is there not in the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar (and with that they all put off their Caps for Reverence of the Idol) the Preſence of our Saviour Chriſt, really and ſubſtantially after the Words of Conſecration?

Philpot. I do believe in the Sacrament of Chriſt's Body, duly miniſtred, to be ſuch manner of Preſence, as the Word teacheth me to believe.

St. Aſaph. I pray you, how is that?

Philpot. As for that I will declare another Time, when I ſhall be lawfully called to diſpute my Mind of this Matter, But I am not yet driven to that Point. And the Scripture ſaith, All Things ought to be done after an Order.

Another

Anno 1555.

Another Biſhop. This is a froward and vainglorious Man.

Bonner. It is not lawful for a Man by the Civil Laws to diſpute of his Faith openly, as it appeareth in the Title, De ſumma Trinitate & fide Catholica.

Philpot. My Lord, I have anſwer'd you to this Queſtion before.

Bonner. Why, I never asked thee of this before now.

Philpot. Yes, that you did at my laſt Examination, by that Token I anſwered your Lordſhip by St. Ambroſe, that the Church is congregated by the Word, and not by Man's Law. Wherefore I now add further of this Saying, That he which refuſeth the Word, and objecteth the Law, is an unjuſt Man, becauſe the Juſt ſhall live by Faith. And moreover, my Lord, the Title which your Lordſhip alledgeth out of the Law, maketh it not unlawful to diſpute of all the Articles of the Faith, but of the Trinity.

Amb. l. 5. Epiſt. 30. Eodem contra Auxentium.

Bonner. Thou lieſt, it is not ſo: And I will ſhew you by the Book how ignorant he is.

And with that he went with all haſte to his Study, and fetch'd his Book, and openly read the Text, and the Title of the Law, and charged me with ſuch Words as ſeemed to make for his Purpoſe, ſaying, How ſayeſt thou to this?

Philpot. My Lord, I ſay as I ſaid before, that the Law meaneth of the catholick Faith, determined in the Council of Chalcedon, where the Articles of the Creed were only concluded upon.

Bonner. Thou art the verieſt Beaſt that ever I heard, I muſt needs ſpeak it, thou compelleſt me thereunto.

Philpot. Your Lordſhip may ſpeak your Pleaſure of me. But what is this to the Purpoſe, which your Lordſhip is ſo earneſt in? You know that our Faith is not grounded upon the Civil Law: Therefore it is not material to me whatſoever the Law ſaith.

Our Faith not grounded upon the Civil Law.

Bonner. By what Law wilt thou be judged? Wilt thou be judged by the Common Law?

Philpot. No my Lord, our Faith dependeth not upon the Laws of Man

St. Aſaph. He will be judged by no Law, but as he will himſelf.

Worceſter. The Common Laws are but Abſtracts of the Scriptures and Doctors.

Philpot. Whatſoever you do make them, they are no Ground of my Faith, by which I ought to be judged.

Bonner. I muſt needs proceed againſt thee to morrow.

Mr. Philpot ſtill ſtandeth to his Defence of the Law, in refuſing the Judge not to be competent Philpot. If your Lordſhip ſo do, I will have Exceptionem fori: For you are not my competent Judge.

Bonner. By what Law canſt thou refuſe me to be thy Judge.

Philpot. By the Civil Law, De competente judice.

De officio Ordinarii, to a Title in the firſt Book of the Decretals.

Bonner. There is no ſuch Title in the Law. In what Book is it, as cunning a Lawyer as you be?

Philpot. My Lord, I take upon me no great cunning in the Law: But you drive me to my Shifts for my Defence, and I am ſure if I had the Books of the Law, I were able to ſhew what I ſay.

De foro competente is a Title in the ſecond Book of the Decretals.

Bonner. What, De competente judice? I will go fetch thee my Books. There is a Title indeed, De officiis judicis Ordinarii.

Philpot. Verily that is the ſame De competente judice, which I have alledged. With that he ran to his Study, and brought the whole Courſe of the Law between his Hands, which (as it might appear) he had well occupied, by the Duſt they were cover'd with.

Bonner. There be the Books: Find it now if thou canſt, and I will promiſe to releaſe thee out of Priſon.

Philpot. My Lord, I ſtand not here to reaſon Matters of the Civil Law, although I am not altogether ignorant of the ſame; for that I have been a Student in the Law ſix or ſeven Years; but to anſwer to the Articles of Faith with which you may lawfully burden me. And whereas you go about unlawfully to proceed, I challenge, according to my Knowledge, the Benefit of the Law in my Defence.

Bonner. Why, thou wilt anſwer directly to nothing thou art charged withal: Therefore ſay not hereafter but you might have been ſatisfy'd here by learned Men, if you would have declared your Mind.

Mr. Philpot returneth again to his Queſtion of the Church.

Philpot. My Lord, I have declared my Mind unto you and to other of the Biſhops at my laſt being with you, deſiring you to be ſatisfy'd but of one Thing, whereunto I have referred all other Controverſies: Which if your Lordſhips now, or other learned Men can ſimply reſolve me of, I am as contented to be conformable in all Things, as you ſhall require; which is to prove that the Church of Rome (whereof you are) is the catholick Church.

That Peter built the Church of Rome it is falſe, for both the Scripture ſaith, that Peter was ſet over the circumcifed, and not over the Gentiles; and alſo it is to be proved by Grotius, Suetonius, Tertullianus, and other Hiſtorians, that the Faith of Chriſt was in Rome in Tiberius's Time before ever Peter ſaw Rome.

Coventry. Do you not believe your Creed, I believe the catholick Church?

Philpot. Yes that I do: But I cannot underſtand Rome (wherewithal you burden us) to be the ſame, neither like to it.

St. Aſaph. It is moſt evident that St. Peter did build the catholick Church at Rome. And Chriſt ſaid, Thou art Peter, and upon this Rock will I build my Church. Moreover the Succeſſion of Biſhops in the See of Rome can be proved from Time to Time, as it can be of none other Place ſo well, which is a manifeſt Probation of the catholick Church, as divers Doctors do write.

Philpot. That you would have to be undoubted, is moſt uncertain, and that by the Authority which you alledge of Chriſt, ſaying unto Peter, Thou art Peter, and upon this Rock I will build my Church, unleſs you can prove that Rock to ſignify Rome, as you would make me falſly believe. And although you can prove the Succeſſion of Biſhops from Peter, yet this is not ſufficient to prove Rome the Catholick Church, unleſs you can prove the Profeſſion of Peter's Faith, whereupon the catholick Church is built, to have continued in his Succeſſors at Rome, and at this preſent to remain.

Bonner. Is there any more Churches than one catholick Church? And I pray tell me into what Faith were you baptized?

Philpot. I acknowledge one holy Catholick and Apoſtolick Church, whereof I am a Member (I praiſe God) and am of that catholick Faith of Chriſt whereinto I was baptized.

Coventry. I pray you, can you tell what this Word Catholick doth ſignify? ſhew if you can.

Philpot. Yes that I can, I thank God. The catholick Faith, or the catholick Church, is not as now-a-days the People are taught, to be that which is moſt Univerſal, or by moſt Part of Men received, whereby you do infer our Faith to hang upon the Multitude, which is is not ſo; but I eſteem the catholick Church to be as St. Auſtin defineth the ſame: We judge, ſaith he, the catholick Faith, of that which hath been, is, and ſhall be. So that if you can be able to prove, that your Faith and Church hath been from the Beginning taught, and is, and ſhall be; then may you count yourſelves Catholick, otherwiſe not. And Catholick is a Greek Word, compounded of KATA, which ſignifieth after, or according, and HOLON, a Sum, or Principal, or Whole: So that catholick Church, or catholick Faith, is as much as to ſay, the firſt, whole, ſound, or chiefeſt Faith.

Bonner. Doth St. Auſtin ſay ſo as he alledgeth it? or doth he mean as he taketh the ſame? how ſay you Mr. Curtop?

Curtop. Indeed, my Lord, St. Auſtin hath ſuch a Saying, ſpeaking againſt the Donatiſts, that the catholick Faith ought to be eſteemed of Things in Time paſt, and as they are practiſed according to the ſame, and ought to be through all Ages, and not after a new Manner, as the Donatiſts began to profeſs.

Philpot. You have ſaid well, Mr. Curtop, and after the meaning of St. Auſtin, and to confirm that which I have ſaid for the Signification of catholick.

Coventry. Let the Book be ſeen, my Lord.

Bonner. I pray you, my Lord, be content, or in good Faith I will break even off, and let all alone. Do you think the catholick Church (until it was within theſe few Years, in which a few upon Singularity have ſwerved from the ſame) have erred?

Philpot. I do not think that the catholick Church can err in Doctrine; but I require you to prove this Church of Rome to be the catholick Church.

Where Mr. Curtop finds this I cannot tell; but this I find, that Euſebius doth report that Ireneus did reprove Victor, Biſhop of Rome, for his raſh Sentence in excommunicating the Churches of Greece concerning the Obſervation of the Feaſt of Eaſter. Euſeb. l. 5. cap. 16.

Curtop. I can prove that Ireneus (which was within an hundred Years after Chriſt) came to Victor, then Biſhop of Rome, to ask his Advice about the Excommunication of certain Heretick, which (by all likelihood) he would not have done, if he had not taken him to be ſupreme Head.

Coventry. Mark well this Argument. How are you able to anſwer the ſame? Anſwer, if you can.

Philpot. It is ſoon anſwered, my Lord, for that it is of no Force; neither this Fact of Ireneus maketh no more for the Supremacy of the Biſhop of Rome, than mine hath done, who have been at Rome as well as he, and might have ſpoken with the Pope, if I had liſt: And yet I would none in England did favour his Supremacy more than I.

St. Aſaph. You are the more to blame (by the Faith of my Body) for that you favour the ſame no better, ſince all the catholick Church (until theſe few Years) have taken him to be the ſupreme Head of the Church, beſides this good Man Ireneus.

Philpot. That is not likely, that Ireneus ſo took him, or the primitive Church: For I am able to ſhew ſeven general Councils after Ireneus's Time, wherein he was never ſo taken, which may be a ſufficient Proof, that the catholick primitive Church never took him for ſupreme Head.

The other Biſhop. This Man will never be ſatisfy'd, ſay what we can. It is but Folly to reaſon any more with him.

Philpot. O, my Lords, would you have me ſatisfy'd with nothing? Judge, I pray you, who hath better Authority, he which bringeth the Example of one Man going to Rome, or I that by theſe many general Councils am able to prove, that he was never ſo taken in many hundred Years after Chriſt, as by Nicene, Epheſine, the firſt and ſecond Chalcedon, Conſtantinopolitan, Carthagineſe, Aquilienſe. Anno 1555. Socr. lib. 5. c. 22. Seven general Councils in which the Biſhop of Rome was never taken for ſupreme Head.

Coventry. Why will you not admit the Church of Rome to be the catholick Church?

Philpot. Becauſe it ſolloweth not the Primitive catholick Church, neither agreeth with the ſame, no more than an Apple is like a Nut.

Coventry. Wherein doth it diſſent?

Philpot. It were too long to recite all, but two Things I will name, the Supremacy and Tranſubſtantiation.

Curtop. As for Tranſubſtantiation, albeit it was ſet forth, and decreed for an Article of Faith not much above three hundred Years, yet it was always believed in the Church.

Bonner. Yea, that it was. Very well ſaid of you Mr. Curtop.

Philpot. You have ſaid right, that Tranſubſtantiation is but a late Plantation of the Biſhop of Rome, and you are not able to ſhew any ancient Writer, that the Primitive Church did believe any ſuch Thing; and with this Curtop ſhrank away. And immediately after the Ambaſſador of Spain came in, to whom my Lord of London went, leaving the others with me. To whom I ſaid, my Lords, if you can ſhew me that this Church of Rome (whereof you are Members) is the true catholick Church, I ſhall be content to be one thereof, and as conformable to the ſame as you can require me in all Things; for I know there is no Salvation but within the Church. Tranſubſtantiation is but a late Plantation.

Coventry. Can you diſprove that the Church of Rome is not the catholick Church?

Philpot. Yea, that I am able, but I deſire rather to hear of you for the Proof thereof. And ſeeing I cannot have my Requeſt at your Hands, neither be ſatisfy'd with any probable Authority, I will ſhew you good Proof why it is not. For if the Primitive Church were catholick, as it was indeed, and ought to be the Form and School-Miſtreſs of the Church to the World's End; then is not the Church of Rome now the catholick Church, which diſſenteth ſo far from the ſame both in Doctrine and Uſe of the Sacraments.

Coventry. How prove you that the Church of Rome now diſſenteth in Doctrine and Uſe of the Sacraments from the primitive Church.

Philpot. Compare the one with the other, and it ſhall ſoon appear; as you may ſee both in Euſebius and other eccleſiaſtical and ancient Writers.

Coventry. What have you to ſay more, why it is not the catholick Church?

Philpot. Becauſe it is not [by your Interpretation of catholick] univerſal, neither ever was, albeit you falſely perſuade the People that it is ſo. For the World being divided into three parts, Aſia, Africa, and Europe, two Parts thereof, Aſia and Africa, profeſſing Chriſt as well as we, did never conſent to the Church of Rome, which is of Europe; which is a ſufficient Teſtimony that your Faith was never univerſal. The Faith of the Pope's catholick Church now was never univerſal.

Coventry. How prove you that?

Philpot. All the Hiſtorians which write of the Proceedings of the Church, do teſtify the ſame. Beſides that, this preſent Time doth declare that to be true which I ſay: For at this preſent the Church of Aſia and Africa do not conſent to the Church of Rome. Yea, and beſides all this, moſt part of Europe doth not agree, neither allow the Church of Rome; as Germany, the Kingdom of Denmark, the Kingdom of Poland, a great part of France, England and Zeland, which is a manifeſt Probation that your Church is not univerſal.

After this the Biſhop of London called away the other Biſhops, and left me with divers Gentlemen, with certain of his Chaplains, as Dr. Saverſon an Engliſhman, who began with me in this Manner.

Dr. Saverſon. Mr. Philpot, I remember you beyond Sea, ſince the Time you reaſoned with a Friar (a notable learned Man) coming from Venice to Padua in a Barge.

Philpot. I cannot forget that; for the Friar threatned to accuſe me of Hereſy as ſoon as he came to Padua, becauſe I talked with him ſo boldly of the Truth. He was not ſo learned a Man as you name him to be, but only in his School Points a good Purgatory Friar.

Dr. Saverſon. Well, he was a learned Man for all that. And I am ſorry that you this Day having communed with ſo many notable learned Men, are no more conformable to them than you be.

Philpot. I will be conformable to all them that be conformable to Chriſt in his Word. And I pray you good Mr. Doctor, be not ſo conformable to pleaſe Men more than God, contrary to your Learning for worldly Eſtimation Sake.

Dr. Saverſon. No that I am not. Upon what Occaſion ſhould you think thus of me?

Philpot. Upon no Evil that I do know of you Mr. Doctor; but I ſpeak as one wiſhing that you ſhould not be led away from the Truth for Promotion Sake, as many Doctors be now a-days.

Dr. Saverſon. I have heard your Arguments hitherto, and methinketh that a great many of the old ancient Writers be againſt you, in that you do not allow the Church of Rome neither the Supremacy; for St. Cyprian (which is an ancient Writer) doth allow the Biſhop of Rome to be ſupreme Head of the Church.

Philpot. That I am ſure he doth not. For he, writing to Cornelius then Biſhop of Rome, calleth him but his Companion and his Fellow Biſhop, neither attributeth to him the Name either of Pope, or elſe of any uſurped Terms which now be aſcribed to the Biſhop of Rome to the ſetting forth of his Dignity.

Dr. Saverſon. You cannot be able to ſhew that St. Cyprian calleth Cornelius his Fellow-Biſhop.

Philpot. I will wager with you what I am able to make, that I can ſhew it you in St. Cyprian, as I have ſaid.

Cypr. lib. 1. Epiſt. 3.

Dr. Saverſon. I will lay no other Wager with you, but Book for Book that it is not ſo.

Philpot. I agree thereto, and I pray you one of my Lord's Chaplains to fetch us Cyprian hither for the Trial hereof. And with that one of them went to my Lord's Study, and brought forth Cyprian, and by and by he turned to the firſt Book of his Epiſtles, the third Epiſtle *, and there would have ſeemed to gather a ſtrong Argument for the Supremacy of the Biſhop of Rome, becauſe he ſaith; It goeth not well with the Church when the High-prieſt is not obeyed, which ſupplied the Stead of Chriſt, after God's Word, and the Conſent of his Fellow-Biſhops and the Agreement of the People.

Cypr. l. 1. Ep. 2. c. 16. Nic. Conc. 3.

* Cyprian hath alſo theſe Words following in the ſame Epiſtle. It was declared amongſt us, and it is according to Juſtice and Equity, that every Man's Cauſe ſhould be heard where the Fault was committed, and to every ſeveral Paſtor there is a Portion of the Flock appointed to rule and govern, for which he muſt make an Account before God. Cypr. lib. 4. Epiſt. 2.

Dr. Saverſon. How can you avoid this Place which maketh ſo plainly for the Biſhop of Rome's Supremacy?

Philpot. It maketh not ſo plain, Mr. Doctor, on your Side, as you gather, as by and by I will give you to underſtand. But firſt I challenge the Wager which we made, that your Book is mine. For here you may ſee, that he calleth Cornelius his Fellow Biſhop, as he doth alſo in other Places. And now for the Underſtanding of that Place, you do miſconſtrue it, to take the high Prieſt only for the Biſhop of Rome, and otherwiſe than it was in his Time. For there were by the Nicene Council four Patriarchs appointed, the Patriarch of Jeruſalem, the Patriarch of Conſtantinople, the Patriarch of Alexandria, and the Patriarch of Rome, of which four, the Patriarch of Rome was placed loweſt in the Council, and ſo continued many Years, for the Time of ſeven or eight general Councils, as I can ſhew.

Therefore St. Cyprian writing to Cornelius Patriarch of Rome (whom he calleth his Fellow-biſhop) findeth himſelf offended that certain Hereticks, being juſtly excommunicated by him (as the Novatians were) did flee from his Dioceſs, which was their chief Biſhop (refuſing to be obedient to him and to be reformed) to the Biſhop of Rome, and to the Patriarch of Conſtantinople, and there were received in Communion of the Congregation, in Derogation of good Order and Diſcipline in the Church, and to the Maintaining of Hereſies and Schiſms: And that Hereſies did ſpring up, and Schiſms daily riſe hereof, that Obedience was not given to the Prieſt of God, nor was it once conſidered him to be in the Church for the Time the Prieſt, and for the Time the Judge in Chriſt's ſtead (as in the Decree of Nicene Council was appointed) not the Biſhop of Rome only, but every Patriarch in his Precinct: who had every one of them a College or cathedral Church of learned Prieſts, in hearing of whom by a Convocation of his Fellow-biſhops, with the Conſent of the People, all Hereſies were determined by the Word of God: And this is the Meaning of St. Cyprian.

Dr. Saverſon. You take it ſo, but it ſeemeth to me otherwiſe.

Philpot. Upon what Ground it ſhould ſeem otherwiſe unto you I know not, but this Meaning which I have declared, the general Councils, ſeven or eight one after another confirmed it ſo to be, which did not allow one Supreme Head only.

Pendleton. There were not ſo many general Councils, but four only allowed.

Philpot. That is not ſo Mr. Pendleton, altho' there be four ſpecially allowed for the Confirmation of the Trinity: But beſides theſe Four, there were many other general Councils, as you may learn by many Writers.

A Chaplain. Did not Chriſt build his Church upon Peter? St. Cyprian ſaith ſo.

How St. Cyprian meaneth Chriſt to build his Church upon Peter.

Philpot. St. Cyprian De ſimplicitate Prælatorum, declareth in what reſpect he ſo ſaid; God gave in Perſon of one Man the Keys to all, that he might ſignify the Unity of all Men. And alſo St. Auguſtine ſaith in the tenth Treatiſe of St. John, If in Peter had not been the Myſtery of the Church, the Lord had not ſaid unto him, I will give unto thee the Keys. For if that were ſaid to Peter, the Church hath them not; if the Church have them when Peter received them, he ſignify'd the whole Church. And alſo St. Hierom a Prieſt of Rome, writing to Nepotian, ſaith, That all Churches do lean to their own Paſtors, where he ſpeaketh of the eccleſiaſtical Hierarchy or Regiment, where he maketh no mention of the Biſhop of Rome. And to Evagrius, he ſaith, That whereſoever a Biſhop be, whether it be at Rome, or at Evagi, or at Rhegium, he is of one Power and of one Juriſdiction.

Cypr. de Simplicitate Prælatorum. Tract. 10. in Joan.

Dr. Saverſon. St. Hierome De cœleſti Hierarchia? It was Dionyſius you mean.

Philpot. I ſay not that Hierome wrote any Book ſo intituled. But I ſay, that in the Epiſtle by me alledged, he maketh mention of the eccleſiaſtical Regiment.

Dr. Saverſon. I wonder you will ſtand ſo ſtedfaſt in your Error to your own Deſtruction.

Philpot. I am ſure we are in no Error, by the Promiſe of Chriſt made to the faithful once, which is, that he will give to his true Church ſuch a Spirit of Wiſdom, that the Adverſaries thereof ſhould never be able to reſiſt. And by this I know we are of the Truth, for that neither by reaſoning, neither by writing, your Synagogue of Rome is able to anſwer. Where is there one of you all that ever hath been able to anſwer any of the godly learned Miniſters of Germany, who have diſcloſed your counterfeit Religion? Which of you all (at this Day) is able to anſwer Calvin's Inſtitutions, who is Miniſter of Geneva.

Dr. Saverſon. A godly Miniſter indeed, a Receiver of Cut-purſes and runagate Traitors. And of late I can tell you, there is ſuch Contention fallen between him and his own Sects, that he was oblig'd to fly the Town, about Predeſtination. I tell you Truth, for I came by Geneva hither.

Philpot. I am ſure you blaſpheme that godly Man, and that godly Church where he is Miniſter; as it is your Church's Condition, when you cannot anſwer Men by Learning, to oppreſs them with Blaſphemies and falſe Reports. For in the Matter of Predeſtination, he is in none other Opinion than all the Doctors of the Church be, agreeing to the Scriptures.

Saverſon. Men be able to anſwer him if they liſt. I pray you which of you have anſwered Biſhop Fiſher's Book.

Philpot. Yes (Mr. Doctor) that Book is anſwered, and anſwered again, if you liſt to ſeek what hath been written againſt him.

And after this Dr. Story came in. To whom I ſaid, Mr. Doctor, you have done me great Injury, and without Law have ſtraitly impriſon'd me, more like a Dog than a Man. And beſides this you have not kept Promiſe with me, for you promiſed that I ſhould be judged the next Day after.

Happy are you when they revile you, and ſay all Evil againſt you for my Name's ſake, Matth. 5.

Story. I am come now to keep Promiſe with thee. Was there ever ſuch a fantaſtical Man as this is? Nay, he is no Man, he is a Beaſt, yea, theſe Hereticks be worſe than brute Beaſts: For they will upon a vain Singularity take upon them to be wiſer than all Men, being indeed very Fools and Aſs-heads, not able to maintain that which of an arrogant Obſtinacy they do ſtand in.

Philpot. Mr. Doctor, I am content to abide your railing Judgment of me now. Say what you will, I am content, for I am under your Feet to be trodden on by you as you liſt. God forgive it you; yet I am no Heretick. Neither you nor any other ſhall be able to prove that I hold any Jot againſt the Word of God, otherwiſe than a chriſtian Man ought.

Anno 1555.

Story. The Word of God? forſooth the Word of God? It is but a Folly to reaſon with theſe Hereticks, for they are incurable and deſperate. But yet I may reaſon with thee, not that I have any hope to win thee: Whom wilt thou appoint to judge of the Word whereto thou ſtandeſt?

The Papiſts will not be ruled by the Scriptures without their own Judge.

Philpot. Verily the Word itſelf.

Story. Do you not ſee the Ignorance of this beaſtly Heretick? he willeth the Word to be judged of the Word. Can the Word ſpeak?

Philpot. If I cannot prove that which I have ſaid by good Authority, I will be content to be counted an Heretick and an ignorant Perſon, and further what you pleaſe.

Story. Let us hear what wiſe Authority thou canſt bring in.

Philpot. It is the Word of Chriſt in St. John. The Word which I have ſpoken, ſhall judge in the laſt Day. If the Word ſhall judge in the laſt Day, much more it ought to judge our Doings now: And I am ſure I have my Judge on my Side, who will abſolve and juſtify me in another World. Howſoever now it ſhall pleaſe you by Authority unrighteouſly to judge of me and others, ſure I am in another World to judge you.

John 12. What ſay you now Mr. Doctor?

Story. What? you purpoſe to be a ſtinking Martyr, and to ſit in Judgment with Chriſt at the laſt Day to judge of the twelve Tribes of Iſrael?

Dr. Story having nothing to anſwer, raileth at Mr. Philpot.

Philpot. Yea Sir, I doubt not thereof, having the Promiſe of Chriſt, if I die for Righteouſneſs ſake, which you have begun to perſecute in me.

Story. I told you it was but vain to argue with this Heretick; he is drowned in Hereſies without all Learning.

Philpot. Sir, I have brought you good Authority for that I have ſaid out of God's Book, to which you anſwer nothing, but go about ſtill to give railing Judgment againſt me without any Cauſe.

Story. I will come to you by and by. When the Judge in Weſtminſter-Hall giveth Sentence, doth the Word give Sentence, or the Judge? Tell me.

Philpot. Civil Matters be ſubject to civil Men, and they have Authority by the Word to be Judges of hem. But the Word of God is not ſubject to Man's Judgment, but ought to judge all the Wiſdom, Thoughts and Doings of Men, and therefore your Compariſon diſproveth nothing that I have ſaid, neither anſwereth any whit thereto.

God's Judgment and civil Judgment not alike.

Story. Wilt thou not allow the Interpretation of the Church upon the Scriptures?

Philpot. Yes, if it be according to the Word of the true Church: And this I ſay to you, as I have ſaid heretofore, that if ye can prove the Church of Rome (whereof ye are) to be the true catholick Church which I ought to follow, I will be as ready to yield thereto (as long as it can be ſo proved) as you may deſire me.

The Judgment of the Church how far it ſerveth.

Story. What a Fellow is this? He will believe nothing but what he liſt himſelf. Are we not in Poſſeſſion of the Church? Have not our Forefathers theſe many hundred Years taken this Church for the catholick Church whereof we are now? And if we had no other Proof but this, it were ſufficient; for the Preſcription of Time maketh a good Title in the Law.

Philpot.

Philpot. You do well, Mr. Doctor, to alledge Preſcription of many Years, for it is all that you have to ſhew for yourſelves. But you muſt underſtand, that Preſcription hath no Place in Matters belonging unto God, as I am able to ſhew by the Teſtimony of many Doctors.

Story. Well Sir, you are like to go after your Father Latimer the Sophiſter, and Ridley, who had nothing to alledge for himſelf, but that he had learned his Hereſy of Cranmer. When I came to him with a poor Batchelor of Art, he trembled as though he had the Palſy, as theſe Hereticks have always ſome Token of Fear whereby a Man may know them, as you may ſee this Man's Eyes to tremble in his Head. But I diſpatched them; and I tell thee that there hath been yet never an one burnt, but I have ſpoke with him, and have been a Cauſe of his Diſpatch.

Dr. Story confeſſeth himſelf to be the chief Diſpatcher of all the Martyrs that ſuffered in Queen Mary's Time.

Philpot. You have the more to anſwer for Mr. Doctor, as you ſhall feel in another World, how much ſoever you do now triumph of your Proceedings.

Story. I tell thee I will never be confeſſed thereof. And becauſe I cannot now tarry to ſpeak with my Lord, I pray one of you tell my Lord, that my Coming was to ſignify to his Lordſhip, That he muſt out of Hand rid this Heretick out of the Way. And going away he ſaid to me, I certify thee, that thou mayſt thank no other Man but me.

Philpot. I thank you therefore with all my Heart, and God forgive it you.

Story. What, doſt thou thank me? If I had thee in my Study half an Hour, I think I ſhould make you ſing another Song.

Philpot. No, Mr. Doctor, I ſtand upon too ſure a Ground to be overthrown by you now. And thus they departed all away from me one after another, until I was left alone. And afterwards going with my Keeper to the Coal-houſe, as I went I met with my Lord of London, who ſpake unto me gently, ſaying, Bonner. Philpot, if there be any Pleaſure I may ſhew you in my Houſe, I pray you require it, and you ſhall have it.

Philpot. My Lord, the Pleaſure that I will require of your Lordſhip, is to haſten my Judgment which is committed unto you, and to diſpatch me forth of this miſerable World unto my eternal Reſt. And for all this fair Speech I cannot attain hitherto this Fortnight's Space, neither Fire nor Candle, neither yet good Lodging. But it is good for a Man to be brought low in this World, and to be counted amongſt the Vileſt, that he may in time of Reward receive Exaltation and Glory. Therefore praiſed be God that hath humbled me, and given me Grace with Gladneſs to be content therewithal. Let all that love the Truth ſay Amen.

The hard Uſage of Mr Philpot in Priſon.

Thus endeth the fifth Tragedy.

The ſixth Examination of Mr. Philpot, before the Right Honourable Lords, the Lord Chamberlain to the Queen, the Viſcount Hereford, commonly called Lord Ferras, the Lord Rich, the Lord St. John, the Lord Windſor, the Lord Shandois, Sir John Bridges Lieutenant of the Tower, and two others whoſe Names I know not, with the Biſhop of London and Dr. Chedſey, Nov. 6. 1555.

WHILE the Lords were ſeating themſelves, the Biſhop of London came aſide to me and whiſpered in mine Ear, willing me to behave myſelf prudently before the Lords of the Queen's Majeſty's Council, and to take heed what I ſaid; and thus he pretended to give me Counſel, becauſe he wiſhed me to do well, as I might now if I would.

And after the Lords and other worſhipful Gentlemen were ſate, my Lord of London placed himſelf at the End of the Table, and called me to him, and by the Lords I was placed at the upper End againſt him; where I kneeling down, the Lords commanded me to ſtand up, and the Biſhop ſpake to me in the following Manner.

Bonner. Mr. Philpot, I have heretofore both privately myſelf, and openly before the Lords of the Clergy, more Times than once cauſed you to be talked withal, to reform you of your Errors, but I have not yet found you ſo tractable as I would wiſh: Wherefore now I have deſired theſe honourable Lords of the Temporalty, and of the Queen's Majeſty's Council, who have taken Pains with me this Day, I thank them for it, to hear you what you can ſay, that they may be Judges whether I have ſought all Means to do you good or no: And I dare be bold to ſay in their Behalf, that if you ſhew your ſelf conformable to the Queen's Majeſty's Proceedings, you ſhall find as much Favour for your Deliverance as you can wiſh. I ſpeak not this to fawn upon you, but to bring you home into the Church. Now let them hear what you can ſay.

The Words of Bp. Bonner to Mr. Philpot.

Philpot. My Lord, I thank God that I have this Day ſuch an honourable Audience to declare my Mind before. And I cannot but commend your Lordſhip's Equity in this Behalf, which agreeth with the Order of the primitive Church, which was, if any Body had been ſuſpected of Hereſy, as I am now, he ſhould be called firſt before the Archbiſhop or Biſhop of the Dioceſs where he was ſuſpected; ſecondly in the Preſence of others his Fellow-biſhops and learned Elders; and thirdly in hearing of the Laity: Where after the Judgment of God's Word declared, and with the Aſſent of our Biſhops and Conſent of the People, he was condemned for an Heretick, or abſolved. And the ſecond Point of that good Order I have found at your Lordſhip's Hands already, in being called before you and your Fellow-biſhops; and now have the third Sort of Men, at whoſe Hands I truſt to find more Righteouſneſs in my Cauſe, than I have found with with my Lords of the Clergy: God grant I may have at the laſt the Judgment of God's Word concerning the ſame.

Bonner. Mr. Philpot, I pray you ere you go any further, tell my Lords here plainly, whether you were by me or by my Procurement committed to Priſon or not, and whether I have ſhewed you any Cruelty ſince ye have been committed to my Priſon.

Philpot. If it ſhall pleaſe your Lordſhip to give me Leave to declare forth my Matter, I will touch that afterward.

Rich. Anſwer firſt of all to my Lord's two Queſtions, and then proceed forth to the Matter. How ſay you? Were you impriſoned by my Lord or no? Can you find any Fault ſince with his cruel uſing of you?

Bp. Bonner not the Cauſe of Mr. Philpot's Imprisoment.

Philpot. I cannot lay to my Lord's Charge the Cauſe of my Impriſonment, neither may I ſay that he hath uſed me cruelly; but rather for my Part I may ſay, that I have found more Gentleneſs at his Lordſhip's Hands, than I did at mine own Ordinary's, for the Time I have been within his Priſon, becauſe he hath called me three or four Times to mine Anſwer, to which I was not called in a Year and a Half before.

Rich. Well, now go to your Matter.

Philpot. The Matter is, that I am impriſoned for the Diſputations had by me in the Convocation-houſe againſt the Sacrament of the Altar, which Matter was not moved principally by me, but by the Prolocutor, with the Conſent of the Queen's Majeſty and of the whole Houſe, and that Houſe, being a Member of the Parliament-houſe, ought to be a Place of free Speech for all Men of the Houſe, by the ancient and laudable Cuſtom of this Realm. Wherefore I think myſelf to have ſuſtained hitherto great Injury, for ſpeaking my Conſcience freely in ſuch a Place as I might lawfully do it: And I deſire your honourable Lordſhips Judgment who be of the Parliament-houſe, whether of right I ought to be impeached for the ſame, and ſuſtain the Loſs of my Living (as I have done) and moreover of my Life, as it is ſought.

The Convocation no part of the Parliament-houſe, ſaith the Lord Rich.

Rich. You are deceived herein; for the Convocation-houſe is no Part of the Parliament-houſe.

Philpot. My Lord, I have always underſtood the contrary, by ſuch as are more expert Men in Things of this Realm than I: And again, the Title of every Act leadeth me to think otherwiſe, which alledgeth the Agreement of the Spiritualty and Temporalty aſſembled together.

Rich. Yea, that is meant of the ſpiritual Lords of the upper Houſe.

Whether the Convocation be Part of the Parliament-houſe or no, yet free Liberty was given by the Queen to every Man to ſpeak his Conſcience.

Windſor. Indeed the Convocation-houſe is called together by one Writ of the Summons of the Parliament of an old Cuſtom; notwithſtanding that Houſe is no Part of the Parliament-houſe.

Philpot. My Lords, I muſt be contented to abide your Judgments in this Behalf.

Rich. We have told you the Truth. Marry yet we would not that you ſhould be troubled for any Thing that there was ſpoken, ſo that you having ſpoken amiſs do declare now that you are ſorry for what you have ſaid.

Bonner. My Lords, he hath ſpoken there manifeſt Hereſy, yea, and there ſtoutly maintained the ſame againſt the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar (and with that he put off his Cap, that all the Lords might Reverence and Vail their Bonnets at that Idol as he did) and would not allow the real Preſence of the Body and Blood of Chriſt in the ſame: Yet my Lords, God forbid that I ſhould go about to ſhew him Extremity for ſo doing, in caſe he will repent and revoke his wicked Sayings; and if in Faith he will ſo do, with your Lordſhips Conſent, he ſhall be releaſed by and by; if he will not, he ſhall have the Extremity of the Law, and that ſhortly. Anno 1555.

Lord Chamberlain. My Lord of London ſpeaketh reaſonably unto you: Take it while it is offered you.

Rich. How ſay you? will you acknowledge the real Preſence of the Body and Blood of Chriſt, as all learned Men of this Realm do, in the Maſs, and as I do, and will believe as long as I live, I do proteſt it?

Philpot. My Lord, I do acknowledge in the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Chriſt, ſuch a Preſence as the Word of God doth allow and teach me.

Rich. That ſhall be no otherwiſe than you liſt.

Bonner. A Sacrament is the Sign of a holy Thing; ſo there is both the Sign, which is the Accident (as the Whiteneſs, Roundneſs, and Shape of Bread) and there is alſo the Thing itſelf, as very Chriſt both God and Man. But theſe Hereticks will have the Sacrament to be but bare Signs. How ſay you? declare unto my Lords here, whether you do allow the Thing itſelf in the Sacrament, or no.

Philpot. I do confeſs that in the Lord's Supper there is in due Reſpects both the Sign and the Thing ſignified, when it is duly adminiſtred after the Inſtitution of Chriſt.

Bonner. You may ſee how he goeth about the Buſh (as he hath done before) with my Lords of the Clergy, and dare not utter his Mind plainly.

Rich. Shew us what Manner of Preſence you allow in the Sacrament.

Philpot. If it pleaſe you, my Lord of London, to give me Leave to proceed orderly thereunto, and to let me declare my Mind without Interruption, I will thoroughly open my Mind therein.

Lord Shandois. I pray you, my Lord, let him ſpeak his Mind.

Philpot. My Lords, that at firſt I have not plainly declared my Judgment unto you, the Reaſon is this, becauſe I cannot ſpeak hereof without the Danger of my Life.

Ye ſay ye ſeek not his Life, and yet ye know to anſwer to what ye require will be his Death.

Rich. There is none of us here that ſeeketh thy Life, or means to take any Advantage of that thou ſhalt ſpeak.

Philpot. Although I miſtruſt not your honourable Lordſhips that be here of the Temporalty; yet here is one that ſitteth againſt me (pointing to the Lord of London) that will lay it to my Charge even to Death. Notwithſtanding, ſeeing your Honour do require me to declare my Mind of the Preſence of Chriſt in the Sacrament, that ye may perceive that I am not aſhamed of the Goſpel of Chriſt, neither do maintain any Opinion without probable and ſufficient Authority of the Scripture, I will ſhew you frankly my Mind without all Colour, whatſoever ſhall enſue unto me therefore, if my Lord of London will not hinder me to utter my Mind.

Rich. My Lord, permit him to ſay what he can, ſeeing he is willing to ſhew his Mind.

Bonner.

Anno 1555.

Bonner. I am content, my Lords, let him say what he can, I will hear him.

Mr. Philpot's Protestation before the Lords.

Philpot. That which I do intend to speak unto you (right honourable Lords) I do protest here, first before God and his Angels, that I speak it not of Vain-glory, neither of Singularity, neither of wilful Stubbornness, but truly upon a good Conscience, grounded on God's Word, against which I dare not do for Fear of Damnation, which will follow that which is done contrary to Knowledge. Neither do I disagree to the Proceedings of this Realm in the Religion, in that I love not the Queen (whom I love from the Bottom of my Heart) but because I ought to love and fear God in his Word more than Man in his Laws, though I stand, as I seem to do, in this Consideration, and for none other, as God I call to witness.

There be two Things principally, by which the Clergy at this Day doth deceive the whole Realm; that is, the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Christ, and the Name of the catholick Church; which both they do usurp, having indeed none of them both. And as touching their Sacrament, which they term of the Altar, I say now as I said in the Convocation House, that it is not the Sacrament of Christ, neither in the same is there any Manner of Christ's Presence. Wherefore they deceive the Queen's Majesty, and you of the Nobility of this Realm, in making you to believe that to be a Sacrament which is none, and cause you to commit manifest Idolatry in worshipping that for God, which is no God. And in Testimony of this to be true, besides manifest Proof, which I am able to make to the Queen's Majesty, and to all you of her Nobility, I will yield my Life; which to do, if it were not upon sure Ground, it were to my utter Damnation.

And where they take on them the Name of the catholick Church (whereby they blind many Folks Eyes) they are nothing so, calling you from the true Religion which was revealed and taught in King Edward's Time, unto vain Superstition. And this I will say for the Trial hereof, that if they can prove themselves to be the catholick Church (as they shall never be able to do) I will never be against their Doings, but revoke all that I have said. And I shall desire you, my Lords, to be a Means for me to the Queen's Majesty, that I may be brought to the just Trial hereof.

Mr. Philpot doth challenge ten of the most learned Men in the Realm to Disputation.

Yea, I will not refuse to stand against ten of the best of them in this Realm. And if they be able to prove otherwise than I have said, either by Writing or by Reasoning, with good and lawful Authority, I will here promise to recant whatsoever I have said, and to consent to them in all Points.

And in the Declaration of these Things more at large, which now I write in Sum, the Bishop of London would have interrupted me, but the Lords procured my Liberty to make out my Argument, to the great Grief of the Lord Bishop of London, as it appeared by the Dumps he was in.

Bonner. It hath been told me before, that you love to make a long Tale.

Rich. All Hereticks do boast of the Spirit of God, and every one would have a Church by himself; as Joan of Kent, and the Anabaptists. I had myself Joan of Kent a Week in my House after the Writ was out for her to be burnt, where my Lord of Canterbury, and Bishop Ridley resorted almost daily unto her: But she was so high in the Spirit, that they could do nothing with her for all their Learning. But she went wilfully unto the Fire, was burnt, and so do you now.

Philpot. As for Joan of Kent, she was a vain Woman (I knew her well) and an Heretick indeed, well worthy to be burnt, because she stood against one of the manifest Articles of our Faith, contrary to the Scriptures: And such vain Spirits be soon known from the true Spirit of God and his Church, for that the same abideth within the Limits of God's Word, and will not go out of the same, neither stubbornly maintain any Thing contrary to the Word, as I have God's Word thoroughly on my Side to shew for that I stand in.

Bonner. I pray you, how will you join me these two Scriptures together; Pater major me est; & pater & ego unum sumus. I must interpret the same, because my Lords here understand not the Latin, that is to say, The Father is greater than I; and I and the Father are one. But I cry you Mercy, my Lords, I have misspoken, in saying you understand no Latin; for the most Part of you understand Latin as well as I. But I speak in Consideration of my Lord Shandois and Mr. Bridges his Brother, whom I take to be no great Latin Men. Now shew your cunning, and join these two Scriptures by the Word if you can.

Philpot. Yes that I can right well. For we must understand that in Christ there be two Natures, the Divinity and Humanity, and in respect of his Humanity it is spoken of Christ, The Father is greater than I. But in respect of his Deity he said again, The Father and I be one.

Bonner. But what Scripture have you?

Philpot. Yes, I have sufficient Scripture for the Proof of that I have said. For the First, it is written of Christ in the Psalms, Psal. 8. 5. Thou hast made him a littler lower thanthe Angels. It is the 19th Psalm, beginning, The Heavens declare. And there I misreckoned, wherewithal my Lord took me.

Bonner. It is in Psal. 8. O Lord, our Lord. Ye may see, my Lords, how well this Man is used to say his Mattins.

Philpot. Though I say not Mattins in such Order as your Lordship meaneth; yet I remember of old, that O Lord our Lord, and The Heavens declare be not far asunder: And albeit I mis-named the Psalm, it is no Prejudice to the Truth that I have proved.

Bonner. What say you then to the second Scripture? how couple you that by the Word to the other?

Philpot. The Text itself declareth, that notwithstanding Christ did abase himself in our human Nature, yet he is still one in Deity with the Father. And this St. Paul to the Hebrews doth more at large set forth. And as I have by the Scripture joined these two Scriptures together, so am I able to do in all other Articles of Faith which we ought to believe, and by the manifest Word of God to expound them.

Bonner. How can that be, seeing St. Paul saith, That the Letter killeth, but it is the Spirit that giveth Life.

Philpot. St. Paul meaneth not the Word of God written, in itself killeth, which is the Word of Life, and faithful Testimony of the Lord; but that the Word is unprofitable and killeth him that is void of the Spirit of God, although although he be the wiſeſt Man of the World, and therefore St. Paul ſaid, 2 Cor. 3. That the Goſpel to ſome was a Savour of Life unto Life, and to others a Saviour of Death unto Death. Alſo an Example hereof we have in the Sixth of John, of them who hearing the Word of God without the Spirit, were offended thereby? wherefore Chriſt ſaid, John 6. The Fleſh profiteth nothing, it is the Spirit that quickneth.

How the Letter killeth, and whom.

Bonner. What? do you underſtand that of St. Paul and of St. John ſo?

Philpot. It is not mine own Interpretation, it is agreeable to the Word in other Places; and I have learned the ſame of ancient Fathers interpreting it likewiſe. And to the Corinthians it is written, 1 Cor. 2. The natural Man perceiveth not the Things that be of the Spirit of God, but the ſpiritual Man, who is endued with the Spirit judgeth all Things.

1 Cor. 6.

Bonner. You ſee my Lords, that this Man will have his own Mind, and will wilfully caſt himſelf away. I am ſorry for him.

Philpot. The Words that I have ſpoken be none of mine but the Goſpel, whereon I ought to ſtand. And if you my Lord of London can bring better Authority for the Faith you will draw me unto, than that which I ſtand upon, I will gladly hear the ſame by you or by any other in this Realm.

Mr. Philpot's Requeſt to the Lords.

Wherefore I kneeling down beſought the Lords, to be good unto me a poor Gentleman, that would fain live in the World if I might, and teſtify as you have heard me to ſay this Day, that if any Man can prove that I ought to be of any other Manner of Faith than that of which I am now, and can prove the ſame ſufficiently, I will be neither wilful nor deſperate, as my Lord of London would make you believe me to be.

Rich. What Country-man be you? are you of the Philpots of Hampſhire.

Philpot. Yea, my Lord, I was Sir P. Philpot's Son of Hampſhire.

Rich. He is my near Kinſman; wherefore I am the more ſorry for him.

Philpot. I thank your Lordſhip that it pleaſeth you to challenge Kindred of a poor Priſoner.

Rich. In Faith I would go a hundred Miles on my bare Feet to do you good.

Lord Chamberlain. He may do well enough if he liſt.

St. John. Philpot, you are my Countryman, and I would be glad you ſhould do well.

Rich. You ſaid even now, that you would deſire to maintain your Belief before ten of the beſt in the Realm. You did not well to compare with the Nobility of the Realm. But what if you have ten of the beſt in the Realm to hear you, will you be tried by them?

Philpot. My Lord, your Lordſhip miſtaketh me to think that I challenge ten of the beſt of the Nobility in this Realm. It was no Part of my Mind, but I meant of the beſt learned on the contrary Side.

John Philpot will not be judged by his Adverſaries, but by the Hearers, ſo far as they ſhall judge by God's Word.

Rich. Well, I take your Meaning: What if Means be made to the Queen's Majeſty that you ſhall have your Requeſt, will you be judged by them?

Philpot. My Lord, it is not meet that a Man ſhould be judged by his Adverſaries.

Rich. By whom then would you be judged?

Philpot. I will make your Honours Judges, that ſhall be Hearers of us.

Rich. I dare be bold to procure for you of the Queen's Majeſty that you ſhall have ten learned Men to reaſon with you, and twenty or forty of the Nobility to hear, ſo you will promiſe to abide their Judgment. How ſay you, will you promiſe here before my Lords ſo to do? Anno 1555.

Philpot. I will be contented to be judged by them.

Rich. Yea, but will you promiſe to agree to their Judgment?

Philpot. There be Cauſes why I may not ſo do, unleſs I were ſure they would judge according to the Word of God.

Rich. O, I perceive you will have no Man judge but yourſelf, and think yourſelf wiſer than all the learned Men in this Realm.

The true Order of Judgment uſed in the primitive Church.

Philpot. My Lord, I ſeek not to be mine own Judge, but am willing to be judged by others, ſo that the Order of Judgment in Matters of Religion be kept that was in the primitive Church, which is, firſt that God's Will by his Word was ſought, and thereunto both the Spiritualty and Temporalty was gatherded together, and gave their Conſents and Judgment, and ſuch Kind of Judgment I will ſtand to.

Bp. Bonner bewrayeth his own Ignorance.

Bonner. My Lords, he would make you believe that he were profoundly ſeen in ancient Writers of the Judgments of the primitive Church, and there was never any ſuch Manner of Judgment uſed as he now talketh of.

Philpot. In the Epiſtles of St. Cyprian I am able to ſhew it you.

Bonner. Ah, I tell you there is no ſuch Thing; fetch me Cyprian hither.

Bp. Bonner dares not reach out his Book.

Philpot. You ſhall find it otherwiſe when the Book cometh. And Dr. Chedſey his Chaplain (whom he appointed to fetch his Book) whiſpered the Biſhop in his Ear, and fetch'd not the Book, by likelihood that he ſhould have ſuſtained the Reproach thereof if the Book had been brought. Well my Lord, quoth I, Mr. Doctor knoweth it is ſo, or elſe he would have brought the Book ere this.

Rich. You would have no other Judge, I ſee, but the Word.

Philpot. Yes my Lord, I will be tried by the Word, and by ſuch as will judge according to the Word. As for an Example, if there were a Controverſy between your Lordſhip and another upon the Words of a Statute, muſt not the Words of the Statute judge and determine the Controverſy?

Rich. No marry, the Judges of the Law may determine of the Meaning thereof.

Bp. Bonner triumphs before the Victory.

Bonner. He hath brought as good an Example againſt himſelf as can be.

And here the Biſhop thought he had a good Argument againſt me, and therefore enlarged it with many Words to the Judgment of the Church.

The Lords. He hath overthrown himſelf by his own Argument.

Philpot. My Lords, it ſeemeth to your Honours that you have great Advantage of me by the Example I brought in to expreſs my Cauſe, but if it be pondered throughly, it maketh wholly with me, and nothing againſt me, as my Lord of London hath pretended. For I will ask of my Lord Rich here, whom I know to have good Knowledge in the Laws and Statutes of this Realm, albeit a Judge may diſcern the Meaning of a Statute agreeable to the Words, whether the ſame may judge judge a Meaning contrary to the expreſs Words or no?

Anno 1555.

Rich. He cannot ſo do.

Philpot. Even ſo ſay I, that no Man ought to judge the Word of God to have a Meaning contrary to the expreſs Words thereof, as this falſe Church of Rome doth in many Things: And with this the Lords ſeemed to be ſatisfied, and made no further Application herein.

Rich. I marvel then why you do deny the expreſs Words of Chriſt in the Sacrament, ſaying, This is my Body: And yet you will not ſtick to ſay it is not his Body. Is not God Omnipotent? And is not he able as well by his Omnipotency to make it his Body, as he was to make Man Fleſh of a Piece of Clay? Did not he ſay, This is my Body which ſhall be betrayed for you? And was not his very Body betrayed for us? Therefore it muſt needs be his Body.

Bonner. My Lord Rich, you have ſaid wonderful well and learnedly. But you might have begun with him before alſo in the Sixth of John, where Chriſt promiſed to give his Body in the Sacrament of the Altar, ſaying, The Bread which I will give is my Fleſh. How can you anſwer to that?

Philpot. If it pleaſe you to give me Leave to anſwer firſt my Lord Rich, I will alſo anſwer this Objection.

Rich. Anſwer my Lord of London firſt, and after come to me.

Philpot. My Lord of London may be ſoon anſwered: That Saying of St. John is, that the Humanity of Chriſt, which he took upon him for the Redemption of Man, is the Bread of Life whereby our Souls and Bodies are ſuſtained to eternal Life, of which the ſacramental Bread is a lively Repreſentation, and an effectual Coaptation to all ſuch as believe on his Paſſion. And as Chriſt ſaith in the ſame Sixth of John, I am the Bread that came down from Heaven; but yet he is not material neither natural Bread: Likewiſe the Bread is his Fleſh, not natural or ſubſtantial, but by Signification, and by Grace in the Sacrament.

And now to my Lord Rich's Argument. I do not deny the expreſs Words of Chriſt in the Sacrament, This is my Body: But I deny that they are naturally and corporally to be taken: They muſt be taken ſacramentally and ſpiritually, according to the expreſs Declaration of Chriſt, ſaying, that the Words of the Sacrament which the Capernaites took carnally, as the Papiſts now do, ought to be taken ſpiritually and not carnally, as they falſly imagine, not weighing what Interpretation Chriſt hath made in this Behalf, neither following the Inſtitution of Chriſt, neither the Uſe of the Apoſtles and of the primitive Church, who never taught, neither declared any ſuch carnal Manner of Preſence as is now exacted of us violently without any Ground of Scripture or Antiquity, who uſed to put out of the Church all ſuch as did not receive the Sacrament with the reſt, and alſo to burn that which was left after the receiving, as by the Canon of the Apoſtles, and by the Decree of the Council of Antioch may appear.

Bonner. No, that is not ſo; they were only Catechumeni, which went out of the Church at the Celebration of the Communion, and none other.

Philpot. It was not only of ſuch as were Novices in Faith, but all others that did not receive.

Bonner. What ſay you to the Omnipotency of God? Is not he able to perform that which he ſpake, as my Lord Rich hath very well ſaid? I tell thee, that God by his Omnipotency may make himſelf to be this Carpet if he will.

Philpot. As concerning the Omnipotency of God, I ſay that God is able to do (as the Prophet David ſaith) whatſoever he willeth; but he willeth nothing that is not agreeable to his Word; as that is Blaſphemy which my Lord of London hath ſpoken, that God may become a Carpet. For as I have learned of ancient Writers, God cannot do that which is contrary to his Nature, as it is contrary to the Nature of God to be a Carpet. A Carpet is a Creature; and God is the Creator; and the Creator cannot be the Creature: Wherefore unleſs you can declare by the Word, that Chriſt is otherwiſe preſent with us than ſpiritually and ſacramentally by Grace, as he hath taught us, you pretend the Omnipotency of God in vain.

Pſal. 135.

Bonner's irreverent and blaſphemous ſpeaking of God.

Bonner. Why, wilt thou not ſay that Chriſt is really preſent in the Sacrament? Or do you deny it?

Philpot. I deny not that Chriſt is really preſent in the Sacrament to the Receiver thereof according to Chriſt's Inſtitution.

Bonner. What mean you by really preſent?

Philpot. I mean by really preſent, preſent indeed.

Bonner. Is God really preſent every where?

Philpot. He is ſo.

Bonner. How prove you that?

Philpot. The Prophet Iſaiah ſaith, That God filleth all Places: And whereſoever there be two or three gathered together in Chriſt's Name, there is he in the midſt of them.

Bonner. What, his Humanity?

Philpot. No my Lord, I mean the Deity, according to that you demanded.

Rich. My Lord of London, I pray you let Mr. Dr. Chedſey reaſon with him, and let us ſee how he can anſwer him, for I tell thee he is a learned Man indeed, and one that I do credit before a great many of you, whoſe Doctrine the Queen's Majeſty and the whole Realm doth well allow, therefore hear him.

Bonner too weak for Mr. Philpot.

Bonner. My Lords, I pray you will it pleaſe you to drink? You have talked a great while, and much Talk is thirſty. I will leave Mr. Doctor and him reaſoning together a-while, with your Leave, and will come to you by and by again. He went, as I ſuppoſe, to make room for more drink, after the Lords had drank.

The Lords falls to drinking.

My Lord Rich ſaid to the Lords, I pray you let the poor Man drink, for he is thirſty, and with that he called for a Cup of Drink, and gave it me, and I drank before them all: God requite it him, for I was a-thirſt indeed. Afterwards Dr. Chedſey began in this wiſe, making a great Proceſs, of which this is the Effect.

Lord Rich biddeth Mr. Philpot drink.

Chedſey. Mr. Philpot findeth Fault with the Convocation-houſe before your Lordſhips, that he hath lain thus long in Priſon, and that he had there a dozen Arguments, whereof he could not be ſuffered to proſecute one throughly, which is not ſo; for he had Leave to ſay what he could, and was anſwered to as much as he was able to bring; and Four untruths of Dr Chedſey at one Clap.

 1 Untruth.

† 2 Untruth. when he had † nothing elſe to ſay, he fell to weeping. I was there preſent and can teſtify thereof; albeit there is a Book Abroad of the Report of the Diſputation to the contrary, in which there is * never a true Word. And whereas you require to be ſatisfied of the Sacrament, I will ſhew you the † Truth thereof, both by the Scriptures, and by the Doctors.

* 3 Untruth.

† 4 Untruth.

Mr. Philpot anſwered Dr. Chedſey.

Philpot. It is a ſhrewd likelihood that you will not conclude with any Truth, ſince you have begun with ſo many Untruths, as to ſay that I was anſwered while I had any Thing to ſay; and that I wept for lack of Matter to ſay, and that the Book of the Report of the Diſputation is not true. God be praiſed, there were a good many Noblemen, Gentlemen, and worſhipful Men that heard and ſaw the Doings thereof, which can teſtify that you here have made an unjuſt Report before theſe honourable Lords. And that I wept, was not for lack of Matter, as you ſlander me; for I thank God I have more Matter than the beſt of you all ſhall ever be able to anſwer, as little Learning as I have; but my weeping was, as Chriſt was upon Jeruſalem, ſeeing the Deſtruction that ſhould fall upon her: And I foreſeeing then the Deſtruction which you (through Violence and Unrighteouſneſs which you there declared) would work againſt the true Church of Chriſt and her faithful Members, as this Day beareth witneſs, was compelled to weep in Remembrance of that which I with many more have felt and ſhall feel.

All theſe Words I did then ſpeak out, being interrupted by my Lord Rich, ſaying, that I ſhould ſuffer him to proceed out in this Matter, and afterwards I ſhould have leiſure to anſwer him in every Article. But he promiſed more than he could perform, as the End did well declare, for he had not the Conſent of the Spiritualty to his Promiſe, which now rule the Roaſt. God ſhorten their cruel Days, for his Elect's ſake. And therefore I add this, which I had purpoſed to have ſpoken, if then I might have been ſuffered, leſt any that perfectly know not the Things done in the Convocation-houſe and now laid to my Charge if they ſhould not be anſwered by me, might reckon Dr. Chedſey's Saying to be true. And as concerning the Book of the Report of the Diſputations, I wrote the ſame, and it is true in every Argument, as Mr. Dean of Rocheſter, and Mr. Cheney Archdeacon of Hereford (yet being alive, and within the Realm) can teſtify.

Chedſey. You have of Scriptures the four Evangeliſts for the Probation of Chriſt's real Preſence to be in the Sacrament after the Words of Conſecration, with St. Paul to the Corinthians; which all ſay, This is my Body. They ſay not, as you would have me believe, this is not the Body. But eſpecially the 6th of John proveth the ſame moſt manifeſtly, where Chriſt promiſed to give his Body, which he performed in his laſt Supper, as it appeareth by theſe Words, The Bread which I will give is my Fleſh, which I will give for the Life of the World.

Philpot. My Lord Rich. with your Leave I muſt needs interrupt him a little, becauſe he ſpeaketh open Blaſphemy againſt the Death of Chriſt: For if that Promiſe brought in by St. John, was performed by Chriſt in his laſt Supper, then needed he not to have died after he had given the Sacrament.

Rich. Let Mr. Doctor make an End of his Arguments, and afterward object to him what you can. Anno 1555.

Chedſey. You muſt note, that there is twice * Dabo in this Saying of St. John, and the Firſt is referred to the Sacrament of the Altar; and the Second to the Sacrifice upon the Croſs: And beſides theſe manifeſt Scriptures, there be many ancient Doctors proving the ſame, as Ignatius, Irenæus, St. Cyprian (whoſe Authority he recited at large) which I do omit, becauſe I was not permitted to anſwer the ſame.

* So is there twice Ego too, and yet but one natural Body.

Rich. Now anſwer, and object to him what you can, and you ſhall be heard.

Philpot. My Lord, the chief Ground whereon he with the reſt of his Side do ground themſelves againſt us, be theſe Words, This is my Body; with a falſe Pretence of the Omnipotency of God. And before I will come to the particular Anſwers of all that he hath alledged, for that your Lordſhips may the better underſtand me, what I mean, and whereupon I ſtand, I will firſt require Mr. Doctor to anſwer me one Queſtion. But firſt of all I do proteſt to your Honours that I think as reverently of the Sacrament, as a chriſtian Man ought to do, and that I acknowledge the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Chriſt, miniſtred after Chriſt's Inſtitution, to be one of the greateſt Treaſures and Comforts that he left us on the Earth: And contrariwiſe it is moſt diſcomfort and abominable, not being miniſtred as it ought to be, as it is uſed now-a-days.

A Queſtion of Mr. Philpot.

And now to my Queſtion, which is this: Whether theſe Words only, This is my Body, ſpoken by a Prieſt over the Bread and Wine, may make the Body and Blood of Chriſt, as you ſuppoſe, or no?

Chedſey ſtaggering what he might ſay, at laſt he ſaid, That theſe Words alone, pronounced by the Prieſt, be ſufficient to make the Bread and the Wine the very Body and Blood of Chriſt really.

Philpot. That is Blaſphemy to ſay, and againſt all the Scriptures and Doctors, who affirm that the Form and Subſtance in Conſecration muſt be obſerved which Chriſt uſed and did inſtitute, as St. Cyprian ſaith, In the Sacrifice which is Chriſt, only Chriſt is to be followed. And by the Law it is forbidden to add or to take away from God's Word. And St. Peter ſaith, If any Man ſpeak let him ſpeak as the Word of God. Wherefore whoſoever ſaith that theſe Words only, This is my Body, do make a Preſence of Chriſt, without Bleſs, Take, and Eat, which be three as ſubſtantial Points of the Sacrament, as This my Body, he is highly deceived.

Therefore St. Auguſtine ſaith, Let the Word be joined to the Element, and it becometh a Sacrament: So that if the entire Words of Chriſt's Inſtitutions be not obſerved in the Miniſtration of a Sacrament, it is no Sacrament; as the Sacrifices which the ten Tribes did offer at Bethel to God, were not acceptable, becauſe they were not in all Points done according to God's Word. Wherefore except Bleſſing be made after the Word (which is a due Thankſgiving for our Redemption in Chriſt) and alſo a ſhewing forth of the Lord's Death in ſuch wiſe as the Congregation may be edify'd: And moreover a taking and eating after Chriſt's Commandment: Except (I ſay) theſe three Parts be firſt performed (which is not not done in the Maſs) theſe Words This is my Body, which are laſt placed in the Inſtitution of the Lord's Supper, cannot be verify'd. For Chriſt commanded as well, Take ye, eat ye, as This is my Body.

Chedſey. Chriſt ſaid, Take, Eat, this is my Body, and not Take ye, Eat ye.

Philpot. Did he not, Mr. Doctor? be not theſe the Words of Chriſt, Accipite, Manducate? and do not theſe Words in the plural Number ſignify, Take ye, eat ye, and not Take thou, Eat thou, as you would ſuppoſe?

Chedſey. I grant it is as you ſay.

Philpot. Likewiſe of Conſequence, you (Mr. Doctor) muſt needs deny what you have ſaid, that theſe Words, This is my Body, being only ſpoken, be ſufficient to make the Body and Blood of Chriſt in the Sacrament, as you have untruly ſaid.

Then the Biſhop came in again and ſaid, What is it that you would have Mr. Doctor deny?

The Words of Chriſt (This is my Body) except a Prieſt ſpeak them make no Body.

Philpot. My Lord, Mr. Doctor hath affirmed that theſe Words, This is my Body, ſpoken by the Prieſt only, do make the Sacrament.

Bonner. Indeed if Mr. Bridges ſhould ſpeak theſe Words over the Bread and Wine, they would be of none Effect: But if a Prieſt ſpeak them after a due Manner, they are effectual, and make a real Body.

Philpot. Mr. Doctor hath ſaid otherwiſe.

Bonner. I think you miſtake him; for he meaneth of the Words duly pronounced.

Philpot. Let him revoke that he hath granted, and then will I begin again with that which before was ſaid; that, This is my Body, hath no Place, except Bleſs, Take, and Eat, duly go before. And therefore becauſe the ſame Words do not go before, This is my Body, but prepoſterouſly follow in your Sacrament of the Maſs, it is not the Sacrament of Chriſt, neither hath Chriſt in it preſent.

Chedſey. If, This is my Body only do not make the Sacrament, no more do, Bleſs, take, and Eat.

Philpot. I grant that the one without the other cannot make the Sacrament. And it can be no Sacrament unleſs the whole Action of Chriſt doth concur together according to the firſt Inſtitution.

Chedſey. Why, then you would not have it to be the Body of Chriſt, unleſs it be received?

Philpot. No verily, it is not the very Body of Chriſt to any other, but ſuch as condignly receive the ſame after his Inſtitution.

Bonner. Is not a Loaf a Loaf, being ſet on the Table though no Body eat thereof?

Philpot. It is not alike, my Lord; for a Loaf is a Loaf before it be ſet on the Table: But ſo is not the Sacrament a perfect Sacrament before it be duly adminiſtred at the Table of the Lord.

Bonner. I pray you, what is it in the mean while, before it is received?

Philpot. It is my Lord, a Sign begun of a holy Thing, and yet no perfect Sacrament until it be received. For in the Sacrament there be two Things to be conſidered, the Sign, and the Thing itſelf, which is Chriſt and his whole Paſſion; and it is that to none but to ſuch as worthily receive the holy Signs of Bread and Wine, according to Chriſt's Inſtitution.

Windſor. There were never any that denied the Words of Chriſt as you do. Did not he ſay, This is my Body?

Philpot. My Lord, I pray you be not deceived. We do not deny the Words of Chriſt: But we ſay, theſe Words be of none Effect, being ſpoken otherwiſe than Chriſt did inſtitute them in his laſt Supper. For an Example; Chriſt biddeth the Church to baptize in the Name of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt: If a Prieſt ſay theſe Words over the Water, and there be no Child to be baptized, theſe Words only pronounced do not make Baptiſm. And again, Baptiſm is only Baptiſm to ſuch as be baptized, and to none other ſtanding by.

As Baptiſm is no Baptiſm but to the Child that is baptized, and not to the Standers by: So the Sacrament of the Body is no Sacrament but to them that worthily receive.

Lord Chamberlain. I pray you, my Lord, let me ask him one Queſtion. What Kind of Preſence in the Sacrament (duly adminiſtred according to Chriſt's Ordinance) do you allow?

Philpot. If any come worthily to receive, then do I confeſs the Preſence of Chriſt wholly to be with all the Fruits of his Paſſion, unto the ſaid worthy Receiver, by the Spirit of God, and that Chriſt is thereby joined to him, and he to Chriſt.

Lord Chamberlain. I am anſwered.

Bonner. My Lords, take no heed of him, for he goeth about to deceive you. His Similitude that he bringeth in of Baptiſm, is nothing like to the Sacrament of the Altar. For if I ſhould ſay to Sir John Bridges being with me at Supper, and having a fat Capon, Take, eat, this is of a Capon, although he eat not thereof, is it not a Capon ſtill? And likewiſe of a Piece of Beef, or of a Cup of Wine? if I ſay, Drink, this is a Cup of Wine? is it not ſo, becauſe he drinketh not thereof?

Philpot. My Lord, your Similitudes are too groſs for ſo high Myſteries as we have in Hand, as if I were your Equal I could more plainly declare; and there is much more Diſſimilitude between common Meats and Drinks, than there is between Baptiſm and the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Chriſt. Like muſt be compared to like, and ſpiritual Things with ſpiritual, and not ſpiritual Things with corporal Things. And Meats and Drinks be of their own Natures Good or Evil, and your Words, commending or diſcommending, do but declare what they are. But the Sacraments be to be conſidered according to the Word which Chriſt ſpake of them, of which, Take ye, and eat ye, be ſome of the Chief, concurrent to the making of the ſame, without which there can be no Sacraments: And therefore the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Chriſt is called Communion: And likewiſe in the Goſpel Chriſt commanded, ſaying, Divide it among you.

Chedſey. St. Paul calleth it a Communication.

Philpot. That doth more expreſly ſhew, that there muſt be a Participation of the Sacrament together.

Bonner. My Lords, I am ſorry I have troubled you ſo long with this obſtinate Man, with whom we can do no good; I will trouble you no longer now. And with that the Lords roſe up, none of them ſaying any evil Word unto me, half amazed, in my Judgment, God work it to good.

You are too weak, my Lord, you may riſe when you will.

Thus ended the ſixth Part of this Tragedy: The ſeventh look for with Joy.

The ſeventh Examination of Mr. John Philpot, on the 19th of November, before the Biſhops of London and Rocheſter, the Chancellor of Litchfield, and Dr. Chedſey.

BONNER. Sirrah, come hither. How chance you came no ſooner? Is it well done of you to make Mr. Chancellor and me to tarry for you this Hour? By the Faith of my Body, half an Hour before Maſs, and half an Hour even at Maſs, looking for your coming.

Philpot. My Lord, it is well known to you that I am a Priſoner, and that the Doors be ſhut upon me, and I cannot come when I pleaſe; but as ſoon as the Doors of my Priſon were open, I came immediately.

Bonner. We ſent for thee to the Intent thou ſhouldſt have come to Maſs. How ſay you, would you have come to Maſs or no, if the Doors had ſooner been opened?

Philpot. My Lord, that is another Manner of Queſtion.

Bonner. Lo, Mr. Chancellor, I told you we ſhould have a froward Fellow of him; he will anſwer directly to nothing. I have had him before both the Spiritual Lords and Temporal, thus he fareth ſtill; yet he reckoneth himſelf better learned than all the Realm. Yea, before the Temporal Lords the orher Day, he was ſo fooliſh to challenge the beſt: He would make himſelf learned, and is a very ignorant Fool indeed.

You ſaid before that he was learned.

Philpot. I reckoned I anſwered your Lordſhip before the Lords plain enough.

Bonner. Why anſwereſt thou not directly, whether thou wouldſt have gone to Maſs or no, if thou hadſt come in Time?

Philpot. Mine Anſwer ſhall be thus, that if your Lordſhip can prove your Maſs, whereunto you would have me to come, to be the true Service of God, whereunto a Chriſtian ought to come, I will afterward come with a good Will.

Bonner. Look, I pray you; the King and Queen, and all the Nobility of the Realm do come to Maſs, and yet he will not. By my Faith, thou art too well handled: Thou ſhalt be worſe handled hereafter, I warrant thee.

Note how ſubſtantially Bp. Bonner proveth the Maſs.

Philpot. If to lie in a blind Coal-houſe, may be counted good handling, without both Fire and Candle, then may it be ſaid, I am well handled. Your Lordſhip hath Power to treat my Body as you pleaſe.

Bonner. Thou art a Fool, and a very ignorant Fool. Mr. Chancellor, in good Faith I have handled him and his Fellows with as much Gentleneſs as they can deſire. I did let their Friends come unto them to relieve them. And wot you what? the other Day they had gotten themſelves up into the Top of the Leads with a many of Apprentices, gazing Abroad as though they had been at Liberty; but I will cut off your Reſort: And as for the Apprentices, they were as good not to come to you, if I take them.

Philpot. My Lord, we have no ſuch Reſort to us as your Lordſhip imagineth, and there cometh very few unto us. And of Apprentces I kno w not one, neither have we any Leads to walk on over our Cole-houſe, that I know of: Wherefore your Lordſhip hath miſtaken your Mark.

Anno 1555.

Bonner. Nay, now you think (becauſe my Lord Chancellor * is gone) that we will burn no more: Yes I warrant thee, I will diſpatch you ſhortly, unleſs you do recant.

* He meaneth Stephen Gardiner, who in this Month died a little before.

Philpot. My Lord, I had not thought that I ſhould have been alive now, neither ſo raw as I am, but even well roaſted to Aſhes.

Chancellor. Caſt not yourſelf wilfully away, Mr. Philpot. Be content to be ruled by my Lord here, and by other learned Men of this Realm, and you may do well enough.

Philpot. My Conſcience beareth me record that I ſeek to pleaſe God, and that the Love and Fear of God cauſeth me to do as I do: And I were of all other Creatures moſt miſerable, if for mine own Will only I do loſe all the Conveniencies I might have in this Life, and afterwards be caſt into Damnation. But I am ſure it is not my Will whereon I ſtand, but God's Will, who will not ſuffer me to be caſt away, I am ſure.

Chancellor. You are not ſo ſure, but you may be deceived.

Bonner. Well, ſince thou wilt not be conformable by fair Means, I will proceed againſt thee Ex Officio, and therefore hearken here to ſuch Articles as I have here written, and I charge thee to make anſwer to them. And with that he read a Libel which he had in his Hand of divers Articles, and when he had done, he bade me anſwer.

Two Untruths in the Biſhop's Articles.

Philpot. Your Libel, my Lord, containeth in Sum two ſpecial Points: The Firſt pretendeth, that I ſhould be of your Dioceſs, and therefore your Lordſhip, upon divers ſuſpects and infamies of Hereſy going upon me, is moved to proceed againſt me by your ordinary Office; which firſt is not true, for that I am not of your Lordſhip's Dioceſs, as the Libel doth pretend. And the Second is, that I being baptized in the catholick Church, and in the catholick Faith, am gone from them, which is not ſo, for I am of that catholick Faith and Church as I was baptized into.

Bonner. What? art thou not of my Dioceſs? where are ye now I pray you?

Philpot. I cannot deny but I am in your Coal-houſe, which is your Dioceſs: Yet I am not of your Dioceſs.

Bonner. You were ſent hither unto me by the Queen's Majeſty's Commiſſioners, and thou art now in my Dioceſs: Wherefore I will proceed againſt thee as thy Ordinary.

Philpot. I was brought hither through Violence, and therefore my preſent being now in your Dioceſs is not enough to abridge me of mine own Ordinary's Juriſdiction, neither maketh it me willingly ſubject to your Juriſdiction, ſince it cometh by Force, and by ſuch Men as had no juſt Authority ſo to do; no more than a Sanctuary-man, being by Force brought forth of his Place of Privilege, doth thereby loſe his Privilege, but always may challenge the ſame whereſoever he be brought.

Chedſey. Hath not the Queen's Majeſty Authority, by her Commiſſioners, to remove your Body whither ſhe will? and ought you not to obey herein?

Philpot. I grant that the Queen's Majeſty (of her juſt Power) may tranſpoſe my Body, whither it ſhall pleaſe her Grace to command the ſame. But yet by your Laws, Spiritual Cauſes be not ſubject to the Temporal Power.

Anno 1555.

As for Example; you, Mr. Doctor, if the Queen's Majeſty would appoint two temporal Men to be Judges over you in certain ſpiritual Matters, might not you alledge the Privilege of a Clerk, and demand competent ſpiritual Judges in your Cauſes?

Spiritual Things are not ſubject to temporal Powers, and therefore the temporal Commiſſioners had no Power to remove him into another Man's Dioceſe.

Bonner. Doth not a Judge (I pray you) appoint a Court at his own Diſcretion?

Philpot. My Lord, your Rule is true in temporal Matters, but in ſpiritual Cauſes it is not ſo; which be otherwiſe privileged.

Bonner. What ſayeſt thou then to the ſecond Article, and to the other?

Philpot. My Lord, I ſay that I am not bound to anſwer the ſecond, neither the reſt, unleſs the firſt be proved.

Bonner. Well, ſuppoſe the firſt may be proved, as it will be, what will you ſay then to the ſecond, that you are not of the ſame catholick Faith, neither of the ſame Church now as you were baptized in?

Philpot. I am of the ſame catholick Faith, and of the ſame catholick Church, which is of Chriſt, the Pillar and Eſtabliſhment of Truth.

Bonner. Nay, that you are not.

Philpot. Yes that I am.

Bonner. Your Godfathers and Godmothers were of another Faith than you be now.

Philpot. I was not baptized either into my Godfather's Faith or my Godmothers, but into the Faith and into the Church of Chriſt.

Bonner. How know you that?

Philpot. By the Word of God, which is the Touchſtone of Faith, and the Limits of the Church.

Bonner. How long hath your Church ſtood I pray you.

Philpot. Even from the Beginning, from Chriſt, and from his Apoſtles, and from their immediate Succeſſors.

Chancellor. He will prove his Church to be before Chriſt.

Philpot. If I did ſo I go not amiſs: For there was a Church before the coming of Chriſt, which maketh one catholick Church.

Chancellor. It is ſo indeed.

Philpot. I will deſire no better Rule than the ſame which is oftentimes brought in of your Side, to prove both my Faith and the catholick Church; that is, Antiquity, Univerſality, and Unity.

Bonner. Do you not ſee what a bragging fooliſh Fellow this is? He would ſeem to be very well ſeen in the Doctors, and he is but a Fool. By what Doctor art thou able to prove thy Church? Name him, and thou ſhalt have him.

Philpot. My Lord, let me have all your ancient Writers, with Pen, and Ink, and Paper, and I will prove both my Faith and my Church out of every one of them.

Becauſe you dare not.

Bonner. No that thou ſhalt not have. You ſhall ſee how he lieth. St. Cyprian ſaith, There muſt be one High-prieſt, to which the Reſidue muſt obey; and they will allow no Head, neither Vicar General.

St. Cyprian meaneth every Church to have his own Governor, not all Churches to be under one.

Philpot. St. Cyprian ſaith not, that there ſhould be a Vicar General over all. For in his Book De ſimplicitate Prælatorum, I am ſure he ſaith the contrary. There is but one Biſhoprick, which is wholly poſſeſſed of every Biſhop in part.

Bonner. Fetch hither the Book, thou ſhalt ſee the manifeſt Place againſt thee.

Dr. Chedſey brought the Book, and turned to the Place in an Epiſtle written unto Cornelius then Biſhop of Rome, and recited theſe Words in Sum: That it went not well with the Church, where the High-prieſt was not obeyed; and ſo would have concluded for the Confirmation of the Biſhop's Saying. Cypr. lib. 1. Epiſt. 3.

Philpot. Mr. Doctor, you miſconſtrue the Place of St. Cyprian; for he meaneth not there by the High-prieſt the Biſhop of Rome, but every Patriarch in his Precinct, of whom there were four appointed in his Time. And in writing unto Cornelius he meaneth by the High-prieſt himſelf, who was then Biſhop of Africa, whoſe Authority the Hereticks began to deſpiſe. Whereof he complaineth to Cornelius, and ſaith, the Church cannot be well ordered, where the chief Miniſter by Order after the Judgment of the Scriptures, after the Agreement of the People, and the Conſent of his Fellow-Biſhops, is not obey'd. The Place of St. Cyprian expounded.

Bonner. Hath not the Biſhop of Rome always been ſupreme Head of the Church, and Chriſt's Vicar in Earth even from Peter?

Philpot. No, that he was not. For by the Word of God he hath no more Authority, than the Biſhop of London hath.

Bonner. Was not Peter Head of the Church, and hath not the Biſhop of Rome, who is his Succeſſor, the ſame Authority?

Philpot. I grant that the Biſhop of Rome, as he is the Succeſſor of Peter, hath the ſame Authority as Peter had: But Peter had no more Authority than every one of the Apoſtles had.

Chancellor. Yes that St. Peter had; for Chriſt ſaid ſpecially unto him, I will give thee the Keys of the Kingdom of Heaven; which he ſpake to none other of his Diſciples ſingularly, but to him.

Philpot. St. Auguſtine anſwereth otherwiſe to the Objection, and ſaith, That if in Peter there had not been the Figure of the Church, the Lord had not ſaid to him, To thee will I give the Keys of the Kingdom of Heaven. Which if Peter received not, the Church hath them not; if the Church hath them, then Peter hath them not. Peter beareth but a Figure of the Church.

Bonner. What if I can prove and ſhew you out of the civil Law, that all Chriſtendom ought to follow the holy catholick Church of Rome, as there is a ſpecial Title thereof, De catholica Fide & ſancta Romana Eccleſia? Bp. Bonner's Divinity lieth much in the civil Law.

Philpot. That is nothing material, ſeeing the Things of God be not ſubject to Man's Laws; and the divine Matters muſt be ordered by the Word of God, and not of Man.

A Doctor. What will you ſay, if I can prove that Chriſt built his Church upon Peter, and that out of St. Cyprian? will you then believe that the Biſhop of Rome ought to be ſupreme Head of the Church?

Philpot. I know what St. Cyprian writeth in that Behalf; but he meaneth nothing as you take it.

A Doctor. St. Cyprian hath theſe Words, That upon Peter was built the Church, as upon the firſt Beginning of Unity.

Philpot. He declareth that in an Example, that Unity muſt be in the Church; he grounded on Peter his Church alone, and not upon Men. Which he doth more manifeſtly declare in the Book De ſimplicitate Prælatorum, ſaying, in the Perſon of one Man God gave the Keys to all, that he in Signification thereby might declare the Unity of all Men. The Place of St. Cyprian expounded.

A Doctor. What will you underſtand St. Cyprian ſo? That were good indeed.

Philpot.

Philpot. I think you cannot underſtand St. Cyprian better, than he doth declare himſelf.

Bonner. I will deſire you (Mr. Chancellor) to take ſome Pains with Mr. Doctor Chedſey, about his Examination, for I muſt go to the Parliament Houſe. And I will deſire you to dine with me.

Philpot. Then the Doctor again took his former Authority in Hand for want of another, and would have made a further Circumſtance, digreſſing from his Purpoſe. To whom I ſaid, he knew not whereabouts he went, and therewith he laughed. And I ſaid his Divinity was nothing but ſcoffing.

A Doctor. Yea, then I have done with you, and ſo went away.

Philpot. You are too young in Divinity to teach me in the Matters of my Faith. Tho' you may be more learned in other Things than I, yet in Divinity I have been longer practiſed than you, for any Thing I can hear of you; therefore be not too haſty to judge what you do not perfectly know.

Chancellor. Peter and his Succeſſors from the Beginning have been allowed for the ſupreme Head of the Church, and that by the Scriptures, for that Chriſt ſaid unto him in St. John thrice, Feed my Sheep.

The Words of Chriſt to Peter, Feed my Sheep, expounded by Go ye and preach.

Philpot. That is no otherwiſe to be taken, than Go ye and preach; which was ſpoken to all the Apoſtles as well as unto Peter. And that Chriſt ſaid thrice, Feed my Sheep; it ſignifieth nothing elſe but the earneſt Study that the Miniſters of God ought to have in preaching the Word. God grant that you of the Clergy would weigh your Duty in this Behalf more than you do. Is this a juſt Interpretation of the Scripture, to take Feed my Sheep, for to be Lord of the whole World?

In this mean while a Batchelor of Divinity came in, which is a Reader of Greek in Oxford, belonging to the Biſhop, and he took upon him to help Mr. Chancellor.

Scholar. What will you ſay if I can ſhew you a Greek Author called Theophylact, to interpret it ſo? Will you believe his Interpretation?

Philpot. Theophylact is a late Writer, and one that was a Favourer of the Biſhop of Rome, and therefore not to be credited, ſince his Interpretation is contrary to the manifeſt Words of the Scripture, and contrary to the Determination of many General Councils.

Scholar. In what General Council was it otherwiſe, that the Biſhop of Rome was not ſupreme Head over all?

In Nice Council the Biſhop of Rome was not ſupreme Head nor Preſident.

Philpot. In the Council of Nice I am ſure it was otherwiſe; for Athanaſius was there the chief Biſhop and Preſident of the Council, and not the Biſhop of Rome.

Scholar. Nay that is not ſo.

Philpot. Then I perceive you are better ſeen in Words than in Knowledge of Things; and I will gage with you what you will it is ſo, as you may ſee in the Epitome of the Councils.

Scholar. I will fetch Euſebius and ſhew the contrary, and the Book of General Councils. He went into my Lord's Cloſet, and brought Euſebius, but the General Councils he brought not, ſaying (for ſaving of his Honeſty) that he could not come by them, and there he would have defended that it was otherwiſe in Euſebius, but was not able to ſhew the ſame, and ſo ſhrank away confounded.

Chancellor. The Church of Rome hath been always taken for the catholick Church: Therefore I would adviſe you to come into the ſame with us. You ſee all the Men of this Realm do condemn you. And why will you be ſo ſingular?

Philpot. I have ſaid, and ſtill do ſay, that if you can be able to prove it unto me, that I will be of the ſame. But I am ſure that the Church, which you make ſo much of, is a falſe Church, and a Synagogue of Satan. And you with the learned Men of the Realm do perſecute the true Church, and condemn ſuch as be more righteous than you.

Chancellor. Do you hear, Mr. Doctor, what he ſaith, that the Church of Rome is the Devil?

Chedſey. I wiſh you did think more reverently of the Church of Rome. What will you ſay if I can ſhew you out of St. Auſtin, in his Epiſtle written unto Pope Innocent, that the whole General Council of Carthage did allow the Church of Rome to be chiefeſt over all others?

Philpot. I am ſure you can ſhew no ſuch Thing. And with that he fetch'd me the Book of St. Auſtin, and turned to the Epiſtle, but he could not prove his Allegation manifeſtly, but by Conjectures in this wiſe.

Three blind Conjectures out of the Epiſtle of St. Auſtin to Pope Innocent, proving the See of Rome to be ſupreme Head.

Chedſey. Here you may ſee, that the Council of Carthage writing to Innocent, the Biſhop, calleth the See of Rome the apoſtolick See. And beſides this, they write to him certifying him of Things done in the Council for the Condemnation of the Donatiſts, requiring his Approbations in the ſame; which they would not have done if they had not taken the Church of Rome for the ſupreme Head of others. And moreover you may ſee how St. Auſtin doth prove the Church of Rome to be the catholick Church, by continual Succeſſion of the Biſhops until his Time, which Succeſſion we can prove until our Days: Therefore by the ſame Reaſon of St. Auſtin we ſay now, that the Church of Rome is the catholick Church.

Philpot. Mr. Doctor, I have conſidered how you do weigh St. Auſtin; and contrary to his Meaning and Words, you would infer your falſe Concluſion. As concerning that it was called by him the apoſtolical See, that is not material to prove the Church of Rome now to be the catholick Church. I will grant it now that it is the apoſtolick See, in Reſpect that Paul and Peter did once preach there the Goſpel, and abode there for a certain Seaſon. I would you could prove it to be the apoſtolical See of the true Religion and Sincerity as the Apoſtle left it, and did teach the ſame; which if ye could do, you might boaſt of Rome as of the apoſtolical See; otherwiſe it is now of no more Force, than if the Turk at Antioch and at Jeruſalem ſhould boaſt of the apoſtolick Sees, becauſe the Apoſtles once did there abide, and founded the Church of Chriſt.

How the See of Rome may be called apoſtolical.

And whereas the whole Council of Carthage did write unto Pope Innocent, certifying him of what was done in the General Council, and willing him to ſet his helping Hand to the ſuppreſſing of the Donatiſts, as they had done; that Fact of the Council doth not prove the Supremacy of the Biſhop of Rome, no more than if the whole Convocation-houſe now gathered together, and agreeing upon certain Articles, might ſend the ſame to ſome Biſhop that upon certain Impediments is not preſent, deſiring him to agree thereto, and to ſet them forth Anno 1555. forth in his Dioceſs. Which Fact doth not make any ſuch Biſhop of greater Authority than the reſt, becauſe his Conſent is brotherly required.

The Scope of St. Auguſtine's Argument is not to prove the Church of Rome therefore to be ſound in the Doctrine, becauſe it hath Succeſſion of Biſhops from the Apoſtles, but to prove the Donatiſts to be Schiſmaticks, for that the Church of Rome continuing both ſound in the Doctrine of the Apoſtles, and alſo in retaining ſtill Succeſſion of Biſhops from the Apoſtles Time, yet they would forſake the Unity of that Church, and ſet up another Church of their own.

The Argument is this.

To diſſever from that Church which by continual Succeſſion of Biſhops deſcendeth from the Apoſtles, and keepeth the ſame Inſtitution ſtill in Faith and Doctrine, is to break the Unity of the Church, and to be Schiſmaticks.

The Donatiſts do ſo from the Church of Rome, having no juſt Cauſe of Doctrine ſo to do.

Ergo, The Donatiſts be Schiſmaticks.

And touching the Succeſſion of the Biſhops of Rome, brought in by St. Auguſtine, it maketh nothing now thereby to prove the ſame catholick Church, unleſs you can conclude with the ſame Reaſon as St. Auguſtine doth. And the Rehearſal of the Succeſſion of the Biſhops doth tend to this only, to prove the Donatiſts to be Hereticks, becauſe they began as well at Rome as in Africa, to found another Church of their own ſetting up, than was grounded by Peter and Paul, and by their Succeſſors, whom he reciteth until his Time, which all taught no ſuch Doctrine, neither ſuch Church as the Donatiſts. And if preſently you be able to prove by the Biſhops of Rome (whereof you do glory) that ſuch Doctrine hath not been taught by any of the Succeſſors of Peter's See, as is now taught and believed by us, you have good Reaſon againſt us: Otherwiſe it is of no Force, as I am able to declare.

Chancellor. Well Mr. Doctor, you ſee we can do no good in perſuading of him? Let us adminiſter the Articles which my Lord hath left us, unto him. How ſay you Mr. Philpot to theſe Articles? Mr. Johnſon, I pray you write his Anſwers.

Philpot. Mr. Chancellor, you have no Authority to enquire of me my Belief in ſuch Articles as you go about, for I am not of my Lord of London's Dioceſs; and to be brief with you, I will make no further Anſwer herein than I have already to the Biſhop.

Chancellor. Why then let us go our Ways, and let his Keeper take him away.

Thus ended the ſeventh Part of his Tragedy.

A private Conference between Mr. Philpot and Biſhop Bonner.

EARLY the next Morning the Biſhop ſent one of his Men to me, to call me up into his Chappel to hear Maſs.

Biſhop's-man. Mr. Philpot, Where be you?

Philpot. Who is it that calleth me?

Biſhop's-man. My Lord's Will is, you ſhould riſe and come to hear Maſs: Will you come or no?

Philpot. My Stomach is not very good this Morning: You may tell my Lord I am ſick. After this the Keeper was ſent to bring me to my Lord.

The Keeper. Mr. Philpot, you muſt riſe and come to my Lord.

Philpot. I am at your Command, Mr. Keeper, as ſoon as I can: And going out of the Priſon, he asked me, ſaying:

The Keeper. Will ye go to Maſs?

Philpot. My Stomach is too raw to digeſt ſuch raw Meats of Fleſh, Blood, and Bone, this Morning.

After this my Keeper preſented me to the Biſhop in his Hall.

Bonner. Mr. Philpot, I charge you to anſwer unto ſuch Articles as my Chaplain and my Regiſter have from me to object againſt you; go and anſwer them.

Philpot. My Lord, all Judgments ought to be publick. Therefore if your Lordſhip have any Thing to charge me lawfully withal, let me be in Judgment lawfully and openly called, and I will anſwer according to my Duty; otherwiſe in Corners I will not.

Bonner. Thou art a fooliſh Knave I ſee well enough, thou ſhalt anſwer whether thou wilt or no; Go thy Ways with them, I ſay.

Philpot. I will go with them at your Lordſhip's Pleaſure; but I will make them no further Anſwers than I have ſaid already.

Bonner. No, wilt thou not Knave? Have him away, and ſet him in the Stocks: What, fooliſh Knave?

Philpot. Indeed my Lord, you handle me, with others, like Fools: And we muſt be content to be made Fools at your Hands, Stocks and Violence be your Biſhop-like Alms. You go about by Force in Corners to oppreſs, and be aſhamed that your Doings ſhould come to Light; God ſhorten your cruel Kingdom for his Mercies ſake. And I was put by and by into the Stocks, into an Houſe alone, ſeparate from my Fellows: God be praiſed that he hath thought me worthy to ſuffer any Thing for his Name's ſake. Better it is to ſit in the Stocks of this World, than to ſit in the Stocks of a damnable Conſcience.

Another Conference between the Biſhop and Mr. Philpot, and other Priſoners.

PHILPOT. The next Day after, an Hour before Day, the Biſhop ſent for me again by the Keeper.

The Keeper. Mr. Philpot ariſe, you muſt come to my Lord.

Philpot. I wonder what my Lord meaneth, that he ſendeth for me thus early, I fear he will uſe ſome Violence towards me, wherefore I pray you make him this Anſwer, That if he did ſend for me by an Order of Law, I will come and anſwer; otherwiſe, ſince I am not of his Dioceſs, neither is he mine Ordinary, I will not (without I be violently conſtrained) come unto him.

Keeper. I will go and tell my Lord what Anſwer you make: And ſo he went away to the Biſhop, and immediately returned with two of the Biſhop's Men, ſaying, that I muſt come whether I would or no.

Philpot. If by Violence any of you will enforce me to go, then I muſt go, otherwiſe I will not; and therewith one of them took me with Force by the Arm, and led me up into the Biſhop's Gallery.

Bonner. What, thou art a fooliſh Knave indeed; thou wilt not come without thou be fetch'd.

Philpot. I am brought indeed (my Lord) by Violence unto you, and your Cruelty is ſuch, that I am afraid to come before you, I would your Lordſhip would gently proceed againſt me by the Law.

Bonner. I am blamed by the Lords the Biſhops, ſhops, for that I have not diſpatched thee ere this. And in Faith I made Sute to my Lord Cardinal, and to all the Convocation-houſe, that they would hear thee. And my Lord of Lincoln ſtood up, and ſaid, that thou wert a frantick Fellow, and a Man that will have the laſt Word. And they all have much blamed me, becauſe I have brought thee ſo often before the Lords openly: And they ſay, it is Meat and Drink to you to ſpeak in an open Audience, you glory ſo of yourſelf. Wherefore I am commanded to take a farther Order with thee, and in good Faith if thou wilt not relent, I will make no further Delay. Marry, if thou wilt be conformable, I will yet forgive thee all that is paſt, and thou ſhalt have no Hurt for any Thing that is already ſpoken or done.

This Biſhop of Lincoln was Dr. White.

Philpot. My Lord, I have anſwered you already in this Behalf, what I will do. And as for the Report of Mr. White, Biſhop of Lincoln, I paſs not: Who is known to be mine Enemy, for that I being Archdeacon did excommunicate him preaching naughty Doctrine. If Chriſt my Maſter was called a mad Man, it is no marvel though ye count me frantick.

Mr. Philpot when Archdeacon excommunicated Biſhop White for preaching falſe Doctrine.

Bonner. Hadſt thou not a Pig brought thee the other Day with a Knife in it? Wherefore was it (pray thee) but to kill thyſelf? or, as it is told me (marry I am counſelled to take heed of thee) to kill me? But I fear thee not. I think I am able to tread thee under my Feet; do the beſt thou canſt.

Philpot. My Lord, I cannot deny but that there is a Knife in the Pig's Belly that was brought me. But who put it in, or for what Purpoſe, I know not, unleſs it were becauſe he that ſent the Meat thought I was without a Knife, and ſo put it in. But other Things your Lordſhip needeth not to fear: For I was never without a Knife ſince I came to Priſon. And touching your own Perſon, you ſhall live long if you ſhould live till I go about to kill you; and I confeſs by Violence your Lordſhip is able to overcome me.

Bonner. I charge thee to anſwer to mine Articles. Hold him a Book. Thou ſhalt ſwear to anſwer truly to all ſuch Articles, as I ſhall demand of thee.

Philpot. I will firſt know your Lordſhip to be mine Ordinary, before I ſwear herein.

Bonner. What, we ſhall have an Anabaptiſt of thee, which thinketh it not lawful to ſwear before a Judge?

Philpot. My Lord, I am no Anabaptiſt, I think it lawful to ſwear before a competent Judge, being lawfully required. But I refuſe to ſwear in theſe Cauſes before your Lordſhip, becauſe you are not mine Ordinary.

Bonner. I am thine Ordinary, and here do pronounce by Sentence peremptory, that I am thine Ordinary, and that thou art of my Dioceſs: And here he ordered others to be called in to bear him witneſs. And I make thee (taking one of his Servants by the Arm) to be my Notary. And now hearken to my Articles, to which (when he had read them) he moniſhed me to make Anſwer, and ſaid to the Keeper, Fetch me his Fellows, and I ſhall make them to be Witneſſes againſt him.

In the mean while came in one of the Sheriff's of London, whom the Biſhop (calling for two Chairs) placed by him, ſaying, Mr. Sheriff, I would you ſhould underſtand how I do proceed againſt this Mar. Mr. Sheriff, you ſhall hear what Articles this Man doth maintain; and ſo read a Rabblement of feigned Articles: That I ſhould deny Baptiſm to be neceſſary to them that were born of chriſtian Parents, that I deny'd Faſting and Prayer, and all other good Deeds, and I maintained only bare Faith to be ſufficient to Salvation, whatſoever a Man did beſides, and I maintained God to be the Author of all Sin and Wickedneſs.

Falſe Articles feigned againſt Mr. Philpot.

Anno 1555.

Philpot. Ha, my Lord, have ye nothing of Truth to charge me withal, but ye muſt be fain to imagine theſe blaſphemous Lies againſt me? You might as well have ſaid I had killed your Father. The Scriptures ſay, That God will deſtroy all Men that ſpeak Lies. And is not your Lordſhip aſhamed to ſay before this worſhipful Gentleman (who is unknown to me) that I maintain theſe abominable Blaſphemies which you have rehearſed? which if I did maintain, I were well worthy to be counted an Heretick, and to be burnt an hundred Times if it were poſſible.

Bonner. I do object them unto thee, to hear what thou wilt ſay in them, and how thou canſt clear thyſelf of them.

Philpot. Then it was not juſtly ſaid of your Lordſhip in the Beginning, that I did maintain them, ſince almoſt I hold none of theſe Articles you have read, in Form as they are written.

Bonner detected in a Lie.

Bonner. How ſaiſt thou? wilt thou anſwer to them or no?

Philpot. I will firſt know you to be mine Ordinary, and that you may lawfully charge me with ſuch Things, and then afterward being lawfully called in Judgment, I will ſhew my Mind fully thereof, and not otherwiſe.

Bonner. Well, then I will make thy Fellows to be Witneſſes herein againſt thee: Where are they? come.

Other Priſoners called in to bear Witneſs againſt Mr. Philpot.

Keeper. They be here, my Lord.

Bonner. Come hither Sirs (hold them a Book) You ſhall ſwear to the Contents of that Book, that you ſhall (all Manner of Affections laid apart) ſay the Truth of all ſuch Articles as you ſhall be demanded of concerning this Man here preſent, who is a very naughty Man, and take you heed of him that he doth not deceive you, as I am afraid he doth you much Hurt, and ſtrengtheneth you in your Errors.

Priſoners. My Lord, we will not ſwear, except we know whereto: We can accuſe him of no Evil, we have been but a while acquainted with him.

The Priſoners refuſed to be ſworn againſt Mr. Philpot.

Philpot. I wonder your Lordſhip knowing the Law, will go about, contrary to the ſame, to have infamous Perſons to be Witneſſes, for your Lordſhip doth take them to be Hereticks, and by the Law an Heretick cannot be a Witneſs.

Bonner. Yes, one Heretick againſt another may be well enough. And, Mr. Sheriff, I will make one of them to be a Witneſs againſt another.

Bonner againſt proceedeth againſt the Law.

Philpot. You have the Law in your Hand, and you will do what you liſt.

Priſoners. No, my Lord.

Bonner. No, will you not? I will make you ſwear, whether you will or no. I think they be Anabaptiſts, Mr. Sheriff, they think it not lawful to ſwear before a Judge.

Note how the Biſhops make Anabaptiſts.

Philpot. We think it lawful to ſwear for a Man judicially called, as we are not now, but in a blind Corner.

Bonner. Why then, ſeeing you will not ſwear ſwear againſt your Fellow, you ſhall ſwear for yourſelves, and I do here in the Preſence of Mr. Sheriff object the ſame Articles unto you as I have done unto him, and do require you under pain of Excommunication, to anſwer particularly unto every one of them when ye ſhall be examined, as ye ſhall be by and by examined by my Regiſter and ſome of my Chaplains.

Anno 1555.

Priſoners. My Lord, we will not accuſe our ſelves. If any Man can lay any Thing againſt us we are here ready to anſwer thereto: Otherwiſe we pray your Lordſhip not to burden us; for ſome of us are here before you, we know no juſt Cauſe why.

Bonner. Mr. Sheriff, I will trouble you no longer with theſe froward Men. And ſo he roſe up, and was going away, talking with Mr. Sheriff.

Philpot. Mr. Sheriff, I pray you record how my Lord proceedeth againſt us in Corners, without all Order of Law, having no juſt Cauſe to lay againſt us. And after this were all commanded to be put in the Stocks, where I ſat from Morning until Night; and the Keeper at Night upon Favour let me out.

Another private Conference between the Biſhop and Mr. Philpot in the Coal-houſe.

PHILPOT. The Sunday after, the Biſhop came into the Coal-houſe at Night with the Keeper, and viewed the Houſe, ſaying, that he was never there before: Whereby a Man may gueſs how he hath kept God's Commandment in viſiting the Priſoners, ſeeing he was never with them that have been ſo nigh his Noſe: And he came not then for any good Zeal, but to view the Place, and thought it too good for me, and therefore after Supper, between eight and nine, he ſent for me, ſaying;

Bp. Bonner viewing his Coal-houſe.

Bonner. Sir, I have great Diſpleaſure of the Queen and the Council for keeping you ſo long, and letting you have ſo much Liberty; and beſides that, you be yonder and ſtrengthen the other Priſoners in their Errors, as I have laid wait for your Doings, and am certify'd of you well enough; I will ſequeſter you therefore from them, and you ſhall hurt no more as you have done, and I will out of Hand diſpatch you as I am commanded, unleſs you will be a conformable Man.

Philpot. My Lord, you have my Body in your Cuſtody, you may tranſport it whither you pleaſe; I am content. And I wiſh you would make as quick Expedition in my Judgment as you ſay; I long for it: And as for Conformity, I am ready to yield to all Truth, if any can bring better than I.

Bonner. Why, will you believe no Man but yourſelf, whatſoever they ſay?

Philpot. My Belief muſt not hang upon Mens Sayings, without ſure Authority of God's Word, which if any can ſhew me, I will be pliant to the ſame; otherwiſe, I cannot go from my certain Faith to that which is uncertain.

Bonner. Have you then the Truth only?

Philpot. My Lord I will ſpeak my Mind freely unto you, and upon no Malice I bear to you, before God. You have not the Truth, neither are you of the Church of God; but you perſecute both the Truth and the true Church of God, for which Cauſe you cannot proſper long. You ſee God doth not proſper your Doings according to your Expectation: He hath of late ſhewed his juſt Judgment againſt one of your greateſt Doers, who by Report died miſerably. I envy not your Authority you are in. You that have Learning ſhould know beſt how to rule. And ſeeing God hath reſtored you to your Dignity and Living again, uſe the ſame to God's Glory, and to the ſetting forth of his true Religion; otherwiſe it will not continue, do what you can. With this Saying he pauſed, and at length ſaid;

He meaneth Stephen Gardiner Biſhop of Wincheſter.

Good Counſel given to Biſhop Bonner.

Bonner. That good Man was puniſhed for ſuch as thou art. Where is the Keeper? Come let him have him to the Place that is provided for him. Go your Way before.

Philpot. And he followed me, calling the Keeper aſide, commanding to keep all Men from me, and narrowly to ſearch me (as the Sequel did declare) and brought me to his Privy-door that goeth into the Church, and commanded two of his Men to accompany the Keeper, and to ſee me placed.

Mr. Philpot conveyed into a cloſe Tower joining to Paul's Church.

And afterwards I paſſed through Paul's up to Lollard's Tower, and after that turned along the Weſt-ſide of St. Paul's through the Wall; and paſſing through ſix or ſeven Doors, came to my Lodging through many Straits; where I called to Remembrance, that ſtrait is the Way to Heaven. And it is in a Tower right on the other Side of Lollard's Tower, as high almoſt as the Battlements of Paul's, eight Foot in Breadth, and thirteen in Length, and almoſt over the Priſon where I was before, having a Window opening toward the Eaſt, by which I may look over the Tops of a great many Houſes, but ſee no Man paſſing into them: And whoſo walketh in the Biſhop's upper Gallery going to his Chappel, may ſee my Window, and me ſtanding in the ſame.

Mr. Philpot ſearched for Writings.

And as I came to my Place, the Keeper pluck'd off my Gown, and ſearched me very narrowly, and took away Penner, Inkhorn, Gridle, and Knife, but (as God would) I had an inkling a little before I was called, of my removal, and thereupon made an Errand to the Stool, where (full ſore againſt my Will) I caſt away many a ſweet and friendly Letter: But that which I had written of my laſt Examination before, I thruſt into my Hoſe, thinking the next Day to have made an End thereof; and with walking it was fallen down to my Leg, which he by feeling did ſoon eſpy, and asked what that was. I ſaid, they were certain Letters: And with that he was very buſy to have them out: Let me alone, ſaid I, I will pluck them out: With that I put in my Hand having two other Letters therein, and brought up the ſame Writing into my Breeches, and there left it, given him the other two Letters that were not of any great Importance; which to make a Shew that they had been weighty, I began to tear as well as I could, till they ſnatched them from me, and ſo deluded him (I thank God) of his Purpoſe.

Then he went away, and as he was going, one of them that came with him, ſaid, that I did not deliver the Writing I had in my Hoſe, but two other Letters I had in my Hand before. Did he not? quoth he; I will go and ſearch him better: Which I hearing, convey'd my Examination I had written, into another

Place

Place near my Bed, and took all my Letters I had in my Purſe, and was tearing of them when he came again, and as he came I threw the ſame out of the Window, ſaying, That I heard what he ſaid; wherefore I did prevent his ſearching again, and I was right glad. God be prailed that gave me that preſent Shift to blind their Eyes from the Knowledge of my Writings, which if they had known, it would have been a great Occaſion of ſtraiter keeping and looking unto, although they look as narrowly as they may.

The eighth Examination of Mr. Philpot, before the Biſhop of London, the Biſhop of St. David's, Mr. Mordant, and others, in the Biſhop's Chapel.

THE next Day after, my Keeper came in the Morning before Day to call me down, and ſo I was brought down into his Wardrobe, wherewith a Keeper I was left, and there continued all the Day. But after Dinner I was called down into the Chapel, before the Biſhop of London, the Biſhop of St. David's, Mr. Mordant one of the Queen's Council, Mr. Archdeacon of London, and before a great many more Baalamites. And the Biſhop ſpake unto me in this wiſe.

Bonner. Sir, here I object and lay unto you in the Preſence of my Lord of St. David's, and of Mr. Mordant, and of theſe worſhipful Men, theſe Articles here in this Libel contained; and openly he read them.

To whom when I would particularly have anſwered to ſome of his Blaſphemies, he would not permit me; but ſaid, I ſhould have leiſure to ſay what I would when he had ſpoken.

And unto theſe here I add another Schedule. Alſo I require thee to anſwer to the Catechiſm ſet forth in the ſchiſmatical Time of King Edward. Alſo I will thee to anſwer to certain Concluſions agreed upon both in Oxford and Cambridge. And I here do bring forth theſe Witneſſes againſt thee in thine own Preſence, namely, my Lord of St. David's, Mr. Mordant, and Mr. Harpsfield, with as many as were preſent in the Diſputation he made in the Convocation-houſe: Willing you to teſtify, of your Oaths taken upon a Book, his ſtubborn and irreverent Behaviour he did there uſe againſt the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar. Give me a Book, and receiving one, he opened the ſame, ſaying, I will teach him here one Trick in our Law which he knoweth not; that is, my Lord of St. David's, becauſe you are a Biſhop, you have this Privilege, that you may ſwear by looking on the Goſpel-book, without touching of the ſame. And ſo he opened the Book in his Sight, and ſhut it again, and cauſed the others to put their Hands on the Book, and took their Oath, and deſired them to reſort to his Regiſter to make their Depoſitions when they might be beſt at leiſure: And afterwards he turned to me and ſaid, Now Sir, you ſhall anſwer but two Words, whether you will anſwer to theſe Articles which I have laid unto you, directly, yea, or nay?

Philpot. My Lord, You have told a long Tale againſt me, containing many lying Blaſphemies, which cannot be anſwered in two Words: Beſides this, you promiſed me at the Beginning, that I ſhould ſay what I could for my Defence, and now will you not give me Leave to ſpeak? What Law is this? Anno 1555. Papiſts keep no Promiſe.

Bonner. Speak yea or nay, for you ſhall ſay no more at this Time,

The Cauſe was, as I gueſs, that he ſaw ſo many there gathered to hear.

Philpot. Then my two Words you would have me ſpeak, ſhall be, that I have appealed from you, and take you not for my ſufficient Judge. Mr. Philpot appealeth from Biſhop Bonner.

Bonner. Indeed Mr. Mordant, he hath appealed to the King and to the Queen; but I will be ſo bold with her Majeſty, to ſtay that Appeal in mine own Hands.

Philpot. You will do what you pleaſe, my Lord, you have the Law in your Hands.

Bonner. Wilt thou anſwer or no?

Philpot. I will not anſwer otherwiſe than I have ſaid.

Bonner. Regiſter, note his Anſwer that he maketh.

Philpot. Knock me on the Head with an Hatchet, or ſet up a Stake and burn me out of Hand, without further Law; you may as well do ſo, as do what you do, for all is without Order of Law: Such Tyranny was never ſeen as you uſe now-a-days; God of his Mercy deſtroy your cruel Kingdom. And whilſt I ſpake this, the Biſhop went away in haſte.

St. Davids. Mr. Philpot, I pray you be quiet, and have Patience with you.

Philpot. My Lord, I thank God I have Patience to bear and abide all your cruel Intents againſt me: Notwithſtanding I ſpeak this earneſtly, being juſtly moved thereto, to notify your unjuſt and cruel dealing with Men in Corners, without all due Order of Law.

After this at Night I was conducted again by three or four into the Coal-houſe.

The ninth Examination of Mr. Philpot before Biſhop Bonner and his Chaplains.

THE next Day, betimes in the Morning I was called down by my Keeper, and brought again into the Wardrobe, where I remained till the Biſhop had heard his Maſs, and afterward he ſent up for me into his inward Parlour, and there he called for a Chair to ſit down, and brought his infamous Libel of his forged Articles in his Hand, and ſate down, willing me to draw near unto him, and ſaid:

Bonner. I am this Day appointed to tarry at Home from the Parliament-houſe, to examine you and your Fellows upon theſe Articles, and you ſtand dallying with me, and will neither anſwer to nor fro. I know all your Exceptions will not ſerve you. Will it not be a fair Honeſty for you, think ye, that when thou comeſt before my Lord Mayor and the Sheriffs, and other worſhipful Audience, when I ſhall ſay before them all, that I have had thee many Times before me, and before ſo many learned Men, and then thou couldſt ſay nothing for that thou ſtandeſt in, for all thy Brags of Learning, neither wouldſt anſwer directly to any Thing?

Anno 1555.

Philpot. My Lord, I have told you my Mind plain enough; but yet I do not intend to loſe that Privilege the Law giveth me, which is free Choice to anſwer where I am not bound, and this Privilege will I cleave unto, until I be compell'd otherwiſe.

Bonner. Well, I perceive you will play the obſtinate Fool. Lay thine Appellation when thou comeſt in Judgment, and anſwer in the mean while to theſe Articles.

Philpot. No, my Lord, by your Leave I will not anſwer to them, until my lawful Appeal be tried.

Bonner. Well, thou ſhalt hear them, and with that he began to read them.

Philpot. I ſhrank back into the Window, and looked on a Book, and after he had read them over he ſaid unto me:

Bonner. I have read them over, although it hath not pleaſed you to hear me, I marvel, in good Faith, what thou meaneſt to be ſo wilful and ſtubborn, ſeeing thou mayeſt do well enough if thou liſt. It is but a Singularity; doſt thou not ſee all the Realm againſt thee?

Philpot. My Lord, I ſpeak unto you in the Witneſs of God, before whom I ſtand, that I am neither wedded to mine own Will, neither ſtand upon my own Stubbornneſs or Singularity, but upon my Conſcience inſtructed by God's Word: And if your Lordſhip can ſhew better Evidence than I have for a good Faith, I will follow the ſame.

Bonner. What thou wilt not, lo, for all that. Well, all that is paſt ſhall be forgotten; if thou wilt be conformable unto us. I know thou mighteſt find as much Favour as thou wouldſt deſire.

Then I perceiving that he fawned ſo much upon me, thought it good to give him ſome Hope of my relenting, to the Intent I might give him and his hypocritical Generation openly a further Foil, perceiving that they dare reaſon with none but ſuch as are unlearned, and for lack of Knowledge not able to anſwer, or elſe with ſuch as they have a Hope that for Fear or Love of the World will recant: I ſaid, my Lord, it is not unknown to you, that I have openly, in the Audience of a great Number, ſtood to the Maintenance of theſe Opinions I am in, and by Learning did offer to defend them; therefore, my Lord, I would it might openly appear to the World that I am won by Learning, or elſe what will they ſay, but that either for Fear, or Love of the World, I am without any Ground turned from the Truth? And if I hear any kind of Learning openly ſhewed, I ſhall be as conformable as you may require me.

Bonner. Yea marry, now ye ſpeak ſomewhat like a reaſonable Man. You might have had a great Deal more Favour in my Houſe, and Liberty than you have had; and you ſhall lack nothing that is within my Houſe; call for it and you ſhall have it. And what is it that you would openly by Learning ſomewhat be ſatisfied in? Tell me.

Philpot. My Lord, I have openly ſaid, and do believe it alſo, that your Sacrifice of the Maſs is no Sacrament.

Bonner. What do you deny the Preſence of Chriſt in the Sacrament?

Philpot. No, my Lord, I deny not the Preſence of Chriſt in the Sacrament, but I have denied the Sacrament of the Altar as it is uſed in your Maſs, to be the true Sacrament of Chriſt's Inſtitution; and firſt it muſt be proved a Sacrament before there can be any Preſence granted.

Bonner. Why, do you deny the Maſs to be a Sacrament? I pray you what is a Sacrament? Is it not a Sign of a holy Thing, as St. Auſtin doth define it?

Philpot. Yes verily that it is.

Bonner. Then I make this Argument unto you: A Sacrament is the Sign of a holy Thing: But the Maſs is the Sign of a holy Thing: Ergo, It is a Sacrament.

This Argument in the ſecond Figure concluding affirmatively, doth not hold by Logick.

Philpot. You muſt add this to your Major, or firſt Propoſition, as St. Auguſtine doth mean, that a Sacrament is the Sign of a holy Thing inſtituted of God, and commanded; for otherwiſe it can be no Sacrament; for all Men cannot make a Sacrament.

Bonner. I grant that; and ſuch a Sign of a holy Thing is the Maſs of Chriſt's Inſtitution.

Philpot. I deny that, my Lord.

Bonner. I will prove this by St. Auguſtine by and by. I will go ſhew you the Book, and you ſhall have any Book I have that you will demand. Ho, who is without there? Call me Mr. Doctor Chedſey, Mr. Archdeacon, Mr. Coſins, and other Chaplains hither.

The Biſhop being brought to a narrow Strait, is fain to call for more Help.

Here, my Lord: Mr. Doctor Chedſey is gone to Weſtminſter, and Mr. Archdeacon Harpsfield was here even now.

Bonner. Mr. Coſins, I pray you examine him upon theſe Articles, and write the Anſwer he maketh to every one of them. I will go examine his Fellows, and ſend you St. Auguſtine by and by. I find this Man more conformable than he was before.

Coſins. I truſt, my Lord, you ſhall find him at length a good catholick Man. Marry, here be a Sight of Hereſies; I dare ſay you will hold none of them, nor ſtand in any of them. How ſay you to the Firſt:

Philpot. Mr. Coſins, I have told my Lord already, that I will anſwer to none of theſe Articles he hath objected againſt me; but if you will with Learning anſwer to that which is in Queſtion between my Lord and me, I will gladly hear and commune with you.

Coſins. Will you not? Why what is that then that is in Queſtion between my Lord and you.

Philpot. Whether your Maſs be a Sacrament or no.

Coſins. What, the Maſs to be a Sacrament? Who ever doubted thereof?

Philpot. If it be an undoubted Truth, you may the ſooner prove it; for I doubt much thereof.

Coſins. Why, I will prove it. It is the Sign of a holy Thing; Ergo, it is a Sacrament.

Philpot. I deny your Antecedent.

Coſins. What, will you ſo? then there is no reaſoning with you.

Mr. Coſins giveth out in the plain Field.

Thus Mr. Coſins gave over in the plain Field for want of further Proof. And then the Morrow Maſs Chaplain began to ſpeak for his Occupation: And with that Mr. Harpsfield came out from my Lord with St. Auguſtine's Epiſtles, ſaying:

Harpsfield. My Lord hath ſent you here St. Auguſtine to look upon, and I pray you look what he ſaith in a certain Epiſtle which he writeth; I will read over the whole. Here you may hear the Celebration of the Maſs, and how it reproveth them that went a Hawking and Hunting before the Celebration of the ſame, on the Sabbath and Holidays.

Philpot. I perceive the Contents of this Epiſtle, and I ſee nothing herein againſt me, neither any Thing that maketh for the Proof of your Sacrament of the Maſs.

Harpsfield. No, doth he not make mention of the Maſs, and the Celebration thereof? what can be ſpoken more plain?

The Epiſtle of St. Auguſtine alledged for Confirmation of the Maſs, anſwered how it is derived.

Philpot. St. Auſtin meaneth of the Celebration of the Communion, and of the true Uſe of the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Chriſt, and not of your private Maſs, which you of late Years have erected in the Stead thereof; for this Word Maſs hath been an old Term, attributed to the Communion even from the primitive Church. And I pray you tell me what Miſſa doth ſignify? I think not many that ſay Maſs can well tell.

Coſins. No, can they not? that is a marvel.

Philpot. Then tell me if you can. But Mr. Coſins and my Morrow Maſs Chaplain were both dumb, looking upon Mr. Harpsfield for help, and at length he ſpake.

Harpsfield. You think it cometh of the Hebrew Word Maſſah, as though none were ſeen in the Hebrew but yourſelf.

Philpot. I have not gone ſo long to School, to derive the Signification of Miſſa, which is a Latin Word, out of Hebrew: But I have learned to interpret Greek Words by Greek, and Latin by Latin, and Hebrew by Hebrew; I take the Communion to be called Miſſa, a Mittendo, of ſuch Things as at the Celebration of the Communion were ſent by ſuch as were of Ability, to the Relief of the Poor, where the Rich brought according to their Devotion and Ability, and required the Miniſter in the Celebration of the Communion to pray unto God for them, and to accept their common Alms, which they at ſuch Times did ſend for the Help of their poor Brethren and Siſters; and for this Cauſe was it called Miſſa, as learned Men do witneſs. At which Celebration of the Maſs, all that were preſent did communicate under both Kinds, according to Chriſt's Inſtitution, as they did in St. Auguſtine's Time. But unleſs you can ſhew that your Maſs is uſed as it then was, ye ſhall never by the Name of Maſs (which St. Auguſtine attributed to the true Uſe of the Communion) prove your private Maſs to be a Sacrament, unleſs ye can prove the ſame now to be in your Maſſes as was then, which is clean contrary.

Harpsfield. What, deny you the Maſs to be a Sacrament? for Shame ſpeak it not.

Philpot. I will not be aſhamed to deny it, if you cannot prove it.

Harpsfield. Why, it is a Sacrifice, which is more than a Sacrament.

Philpot. You may make of it as much as you liſt: But you ſhall never make it a Sacrifice, as you may imagine thereof, but firſt it muſt be a Sacrament, for of the Sacrament you deduce your Sacrifice.

Harpsfield. Why? doth not Chriſt ſay, This is my Body? and doth not the Prieſt pronounce the ſame that Chriſt did?

A Sacrament is no Sacrament without its Uſe.

Philpot. The Pronunciation only is not enough, unleſs the Words be therewithal apply'd to the Uſe, as Chriſt ſpake them to. For though ye ſpeak the Words of Baptiſm over Water never ſo many Times, yet there is no Baptiſm unleſs there be a chriſtian Perſon to be baptized.

Harpsfield. Nay, that is not alike; for, Hoc eſt corpus meum, is an indicative Propoſition, ſhewing a Working of God in the Subſtance of Bread and Wine. Anno 1555.

Philpot. It is not only an indicative Propoſition, but alſo imperative or commanding. For he that ſaid, Hoc eſt corpus meum, that is, This is my Body, ſaid alſo, Accipite, manducate, that is, Take ye, eat ye. And except the former Part of the Inſtitution of Chriſt's Sacrament be accompliſhed according to the Communion; the latter, This is my Body, can have no Verification, take it which way you will, and how you will.

Morrow-maſs Chaplain. Why then you will make the Sacrament to ſtand in the receiving, and that receiving maketh it a Sacrament.

Receiving maketh not the Sacrament, yet the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper without it be received, is no Sacrament.

Philpot. I do not ſay, that the receiving only maketh it a Sacrament, but I ſay, that a common receiving muſt needs be concurrent with the true Sacrament, as a neceſſary Member, without which it cannot be a Sacrament, becauſe Chriſt hath made this a principal Part of the Sacrament, Take ye, eat ye, which you do not in your Maſs according to Chriſt's Inſtitution; wherefore, it can be no Sacrament, for that it wanteth of Chriſt's Inſtitution.

Coſins. We do forbid none to come to it, but as many as liſt may be Partakers with us at the Maſs if they require it.

Philpot. Nay, that they ſhall not, though they require it, you will miniſter but one Kind unto them, which is not after Chriſt's Inſtitution. Beſides that, you ought before you go to Maſs, to exhort all that be preſent, to make a Sacrifice of Thankſgiving, for Chriſt's Paſſion with you, and exhort them to be Partakers with you, according to Chriſt's Commandment, ſaying unto all that be preſent, Take ye, eat ye: And likewiſe by preaching ſhew forth the Lord's Death, which you do not.

Coſins. What if all Things be done, even as you would have it, and whilſt the Miniſter is about to adminiſter the Sacrament, before any have received it there ariſe a ſudden Hurly-burly, that the Communicants be compelled to go away; is it not a Sacrament for all that none hath communicated beſides the Prieſt?

Philpot. In this Caſe, where all Things are appointed to be done according to God's Word, if incident Neceſſity had not hindered, I cannot ſay but it is a Sacrament, and that he who hath received, hath received the true Sacrament. After this, the Morrow-maſs Prieſt made this Apiſh Reaſon.

Morrow-maſs Prieſt. If the Sacrament of the Maſs be no Sacrament, unleſs all do receive it, becauſe Chriſt ſaid, Take ye, eat ye, then the Sacrament of Baptiſm is no Sacrament where there is but one baptized, becauſe Chriſt ſaid to his Apoſtles, Go preach the Goſpel to all Creatures, baptizing all Nations, In the Name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghoſt.

Philpot. In that Saying of Chriſt, Baptizing all Nations, is a Commandment to the Apoſtles, to baptize all Sorts of Men, and to exclude none that believe, be he Gentile or Jew, not meaning all at once, for that were impoſſible. And there are many Examples that Baptiſm may be ſingularly miniſtred to one Perſon, as we have Example of Chriſt baptized of John, and in the Eunuch baptized of Philip, with many more ſuch like: But ſo have you not of the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Chriſt, but contrariwiſe by the expreſs Words of St. Paul, you are commanded to Anno 1555. to uſe it in a Communion and Participation of many together; 1 Cor. 11. As oft as ye come together to eat (meaning the Lord's Supper) tarry one for another. And alſo the Miniſter in the Celebration of the Sacrament ſpeaketh unto all that be preſent in Chriſt's Behalf, to communicate with him, ſaying, Take ye, and eat ye. Wherefore, as many as be preſent and do not communicate, break God's Commandment in not receiving the ſame, and the Miniſter is no juſt Miniſter that doth not diſtribute the Sacrament as Chriſt did, to all that are preſent; and where God's Word is tranſgreſſed, there is not Chriſt preſent, and conſequently it is no Sacrament.

At the Adminiſtration of the Lord's Supper all that be preſent ought to communicate.

Harpsfield. What, would you have it no Sacrament without it be a Communion?

Philpot. I make it not ſo, but God's expreſs Word teacheth me ſo, yea, alſo all the ancient Writers; as Chryſoſtom writing upon the Epiſtle to the Epheſians, ſaith, That the Oblation is in vain, where none doth communicate with the Prieſt. If by his Judgment the Action of the Prieſt alone is in vain, where is no Communion, how can that be a Sacrament, which he calleth a vain Oblation, and a vain Standing at the Altar?

Chryſoſt. in ep. ad Eph.

It is no Sacrament without it be a Communion.

Coſins. Such a Fellow I have never heard, you will not have the Maſs to be a Sacrament; you are no Man for me to reaſon withal. Come let us go, pointing to the Morrow Maſs Chaplain: We will leave you (Mr. Archdeacon) and him together; and ſo they went away. Afterward the Archdeacon fell into earneſt Perſwaſions with me, ſaying:

Harpsfield. Mr. Philpot, you and I have been acquainted theſe many Years; we were School Fellows both in Wincheſter and in Oxford. Wherefore I muſt wiſh you as well to do as myſelf, and I pray you ſo think of me.

Philpot. I thank you for your Good-will towards me. But if you be deceived (as I am ſure you are) I ſhall deſire you not to wiſh me deceived with you. For before God I tell you plainly, you are highly deceived, and maintain falſe Religion, and be not thoſe Men you take yourſelves for: And if you do not repent, and leave off your perſecuting of Chriſt's Truth, you will go to the Devil for it. Therefore conſider it in Time, I give you warning, for elſe in the Day of Judgment I ſhall be a Witneſs againſt you, that I told you this here talking together.

Harpsfield. Fie, that is but your own ſingular Opinion; I perceive you are now ſtill that Man you were at Oxford.

Philpot. I truſt you can report no notorious Evil that ever you knew by me there.

Harpsfield. I can ſay no Evil of your Converſation, but I knew you to be a ſtudious Man. Marry, if you remember when we met in Diſputation in Parvis, you would not lightly give over, and for that Cauſe I ſpeak what I have ſaid.

Philpot. Mr. Harpsfield, you know in the Schools of Oxford, when we were young Men, we did ſtrive much upon Vain-glory, and upon Contention, more than for the Truth; but now our Years and our riper Learning teach us to fall to a Truth, which muſt be our Portion for ever. And if I was then, in my Time of Ignorance, earneſt in my own Cauſe, I ought now to be earneſt in my Maſter Chriſt's Cauſe, and his Truth. I know now that nothing done upon Vain-glory and Singularity can pleaſe God, have it never ſo godly a Shew: Wherefore I pray you judge not ſo of me now.

Harpsfield. What, will you think yourſelf better learned, than all the learned Men in this Realm?

Philpot. My Faith hangeth not upon the Learned of the World, but upon the Learned of God's Word.

Harpsfield. Well, I will talk with you no more as now, but pray to God to open your Heart.

Philpot. I pray God open both our Hearts, to do more his Will, than we have done in Times paſt.

Harpsfield. Ho, Keeper, take him away with you.

Philpot. I pray you Mr. Harpsfield, tell me what this Pronoun (Hoc) doth demonſtrate, and ſhew, in this indicative Propoſition, as you call it, Hoc eſt Corpus meum, This is my Body?

Harpsfield. It doth demonſtrate the Subſtance of Bread, which by the Words ſpoken by the Prieſt, and by the Omnipotency of God, is turned into the Subſtance of Chriſt's very Body.

Philpot. Is the Subſtance of Bread, as you ſay, turned into Chriſt's Body?

Harpsfield. Yea, that it is.

Philpot. Why, then Chriſt's Body receiveth daily a great Increaſe of many thouſand Pieces of Bread into his Body, and that is his Body become now, which was not before, and by this you would ſeem to make, that there is an Alteration in Chriſt's glorify'd Body, which is a wicked Thing to think.

Harpſ. Then he fetch'd about again, and remembring himſelf better, and ſeeing the Inconvenience of his firſt Aſſertion, of the Tranſubſtantiation of Bread into Chriſt's Body, he ſaid, That the Subſtance of Bread, after the Words ſpoken by the Prieſt, was evacuated or vaniſhed away by the Omnipotency of God.

Mr. Harpsfield in a double Tale.

Philpot. This is another Song than you ſang firſt: And here you may ſee how contrary you are to yourſelves. For indeed your Schoolmen do hold, That the very Subſtance of Bread is really turned into the very Subſtance of Chriſt's Body. And now you perceiving of late the Inconvenience which is objected againſt you in that Opinion, you are driven to imagine a new Shift, and ſay, The Subſtance of Bread is evacuated, contrary to that which your Church hath at firſt believed and taught. O what Contrariety is there among you, and all to deface the ſincere Truth?

Contrariety in Popiſh Doctrine.

Harpsfield. Is not God omnipotent? and cannot he do as he hath ſaid?

Philpot. But his Omnipotence will not do as you ſay, contrary to his Word and to his Honour. It is not God's Honour to include him bodily into a Piece of Bread, and of Neceſſity to tie him thereto. It is not God's Honour for you to make a Piece of Bread God and Man, which you ſee before your Face doth putrify after a certain Time. Is not God's Omnipotence as able to give his Body with the ſacramental Bread, as to make ſo many Turnings away of the Bread, as you do, and that directly againſt the Scripture, which calleth it Bread many Times after Conſecration? Are you not aſhamed to make ſo many Alterations of the Lord's holy Inſtitution as you do, and to take away the ſubſtantial Parts of the Sacrament, as, Take ye, eat ye, drink ye all of this; do ye this in Remembrance of me: And to place in their Stead, Hear ye, gaze ye, knock ye, worſhip ye, offer ye, ſacrifice ye for the Quick and the Dead? If this be not Blaſphemy to God and his Sacraments, to add and to pluck away in this Sort, and that contrary to the Mind of all ancient Writers, and contrary to the Example of Chriſt and all his Apoſtles, tell me.

Harpsfield. I know you have gathered the Sayings of the Doctors together which make for your Purpoſe; I will talk no longer with you.

Mr. Harpsfield giveth over for lack of good Matter.

Philpot. I pray God open both our Hearts, to do more his Will than we have done in Times paſt.

Harpsfield. Ho, Keeper, take him away with you.

The tenth Examination of Mr. Philpot before Biſhop Bonner, his Regiſter, and others.

THE next Day after Dinner I was brought into my Lord's upper Hall, and there he called me before him and his Regiſter, and before Dr. Chedſey, in the Preſence of two homely Gentlemen, and a Prieſt that I knew not: At which Time the Biſhop ſaid:

Bonner. I do here lay unto this Man in your Preſence (requiring you to be a Witneſs againſt him, as much as you know in any of them) theſe Articles, this Book of the Catechiſm made in King Edward's Days, alſo theſe Concluſions agreed upon both in Oxford and Cambridge; alſo I lay unto him, that he hath deſpiſed the Cenſures of the Church, and hath ſtood accurſed above this Twelve-month, and never required Abſolution thereof. How ſay you, wert thou not accurſed by my Lord Chancellor?

Mr. Philpot excommunicated by Stephen Gardiner without Order of Law.

Philpot. I was excommunicated by him wrongfully, and without any juſt Cauſe, and without Order of Law, being never perſonally cited.

Bonner. Didſt thou not tell me the other Day when I required thee to come to the Maſs, that thou waſt excommunicated, and therefore by the Law couldſt not hear Maſs? How long haſt thou been thus excommunicated?

Philpot. More than a Year and a Half.

Bonner. Lo, you may hear what he ſaith: Write it.

Philpot. But as you would have written that I have ſaid, I have been thus long excommunicated; ſo alſo let him write, that I did require of my Lord Chancellor that did excommunicate me, my Abſolution, but he would not give it me, ſaying, That I was Excommunicatus ipſo jure, becauſe I was an Heretick, as it pleaſed him to call me, therefore accurſed by your Law, and ſo commanded me to Priſon, where I remain.

Gentleman. Why do you not require Abſolution at my Lord's Hands here now?

Philpot. Becauſe he is not mine Ordinary, neither hath by the Law any Thing to do with me of right.

Bonner. What an obſtinate Fool is this? I tell thee I will be thine Ordinary whether thou wilt or no.

Mr. Philpot again appealeth from the Biſhop of London.

Philpot. And becauſe of this your unrighteous Force towards me, I have appealed from you, and require you, Mr. Regiſter, that my Appeal may be entered in Writing.

Anno 1555.

Bonner. Have you heard ſuch a froward Fellow as this? He ſeemed Yeſterday to be very tractable, and I had a good Hope of him. I tell thee thou art of my Dioceſs.

Philpot. I am of Wincheſter Dioceſs, and not of London Dioceſs.

Bonner. I pray you may not a Man be of two Dioceſſes at once?

Philpot. No, that he cannot.

Bonner. Lo, will you ſee what an ignorant Fool this is in the Law, in which he would ſeem to be ſeen? I tell thee a Man may be of three Dioceſſes at once: As if thou wert born in London, by reaſon thereof thou ſhouldſt be of my Dioceſs; or elſe if thou wert not born, but hadſt a Dignity here, alſo thou art to be counted of my Dioceſs, or elſe by reaſon of thy Habitation in my Dioceſs.

Philpot. In none of theſe Reſpects am I of your Lordſhips Dioceſs. But for all that, this will not follow, that I dwelling at Wincheſter, am at that preſent of London Dioceſs.

Bonner. What wilt thou lay thereof? Wilt thou recant if I prove it?

Philpot. But what ſhall I win if you do not?

Bonner. I will give thee my Biſhoprick if I prove it not.

Philpot. Yea, but who ſhall deliver it me if I win?

Bonner. Thou art an arrogant Fool, enter their Oaths, and take the Witneſſes Depoſitions, I muſt be gone to the Parliament-houſe.

After this a Prieſt who was ſtanding by asked me, whether I was Kin to my Lord Rich or no.

I ſaid, my Lord Rich ſaid ſo himſelf to me the other Day, but how I know not.

Chedſey. I heard him ſay he was his nigh Kinſman.

Baalamite. Why then you and I muſt be of Kin, for he is my nigh Kinſman. How chance it that you and I be of contrary Judgments?

Philpot. It is no marvel, for Chriſt propheſied, That the Father ſhall be divided againſt the Son, and the Son againſt the Father, for my Truth ſake.

Baalamite. You do hold, as I underſtand, againſt the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar, and againſt the holy Maſs.

Philpot. If you can prove it a Sacrament, I will not hold againſt you.

Baalamite. What prove it a Sacrament, ſaid he? Doth not St. Paul ſay, That ſuch Things as the Eye hath not ſeen, neither Ear heard, hath God prepared for them that love him?

Philpot. That Saying of St. Paul concerneth nothing your Sacrament, but is meant of the heavenly Joys that are prepared for all faithful Believers.

Baalamite. Why then I perceive you underſtand not St. Paul. By God, you are deceived.

Philpot. You ought not to ſwear Kinſman, if you will that I ſhall ſo call you: And without diſ-worſhip of our Kindred, I underſtand St. Paul as well as you, and know what I ſay; and with that ſhewed him a Greek Teſtament with Eraſmus's Tranſlation, and with the old alſo, demanding him which Text he was beſt acquainted withal.

Baalamite. I knew Greek too once, as well as you, I care not which you read.

Anno 1555.

Philpot. You know them then all alike; you underſtand the one as well as the other. With this my Baalamite Kinſman departed in a Fury.

The next Day after I was brought down again after Dinner to the Chappel, and there my Baalamite Kinſman (to verify the Scriptures, that a Man's own Kinsfolks ſhall be his Enemies) came in with the Biſhop as a Witneſs againſt me: And there the Biſhop cauſed another that came to him about other Matters, to ſwear alſo to be a Witneſs againſt me, who was a Prieſt alſo, ſaying,

A Witneſs ſworn againſt Mr. Philpot.

Bonner. You ſhall ſwear to depoſe all the Truth of certain Articles you ſhall be enquired of concerning this Man; and here I (according to the Law) do bring them forth in thy Preſence.

Philpot. My Lord, I do not agree to the Production of them, but do appeal from all theſe and other your Proceedings againſt me; and require you Mr. Regiſter, that my Appeal may be entered, and I will give you for your Labour.

Regiſter. Your Appeal ſhall be entered at leiſure. Whom do you appeal unto? Tell me.

Philpot. I appeal to a higher Judge, as to the Lieutenant of the Archbiſhoprick of Canterbury, for I know not who is Biſhop thereof at this preſent. With that the Biſhop went away, and my Baalamite Kinſman looking big upon me, but ſaid never a Word.

Thus have I in haſte ſcribbled out all mine Examinations hitherto, that the ſame which hath been done unto me in Dark might come to Light, and that the Papiſts unjuſt Proceedings, and Nakedneſs in their falſe Religion, might be known to their Confuſion. Jeſus is Emanuel, that is, God with us, Amen. 1555.

The eleventh Examination of Mr. Philpot, on St. Andrew's Day, before the Biſhops of Durham, Chicheſter, Bath, and London, Mr. Chriſtopherſon, Dr. Chedſey, Mr. Morgan of Oxford, Mr. Huſſey, Dr. Weſton, Dr. Harpsfield Archdeacon, Mr. Coſins, and Mr. Johnſon Regiſter to the Biſhop of London, in his Palace.

BEING ſent for with my Keeper, the Biſhop of London met me in his Hall-door, and full mannerly he played the Gentleman-uſher to bring me before the Lords, ſaying,

My Lords, I ſhall deſire you to take ſome Pains with this Man, he is a Gentleman, and I would he ſhould do well, but he will wilfully caſt away himſelf.

Durham. Come hither Sir, what is your Name?

Philpot. My Name is Philpot.

Durham. I have heard of that Name to be a worſhipful Stock, and ſince you are a Gentleman, do as you may live worſhipfully among other Gentlemen. What is the Cauſe of your Trouble now?

I told him the Cauſe, as in my former Examinations is expreſſed.

Durham. Well, all Cauſes ſet apart, will you now be a conformable Man to the catholick Faith, and leave all new-fangled Opinions and Hereſies? I was in Germany with Luther at the Beginning of theſe Opinions, and can tell how they began. Leave them, and follow the catholick Church throughout the whole World, as the whole Realm now doth.

Philpot. My Lord, I am in the catholick Faith, and deſire to live and die in the ſame: But it is not unknown to your Lordſhip that I with others theſe twenty Years have been taught another Manner of Faith than you now go about to compel us unto; wherefore it is requiſite that we have a Time to weigh the ſame, and to hear how it agreeth with God's Word. For Faith is at a ſudden neither won, neither removed, but as St. Paul ſaith, Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word.

Papiſts will have Faith to be compelled.

Chicheſter. And if you will give me Leave, my Lord, I will ſhew him how he taketh the Saying of St. Paul amiſs, as many others now-a-days alledging the ſame do, that they ought not to be compelled to believe, whereas St. Paul meaneth of Infidels, and not of the Faithful; and ſo St. Auſtin writing againſt the Donatiſts, ſaith, That the Faithful may be compelled to believe.

Faith ought not to be compelled.

Philpot. St. Bernard (if it pleaſe your Lordſhip) doth take that Senſe of St. Paul as I do, ſaying, that Faith muſt be perſuaded to a Man, and not injoined. And St. Auguſtine ſpeaketh of ſuch as were firſt thoroughly perſuaded by manifeſt Scriptures, and yet would reſiſt of ſtubborn Wilfulneſs.

Chicheſter. So Bernard meaneth of Infidels alſo.

Philpot. No, my Lord, that he doth not, for he writeth not of the Infidels, but he writeth of ſuch as were deceived by Errors.

Chicheſter. My Lord of Durham, I have been ſo bold to interrupt your Lordſhip of your Tale, I pray you now proceed on.

Durham. Mr. Philpot, will you be of the ſame catholick Faith and Church with us you were baptized in, and your Godfathers promiſed for you, and hold as we do, and then may you be rid out of Trouble? I perceive you are learned, and it is Pity but you ſhould do well.

Philpot. I am of the ſame catholick Faith and catholick Church I was baptized unto, and in that will I live and die.

Durham. That is well ſaid; if you hold there you cannot but do well.

Chicheſter. Yea, my Lord, but he meaneth otherwiſe than you do. Are you of the ſame Faith your Godfathers and Godmothers were, or no?

Philpot. I cannot tell what Faith they were of certainly, but I am of the Faith I was baptized unto, which is the Faith of Chriſt: for I was not baptized into the Faith of my Godfathers, but in the Faith of Chriſt.

Chicheſter. St. Auſtin ſaith, That Infants are baptized in the Faith of their Godfathers.

Philpot. St. Auguſtine in ſo ſaying, meaneth of the Faith of Chriſt, which the Godfathers do, or ought to believe, and not otherwiſe.

Durham. How ſay you, will you believe as we do, and all the learned of the Realm, or no? and be of one Church with us?

Philpot. My Lords, it is not unknown to you, that there hath been always two Churches.

Chicheſter. Nay, that is not ſo: There is but one catholick Church.

Philpot. I ſhall deſire your Lordſhips to hear out my Tale, and to take my Meaning. For I know there is but one true Church; but always from the Beginning there hath been joined to the ſame true Church a falſe Church, Adverſary to the true: And that was declared at the Firſt in Abel and Cain, who perſecuted and ſlew his Brother, in whom (as St. Auguſtine witneſſeth) is repreſented the falſe and true Church. And after that, as ſoon as God had choſen his peculiar People, and ſhewed unto them his Sanctuary, holy Statutes, and Will, anon after roſe the falſe Church, and ten of the twelve Tribes of Iſrael divided themſelves from the true Church of Judah and Benjamin, and made to themſelves at Bethel, and ſet up golden Calves, and yet pretended therewith to ſerve God, and ſo abuſed his Word. Notwithſtanding, God was diſpleaſed with them, and ceaſed not his Wrath, until he had utterly deſtroyed them.

Dr. Day Biſhop of Chicheſter driven to a Strait.

Chicheſter. I will grant you before the coming of Chriſt, there were two Churches in the old Law; but in the new Law ſince Chriſt's coming, you cannot ſhew it to be ſo by the Scripture.

Philpot. Yes, my Lord, that I can, if you will give me Leave. After Chriſt had choſen his twelve Apoſtles, was there not a Judas in the new Law, and a Simon Magus? and were not they of the falſe Church?

Chicheſter. Yea, but I mean after the Goſpel was written, where can you find me two Churches after Chriſt had aſcended, and ſent the Holy Ghoſt?

Philpot. The Goſpel was within eight Years after the Aſcenſion written by St. Matthew, and the Writing thereof is not material to the Declaration of theſe two Churches to have been always from Time to Time, as by Example it may be ſhewed: And yet as bad as my Memory is, I remember in the New Teſtament is mention made of two Churches, as it appeareth in the Revelations, and alſo as St. Paul to the Theſſalonians maketh mention, that Antichriſt with his falſe Generation, ſhall ſit in the Temple of God. To which Chicheſter reply'd not.

Durham. The Church in the Scripture is likened to a great Fiſher's Net, which containeth in it both good Fiſh and bad Fiſh. I truſt you will be of the better Sort, and lean to the Truth.

Philpot. My Lord, it is my whole Deſire now to follow that which is good, whatſoever I have done in Times paſt, and to cleave to God's Truth.

Durham. Do you ſo, and then ſhall you do well: It is almoſt Night, my Lord of London, I muſt needs be gone.

The Biſhops begin to be weary of their Part.

Bonner. Nay, my Lord of Durham, I muſt deſire your Lordſhip, and my Lord of Chicheſter, to tarry a little while. And before he had ſo ſaid, the Biſhop of Bath went his Way without ſaying any Word. What, my Lord of Bath, will you be gone? I pray you tarry. My Lords, I have earneſt Matters to charge this Man withal, whereof I would your Lordſhips to be made privy, and I have them here written in a Libel, I pray you ſit down again, or elſe I will.—— Firſt, I lay to him here, that he hath written in a Bible, which I took from him, this erroneous Saying, Quod Spiritus eſt Vicarius Chriſti in terra, that is, The Holy Ghoſt is Chriſt's Vicar in Earth. Wilt thou abide by this Saying of thine; that the Spirit is Chriſt's Vicar on Earth? Anno 1555.

Philpot. My Lord, it is not my Saying, it is a more learned Man's than mine: For I uſe not to write my own Sayings, but the notable Sayings of other ancient Writers, as all others be where ye find the ſame written. And as I remember, it is even the Saying of St. Bernard, and a Saying that I need not be aſhamed of, neither you to be offended at, as my Lord of Durham, and my Lord of Chicheſter, by their Learning can diſcern, and will not reckon it ill ſaid.

Bonner. Will they not? Why, take away the firſt Syllable, and it ſoundeth Arius.

Philpot. That is far fetch'd indeed; if your Lordſhip will ſcan Men's Sayings in ſuch wiſe, you may find out what you liſt.

Bonner. But to help this, I find moreover with his own Hand in another Book; In me Johanne Philpotto ubi abundavit peccatum, ſuperabundavit & gratia; that is, In me John Philpot, where Sin did abound, Grace hath ſuperabounded. I pray you what ſuperabundant Grace have you more than other Men? So ſaid Arius, That he had the Abundance of Grace above all others.

Philpot. My Lord, you need not be offended with that Saying more than the other, for it is the Saying of St. Paul himſelf, and I did apply it to myſelf for my Comfort, knowing that though my Sins be huge and great in the Sight of God, yet is his Mercy and Grace above them all. And concerning Arius and his Adherents, I defy them, and it is well known that I have written againſt them. Rom. 5. 1 Tim. 1.

Bonner. Alſo I lay to thy Charge that thou killeſt thy Father, and waſt accurſed of thy Mother in her death-bed, as I can bring Witneſs thereof.

Philpot. O Lord, what Blaſphemy is this! Hath your Lordſhip nothing of Truth to charge me withal, (but as I may ſpeak it with your Honour) ſuch blaſphemous Lies? If any of theſe can be proved, I will promiſe here to recant at Paul's Croſs, what you will have me: I am ſo ſure they are as great Blaſphemies as may be objected againſt any Man. Ha, my Lords, I pray you conſider how my Lord of London hath hitherto proceeded againſt me: For indeed he hath none other but ſuch pretenſed ſlanderous Lies.

Chicheſter. They be Parerga; that is, Matters beſide the Purpoſe.

Durham. My Lord, I muſt needs bid you farewel.

The Biſhops are quite tired of Bonner's Nonſenſe.

Bonner. Nay my Lord, here is a Letter which I ſhall deſire you to hear e're you go. This Man (being in my keeping) hath taken upon him to write Letters out of Priſon, and pervert a young Gentleman called Mr. Green, in my Houſe, (call him hither) and hath made a falſe Report of his Examination, as you ſhall hear, not being content to be Evil himſelf, but to make others as bad as himſelf. He tore the Letter when he ſaw my Man went about to ſearch him, but yet I have pieced it again together, and cauſed a Copy to be written thereof; and he read the torn Letter, bidding Mr. Chriſtopherſon and Morgan to mark the Copy thereof.

The Contents of the Letter was the Examination

Anno 1555. tion of Mr. Green before the Biſhop of London, in the Preſence of Mr. Fecknam Dean of Paul's, and of divers others, whoſe ready Anſwers in the Scriptures and in the Doctors were wondered at by the Dean himſelf, and of many others, as Fecknam did report: And that he was committed to Dr. Chedſey, and to have his Meat from the Biſhop's own Table. How ſay you, my Lords, was this well done of him, being my Priſoner, to write this? and yet he hath written a ſhameful Lie, that he was in Dr. Chedſey's keeping. How ſay you, Mr. Dr. Chedſey, is it not a ſhameful Lie?

Chedſey. Yes, my Lord, he was never in my keeping.

Bonner. Art thou not aſhamed to write ſuch ſhameful Letters? Come hither Mr. Green, Did not I ſhew you this Letter?

Green. Yea forſooth, my Lord, you ſhew'd it me.

Bonner. How think you, my Lords, is not this an honeſt Man to belie me?

Philpot. Your Lordſhip doth miſtake all Things. This Letter (as your Lordſhip may perceive, and all others that have heard the ſame) was not written by me, but by a Friend of mine, certifying me at my Requeſt, how Mr. Green ſped at the Biſhop of London's Hands: And there is nothing in the Letter that either I, or he that wrote it, need to fear, but that might be written as my Report.

Bonner. Then tell me who wrote it, if you dare.

Philpot. No, my Lord, it is not my Duty to accuſe my Friend: And eſpecially ſeeing you will take all Things at the worſt: Neither ſhall you ever know of me who wrote it. Your Lordſhip may ſee in the End of the Letter, that my Friend did write unto me upon the Occaſion of my Appeal which I have made to the whole Parliament-houſe about ſuch Matters as I am wrongfully troubled for.

Bonner. I would ſee any ſo hardy to put up thine Appeal.

Philpot. My Lord, I cannot tell what God will work, I have written it, ſpeed it as it may.

Bonner. My Lords, I have uſed him with much Gentleneſs ſince he came to me. How ſayſt thou, have I not?

Note Bonner's great Gentleneſs to a Gentleman by Birth, and an Archdeacon, as Mr. Philpot properly and legally was.

Philpot. If to lie in the vileſt Priſon in this Town (being a Gentleman and an Archdeacon) and in a Coal-houſe, for the Space of five or ſix Weeks already, without Fire or Candle, may be counted Gentleneſs at your Hands, I muſt needs ſay I have found Gentleneſs. But there were never Men ſo cruelly handled as we are at theſe Days.

Bonner. Lo, what a Varlet is this. Beſides this, my Lords, even Yeſterday he procured his Man to bring a Bladder of black Powder, I cannot tell for what Purpoſe.

Philpot. Your Lordſhip needeth not to miſtruſt the Matter: It is nothing but to make Ink withal for lack of Ink, as I had it before in the King's-Bench when the Keeper took away my Inkhorn.

Bonner. And why ſhouldſt thou go about any ſuch Thing unknown to me, being thy Keeper? for I am thy Keeper in this Houſe, I tell thee.

Philpot. My Lord, becauſe you have cauſed my Pen-caſe and Inkhorn to be taken from me, I would yet be glad my Friends ſhould know what I lack, not that I intend to write any Thing that I would be afraid ſhould come to your Sight.

Bonner. More than this, my Lords, he cauſed a Pig to be roaſted, and made a Knife be put between the Skin and the Fleſh, for what Purpoſe judge you. How ſayſt thou, didſt thou not ſo?

Philpot. I cannot deny but there was half a Pig ſent me, and under the ſame a Knife lying in the Sauce, but for no ill Purpoſe that I know; your Lordſhip may judge what you will. It was not to kill myſelf nor any other, as you would have Men to believe? for I was never yet without a Knife ſince I came to Priſon. Therefore all theſe are but falſe Surmiſes, and not worth Rehearſal.

Bonner. I have here to lay to his Charge (chiefeſt of all) his Book of the Report of the Diſputation in the Convocation-houſe, which is the rankeſt Hereſy that may be againſt the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar. How ſay you, Mr. Dr. Weſton, did he maintain the ſame there ſtubbornly, or no?

Weſton. Yea, my Lord, that he did, and would never be anſwered. And it is pity that the ſame worſhipful Congregation ſhould be ſlandered with ſuch untrue Reports.

Philpot. You anſwered me indeed, Mr. Doctor (being then Prolocutor) goodly, with, Hold thy Peace, and, Have him to Priſon, and, Put him out of the Houſe. I have read the Book, and I find the Report of every Man's Argument to be true in all Points. And if there be any Fault, it is, becauſe he ſetteth forth your Doings too favourably, and nothing like to that you did uſe me, being an Archdeacon, and not of the worſt in the Houſe.

Dr. Weſton's chief Arguments in the Convocation-Houſe.

Weſton. Thou art no Archdeacon.

Philpot. Indeed, Mr. Doctor, ye have amongſt you un-archdeacon'd me as now, (I thank God for it) and that without all Order of Law.

Bonner. I pray you, my Lords, hearken to what he writeth of himſelf, I read it over this Morning, and made a Note of it. He ſaid that Dr. Weſton called him Frantick and Madman, and ſaid, he ſhould go to Bedlam.

Philpot. Indeed my Lord, ſo it pleaſed Dr. Weſton to taunt at me, and ſay his ſhameful Pleaſure, but yet I was not one Whit the more ſo for all his Sayings, than Chriſt was when the Scribes and Phariſees ſaid likewiſe he was mad, and that he was poſſeſſed of a Devil moſt blaſphemouſly.

Durham. My Lord of London, I can tarry no longer, I muſt needs bid you farewel. Mr. Philpot, methinketh you have ſaid well that you will abide in the catholick Faith, and in the catholick Church: I pray you ſo do, and you ſhall do right well. And ſo departed with Dr. Weſton and Mr. Huſſey.

The Biſhop of Durham and Dr. Weſton give over the Matter.

Philpot. I have purpoſed ſo to do, howſoever I ſpeed, by God's Grace.

Bonner. I pray you, my Lord of Chicheſter, and Mr. Prolocutor, and Mr. Dr. Morgan, to commune with him while I bring my Lord of Durham going.

Chriſtopherſon. Mr. Philpot I was acquainted with you at Rome, if you remember it, but you have forgotten me, and talked ſomewhat with you of theſe Matters, and I find you now the ſame Man that you were then, I wiſh it were otherwiſe. For God's ſake be conformable

able to Men that be better learned than you, and ſtand not in your own Conceit.

Philpot. Whereas you call me in Remembrance of Acquaintance had at Rome, indeed it was ſo, tho' it were but very ſtrange on your Part to me-ward, being driven to Neceſſity.

Chriſtopherſon. You know the World was dangerous at that Time.

Wiſdom in God's Matters conſiſteth not in Man's Learning.

Philpot. Nothing ſo dangerous as it is now; but let that paſs. Whereas you ſay, you find me to be the ſame Man I was then, I praiſe God that you ſee me not like a Reed wavering with every Wind. And whereas you would have me follow better and learned Men than myſelf; indeed I acknowledge that you, with a great many others, are far better learned than I, whoſe Books, in reſpect of Learning, I am not worthy to carry after you: But Faith and the Wiſdom of God conſiſteth not in Learning only, and therefore St. Paul willeth that our Faith be not grounded upon the Wiſdom of Man. If you can ſhew by Learning out of God's Book, that I ought to be of another Faith than I am, I will hear you, and any other Man whatſoever he be.

Chriſtopherſon. I marvel why you ſhould diſſent from the catholick Church, ſince it hath thus long univerſally been received, except within theſe five or ſix Years here in England.

Philpot. I do not diſſent from the true catholick Church, I do only diſſent from the Biſhop of Rome, which if you can prove to be the catholick Church of Chriſt, I will be of the ſame alſo with you.

Chriſtopherſon. Will you believe St. Cyprian, if I can ſhew out of him, That the Church of Rome is ſuch a one, unto which Misbelief cannot approach?

Philpot. I am ſure you cannot ſhew any ſuch Saying out of St. Cyprian.

Chriſtopherſon. What will you lay thereon?

Philpot. I will lay as much as I am able to make.

Morgan. Will you promiſe to recant, if I ſhew his Saying to be true.

Philpot. My Faith ſhall not hang upon any Doctor's Saying, further than he ſhall be able to prove the ſame by God's Word.

Chriſtopherſon. I will go fetch the Book, and ſhew it him by and by, and therewithal he went into the Biſhop's Study, and brought Cyprian, and pointed out theſe Words in one of his Epiſtles, Ad Romanos autem, quorum Fides Apoſtolo prædicante laudata eſt, non poteſt accedere perfidia; that is, But unto the Romans, whoſe Faith by the Teſtimony of the Apoſtle is praiſed, Misbelief can have no Acceſs.

Cyprian ad Cornel. lib. 1. epiſt. 3.

Philpot. Theſe Words of Cyprian do nothing prove your pretended Aſſertion, which is, That to the Church of Rome there could come no Misbelief.

Chriſtopherſon. Good Lord, doth it not? What can be ſaid more plainly?

Philpot. He ſpeaketh not of the Church of Rome abſolutely.

Chriſtopherſon. By God, a Child that can but ſay his Grammar, will not deny that you do, the Words be ſo plain.

Philpot. Swear not, Mr. Doctor, but weigh Cyprian's Words with me, and I ſhall make you to ſay as I have ſaid.

Chriſtopherſon. I am no Doctor, but I perceive it is but Labour loſt to reaſon with you.

Dr. Day, Biſhop of Chicheſter, ſhrinketh away.

And with that the Biſhop of London came in blowing again, and ſaid, What, is my Lord of Chicheſter gone away alſo? (for he even a little before departed alſo without any other Word, than that he muſt needs be gone.) What (ſays Bonner) is the Matter you now ſtand upon?

Anno 1555.

Morgan. Mr. Chriſtopherſon hath ſhew'd Mr. Philpot a notable Place of the Authority of the Church of Rome, and he maketh nothing of it.

Bonner. Where is the Place? Let me ſee. By my Faith here is a Place alone. Come hither, Sir, what ſay you to this? Nay, tarry a while, I will help this Place with St. Paul's own Teſtimony, in the firſt Chapter to the Romans, where he ſaith, That their Faith is preached throughout the World: How can you be able to anſwer to this?

Philpot. Yes, my Lord, it is ſoon anſwer'd, if you will conſider all the Words of Cyprian; for he ſpeaketh of ſuch as in his Time were faithful at Rome, and followed the Doctrine of St. Paul, as he had taught them, and as it was notify'd throughout the World, by an Epiſtle which he had written in the Commendation of their Faith. With ſuch as are praiſed by St. Paul at Rome, for following the true Faith, Misbelief can have no Place. And if you can ſhew, that the Faith which the Church of Rome holdeth now, is that Faith which the Apoſtle praiſed and allowed in the Romans in his Time, then will I ſay what St. Cyprian then ſaid, and with you, That Infidelity can have no Place there; but otherwiſe it maketh not abſolutely for the Authority of the Church of Rome, as you do miſtake it.

Chriſtopherſon. You underſtand Cyprian well indeed; I think you never read him in your Life.

Philpot. Yes, Mr. Doctor, that I have, I can ſhew you a Book noted with mine own Hand: Though I have not read ſo much as you, yet I have read ſomewhat. It is a Shame for you to wreſt and wreath the Doctors as you do, to maintain a falſe Religion, which be altogether againſt you, if you take them aright; and indeed your falſe packing of Doctors together, hath given me and others occaſion to look upon them, whereby we find you ſhameful Liars, and Miſreporters of the ancient Doctors.

Morgan. What, will you be in Hand to allow Doctors now? they of your Sect do not ſo. I marvel therefore that you will allow them.

Philpot. I do allow them in as much as they do agree with the Scriptures, and ſo do all they which be of the Truth, howſoever you term us, and I praiſe God for that good Underſtanding I have received by them.

Chriſtopherſon. What, you underſtand not the Doctors, you may be aſham'd to ſay it.

Philpot. I thank God, I underſtand them better than you; for you have Excæcationem Cordis, The Blindneſs of Heart; ſo that you underſtand not truly what you read, no more than the Wall here, as your taking of Cyprian doth declare. And before God you are but Deceivers of the People, for all the Brag you make of Learning; neither have ye Scripture or ancient Doctor on your Side, being truly taken.

Morgan. Why, all the Doctors be on our Side, and againſt you altogether.

Philpot. Yea, ſo you ſay when you be in your Pulpits alone, and none to anſwer you. But if you will come to caſt Accounts with me thereof, I will venture with you a Recantation, that I (as little Sight as I have in the Doctors)

Anno 1555. Doctors) will bring more Authorities of ancient Doctors on my Side than you ſhall be able for yours, and he that can bring moſt, to him let the other Side yield. Are ye willing ſo to do.

Chriſtopherſon. It is but Folly to reaſon with you, you will believe no Man but your ſelf.

Philpot. I will believe you or any other learned Man, if you can bring any Thing worthy to be believed. You cannot win me with vain Words from my Faith. Before God there is no Truth in you.

Morgan. What, no Truth? no Truth? Ha, ha, ha.

Philpot. Except the Articles of the Trinity, you are corrupt in all other Things, and found in nothing.

Morgan. What ſay you, do we not believe well on the Sacrament?

Philpot. It is the Thing which (among all others) you do moſt abuſe.

Morgan. Wherein I pray you? tell us.

Philpot. I have told you before Mr. Doctor, in the Convocation-houſe.

Morgan. Yes marry: indeed you told us there very well. For there you fell down upon your Knees, and fell to weeping, Ha, ha, ha.

Philpot. I did weep indeed, and ſo did Chriſt upon Jeruſalem, and am not to be blamed for it, if you conſider the Cauſe of my weeping.

Morgan. What, make you yourſelf Chriſt, Ha, ha, ha.

Philpot. No Sir, I make not myſelf Chriſt; but I am not aſhamed to do as my Maſter and Saviour did, to bewail and lament your Infidelity and Idolatry, which I there foreſaw thro' Tyranny you would bring again to this Realm, as this Day doth declare.

Morgan. That is your Argument.

Chriſtopherſon. Wherein do we abuſe the Sacrament? tell us.

Philpot. As I may touch but one of the leaſt Abuſes, you adminiſter it not in both Kinds as you ought to do, but keep the one half from the People, contrary to Chriſt's Inſtitution.

Chriſtopherſon. Why, is not there as much contained in one Kind, as in both? And what need is it then to miniſter in both Kinds?

Philpot. I believe not ſo: For if it had, Chriſt would have given but one Kind only; for he inſtituted nothing ſuperfluous: And therefore you cannot ſay that the whole Effect of the Sacrament is as well in one Kind, as in both, ſince the Scripture teacheth otherwiſe.

Chriſtopherſon. What if I can prove it by Scripture, that we may adminiſter it in one Kind? The Apoſtles did ſo, as it may appear in the Acts of the Apoſtles in one or two Places, where it is written, that the Apoſtles continued in Prayers and in breaking of Bread, which is meant of the Sacrament.

Philpot. Why, Mr. Doctor, do you not know that St. Luke, by making mention of breaking of Bread, meaneth the whole Uſe of the Sacrament according to Chriſt's Inſtitution, by a Figure which you have learned in Grammar, * Synecdoche, where Part is mentioned and the whole underſtood to be done, as Chriſt commanded it?

* Synecdoche is a Figure when by one Thing or by Part, the whole is underſtood.

Chriſtopherſon. Nay, that is not ſo: For I can ſhew you out of Euſebius, in his Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, that there was a Man of God, whom he named, that ſent the Sacrament in one Kind by a Boy, to one that was ſick.

Philpot. I have read indeed that they did uſe to give what was left of the Communion-bread to Children, to Mariners, and to Women, and ſo peradventure the † Boy might carry a Piece of what was left to the ſick Man.

† Euſebius hath theſe Words, He gave a little of the Sacrament to the Boy. Which Words may very well comprehend both Parts: And it ſeemeth by the Words that follow, that Part of it was Liquor, for it is written in the ſame Place, He commanded that he ſhould pour it and drop it into the Man's Mouth, and ſo he did. Euſeb. in eccl. hiſt. l. 6. cap. 44.

Chriſtopherſon. Nay, as a Sacrament it was purpoſely ſent unto him.

Philpot. If it were ſo, yet can you not preciſely ſay, that he had not the Cup adminiſtred unto him alſo by ſome other ſent unto him: But though one Man did uſe it thus, doth it follow that all Men may do the like? St. Cyprian noteth many Abuſes of the Sacrament in his Time, which roſe upon ſingular Mens Examples, as uſing of Water inſtead of Wine: Therefore he ſaith, We muſt not look what any Man hath done before us, but what Chriſt firſt of all did and commanded.

Chriſtopherſon. Hath not the Church taught us ſo to uſe the Sacrament? And how do we know that Chriſt is Homousios, that is, of one Subſtance with the Father, but by the Determination of the Church? How can you prove that otherwiſe by expreſs Words of Scripture, and where find you Homousios in all the Scriptures?

Philpot. Yes that I do in the Firſt of the Hebrews, where it is written that Chriſt is the expreſs Image of God's own Subſtance, Ejuſdem ſubſtantiæ.

Chriſtopherſon. Nay, that is not ſo. That is, there is no more but Expreſſa imago ſubſtantiæ, The expreſs Image of God's Subſtance, and Image is Accident.

Philpot. It is in the Text, Of his Subſtance, Subſtantiæ illius, or of his own Subſtance, as it may be right well interpreted. Beſides this, that which Chriſt ſpake of himſelf in St. John manifeſteth the ſame, ſaying, I and the Father be one Thing, Ego & pater unum ſumus. And whereas you ſay, Imago here is Accidence, the ancient Fathers uſe this for a ſtrong Argument to prove Chriſt to be God, becauſe he is the very Image of God.

Chriſtopherſon. Do they? Is this a good Argument, becauſe we are the Image of God, Ergo, We are God?

Philpot. We are not called the expreſs Image of God, as it is written of Chriſt, and we are but the Image of God by Participation; and as it is written in Geneſis, We are made to the Likeneſs and Similitude of God. But you ought to know, Mr. Chriſtopherſon, that there is no Accident in God, and therefore Chriſt cannot be the Image of God, but he muſt be of the ſame Subſtance with God.

Chriſtopherſon. Tuſh.

Morgan. How ſay you to the Preſence of the Sacrament? Will you ſtand here to the Judgment of your Book, or no? Or will you recant?

Philpot. I know you go about to catch me in Words. If you can prove that Book to be of my ſetting forth, lay it to my Charge when I come to Judgment.

Morgan. Speak, be you of the ſame Mind as this Book is of, or no? Sure I am, you were once, unleſs you are become another Manner of Man than you were.

Philpot. What I was, you know; what I am, I will not tell you now, but this I will ſay to you by the Way, that if you can prove the Sacrament of the Maſs (as you now uſe it) to be a Sacrament, I will then grant you a Preſence; but firſt you muſt prove the ſame a Sacrament, and afterward treat of the Preſence.

Morgan. Ho, do you doubt that it is a Sacrament?

Philpot. I am paſt doubting, for I believe you can never be able to prove it a Sacrament.

Chriſtopherſon. Yea, do you? Good Lord, doth not St. Auguſtine call it the Sacrament of the Altar? How ſay you to that?

Philpot. That maketh nothing for the Probation of your Sacrament. For ſo he with other ancient Writers do call the Holy Communion or Supper of the Lord, in reſpect that it is the Sacrament of the Sacrifice which Chriſt offered upon the Altar of the Croſs, which Sacrifice all the Altars and Sacrifices done upon the Altars in the old Law did prefigure and ſhadow, which pertaineth nothing to you Sacrament hanging upon your Altars of Lime and Stone.

Chriſtopherſon. Doth it not? I pray you what ſignifieth Altar?

Philpot. Not as you falſly take it materially, but for the Sacrifice of the Altar of the Croſs.

Chriſtopherſon. Where find you it ever ſo taken?

Philpot. Yes that I do in St. Paul to the Hebrews the thirteenth Chapter, where he ſaith, We have an Altar, of which it is not lawful for them to eat that ſerve the Tabernacle. Is not Altar in this Place taken for the Sacrifice of the Altar, and not for the Altar of Lime and Stone?

Chriſtopherſon. Well, God bleſs me out of your Company. You are ſuch an Heretick, as I have not heard the like.

Philpot. I pray God keep me from ſuch blind Doctors, which when they are not able to prove what they ſay, then they fall to reviling (as ye do now) for lack of better Proof. In the mean while the Biſhop of London was talking with ſome others hard by, and at length came in to ſupply his Part, and ſaid:

Bonner. I pray you Maſters, hearken what I ſhall ſay to this Man. Come hither Mr. Green: And now, Sir, (pointing to me) you cannot think it ſufficient to be naught yourſelf, but muſt go about to procure this young Gentleman by your Letters to do the like.

Philpot. My Lord, he cannot ſay that I ever hitherto wrote unto him concerning any ſuch Matter, as he here can teſtify.

Green. No, you never wrote unto me.

Bonner. Why, is not this your Letter which you did write concerning him.

Philpot. I have ſhewed your Lordſhip my Mind concerning that Letter already: It was not written to Mr. Green, neither was he privy to the Writing thereof.

Bonner. How ſay you then, if a Man be in an Error, and you know thereof, what are you bound to do in ſuch a Caſe?

Philpot. I am bound to do the beſt I can to bring him out of it.

Bonner. If Mr. Green here be in the like, are you not bound to reform him thereof if you can?

Philpot. Yes that I am, and will do the uttermoſt of my Power therein.

But the Biſhop remembring himſelf, thinking that he would but ſhrewdly after his Expectation be holpen at my Mouth, but rather confirmed in that which he called an Error, ceaſed to go any farther in his Demand, and called Mr. Green aſide, and before his Regiſter read him a Letter, I know not the Contents thereof: And therewithal he gave Mr. Green the Book of my Diſputation in the Convocation-houſe, and afterwards went aſide, communing with Mr. Chriſtopherſon, leaving Mr. Morgan, Mr. Harpsfield and Mr. Coſins, to reaſon with me in the hearing of Mr. Green. Anno 1555.

Morgan. Mr. Philpot, I would ask you how old your Religion is?

Philpot. It is older than yours by a thouſand Years and more.

Morgan. I pray you where was it fifty Years ago?

Philpot. It was in Germany apparent by the Teſtimony of Huſs, Jerome of Prague and Wickliff, whom your Generation an hundred Years ago and more, did burn for preaching the Truth unto you; and before their Time and ſince hath been, although under Perſecution it hath been put to ſilence.

Morgan. That is a marvellous ſtrange Religion, which no Man can tell certainly where to find it.

Philpot. It ought to be no marvel unto you to ſee God's Truth through Violence oppreſſed; for ſo it hath been from the Beginning from Time to Time, as it appeareth by Hiſtory, and as Chriſt's true Religion is now to be found here in England, although Hypocriſy hath by Violence the upper Hand. And in the Revelations you may ſee it was propheſied, that the true Church ſhould be driven into Corners, and into the Wilderneſs, and ſuffer great Perſecutions.

Morgan. Ah, are you ſeen in the Revelations? there are many ſtrange Things. Scoffing Morgan.

Philpot. If I tell you the Truth which you are not able to refel, believe it, and dally not out ſo earneſt Matters: Methinks you are more like a Scoffer in a Play, than a reaſonable Doctor to inſtruct a Man, you are barearſed, and dance naked in a Net, and you ſee not your own Nakedneſs.

Morgan. What I pray you, be not ſo quick with me, let us talk a little more coldly together.

Philpot. I will talk with you as mildly as you can deſire, if you will ſpeak learnedly and charitably. But if you go about with Taunts to delude the Truth, I will not hide it from you.

Morgan. Why, will not you ſubmit your Judgment to the learned Men of this Realm?

Philpot. Becauſe I ſee they can bring no good ground whereupon I may with a good Conſcience ſettle my Faith, more ſurely than on that which I am now grounded upon by God's manifeſt Word.

Morgan. Can they not? it is a marvel that ſo many learned Men ſhould be deceived.

Philpot. It is no marvel by St. Paul, for he ſaith, 1 Cor. 2. That not many wiſe, neither many learned after the World be called to the Knowledge of the Goſpel.

Morgan. Have you then alone the Spirit of God, and not we?

Philpot. I ſay not that I alone have the Spirit of God, but as many as abide in the true Faith of Chriſt, have the Spirit of God as well as I.

Morgan. How know you that you have the Spirit of God?

Philpot.

Anno 1555.

Philpot. By the Faith of Chriſt which is in me.

Morgan. Ah, by Faith do you ſo? I think it is the Spirit of the Buttery, which your Fellows have had that have been burned before you, who were drunk the Night before they went to their Death, and I believe went drunken unto it.

Philpot. It appeareth by your Communication, that you are better acquainted with the Spirit of the Buttery than with the Spirit of God; wherefore I muſt now tell thee, thou painted Wall and Hypocrite, in the Name of the Living Lord, whoſe Truth I have told thee, that God ſhall rain Fire and Brimſtone upon ſuch Scorners of his Word and Blaſphemers of his People as thou art.

Morgan. What, you rage now.

Philpot. Thy fooliſh Blaſphemies have compelled the Spirit of God, which is in me, to ſpeak that which I have ſaid to thee, thou Enemy of all Righteouſneſs.

Morgan. Why do you judge me ſo?

Philpot. By thine own wicked Words I judge of thee, thou blind and blaſphemous Doctor; for as it is written, By thy Words thou ſhalt be juſtified, and by thy Words thou ſhalt be condemned. I have ſpoke on God's Behalf, and now I have done with thee.

Morgan. Why then I tell thee Philpot, thou art an Heretick, and ſhalt be burned for thine Hereſy, and afterwards go to Hell-fire.

Philpot. I tell thee, thou Hypocrite, that I mind not thy Threats of Fire and Faggots; neither, I thank God my Lord, ſtand in fear of the ſame: My Faith in Chriſt ſhall overcome them. But the Hell-fire with which thou threatneſt me, is thy Portion, and is prepared for thee, (unleſs thou ſpeedily repent) and for ſuch Hypocrites as thou art.

Morgan. What, thou ſpeakeſt upon Wine, thou haſt tippled well to Day by likelihood.

Philpot. So ſaid the curſed Generation to the Apoſtles, being repleniſhed with the Holy Ghoſt, and ſpeaking the wondrous Works of God, they ſaid they were drunk, when they had nothing elſe to ſay, as thou doſt now.

Morgan. Why, I am of Opinion I am able to anſwer thee.

Philpot. So it ſeemeth, with Blaſphemies and Lies.

Morgan. Nay, even with Learning, ſay what thou canſt.

Philpot. That appeared well at my Diſputation in the Convocation-houſe, where thou didſt undertake to anſwer thoſe few Arguments I was permitted to make, and yet wert not able to anſwer one; but in thine Anſwers did fumble and ſtammer, that the whole Houſe was aſhamed of thee: And the final Concluſions of all thine Anſwer was, that thou couldſt anſwer me if I were in the Schools at Oxford.

Morgan. What, did I ſo? thou belieſt me.

Philpot. I do not bely thee, the Book of the Report of the Diſputation beareth Record thereto, and all that were preſent then can tell thou ſayſt ſo, if they liſt. And I tell thee plain, thou art not able to anſwer that Spirit of Truth which ſpeaketh in me for the Defence of Chriſt's true Religion. I am able by the Might thereof to drive thee round about this Gallery before me: And if it would pleaſe the Queen's Majeſty and her Council to hear thee and me, I would make thee for Shame ſhrink behind the Door.

Morgan. Yea, would you ſo?

Philpot. Thou haſt the Spirit of Illuſion and Sophiſtry, which is not able to countervail the Spirit of Truth. Thou art but an Aſs in the true Underſtanding of Things appertaining unto God. I call thee Aſs, not in reſpect of Malice, but in that thou kickeſt againſt the Truth, and art void of all godly Underſtanding, not able to anſwer to that thou braggeſt in.

Morgan. Why, have I not anſwered thee in all Things thou haſt ſaid unto me? I take them to record.

Philpot. Ask of my Fellow whether I be a Thief.

Coſins. Hark, he maketh us all Thieves.

Philpot. You know that Phraſe of the Proverb, that like will hold with like. And I am ſure you will not judge with me againſt him, ſpeak I never ſo true; and in this Senſe I ſpeak it. The ſtrongeſt Anſwer that he hath made againſt me is, that you will burn me.

Morgan. Why, we do not burn you, it is the temporal Men that burn you, and not we.

Philpot. Thus you would (as Pilate did) waſh your Hands of all your wicked Doings. But I pray you call upon the Secular Power to be Executioners of your unrighteous Judgments. And have you not a Title in your Law, De hæreticis comburendis, to burn Hereticks?

Harpsfield. I have heard you both a good while reaſon together, and I never heard ſo ſtout an Heretick as you are, Mr. Philpot.

Coſins. Neither I in all my Life.

Philpot. You are not able to prove me an Heretick, by one Jot of God's Word.

Herpsfield. You have the Spirit of Arrogancy, I will reaſon with you no more. And ſo he was departing, and Mr. Coſins alſo. And with that the Biſhop and Chriſtopherſon came in again, and ſaid:

Bonner. Mr. Doctor, how doth this Man and you agree?

Morgan. My Lord, I do ask him where his Church was fifty Years ago.

Bonner. Are you not half agreed? as one Man ſaid once to two Parties, in whom the one was equally diſagreeing from the other.

Chriſtopherſon. My Lord, it is but Folly to reaſon with him any further, your Lordſhip will but loſe Time, for he is incurable.

Bonner. Well then, let his Keeper have him away. And with that Dr. Chedſey led me a Way by which we could not paſs, and therefore came back again through the Biſhop's Chamber, where all theſe Doctors were cluſtered together; and as I was paſſing by, the Biſhop took me by the Gown, and ſaid, Know you what Mr. Chriſtopherſon telleth me? I pray you Mr. Chriſtopherſon rehearſe the Sentence in Latin; and ſo he did: The Contents whereof were, That an Heretick would not be won.

Chriſtopherſon. St. Paul ſaith, Fly an Heretick after once or twice warning.

All the Doctors. Yea, my Lord, it is beſt you ſo do, and trouble your Lordſhip no more with him.

Philpot. You muſt firſt prove me juſtly to be an Heretick, before you uſe the Judgment of St. Paul againſt me: For he ſpeaketh of ſuch as hold Opinion againſt the manifeſt Word, which you cannot prove by me: And becauſe you want in your Proof, and be able to prove nothing

nothing againſt me, therefore you go about falſly to ſuppoſe me to be an Heretick, for the Safeguard of your own counterfeit Honeſty; but before God you are the Hereticks which ſo ſtoutly and ſtubbornly maintain ſo many Things directly againſt God's Word, as God in his Time will reveal. As I went out of his Chamber, the Biſhop called me aſide, and ſaid:

Bonner. I pray thee in good Sadneſs, what didſt thou mean by writing in the Beginning of thy Bible, Spiritus eſt vicarius Chriſti in terris, The Spirit is the Vicar of Chriſt on the Earth? I ſuppoſe you have ſome ſpecial Meaning therein.

Philpot. My Lord, I have none other Meaning than as I have told you already, That Chriſt ſince his Aſcenſion worketh all Things in us by his Spirit, and by his Spirit doth dwell in us. I pray you, my Lord, let me have my Bible, with other lawful Books and Writings which you have of mine, whereof many of them be none of mine, but lent to me by my Friends.

The Holy Ghoſt is Chriſt's Vicar upon Earth, and how.

Bonner. Your Bible you ſhall not have, but I will perhaps let you have another, and after I have peruſed the reſt, you ſhall have ſuch as I think good.

Philpot. I pray your Lordſhip then, that you would let me have Candle-light.

Bonner. To what Purpoſe I pray you?

Philpot. The Nights be long, and I would fain occupy myſelf about ſomewhat, and not ſpend my Time idly.

Bonner. Then you may pray.

Philpot. I cannot well ſay my Prayers without Light.

Bonner. Can you not ſay your Pater-noſter without a Candle? I tell you, Sir, you ſhall have ſome Meat and Drink of me, but Candles you ſhall have none.

Mr. Philpot denied to have Candle Light.

Philpot. I had rather have Candle than your Meat and Drink; but ſeeing I ſhall not have my Requeſt, the Lord ſhall be my Light.

Bonner. Have him down.

Chedſey. I will bring him to his Keeper, my Lord. Mr. Philpot, I wonder all theſe learned Men whom you have talked withal this Day can nothing at all perſwade you.

Philpot. Why, Mr. Doctor, would you have me to be perſwaded with nothing? or would you have me build my Faith upon Sand? What do you all bring, whereby I ought by any ſufficient Authority to be perſwaded to you?

Chedſey. I am ſorry you will ſo wilfully caſt yourſelf away, whereas you might live worſhipfully: Do you not think that others have Souls to ſave as well as you?

Philpot. Every Man ſhall receive according to his own Doings. Sure I am that you are deceived, and maintain a falſe Religion; and as for my eaſting away, I wiſh my burning Day were to-morrow, for this Delay is every Day to die, and yet not to be dead.

Chedſey. You are not like to die yet I can tell you.

Philpot. I am the more ſorry thereof. But the Will of God be done of me to his Glory. Amen.

Anno 1555.

The twelfth Examination of Mr. Philpot, on Wedneſday the Fourth of December, before the Biſhop of London, the Biſhop of Worceſter, and the Biſhop of Bangor.

IN the Morning I was brought down to the Wardrobe adjoining to the Chapel, and within a while after came three of the Biſhop's Chaplains unto me ſaying:

Chaplains. Mr. Philpot, my Lord hath ſent us unto you to deſire you to come to Maſs, certifying you that there is a Doctor of Divinity, a Chaplain of my Lord's, a notable learned Man, called Dr. Chedſey, going to Maſs: Therefore we alſo pray you, good Mr. Philpot, be content to come, it is hard hereby.

Philpot. I wonder my Lord would trouble you in ſending you about this Matter, ſeeing he knoweth I am a Man (by your Law) that cannot hear Maſs, becauſe I ſtand excommunicate.

Chaplains. Your Excommunication is but upon a Contumacy, and my Lord will diſpenſe with you if you will come.

Philpot. My Lord cannot, for he is not mine Ordinary, and I will not ſeek any ſuch Thing at his Hands. With this Anſwer they went away.

After Maſs the Biſhop called me before him into his Chappel, and there in the Preſence of his Regiſter (after he had ſaid his Mind becauſe I would not come to Maſs) recited the Articles, which he oftentimes before had done in that Behalf, with the Depoſitions of the Witneſſes, of whom ſome were not examined.

Bonner. Sir, what can you now ſay why I ſhould not proceed to give Sentence againſt thee as an Heretick?

Philpot. Why my Lord, will you proceed to give Sentence againſt me before your Witneſſes be examined? that is plain againſt your own Law, as all your Doings have been hitherto.

Bonner. See what a Fool thou art in the Law. I need not to recite the Depoſitions of the Witneſſes, but if I liſt: For I know them well enough already.

Philpot. It appeareth indeed you may do what you liſt.

Bonner. Tell me, I ſay, whether thou wilt anſwer, or no: And whether if thou wert abſolved of thine Excommunication, thou wouldſt come to Maſs, or no?

Philpot. I have anſwered as much as I intended to do until I be called to lawful Judgment: And as concerning my Conſcience, I will not make you God to ſit there as yet; it is God's Part only to be Searcher of my Heart.

Bonner. Look how fooliſhly he ſpeaks. Art thou God? and yet doſt thou not ſit in thine own Conſcience?

Philpot. I ſit not in mine own Conſcience, but I know it; and God there only ought to ſit, and none elſe.

Bonner. Thou art a naughty Fellow, and haſt done much Hurt, and haſt ſeduced other poor Fellows here in Priſon with thee, by thy comforting of them in their Errors, and haſt made them rejoyce and ſing with thee.

Mr. Philpot rebuked for ſinging.

Anno 1555.

Philpot. Yea, my Lord, we ſhall ſing, when you, and ſuch others as you are, ſhall cry, Wo, wo, except you repent.

Bonner. What an arrogant Fool is this? I will handle thee like an Heretick, and that ſhortly.

Philpot. I fear nothing, I thank God, you can do unto me. But God ſhall deſtroy ſuch as thou art, and that ſhortly, as I truſt.

Bonner. Have him away, this is a Knave indeed.

And I was had into the Wardrobe again by my Keeper, and within an Hour after was ſent for to come before him and the Biſhops of Worceſter and Bangor.

Bonner. Sir, I have talked with you many Times, and have cauſed you to be talked with by many learned Men, yea and honourable, both temporal and ſpiritual, and it availeth nothing with you. I am blamed that I have brought thee before ſo many: For they ſay, thou glorieſt to have many to talk withal. Well, now it lieth upon thee to look to thyſelf, for thy Time draweth near to an End, if thou do not become conformable. And at this preſent we are ſent from the Synod to offer you this Grace, that if you will come to the Unity of the Church of Rome with us, and acknowledge the real Preſence of Chriſt in the Sacrament of the Altar with us, all that is paſt ſhall be forgiven, and you received to Favour.

Worceſter. Mr. Philpot, we are ſent (as you here have heard by my Lord of London) from the Synod, to offer you Mercy if you will receive it, and of good will I bear you I wiſh you to take it whilſt it is offered, and be not a ſingular Man againſt a whole Multitude of learned Men, which now in Faſting and Prayer are gathered together to deviſe Things to do you good. Many very learned Men have talked with you, why ſhould you think yourſelf better learned than them all? Be not of ſuch Arrogancy, but have Humility, and remember there is no Salvation but in the Church.

Bangor. Methinks my Lord hath ſpoken wonderfully well unto you, that you ſhould not think yourſelf ſo well learned, but other Men are as well learned as you; neither of ſo good Wit, but others be as wiſe as you; neither of ſo good Memory, but others have as good Memories as you. Therefore miſtruſt your own Judgment, aud come home to us again. I never liked your Religion, becauſe it was ſet forth by Violence and Tyranny, and that is no true Token of true Religion. And I was the ſame Manner of Man then that I am now, and a great many more. Marry, for fear we held our Peace, and bore with that Time. Wherefore, Mr. Philpot, I wiſh you well, for I love you; and therefore be content to come home with us again into the Catholick Church of Rome.

The Pope's Religion hath no other Ground to ſtand upon but Violence.

Philpot. Where, my Lord, (as I may begin firſt to anſwer you) you ſay, that Religion is to be miſliked which is ſet forth by Tyranny, I pray God you give not Men Occaſion to think the ſame by yours at this Day, which had no other Argument to ſtand by but Violence. If you can ſhew me any good ſufficient Ground whereby to ground my Conſcience, that the Church of Rome is the true Catholick Church, whereunto you call me, I will gladly be of the ſame; otherwiſe I cannot ſo ſoon change the Religion I have learned theſe many Years.

Bangor. Where was your Religion to be found, I pray you, an hundred Years ago, that any Man knew of it?

Philpot. It was in Germany, and in divers other Places apparent.

Worceſter. Jeſus! will you be ſtill ſo ſingular a Man? What is Germany to the whole World?

Bonner. My Lords, I pray you give me leave to tell you, that I ſent for him to hear Maſs this Morning. And think you what Excuſe he made unto me, forſooth that he was accurſed, alledging his own Shame. He playeth as the Varlet Latimer did at Cambridge, when the Vice-chancellor ſent for him (who intended to have excommunicated him for ſome of his Hereſies) and the Chancellor was coming to his Chamber, he hearing thereof, made Anſwer, that he was ſick of the Plague, and ſo deluded the Chancellor; even ſo this Man ſaith, he was accurſed, becauſe he will not come to Maſs.

Bonner raileth againſt Mr. Latimer.

Worceſter. My Lord (I am ſure) here doth behave himſelf like a Father unto you; therefore be admoniſhed by him, and by us, that come now friendly unto you, and follow your Fathers before you.

Philpot. It is forbidden us of God by the Prophet Ezekiel, to follow our Fathers, or to walk in their Commandments.

Worceſter. It is written alſo in another Place, Ask of your Fathers!

Philpot. We ought to ask indeed our Fathers that have more Experience and Knowledge than we of God's Will, but no more to allow them, than we perceive they agree with the Scripture.

Worceſter. You will be a contentious Man, I ſee well; and St. Paul ſaith, that neither we, nor the Church of God have any ſuch Cuſtom.

Philpot. I am not contentious but for the Verity of my Faith, in which I ought to contend with all ſuch as do impugn the ſame without any juſt Objection.

Worceſter. Let us riſe, my Lord, for I ſee we ſhall do no good.

Bonner. Nay, I pray you tarry and hear the Articles I lay to his Charge. And after he had recited them they aroſe, and after ſtanding they reaſoned with me a while.

Worceſter. Mr. Philpot, I am very ſorry that you will be ſo ſingular. I never talked with any yet in my Dioceſs, but after once Communication had with me, they have been contented to revoke their Errors, and to teach the People how they were deceived, and ſo do much good, as you may if you liſt. For as I underſtand you were Archdeacon of Wincheſter (which is the Eye of the Biſhop) and you may do much Good in that Country if you would forſake your Errors, and come to the Catholick Church.

Philpot. Wherewithal you ſo ſoon perſuaded them to your Will, I ſee not. Error, that I know, I hold none; and of the Catholick Church I am ſure I am.

Worceſter. The Catholick Church doth acknowledge a real Preſence of Chriſt in the Sacrament, and ſo will not you.

Philpot. That is not ſo; for I acknowledge a very eſſential Preſence in the * duly uſing of the Sacrament.

* Note, he ſaith not in the Sacrament but in the Adminiſtration of the Sacrament.

Worceſter. What, a real Preſence?

Philpot. Yea, a real Preſence by the Spirit of God in the right Adminiſtration.

Worceſter. That is well ſaid: And do you agree with the Catholick Church alſo?

Philpot. I do agree with the true catholick Church.

Worceſter. My Lord of London, this Man ſpeaketh reaſonably now.

Bonner. You do agree in Generals, but when it ſhall come to Particulars, you will far diſagree.

Worceſter. Well, keep yourſelf here, and you ſhall have other learned Biſhops to commune further with you, as my Lord of Dnrham, and my Lord of Chicheſter, whom I hear ſay you do like well.

Philpot. I do like them as I do all others that ſpeak the Truth. I have once already ſpoken with them, and they found no Fault with me.

Worceſter. In the mean Seaſon pray to God for Grace.

Philpot. Prayer is the moſt comfortable Exerciſe I feel in my Trouble, and my Conſcience is quiet, and I have the Peace of Mind, which cannot be the Fruits of Hereſy.

Worceſter. We bid you farewel for this Time.

After Dinner they called for me again, and demanded of me whether I meant as I ſpake before Dinner, and would not go from it. To whom I anſwered, That I would not go from what I had ſaid.

Worceſter. You ſaid at my departing from you before Dinner, that if we did burn you, we ſhould burn a catholick Man: Will you be a catholick Man, and ſtand to the catholick Church?

Philpot. I will ſtand to the true catholick Church.

Worceſter. Will you ſtand to the catholick Church of Rome?

Philpot. If you can prove the ſame to be the catholick Church, I will be one thereof.

Worceſter. Did not Chriſt ſay unto Peter, and to all his Succeſſors of Rome, Paſce oves meas, paſce agnos meos? Feed my Sheep, feed my Lambs? Which doth ſignify that he gave him more Authority than the reſt.

Philpot. That Saying pertaineth nothing to the Authority of Peter, above others, but declareth what Chriſt requireth of his beloved Apoſtles, that they ſhould with all Diligence preach to the Flock of Chriſt the Way of Salvation, and that doth the Iteration of feeding, ſpoken to Peter, only ſignify. But the Biſhop of Rome little regardeth the ſpiritual feeding, and therefore he hath imagined an eaſier Way to make himſelf Lord of the whole World, yea and of the Word of God too, and doth not feed Chriſt's Flock as Peter did.

Worceſter. How can you tell that?

Philpot. Yes I have been there, and I could not learn of all his Counttymen, that ever he preacheth.

Worceſter. Though he preacheth not one Way, he preacheth another, by procuring good Order for the Church to be kept in.

Philpot. I am ſure that it will be his Damnation before God, that he leaveth what he is commanded by Chriſt, and ſetteth forth his own Decrees to deface the Goſpel.

Worceſter. It is the evil Living that you have ſeen at Rome, that cauſeth you to have this ill Judgment of the Church of Rome. I cannot now tarry with you to reaſon further of the Matter. Anno 1555.

How ſay you to the real Preſence of the Sacrament, will you ſtand to that?

Philpot. I do acknowledge (as I have ſaid) a real Preſence of the Sacrament, in the due Adminiſtration thereof, to the worthy Receivers by the Spirit of God. By really he meaneth truly.

Worceſter. You add now a great many more Words than you did before: And yet you ſay more of the Sacrament, than a great many will do.

Thus they departed, and after them came unto me Dr. Chedſey and Dr. Wright, Archdeacon of Oxford, with a great many more.

Chedſey. Mr. Philpot, here is Mr. Archdeacon of Oxford come to you to give you good Counſel, I pray hear him.

Philpot. I will refuſe to hear none that will counſel me any Good; and if any can bring any Matter better than I have, I will ſtick thereunto.

Wright. I would wiſh you, Mr. Philpot, to agree with the catholick Church, and not to ſtand in your own Conceit: You ſee a great many learned Men againſt you.

Philpot. I am, Mr. Doctor, of the unfeigned catholick Church, and will live and die therein; and if you can prove your Church to be the true catholick Church, I will be one of the ſame.

Wright. I came not to diſpute with you, but to exhort you. Here be better learned than I, that can inform you better than I.

Chedſey. What Proof would you have? I will prove unto you our Church to have its Being and Foundation by the Scriptures, by the Apoſtles, and by the primitive Church, confirmed with the Blood of Martyrs, and with the Teſtimony of all Confeſſors.

Philpot. Give me your Hand, Mr. Doctor, prove that, and have with you.

Chedſey. If I had my Books here, I could ſoon prove it, I will go fetch ſome; and with that he went and brought his Book of Annotations, ſaying, I cannot well bring my Books, therefore I have brought my Book of Annotations, and turned there to a common Place of the Sacrament, asking me whether the catholick Church did allow the Preſence of Chriſt's Body in the Sacrament, or no? I hear ſay you do confeſs a real Preſence: But i'll be hang'd if you will abide by it: You will deny it by and by. You promiſe more Chedſey than you can prove.

Philpot. What I have ſaid I cannot deny, neither intend, whatſoever you ſay.

Chedſey. If there be a real Preſence in the Sacrament, then evil Men receive Chriſt, which Thing you will not grant, I am ſure.

Philpot. I deny the Argument, for I do not grant in the Sacrament, by Tranſubſtantiation, any real Preſence, as you falſly imagine, but in the due Adminiſtration to the worthy Receivers.

Chedſey. I will prove that the evil and wicked Men eat the Body of Chriſt, as well as the good Men, by St. Auguſtine here. Whether evil Men receive the Body of Chriſt.

Philpot. And in the Beginning of his Text St. Auguſtine ſeemeth to approve his Aſſertion; bur I bad him read out to the End, and there St. Auſtin declareth moſt evidently that it was Quodammodo, after a certain Manner the evil Men received the Body of Chriſt, which is ſacramentally, only in the outward Sign, and not really, or indeed as the Good Quodammodo.

Anno 1555.

doth. And thus all the Doctors that you ſeem to bring in for your Purpoſe, be quite againſt you if ye did rightly weigh them.

Chedſey. By God you are a ſubtil Fellow. See how he would writhe St. Auguſtine's Words.

Philpot. See which of us do writhe St. Auguſtine moſt, you or I who take his Meaning by his own expreſs Words. And ſeeing you charge me with Subtilty, what Subtilty is this of you, to ſay, that you will prove your Matter of the Church, even from the Beginning, promiſing to ſhew your Books therein, and when it cometh to the Proof, you are able to ſhew none, and for want thereof ſlip into a By-matter, and yet faint in the Proof thereof? Before God you are bare-ars'd in your Religion.

Dr. Chedſey faileth in his Proof.

Chedſey. You ſhall be conſtrained to come to us at length, whether you will or no.

Philpot. Hold that Argument faſt; for it is the beſt you have, for you have nothing but Violence.

The thirteenth Examination of Mr. Philpot before the Archbiſhop of York, and other Biſhops.

THE Thurſday after, I was called in the Morning before the Archbiſhop of York, the Biſhop of Chicheſter, the Biſhop of Bath, and the Biſhop of London. The Biſhop of Chicheſter being firſt come, began to talk with me.

Chicheſter. I am come of good Will to talk with you, to inſtruct you what I can, to come to the catholick Church, and to exhort you to inſtruct your own Judgment, and to learn firſt to have Humility, and by the ſame to learn of others that be better learned than you, as they did learn of ſuch as were their Betters before them.

Philpot. We muſt all be taught of God, and I will with all Humility learn of them that will inform me by God's Word, what I have to do. I confeſs I have but little Learning in reſpect of you, that both of your Years and great Exerciſe do excel therein: But Faith conſiſteth not only in Learning, but in Simplicity of believing that which God's Word teacheth. Therefore I ſhall be glad to hear both of your Lordſhip, and of any other (that God hath revealed unto by his Word) the true Doctrine thereof, and to thank you, that it doth pleaſe you to take Pains herein.

Chicheſter. You take the firſt alledged amiſs, as though all Men ſhould be taught by Inſpiration, and not by Learning. How do we believe the Goſpel, but by the Authority of the Church, and becauſe the ſame hath allowed it?

Philpot. St. Paul ſaith, He learned not the Goſpel by Men, neither of Men, but by the Revelation of Jeſus Chriſt. Which is a plain and ſufficient Proof that the Goſpel taketh not its Authority of Man, but of God only.

Chicheſter. St. Paul ſpeaketh but of his own Knowledge how he came thereto.

Philpot. Nay he ſpeaketh of the Goſpel generally, Which cometh not from Man, but from God; and that the Church muſt only teach that which cometh from God, and not Man's Precepts.

Chicheſter. Doth not St. Auguſtine ſay theſe Words, I would not believe the Goſpel if the Authority of the Church did not move me thereto.

Philpot. I grant, that the Authority of the Church doth move the Unbelievers to believe; but yet the Church doth not give the Word its Authority; for the Word hath its Authority only from God, and not of Men, Men be but Diſpoſers thereof. For firſt, the Word had its Being before the Church, and the Word is the Foundation of the Church, and firſt is the Foundation ſure, before the Building thereon can be ſtedfaſt.

The Word is the Foundation of the Church, and not the Church of the Word.

Chicheſter. I perceive you miſtake me, I ſpeak of the Knowledge of the Goſpel, and not of the Authority; for by the Church we have all Knowledge of the Goſpel.

Philpot. I confeſs that; for Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God. And I acknowledge that God appointeth an ordinary Means for Men to come unto the Knowledge now, and not miraculouſly, as he hath done in Times paſt; yet we that be taught by Men, muſt take heed that we learn nothing elſe but that which was taught in the primitive Church by Revelation. Here came in the Biſhop of York and the Biſhop of Bath; and after they had ſaluted one another, and communed a while together, the Archbiſhop of York called me unto them, ſaying, York. Sir, we hearing that you are out of the Way, are come of Charity to inform you, and to bring you into the true Faith, and to the catholick Church again; willing you firſt to have Humility, and to be humble and willing to learn of your Betters, for elſe we can do no good with you. And God ſaith by his Prophet; On whom ſhall I reſt, but on the humble and meek, and ſuch as tremble at my Word? Now if you will ſo be, we ſhall be glad to travel with you.

Philpot. I know that Humility is the Door whereby we enter unto Chriſt; and I thank his Goodneſs I have entered in at the ſame unto him, and with all Humility will hear whatſoever Truth you ſhall ſpeak unto me.

York. What be the Matters you ſtand on, and require to be ſatisfy'd in?

Philpot. My Lord, if it ſhall pleaſe your Grace, we were entered into a good Matter before you came, of the Church, and how we ſhould know the Truth but by the Church.

York. Indeed that is the Head we ought to begin at, for the Church being truly known we ſhall ſooner agree in the particular Things.

Philpot. If your Lordſhips can prove the Church of Rome to be the true catholick Church, it will do much to perſwade me toward what you would have me incline unto.

York. Why, let us go to the Definition of the Church. What is it?

Philpot. It is a Congregation of People diſperſed through the World, agreeing together in the Word of God, uſing the Sacraments and all other Things according to the ſame.

York. Your Definition is of many Words to no Purpoſe.

Philpot. I do not preciſely define the Church, but declare unto you what I think the Church is.

York. Is the Church viſible or inviſible?

Philpot. It is both viſible and inviſible. The inviſible Church is of the Elect of God only; the viſible conſiſts both of good and bad, uſing all Things in Faith, according to God's Word.

York.

York. The Church is an universal Congregation of faithful People in Christ through the World; which this word Catholick doth well expreſs; for what is Catholick elſe? doth it not ſignify Univerſal?

Philpot. The Church is defined by St. Auguſtine to be called Catholick in this wiſe, The Church is called therefore Catholick, becauſe it is truly perfect, and halteth in nothing.

Cathol ck defined by St. Auguſtine.

York. Nay, it is called Catholick, becauſe it is univerſally received of all chriſtian Nations for the moſt Part.

Catholick defined by Papiſts.

Philpot. The Church was Catholick in the Apoſtles Time, yet was it not univerſally received of the World; but becauſe their Doctrine which they had received of Chriſt was perfect, and appointed to be preached and received of the whole World, therefore it is called the catholick Faith, and all Perſons receiving the ſame, to be counted the catholick Church. And St. Auguſtine in another Place writeth, that the catholick Church is that which believeth aright.

York. If you will learn I will ſhew you St. Auguſtine, writing againſt the Donatiſts, that he proveth the catholick Church by two principal Points, which is, Univerſality and Succeſſion of Biſhops in one apoſtolical See from Time to Time. Now thus I will make mine Argument.

This Conſequence being reduced into a Syllogiſm of the firſt Figure, will ground upon a falſe Major.

Univerſality and Succeſſion make a true Church.

The Church of Rome hath univerſal Succeſſion.

Ergo, The Church of Rome is the true Church.

The Church of Rome is Univerſal, and hath her Succeſſion of Biſhops from Time to Time.

Ergo, It is the catholick Church.

How anſwer you to this Argument.

Philpot. I deny the Antecedent, that the catholick Church is only known by Univerſality and Succeſſion of Biſhops.

York. I will prove it, and with that he brought forth a Book which he had noted out of the Doctors, and turned to his common Places therein of the Church, and recited one or two out of St. Auguſtine, and eſpecially out of his Epiſtle written againſt the Donatiſts, where St. Auguſtine manifeſtly proveth, that the Donatiſts were not the catholick Church, becauſe they have no Succeſſion of Biſhops in their Opinion, neither Univerſality; and the ſame Force hath St. Auguſtine's Argument againſt you.

To this he anſwered ſufficiently before, look in the latter End of the ſeventh Examination.

Philpot. My Lord, I have weighed the Force of that Argument before now, and I perceive it maketh nothing againſt me, neither cometh it to your Purpoſe; for I will ſtand to the Trial of St. Auguſtine for the Approbation of the catholick Church whereof I am. For St. Auguſtine ſpeaketh of Univerſality joined with Verity, and of faithful Succeſſors of Peter before Corruption came into the Church. And ſo if you can deduce your Argument for the See of Rome now, as St. Auguſtine might do in his Time, I would ſay it might be of ſome Force, otherwiſe not.

Not principally, by your Leave, my Lord.

York. St. Auguſtine proveth the catholick Church principally by Succeſſion of Biſhops, and therefore you underſtand not St. Auguſtine. For what, I pray you, was the Opinion of the Donatiſts, againſt whom he wrote, can you tell? What Country were they of?

Philpot. They were a certain Sect of Men, affirming among other Hereſies, that the Dignity of the Sacraments depended upon the Worthineſs of the Miniſter; ſo that if the Miniſter were good, the Sacraments which he miniſtred were available, or elſe not.

Anno 1555.

Chicheſter. That was their Error, and they had none other but that. And he read another Authority of St. Auſtin out of a Book which he brought, even to the ſame Purpoſe that the other was.

Philpot. I challenge St. Auſtin to be with me thoroughly in this Point, and will ſtand to his Judgment, taking one Place with another.

Chicheſter. If you will not have the Church to be certain, I pray you by whom will you be judged in Matters of Controverſy?

Philpot. I do not deny the Church to be certain; but I deny that it is neceſſarily tied to any Place, longer than it abideth in the Word; and for all Controverſies the Word ought to be Judge.

Chicheſter. But what if I take it one Way, and you another, how then?

Philpot. St. Auſtin ſheweth a Remedy for that, and willeth, That one Place of the Scripture ought to be underſtood by the more.

York. How anſwer you to this Argument:

Rome hath known Succeſſion of Biſhops, which your Church hath not.

Ergo, That is the catholick Church, and yours is not, becauſe there is no ſuch Succeſſion can be proved in your Church.

Philpot. I deny, my Lord, that Succeſſion of Biſhops is in infallible Point to know the Church by: For there may be a Succeſſion of Biſhops known in a Place, and yet there be no Church, as at Antioch and Jeruſalem, and in other Places, where the Apoſtles abode as well as at Rome. But if you put to the Succeſſion of Biſhops, Succeſſion of Doctrine withal, as St. Auſtin doth, I will grant it to be a good Proof for the catholick Church; but a Local Succeſſion only is nothing available.

Local Succeſſion without Succeſſion of Doctrine availeth nothing.

York. You will have no Church than I ſee well.

Philpot. Yes, my Lords, I acknowledge the catholick Church, as I am bound by my Creed; but I cannot acknowledge a falſe Church for the true.

Chicheſter. Why is there two catholick Churches then?

Philpot. No, I know there is but one catholick Church, but there have been, and be at this preſent that take upon them the Name of Chriſt and of his Church, which be not ſo indeed, as it is written, Rev. 2. There be they that call themſelves Apoſtles, and be not ſo indeed, but the Synagogue of Satan and Liars. And now it is with us as it was with the two Women in Solomon's Time, which lay together, and the one over-laid the Child, and afterward went about to challenge the true Mother's Child. 1 Kings 3.

Chicheſter. What a Babbling is here with you now? I ſee you lack Humility. You will go about to teach, and not to learn.

Philpot. My Lords, I muſt deſire you to bear with my haſty Speech; it is my Infirmity of Nature. All that I ſpeak is to learn by, I wiſh you did underſtand all my Mind, that I might be ſatisfied by you through better Authority.

Chicheſter. My Lord, if it pleaſe your Grace, turn the Argument upon him which you have made, and let him ſhew the Succeſſion of the Biſhops of his Church, as we can do. How say you, can you shew the Succession of Bishops in your Church from Time to Time? I tell you, this Argument troubled Dr. Ridley * so sore, that he could never answer it; yet he was well learned, I dare say you will say so.

* So ye say now, when ye would give him no Leave nor Time when he was alive to make his Answers.

Philpot. He was a Man so learned, that I was not worthy to carry his Books for Learning.

Chichester. I promise you he was never able to answer that. He was a Man that I loved well, and he me; for he came unto me divers Times being in Prison, and conferred with me.

Philpot. I wonder, my Lord, you should make this Argument which you would turn upon me, for the Trial of my Church whereof I am, or that you would make Bishop Ridley so ignorant that he was not able to answer it, since it is of no Force. For behold, first I denied you, that Local Succession of Bishops in one Place is a necessary Point alone to prove the catholick Church by, and that which I have denied you cannot prove: And is it then reason that you should put me to the Trial of that, which by you is unproved, and of no Force to conclude against me?

Chichester. I see, my Lords, we do but lose our Labours to reason with him, he thinketh himself better learned than we.

Philpot. I take upon me the Name of no Learning. I boast of no Knowledge but of Faith and of Christ, and that I am bound undoubtedly to know, as I am sure I do.

Leave your reviling Terms, my Lord, and go to the Matter.

Chichester. These Hereticks take upon them to be sure of all Things they stand in. You should say rather with Humility, I trust I know Christ, than that you be sure thereof.

Philpot. Let him doubt of his Faith that listeth; God giveth me always Grace to believe that I am sure of true Faith and Favour in Christ.

Note, These Men ground their Faith upon the Determination of their own known Church, and not upon God's Word.

Bath. How will you be able to answer Hereticks, but by the Determination of the known catholick Church?

Philpot. I a mable to answer all Hereticks by the Word of God, and convince them by the same.

Chichester. How arrogantly is that spoken! I dare not say so.

Philpot. My Lords, I pray you bear with me; for I am bold on the Truth's Side, and I speak somewhat by Experience that I have had with Hereticks; and I know the Arians be the subtilest that ever were, and yet I have manifest Scriptures to beat them down withal.

Chichester. I perceive now you are the same Manner of Man I have heard of, which will not be satisfy'd by Learning.

Philpot. Alas, my Lord, why do you say so? I do most humbly desire to be taught, if there be any better Way that I should learn, and hitherto you have shewed me no better, therefore I pray your Lordship not to misjudge without a Cause.

Bath. If you be the true catholick Church, then will you hold with the real Presence of Christ in the Sacrament, which the true Church hath ever maintained.

Philpot. And I, my Lord, with the true Church do hold the same in the due Administration of the Sacrament: But I desire you, my Lord, there may be made a better Conclusion in our first Matter, before we enter into another; for if the Church be proved, we shall soon agree in the rest. In the mean while my Lord of York was turning his Book for more Places to help forth his Cause.

My Lord of York driven to seek his Books.

York. I have found at length a very notable Place, which I have looked for all this while, of St. Austin, De simplicitate credendi.

Chichester. It is but Folly, my Lord, for your Grace to read any more Places to him, for he esteemeth them not.

Philpot. I esteem them, inasmuch as they be of Force, as your Lordship doth hear me deny no Doctors you bring, but only require the true Application of them, according to the Writer's Meaning, and as by his own Words may be proved.

York. I will read him the Place, and so make an End. After he had read the Sentence he said, that by four special Points here St. Augustine proveth the catholick Church, The First is by the Consent of all Nations; the Second by the apostolick See; the Third, by Universality, and the Fourth by this Word Catholick.

Chichester. That is a notable Place indeed, if it please your Grace.

Philpot. I pray you, my Lord, of what Church doth St. Augustine write the same, of Rome, or not?

York. Yea, he writeth it of the Church of Rome.

Philpot. I will lay with your Lordship as much as I can make, that it is not so; and let the Book be seen.

Bath. What art thou able to lay, thou hast nothing?

York. Doth he not make mention here of the apostolick See, whereby he meaneth Rome?

Philpot. That is very streightly interpreted, my Lord, as though the apostolick See had been no where else but at Rome. But let it be Rome, and yet you shall never verify the same, unless all the other Conditions do go therewith, as St. Augustine doth proceed withall, whereof none except the apostolick See can now be verify'd of the Church of Rome. For the Faith which that See now maintaineth hath not the Consent of all Nations, neither hath had. Besides that, it cannot have the Name of Catholick, because it differeth from the catholick Churches which the Apostles planted, almost in all Things.

York. Nay, he goeth about here to prove the catholick Church by Universality; and how can you shew your Church to be Universal fifty or an hundred Years ago?

Philpot. That is not material, neither any Thing against St. Augustine: For my Church (whereof I am) were to be accounted Universal, though it were but in ten Persons, because it agreeth with the same that the Apostles did universally plant.

York. I perceive you are an obstinate Man in your own Opinion, and will not be taught; wherefore it is but lost Labour to talk with you any longer, you are a Member to be cut off.

Chichester. I have heard of you before, how you troubled the good Bishop of Winchester, and now I see in you what I have heard.

Philpot. I trust you see no Evil in me by this; I desire of you a sure Ground to build my Faith on, and if you shew me none, I pray you speak not ill of him that meaneth well.

* Because my Lord, you are not able to answer him.

Chichester. Thou art as * impudent a Fellow as any I have talked with.

Philpot. That is spoken uncharitably, my Lord, to blaſpheme him whom you cannot juſtly reprove.

Chicheſter. Why, thou art not God: Blaſphemy is counted a Rebuke to God-ward, and not to Man.

Philpot. Yes, it may be as well verified of an Infamy laid to Man, ſpeaking in God's Cauſe, as you now do lay unto me, for ſpeaking freely the Truth before God, to maintain your vain Religion. You are void of all good Ground. I perceive you are blind Guides, and Leaders of the Blind: And therefore (as I am bound to tell you) very Hypocrites, tyrannouſly perſecuting the Truth, which otherwiſe by juſt Order you are by no Means able to convince. Your own Doctors and Teſtimonies which you bring, be evidently againſt you, and yet you will not ſee the Truth.

Chicheſter. Have we theſe Thanks for our good Will, in coming to inſtruct thee?

Philpot. My Lords, you muſt bear with me, ſince I ſpeak in Chriſt's Cauſe; and becauſe his Glory is defaced, and his People cruelly and wrongfully ſlain by you, becauſe they will not conſent to the Diſhonour of God, and to Hypocriſy with you; if I told you not your Fault, it would be required at my Hands in the Day of Judgment. Therefore know you, ye Hypocrites indeed, that it is the Spirit of God that telleth you your Sin, and not I; I thank God, I value not all your Cruelty. God forgive you, and give you Grace to repent. And ſo they departed.

Another Conference the ſame Day.

THE ſame Day at Night before Supper, the Biſhop ſent for me into his Chappel, in the Preſence of Archdeacon Harpsfield, Dr. Chedſey, and his other Chaplains, and Servants. And then he ſaid, Bonner. Mr. Philpot, I have by ſundry Means gone about to do you good, and I marvel you do ſo little conſider it. By my Truth, I cannot tell what to ſay to you: Tell me directly whether you will be a conformable Man, or no; and whereupon you chiefly ſtand.

Philpot. I have told your Lordſhip oftentimes plain enough, whereon I chiefly ſtand, requiring a ſure Probation of the Church wherunto you call me.

Harpsfield. St. Auguſtine writing againſt the Donatiſts, declareth four ſpecial Notes to know the Church by; the Conſent of many Nations, the Faith of the Sacraments confirmed by Antiquity, Succeſſion of Biſhops, and Univerſality.

Bonner. I pray you, Mr. Archdeacon, fetch the Book hither; it is a notable Place, let him ſee it. And the Book was brought, and the Biſhop read it, demanding how I could anſwer the ſame.

Philpot. My Lord, I like St. Auguſtine's four Points for the Trial of the catholick Church, whereof I am: For it can abide every Point thereof together, which yours cannot do.

Harpsfield. Have not we Succeſſion of Biſhops in the See and Church of Rome? Wherefore then do you deny our Church to be the catholick Church?

Philpot. St. Auguſtine doth not put Succeſſion of Biſhops only, to be ſufficient, but he addeth the Uſe of the Sacraments according to Antiquity, and Doctrine univerſally taught and received by moſt Nations from the Beginning of the primitive Church, which your Church is far from. But my Church can avouch all theſe better than yours; therefore by St. Auguſtine's Judgment, which you here bring, mine is the catholick Church, and not yours. Anno 1555.

Harpsfield and Chedſey. It is but Folly, my Lord, for you to reaſon with him, for he is irrecoverable.

Philpot. That is a good Shift for you to run unto, when you be confounded in your own Sayings, and have nothing elſe to ſay, you are evidently deceived, and yet will not ſee it when it is laid to your Face.

Thus have I at large ſet forth as many of the ſaid John Philpot his Examinations and privy Conferences as are yet come to light, being faithfully written with his own Hand. And although he was examined after this ſeveral other Times, both openly in the Conſiſtory at St. Paul's, and alſo ſecretly in the Biſhop's Houſe; yet what was there ſaid is not yet ſufficiently known, either becauſe Mr. Philpot himſelf was not ſuffered to write, or elſe becauſe his Writings are by ſome kept cloſe, and not brought forth, others then as the Biſhop's Regiſter hath noted, whoſe handling of ſuch Matters, becauſe it is (either for fear or favour of his Lord and Maſter) very ſlender, little Light of any true Meaning can be gathered, eſpecially in the Behalf of the Anſwerer; howbeit, ſuch as it is, ſuch thought I good to put forth; requiring the Reader to judge hereof according to his Anſwers in his former Examinations.

The laſt Examination of Mr. Philpot in open Judgment, with his final Condemnation by Biſhop Bonner in the Conſiſtory at St. Paul's.

THE Biſhop having ſufficiently taken his Pleaſure with Mr. Philpot in his private Talk, and ſeeing his zealous, learned, and immutable Conſtancy, thought it now high Time to rid his Hands of him, and therefore on the thirteenth and fourteenth Days of December, ſitting judicially in the Conſiſtory at St. Paul's, he cauſed him to be brought thither before him and others, as it ſeemeth, more for Order Sake, than for any good Affection to Juſtice and right Judgment. The Effect as well of which their two ſundry Proceedings, as alſo of one other had the eleventh Day of the ſame Month in his Chapel, appear in a Manner to be all one. The Biſhop therefore firſt ſpeaking to Mr. Philpot, ſaid;

Bonner. Mr. Philpot, amongſt other Things that were laid and objected unto you, theſe three Things ye are eſpecially charged and burdened withal.

The firſt is, That you being fallen from the Unity of Chriſt's catholick Church, do refuſe and will not come to be reconciled thereunto.

The ſecond is, That you have blaſphemouſly ſpoken againſt the Sacrifice of the Maſs, calling it Idolatry.

And the third is, That you have ſpoken againſt the Sacrament of the Altar, denying the real Preſence of Chriſt's Body and Blood to be in the ſame.

And

Anno 1555. And according to the Will and Pleasure of the Synod legative, ye have been often by me invited and required to go from your said Errors and Heresies, and to return to the Unity of the catholick Church, which if ye will now willingly do, ye shall be mercifully and gladly received, charitably used, and have all the Favour I can shew you. And now to tell you true, it is assigned and appointed me to give Sentence against you, if you stand herein, and will not return. Wherefore if you so refuse, I do ask of you whether you have any Cause that you can shew, why I should not now give Sentence against you?

Philpot. Under Protestation, not to go from my Appeal that I have made, and also not to consent to you as my competent Judge, I say, touching your first Objection concerning the catholick Church, I neither was nor am out of the same. And as touching the Sacrifice of the * Mass, and the Sacrament of the Altar, I never spake against the same. And as concerning the Pleasure of the Synod, I say, that these twenty Years I have been brought up in the Faith of the true catholick Church, which is contrary to your Church, whereunto you would have me to come: And in that Time I have been many Times sworn, both in the Reign of King Henry the Eighth, and good King Edward his Son, against the usurped Power of the Bishop of Rome, which Oath I think that I am bound in my Conscience to keep, because I must perform unto the Lord mine Oath. But if you, or any of the Synod, can by God's Word persuade me that my said Oath was unlawful, and that I am bound by God's Law to come to your Church, Faith and Religion, whereof you be now, I will gladly yield, agree, and be conformable unto you, otherwise not.

* Here either the Register belieth Philpot, or else he meant as not offending the Law thereby to be accused, for otherwise all his former Examinations do declare that he spake against the Sacrament of the Altar.

Bonner then not able with all his learned Doctors, to accomplish this his offered Condition, fell to persuading of him, both by his accustomed vain Promises and Threatnings, to return to their Church: To which he answered;

Philpot. You, and all other of your Sort, are Hypocrites, and I wish all the World knew your Hypocrisy, your Tyranny, Ignorance, and Idolatry.

Upon these Words the Bishop did for that Time dismiss him, commanding that on Monday the 16th Day of the same Month, between the Hours of One and Three in the Afternoon, he should again be brought thither, there to have the definitive Sentence of Condemnation pronounced against him, if he remained then in his former Constancy.

At which Day and Time, Mr. Philpot being there presented before the Bishops of London, Bath, Worcester, and Lichfield; Bonner Bishop of London began to talk in this Manner.

Bonner. My Lords, Stokesly, my Predecessor, when he went to give Sentence against an Heretick, used to make this Prayer:

Bishop Stokesley's Prayer when he pronounced Sentence of Death.

Deus qui errantibus, ut in viam possint redire, justitiæ veritatisq; tuæ lumen ostendis, da cunctis qui christiana professione censentur, & illa respuere quæ huic inimica sint nomini, & ea qua sint apta sectari per Christum Dominum nostrum, Amen. Which I will follow. And so he read it with a loud Voice in Latin. To which Mr. Philpot said:

I wish ye would speak in English, that all Men might hear and understand you; for St. Paul willeth, that all Things spoken in the Congregation to edify, should be spoken in a Tongue that all Men might understand.

Whereupon the Bishop did read it in English: O God, who sheweth the Light of thy Truth and Righteousness to those that stray, that they may return into thy Way, give to all who profess themselves Christians, to refuse those Things which are Foes to thy Name, and to follow those Things which are fit, by Christ our Lord, Amen. And when he came to these Words, To refuse those Things which are Foes to thy Name; Mr. Philpot said, Bonner prayeth against himself.

Then they all must turn away from you; for you are Enemies to that Name (meaning Christ's Name) and God save us from such Hypocrites as would have Things in a Tongue that Men cannot understand.

Bonner. Whom do you mean?

Philpot. You and all others that be of your Generation and Sect. And I am sorry to see you sit in the Place that you now sit in, pretending to execute Justice, and to do nothing less but deceive all Men in this Realm.

And then turning himself unto the People, he further said, O all you Gentlemen, beware of these Men (meaning the Bishops) and all their Doings, which be contrary to the primitive Church. And I would know of you, my Lord, by what Authority you proceed against me.

Bonner. Because I am Bishop of London.

Philpot. Well, then ye are not my Bishop, nor have I offended in your Dioceses: And moreover, I have appealed from you, and therefore by your own Law you ought not to proceed against me, especially being brought hither from another Place by Violence.

Bonner. Why, who sent you hither to me?

Philpot. Dr. Story and Dr. Cook, with other Commissioners of the King and Queen; and, my Lord, is it not enough for you to worry your own Sheep, but ye must also meddle with other Men's Sheep?

Then the Bishop delivered two Books to Mr. Philpot, one of the Civil, the other of the Canon Law, out of which he would have proved that he had Authority to proceed against him in such Manner as he did. Mr. Philpot then perusing the same, and seeing the small and slender Proof that was there alledged, said to the Bishop:

Philpot. I perceive your Law and Divinity is all one; for you have Knowledge in neither of them; and I wish ye did know your own Ignorance: But ye dance in a Net, and think that no Man doth see you. Hereupon they had much Talk, but what it was it is not yet known. At last Bonner said unto him:

Philpot. as concerning your Objections against my Jurisdiction, ye shall understand that both the Civil and Canon Laws make against you; and as for your Appeal, it is not allowed in this Case: For it is written in the Law, There is no Appeal from a Judge executing the Sentence of the Law.

Philpot. My Lord, it appeareth by your Interpretation of the Law, that ye have no Knowledge therein, and that ye do not understand the Law; for if ye did, ye would not bring in that Text.

Bonner noted to be ignorant in the Law.

Hereupon the Bishop recited a Law of the Romans, That it was not lawful for a Jew to keep a christian Man in Captivity, and to use him as a Slave, laying then to the said Philpot's Charge, that he did not understand the Law, but did like a Jew. Whereunto Philpot answered.

No, I am no Jew, but you my Lord are a Jew. For you profeſs Chriſt, and maintain Antichriſt; you profeſs the Goſpel, and maintain Superſtition, and ye be able to charge me with nothing.

Bonner and another Biſhop. With what can you charge us?

Philpot. You are Enemies to all Truth, and all your Doings be naught, full of Idolatry, ſaving the Article of the Trinity.

Whilſt they were thus debating the Matter, there came thither Sir William Garret Knight, then Mayor of London, Sir Martin Bowes, Knight, and Thomas Leigh then Sheriff of the ſame City, and ſate down with the ſaid Biſhops in the ſaid Conſiſtory, where Biſhop Bonner ſpake theſe Words in Effect as followeth.

Bonner. Philpot, before the coming of my Lord Mayor, becauſe I would not enter with you into the Matter wherewith I have heretofore, and now intend to charge you withal until his coming, I did rehearſe a Prayer unto you both in Engliſh and in Latin, which Biſhop Stokeſly, my Predeceſſor, uſed when he intended to proceed to give Sentence againſt an Heretick.

And here he did again read the ſaid Prayer both in Engliſh and in Latin: Which being ended he ſpake again unto him, and ſaid:

Bonner. Philpot, amongſt others I have to charge you eſpecially with three Things:

1. Firſt, Where you have fallen from the Unity of Chriſt's catholick Church, you have thereupon been invited and required, not only by me, but alſo by many and divers other catholick Biſhops, and other learned Men, to return and come again to the ſame: And alſo you have been offered by me, that if you would ſo return, and confeſs your Errors and Hereſies, you ſhould be mercifully received, and have ſo much Favour as I could ſhew unto you.

2. The Second is, That you have blaſphemouſly ſpoken againſt the Sacrifice of the Maſs, calling it Idolatry and Abomination.

3. And Thirdly, That you have ſpoken and held againſt the Sacrament of the Altar, denying the real Preſence of Chriſt's Body and Blood to be in the ſame.

This being ſpoken, the Biſhop recited unto him a certain Exhortation in Engliſh, the Tenor and Form whereof is this:

Biſhop Bonner's Exhortation.

MR. Philpot, this is to be told you, that if you not being yet reconciled to the Unity of the catholick Church, from whence ye did fall in the Time of the late Schiſm here in this Realm of England, againſt the See apoſtolick of Rome, will now heartily and obediently be reconciled to the Unity of the ſame catholick Church, profeſſing and promiſing to obſerve and keep, to the beſt of your Power, the Faith and chriſtian Religion obſerved and kept by all faithful People of the ſame: And moreover, if ye which heretofore, eſpecially in the Year of our Lord 1553, 1554, 1555, or in one of them have offended and treſpaſſed grievouſly againſt the Sacrifice of the Maſs, calling it Idolatry and abominable, and likewiſe have offended and treſpaſſed againſt the Sacrament of the Altar, denying the real Preſence of Chriſt's Body, and Blood to be there in the Sacrament of the Altar, affirming alſo withal, material Bread and material Wine to be in the Sacrament of the Altar, and not the Subſtance of the Body and Blood of Chriſt; if ye, I ſay, will be reconciled as is aforeſaid, and will forſake your Hereſies and Errors before touched, being heretical and damnable, and will alſo allow the Sacrament of the Maſs, ye ſhall be mercifully received, and charitably uſed with as much Favour as may be; if not, ye ſhall be reputed, taken, and judged for an Heretick (as ye be indeed.) Now do ye chuſe what ye will do; you are counſelled herein friendly and favourably.

Anno 1555.

Ita eſt quod Edm. Bonner Epiſc. Lond.

The Biſhop's Exhortation thus ended, Mr. Philpot turned himſelf to the Lord Mayor, and ſaid, Philpot. To you my Lord Mayor bearing the Sword, I am glad that it is my Chance now to ſtand before that Authority that hath defended the Goſpel and the Truth of God's Word; but I am ſorry to ſee that that Authority, which repreſenteth the King and Queen's Perſons, ſhould now be changed, and be at the Commandment of Antichriſt; and ye (ſpeaking to the Biſhops) pretend to be the Followers of the Apoſtles of Chriſt, and yet be the very Antichriſts and Deceivers of the People; and I am glad that God hath given me Power to ſtand here this Day, and to declare and defend my Faith, which is founded on Chriſt.

Therefore, as touching your firſt Objection, I ſay, that I am of the catholick Church, whereof I was never out, and that your Church (which ye pretend to be the catholick Church) is the Church of Rome, and ſo the Babylonical, and not the catholick Church; for that Church I am not.

As touching your ſecond Objection, which is, that I ſhould ſpeak againſt the Sacrifice of the Maſs; I do ſay, that I have not ſpoken againſt the true Sacrifice, but I have ſpoken againſt your private Maſſes that you uſe in Corners, which is Blaſphemy to the true Sacrifice; for your Sacrifice daily reiterated is Blaſphemy againſt Chriſt's Death, and it is a Lie of your own Invention: And that abominable Sacrifice which ye ſet upon the Altar, and uſe in yonr private Maſſes inſtead of ſhall Living Sacrifice, is Idolatry, and ye the never prove it by God's Word; therefore ye have deceived the People with that your Sacrifice of the Maſs, which ye make a Maſquing.

Thirdly, where you lay to my Charge, that I deny the Body and Blood of Chriſt to be in the Sacrament of the Altar, I cannot tell what Altar ye mean, whether it be the Altar of the Croſs, or the Altar of Stone: And if ye call it the Sacrament of the Altar in reſpect of the Altar of Stone, then I defy your Chriſt, for it is a rotten Chriſt.

And as touching your Tranſubſtantiation, I utterly deny it, for it was firſt brought up by a Pope. Now as concerning your Offer made from the Synod, which is gathered together in Antichriſt's Name; prove me that to be of the catholick Church (which ye can never do) and I will follow you, and do as you would have me to do. But ye are Idolaters, and daily do commit Idolatry. Ye be alſo Traitors; for in your Pulpits ye rail againſt good Kings, as King Henry and King Edward his Son, who have ſtood againſt the uſurped Power of the Biſhop of Rome; againſt whom I have alſo taken an Oath, which if ye can ſhew me by God's Anno 1555. God's Law that I have taken unjuſtly, I will then yield unto you: But I pray God turn the King and Queen's Heart from your Synagogue and Church, for you do abuſe that good Queen.

Here the Biſhop of Coventry and Litchfield began to ſhew where the true Church was, ſaying;

Coventry. The true catholick Church is ſet upon an high Hill.

Philpot. Yea, at Rome, which is the Babylonical Church.

Coventry. No, in our true catholick Church are the Apoſtles, Evangeliſts and Martyrs; but before Martin Luther there was no Apoſtle, Evangeliſt or Martyr of your Church.

Philpot. Will ye know the Cauſe why? Chriſt did propheſy that in the latter Days there ſhould come falſe Prophets and Hypocrites, as you be.

Coventry. Your Church of Geneva, which ye call the catholick Church, is that which Chriſt propheſied of.

Philpot. I allow the Church of Geneva, and the Doctrine of the ſame, for it is One, Catholick, and Apoſtolick, and doth follow the Doctrine that the Apoſtles did preach; and the Doctrine taught and preached in King Edward's Days, was alſo according to the ſame. And are ye not aſhamed to perſecute me and others for your Churches ſake, which is Babylonical, and contrary to the true catholick Church?

And after this they had great Conference together, as well out of the Scriptures as alſo out of the Doctors. But when Bonner ſaw that by Learning they were not able to confute Mr. Philpot, he then endeavoured by his Defamation to bring him out of Credit; and therefore turning himſelf to the Lord Mayor of London, he brought forth a Knife, and a Bladder full of Powder, and ſaid, Note, Bonner's wiſe and weighty Matters to take away Mr. Philpot's Life.

Bonner. My Lord, this Man had a roaſted Pig brought unto him, and this Knife was put ſecretly between the Skin and the Fleſh thereof, and ſo it was ſent him, being in Priſon. And alſo this Powder was ſent unto him, under Pretence that it was good and comfortable for him to eat and drink; which Powder was only to make Ink to write withall. For when his Keeper did perceive it, he took it and brought it unto me: Which when I did ſee, I thought it had been Gunpowder, and thereupon I put Fire to it but it would not burn. Then I took it for Poyſon, and ſo gave it to a Dog, but it was not ſo. Then I took a little Water, and it made as fair Ink as ever I did write withal. Therefore, my Lord, you may underſtand what a naughty Fellow this is.

Philpot. Ah, my Lord, have you nothing elſe to charge me withal but theſe Trifles, ſeeing I ſtand upon Life and Death? Doth the Knife in the Pig prove the Church of Rome to be the catholick Church? &c.

Philpot had a Knife brought him under a Pig: Ergo, The Church of Rome is a catholick Church.

Then the Biſhop brought forth a certain Inſtrument, containing Articles and Queſtions, agreed upon both in Oxford and Cambridge. Alſo he exhibited two Books in print; the one was the Catechiſm made in King Edward's Days, in the Year 1552, the other concerning the true Report of the Diſputation in the Convocation-houſe, mention whereof is above expreſſed.

Moreover he brought forth two Letters, and laid them to Mr. Philpot's Charge; the one touching Bartlet Green, the other containing godly Exhortations and Comforts; which were both written to him by ſome of his Friends; the Tenor whereof we thought proper here to exhibit.

A Letter produced by Biſhop Bonner, written by ſome Friend of Mr. Philpot's, and ſent to him, concerning the Uſage of Mr. Green in Bonner's Houſe at London.

YOU ſhall underſtand that Mr. Green came unto the Biſhop of London on Sunday laſt, where he was courteouſly received; for what Policy the Sequel declareth. His Entertainment for one Day or two was to dine at my Lord's own Table, or elſe to have his Meat from thence. During thoſe Days he lay in Dr. Chedſey's Chamber, and was examined. Albeit in very Deed the Biſhop earneſtly and faithfully promiſed many right worſhipful Men (who were Suters for him, but to him unknown) that he in no Caſe ſhould be examined; before which Mr. Fecknam would have had him in his friendly Cuſtody, if he would have deſired to have conferred with him, which he utterly refuſed. And in that the Biſhop objected againſt him Singularity and Obſtinacy; his Anſwer thereunto was thus, To avoid all Suſpicion thereof, although I myſelf am young and utterly unlearned in reſpect of the Learned, (and yet I underſtand, I thank my Lord) yet let me have ſuch Books as I ſhall require, and if I, by God's Spirit, do not thereby anſwer all your Books and Objections contrary thereto, I will aſſent to you. Whereunto the Biſhop and his aſſented, permitting him at the firſt to have ſuch Books. Who at ſundry Times have reaſon'd with him, and have found him ſo ſtrong and rife in the Scripture and godly Fathers, that ſince they have not only taken from him ſuch Liberty of Books, but all other Books, not leaving him ſo much as the New Teſtament. Since, they have baited and uſed him moſt cruelly. This Mr. Fecknam reported; ſaying farther, that he never heard the like young Man, and ſo perfect. What ſhall become farther of him, God knoweth; but Death I think, for he remaineth more and more willing to die, as I underſtand. Concerning your Bill, I ſhall confer with others therein, knowing that the ſame Court is able to redreſs the ſame: And yet I think it will not be reformed, for that I know few or none that dare or will ſpeak therein, or prefer the ſame, becauſe it concerneth ſpiritual Things. Notwithſtanding, I will aſcertain you thereof; committing you to the Holy Ghoſt, who keep you and us all, as his. Your own, &c.

This Bill was a Supplication to be offered up in the Parliament.

The Copy of another Letter written by the Lady Vane to Mr. Philpot, exhibited likewiſe by Biſhop Bonner.

HEarty Thanks rendered unto you my well-beloved in Chriſt for the Book ye ſent me, wherein I find great Conſolations, and according to the Doctrine thereof do prepare my Cheeks to the Strikers, and my womaniſh Back to the Burdens of Reproof, and ſo in the Strength of my God I truſt to leap over the Wall; for his Sweetneſs overcometh me daily, and maketh all theſe Apothecary Drugs of the World, even medicinal-like in my Mouth. For the Continuance whereof, I beſeech thee (my dear Fellow-ſoldier) make thy faithful Prayer for me, that I may with a ſtrong and glad-ſome Conſcience finiſh my Courſe, and obtain the Reward, tho' it be no whit due to my Work. I am not content that you ſo often gratify me with Thanks for that which is none worthy, but Duty on my Part, and ſmall Relief to you. But if you would love me ſo much, that I might ſupply your lacks, then would I think ye believed my Offers to be ſuch as agreed with my Heart. And for the ſhort Charges ye ſpeak of, the Means are not ſo pleaſant, if God (whom my Truſt is in) will otherwiſe prepare; but Solomon ſaith, All Things have here their Time; you to Day, and I to morrow, and ſo the End of Adam's Line is ſoon run out. The mighty God give us his Grace, that during this Time his Glory be not defaced through our Weakneſs. Becauſe you deſire to ſhew yourſelf a worthy Soldier, if need ſo require, I will ſupply your Requeſt for the Scarf ye wrote of, that ye may preſent my handy-work before your Captain, that I be not forgotten in the Odours of Incenſe, which our beloved Chriſt offered for his own; to whom I bequeath both our Bodies and Souls.

Your own in the Lord, F. E.

Beſides theſe Letters, the Biſhops did alſo bring forth a Supplication, made by Mr. Philpot unto the High-court of Parliament, whereof mention is made in the firſt of the two Letters laſt mentioned; the Copy whereof here follows.

To the King's and Queen's Majeſties Highneſs, the Lords Spirtual and Temporal, and the Commons of this preſent Parliament aſſembled:

IN moſt humble wiſe complaineth unto this honourable Court of Parliament John Philpot, Clerk, that where there was by the Queen's Highneſs a Parliament called on the firſt Year of her gracious Reign, and after the old Cuſtom a Convocation of the Clergy, your Supplicant then being one of the ſaid Convocation-houſe, and Matters there ariſing upon the uſing of the Sacraments, did diſpute in the ſame, knowing that there all Men had and have free Speech, and ought not to be after-troubled for any Thing there ſpoken, and yet that notwithſaid ſtanding not long after the ſaid Parliament, your Supplicant (without any Act or Matter) was commanded to Priſon to the King's Bench by the late Lord Chancellor, where he hath remained ever ſince, until now of late that my Lord the Biſhop of London hath ſent for your ſaid Suppliant, to examine him (being none of his Dioceſs) upon certain Matters, wherein they would have your Orator to declare his Conſcience, which the ſaid Biſhop ſaith he hath Authority to do, by reaſon of an Act of Parliament made in the firſt and ſecond Years of the King and Queen's Majeſties Reign, for the reviving of three Statutes made againſt them that hold any Opinion againſt the catholick Faith: Whereby he affirmeth, that every Ordinary may, Ex officio, examine every Man's Conſcience: And for that your ſaid Orator hath and doth refuſe, that the ſaid Biſhop of London hath any Authority over your ſaid Orator, becauſe he is neither his Dioceſan, nor hath publiſhed, preached, nor held any Opinion againſt the catholick Faith (notwithſtanding the ſaid Biſhop of London detaineth him in the Coal-houſe in the Stocks, without a Bed, or any other Thing to lie upon but Straw) and for that your ſaid Orator cannot appeal for his Relief, from the ſame Biſhop to any other Judge, but the ſame Biſhop may refuſe the ſame by their Law, and therefore hath no Succour and Help but by this High Court of Parliament, for the Explanation of the ſaid Act; therefore may it pleaſe you, that it may be enacted by the King and Queen's Majeſties, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and the Commons of this preſent Parliament aſſembled, and by the Authority of the ſame, that no Biſhop nor Ordinary ſhall commit or detain in Priſon any ſuſpected Perſon or Perſons for the catholick Faith, except he or they have ſpoken, written, or done ſome manifeſt Act againſt the catholick Faith; and the ſame to be lawfully proved againſt every ſuch Perſon or Perſons, by the Teſtimony of two lawful Witneſſes, to be brought before the ſaid Perſon or Perſons ſo accuſed, before he or they ſhall either be committed to Priſon, or convicted for any ſuch Offence or Offences; the ſaid former Statute, made in the ſaid firſt and ſecond Year of our ſaid Sovereign Lord and Lady notwithſtanding; whereby your ſaid Orator ſhall not only be ſet at Liberty, and divers other more remaining in Priſon; but alſo the Blood of divers of the Queen's Majeſty's true and faithful Subjects preſerved. Anno 1555. 52

The Condemnation of the worthy Martyr of God, John Philpot.

THESE Books, Letters, Supplications, and other Matters being thus read, the Biſhop demanded of him, if the Book intituled, The true Report of the Diſputation, &c. were of his Penning, or not? Whereunto Philpot anſwered, That it was a good and true Book, and his own penning and ſetting forth.

The Biſhops growing weary, and not being able by any ſufficient ground, either of God's Word, or of the true ancient catholick Fathers, to convince and overcome him, fell by fair and flattering Speech to perſwade with him; promiſing, that if he would revoke his Opinions, and come Home again to their Romiſh and Babylonical Church, he ſhould not only be pardoned that which was paſt, but alſo they would with all Favour and Chearfulneſs of Heart, receive him again as a true Member thereof. Which Words when Bonner ſaw would take no Place, he demanded of Mr. Philpot, whether he had any juſt Cauſe to alledge why he ſhould not condemn him as an Heretick. Well, quoth Mr. Philpot, your idolatrous Sacrament, which you have found out, ye would fain defend, but ye cannot, nor ever ſhall.

What needeth this Queſtion, my Lord, when no reaſonable Anſwer could be allowed?

In the End the Biſhop, ſeeing his unmoveable Stedfaſtneſs in the Truth, did openly pronounce the Sentence of Condemnation againſt him. In the reading whereof, when he came to theſe Words, And you an obſtinate, pernicious and impenitent Heritick, &c. Mr. Philpot ſaid, I thank God that I am an Heretick out of your curſed Church; I am no Heretick before God. But God bleſs you, and give you once Grace to repent your wicked Doings, and let all Men beware of your bloody Church.

Moreover, whilſt Bonner was about the midſt of the Sentence, the Biſhop of Bath pulled him by the Sleeve, and ſaid, My Lord, my Lord, know of him firſt whether he will recant,

And when he had done, he delivered him to the Sheriffs; and ſo two Officers brought him thorough the Biſhop's Houſe into Paternoſter-row, and there his Servant met him, and when he ſaw him, he ſaid, Ah, dear Maſter.

Mr. Philpot delivered to the Sheriffs.

Then Mr. Philpot ſaid to his Man, Content thyſelf, I ſhall do well enough; for thou ſhalt ſee me again.

And ſo the Officers thruſt him away, and took him to Newgate; and as he went, he ſaid to the People, Ah good People, bleſſed be God for this Day; and ſo the Officers delivered him to the Keeper. Then his Man thruſt to go in after his Maſter, and one of the Officers ſaid unto him, Hence Fellow, what wouldſt thou have? And he ſaid, I would go ſpeak with my Maſter. Mr. Philpot then turned him about, and ſaid to him, To morrow thou ſhalt ſpeak with me.

He is conveyed to Newgate.

Then the under Keeper ſaid to Mr. Philpot, Is this your Man? and he ſaid, Yea. So he gave his Man leave to go in with him. And Mr. Philpot and his Man were turned into a little Chamber on the right Hand, and there remained a ſhort Time, until Alexander the chief Keeper came unto him; who at his entering, greeted him in theſe Words, Ah, ſaid he, haſt not thou done well to bring thyſelf hither? Well, ſaid Mr. Philpot, I muſt be content, for it is God's Appointment; and I ſhall deſire you to let me have your gentle Favour, for you and I have been of old Acquaintanc. Well, ſaid Alexander, I will ſhew thee Gentleneſs and Favour, ſo thou wilt be ruled by me. Then ſaid Mr. Philpot, I pray you ſhew me what you would have me to do.

Diſcourſe between Mr. Philpot and Alexander the Keeper.

He ſaid, If you would recant, I will ſhew you any Pleaſure I can. Nay, ſaid Mr. Philpot, I will never recant, whilſt I have my Life, that which I have ſpoken, for it is moſt certain Truth, and in Witneſs hereof I will ſeal it with my Blood. Then Alexander ſaid, This is the Saying of the whole Pack of you Hereticks. Whereupon he commanded him to be ſet upon the Block, and as many Irons upon his Legs as he could bear, becauſe he would not follow his wicked Mind.

Mr. Philpot loaded with Irons.

Then the Clerk told Alexander in his Ear, that Mr. Philpot had given his Man Money. And Alexander ſaid to his Man, What Money hath thy Maſter given thee? He anſwered, My Maſter hath given me none. No, ſaid Alexander, hath he given thee none? That will I know, for I will ſearch thee.

Do with me what you liſt, and ſearch me all that you can, quoth his Servant; he hath given me a Token or two to ſend to his Friends, as to his Brother and Siſters. Ah, ſaid Alexander unto Mr. Philpot, thou art a Maintainer of Hereticks; thy Man ſhould have gone to ſome of thine Affinity, but he ſhall be known well enough. Nay, ſaid Mr. Philpot, I do ſend it to my Friends; there he is, let him make Anſwer to it. But good Mr. Alexander, be ſo much my Friend, that theſe Irons may be taken off. Well, ſaid Alexander, give me my Fees, and I will take them off; if not, thou ſhalt wear them ſtill.

Then ſaid Mr. Philpot, Sir, what is your Fee? He ſaid, Four Pound was his Fees. Ah, ſaid Mr. Philpot, I have not ſo much; I am but a poor Man, and I have been long in Priſon. What wilt thou give me then, ſaid Alexander? Sir, ſaid he, I will give you twenty Shillings, and that I will ſend my Man for, or elſe I will lay my Gown to gage; for the Time is not long I am ſure, that I ſhall be with you; for the Biſhop ſaid unto me that I ſhould be ſoon diſpatched.

Then Alexander ſaid unto him, What is that to me? And with that he departed from him, and commanded him to be had into Limbo, and ſo his Commandment was fulfilled; but before he could be taken from the Block, the Clerk would have a Groat.

Then one Witterence, Steward of the Houſe took him on his Back, and carried him down, his Man knew not whither. Wherefore Mr. Philpot ſaid to his Man, Go to Mr. Sheriff, and ſhew him how I am uſed, and deſire Mr. Sheriff to be good unto me; and ſo his Servant went ſtraightway, and took an honeſt Man with him.

And when they came to Mr. Sheriff, (which was Mr. Macham) and ſhewed him how Mr. Philpot was handled in Newgate, the Sheriff hearing this, took his Ring off from his Finger, and delivered it unto that honeſt Man which came with Mr. Philpot's Man, and bade him go unto Alexander the Keeper, and commanded him to take off his Irons, and to handle him more gently, and to give his Man again that which he had taken from him.

Mr. Macham, Sheriff, a good Man, commandeth Mr. Philpot's Irons to be taken off.

And when they came again to the ſaid Alexander, and delivered their Meſſage from the Sheriff, Alexander took the Ring, and ſaid, Ah, I perceive that Mr. Sheriff is a Bearer with him, and all ſuch Hereticks as he is, therefore to-morrow I will ſhew it to his Betters: Yet at ten of the Clock he went into Mr. Philpot where he lay, and took off his Irons, and gave him ſuch Things as he had taken before from his Servant.

Upon Tueſday at Supper, being the ſeventeenth Day of December, there came a Meſſenger from the Sheriffs, and bade Mr. Philpot make him ready, for the next Day he ſhould ſuffer, and be burned at a Stake with Fire. Mr. Philpot anſwered and ſaid, I am ready; God grant me Strength, and a joyful Reſurrection. And ſo he went into his Chamber, and poured out his Spirit unto the Lord God, giving him moſt hearty Thanks, that he of his Mercy had made him worthy to ſuffer for his Truth.

Mr. Philpot warned to prepare for Death.

In the Morning the Sheriffs came according to the Order, about eight of the Clock, and called for him, and he moſt joyfully came down unto them. And there his Man met him, and ſaid, Ah dear Maſter, farewel. His Maſter ſaid unto him, Serve God, and he will help thee. And ſo he went with the Sheriffs to the Place of Execution; and when he was entring into Smithfield, the Way was foul, and two Officers took him up to bear him to the Stake. Then he ſaid merrily, What, will ye make me a Pope? I am content to go to my Journey's End on Foot. But firſt coming into Smithfield, he kneeled down there, ſaying theſe Words, I will pay my Vows in thee, O Smithfield.

Mr. Philpot's Words going to the Stake.

And when he was come to the Place of ſuffering, he kiſſed the Stake, and ſaid, Shall I diſdain to ſuffer at this Stake, ſeeing my Redeemer did not refuſe to ſuffer moſt vile Death upon the Croſs for me? And then with an obedient Heart, full meekly he ſaid the 106, 107, and 108 Pſalms: And when he had made an End of all his Prayers, he ſaid to the Officers, What have you done for me? and every one of them declared what they had done; and he gave Money to them.

Then they bound him to the Stake, and ſet Fire to that conſtant Martyr; who the eighteenth Day of December, in the midſt of the fiery Flames, yielded his Soul into the Hands of Almighty God, and like a Lamb gave up his Breath, his Body being conſumed into Aſhes.

Thus haſt thou, gentle Reader, the Life and Actions of this learned and worthy Soldier of the Lord, John Philpot; with all his Examinations that came to our Hands: Firſt penned and written with his own Hand, being marvellouſly preſerved from the Sight and Hand of his Enemies; who by all manner of Means ſought not only to ſtop him from all Writing, but alſo to ſpoil and deprive him of that which he had written. For which Cauſe he was many Times ſtripped and ſearched in the Priſon by his Keeper; but yet ſo happily theſe his Writings were conveyed and hid in Places about him, or elſe his Keeper's Eyes ſo blinded, that notwithſtanding all this malicious Purpoſe of the Biſhops, they are yet remaining and come to Light.

A Prayer to be ſaid at the Stake, by all them that God ſhall account worthy to ſuffer for his Sake.

MErciful God and Father, to whom our Saviour Chriſt approached in his Fear and Need by Reaſon of Death, and found Comfort; gracious God and moſt bounteous Chriſt, on whom Stephen called in his extreme Need, and received Strength; moſt benign Holy Spirit, which in the midſt of all Croſſes of Death didſt comfort the Apoſtle St. Paul with more Conſolations in Chriſt, than he felt Sorrows and Terrors, have Mercy upon me a miſerable, vile, and wretched Sinner, which now draw near the Gates of Death, deſerved both in Soul and Body eternally, by reaſon of manifold, horrible, old and new Tranſgreſſions, which to thine Eyes, O Lord, are open and known: O be merciful unto me for the bitter Death and Blood-ſhedding of thine own only Son Jeſus Chriſt. And though thy Juſtice doth require (in reſpect of my Sins) that now thou ſhouldeſt not hear me, meaſuring me in the ſame Meaſure I have meaſured thy Majeſty, contemning thy daily Calls; yet let thy Mercy which is above all thy Works, and wherewith the Earth is filled, let thy Mercy, I ſay, prevail towards me, through and for the Mediation of Chriſt our Saviour. And for whoſe Sake in that it hath pleaſed thee to bring me forth now as one of his Witneſſes, and a Record-Bearer of thy Verity and Truth taught by him, to give my Life therefore (to which Dignity I do acknowledge, dear God, that there was never any ſo unworthy and ſo unmeet, no not the Thief that hanged with him on the Croſs:) I moſt humbly therefore pray thee that thou wouldeſt accordingly aid, help, and aſſiſt me with thy Strength and heavenly Grace, that with Chriſt thy Son I may find Comfort, with Stephen I may ſee thy Preſence, and gracious Power, with Paul, and all others, who for thy Name's Sake have ſuffered Affliction and Death, I may find ſo preſent with me thy gracious Conſolations, that I may by my Death glorify thy holy Name, propagate and ratify thy Verity, comfort the Hearts of the heavy, confirm thy Church in thy Truth, convert ſome that are to be converted, and ſo depart forth of this miſerable World, where I do daily heap Sin upon Sin, and ſo enter into the Fruition of thy bleſſed Mercy; whereof now give and increaſe in me a lively Truſt, Senſe and Feeling, where thro' the Terrors of Death, the Torments of Fire, the Pangs of Sin, the Darts of Satan, and the Dolors of Hell may never depreſs me, but may be driven away thro' the working of that moſt gracious Spirit; which now plenteouſly endue me withal, that through the ſame Spirit I may offer (as I now deſire to do in Chriſt by him) myſelf wholly, Soul and Body, to be a lively Sacrifice, holy and acceptable in thy Sight. Dear Father, whoſe I am, and always have been, even from my Mother's Womb, yea even before the World was made, to whom I commend myſelf, Soul and Body, Family and Friends, Country and all the whole Church, yea even my very Enemies, according to thy good Pleaſure; beſeeching thee intirely to give once more to this Realm of England the Bleſſing of thy Word again, with godly Peace, to the teaching and ſetting forth of the ſame. O dear Father, now give me Grace to come unto thee. Purge and ſo purify me by this Fire in Chriſt's Death and Paſſion thro' thy Spirit, that I may be a Burnt-offering of a ſweet Smell in thy Sight, who liveſt and reigneſt with the Son and the Holy Ghoſt, now and for evermore, World without End. Amen.

He prayeth for reſtoring of the Goſpel and Peace in England.

Mr. Philpot's Letter to a Chriſtian Congregation, exhorting them to refrain from Idolatry, and to ſerve God after his Word.

IT is a lamentable Thing to behold at this preſent in England the faithleſs departing both of Men and Women, from the true Knowledge and Uſe of Chriſt's ſincere Religion, which ſo plentifully they have been taught, and do know, their own Conſciences bearing Witneſs to the Verity thereof. If that Earth be curſed of God, which Heb. 6. ſoon receiving Moiſture and pleaſant Dews from Heaven, doth not bring forth Fruit accordingly; how much more grievous Judgment ſhall ſuch Perſons receive, who having received from the Father of Heaven the perfect Knowledge of his Word by the Miniſtry thereof, do not ſhew forth God's Worſhip after the ſame? If the Lord will require Matt. 25. in the Day of Judgment a godly Uſury of all manner of Talents which he lendeth unto Men and Women, how much more will he require the ſame of his pure Religion revealed unto us (which is of all other Talents the chief, and moſt pertaining to our Exerciſe in this Life) if we hide the ſame in a Napkin, and ſet it not forth to the Uſury of God's Glory, and edifying of his Church by true Confeſſion? God hath kindled the bright Light of his Goſpel, which in Times paſt was ſuppreſſed, and hid under the vile Aſhes of Man's Traditions, and hath cauſed the Brightneſs thereof to ſhine in our Hearts, to the end that the ſame might ſhine before Men to the Honour of his Name. It is not Matt. 5. only given us to believe, but alſo to confeſs and declare what we believe in our outward Converſation. For as St. Paul writeth to the Romans, Chap. 10. The Belief of the Heart juſtifieth, and to acknowledge with the Mouth maketh a Man ſafe. It is all one before God, not to believe at all, and not to ſhew forth the lively Works of our Belief. For Christ saith, Matt. 7. Either make the Tree good and his Fruits good; or else make the Tree Evil and the Fruits Evil; because a good Tree bringeth forth good Fruits, as an evil Tree bringeth forth evil Fruits. So that the Person who knoweth his Master's Will, and doth it not, shall be beaten with many Stripes. And not all they who say, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the Kingdom of God, but he that doth the Will of the Father. And, Whosoever in the Time of Trial is ashamed of me (saith Christ) and of my Words, of him the Son of Man will be ashamed before his Father. After that we have built ourselves into the true Church of God, it hath pleased him by giving us over into the Hands of the wicked Synagogues to prove our Building, and to have it known as well to the World as to ourselves, that we have been wise Builders into the true Church of God upon the Rock, and not on the Sand, and therefore now the Tempest is risen, and the Storms do mightily blow against us, that we might notwithstanding stand upright, and be firm in the Lord, to his Honour and Glory, and to our eternal Felicity. There is no new Thing happened unto us, for with such Tempests and dangerous Weathers the Church of God hath continually been exercised. Now once again, as the Prophet Haggai tells us, Chap. 2. The Lord shaketh the Earth, that those might abide for ever, which be not overcome.

Anno 1555.

Luke 12. Matth. 7. Luke 9. Matth. 7.

Therefore my dearly beloved, be stable and immovable in the Word of God, and in the faithful Observation thereof, and let no Man deceive you with vain Words, saying, that you may keep your Faith to yourselves, and dissemble with Antichrist, and to live at Rest and Quietness in the World, as most Men do, yielding to Necessity. This is the Wisdom of the Flesh; but the Wisdom of the Flesh is Death and Enmity to God, as our Saviour for Example, aptly did declare in Peter, who exhorteth Christ not to go to Jerusalem to celebrate the Passover, and there to be slain, but counselled him to look better to himself.

Wisdom of the Flesh not to be hearkened unto.

Likewise the World would not have us to forsake it, neither to associate ourselves to the true Church, which is the Body of Christ, whereof we are lively Members, and to use the Sacraments after God's Word with the Danger of our Lives. But we must learn to answer the World as Christ did Peter, and say, Go behind me, Satan, thou savourest not the Things of God. Shall I not drink of the Cup which the Father giveth me? For it is better to be afflicted and to be slain in the Church of God, than to be counted the Son of the King, in the Synagogue of false Religion. Death for Righteousness is not to be abhorred, but rather to be desired, which assuredly bringeth with it the Crown of everlasting Glory. These bloody Executioaers do not prosecute Christ's Martyrs, but crown them with everlasting Felicity; we were born into this World to be Witnesses unto the Truth, both learned and unlearned.

Death for Righteousness bringeth Felicity.

Now since the Time is come that we must shew our Faith, and declare whether we will be God's Servants in Righteousness and Holiness, as we have been taught, and are bouud to follow, or else with Hypocrisy to serve Unrighteousness: Let us take good heed that we be found faithful in the Lord's Covenant, and true Members of his Church, in which through Knowledge we are ingrafted; from which if we fall by Transgression with the common Sort of People, it will more streightly be required of us, than many yet do make Account thereof. We cannot serve two Masters; we must be fervent in God's Cause, or else he will cast us out from him. For by the first Commandment we are commanded to love God with all our Heart, with all our Mind, with all our Power and Strength: But they are manifest Transgressors of this Commandment, which with their Heart, Mind, or bodily Power, do communicate with a strange Religion, contrary to the Word of God, in the papistical Synagogue, which calleth itself the Church, and is not. As greatly do they offend God now which so do, as the Israelites did in Times past by forsaking Jerusalem, the true Church of God, and by going to Bethel to serve God in a Congregation of their own setting up, and after their own Imaginations and Traditions: For which doing God utterly destroyed all Israel, as all the Prophets do almost testify. This happened unto them for our Ensample, that we might beware to have any Fellowship with any like Congregation to our Destruction.

1 Kings 13. God will not be served after Man's Imagination, but as himself prescribeth.

God hath one catholick Church dispersed throughout the World, and therefore we are taught in our Creed to believe one catholick Church, and to have Communion therewith: Which catholick Church is grounded upon the Foundation of the Prophets and of the Apostles, and upon none other, as St. Paul witnesseth to the Ephesians, Chap. 8. Therefore wheresover we perceive any People to worship God truly after his Word, there we may be certain the Church of Christ to be; unto which we ought to associate ourselves, and to desire with the Prophet David, to praise God in the midst of his Church, Psal. 21. But if we behold through the Iniquity of the Time, Segregations to be made with counterfeit Religion, otherwise than the Word of God doth teach, we ought then, if we be required to be Companions thereof, to say again with David, Psal 26. I have hated the Synagogue of the Malignant, and will not sit with the Wicked. In the Revelations the Church of Ephesus is highly commended, because she tried such as said they were Apostles, and were not indeed, and therefore would not abide the Company of them. Further, God commanded his People, that they should not seek Bethel, neither enter into Gilgal where Idolatry was used, by the Mouth of his Prophet Amos. Also we must consider, that our Bodies be the Temple of God, and whosoever (as St. Paul teacheth, 2 Cor. 3.) doth prophane the Temple of God, him the Lord will destroy. May we then take the Temple of Christ; and make it the Member of an Harlot? All strange Religion and Idolatry is accounted Whoredom with the Prophets, and more detestable in the Sight of God than the adventurous Abuse of the Body.

Therefore the Princes of the Earth, in the Revelations of St. John, are said to go a Whoring, when they are in love with false Religion, and follow the same. How then by any Means may a christian Man think it tolerable to be present at the Popish private Mass (which is the very Prophanation of the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Christ) and at other idolatrous Worshippings and Rites, which be not after the Word of God, but rather to the Derogation thereof, in setting Man's Traditions above God's Precepts, since God by his Word judgeth all strange Religion, which is not according to his Institution, for Whoredom and Adultery?

Not lawful for a true Christian to come to the Mass.

Some fondly think that the Presence of the Body is not material, so that the Heart do not consent to their wicked Doings. But such Persons little consider what St. Paul writeth to the Corinthians, commanding them to glorify God as well in Body as in Soul.

Moreover, we can do no greater Injury to the true Church of Christ, than to seem to have forsaken her, and disallow her by cleaving to her Adversary: Whereby it appeareth to others which be weak, that we allow the same; and so contrary to

to the Word, do give a great Offence to the Church of God, and do outwardly ſlander, as much as Men may, the Truth of Chriſt. But wo be unto him by whom any ſuch Offence cometh. Better it were for him to have a Mill-ſtone tied about his Neck, and to be caſt into the Sea. Such be Traitors to the Truth, like unto Judas, who with a Kiſs betray'd Chriſt. Our God is a jealous God, and cannot be content that we ſhould be of any other than of that unſpotted Church, whereof he is the Head only, and wherein he hath planted us by Baptiſm. This Jealouſy which God hath towards us, will cry for Vengeance in the Day of Vengeance, againſt all ſuch as now have ſo large Conſciences to do that which is contrary to God's Glory, and the Sincerity of his Word, except they do in Time repent, and cleave inſeparably to the Goſpel of Chriſt, how much ſoever at this preſent both Men and Women otherwiſe in their own corrupt Judgment do flatter themſelves. God willeth us to judge uprightly, and to allow and follow that which is holy and acceptable in his Sight, and to abſtain from all Manner of Evil, and therefore Chriſt commandeth us in the Goſpel to beware of the Leaven of the Phariſees, which is Hypocriſy.

A Leſſon for large Conſciences.

St. Paul to the Hebrews ſaith, Chap. 10. If any Man withdraw himſelf from the Faith, his Soul ſhall have no Pleaſure in him; therefore he ſaith alſo, That we are none ſuch as do withdraw ourſelves unto Perdition, but we belong unto Faith, for the Attainment of Life. St. John in the Revelations telleth us plainly, that none of thoſe who are written in the Book of Life, do receive the Mark of the Beaſt, which is of the papiſtical Synagogue, either in their Foreheads, or elſe in their Hands, that is, apparently or obediently.

St. Paul to the Philippians affirmeth. that we may not have any Fellowſhip with the Works of Darkneſs, but in the midſt of this wicked and froward Generation we ought to ſhine like Lights upholding the Word of Truth. Further he ſaith, that we may not touch any unclean Thing; which ſignifieth, that our outward Converſation in foreign 2 Cor. 6. Things ought to be pure and undefiled as well as the inward, that with a clean Spirit and rectified Body we might ſerve God juſtly in Holineſs and Righteouſneſs all the Days of our Life.

Finally, in the 18*th of the* Revelations, God biddeth us plainly to depart from the Babylonical Synagogue, and not to be Partakers of her Treſpaſs. St. Paul to the Theſſalonians commandeth us in the Name of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, to withdraw ourſelves from every Brother that walketh inordinately, and not according to the Inſtitution which he hath received of him.

Ponder ye therefore well, good Brethren and Siſters, theſe Scriptures which be written for your Erudition and Reformation, whereof one Jot is not written in vain: Which be utterly againſt all counterfeit Illuſion to be uſed by us with the Papiſts in their fantaſtical Religion, and be Adverſaries to all them that have ſo light Conſciences in ſo doing: And if they do not agree with this Adverſary (I mean the Word of God) which is contrary to their Attempts, he will (as is ſignified in the Goſpel, Matth. 5.) deliver them to the Judge, which is Chriſt; and the Judge will deliver them to the Executioner, that is to the Devil: And the Devil ſhall commit them to the horrible Priſon of Hell-fire (where is the Portion of all Hypocrites) with Sulphur and Brimſtone, with wailing and gnaſhing of Teeth World without End. But yet many will ſay for their vain Excuſe, God is merciful, and his Mercy is over all. But the Scripure teacheth us, That curſed is he that ſinneth upon hope of Forgiveneſs. Truth it is, that the Mercy of God is above all his Works, and yet but upon ſuch as fear him: For it is written in the Pſalms, Pſal. 102. 146. The Mercy of God is on them that fear him, and on ſuch as put their Truſt in him. Where we may learn, that they only put their Truſt in God, that ſerve him; and to fear God, is to turn from Evil and do that which is good. So that ſuch as do look to be Partakers in God's Mercy, may not abide in that which is known to be manifeſt Evil and deteſtable in the Sight of God.

Anno 1555.

Another ſort of Perſons do make them a Cloak for the Rain under the Pretence of Obedience to the Magiſtrates, whom we ought to obey although they be wicked. But ſuch muſt learn of Chriſt to give to Cæſar that is Cæſar's, and to God that is due to God; and with St. Peter to obey the higher Powers in the Lord, although they be Evil, if they command nothing contrary to God's Word, otherwiſe we ought not to obey their Commandments, although we ſhould ſuffer Death for it, as we have the Apoſtles for our Example herein to follow, who anſwered the Magiſtrates as we ought to do in this Caſe, not obeying their wicked Precepts, ſaying, Judge you whether it be more righteous that we ſhould obey Man rather than God.

Obedience to Magiſtrates what, and how far.

Alſo Daniel choſe rather to be caſt into the Den of Lions to be devoured, than to obey the King's wicked Commandments. If the Blind lead the Blind, both fall into the Ditch. There is no Excuſe for the Tranſgreſſion of God's Word, whether a Man doth it voluntarily or at Commandment, although great Damnation is to them, by whom the Offence cometh. Some others there be that for an extreme Refuge in their Evil-doings, do run to God's Predeſtination and Election, ſaying, that if I be elected of God to Salvation, I ſhall be ſaved whatſoever I do. But ſuch be great Tempters of God, and abominable Blaſphemers of God's Holy Election, and caſt themſelves down from the Pinnacle of the Temple in Preſumption, that God may preſerve them by his Angels through Predeſtination. Such verily may reckon themſelves to be none of God's Elect Children, that will do Evil that Good may enſue; whoſe Damnation is juſt, as St. Paul ſaith God's Predeſtination and Election ought to be with a ſimple Eye conſidered; to make us more warily to walk in good and godly Converſation according to God's Word, und not to ſet Cock in the Hoop, and put all on God's Back to do wickedly at large: For the Elect Children of God muſt walk in Righteouſneſs and Holineſs after they be once called to the true Knowledge. For ſo ſaith St. Paul to the Epheſians, Chap. 1. That God hath choſen us before the Foundations of the World were laid, that we ſhould be holy and blameleſs in his Sight.

Therefore St. Peter willeth us through good Works to make our Vocation and Election certain 2 Pet. 1. to ourſelves, which we know not but by the good working of God's Spirit in us, according to the Rule of the Goſpel; and he that conformeth not himſelf to the ſame in godly Converſation, may juſtly tremble, and doubt that he is none of the Elect Children of God, but of the viperous Generation, and a Child of Darkneſs. For the Children of Light will walk in the Works of Light and not of Darkneſs, though they fall, they do not lie ſtill.

Let all vain Excuſes be ſet apart, and whilſt ye have Light, as Chriſt commandeth, believe the Anno 1555. Light and abide in the ſame, leſt eternal Darkneſs overtake you unawares. The Light is come into the World, but (alas) Men love Darkneſs more than Light. God give us his pure Eye ſalve to heal our Blindneſs in this Behalf. O that Men and Women would be healed, and not ſeek to be wilfully blinded. The Lord open their Eyes, that they may ſee how dangerous a Thing it is to decline from the Knowledge of Truth, contrary to their Conſcience.

But what ſaid I, Conſcience? many affirm their Conſcience will bear them well enough to do all that they do, and to go to the idolatrous Church to Service; whoſe Conſcience is very large to ſatisfy Man more than God. And although their Conſcience can bear them ſo to do, yet I am ſure that a good Conſcience will not permit them ſo to do; which cannot be good, unleſs it be directed after the Knowledge of God's Word; and therefore in Latin this feeling Mind is called Conſcientia, which ſoundeth by Interpretation, as much as with Knowledge.

And therefore if our Conſcience be led of herſelf, and not after true Knowledge, yet we are not ſo to be excuſed, as St. Paul beareth Witneſs, ſaying, Although my Conſcience accuſeth me not, yet in this I am not juſtified. And he joineth a good Conſcience with theſe three Siſters, Charity, a pure Heart, and unfeigned Faith. Charity keepeth God's Commandments, a pure Heart loveth and feareth God above all, and unfeigned Faith is never aſhamed of the Profeſſion of the Goſpel, whatſoever Damage he ſhall ſuffer in Body thereby. The Lord who hath revealed his Holy Will unto us by his Word, grant us never to be aſhamed of it, and give us Grace ſo earneſtly to cleave to his holy Word, and the true Church, that for no Manner of worldly Reſpect we become Partakers of the Works of Hypocriſy, which God doth abhor; ſo that we may be found faithful in the Lord's Teſtament to the End, both in Heart, Word and Deed, to the Glory of God and our everlaſting Salvation, Amen.

John Philpot, Priſoner in the King's-Bench for the Teſtimony of the Truth. 1555.

Mr. Philpot's Letter to Mr. John Careleſs, Priſoner in the King's-Bench.

MY dearly beloved Brother Careleſs, I have received your loving Letters full of Love and Compaſſion, inſomuch that they made my Heart to weep, to ſee you ſo careful for one that hath been ſo unprofitable a Member as I have been, and am in Chriſt's Church. God make me worthy of that I am called unto, and I pray you ceaſe not to pray for me, but ceaſe to weep for him who hath not deſerved ſuch gentle Tears: And praiſe God with me, for that I now approach to the Company of them, whoſe want you may worthily lament; God give your pitiful Heart his inward Conſolation. Indeed my dear Careleſs, I am in this World in Hell, and in the Shadow of Death; but he that hath brought me for my Deſerts down into Hell, ſhall ſhortly lift me up to Heaven, where I ſhall look continually for your coming, and other my faithful Brethren in the King's Bench. And though I tell you that I am in Hell in the Judgment of this World, yet aſſuredly I feel in the ſame the Conſolation of Heaven, I praiſe God; and this loathſome and horrible Priſon is as pleaſant to me, as the Walk in the Garden of the King's-Bench.

Experience of the Lord's Comfort in Trouble.

You know, Brother Careleſs, that the Way to Heaven out of this Life is very narrow, and we muſt ſtrive to enter in at a narrow Gate. If God do mitigate the Ugline ſs of mine Impriſonment, what will he do in the Rage of the Fire whereunto I am appointed? And this hath happened unto me, that I might be hereafter an Enſample of Comfort, if the like happen unto you, or to any other of my dear Brethren with you in theſe cruel Days, in which the Devil ſo rageth at the faithful Flock of Chriſt, but in vain (I truſt) againſt any of us, who be perſuaded that neither Life, neither Death is able to ſeparate us from the Love of Chriſt's Goſpel, which is God's high Treaſure committed to our brittle Veſſels to glorify us by the ſame. God of his Mercy make us faithful Stewards to the End, and give us Grace to fear nothing whatſoever in his good Pleaſure we ſhall ſuffer for the ſame. That I have not written unto you e're this, the Cauſe is our ſtrait keeping and the want of Light by Night; for the Day ſerveth us but a while in our dark Cloſet. This is the firſt Letter that I have witten ſince I came to Priſon, beſides the Report of my Examinations; and I am fain to ſcribble it out in haſte.

Commend me to all our faithful Brethren, and bid them with a good Courage look for their Redemption, and frame themſelves to be hearty Soldiers in Chriſt. They have taken his preſt Money a great while, and now let them ſhew themſelves ready to ſerve him faithfully, and not to fly out of the Lord's Camp into the World as many do. Let them remember, that in the Revelations the fearful be excluded the Kingdom. Let us be of good Cheer, for our Lord overcame the World, that we ſhould do the like. Bleſſed is the Servant, whom when the Lord cometh, he findeth watching. O let us watch and pray earneſtly one for another, that we be not led into Temptation. Be joyful under the Croſs, and praiſe the Lord continually, for this is the whole burnt Sacrifice which the Lord delighteth in. Commend me to my Father Hunt, and deſire him to love and continue in the Unity of Chriſt's true Church, which he hath begun, and then will he make me more and more to joy under my Croſs with him. Tell my Brother Clements that he hath comforted me much by his loving Token in Signification of an unfeigned Unity with us; let him increaſe my Joy unto the End perfectly. The Lord of Peace be with you all. Salute my loving Friends, Mr. Mering, Mr. Crooch, with the reſt, and eſpecially Mr. Marſhal and his Wife, with great Thanks for his Kindneſs ſhewed unto me. Farewel my dear Careleſs. I have dallied with the Devil a while, but I am over the Shoes: God ſend me well out.

Rev. 21.

Out of the Coal-houſe, by your Brother, John Philpot.

Another Letter to Mr. John Careleſs, profitable to be read by all thoſe who mourn for, and repent of their Sins.

THE God of all Comfort, and the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, ſend unto thee, my dear Brother Careleſs, the inward Conſolation of his Holy

Holy Spirit, in all the malicious Aſſaults and troublous Temptations of our common Adverſary the Devil. Amen.

To this Letter Mr. Careleſs maketh a very godly Anſwer, which you ſhall ſee afterwards in his Story.

That God giveth you ſo contrite a Heart for your Sins, I cannot but rejoice to behold the lively Mark of the Children of God, whoſe Property is to think more lowly and meanly of themſelves than of any other, and oftentimes do ſet their Sins before them, that they might the more be ſtirred to bring forth the Fruits of Repentance, and learn to mourn in this World, that in another they might be glad and rejoice. Such a broken Heart is a pleaſant Sacrifice unto God: O that I had the like contrite Heart. God mollify my ſtony Heart, which lamenteth not in ſuch wiſe my former deteſtable Iniquities. Praiſed be God that he hath given you this ſorrowful Heart in reſpect of Righteouſneſs, and I pray you let me be Partaker of theſe godly Sorrows for Sin, which be the Teſtimony of the Preſence of the Holy Ghoſt. Did not the Sword of Sorrow pierce the Heart of the Elect and bleſſed Mother of our Lord? Did not Peter weep bitterly for his Sins, which was ſo beloved of Chriſt? Did not Mary Magdalen waſh the Feet of our Saviour with her Tears, and received therewithal Remiſſion of her ſevenfold Sins?

Be of good Comfort therefore, mine own dear Heart, in this thy Sorrow, for it is the earneſt Penny of eternal Conſolation. In thy Sorrow laugh, for the Spirit of God is with thee: Bleſſed be they (ſaith Chriſt) that mourn, for they ſhall be comforted. They went forth and wept, ſaith the Prophet, ſuch ſhall come again having their Gripes full of Gladneſs. And although a ſorrowful Heart, in Conſideration of his Sins, be an acceptable Sacrifice before God, whereby we are ſtirred up to more Thankfulneſs unto God, knowing that much is forgiven us that we might love the more, yet the Man of God muſt keep a Meaſure in the ſame, leſt he be ſwallowed up by much Sorrow. St. Paul would not that the Theſſalonians ſhould be ſorry as other Men without Hope: Such a Sorrow is not commendable, but worketh Damnation, and is far from the Children of God, who are continually ſorrowful in God when they look upon their own Unworthineſs, with Hope of Forgiveneſs. For God to this End by his Spirit ſetteth the Sins of his Elect ſtill before them, that where they perceive Sin to abound, there they might be aſſured that Grace ſhall ſuper-abound; and bring them down unto Hell, that he might lift them up with greater Joy unto Heaven. Wherefore, mine own Bowels in Chriſt, as long as you are not void altogether of Hope, be not diſmay'd through your penſive Heart for your Sins, how huge ſoever they have been, for God is able to forgive more than you are able to ſin: Yea, and he will forgive him who with Hope is ſorry for his Sins.

Sorrow in a Chriſtian ought to be moderate. 1 Theſſ. 4.

Satan's Practice to bring the godly Repentance of a Sinner to Deſparation.

But know, Brother, that as oft as we do go about, by the Help of God's Spirit to do that is good, the evil Spirit Satan layeth hard wait to turn the Good unto Evil, and goeth about to dung the deteſtable Weeds of Deſparation with the godly Sorrow of a pure penitent Heart. You be not ignorant of his malicious Subtilty, and how that continually he aſſaulted that Good which the Grace of God planteth. I ſee the Battle betwixt you and him, but the Victory is yours, yea and that daily: for you have laid hold upon the Anchor of Salvation, which is Hope in Chriſt, which will not ſuffer you to be made aſhamed.

Be not diſcontented that you have this Conflict; but be glad that God hath given you the ſame to try your Faith, and that you might appear daily worthy of the Kingdom of God, for which you ſtrive. God beholdeth your ſtriving Faith againſt Satan, and is pleaſed with your mighty Reſiſtance. The Spirit which is in you, is mightier than all the Adverſary's Power. Tempt he may, and lying in wait at your Heels give you a Fall unawares; but overcome he ſhall not; yea he cannot, for you are ſealed up already with a lively Faith to be the Child of God for ever: And whom God hath once ſealed for his own, him he never utterly forſaketh. Anno 1555.

God's Children fall. The Devil's Children lie ſtill.

The Juſt falleth ſeven Times, but he riſeth again. It is Man's Frailty to fall, but it is the Property of the Devil's Child to lie ſtill.

Striſe againſt Sin is a Token of God's Child. Luke 11.

This Striſe againſt Sin is a ſufficient Teſtimony that you are the Child of God: For if you were not, you would feel no ſuch Malice as he now troubleth you withal. When this ſtrong Goliah hath the Hold, all Things are in Peace which he poſſeſſeth: And becauſe he hath you not, he will not ſuffer you unaſſaulted. But ſtand faſt, and hold out the Buckler of Faith, and with the Sword of God's Promiſes ſmite him on the Scalp; that he may receive a deadly Wound, and never be able to ſtand againſt you any more. St. James telleth you that he is but a Coward, ſaying, Reſiſt the Devil, and he will fly from thee. James 4. It is the Will of God that he ſhould thus long tempt you, and not go away as yet, or elſe he had done with you long ere this. He knoweth already that he ſhall receive the Foil at your Hands, and increaſe the Crown of your Glory; for he that overcometh ſhall be crowned. Therefore glory in your Temptations, ſince they ſhall turn to your Felicity. Be not afraid of your continual Aſſaults which be Occaſions of your daily Victory. The Word of God abideth for ever. In what Hour ſoever a Sinner repenteth him of his Sins, they be forgiven. Who can lay any Thing to the Charge of God's Elect? Do you not perceive the manifeſt Tokens of your own Election? Firſt, your Vocation to the Goſpel, and after your Vocation, the manifeſt Gifts of the Spirit of God given unto you above many other of your Condition, with Godlineſs which believeth and yieldeth to the Authority of the Scriptures, and is zealous for the ſame? Seeing you are God's own Darlings, who can hurt you? Be not of a dejected Mind for theſe Temptations, neither make your unfeigned Friends to be more ſorrowful for you than Need doth require.

Since God hath willed you at your Baptiſm in Chriſt to be careleſs, why do you make yourſelf careful? Caſt all your Care on him. Set the Lord before your Eyes always, for he is on your right Side, that you ſhould not be then moved. Behold the Goodneſs of God towards me. I am careleſs, being faſt incloſed in a Pair of Stocks, which pinch me for very Straitneſs; and will you be careful? I would not have that unſeemly Addition to your Name. Be as your Name pretendeth, for doubtleſs you have no other Cauſe but ſo to be. Pray, I beſeech you, that I may be ſtill careleſs in my careful Eſtate, as you have Cauſe to be careleſs in your eaſier Condition. Be thankful, and put away all Care, and then I ſhall be joyful in my ſtrait preſent Care. Commend me to all our Brethren, and deſire them to pray for me, that I may overcome my Temptations: For the Devil rageth againſt me: I am put in the Stocks in a Place alone, becauſe I would not anſwer to ſuch Articles as they would charge me withal in a Corner at the Biſhop's Appointment, and becauſe I did not come to Maſs when the Biſhop ſent for me. By God's Grace, I will lie all the Days of my Life in the Stocks, rather than I will conſent to the wicked Generation. Praiſe God, and be joyful, that it hath pleaſed him to make us worthy to ſuffer ſomewhat for his Name's Sake. The Devil muſt rage for ten Days. Commend me to Mr. F——, and thank him for his Law-books: But neither Law nor Equity will take any Place among these Blood-thirsty. I wish for your sake the unjust Dealing were noted unto the Parliament-house, if it might avail. God shorten these evil Days. I have answered the Bishop meetly plain already, and I said to him, if he will call me in open Judgment, I will answer him as plainly as he shall require; otherwise I have refused, because I fear they will condemn me in Hugger-mugger. The Peace of God be with you my dear Brother. I can write no more for lack of Light, and that which I have written I cannot read myself, and God knoweth it is written very uneasily. I pray God you may pick out some understanding of my Mind towards you. Written in a Coal-house of Darkness, out of a Pair of painful Stocks, by thine own in Christ,

John Philpot.

Abstract of a Letter written by Mr. Philpot to the Lady Vane.

THE principal Spirit of God the Father, given unto us by Christ our merciful Saviour, confirm, strengthen, and stablish you in the true Knowledge of the Gospel, that your faithful Heart (worshipful and dear Sister in the Lord) may attain and taste with all the Saints what is the Height, the Depth, the Length, and the Breadth of the sweet Cross of Christ, Amen, &c.

Oh, happy are you amongst all other Women, that have found this precious Stone which is hidden in the Gospel; for which we ought to sell all other Things, and to purchase the same. Oh happy Woman, whose Heart God hath moved and enlarged to be in the Profession thereof. Others seek worldly Goods, Honours, and Delights; but you seek with a good Understanding to serve God in Spirit and in Truth. This is the Gate that leadeth to Heaven, this is your Portion for ever. By this you shall see God Face to Face (which Sight is unspeakable Joy) and by this shall ye see a full Sight of all the beautiful heavenly Powers, and of all the celestial Paradise. By this shall you know them that you never knew, and be glad and joyful with those which you have known here in God, World without End, &c.

Ah, I lament the Infidelity of England, that after so great Light, is stept into so huge Darkness again. The Servant that knoweth his Master's Will and doth it not, shall be beaten with many Stripes. Ah, great be the Plagues that hang over England, yea, though the Gospel should be restored again. Happy shall that Person be whom the Lord shall take out of this World, not to see them. Ah, the great Perjury which Men have run into so wilfully against God by receiving Antichrist again, and his wicked Laws; which do threaten a great Ruin unto England. O that the Lord would turn his just Judgments upon the Authors of the Truce breaking between God and us, that they might be brought low (as Nebuchadonosor was) that his People might be delivered, and his Glory exalted. God grant that that good Luck which you hope shortly to come upon the House of God, be a true Prophesy, and not a well wishing only. Ah, Lord, take away thy heavy Hand from us, and stretch it out upon thine Enemies, those Hypocrites, as thou hast begun, that they may be confounded. O let not the Weak perish for want of Knowledge through our Sin. Although thou kill us, yet we will put our Trust in thee.

Thus (dear Heart) you teach me to pray with you in Writing. God hear your Prayers, and give us the Spirit of effectual Prayer, to pour out our Hearts continually together before God, that we may find Mercy both for ourselves, and for our afflicted Brethren and Sisters. I cannot but praise God in you, for that pitiful Heart that taketh other Folks Calamities to Heart, as your own. Blessed be they that mourn, for such shall be comforted. God wipe away all Tears from your pitiful Eyes, and Sorrow from your merciful Heart, that you may (as doubtless you shall do shortly) rejoice with his Elect for ever. You have so armed me to the Lord's Battle both inwardly and outwardly, that except I be a very Coward, I cannot faint, but overcome by Death. You have appointed me to so good and gracious a General of the Field, to so victorious a Captain, and to so favourable a Marshal, that if I should not go on lustily, there were no Spectacle of heavenly Manhood in me. I will present your Coat-armour before my Captain, and in the same I trust by him to overcome. The Scarf I desire as an outward Sign to shew our Enemies, who see not our glorious End, neither what God worketh inwardly in us, through the Blindness of their Hearts, that they persecute Christ's Cross in us, whereby he hath sealed up the Truth of his Gospel by his Death unto us, that we by our Death (if need be) might confirm the same, and never be ashamed, whatsoever Torment we do suffer for his Name's sake; and our weak Brethren seeing the same, might be more encouraged to take up Christ's Cross, and to follow him. God give us Grace to do all Things to his Glory, Amen, &c.

Philpot's Scarf.

The World wondereth how we can be merry in such extreme Misery, but our God is omnipotent, who turneth Misery into Felicity. Believe me (dear Sister) there is no such Joy in the World as the People of Christ have under the Cross. I speak by Experience; therefore believe me, and fear nothing that the World can do unto you. For when they imprison our Bodies, they set our Souls at Liberty with God. When they cast us down, they lift us up; yea, when they kill us, then do they bring us to everlasting Life. And what greater Glory can there be, than to be in Conformity with Christ? which Afflictions do work in us.

When Persecutors imprison Men's Bodies, they set their Souls at Liberty.

God open our Eyes to see more and more his Glory in the Cross of Jesus Christ, and make us worthy Partakers of the same. Let us rejoyce with St. Paul, in the Cross of Jesus Christ, by whom the World is crucified unto us, and we to the World. The Cross of Christ be our Standard to fight under for ever. While I am talking with you of our common Consolation, I forget how I trouble you with my rude and inordinate Tediousness: But you must impute it to Love which cannot quickly depart from them whom he loveth, but desireth to pour himself into their Bosoms.

Therefore though your Flesh would be offended (as it might justly be) at such Rudeness, yet your Spirit will say nay, which taketh all Things in good Part that cometh of Love. And now I am departing, yet will I take my Leave ere I go, and would fain speak somewhat that might declare my sincere Love to you for ever: Farewel O elect Vessel of the Lord, to the Comfort of his afflicted Flock, farewel on Earth, whom in Heaven I am sure I shall not forget. Farewel under the Cross most joyfully, and until we meet, always remember what Christ saith, Be of good Cheer, for I have overcome the World, &c.

God pour his Spirit abundantly upon you, mine own dear Bowels in Christ, until you may come to see the God of all Gods with his Elect in the everlasting Sion. I send to you the Kiss of Peace, with which I do most entirely take my Leave of you at this present. It is necessary we depart hence, or else we could not be glorified. Your Heart is heavy because I say I must depart from you: It is the Calling of the merciful Father, wherewithal you are content, and so am I. Be of good Comfort, hold out your Buckler of Faith: For by the Strength thereof we shall shortly meet in eternal Glory: To which Christ bring us both, Amen, Amen. The 10*th of* December 1555.

Death, why should I fear thee? since thou canst not hurt me, but rid me from Misery unto eternal Glory.

Dead to the World, and living to Christ, your own Brother, sealed up in the Verity of the Gospel for ever.

John Philpot.

Another Letter of Mr. Philpot to the Lady Vane.

GOD the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ increase in your godly Heart the Faith of the Gospel, which is your eternal Inheritance, and the Holy Ghost comfort your Spirit with all spiritual Consolation to the Day of the Lord, Amen.

Lady Vane a liberal Benefactor to God's Saints.

I cannot but praise God most highly and earnestly (my dear and faithful Lady) for the great and unfeigned Love which you bear unto me in Christ, declared oftentimes, as well now as of late, by manifest and liberal Tokens. Blessed be God that hath made you so worthy a Member in his Kingdom. For it cannot be but such shall reap with Abundance in Time of Reward, that here do sow so plenteously in well-doing; albeit I am most unworthy to receive any such Benefit at your Hands, as in respect of a Pillar of Christ's Church, which am scarce a Shadow thereof. But the Zeal of Christ's Church in you wisheth me to be such a one as the Time doth require. God fulfil your Desire of me, that I may be found constant, and no wandring Star. I am not worthy of the Name of a Prophet, or of a Minister of God's Word, for that I have (being hindered by the Iniquity of the Time) little or nothing laboured therein. I am a Friend of our common Spouse Jesus, and do rejoice in the Verity of his Word; for which (praised be his Name) he hath counted me worthy to suffer: And indeed whosoever giveth a Draught of Water in the Name of a Disciple (as Christ promised Mark 7). shall not lose his Reward. Therefore that your Gentleness doth in the Name of him, which I am not, the Lord recompense unto you in all his Blessings, which he is accustomed to pour on them who love his Flock unfeignedly.

Good Lady, you have to joy that the Kingdom of God is thus continually before your Eyes, and that you are not ashamed of the Bands of Christ, which you with his People in Part do suffer. They may be assured of the Glory everlasting, who here are not ashamed to take up the Cross of Christ, and to follow him. Here we must weep and lament, while the World laugheth and triumpheth over us; but our Tears shall shortly be turned to unspeakable Joy, and we shall eternally be merry together, when the World shall lament their Infidelity without End, &c.

Anno 1555.

I would I were able to do any Thing that might shew condign Thanks for that sincere Love you bear unto me in Christ: You adjure me (as it were) by your gentle Letters to be bold on you in all my Needs. I thank God who ceaseth not to provide for his, I lack nothing at present, but only Ability to thank your faithful Heart for your Goodness towards me. I love you and not yours, as it is meet for Christians to love one another in God; and your Faith which I behold in you, is more worth unto me than all your Possessions. And I think I shall not need long to be chargeable unto you, for that this Week I look for some Commissioners to sit on me, and my Fellow prisoners in Prison, lest the Spirit of our Breath might blow further Abroad. The Will of God be done. We are not so good as John the Baptist who was beheaded in Prison. Darkness cannot abide the Light. Therefore their Doings must declare what they are. We are as Sheep appointed for a Sacrifice to the Lord. We must not fear the Fire, for our Lord is a consuming Fire, who will put out the Fierceness of raging Torments from us. Be not afraid of them that can kill the Body, but fear him that can cast both Body and Soul into Hell-fire. God forbid that we should rejoice otherwise than in the Cross of Christ, and pray that he would make us worthy to suffer for his Sake. God will have our Faith tried and known; and therefore let us willingly humble ourselves under the mighty Hand of God, that he may gloriously lift us up in his good Time. There is none perfectly faithful indeed, till he can say with St. Paul, Rom. 8. I am persuaded that neither Death nor Life, nor Angels, nor Principalities or Powers, nor Things present nor Things to come, nor Heighth nor Depth, nor any other Creature is able to separate us from the Love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord. This Faith God plant both in you and me unmoveably. In this Faith we have to rejoice, and in none other.

How a perfect Christian may be known.

All the Tribulations of the World are not worthy of the eternal Weight of Glory which is prepared for them, that here do with Patience abide the Cross. Wherefore let us be strong with the Strength in him, that is able to make us strong, and lament the Weakness, I might say, the Infidelity, of our faint-hearted Gospellers. Christ whom we would pretend to have put upon us, is the Strength of God, and how then can they be weak where Christ is? We have more to be glad, touch ing ourselves, of this Time, than we have had of any Time before, in which we have so ready a Way to go unto God, and so good Occasion to shew our Duty in glorifying his holy Name. For if we be imprisoned in this Cause, we are blessed. For if we lose all that we have, we are blessed an hundred Fold. If we die, we are blessed eternally; so that in suffering Persecutions, all is full of Blessings. Be blessed therefore (O Elect Lady) of God, with the blessed of God, and flee (as you do) the Concupiscence of the World. Embrace that which is perfect, and joyfully look for the Coming and Cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, &c. Thus desiring God to preserve you to his true Peace, and to give you Victory of that Temptation which now is come to try our Faith; Christ be with you, and bless you both in Body and Soul; and my Prayer shall follow you wheresoever you go, as I desire that yours may be with me. The last Week I sent your Beneficence to Oxford; I could not have a convenient Messenger before. As soon as I have Word, you shall be satisfy'd of your Request. Love

The Time of Tribulation better for a Christian than the Time of Joy.

By yours, with all his Power in the Lord,

John Philpot.

A Letter of Mr. Philpot to a Friend of his, Priſoner the ſame Time in Newgate, wherein is debated and diſcuſſed the Matter or Queſtion of Infants to be baptized.

THE God of all Light and Underſtanding enlighten your Heart with all true Knowledge of his Word, and make you perfect to the Day of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, whereunto you are now called, through the mighty Operation of his Holy Spirit, Amen.

I received Yeſternight from you (dear Brother, Saint, and Fellow-priſoner for the Truth of Chriſt's Goſpel) a Letter, wherein you gently require my Judgment concerning the Baptiſm of Infants, which is the Effect thereof. And before I do ſhew you what I have learned out of God's Word, and of his true and infallible Church touching the ſame, I think it not out of the Matter firſt to declare what Viſion I had the ſame Night while muſing on your Letter I fell aſleep, knowing that God doth not without Cauſe reveal to his People who have their Minds fixed on him, ſpecial and ſpiritual Revelations to their Comfort, as a Taſte of their Joy and Kingdom to come, which Fleſh and Blood cannot comprehend.

A Viſion revealed to Mr. Philpot upon a Letter to be anſwered.

Being in the midſt of my ſweet Reſt, it ſeemed me to ſee a great beautiful City, all of the Colour of Azure, and White, four-ſquare in a marvellous beautiful Compoſition in the midſt of the Sky, the Sight whereof ſo inwardly comforted me, that I am not able to expreſs the Conſolation I had thereof, yea the Remembrance thereof cauſeth as yet my Heart to leap for Joy: And as Charity is no Churl, but would others to be Partakers of his Delight, ſo methought I called to others (I cannot tell whom) and while they came and we together beheld the ſame, by and by to my great Grief it faded away.

The Viſion expounded.

This Dream I think not to have come of the Illuſion of the Senſes, becauſe it brought with it ſo much ſpiritual Joy, and I take it to be of the working of God's Spirit for the Contentation of your Requeſt, as he wrought in Peter to ſatisfy Cornelius. Therefore I interpret this beautiful City to be the glorious Church of Chriſt, and the Appearance of it in the Sky, ſignifieth the heavenly State thereof, whoſe Converſation is in Heaven; and that according to the primitive Church which is now in Heaven, Men ought to meaſure and judge the Church of Chriſt now in Earth: For as the Prophet David ſaith, Pſal. 67. The Foundations thereof be in the Holy Hills, and glorious Things be ſpoken of the City of God. And the marvellous Quadrature of the ſame, I take to ſignify the univerſal Agreement in the ſame, and that all the Church here Militant ought to conſent to the primitive Church throughout the four Parts of the World; as the Prophet affirmeth, ſaying, God maketh us to dwell after one Manner in one Houſe. And that I conceived ſo wonderful Joy at the Contemplation thereof, I underſtand the unſpeakable Joy which they have that be at Unity with Chriſt's primitive Church: For there is Joy in the Holy Ghoſt, and Peace, which paſſeth all Underſtanding; as it is written in the Pſalms, as of joyful Perſons is the dwelling of all them that dwell in thee. And that I called others to the Fruition of this Viſion, and to behold this wonderful City, I conſtrue it by the Will of God this Viſion to have come upon me muſing on your Letter, to the End that under this Figure I might have Occaſion to move you with many others, to behold the primitive Church in all your Opinions concerning Faith, and to conform yourſelf in all Points to the ſame, which is the Pillar and Eſtabliſhment of the Truth, and teacheth the true Uſe of the Sacraments, and having with a greater Fulneſs than we have now, the firſt Fruits of the Holy Ghoſt, did declare the true Interpretation of the Scriptures according to all Verity, even as our Saviour promiſed to ſend them another Comforter, which ſhould teach them all Truth.

The primitive Example for us to follow.

And ſince all Truth was taught and revealed to the primitive Church, which is our Mother, let us all that be obedient Children of God, ſubmit ourſelves to the Judgment of the Church for the better Underſtanding of the Articles of our Faith, and of the doubtful Sentences of the Scripture. Let us not go about to ſhew in us (by following any private Man's Interpretation upon the Word) another Spirit than they of the primitive Church had, leſt we deceive ourſelves. For there is but one Faith and one Spirit, which is not contrary to himſelf, neither otherwiſe now teacheth us than he did them. Therefore let us believe as they have taught us of the Scriptures, and be at Peace with them, according as the true catholick Church is at this Day: And the God of Peace aſſuredly will be with us, and deliver us out of all our worldly Troubles and Miſeries, and make us Partakers of their Joy and Bliſs, through our Obedience to Faith with them.

Therefore God commandeth us in Job, Chap 8. to aſk of the elder Generation, and to ſearch diligently the Memory of the Fathers. For we are but Yeſterday's Children, and be ignorant, and our Days are like a Shadow, and they ſhall teach thee, ſaith the Lord, and ſpeak to thee, and ſhall utter Words from their Hearts. And by Solomon, Prov. 6. we are commanded, not to reject the Direction of our Mother. The Lord grant you to direct your Steps in all Things after her, and to abhor Contention with her. For St. Paul writeth 1 Cor. 11. If any Man be contentious, neither we, neither the Church of God hath any ſuch Cuſtom.

Hitherto I have ſhewed you (good Brother) my Judgment generally of that you ſtand in doubt and diſſent from others, to which I wiſh you as mine own Heart to be conformable, and then doubtleſs you cannot err, but boldly may be glad in your Troubles, and triumph at the Hour of your Death, that you ſhall die in the Church of God a faithful Martyr, and receive the Crown of eternal Glory. And thus much have I written upon the Occaſion of a Viſion before God unfeigned. But that you may not think that I go about to ſatisfy you with uncertain Viſions only, and not after God's Word, I will take the Ground of your Letter, and eſpecially anſwer to the ſame by the Scriptures, and by infallible Reaſons deduced out of the ſame, and prove the Baptiſm of Infants to be lawful, commendable, and neceſſary, whereof you ſeem to ſtand in doubt.

Proof by Teſtimonies and Scriptures.

Indeed if you look upon the papiſtical Synagogue only, which had corrupted God's Word by falſe Interpretations, and hath perverted the true Uſe of Chriſt's Sacraments, you might ſeem to have good handfaſt of your Opinion againſt the Baptiſm of Infants.

Baptiſm of Infants of great Antiquity in the Church.

Every Thing abuſed in the Pope's Church is not to be rejected, but the Antiquity thereof to be ſearched and to be reduced again to the ſame.

fants. But for as much as it is of more Antiquity, and hath its Beginning from God's Word, and from the Uſe of the primitive Church, it muſt not in reſpect of the Abuſe in the popiſh Church be neglected, or thought not expedient to be uſed in Chriſt's Church. Auxentius, one of the Arian Sect, with his Adherents, was one of the firſt that deny'd the Baptiſm of Children, and next after him Pelagius the Heretick, and ſome others there were in St. Bernard's Time, as it doth appear by his Writings, and in our Days the Anabaptiſts, an inordinate Kind of Men ſtirred up by the Devil, to the Deſtruction of the Goſpel. But the catholick Truth delivered unto us by the Scriptures, plainly determineth, that all ſuch are to be baptiſed, as whom God acknowledgeth for his People, and voucheth them worthy of Sanctification or Remiſſion of their Sins. Therefore ſince Infants be in the Number or Scroll of God's People, and be Partakers of the Promiſe by their Purification in Chriſt, it muſt needs follow thereby, that they ought to be baptized as well as thoſe that can profeſs their Faith. For we judge the People of God as well by the free and liberal Promiſe of God, as by the Confeſſion of Faith. For to whomſoever God promiſeth himſelf to be their God, and whom he acknowledgeth for his, thoſe no Man without great Impiety may exclude from the Number of the Faithful. But God promiſeth that he will not only be the God of ſuch as do profeſs him, but alſo of Infants, promiſing them his Grace and Remiſſion of Sins, as it appeareth by the Words of the Covenant made unto Abraham, Gen. 17. I will ſet my Covenant between thee and me, ſaith the Lord, and between thy Seed after thee in their Generations, with an everlaſting Covenant, to be thy God, and the God of thy Seed after thee. To which Covenant Circumciſion was added, to be a Sign of Sanctification as well in Children as in Men; and no Man may think that this Promiſe is abrogated with Circumciſion and other ceremonial Laws. For Chriſt came to fulfil the Promiſes, and not to diſſolve them. Therefore in the Goſpel he ſaith of Infants, that is, of ſuch as yet believed not, Mark 10. Let the little Ones come unto me, and forbid them not, for of ſuch is the Kingdom of Heaven. Again, Matth. 18. It is not the Will of your Father which is in Heaven, that any of theſe little Ones do periſh. Alſo, Matth. 18. 10. He that receiveth me. Take heed therefore that ye deſpiſe not one of theſe Babes, for I tell you their Angels do continually ſee in Heaven my Father's Face. And what may be ſaid more plain than this? It is not the Will of the heavenly Father that the Infants ſhould periſh; whereby we may gather, that he receiveth them freely unto his Grace, although as yet they confeſs not their Faith. Since then that the Word of the Promiſes, which is contained in Baptiſm, pertaineth as well to Children as to Men, why ſhould the Sign of the Promiſe, which is Baptiſm in Water, be withdrawn from Children, when Chriſt himſelf commandeth them to be received of us, and promiſeth the Reward of a Prophet to thoſe that receive ſuch a little Infant, as he for an Example did put before his Diſciples?

Matth. 28.

Arguments proving the Baptiſm of Children to be of God, and that the Apoſtles baptized Children.

Now will I prove with manifeſt Arguments that Children ought to be baptized, and that the Apoſtles of Chriſt did baptize Children. The Lord commanded his Apoſtles to baptize all Nations; therefore alſo Children ought to be baptized, for they are comprehended under this Word, All Nations.

Further, whom God doth account among the Faithful, they are faithful, for it was ſaid to Peter, Acts 10. That Thing which God hath purified, thou ſhalt not ſay to be common or unclean: But God doth repute Children among the Faithful, Ergo, they be faithful, except we had rather to reſiſt God, and ſeem ſtronger and wiſer than he. Anno 1555.

Another Argument.

And without all doubt the Apoſtles baptized thoſe which Chriſt commanded: But he commanded the Faithful to be baptized, among which Infants be reckoned: The Apoſtles then baptized ſants.

Another Argument.

The Goſpel is more than Baptiſm, for Paul ſaid, 1 Cor. 1. The Lord ſent me to preach the Goſpel, and not to baptize: Not that he deny'd abſolutely that he was ſent to baptize, but that he preferred Doctrine before Baptiſm, for the Lord commanded both to the Apoſtles: But Children be received by the Doctrine of the Goſpel of God, and not refuſed: Therefore what Perſon being of Reaſon, may deny them Baptiſm, which is a Thing leſs than the Goſpel? for in the Sacraments be two Things to be conſidered, the Thing ſignify'd, and the Sign, and the Thing ſignify'd is greater than the Sign; and from the Thing ſignify'd in Baptiſm, Children are not excluded; who therefore may deny them the Sign which is Baptiſm in Water?

Another Reaſon.

St. Peter could not deny them to be baptized in Water, to whom he ſaw the Holy Ghoſt given, which is the certain Sign of God's People: For he ſaith in the Acts, Chap. 10. May any Body forbid them to be baptized in Water who have received the Holy Ghoſt as well as we? Therefore St. Peter deny'd not Baptiſm to Infants, for he knew certainly both by the Doctrine of Chriſt, and by the Covenant which is everlaſting that the Kingdom of Heaven pertaineth to Infants.

Another Reaſon. Rom. 8.

None be received into the Kingdom of Heaven but ſuch as God loveth, and which are endued with the Spirit: For whoſo hath not the Spirit of God, he is none of his. But Infants be beloved of God, and therefore want not the Spirit of God: Wherefore if they have the Spirit of God as well as Men, if they be numbered among the People of God as well as we that be of Age, who (I pray you) may well withſtand Children to be baptized with Water, in the Name of the Lord?

Another Reaſon. Mark 10.

The Apoſtles in Times paſt, being yet not ſufficiently inſtructed, did murmur againſt thoſe which brought their Children unto the Lord, but the Lord rebuked them, and ſaid, Let the Babes come unto me. Why then do not theſe rebellious Anabaptiſts obey the Commandment of the Lord? For what do they now-a-days elſe that bring their Children to Baptiſm, than that they did in Times paſt which brought their Children to the Lord, and our Lord received them, and putting his Hands on them, bleſſed them, and both by Words and by gentle Behaviour towards them, declared manifeſtly that Children be the People of God, and entirely beloved by him.

Objection.

But ſome will ſay, Why then did not Chriſt baptize them? becauſe it is written, John 4. Jeſus himſelf baptized not, but his Diſciples.

Moreover, Circumciſion in the old Law was adminiſtred to Infants; therefore Baptiſm ought to be adminiſtred in the new Law unto Children. For Baptiſm is come in the ſtead of Circumciſion, as St. Paul witneſſeth, ſaying to the Coloſſians, Ch. 2. By Chriſt ye are circumciſed with a Circumciſion which is without Hands, when ye put off the Body of Sin of the Fleſh, by the Circumciſion of Chriſt, being buried together with him through Baptiſm. Behold, Paul calleth Baptiſm the Circumciſion of a chriſtian Man, which is done without Hands, but that with Hands no Man any longer ought to be circumciſed, albeit the Myſtery of Circumciſion do ſtill remain in faithful People.

of

Anno 1555.

Another Reaſon.

To this I may add, that the Servants of God were always ready to adminiſter the Sacraments to them, for whom they were inſtituted. As for an Example, we may behold Joſhua, Chap. 5. who moſt diligently procured the People of Iſrael to be circumciſed before they entered into the Land of Promiſe; but ſince the Apoſtles were the Preachers of the Word, and the very faithful Servants of Jeſus Chriſt, who may hereafter doubt that they baptized Infants, ſince Baptiſm is in place of Circumciſion?

Another Reaſon.

Item, The Apoſtles did attemperate all their Doings to the Shadows and Figures of the Old Teſtament: Therefore it is certain that they did attemperate Baptiſm accordingly to Circumciſion, and baptized Children becauſe they were under the Figure of Baptiſm; for the People of Iſrael paſſed through the Rea-Sea, and the Bottom of the Water of Jordan, with their Children. And although the Children be not always expreſſed, neither the Women in the holy Scriptures, yet they are comprehended and underſtood in the ſame.

Another Reaſon.

Alſo the Scripture evidently telleth us, that the Apoſtles baptized whole Families or Houſholds: But the Children are comprehended in a Family or Houſhold, as the chiefeſt and deareſt Part thereof: Therefore we may conclude, that the Apoſtles did baptize Infants or Children, and not only Men of lawful Age. And that the Houſe or Houſhold is taken for Man, Woman and Child, it is manifeſt in the 17th of Geneſis; and alſo in that Joſeph doth call Jacob with all his Houſe, to come out of the Land of Canaan into Egypt.

Arguments of Example and of Antiquity.

Finally, I can declare out of ancient Writers, that the Baptiſm of Infants hath continued from the Apoſtles Time unto ours, neither was it inſtituted by any Councils, neither of the Pope, nor of other Men, but commanded from the Scripture by the Apoſtles themſelves. Origen upon the Declaration of St. Paul's Epiſtle to the Romans, expounding the ſixth Chapter ſaith, That the Church of Chriſt received the Baptiſm of Infants from the very Apoſtles. St. Jerom maketh mention of the Baptiſm of Infants in the third Book againſt the Pelagians, and in his Epiſtle to Leta. St. Auguſtine reciteth for this Purpoſe a Place out of John Biſhop of Conſtantinople, in his firſt Book againſt Julian, Chap. 2. and he again writing to St. Jerom, Epiſt. 28. ſaith, That St. Cyprian, not making any new Decree, but firmly obſerving the Faith of the Church, judged with his Fellow-biſhops, that as ſoon as one was born, he might be lawfully baptized. The Place of Cyprian is to be ſeen in his Epiſtle to Fidus.

Origen, who was 200 Years after Chriſt.

St. Auſtin and St. Jerome 400 Years after Chriſt.

Alſo St. Auguſtine in writing againſt the Donatiſts in the fourth Book, Chap. 23 and 24, ſaith, That the Baptiſm of Infants was not derived from the Authority of Man, neither of Councils, but from the Tradition or Doctrine of the Apoſtles.

Cyril upon Leviticus, Chap. 8. approveth the Baptiſm of Children, and condemneth the Iteration of Batiſm. Theſe Authorities of Men I do alledge, not to tie the Baptiſm of Children unto the Teſtimonies of Men, but to ſhew how Men's Teſtimonies do agree with God's Word, and that the Verity of Antiquity is on our Side, and that the Anabaptiſts have nothing but Lies for them, and new Imaginations, which feign the Baptiſm of Children to be the Pope's Commandment.

After this will I anſwer to the Sum of your Arguments for the contrary. The firſt, which includeth all the reſt, is, Go ye into all the World, and preach the glad Tidings to all Creatures. He that believeth and is baptized, ſhall be ſaved: But he that believeth not, ſhall be damned, &c.

To this I anſwer, That nothing is added to God's Word by Baptiſm of Children, as you pretend, but that is done which the ſame Word doth require, for that Children are accounted of Chriſt in the Goſpel among the Number of ſuch as believe, as it appeareth by theſe Words, Matth. 18. He that offendeth one of theſe little Babes which believe in me, it were better for him to have a Mill-ſtone ty'd about his Neck, and to be caſt into the Bottom of the Sea. Where plainly Chriſt calleth ſuch as be not able to confeſs their Faith, Believers, becauſe of his mere Grace he reputeth them for Believers. And this is no Wonder ſo to be taken, ſince God imputeth Faith for Righteouſneſs unto Men that be of riper Age: For both in Men and Children, Righteouſneſs, Acceptation, Sanctification is of mere Grace, and by Imputation, that the Glory of God's Grace might be praiſed.

And that the Children of faithful Parents are ſanctified, and among ſuch as do believe, is apparent in the ſeventh Chapter of the firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians. And whereas you do gather by the Order of the Words in the ſaid Commandment of Chriſt, that Children ought to be taught before they be baptized, and to this End you alledge many Places out of the Acts, proving that ſuch as confeſſed their Faith firſt, were baptized: I anſwer, that if the Order of Words might weigh any Thing in this Cauſe, we have the Scripture that maketh as well for us. For in St. Mark, Chap. 1. we read that John did baptize in the Deſart, preaching the Baptiſm of Repentance. In which Place we ſee baptizing go before, and preaching to follow after.

And alſo I will declare this Place of Matthew, exactly conſidered, to make for the Uſe of Baptiſm in Children; for St. Matthew hath it written in this wiſe, Matth. 28. All Power is given me (ſaith the Lord) in Heaven and Earth, therefore going forth MATHETEUSATE, that is, Diſciple ye, (as I may expreſs the Signification of the Word) that is, Make or gather to me Diſciples of all Nations. And following, he declareth the Way how they ſhould gather to him Diſciples out of all Nations, Baptizing them and teaching; by baptizing and teaching ye ſhall procure a Church to me. And both theſe aptly and briefly ſeverally he ſetteth forth, ſaying, Baptizing them in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt, teaching them to obſerve all Things whatſoever I have commanded you. Now then Baptiſm goeth before Doctrine.

But hereby I do not gather, that the Gentiles, who never heard any Thing before of God, and of the Son of God, and of the Holy Ghoſt, ought to be baptized, neither would they permit themſelves to be baptized before they knew to what End. But this I have declared to ſhew you upon how feeble Foundation the Anabaptiſts be grounded. And plainly it is not true which they imagine of this Text, that the Lord did only command ſuch to be baptized whom the Apoſtles had firſt of all taught. Neither here verily is ſignify'd who only be to be baptized, but he ſpeaketh of ſuch as be at perfect Age, and of the firſt Foundations of Faith, and of the Church to be planted among the Gentiles, which were as yet rude and ignorant of Religion.

In the firſt converting of Infidels, believing ought to go before baptizing: But where Faith is received, God's Grace and Sacraments go not by Age, but as well by Children of the Faithful received as the Fathers.

Such as be of Age may hear, believe and confeſs that which is preached and taught, but ſo cannot Infants; therefore we may juſtly collect, that he ſpeaketh here nothing of Infants or Children. But for all this they ought not to be excluded from Baptiſm.

It is a general Rule, He that doth not labour muſt not eat. But who is ſo barbarous that might think hereby, that Children ſhould be famiſhed?

The Lord ſent his Apoſtles at the Beginning of his ſetting up of his true Religion unto all Nations, unto ſuch as were both ignorant of God, and were out of the Covenant of God; and truly ſuch Perſons it behoved not firſt to be baptized, and afterward taught; but firſt to be taught, and after baptized. If at this Day we ſhould go to the Turks to convert them to the Faith of Chriſt, verily firſt we ought to teach them, and afterwards baptize ſuch as would yield to be the Servants of Chriſt. Likewiſe the Lord himſelf in Time paſt did, when firſt he renewed the Covenant with Abraham, and ordained Circumciſion to be a Seal of the Covenant after that Abraham was circumciſed. But he, when he perceived the Infants alſo to pertain to the Covenant, and that Circumciſion was the ſealing up of the Covenant, did not only circumciſe Iſhmael his Son, that was thirteen Years of Age, but all other Infants that were born in his Houſe, among whom we reckon Iſaac.

Even ſo faithful People who were converted from heathen Idolatry by the preaching of the Goſpel, and confeſſing the Faith, were baptized; when they underſtood their Children to be counted among the People of God, and that Baptiſm was the Token of the People of God, they procured alſo their Children to be baptized. Therefore, as it is written, Abraham circumciſed all the Male Children of his Houſe. In like Manner we read in the Acts and Writings of the Apoſtles, that after the Maſter of Houſe was turned to the Faith, all the whole Houſe was baptized. And as concerning thoſe which of old Time were compelled to confeſs their Faith before they received Baptiſm, which were called Catechumeni, they were ſuch as our Fore-fathers came from the Gentiles into the Church, who being yet rude of Faith, they did inſtruct in the Principles of their Belief, and afterward they did baptize them; but the ſame ancient Fathers notwithſtanding did baptize the Children of faithful Men, as I have already partly declared.

Why Children of chriſtian Parents be received to Baptiſm.

A Catechumeni, is a Novice, or young Beginner in Chriſt's Faith.

And becauſe you do require a haſty Anſwer of your Letter of one that is but a dull Writer, I am here enforced to ceaſe particularly to go through your Letter in anſwering thereto, knowing that I have fully anſwered every Part thereof, in that I have already written, although not in ſuch Order as it had been meet, and as I purpoſed. But foraſmuch as I underſtand that you will be no contentious Man, neither in this Matter, neither in any other, contrary to the Judgment of Chriſt's primitive Church, which is the Body and Fulneſs of Chriſt, I deſire you in the entire Love of him, or rather Chriſt deſireth you by me (that your Joy may be perfect, whereto you are now called) to ſubmit your Judgment to that Church, and to be at Peace and Unity in the ſame; that the Coat of Chriſt which ought to be without Seam, but now alas, moſt miſerably is torn in Pieces by many dangerous Sects and damnable Opinions, may appear by you in no Part to have been rent, neither that any giddy Head in theſe Dog-days, might take an Enſample by you to diſſent from Chriſt's true Church: I beſeech thee, dear Brother in the Goſpel, follow the Steps of the Faith of the glorious Martyrs in the primitive Church, and of ſuch as at this Day follow the ſame; decline from them neither to the Right Hand nor to the Left. Then ſhall Death, be it never ſo bitter, be more ſweet than this Life; then ſhall Chriſt with all the heavenly Jeruſalem triumphantly embrace your Spirit with unſpeakable Gladneſs and Exaltation, who in this Earth was content to join your Spirit with their Spirits, according as it is commanded by the Word, that the Spirit of the Prophets ſhould be ſubject to the Prophets. One Thing ask with David ere you depart, and require the ſame, that you may dwell with a full Accord in his Houſe, for there is Glory and Worſhip: And ſo with Simeon in the Temple embracing Chriſt, depart in Peace: To which Peace Chriſt bring both you and me, and all our loving Brethren that love God in the Unity of Faith, by ſuch Ways as ſhall pleaſe him, to his Glory. Let the bitter Paſſion of Chriſt, which he ſuffered for your ſake, and the horrible Torments which the godly Martyrs of Chriſt have endured before us, and alſo the ineſtimable Reward of your Life to come, which is hidden yet a little while from you with Chriſt, ſtrengthen, comfort, and encourage you to the End of that glorious Race which you are in, Amen.

Note, The Perſon to whom this Letter was written was converted, and afterwards died in the ſame Faith as this Letter did perſuade him.

Your Yoke-follow in Captivity for the Verity of Chriſt's Goſpel, to live and die with you in the Unity of Faith.

John Philpot.

There were many other Letters written by Mr. Philpot to divers Perſons, but theſe I have inſerted as being the principal.

The Hiſtory of Seven Martyrs ſuffering together at London, for the Teſtimony of Chriſt's Goſpel.

THE catholick Prelates being as yet not ſatisfy'd with this their one Year's murdering of the Reverend, Learned, and principal Members of the Chriſt's Church (whereof now there were but very few, who either were not cruelly conſumed by Fire, or elſe, to aviod their popiſh Rage, compelled to flee their natural Country) continued ſtill this next Year alſo, which was Anno 1556, in no leſs Cruelty towards the poor, ſimple, and inferior Sort of People (I mean in Degree, tho' God be praiſed, not in Steadfaſtneſs) having yet ſometimes amongſt them ſuch as were both learned and of good Eſtimation, as in Continuance of this Story ſhall appear.

Wherefore (as the firſt Fruits thereof) to begin this Year withal, about the 27th Day of January were burned in Smithfield at London theſe ſeven Perſons hereafter following, to wit:

Thomas Whittle, Prieſt. Bartlet Green, Gentleman. John Tudſon, Artificer. John Went, Artificer. Thomas Browne. Iſabel Foſter, Wife. Joan Warne, alias Laſhford, Maid.

All which ſeven, as they were burned together in one Fire, ſo were they likewiſe all upon one Sort and one Form of Articles condemned in one Day. Howbeit, foraſmuch as the Gifts of God in them were diverſe (ſome more abounding in Knowledge than others) their Dealings withal were alſo diverſe, as ſhall be more plainly perceived in diſcourſing of their ſeveral Proceſſes. And therefore for the better Underſtanding hereof, I will firſt (paſſing over their private Articles and Examinations had at ſundry Times in the Biſhop's Houſe,) ſet forth their general Examinations in the publick Conſiſtory, upon the Biſhop's Articles there adminiſtred unto them, with their Anſwers alſo to the ſame, according as they all agreed Anno 1555. agreed after one Manner and Sort together, as here by the Words both of the Articles and their Anſwers underwritten, may appear.

The Form and Words of Biſhop Bonner's Articles, adminiſtred to the ſeven Perſons abovementioned in his Conſiſtory.

AND firſt to behold the Manner of Speech in theſe Biſhops, ſitting in their Majeſty, to terrify the Ears of the Simple withal, let us hear the pontifical Phraſe of this Biſhop, beginning in this Sort.

The within written Articles, and every of them, and every Part and Parcel of them, we Edmund, by the Permiſſion of God, Biſhop of London, do object and adminiſter to thee Thomas Whittle, &c. of our meer Office, for thy Soul's Health, and for the Reformation of thine Offences and Miſdemeanours, admoniſhing thee in the Virtue of Obedience, and under the Pains of both Cenſures of the Church, and alſo of other Pains of the Law, to anſwer fully, plainly, and truly to all the ſame.

FIRST, that thou N. haſt firmly, ſtedfaſtly, and conſtantly believed in Times paſt, and ſo doſt now believe at this preſent, that there is here in Earth a catholick Church, in which catholick Church the Faith and Religion of Chriſt is truly profeſſed, allowed, received, kept and retained by all faithful and true Chriſtian People.

Seven Sacraments. 2. Item, That thou the ſaid N. in Times paſt haſt alſo believed, and ſo doſt believe at this preſent, that there are in the catholick Church ſeven Sacraments, inſtituted and ordained by God, and by the Conſent of the holy Church allowed, approved, received, kept and retained.

The Godfathers Faith. 3. Item, That thou the ſaid N. waſt in Times paſt baptized in the Faith of the ſaid catholick Church, profeſſing by thy Godfathers and Godmother, the Faith and Religion of Chriſt and the Obſervation thereof, renouncing there the Devil and all his Pomps and Works, and waſt by the ſaid Sacrament of Baptiſm incorporated to the catholick Church, and made a faithful Member thereof.

4. Item, That thou the ſaid N. coming to the Age of fourteen Years, and ſo to the Age of Diſcretion, didſt not depart from the ſaid Profeſſion and Faith, nor didſt miſlike any Part of the ſame Faith or Doings, but didſt like a faithful Chriſtian Perſon abide and continue in all the ſame for the Space of certain Years, ratifying and confirming all the ſame.

Sacrifice of the Maſs. 5. Item, That thou the ſaid N. notwithſtanding the Premiſſes, haſt of late, that is to ſay, within theſe two Years laſt paſt, within the City and Dioceſe of London, ſwerved at the leaſt Way from ſome Part of the ſaid catholick Faith and Religion; and amongſt other Things thou haſt miſliked and earneſtly ſpoken againſt the Sacrifice of the Maſs, the Sacrament of the Altar, and the Unity of the Church, railing and maligning the Authority of the See of Rome, and the Faith obſerved in the ſame..

6. Item, That thou the ſaid N. haſt hereto- See of fore refuſed, and doſt refuſe at this preſent to Rome. be reconciled again to the Unity of the Church, not acknowledging and confeſſing the Authority of the ſaid See of Rome to be lawful.

7. Item, That thou the ſaid N. miſliking the Saerifice of the Maſs, and the Sacrament of the Altar, haſt refuſed to come to thy Pariſh-Church to hear Maſs, and to receive the ſaid Sacrament, and haſt alſo expreſly ſaid, that in the ſaid Sacrament of the Altar there is not the very Body and Blood of our Saviour Chriſt, really, ſubſtantially and truly, but haſt affirmed expreſly, that the Maſs is Idolatry and Abomination, and that in the Sacrament of the Altar there is none other Subſtance but only material Bread and material Wine, The Sawhich are Tokens of Chriſt's Body and Blood crament only, and that the Subſtance of Chriſt's Body of the and Blood is in no wiſe in the ſaid Sacrament Altar. of the Altar.

8. Item, That thou the ſaid N. being convened before certain Judges or Commiſſioners, for thy Diſorder herein, and being found obſtinate, wilful and heady, waſt by their Commandment ſent unto me and my Priſon, to be examined by me, and Proceſs to be made againſt thee for thy Offence herein.

9. Item, That all and ſingular the Premiſſes have been, and be true and manifeſt, and thy ſelf not only infamed and ſuſpected thereof, but alſo culpable therein; and by Reaſon of the ſame, thou waſt and art of the Juriſdiction of me Edmund Biſhop of London, and before me, according to the Order of the eccleſiaſtical Laws, are to be convened, and alſo by me to be puniſhed and reformed.

Their Anſwers to the foregoing Articles.

TO the firſt Article they altogether agreed, affirming the ſame to be true: John Tudſon and Thomas Brown, further adding, that the Church of England, as it was at that preſent uſed, was no Part of the true catholick Church.

To the ſecond Article they anſwered, that they acknowledged but only two Sacraments in Chriſt's catholick Church, that is to ſay, Baptiſm, and the Supper of the Lord; John Went, and Tudſon affirmed, that the Sacrament of the Altar, as it was then uſed, was an Idol, and no Sacrament at all.

To the third Article they all agreed, and confeſſed it to be true, that they were baptized in the Faith of Chriſt, and the Church then taught; and afterwards during the Time of King Edward the Sixth, they hearing the Goſpel preached, and the Truth opened, followed the Order of the Religion and Doctrine then uſed and ſet forth in the Reign of the ſaid King Edward.

To the fourth Article they alſo agreed: But John Went added, that about ſeven Years paſt, he then being about twenty Years of Age, began to miſlike certain Things uſed in the Church of England, as the Adminiſtration of the Sacrament of the Altar; likewiſe all the Ceremonies of the ſaid Church, and did likewiſe at that preſent Time miſlike the ſame as they were uſed, although his Godfathers and Godmother promiſed for him the contrary.

John

John Tudſon alſo ſaid, that when he came to the Years of Diſcretion, that is, about nine Years paſt, being about eighteen Years of Age, he did miſlike the Doctrine and Religion then taught and ſet forth in the Church of England, except in the Time of King Edward, in whoſe Reign the Goſpel was truly ſet forth: And he further ſaid, that the Doctrine ſet forth in the Queen's Reign was not agreeable to God's Word, nor yet to the true catholick Church that Chriſt ſpeaketh of, &c.

The Faith which they were baptized in, was in the Name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghoſt, believing the Articles of the Creed, with Promiſe made to renounce the Devil, the Fleſh, and the World, of which Faith their Godfathers and Godmothers were Sureties for them, and in this Faith they continue ſtill.

Iſabel Foſter, with others granted, adding likewiſe, and ſaying to the ſaid four Articles, that ſhe continued in the ſame Faith and Religion which ſhe was baptized in, after ſhe came to the Years of Diſcretion as other common People did; howbeit, blindly and without Knowledge, till the Reign of King Edward the Sixth: At which Time ſhe hearing the Goſpel truly preached and opened to the People, received thereupon the Faith and Religion then taught and ſet forth, &c.

To the fifth Article, they anſwered and agreed the ſame to be true, according to the Contents thereof: Thomas Whittle adding moreover, that he had ſwerved and gone away, and not in whole but in part, not from the whole catholick Church, but from the Church of Rome, in ſpeaking againſt the Maſs, the Sacrifice thereof, and the See of Rome.

Joan Laſhford, alias Joan Warn, granted with the other the ſaid Article, added moreover, that ſhe never hitherto ſwerved or went away, nor yet doth, from any Part of Chriſt's catholick Faith and Religion? But ſaid, that from the Time ſhe was eleven Years of Age, ſhe had miſliked the Sacrifice of the Maſs, the Sacrament of the Altar, and the Authority of the See of Rome, with the Doctrine thereof, becauſe they be againſt Chriſt's catholick Church, and the right Faith of the ſame.

As for other Ceremonies and Abuſes of the Church, they never made any Promiſe in their Baptiſm.

Bartlet Green anſwering to this Article, ſaid, that he ſwerved not from the catholick Faith, but only from the Church of Rome, &c.

To the ſixth Article they anſwered, and confeſſed the ſame to be true, rendering the Cauſe thereof, becauſe (ſay they) the ſame Church and Doctrine therein ſet forth and taught, diſagreeth from the Unity of Chriſt's Word, and the true catholick Faith, &c.

To ſwerve from the Corruptions of the See of Rome, and Sacrifice of the Maſs, is not to go from the catholick Church of Chriſt.

Whereunto Bartlet Green anſwered, that he was contented to be reconciled to the Unity of Chriſt's catholick Church, but not of the Church of Rome.

In like Manner added alſo John Went.

To the ſeventh Article they anſwered, and confeſſed the Contents thereof to be true, giving withal the Reaſon and Cauſe of this their ſo doing, for that the Maſs with the Sacrament thereof, as it was then uſed and ſet forth in the Church of England, was diſſonant to the Word and Teaching of the People, &c.

John Went furthermore ſaid, as concerning the Maſs, that he believeth no leſs, but the Maſs which he calleth, the Supper of the Lord, as it is now uſed in the Realm of England, is naught, full of Idolatry, and againſt God's Word ſo far as he ſeeth it; howbeit, he ſaith that ſince the Queen's Coronation by Chance he hath been preſent where the Maſs hath been ſaid, whereof he is ſorry.

Iſabel Foſter alſo anſwering to the ſaid Articles, with the other before, confeſſed moreover, that ſince Queen Mary's Reign ſhe had not heard Maſs, nor received the Sacrament, but had refuſed to be in the Place where it was adminiſtred: For ſhe knew no ſuch Sacrament to be. And being demanded of her Belief in the ſame, ſhe ſaid, that there was but one only material Bread, and material Wine, and not the real Subſtance of the Body of Chriſt in the ſame Sacrament: For ſo ſhe had been taught to believe by the Preachers in the Time of King Edward, whom ſhe believed to have preached the Truth in that Behalf. Anno 1555.

To the eighth Article they grant the ſame, and the Contents thereof to be ſo.

Thomas Whittle adding and affirming, that the Lord Chancellor that then was, ſent him up to the Biſhop there preſent.

Bartlet Green added, that he was ſent up to the ſaid Biſhop, but for no Offence herein articulate.

John Went ſaid, that Dr. Story, Queen Mary's Commiſſioner, examined him upon the Sacrament, and becauſe he denied the real Preſence, he preſented this Examinate to the Biſhop.

John Tudſon likewiſe examined by Mr. Cholmley and Dr. Story upon the ſame Matters, and for not coming to the Church, and accuſed by the ſame, becauſe he would not agree to them, was ſent to the Biſhop.

Thomas Brown alſo ſaid, that he for not coming to the Church of St. Brides, was brought by the Conſtable to the Biſhop, &c.

Joan Warne confeſſed, that ſhe was ſent by Dr. Story to the Biſhop of London, about twelve Weeks ago, ſince which Time ſhe hath continued with the ſaid Biſhop. Of this Joan Warne read before.

To the ninth Article they confeſs and ſay, that as they believe the Premiſſes before by them confeſſed to be true, ſo they deny not the ſame to be manifeſt, and that they be of the Juriſdiction of London.

And thus having expreſſed their Articles, with their Anſwers jointly made unto the ſame, it remaineth further more fully to diſcourſe the Handling of all the ſeven aforeſaid Martyrs ſeverally and particularly by themſelves, firſt beginning with Thomas Whittle.

1. Thomas Whittle, Martyr.

MEntion was made before, in Mr. Philpot's Story, of a married Prieſt, whom he found in Biſhop Bonner's Coal-houſe, at his firſt coming thither, in Heavineſs of Mind and great Sorrow, for recanting the Doctrine which he had taught in King Edward's Days, whoſe Name was Thomas Whittle of Eſſex; and thus lieth his Story. This Thomas Whittle, after he had been expulſed from the Place in Eſſex where he ſerved, went abroad where he might, now here and there, as Occaſion offered, preaching and ſowing the Goſpel of Chriſt. At length being apprehended by one Edmund Alablaſter, in hope of Reward and Promotion, which he miſerably gaped after, he was brought firſt as Priſoner before the Biſhop of Wincheſter, who then was lately fallen ſick of his Diſeaſe, whereof not long after he died moſt ſtrangely. But the Apprehender for his proferred Service was highly checked by the Biſhop, asking if there were no Man unto whom he might bring ſuch Raſcals, but to him. Hence (quoth he) out of my Sight thou Varlet, what doſt thou trouble me with ſuch Matters. The greedy Cormorant being thus defeated of his deſired Prey, yet thinking to ſeek and hunt further,

Anno 1556. carried his Priſoner to the Biſhop of London, with whom what ill Uſage this Whittle had, and how he was by the Biſhop beaten and buffeted about the Face, by this his own Narration in a Letter ſent to his Friend, manifeſtly may appear.

Upon Thurſday which was the tenth of January, the Biſhop of London ſent for me Thomas Whittle, Miniſter, out of the Porter's Lodge, where I had been all Night, lying upon the Earth on a little low Bed, where I had as painful a Night of Sickneſs as ever I had. And when I came before him, he talked with me many Things of the Sacrament ſo groſly, as is not worthy to be rehearſed. And amongſt other Things, he asked me if I would have come to Maſs that Morning if he had ſent for me. Whereunto I anſwered, that I would have come to him at his Commandment, but to your Maſs (ſaid I) I have ſmall Affection. At which Anſwer he was ſore diſpleaſed, and ſaid, I ſhould be fed with Bread and Water. And as I followed him through the great Hall, he turned back, and beat me with his Fiſt, firſt on the one Cheek, and then on the other, as the Sign of my beating did many Days appear. And then he led me into a little Salt-houſe, where I had neither Straw nor Bed, but lay two Nights on a Table, and ſlept ſoundly, I thank God.

Tho. Whittle beaten on the Face by Bonner.

Then, upon the Friday next after, I was brought to my Lord, and he then gave me many fair Words, and ſaid he would be good to me. And ſo he going to Fulham, committed me to Dr. Harpsfield, that he and I that Afternoon ſhould commune together, and draw out certain Articles, whereunto if I would ſubſcribe, I ſhould be diſmiſſed. But Dr. Harpsfield ſent not for me till Night, and then perſwaded me very much to forſake my Opinions. I anſwered, I held nothing but the Truth, and therefore I could not ſo lightly turn therefrom. So I thought I ſhould at that Time have had no more ado: But he had made a certain Bill, which the Regiſter pulled out of his Boſom, and read it. The Bill indeed was very eaſily made, and therefore more dangerous: For the Effect thereof was, to deteſt all Errors and Hereſies againſt the Sacrament of the Altar, and other Sacraments, and to believe the Faith of the catholick Church, and live accordingly.

The Copy of this Bill here mentioned, if it pleaſe the gentle Reader to peruſe, ſo as it came to our Hands, we have hereunto adjoined, written in their own Words, as followeth.

The Bill of Submiſſion, offered to Thomas Whittle to ſubſcribe.

I Thomas Whittle, Prieſt, of the Dioceſs of London, acknowledge and confeſs with my Mouth, agreeing with my Heart before you Reverend Father in God, Edmund Biſhop of London, my Ordinary, that I do deteſt and abhor all Manner of Hereſies and Errors againſt the Sacrament of the Altar, or any of the Sacraments of the Church, which Hereſies and Errors have heretofore been condemned in any wiſe by the catholick Church: And I do proteſt and declare by theſe Preſents, that I do both now hold, and alſo intend by God's Grace always hereafter to hold, obſerve and keep, in all Points the catholick Faith and Belief of Chriſt's Church, according as this Church of England, being a Member of the ſaid catholick Church doth now profeſs and keep, and in no wiſe to ſwerve, decline, or go from the ſaid Faith, during my natural Life, ſubmitting myſelf fully and wholly to you, Reverend Father, my ſaid Ordinary, in all Things concerning my Reformation and Amendment at all Times. In witneſs whereof I the ſaid Thomas Whittle, Prieſt, have hereunto ſubſcribed my Name, written, &c.

Whittle, through Infirmity ſubſcribed to the Bill, but his Conſcience ſoon compelled him to repent of the ſame.

To this Bill I did indeed ſet my Hand, being much deſired and counſelled ſo to do; and the Fleſh being always deſirous to have Liberty, I conſidered not thoroughly the Inconvenience that might come thereupon; and Reſpite I deſired to have had, but earneſtly they deſired me to ſubſcribe. Now when I had ſo done, I had little Joy thereof. For by and by my Mind and Conſcience told me by God's Word that I had done Evil, by ſuch a ſlight Means to ſhake off the ſweet Croſs of Chriſt: And yet it was not my ſeeking, as God he knoweth, but altogether came of them. O the crafty Subtilty of Satan in his Members! Let every Man that God ſhall deliver into their Hands, take good heed, and cleave faſt to Chriſt: For they will leave no Corner of his Conſcience unſought, but will attempt all guileful and ſubtle Means to corrupt him, to fall both from God and his Truth. But yet let no Man deſpair of God's Help, for Peter did fall and riſe again. And David ſaith, A righteous Man though he fall, he ſhall not be caſt away: For the Lord upholdeth him with his Hand. For I for my Part have felt my Infirmities, and yet have I found God's preſent Help and Comfort in Time of Need, I thank him therefore.

Comfort againſt Deſpair.

The Night after I had ſubſcribed I was ſore grieved, and for Sorrow of Conſcience could not ſleep. For in the Deliverance of my Body out of Bonds, which I might have had, I could find no Joy nor Comfort, but ſtill was in my Conſcience tormented more and more, being aſſured by God's Spirit and his Word, that I through evil Council and Advice had done amiſs. And both with Diſquietneſs of Mind, and with my other cruel handling, I was ſickly, lying upon the Ground when the Keeper came, and ſo I deſired him to pray Dr. Harpsfield to come to me, and ſo he did.

And when he came, and the Regiſter with him, I told him that I was not well at Eaſe, but eſpecially I told him I was grieved very much in my Conſcience and Mind becauſe I had ſubſcribed. And I ſaid, that my Conſcience had ſo accuſed me, through the juſt Judgment of God and his Word, that I had felt Hell in my Conſcience, and Satan ready to devour me: And therefore I pray you Mr. Harpsfield (ſaid I) let me have the Bill again, for I will not ſtand to it. So he gently commanded it to be fetched, and gave it me, and ſuffered me to put out my Name, whereof I was right glad when I had ſo done, although Death ſhould follow. And hereby I had Experience of God's Providence and Mercy towards me, who trieth his People, and ſuffereth them to fall, but not to be loſt: For in the midſt of this Temptation and Trouble, he gave me warning of my Deed, and alſo delivered me, his Name be praiſed for evermore, Amen.

Peace of Conſcience is a great Treaſure.

Neither Devil nor cruel Tyrant can pluck any of Chriſt's Sheep out of his Hand. Of which Flock of Chriſt's Sheep I truſt undoubtedly I am one by Means of his Death and Blood-ſhedding, which ſhall at the laſt Day ſtand at his Right Hand, and receive with others his bleſſed Benediction. And now being condemned to die, my Conſcience and Mind I praiſe God is quiet in Chriſt, and I by his Grace am very willing and content to give over this Body to the Death, for the Teſtimony of his Truth and pure Religion, againſt Antichriſt and all his falſe Religion and Doctrine. They that report otherwiſe of me, ſpeak not truly. And as for Fountain I ſaw him not all this while.

By me Thomas Whittle, Miniſter.

Concerning the troubled Mind of this good Man, and tearing his Name out of the Bill, here followeth the Report of the ſame, written in the Letters both of the ſaid Mr. Harpſfield, and alſo of Johnſon the Regiſter, being then preſent thereat, and Reporters of the ſame unto the Biſhop, as in their Letters hereto annexed is to be ſeen.

Mr. Harpsfield's Letter to Bonner Biſhop of London, concerning Mr. Whittle.

PLeaſeth your good Lordſhip to underſtand, that Yeſterday I dined with my Lord of Exeter, who ſoon after my firſt coming to him, asked me what News? I anſwered, none but good that I had heard. No, ſaid he; why, it is a Rumour in the City, that to Morrow the Queen's Grace would take her Journey towards the King. I anſwered, that I thought it not to be any whit true, but an Invention of Hereticks: Yea, and further, ſaid he, there is a Report made Abroad of my Lord your Maſter, that he is in Diſcomfort, and therefore will ſuffer no Man to come unto him. When I heard thus much, I began to laugh, and to declare how untrue this Report was: So that my Lord (who before was very ſad) afterward knowing the Truth, rejoyced much to hear that all was well with your Lordſhip, and deſired me to have his hearty Commendations to your Lordſhip.

One of my Lord of Pembroke's Retinue, a very handſome Man, and as far as I can yet learn, a Catholick, is a Suter to your Lordſhip to have Licenſe to erect a School: And the Order which he intendeth to uſe, is contained in this printed Paper, which I ſend here incloſed to your Lordſhip. I would be glad for my Lord of Pembroke's ſake, that he underſtood, that upon my Motion your Lordſhip were content he ſhould teach as he intendeth. Mr. Johnſon and I have travelled with the Prieſt, and he hath ſubſcribed his Name to this Draught which is here incloſed, and hath promiſed he will ſtand to the ſame before your Lordſhip.

He meaneth of the return again of Thomas Whittle.

When I had written thus much, ſuddenly came Tidings to me, that he was turned the other Side of Jordan. Cluney coming to the Prieſt, found him lying proſtrate, and groaning as though he ſhould have died forthwith. Then Cluney took him up, and ſet him upon a Stool, and came to me, and told me of this Revel. It happened that Mr. Johnſon was with me, and we went to this fond Heretick, and found him lying all along, holding his Hands up, and looking hypocritically towards Heaven. I cauſed Thomas More and Cluney to ſet him on the Stool, and with much ado at length he told me, that Satan had been with him in the Night, and told him that he was damned, and weeping he pray'd Mr. Johnſon and me to ſee the Bill whereunto he ſubſcribed, and when he ſaw it, he tore out his Name, to wit, out of the Book of the Living. Me thinketh by him he will needs burn a Faggot, neither is there any other likelihood of the young Woman. I have enquired of the two Perſons who ſue to have a Licenſe to eat Fleſh. And the Woman of Chriſt-church is indeed very much diſeaſed, and hath been long diſeaſed, and ſhe and her Husband both Catholick. Of the other yet I can learn nothing. Thus Jeſus evermore preſerve your good Lordſhip, and my Miſtreſs your Lordſhip's Siſter, with all yours.

Anno 1556.

This young Woman was Joan Warne, otherwiſe named Joan Laſſford, who was burnt with the ſaid Mr. Whittle.

This preſent Saturday.

Your Lordſhip's moſt bounden Servant,

Nich. Harpsfield.

Another Letter of Robert Johnſon, Regiſter, touching Thomas Whittle, written to Bonner Biſhop of London.

MY bounden Duty premiſed, pleaſeth your Lordſhip to underſtand, that this laſt Friday in the Afternoon, Mr. Archdeacon of London did diligently travel with Sir Thomas Whittle, Prieſt. I being preſent, and perceiving his Conformity, as outwardly appeared, deviſed this Submiſſion, and he being content therewith did ſubſcribe the ſame. But now this Saturday Morning Mr. Archdeacon and I, upon Cluney's Report, declaring that he feigned himſelf to be diſtracted of his Senſes, went unto him, to whom he declared, that Satan in the Night-time appeared unto him, and ſaid that he was damned, for that he had done againſt his Conſcience in ſubſcribing to the ſaid Submiſſion, with other like Words. And then Mr. Archdeacon, at his earneſt Requeſt, delivered unto him the Submiſſion. And thereupon the ſaid Whittle did tear out his Subſcription, made in the Foot of the ſame, as your Lordſhip ſhall perceive by the Submiſſion ſent now unto your Lordſhip by Mr. Archdeacon; wherewith the ſaid Whittle was ſomewhat quieted.

And as touching Joan Laſhford, Mr. Archdeacon did likewiſe travel with her, and ſhewing her Sir Thomas Whittle's Submiſſion, which I read unto her twice, demanded if ſhe could be content to make the like Submiſſion, and ſhe deſired Reſpite until this Morning. And being now immediately demanded, in like wiſe ſaith, that ſhe will not make any Thing in writing, nor put any Sign thereunto. Mr. Archdeacon and I intend this Afternoon to examine the ſaid Sir Thomas upon Articles: For as yet there doth appear nothing in writing againſt him, as knoweth Almighty God, who preſerve your good Lordſhip in Proſperity with Honour long to endure.

From London this Saturday.

By your Lordſhip's daily Beadſman, and bounden Servant,

Robert Johnſon.

The Condemnation and Martyrdom of Mr. Thomas Whittle.

AT his laſt Examination before the Biſhop upon the 14th Day of January, 1556, Biſhop Bonner with others ſitting in his Conſiſtory in the Afternoon, firſt called forth Thomas Whittle, with whom he began in Effect as followeth: Becauſe ye be a Prieſt (ſaid he)

as

Anno 1555. as I and other Biſhops here be, and did receive the Order of Prieſthood after the Right and Form of the catholick Church, ye ſhall not think but I will adminiſter Juſtice as well unto you as unto others. And then the ſaid Bonner in further Communication did charge him, that where in Times paſt he had ſaid Maſs according to the Order then uſed, the ſame Whittle now of late had ſpoken and railed againſt the ſame, ſaying that it was Idolatry and Abomination. Whereunto Thomas Whittle anſwering again ſaid, That at ſuch Time as he ſo ſaid Maſs, he was then ignorant, &c. adding moreover, that the Elevation of the Sacrament at the Maſs, giveth Occaſion of Idolatry to them that be ignorant and unlearned.

Biſhop Bonner's Argument, He was baptized in Faith of the catholick Church: Ergo, he was baptized in the Faith of Rome.

After this the Biſhop making haſte to the Articles (which in all his Examinations he ever harped upon) came to this Article, That thou waſt in Times paſt baptized in the Faith of the catholick Church.

To this the ſaid Whittle inferred again, I was baptized in the Faith of the catholick Church, although I did forſake the Church of Rome. And ye, my Lord, do call theſe Hereſies that be no Hereſies, and do charge me therewith as Hereſies, and ye ground yourſelf upon that Religion which is not agreeable to God's Word, &c.

Then the ſaid Thomas Whittle was again admoniſhed, and with Perſuaſions intreated by the Biſhop; who becauſe he would not agree unto the ſame, the Biſhop forthwith proceeded firſt to his Degradation. The Order and Manner of which their Popiſh and moſt vain Degradation, may be ſeen before in the Story Biſhop Hooper.

Mr. Whittle degraded.

Then Whittle in the midſt of the Ceremonies when he ſaw them ſo buſy in degrading him, ſaid unto them, Paul and Titus had not ſo much to do with their Prieſts and Biſhops. And farther, ſpeaking to the Biſhop, ſaid unto him, My Lord, your Religion ſtandeth moſt with the Church of Rome, and not with the catholick Church of Chriſt.

The Biſhop after this, according to his accuſtomed formal Proceedings, tried him yet again with Words rather than with ſubſtantial Arguments, to conform him to his Religion. Who then denying ſo to do, ſaid, As for your Religion, I cannot be perſuaded that it is according to God's Word.

The Biſhop then asked what Fault he found in the Adminiſtration of the Sacrament of the Altar.

Whittle anſwered and ſaid, It is not uſed according to Chriſt's Inſtitution, in that it is privately and not openly done. And alſo becauſe it is adminiſtred but in one Kind to the Lay-people, which is againſt Chriſt's Ordinance. Farther, Chriſt commanded it not to be elevated nor adored: For the Adoration and Elevation cannot be approved by Scripture.

Well, quoth Bonner, my Lords here and other learned Men have ſhewed great Learning for thy Converſion, wherefore if thou wilt yet return to the Faith and Religion of the catholick Church, I will receive thee thereunto, and not commit thee to the Secular Power, &c. To make ſhort, Whittle, ſtrengthened with the Grace of the Lord, ſtood ſtrong and unmoveable in what he had affirmed. Wherefore the Sentence being read, the next Day following he was committed to the Secular Power, and ſo in few Days after brought to the Fire with the other ſix above named, ſealing up the Teſtimony of his Doctrine with his Blood, which he willingly and chearfully gave for Witneſs of the Truth.

A Letter of Thomas Whittle to John Careleſs, Priſoner in the King's-Bench.

THE Peace of God in Chriſt be with you continually, dearly beloved Brother in Chriſt, with the Aſſiſtance of God's Grace and Holy Spirit, to the working and performing of thoſe Things which may comfort and edify his Church (as ye daily do) to the Glory of his Name, and the Increaſe of your Joy and Solace of Soul in this Life, and alſo your Reward in Heaven with Chriſt our Captain, whoſe faithful Soldier ye are, in the Life to come, Amen.

I have greatly rejoyced (my dear Heart) with Thanks to God for you, ſince I have heard of your Faith and Love which you bear towards God and his Saints, with a moſt godly ardent Zeal to the Virtue of Chriſt's Doctrine and Religion, which I have heard by the Report of many, but eſpecially by the declaring of that valiant Captain in Chriſt's Church, that ſtout Champion in God's Cauſe, that Spectacle to the World, I mean our good Brother Philpot, who now lieth under the Altar, and ſweetly enjoyeth the promiſed Reward. And eſpecially I and my condemned Fellows give Thanks to God for your loving and comfortable Letter in the Deepneſs of our Trouble (after the Fleſh) ſent unto us to the Conſolation of us all, but eſpecially to me moſt ſinful Miſer on mine own Behalf, but happy, I hope through God's loving Kindneſs in Chriſt ſhewed unto me; and who ſuffered me to faint and fail through human Infirmity, by the working of the Arch-enemy in his ſworn Soldiers the Biſhops and Prieſts. In whom ſo lively appeareth the very Viſage and Shape of Satan, that a Man (if it were not prejudice to God's Word) might well affirm them to be Devils incarnate, as by Experience do-ſpeak. Wherefore, who ſo ſhall for conſcience Matters come in their Hands, had need of the Wilineſs of the Serpent to ſave his Head, though it be with the Wounding of his Body, and to take diligent heed how he conſenteth to their wicked Writings, or ſetteth his Hand to their Conveyances.

So did they aſſault me and craftily tempt me to their wicked Ways, or at leaſt to a Denial of my Faith and true Opinions, though it were but by Colour and Diſſimulation. And (alas) ſomething they did prevail. Not that I did any Thing at all like their Opinions and falſe papiſtical Religion, or elſe doubted of the Truth wherein I ſtand, but only the Infirmity of the Fleſh beguiled me, deſiring Liberty by an unlawful Means; God lay it not to my Charge at that Day, and ſo I heartily deſire you to pray. Howbeit, uncertain I am whether more Profit came thereby: Profit to me, in that God ſuffered Satan to buffet me by his aforeſaid Miniſter of Michief, ſhewing me mine Infirmity, that I ſhould not boaſt nor rejoyce in myſelf, but only in the Lord; who when he had led me to Hell in my Conſcience through the Reſpect of his fearful Judgments againſt me for my Fearfulneſs, Miſtruſt, and crafty cloaking in ſuch ſpiritual and weighty Matters, yet he brought me from thence again to the magnifying of his Name, ſuſpecting of Fleſh and Blood, and Conſolation of mine own Soul, or elſe that I might feel Diſprofit in offending the Congregation of God, which peradventure will rather adjudge my Fall to come of Doubtfulneſs in my Doctrine and Religion, than of human Imbecility.

The Burden of a troubled Conſcience.

Well, of the importune Burden of a troubled Conſcience for denying or diſſembling the known Verity, I by Experience could ſay very much more, which perhaps I may declare by writing, to the Warning of others, if God grant Time: For now am I and my Fellows ready to go hence even for Chriſt's Cauſe; God's Name be praiſed who hath hereto called us. Pray, I pray you, that we may end our Courſe with Joy, and at your appointed Time you ſhall come after. But as the Lord hath kept you, ſo will he preſerve your Life ſtill, to the Intent you ſhould labour (as you do) to appeaſe and convince theſe ungodly Contentions and Controverſies, which now do too much reign, brawling about Terms to no Edification. God is diſhonoured, the Church diſquieted, and Occaſion to ſpeak Evil of the Goſpel miniſtred to our Adverſaries. But ſuch is the Subtilty of Satan, that whom he cannot win with groſs Idolatry in open Religion, them he ſeeketh to corrupt and deceive in Opinions, in a private Profeſſion. But here I will abruptly leave, leſt with my rude and ſimple Vein I ſhould be tedious unto you, deſiring you, (my loving Brother) if it ſhall not ſeem grievous unto you, to write unto me and my Fellows, yet once again, if you have Leiſure, and we Time to the ſame.

Provide me Mr. Philpot's nine Examinations for a Friend of mine, and I ſhall pay you therefore by the Leave of Almighty God our heavenly Father, who correcteth all his dear Children in this World, that they ſhould not be damned with the World, and trieth the Faith of his Saints through many Tribulations, that being found conſtant to the End, he may crown his own Gifts in them, and in Heaven highly reward them; whither I truſt to go before, looking for you to follow (my faithful Friend) that we ſing perpetual Praiſe to our loving Lord God for Victory over Satan and Sin, won for us by Jeſus Chriſt God and Man, our only and ſufficient Saviour and Advocate, Amen.

Farewel, and pray in Faith.

Yours Thomas Whittle, Miniſter, and now condemned to die for the Goſpel's ſake, Jan. 21. 1556.

All my Fellows ſalute you. Salute all our faithful Brethren with you.

To my dear Friend and Brother John Went, and other his Fellow-Priſoners in Lollard's-Tower.

HE that preſerved Joſeph Priſoner in Egypt, fed Daniel in the Lion's Den, and delivered Paul, Peter, and the Apoſtles out of Priſon, Acts 16. vouchſafe of his Goodneſs to keep, feed, and deliver you my good Brother Went, with the other our fellow Soldiers your Priſon-fellows, as may be moſt to his Glory, to your Conſolation, and the Edification of his Church.

I cannot but praiſe God moſt earneſtly, when I 2 Theſſ. 1. hear of your Conſtancy in the Faith, and Joy in the Croſs of Chriſt, which you now bear and ſuffer together with many other good Members of Chriſt, which is a Token that by Chriſt you are counted worthy of the Kingdom of God, as St. Paul ſaith. And though the World counteth the Yoke and Croſs of Chriſt as a moſt pernicious and hurtful Thing, yet we which have taſted how friendly the Lord is, cannot but rejoyce in this Perſecution as touching ourſelves; inaſmuch as the Cauſe for which we ſuffer is the Lord's Cauſe and not ours, at whoſe Hand, if we endure to the End, we ſhall receive, through his liberal Promiſe in Chriſt, not only a great Reward in Heaven, but alſo the Kingdom of 1 Pet. 2. Heaven itſelf; and alſo in the mean Seaſon be ſure to be defended and cared for, ſo that we ſhall lack no neceſſary Things, neither a Hair of our Heads ſhall periſh without his Knowledge. O what is he that would miſtruſt, or not gladly ſerve ſo loving a Matth. 10. Father! O how unhappy are they that forſake him, and put their Truſt in Man! but how bleſſed are they that for his Love and for his holy Word's ſake, in theſe troubleſome Days do commit their Souls and Bodies into his Hands with well-doing, counting 1 Pet. 4. it greater Happineſs and Riches to ſuffer Rebuke with Chriſt and his Church, than to enjoy the Pleaſures of this Life for a little ſhort Seaſon? This Croſs that we now bear hath been common to all the Faithful from Abel hitherto, and ſhall be to the Heb. 11. End, becauſe the Devil having great Wrath againſt God and his Chriſt, cannot abide that he ſhould for his manifold Mercies be lauded and magnified, and Chriſt to be taken and believed upon for our only ſufficient Redeemer, Saviour and Advocate: And Rev, 11. therefore becauſe we will not deny Chriſt, nor diſſemble with our Faith, but only proteſt and profeſs the ſame before the World, he ſeeketh by all Means to ſtir up his wicked Members to perſecute and kill the Bodies of the true Chriſtians; as St. John ſaith, Rev. 2. The Devil ſhall caſt ſome of you into Priſon. And David ſaith, Pſal. 115. I believed, and therefore have I ſpoken, but I was ſore troubled. This notwithſtanding, go forward, dear Brethren, as ye have begun, to fight the Lord's Battle, conſidering Chriſt the Captain of your War, who will both fight for you, give you Victory, and alſo highly reward your Pains. Conſider to your Comfort the notable and chief Shepherds and Soldiers of Chriſt, which are gone before us in theſe Days, I mean thoſe learned and godly Biſhops, Doctors and other Miniſters of God's Word; whoſe Faith and Examples we that be Inferiors ought to follow; as St. Paul ſaith, Heb. 13. Remember them that have declared unto you the Word of God, the End of whoſe Converſation ſee that ye look upon, and follow their Faith. The Grace and Bleſſing of God, with the Miniſtry of his holy Angels be with you for ever, Amen. All my Priſon-fellows greet you. From the Coal-houſe this 4th of December.

Satan cannot abide Chriſt to be received for our only Saviour, and thereof ariſeth all this Perſecution.

Anno 1555.

By your poor Brother Thomas Whittle, an unworthy Miniſter of Chriſt, now his Priſoner for the Goſpel-ſake, Amen.

To my loving and faithful Brother J. Careleſs, Priſoner in the King's-Bench.

THE ſame Faith for which Abraham was accounted juſt, and Mary bleſſed, whereby alſo all juſt Men live, the Lord God our loving Father increaſe and eſtabliſh in you and me, to the obtaining of eternal Life in our alone and ſweet Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, Amen.

I cannot worthily and ſufficiently praiſe God (my heartily beloved Brother) for the Conſolation and Joy that I have received by reaſon of your loving Letters, repenting me much that I being ſo long ſo near you, did not enterpriſe to ſtir up Familiarity and Communication between us by writing, to mutual Conſolation in Chriſt. For what is there Anno 1556. upon Earth wherein to rejoyce (where all Things are tranſitory and vain, yea Man himſelf reſpecting this Life) but (as David ſaith, Pſal. 16.) The Saints that dwell upon the Earth, and ſuch as excel in Virtue? But here now I conſider, that if the Fellowſhip, Love, and Joy of faithful Men and Children of God being as we now be, in double Bondage, the Body within Clay Walls, and the Soul within theſe frail earthly Bodies, be ſo great and comfortable; how unſpeakable will theſe Joys be, when we ſhall be delivered from all Corruption into the glorious Liberty of the Sons of God? where we ſhall be preſent together continually in our gloriſy'd Bodies beholding the Face of our Father preſently (whom now we ſee but in the Glaſs of Faith) with his dear Son Chriſt our Redeemer and Brother, and the bleſſed Company of Angels, and all faithful ſaved Souls.

Oh the incomparable good Things, and heavenly Treaſures laid up for us in Heaven by Jeſus Chriſt! for the obtaining whereof, we ought to ſet Light by all temporal Grief and tranſitory Afflictions, ſo much the more, in that our good God is faithful, and will not ſuffer us to be tempted above our Strength, and that namely in the End of our Life, when the Tree where it falleth lieth ſtill, as the Preacher ſaith, Eccleſ. 11. For elſe before the End he ſuffereth his ſometimes to fall, but not finally to periſh: As Peter ſinked upon the Sea, but yet was not drowned; and ſinned grievouſly upon the Land through Infirmity denying his Maſter, but yet found Mercy: For the Righteous falleth oftentimes. And Chriſt's Holy Apoſtles are taught to ſay, Forgive us our Treſpaſſes. Yea though the Righteous fall, ſaith David, he ſhall not be caſt away, for the Lord upholdeth him with his Hand. O the bottomleſs Mercy of God towards us miſerable Sinners? He vouchſafe to plant in my Heart true Repentance and Faith, to the obtaining of the Remiſſion of all my Sins in the Mercies of God, and Merits of Chriſt his Son, and thereto I pray you ſay, Amen.

O my dearly beloved, it grieveth me to ſee the Spoil and Havock that Saul maketh with the Congregation of Chriſt: But what Remedy? This is God's Will and Ordinance, that his People ſhall here both be puniſhed in the Fleſh, and tried in their Faith: as it is written, Many are the Troubles of the Righteous, but the Lord delivereth them out of all; for by a ſtrait Path and narrow Door muſt we enter. Whither? Into the joyful Kingdom of Heaven: Therefore bleſſed are you and others that ſuffer Perſecution for Chriſt's ſake, for the Profeſſion of the ſame. Pray for me and my Fellows, good Brother, that we may fight a good Fight, that we may keep the Faith, and end our Courſe with joyful Gladneſs, for now the Time of our Deliverance is at Hand. The Lord guide, defend, and keep us and you, and all his People in our Journey, that we may ſafely through a ſhort Death, paſs to that long laſting Life.

Farewel my dear and loving Brother and Fellow-ſoldier in Chriſt; farewel, I ſay, in him: Who receive our Souls in Peace when they ſhall depart from theſe Tabernacles, and he grant us a joyful Reſurrection, and a merry Meeting at the laſt Day, and continual dwelling together in his eternal heavenly Kingdom, through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, Amen.

Yours with my poor Prayer; other Pleaſure can I do you none,

Thomas Whittle, Miniſter.

To my dear Brethren Mr. Filles and Cutbert.

MY dear and well beloved Brethren in Chriſt, Mr. Filles and Cutbert, I wiſh you all welfare of Soul and Body. Welfare to the Soul is Repentance of Sin, faithful Affiance in Chriſt Jeſus, and a godly Life. Welfare to the Body is the Health of the ſame, with all neceſſary Things for this Life. The Soul of Man is immortal, and therefore ought to be well kept, leſt Immortality to Joy ſhould turn to Immortality of Sorrow. As for the Body, be it never ſo well kept and much made of, yet ſhortly by Nature will it periſh and decay: But thoſe that are ingrafted and incorporated into Chriſt by true Faith, feeling the Motion of God's Holy Spirit as a Pledge of their Election and Inheritance, exciting and ſtirring them not only to ſeek heavenly Things, but alſo to hate Vice, and imbrace Virtue, will not only do theſe Things, but alſo if need require, will gladly take up their Croſs and follow their Captain, their King and Matth. 26. Mark 14. their Saviour Jeſus Chriſt (as his poor afflicted Church of England now doth) againſt that falſe Luke 22. and unchriſtian Doctrine and Religion now uſed, and eſpecially that blaſphemous Maſs, wherein Chriſt's Supper and holy Ordinance is altogether perverted and abuſed, contrary to his Inſtitution and to Paul's Proceedings: So that that which they have in their Maſs, is neither Sacrament of Chriſt, nor yet Sacrifice for Sin, as the Prieſts falſly pretend. It is a Sacrament, that is, as St. Auguſtine ſaith, 2 Cor. 11. a viſible Sign of inviſible Grace, when it is adminiſtred to the Communicants according to Chriſt's Example, and as it was of late Years in this Realm. And as for Sacrifice, there is none to be made now for Sin: Heb. 9. 10. For Chriſt with one Sacrifice hath perfected for ever thoſe that are ſanctified.

Beware of falſe Religion, and Mens vain Traditions, and ſerve God with Reverence and godly Fear, according to the Doctrine of his Goſpel, whereto cleave ye that ye may be bleſſed, though of wicked Men ye are hated and accurſed, Luke 11. Rather drink of the Cup of Chriſt with his Church, than of the Cup of that Roſe-coloured Whore of Babylon, which is full of Abominations, Rev. 18. Rather ſtrive ye to go to Heaven by the Path which is ſtrait to Fleſh and Blood, with the little Flock, than to go in the wide Way, following the Enticements of the World and the Fleſh, which leadeth to Damnation.

Like as Chriſt ſuffered in the Fleſh, ſaith St. Peter, 1 Pet. 4. 3. ſo arm ye yourſelves with the ſame Mind: For Chriſt ſuffered for us, leaving us Example to follow his Footſteps. Bleſſed are they that ſuffer for his Sake, great is their Reward in Heaven. He that overcometh (ſaith St. John, Rev. 2. 3.) ſhall eat of the Tree of Life; he ſhall have a Crown of Life, and not to be hurt of the ſecond Death: He ſhall be cloathed with white Array, and not be put out of the Book of Life; yea, I will confeſs his Name, ſaith Chriſt, before my Father and before his Angels, and he ſhall be a Pillar in the Houſe of God, and ſit with me on my Seat. And thus I bid you farewel, mine own Brethren and dear Fellows in Chriſt: Whoſe Grace and Peace be always with you, Amen.

This World I do forſake,
To Chriſt I me take,

And for his Goſpel ſake,
Patiently Death I take.
My Body to the Duſt,
Now to return it muſt:
My Soul I know full well,
With my God it ſhall dwell.

Thomas Whittle.

The Hiſtory of Mr. Bartlet Green.

AFTER the Martyrdom of Mr. Whittle, next followeth in Order to ſpeak of Bartlet Green, who the next Day after the aforeſaid Whittle, was likewiſe condemned. Mr. Green was of a good Houſe, and had ſuch Parents, as both favoured Learning, and were alſo willing to bring up this their Child in the ſame. Who after ſome Entrance in other inferior Schools, was by them ſent unto the Univerſity of Oxford; where through Exerciſe and diligent Study he ſo profited, that within ſhort Time he attained, as well to the Knowledge of ſundry profane Sciences, as alſo now in his laſt Years unto the godly Underſtanding of Divinity. Whereunto through Ignorance (in which he was trained up from his Youth) he was at the firſt an utter Enemy, until ſuch Time as God of his Mercy had opened his Eyes, by his often repairing unto the common Lectures of Peter Martyr, Reader of the Divinity Lecture in the ſame Univerſity, ſo that thereby (as by God's Inſtrument) he ſaw the true Light of Chriſt's Goſpel.

Mr. Green Student at Oxford.

Mr. Green converted by the Lectures of Peter Martyr.

Whereof when he had once taſted, it became unto him as the Fountain of Living-Water, that our Saviour Chriſt ſpake of to the Woman of Samaria, ſo as he never thirſted any more, but had a Well ſpringing unto everlaſting Life. Inſomuch as when he was called by his Friends from the Univerſity, and was placed in the Temple at London, there to attain to the Knowledge of the common Laws of the Realm, he yet continued ſtill in his former Study and earneſt Profeſſion of the Goſpel; wherein alſo he greatly profited. Howbeit (ſuch is the Frailty of our corrupt Nature, without the ſpecial Aſſiſtance of God's Holy Spirit) though the continual accompanying, and Fellowſhip of ſuch worldly (I will not ſay too much youthful) young Gentlemen, as are commonly in that and the like Houſes, he became by little and little a Compartner of their fond Follies and youthful Vanities, as well in his Apparel as alſo in Banquetings, and other ſuperfluous Exceſſes; which he afterward (being again called by God's merciful Correction) did ſore lament and bewail, as appeareth by his own Teſtimony, notified and left in a Book belonging to Mr. Bartram Calthorp, one of his Friends, written with his own Hand a little before his Death, in Manner as followeth:

Mr. Green Student in the Temple at London.

Two Things have very much troubled me whilſt I was in the Temple, Pride and Gluttony; which under the Colour of Glory and good Fellowſhip, drew me almoſt from God. Againſt both there is one Remedy, by earneſt Prayer, and without ceaſing. And foraſmuch as vain-glory is ſo ſubtle an Adverſary, that almoſt it woundeth deadly, ere ever a Man can perceive himſelf to be ſmitten, therefore we ought ſo much the rather by continual Prayer, to labour for Humbleneſs of Mind. Truly Gluttony beginneth under a charitable Pretence of mutual Love and Society, and hath in it moſt Uncharitableneſs. When we ſeek to refreſh our Bodies, that they may be the more apt to ſerve God, and perform our Duties towards our Neighbours, then ſtealeth it in as a privy Thief, and murdereth both Body and Soul, that now it is not apt to pray, or ſerve God, apt to ſtudy, or labour for our Neighbour. Let us therefore watch and be ſober: For our Adverſary the Devil walketh about like a roaring Lion, ſeeking whom he may devour. And remember what Solomon *ſaith, A patient Man is better than a ſtrong Warriour, and he that conquereth his own Stomach is better than he that conquereth Towns and Cities. Anno 1556.

Bartlet Green.

Agreement of Minds joining in Unity of Faith, and growing up in Charity, is true and ſtedfaſt Amity. Farewel (my Bartram) and remember me, that ever we may be like together. Farewel at Newgate, Jan. 20. 1556.

Set ſober Love againſt haſty Wrath.

Bartlet Green.

Thus we ſee the fatherly Kindneſs of our moſt gracious and merciful God, who never ſuffereth his Elect Children ſo to fall, that they lie ſtill in Security of Sin, but oftentimes quickeneth them up by ſome ſuch Means, as perhaps they think leaſt of, as he did here this his ſtray'd Sheep. And now therefore to return to our Hiſtory: For the better Maintenance of himſelf in theſe his Studies, and other his Affairs, he had a large Exhibition of his Grandfather, Mr. Dr. Bartlet, who during the Time of Green's Impriſonment made unto him large Offers of great Livings, if he would recant, and (forſaking the Truth and the Goſpel of Chriſt) come home again to the Church and Synagogue of Rome. But thoſe his Perſwaſions (the Lord be therefore praiſed) took ſmall Effect in his faithful Heart, as the Sequel did declare. He was a Man beloved of all Men (except the Papiſts, who love none that love the Truth) and ſo he well deſerved: For he was of a meek, humble, diſcreet, and moſt gentle Behaviour to all. Injurious he was to none, beneficial to many, eſpecially to thoſe who were of the Houſhold of Faith, as appeareth amongſt others, by his friendly dealing with Mr. Chriſtopher Goodman, being at that preſent a poor Exile beyond the Seas. With whom this Bartlet Green (as well for his toward Learning, as alſo for his ſober and godly Behaviour) had often Society in Oxford, in the Days of good King Edward: Who now, notwithſtanding his Friend's Miſery, and Baniſhment, he did not lightly forget; and that turned, as it happened (not without the Providence of Almighty God) to the great Grief of both; the one of Heart, for the Loſs of his Friend, and the other of Body, in ſuffering the cruel and murdering Rage of Papiſts.

Large Gifts offered Mr. Green by Dr. Bartlet to return to the Church of Rome.

The Cauſe hereof was a Letter which Green wrote unto the ſaid Goodman, containing as well the Report of certain Demands or Queſtions, which were caſt Abroad in London (as appeareth hereafter in a Letter of his own penning, which he intended to have ſent to Occaſion of apprehending of Mr. Green came by Letters intercepted.

Anno 1556. Mr. Philpot, wherein he fully declareth his Uſage before the Biſhop of London, and others) as alſo an Anſwer to a Queſtion made by the ſaid Chriſtopher Goodman, in a Letter written unto him, in which he required to have the Certainty of the Report which was ſpread amongſt them on the other Side of the Seas, that the Queen was dead. Whereunto Mr. Green ſimply anſwered, and as the Truth then was, that ſhe was not dead.

Theſe Letters, with many others, written to divers of the Exiles, by their Friends here in England, being delivered to a Meſſenger to carry over, came by the Apprehenſion of the ſaid Bearer, unto the Hands of the King and Queen's Council. Who at their convenient Leiſure (which in thoſe Days by ſome of them was quickly found out for ſuch Matters) peruſed the whole Number of the ſaid Letters, and amongſt them eſpy'd this Letter of Mr. Green's, written to his Friend Chriſtopher Goodman; in the Contents whereof (amongſt other News and private Matters) they found theſe Words, The Queen is not dead. Which Words were only written as an Anſwer, to certify Mr. Goodman of the Truth of his former Demand. Howbeit (to ſome of the Council) they ſeemed very heinous Words, yea Treaſon they would have made them, if the Law would have ſuffered. Which when they could not do (and being yet very loth to let any ſuch depart freely, whom they ſuſpected to be Favourers of the Goſpel) they then examined him upon his Faith in Religion, but upon what Points it is not certainly known.

Mr. Green examined of his Faith by the Council.

Nevertheleſs (as it ſeemeth) his Anſwers were ſuch, as little pleaſed them, and therefore after they had detained him in Priſon, as well in the Tower of London as elſewhere, they ſent him at laſt to Bonner Biſhop of London, to be ordered according to his eccleſiaſtical Law; as appeareth by their Letters ſent to the Biſhop, with the ſaid Priſoner alſo: Wherein it may appear that Sir John Bourne, (then Secretary to the Queen) was a chief Stirrer in ſuch Caſes, yea, and an Enticer of others of the Council; who otherwiſe (if for fear they durſt) would have been content to have let ſuch Matters alone. The Lord forgive them their Weakneſs, if it be his good Pleaſure, and give them true Repentance, Amen.

A Letter ſent to Bonner Biſhop of London, by the Queen's Council, dated the 11th Day of November, 1555, but not delivered until the 17th Day of the ſame Month.

AFTER our hearty Commendations to your good Lordſhip, we ſend to the ſame herewith the Body of Bartlet Green, who hath of good Time remained in the Tower for his obſtinate ſtanding in Matters againſt the catholick Religion, whom the King and Queen's Majeſties Pleaſures are (becauſe he is of your Lordſhip's Dioceſs) ye ſhall cauſe to be ordered according to the Laws in ſuch Caſes provided. And thus we bid your Lordſhip heartily farewel. From St. James's the 11th of November, 1555.

Your Lordſhip's loving Friends,

Wincheſter, William Havard,
Pembroke, John Bourne,
Tho. Ely, Thomas Wharton.

Poſtſcript. I Sir John Bourne will wait upon your Lordſhip, and ſignify further the King and Queen's Majeſties Pleaſure herein.

That ye may the better underſtand the Certainty of the ill Uſage he met with in Bonner's Cuſtody, I have thought it good to put forth his own Letter, containing at large the Diſcourſe of the ſame. Which Letter he wrote, intending to have ſent it to Mr. Philpot, but, either by Mr. Philpot's Death, or (more probably) by the Watchfulneſs of his Keeper, he was prevented: For it came (by what Means I know not) to the Biſhop's Hands, and being delivered to his Regiſter, was found in one of his Books of Record. The Copy whereof here followeth.

A Letter of Bartlet Green, written to John Philpot, containing, beſides other particular Matters betwixt him and Mr. Philpot, a brief Rehearſal of his Conferences with Biſhop Bonner and others, at his Firſt coming before them.

THAT which was wanting in Talk (thro' my Default) at your being here, I have ſupply'd by writing in your Abſence, now at length getting ſome Opportunity and Leiſure. The 17th Day of November, being brought hither by two of the Clock in the Afternoon, I was preſented before my Lord of London, and other two Biſhops, Mr. Deane, Mr. Roper, Mr. Welch, Dr. Harpsfield Archdeacon of London, and two or three others, all ſitting at one Table. There were alſo preſent Dr. Dale, Mr. George Mordant, Mr. Dee. Then after the Biſhop of London had read unto himſelf the Letter that came from the Council, he ſpake with more Words, but (as I remember) to this Effect; that the Cauſe of their Aſſembly was, to hear mine Examination, whereunto he had Authority by the Council, and had provided Mr. Welch and another, whoſe Name I know not (but well I remember, though he obtained it not, yet deſired he my Lord, that I might hear the Council's Letters) to be there if any Matters of the common Law ſhould ariſe, to diſcuſs them, he intreated my Lord to determine all Controverſies of Scriptures; and as for the Civil Law, he and Dr. Dale ſhould take on them.

Mr. Green committed to the Fleet and upon what Occaſion.

Wherefore he demanded of me, the Cauſe of mine Impriſonment: I ſaid, that the Occaſion of mine Apprehenſion was a Letter which I wrote to one Chriſtopher Goodman, wherein (certifying him of ſuch News as happened here) among the reſt, I wrote that there were certain printed Papers of Queſtions ſcattered Abroad. Whereupon, being ſuſpected to be privy to the deviſing or publiſhing of the ſame,

I was

I was committed to the Fleet. But after the Commiſſioners had received my Submiſſion I heard nothing thereof. The Sum whereof was, that as I was ſure there neither could be true Witneſſes, nor probable Conjecture againſt me in that Behalf; ſo I refuſed no Puniſhment, if they of their Conſciences would judge me privy to the deviſing, printing, or publiſhing of thoſe Queſtions. But my Lord affirming that there was another Cauſe of mine Impriſonment, demanded if I had not after, ſince I was committed to the Fleet, ſpoken or written ſomewhat againſt the natural Preſence of Chriſt in the Sacrament of the Altar.

Then I deſired his Lordſhip to be good unto me, truſting that he would not put me to anſwer to new Matters, except I were firſt diſcharged of the old. And when I ſtood long in that, Mr. Welch anſwered, that it was procured that I ſhould ſo do, right well. For albeit I were impriſoned for Treaſon, if during the Time of my Confinement I had maintained Hereſy, that were no ſufficient Allegation againſt the Ordinary; neither whether I were before him acquitted or condemned, ſhould it take away the former Fault. Then my Lord affirming that I was not brought before him but for Hereſy, and the other Gentleman ſaying, that doubtleſs I was diſcharged of my former Matter; my Deſire was, that I might be charged according to the Order of the Law, to hear my Accuſers.

Dr. Chedſey witneſſeth againſt Mr. Green.

Then Dr. Chedſey was ſent for, who reported, that in the Preſence of Mr. Moſley and the Lieutenant of the Tower, I ſpake againſt the real Preſence and the Sacrifice of the Maſs, and that I affirmed that their Church was the Church of Antichriſt.

Is not this true, ſaid my Lord? I ſaid, Yea. Will you continue therein, ſaid he? Yea, ſaid I. Wilt thou then maintain it by Learning, ſaid he? Therein, quoth I, I ſhould ſhew myſelf to have little Wit, knowing mine own Youth and Ignorance, if I would take on me to maintain any Controverſy againſt ſo many grave and learned Men. But my Conſcience was ſatisfied in the Truth, which was ſufficient to my Salvation.

Conſcience, ſaid Mr. Roper, ſo ſhall every Jew and Turk be ſaved.

We had hereafter much Talk to no Purpoſe, and eſpecially on my Part, who felt in myſelf, through cold and open Air, much Dulneſs of Wit and Memory. At length I was asked what Conſcience was: And I ſaid, the certifying of the Truth.

Perſwaſion of Mr. Welch to Mr. Green.

With that Mr. Welch roſe up, deſiring Leave to talk with me alone. So he taking me aſide into another Chamber, ſaid that he was ſorry for my Trouble, and would gladly ſee me at Liberty: He marvelled that I being a young Man, would ſtand againſt all the learned Men of the Realm, yea and contrary to the whole Determination of the catholick Church from Chriſt's Time, in a Matter wherein I could have no great Learning; I muſt not think mine own Wit better than all Mens, but ſhould believe them that were learned. I promiſe you (quoth he) I have read all Peter Martyr's Book, and Cranmer's, and all the reſt of them, and have conferred them with the contrary, as the Biſhop of Wincheſter, &c. and could not perceive but that there was one continual Truth, which from the Beginning had been maintained; and thoſe that any Time ſevered from this Unity, were anſwered and anſwered again. This was the Sum of his Tale, which lacked neither Wit nor Eloquence.

Anno 1556.

Mr. Green. Then ſpake I: Foraſmuch as it pleaſeth your Maſterſhip to uſe me ſo familiarly (for ſo he behaved himſelf towards me, as tho' I had been his Equal) I ſhall open my Mind freely unto you, deſiring you to take it in good Part. I conſider my Youth, lack of Wit and Learning, which would God it were but a little under the Opinion that ſome Men have of me. But God is not bound to Time, Wit or Knowledge, but rather chooſeth the weak of the World that they may confound the ſtrong; neither can Men appoint Bounds to God's Mercy: For, I will have Compaſſion, ſaith he, on whom I will ſhew Mercy. There is no Reſpect of Perſons with God, whether it be Old or Young, Rich or Poor, Wiſe or Fooliſh, Fiſher or Basket-maker. God giveth Knowledge of his Truth, through his Free Grace, to whom he liſt, James 1. Neither do I think myſelf only to have the Truth, but ſtedfaſtly believe that Chriſt hath his Spouſe the catholick and univerſal Church, diſperſed in many Realms where it pleaſeth him, the Spirit bloweth where it liſteth: No more is he addicted to any one Place, than to the Perſon and Quality of one Man. Of this Church I nothing doubt myſelf to be a Member, truſting to be ſaved by the Faith that is taught in the ſame. But how this Church is known, is in a Manner the End of all Controverſy. And the true Marks of Chriſt's Church is the true Preaching of his Word, and Adminiſtring of his Sacraments. Theſe Marks were ſealed by the Apoſtles, and confirmed by the ancient Fathers, till at length they were, thro' the Wickedneſs of Men and the Devil, ſore worn, and almoſt utterly taken away. But God be praiſed that he hath renewed the Print, that his Truth may be known in many Places. For myſelf, I call God to witneſs, I have none Hope in mine own Wit and Learning, which is very ſmall; but I was perſuaded thereto by him, as by an * Inſtrument, that is excellent in all good Learning and Living. And God is my Record, that chiefly I ſought it of him by continual Prayers with Tears.

Mr. Green's Anſwer to Mr. Welch.

Mr. Green's Modeſty.

Rom. 9.

The Spirit of God addicted to no Perſon or Place.

* By this Inſtrument he meaneth Peter Martyr.

Furthermore, what I have done herein, it is not needful for me to ſpeak: But one Thing I ſay, I wiſh of God with all my Heart, that all Men, which are of contrary Judgment, would ſeek the Truth in like Manner. Now I am brought hither before a great many Biſhops and learned Men, to be made a Fool and a laughing Stock, but I weigh it not a Ruſh: For God knoweth that my whole Study is to pleaſe him: Beſides that, I care not for Man's Pleaſure or Diſpleaſure.

Mr. Welch. No, Mr. Green, ſaid he, think not ſo uncharitably of any Man, but judge rather that Men labour for your Soul's Health as for their own. But alas, how will you condemn all our Forefathers? Or how can you think your ſelf to be of the catholick Church, without any Continuance, and contrary to the Judgment of all learned Men?

Green. Sir, I have no Authority to judge any Man: Nevertheleſs, I doubt not but that I am of the true catholick Church, howſoever our learned Men here judge of me.

Welch. Why then do you ſuppoſe your own Wit and Learning better than all theirs? If you do not give Credit only to them, other learned Men ſhall reſort unto you, that ſhall perſuade you by the Scriptures and Doctors.

Anno 1556. Green. Sir, God knoweth that I refuſe not to learn of any Child, but I would embrace the Truth from the Mouth of a natural Fool, in any thing wherein I am ignorant, and that in all Things, ſaving my Faith: But concerning the Truth, wherein I am throughly perſuaded, I cannot ſubmit myſelf to learn, unleſs it be, as your Maſterſhip ſaid, that I peruſed Books on both Sides. For ſo might I make myſelf an indifferent Judge; otherwiſe I may be ſeduced.

And here we had a long Diſcourſe of the Church, wherein his Learning and Wit was much above mine: But in the End I told him I was perſuaded, and that he did but loſe his Labour.

Welch. Why then, what ſhall I report to my Lord?

Green. Even as pleaſeth you, or elſe you may ſay that I would be glad to learn, if I had Books on both Sides.

So he going in, the Biſhops (being riſen and ready to depart) asked how he liked me? He anſwered, In Faith, my Lord, he will be glad to learn. Which Words when they were taken, leſt they ſhould miſtake his Meaning and mine, I ſaid, yea my Lord, ſo that I may have Books on both Sides, as Calvin, and my Lord of Canterbury's Books, and ſuch others. Well, ſaid my Lord, I will ſatisfy thy Mind therein alſo; and they were all in great Hopes that I ſhould ſhortly become a good Catholick as they call it.

* Where Philpot was, he meaneth, to whom he wrote this Letter.

Then was I brought into my Lord's inner Chamber (where you * were) and there was put in a Chamber with Mr. Dee, who treated me very friendly. That Night I ſupped at my Lord's Table, and lay with Mr. Dee in the Chamber you did ſee. On the Morrow I was ſerved at Dinner from my Lord's Table, and at Night did eat in the Hall with his Gentlemen; where I have been placed ever ſince, and fared wonderful well. Yea, to ſay the Truth, I had my Liberty within the Bounds of his Lordſhip's Houſe: For my Lodging and Fare, ſcarce have I been at any Time abroad in better Caſe ſo long together, and have found ſo much Gentleneſs of my Lord and his Chaplains, and other Servants, that I ſhould eaſily have forgotten that I was in Priſon, were it not that this good Chear was often powdered with unſavoury Sauces of Examinations, Exhortations, Poſings and Diſputations.

For ſhortly after Supper, the firſt Monday at Night, I was had into my Lord's Bed-chamber, and there he would know of me how I came firſt into theſe Hereſies: I ſaid I was perſuaded thereto by the Scriptures, and Authorities of the Doctors, alledged by Peter Martyr in his Lectures upon the eleventh Chapter of the Firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians, while he treated there on that Place of the Lord's Supper for a Month together. But then my Lord inforced the Plainneſs of Chriſt's Words, and his Almighty Power, demanding of me, what Reaſon ſhould move me from the literal Senſe of the Words: But I having no Luſt to thoſe Matters, would have alledged that there were Books ſufficient of that Matter, as Peter Martyr, Cranmer, and Oecolampadius: Nevertheleſs, when this Shift would not ſerve, but I was conſtrained to ſay ſomewhat, I ſaid I was moved from the literal Senſe by the Manner of Speaking, by the Circumſtance, and by Conference of other Places of the Scriptures. It is evident that Chriſt took Bread, and that he ſhewed them (they ſeeing it) Bread, which he affirmed to be his Body.

Mr. Green urg'd with the literal Senſe of the Words, This is my Body.

Cauſes moving Mr. Green from the literal Senſe of the Words aforeſaid.

Chriſt affirmed that Bread was his Body. Argument.

But that Affirmation, taken literally, can by no Means be true.

Ergo, the Words, if they be taken according to the Letter, cannot be true.

For this Predication, Panis eſt Corpus Chriſti, or, Corpus Chriſti eſt Panis, is neither Identica nor Accidentalis, nor Eſſentialis Prædicatio: Wherefore of Neceſſity I muſt ſay it was ſpoken in the ſame Senſe, as Chriſt was a Door, a Vine, and a Way. Neither can it ſerve to ſay, that it was not of Bread that he affirmed to be his Body, and that for two Cauſes.

For whatſoever he ſhewed, that was Bread, for nought elſe was ſeen. Argument.

But that which he ſhewed he affirmed to be his Body.

Ergo, He affirmed of Bread that it was his Body.

The ſecond Reaſon is, for that it was not changed before, ſeeing Benedixit, is Gratias egit, or elſe Chriſt affirmed no true Propoſition, and you are without Authority.

In the End of this Letter there were noted theſe Sentences following, collected for Confirmation of his former Aſſertions, viz.

Eadem locutio Poculi, that is, The Phraſe is uſed and ſpoken upon the Cup.

Dicitur poſtea Panis. It is called Bread in the ſame Place afterwards.

Eadem ratione rejecero Corpus, qua tu Panem; that is, By the ſame Reaſon as it may be deny'd to be Bread, it may be deny'd to be the Body.

Aſcendit in Cœlum, that is, His Body aſcended into Heaven.

Corpore nobis factus eſt ſimilis in omnibus poſt Nativitatem. At noſtrum Corpus non poteſt eſſe in duobus Locis. Ergo, &c. In Body he was like to us in all Things after his Nativity (Sin excepted). Seeing then our Body cannot be in two Places at once: Ergo, neither his.

Diſcipuli non ſtupebant, &c. His Diſciples took it as no Miracle nor Wonder.

The laſt Examination and Condemnation of Mr. Green.

THUS, as it ſeemeth, for this Time they left off. But not long after the Biſhop perceiving Green's Learning and Conſtancy to be ſuch, as neither he, nor any of his Doctors and Chaplains could by the Scriptures refel, began then to object and put in Practice his chief and ſtrongeſt Argument againſt him; which was the Rigour of the Law, and Cruelty of Execution: An Argument, I aſſure you, which, without the ſpecial Grace of our God, to Fleſh is inſupportable. And therefore, uſing Law as a Cloak of his Tyranny, the 28th Day of November, the ſaid Biſhop examined him upon certain Points of Chriſtian Religion. Whereunto when he had anſwered, the Biſhop appointed the Regiſter (as their moſt common Manner is) to draw thereout an Order of Confeſſion: Which being afterwards read unto Green, was alſo ſubſcribed by him, as a Confirmation of his former Aſſertions: The Tenor whereof here enſueth.

The Confeſſion of Bartlet Green.

This was drawn up, and gathered by the Biſhop's Regiſter.

Bartlet Green born in the City of London, in the Pariſh of Baſſingſhal of the Dioceſs of London, and of the Age of 25 Years, being examined in the Biſhop's Palace the 27th Day of November, Anno 1555, upon certain Articles, anſwered as followeth, viz. That neither in the Time of King Edward, after the Maſs by him was put down, neither in the Time of Queen Mary after the Maſs was reſtored again, he hath heard any Maſs at all; but he ſaith that in the Reign of the ſaid Queen's Majeſty, he the ſaid Bartlet, two Times, to wit, at two Eaſter-Tides or Days, in the Chamber of John Pulline, one of the Preachers in King Edward's Time, within the Pariſh of St. Michael's Cornhil of the Dioceſs of London, did receive the Communion with the ſaid Pulline and Chriſtopher Goodman, ſometime Reader of the Divinity Lecture in Oxford, now gone beyond the Sea; and the ſecond Time with the ſaid Pulline, and with one Rimneger, Maſter of Arts of Magdalen College in Oxford: And this Examinate alſo ſaith, that at both the ſaid Communions, he and the other before named, did take and receive Bread and Wine, which Bread and Wine he called ſacramental Bread, and ſacramental Wine, which he ſaith were uſed there by them, Pulline only reading the Words of the Inſtitution, expreſſed in the Book of the Communion.

In which receiving and uſing, this Examinate ſaith, that the others afore-named did receive the Sacrament of the Lord's-ſupper, and that they received material Bread and material Wine, no Subſtance thereof changed, and ſo no real Preſence of the Body and Blood of Chriſt there being, but only Grace added thereto. And further this Examinate ſaith, that he had heretofore, during the Reign of the Queen's Majeſty aforeſaid, refuſed, and ſo now doth refuſe to come and hear Maſs, and to receive the Sacrament of the Altar, as they are now uſed and adminiſtred in this Church of England, becauſe he ſaith, that concerning the Maſs, he cannot be perſuaded in his Conſcience, that the Sacrifice pretended to be in the ſame, is agreeable to God's Word, or maintainable by the ſame: And that without deadly Offence he cannot worſhip the Body and Blood of Chriſt that is pretended to be there. And as concerning the Sacrament of the Altar, this Examinate ſaith, that he heretofore during the ſaid Reign, hath refuſed, and now doth refuſe to receive the ſame, as is now uſed in this Church of England, becauſe it is not uſed according to the Inſtitution of Chriſt, but both in a ſtrange Tongue, and alſo not miniſtred in both Kinds; and beſides that, contrary to God's Word it is there taught, that the Thing there adminiſtred is to be adored, as the real and true Body of Chriſt. And furthermore this Examinate ſaith, that during the ſaid Reign he hath not been confeſſed to the Prieſt, nor received Abſolution at his Hands, becauſe he is not bound by God's Word to make auricular Confeſſion.

Bartlet Green.

Many other Conferences and Examinations they brought him unto. But in the End (ſeeing his Stedfaſtneſs of Faith to be ſuch, as againſt which neither their Threatnings, nor yet their flattering Promiſes could prevail) the 15th Day of January the Biſhop cauſed him with the reſt above named, to be brought into the Conſiſtory in Paul's; where being ſet in his Judgment-ſeat, accompany'd with Mr. Fecknam, then Dean of the ſame Church, and other his Chaplains, after he had condemned the other ſix, he then calling for Bartlet Green, began with theſe, or the like Words: Anno 1556.

Honourable Audience, I think it beſt to open unto you the Converſation of this Man, called Bartlet Green. And becauſe you ſhall not charge me, that I go about to ſeek any Man's Blood, here you ſhall hear the Council's Letter, which they ſent with him unto me. The Effect whereof is; that whereas he had been of long Time in the Tower of London for Hereſy, they have now ſent him unto me to be ordered, according to the Laws therefore provided. And now to thee, Bartlet Green, I propoſe theſe nine Articles. Then he read the Articles above mentioned, which were generally objected to all theſe ſeven Priſoners, to wit, Thomas Whittle, John Tudſon, John Went, Thomas Brown, Iſabel Foſter, Joan Laſhford, Barlet Green.

But when Mr. Green would have anſwered them particularly, he was put to ſilence, with Promiſe that he ſhould have Time to anſwer ſufficiently, and therefore the Biſhop proceeding, ſaid, that when Green came firſt to his Houſe, he deſired to have the Books of the ancient Doctors of the Church to read, which he ſaid he granted him.

Whereunto Green anſwered and ſaid, that if the Doctors were with indifferent Judgment weighed, they made more a great deal with him, than they did with them.

Upon which Words, Dr. Fecknam, Dean of Paul's ſtood up, and marvelling why he ſaid ſo, asked him if he would be content to ſtand to the Judgment of the Doctors.

Green then ſaid, that he was content to ſtand to the Doctors Judgment.

I will then propound unto you (ſaid Fecknam) the Doctors, and interpret them yourſelf. So he alledged a Place of Chryſoſtom, Ad popul. Antioch. which was this: Elias aſcendens melotem ſuum poſt ſe reliquit: Chriſtus vero aſcendens carnum ſum aſſumpſit, & eandem poſt ſe reliquit. Elias going up, left his Cloak behind him: But Chriſt aſcending up took his Fleſh, and alſo left it behind him. And he demanded of Green, how he underſtood the Place.

Then Green deſired him that he would confer the Doctors Sayings together, and therefore alledged the ſame Doctor again, writing upon 1 Cor. 10. Is not the Bread which we bleſs the Communication of the Lord's Body? Whereby he proved that this Doctor called this Sacrament but a Sign of the Lord's Body. Many other Words of Probation and Trial were betwixt them.

At laſt Fecknam demanded of him, how long he had been of this Opinion. For Mr. Green, ſaid he, you confeſſed once to me, that when you were at Oxford at School, you were called the rankeſt Papiſt in that Houſe, and being compelled to go to the Lecture of Peter Martyr, you were converted from your old Doctrine.

And Green confeſſed the ſame.

Then Fecknam ſaid, that Green told him the ſaid Peter Martyr was a Papiſt at his firſt coming to Oxford. Whereupon he made an Exclamation, and prayed the People to conſider Anno 1556. how vain his Doctrine was that he profeſſed, which was grounded upon one Man, and that upon ſo inconſtant a Man as Peter Martyr, who perceiving the wicked Intent of the Council, was content to pleaſe them, and forſake the true catholick Faith.

Green ſaid, that he grounded not his Faith upon Peter Martyr nor any other, nor did believe ſo becauſe Peter Martyr believed the ſame; but becauſe that he had heard the Scriptures, and the Doctors of the Church truly and wholſomely expounded by him; neither had he any Regard of the Man, but of the Word which he ſpake. And further he ſaid, that he heard the ſaid Peter Martyr ſay often, that he had not as yet while he was a Papiſt, read Chryſoſtom upon the Tenth to the Corinthians, nor many other Places of the Doctors: But when he had read them, and well conſidered them, he was content to yield to the Doctors, having firſt humbled himſelf in Prayer, deſiring God to illuminate him, and bring him to the true Underſtanding of the Scripture. Which Thing (ſaid Green) if you my Lord would do, I do not doubt but God would open your Eyes, and ſhew you his Truth, no more than I do doubt his Words to be true that ſaith; Ask and it ſhall be given to you; knock and it ſhall be opened unto you, &c.

Then Fecknam asked him what he thought of this Article, The holy catholick Church.

And Green anſwered, that he did believe one holy and univerſal Church throughout all the World.

Then Fecknam ſaid, that he would fain have a ſure Mark and Token, whereby he might know this Church: And therefore he prayed Green to define unto him this Church.

Green anſwered, that this Church did agree in Verity of the true Doctrine of Chriſt, and was known by the true Adminiſtration of his Sacraments.

Whereupon Fecknam ſaid, that he would prove the Church whereof he was, to be never agreeing in Doctrine, but always to have been in Controverſy in their Religion. For, ſaid he, Luther and Zuinglius could never agree in their Writings or Sayings, nor Oecolampadius with Caroloſtadius, or Caroloſtadius with either Zuinglius or Luther, &c. for Luther writing upon the Sacrament of the Altar, ſaid, that in this Bread, or under this Bread we receive the Body of the Lord. Zuinglius controlling him, ſaid, Under the Sign of the Bread we receive the Body of the Lord. And the other controlled him in like Caſe.

Then Mr. Green proved their Opinions of the Sacrament to be one in Effect, being rightly weighed: And though their Words did not ſound all one, yet they meant one Thing; and their Opinions were all one, as he proved by divers other Examples.

Then Fecknam deſired him that he would not ſo wilfully caſt himſelf away, but to be rather conformable to Reaſon, and that my Lord Biſhop there preſent would be good unto him, and would grant him Reſpite (if he would demand it) for a Fortnight or three Weeks, and that he ſhould chooſe any learned Man whom he would, and ſhould go with him home to his Houſe; and that he whom he would chooſe would willingly take the Pains to read and confer the Doctors with him, and open the Doctors Minds and Meanings unto him.

Then Biſhop Bonner ſaid, that he was proud and an obſtinate Boy; and therefore he bade Feeknam to hold his Peace, and to call him no more Mr. Green: For (ſaid he) you ought not to call an Heretick, Maſter.

After this Dr. Pendleton alledged to him this Text out of the 22d of Luke, I will eat no more of this, until it be fulfilled in my Father's Kingdom. Here, ſaid he, you muſt confeſs your Opinion to be falſe, elſe you muſt ſay that Chriſt was a Liar: For Chriſt ſaid, I will eat no more of this, until it be fulfilled in my Father's Kingdom. If Chriſt did eat no more the Bread when he ſpake theſe Words, then muſt you ſay that he was a Liar: For he did eat Bread after with his Diſciples, before he aſcended. But if you ſay he did eat his Body then, and after but Bread, it will not agree with the Scriptnres, nor with good Reaſon.

Note the blind Ignorance of Dr. Pendleton, as though the Kingdom of Chriſt was not gotten at the Death of Chriſt.

Then Green anſwered and ſaid, that this was ſpoken by an Anticipation, as one of their own Biſhops (who is now dead) did ſay.

This Biſhop was ſuppos'd to be the Biſhop of Wincheſter.

Then Dr. Pendleton ſaid, that that was no ſufficient Diſcharge, nor no ſufficient Anſwer for him in this Caſe; for, ſaid he, it is well known that the Biſhop was of a contrary Opinion to you, and that he died a good chriſtian Man.

To which Words Green ſaid, I do not call him to witneſs in this Caſe, as though he were a ſufficient Man to prove my Saying to be true in this Matter: But I do alledge him againſt you, as Paul did the Scripture, which he found graven in the Altar of the Athenians, againſt themſelves, To the unknown God.

Theſe with many other Words were between them, which I do overpaſs, becauſe it were too long to ſtand upon Recital of every Thing. Laſt of all the Biſhop asked him if he would recant. He ſaid nay, he would not. But, my Lord, ſaid he, in old Time there were no Men put to Death for their Conſcience, until ſuch Times as Biſhops found the Means to make it Death to believe contrary to them; but Excommunication, my Lord, was the greateſt Penalty which Men had for their Conſcience; yea, inſomuch that St. Auguſtine wrote, and commanded that no Man ſhould be put to Death for his Opinion.

Then Bonner ſaid, that when St. Auguſtine ſaw what Inconveniences followed of that Commandment, he wrote again to the temporal Rulers, commanding them to puniſh their Bodies alſo.

But, ſaid Green, he bade not to put them to Death.

He bade puniſh them, quoth Bonner.

Yea, ſaid Green, but not put them to Death.

That they ſhould be puniſhed, quoth Bonner, again.

This Talk ended, he asked Green if he would recant, and return to their Romiſh Mother. Which when he deny'd, the Biſhop pronounced the Sentence definitive againſt him, and ſo committed him to the Sheriffs of London, who cauſed him to be carry'd to Newgate.

And as he was going thither, there met with him two Gentlemen, being both his ſpecial Friends, minding belike to comfort this their perſecuted Brother: But at their Meeting, their loving and friendly Hearts (not able any longer to hide themſelves) were manifeſted by the Abundance of their pitiful Tears. To whom, when Green ſaw them, he ſaid

ſaid in theſe or like Words, Ah, my dear Friends, is this your Comfort you are come to give me, in this my Occaſion of Heavineſs? Muſt I, who needed to have Comfort miniſtred to me, become now a Comforter of you? And thus declaring his moſt quiet and peaceable Mind and Conſcience, he chearfully ſpake to them and others, until he came to the Priſon Door, into which he joyfully entered, and there remained always either in Prayer (whereunto he much gave himſelf) or elſe in ſome other godly Meditations and Exerciſes, until the 28th Day of January, when he with his other above mentioned Brethren, went moſt chearfully to the Place of their Torments, often repeating, both by the Way and at the Stake, theſe Latin Verſes.

Chriſte Deus, ſine te ſpes eſt mihi nulla ſalutis:
Te duce vera ſequor, te duce falſa nego.

In Engliſh thus,

O Chriſt, my God, ſure Hope of Health,
Beſides thee have I none:
The Truth I love, and Falſhood hate,
By thee my Guide alone.

During the Time of his Impriſonment in Newgate, divers of his Friends had Acceſs unto him, to whom he gave ſundry godly Exhortations, wherewith they were not only well contented, but for better Remembrance of his Inſtructions, as well as of his good and pious Perſon, they deſired him to write ſomewhat in their Books, which he readily did.

Theſe Verſes he wrote in a Book of Mr. Huſſey of the Temple.

Behold thyſelf by me,
Such one was I, as thou:
And thou in Time ſhalt be Even Duſt as I am now.
Bartlet Green.

The following Verſes were wrote in a Book of Mr. William Fleetwood, of the ſame Houſe.

My reſting-road is found,
Vain hope and hap adieu:
Love whom you liſt with change,
Death ſhall me rid from you.
Bartlet Green.

Amongſt many other Virtues of this good Man, in him was to be noted ſuch a modeſt Nature, ſo humbly thinking of himſelf, as in few Men is to be found, ever dejecting himſelf under that was in him, and ever ſeeming to be leſs than he was, ſo that nothing leſs could he abide, than to hear of his Praiſe or Commendation; as well declareth not only his Letter written to Mr. Philpot, wherein he doth earneſtly expoſtulate with him, for ſlandering him with Praiſe of his Wit and Learning and other manifold Virtues of great Excellency; but alſo by his own Speech and Anſwers in his Examination, wherein he caſteth from him all Knowledge of Learning and Cunning, when notwithſtanding he had more in him, than to any Man's Eyes did appear.

So great and admirable was this Gift of Modeſty grafted in the Nature of him, ſo far abhorring all Pride and Arrogancy, that as he could not abide any Thing that was ſpoken to his Advancement or Praiſe; ſo neither did there appear in him any Shew or Brag in thoſe Things wherein he might juſtly glory, which were his Puniſhments and Sufferings for the Cauſe and Quarrel of Chriſt. For when he was beaten and ſcourged with Rods by Biſhop Bonner, and he greatly rejoiced in the ſame, yet his Modeſty was ſuch, that he would never mention it, leſt he ſhould ſeem to glory too much in himſelf, except only to one Mr. Cotton, an intimate Friend, a little before his Death. Anno 1556.

To his admirable Modeſty may be added his excellent and univerſal Compaſſion to Mankind; which, however ſlighted by ſome, yet there is nothing in Nature that doth more truly reſemble the Image of the high Majeſty of Almighty God. As, in reſpect of Humanity, Man only excelleth a Beaſt, ſo this Man by his merciful Tenderneſs did not only ſeem to be, but really was ſuperior to moſt of his own Species. It was his Cuſtom to viſit the poor Priſoners (thoſe that were with him in Priſon) both with bodily Relief and ſpiritual Comfort: And finding many of them (I mean ſuch as were there for Theft and other naughty Facts) very penitent and ſorry for their wicked Lives, in hope of their Amendment, did not only by Word of Mouth, but alſo by his Letters require, yea, as it were of Duty in Love, charged his Friends to do their utmoſt Endeavour to obtain their Liberty: ſuch was the pious and charitable Diſpoſition of this true Member of Chriſt's Church, whoſe Imitation of divine Benignity appeareth in the following Letter:

Another Letter of Mr. Green in Behalf of poor Priſoners.

To my very loving Friends and Maſters, Mr. Goring, Mr. Fernham, Mr. Fleetwood, Mr. Ruſſwell, Mr. Huſſey, Mr. Calthorp, Mr. Bowyer, and other my Maſters of the Temple, Bartlet Green wiſheth Health of Body and Soul.

VERY Friends are they who are knit together with the Knot of Charity; Charity doth not decay, but increaſe in them that die faithfully: Whereof it followeth, that though we be abſent in Body, yet are we preſent in the Spirit, coupled together with the Unity of Faith in the Bond of Peace, which is Love. How is he worthy the Name of a Friend, that meaſureth his Friendſhip with the Diſtance of a Place, or parting of Perſons? if thy Friend be out of Sight, is thy Friendſhip ended? if he be gone into the Country, wilt thou ceaſe to love him? if he be paſſed the Seas, will you ſo forſake him? if he be carried into Heaven, is Charity hindered thereby.

On the one Side we have the Uſe of the Fathers from the Primitive Church, who gave Thanks for their Friends that died in the Faith, to prove that Charity died not with Death. On the other Side, ſaith Horace, They change their Country, not their Minds, who ſail beyond Sea.

What ſpeak I of Horace? Saith not St. Paul the ſame Thing? For we are Members of his Body, of his Fleſh, and of his Blood, yea, we are Members one of another. Is the Hand or Arm, Foot or Leg a Member, when it is diſſevered from the Body? How can we be Members, except we be joined together? What is the Line that coupleth us, Anno 1556. but Love? When all Things shall fail, Love never faileth. Hope hath its End, when we have got that which we hoped for. Faith is finished in Heaven; Love endureth for ever: Love, I say, that proceedeth of Charity; for carnal Love, when that which he loveth is lost, doth perish with the Flesh: Neither was that ever but fleshly Love, which by Distance of Place, or Severing of Bodies is parted asunder. If Love be the End or Sum of the Law; if Heaven and Earth shall perish, yet one Jot of God's Word shall not decay, why should we think that Love will not last for ever?

I need not write much to you, my Friends, neither have I Leisure now the Keepers are risen: But this I say, if we keep Christ's Commandment in loving each other, as he loved us, then should our Love be everlasting. This Friendship St. Paul felt when it moved him to say, That neither length nor breadth (meaning no Distance of Place) neither heighth nor depth, should sever him from the Love of Christ. Weigh this Place well, and mete it with St. Paul's Measures; so shall we find that if our Love be untainted, it can never be ended. Now may you say, Why writest thou this? certainly to the End that if our Friendship be stable, you may accomplish this the last Request of your Friend, and perform after my Death the Friendship we began in our Life, that Amity may increase until God make it perfect at our next Meeting together.

Mr. Fleetwood, I beseech you remember Wittrance and Cook, two singular Men amongst common Prisoners. Mr. Fernham and Mr. Bell, with Mr. Hussey, as I hope, will dispatch Palmer and Richardson with his Companions. I pray you, Mr. Palmer, think on John Grove, an honest poor Man, Traiford and Rice Apprice his Accomplices: My Cousin Thomas Witton (a Scrivener in Lombard-street) hath promised to further their Delivery; at least, he can instruct you which Way to work. I doubt not but that Mr. Bowyer will labour for the good Wife Cooper (for she is worthy to be holpen) and Berard the Frenchman. There be also other well-dispos'd Men, whose Deliverance if ye will not labour for, yet I humbly beseech you to seek their Relief, as you shall see Cause; namely, of Henry Apprice, Lancelot, Hobbes, Lother, Homes, Carre, and Bockingham, a young Man of goodly Gifts in Wit and Learning, and (saving that he is somewhat wild) likely to do well hereafter. There be also two Women, Coningham and Alice Alexander, that may prove honest. For these and all other poor Prisoners here I make my humble Suit and Prayer to you all my Masters, and especially good Friends, beseeching you of all Bonds of Amity, for the precious Blood of Jesus Christ, in the Bowels of Mercy, to tender the Causes of miserable Captives; help to cloath Christ, visit the Afflicted, comfort the Sorrowful, and relieve the Needy. The very God of Peace guide your Hearts to have Mercy on the Poor, and love faithfully together, Amen. This present Monday, when I look to die, and live for ever.

Yours as ever,

Bartlet Green.

Another Letter of Mr. Green to Mrs. Elizabeth Clark.

WOULD God, if it were his Pleasure, that with this Letter I might send you my Heart and Mind, and whatsoever there is in me else, that pertaineth to God: So should I think it the best Message, and happiest Letter that ever I could write. But tho' I obtain not my Desire, yet shall I not cease with continual Prayer to labour for you, desiring Almighty God to increase that which he hath long since begun in you, of sober Life, and earnest Zeal towards his Religion. In Faith (as saith St. Paul) she that is a true Widow and friendless putteth her Trust in God, continuing Day and Night in Supplication and Prayer; but she that liveth in Pleasure is dead while she liveth. 1 Tim. 5. And verily a true Widow is she that hath married Christ, forsaking the Vanities of the World, and Lust of the Flesh. For as the married Woman careth how to love, please, and serve her Husband; so ought the Widow to give all her Heart and Soul, Thought and Words, Studies and Labours, faithfully to love God, virtuously to bring up her Children and Household, and diligently to provide for the Poor and Oppressed. 1 Cor. 7. 1 Tim 5.

Therefore St. Paul first instructeth a Widow how to behave herself, that is, Not to live in Pleasure, then to watch unto Prayer, is the only Means to obtain all our Desires, stedfastly laying up all our Trust in God, as David right well saith, First eschew Evil, then do Good. Of Anna, the Praise was written, that she never went out of the Temple, but served God with Fasting and Prayer Night and Day; so well had she espoused Christ. Pfal. 34. Luke 2. Judith wore a Smock of Hair, continuing in Fasting and had good Report of all Men. Judith 8.

The next Care that belongeth to a Widow, is, that she bring up her Children and Houshold godly, in the Nurture and Information of the Lord. Whereof St. Paul saith, If any have Children or Nephews, let them learn first to rule their own House godly, and to recompence their Elders. The Incontinency and Covetousness of Phineas and Hophni, corrected by Eli their Father, provoked God's Vengeance upon him and all his Kindred. The over tender Love of Absalom expelled David from his Kingdom. The unrebuked Sins of Amnon encouraged Absalom to slay his Brother; most manifest Examples against the Parents, for the Offences of their Children. Ephes. 6. 1 Tim. 5. 2 Sam. 15. 2 Sam. 13.

Contrariwise, how greatly might Hannah rejoyce over Samuel her Son, whom she had brought up in the House of the Lord? What Thanks might Tobias's Wife give for her Son Toby? How happy was Solomon to be taught by the Prophet Nathan? But above all Widows, thrice blessed was the happy Mother of the seven Sons, that so had instructed them by the Fear of God, that by no Torments they would shrink from the Love of his Truth? 1 Sam. 1. 1 Kings 1. 2 Macc. 7.

Of the last Part St. Paul sheweth that a Widow should be chosen, if she have nourished her Children, if she have been liberal to Strangers, if she have washed the Saints Feet, and if she have ministred to them in Adversity. Herein it is evident how earnestly St. Paul would have Widows bent towards the Poor; for that (as though they only had been therefore meet) he appointed only Widows to minister to the Saints, and to gather for the Poor. Which Use also continued almost throughout the Primitive Church, that Widows had the Charge and Gathering for the poor Men and Strangers. The Office and Exercise of Christian Widows in the Primitive Church.

Of your Neighbours I need not put you in Remembrance, seeing you daily feed them with good Hospitality; by which Means also many Foreigners are by you relieved: But of the poor Alms-houses, and miserable Prisoners here in London, many lacking their Liberty without Cause, some under Colour of Religion, some only kept for Fees, and some on private Men's Displeasure. Alas that Christ so hungereth, and no Man will feed him; is sore oppressed with Thirst, and no Man will give him Drink; destitute of all Lodging, and not relieved; lieved; naked, and not cloathed; ſick, and not viſited; impriſoned, and not ſeen.

In Times paſt Men could beſtow large Sums of Money on Copes, Veſtments, and Ornaments of the Church. Why rather follow we not the Example of * St. Ambroſe, who ſold the ſame for the Relief of the Poor; or the Commandment of Chryſoſtom, who willed firſt to deck and garniſh the living Temple of God? But alas, ſuch is the Wickedneſs of theſe our laſt Days, that nothing moveth us; neither the pure Doctrine, the Godlineſs of Life, nor good Examples of ancient Fathers. If in any Thing they erred, if they have written any Thing that ſerveth for Sects and Diſſenſion, that will their charitable Children embrace, publiſh, and maintain with Sword, Faggot, and Fire: But all in vain; they ſtrive againſt the Stream. For tho' in deſpite of the Truth, by force of the Cares of crafty Perſwaſion, they may bring themſelves into the Haven of Hell: Yet they cannot make all Men believe the Banks move whilſt the Ship ſaileth, nor ever ſhall be able to turn the direct Courſe of the Stream of God's Truth. Our Lord Jeſus Chriſt ſtrengthen you in all pure Doctrine and upright Living, and give you Grace virtuouſly to bring up your Children and Family, and carefully to provide for the poor and oppreſſed, Amen. At Newgate the 20th of January, Anno 1556.

* St. Ambroſe took from the Church, and gave to the Poor; we take from the Poor the Tythes and Impropriations, and give them to Churches and Miniſters, where is nothing but Singing and Idleneſs.

Your aſſured,

Bartlet Green.

Another Writing of Mr. Bartlet Green.

BEtter is the Day of Death, ſaith Solomon, than the Day of Birth. Man that is born of a Woman liveth but a ſhort Time, and is repleniſhed with many Miſeries; but happy are the Dead that die in the Lord. Man of Woman is born in Travel, to live in Miſery; Man through Chriſt doth die in Joy, and live in Felicity. He is born to die, and dieth to live. Straight as he cometh into the World, with Cries he uttereth his miſerable Eſtate; ſtraight as he departeth, with Songs he praiſeth God for ever. Scarce yet in his Cradle, three deadly Enemies aſſault him; after Death no Adverſary can annoy him. Whilſt he is here, he diſpleaſeth God; when he is dead he fulfilleth his Will. In this Life here he dieth through Sin; in the Life to come he liveth in Righteouſneſs. Through many Tribulations in Earth he is ſtill purged; with Joy unſpeakable in Heaven is he made pure for ever. Here he dieth every Hour; there he liveth continually. Here is Sin; there is Righteouſneſs. Here is Time; there is Eternity. Here is Hatred; there is Love. Here is Pain; there is Pleaſure. Here is Miſery; there is Felicity. Here is Corruption; there is Immortality. Here we ſee Vanity; there we ſhall behold the Majeſty of God with triumphant and unſpeakable Joy in Glory everlaſting. Seek therefore the Things that are above, where Chriſt ſitteth at the Right Hand of God the Father; unto whom, with the Son and the Holy Ghoſt, be all Honour and Glory, World without End, Amen.

Yours in Chriſt,

Bartlet Green.

There were divers other Letters and Matters wrote by this Servant of God, as namely certain Notes and Extracts in Latin, out of the Doctors and other Authors for his Memory, whereby is declared how ſtudious he was in the Searching and Knowledge of the Law of God, altho' his Profeſſion was the Temporal Law. Where I would to God he were not among the Lawyers ſuch a Phenix, that he had very few or no Fellows to fly with him, or to follow his Steps. But God is to be praiſed, that although we read of few or none among that Sort that died as he did, yet good Witneſſes do daily ſpring up of the ſame Profeſſion, to ſuch Towardneſs and godly Zeal, that ſome Hope already appeareth ſhortly to come to paſs, that this godly Phenix ſhall not fly alone. Theſe aforeſaid Notes and Gatherings of his out of the Doctors, were taken from him by Biſhop Bonner, being found about him, which was to him no little Grief. He among the reſt was firſt apprehended, but laſt of them condemned, which was the fifteenth Day of January, and afterward burned with the other Martyrs the 27th of the ſame Month. Anno 1556.

3. Thomas Brown, Martyr.

THomas Brown, born in the Pariſh of Hiſton, within the Dioceſs of Ely, came afterwards to London, where he dwelt in the Pariſh of St. Brides in Fleet-ſtreet, a married Man, of the Age of thirty ſeven Years, who becauſe he came not to his Pariſh-church, was preſented by the Conſtable of the Pariſh to Biſhop Bonner. The Articles on which he was examined, with his Anſwers alſo annexed to the ſame, hath been already mentioned in the general Proceſs againſt him and his Fellow-ſufferers. This Thomas Brown being had to Fulham with the others there to be examined, was required to come into the Chappel to hear Maſs, which he refuſing to do, went into the Warren, and there kneeled among the Trees. For this he was greatly charged by the Biſhop as for an heinous Matter, becauſe he ſaid it was done in deſpite and contempt of their Maſs; which ſeemed to the Biſhop and his Chaplains no ſmall Offence. At length being produced to his laſt Examination before the ſaid Biſhop, the fifteenth Day of January, there to hear the definitive Sentence againſt him; firſt he was required with many fair Words and gloſſing Promiſes to revoke his Doctrine, to whom the aforeſaid Biſhop ſpeaking theſe Words, ſaid, Brown, ye have been before me many Times and oft, and I have endeavoured to win thee from thine Errors; yet thou, and ſuch like, haſt and do report that I go about to ſeek thy Blood, &c.

Mr. Brown kneeleth among the Trees at Maſs Time.

To whom the ſaid Thomas Brown anſwered again, Yea, my Lord (ſaid he) indeed ye be a Bloodſucker, and I wiſh I had as much Blood as is Water in the Sea, for you to ſuck.

Bonner then proceeding to the Articles, when he had read them unto him again, as he had done divers Times before, asked him whether he was content and willing to relinquiſh thoſe his Hereſies and erroneous Opinions (as he called them) and return again unto the Unity of the catholick Faith. Whereunto he made anſwer again, ſaying, if they were Hereſies, he would forſake them. They be Hereſies, ſaid the Biſhop. How will ye prove it, ſaid Brown? for I will not go from mine Anſwer, except you can prove them to be Hereſies, which ye ſhall never do. For that Anno 1556. that which you call Hereſy is no Hereſy. With that Biſhop Bonner, not able, or elſe not diſpoſed to ſupply the Part of a ſufficient Teacher, in proving that which the other had denied by good Authority and Doctrine of the Scripture, went about with Words and Promiſe of Pardon to allure him to renounce thoſe his Hereſies, as he called them, and to return unto the Unity of his Mother the catholick Church, &c.

To whom the ſaid Brown inferred again as followeth; Prove it (ſaid he) to be Hereſy, that I do hold and mantain, and I will turn to you. But you condemn me, becauſe I will not confeſs and believe the Bread in the Sacrament of the Altar (as you call it) to be the Body of Chriſt, and therefore ye ſpill mine and ſuch like Innocents Blood, being the Queen's true Subjects, for which you ſhall anſwer, and that ſhortly.

After this being ſpoken, Bonner (as he had done to the others before) read in writing the Sentence definitive againſt him. The Copy and Form of which Sentence wherewith the Papiſts were wont to condemn theſe Innocents, is before expreſſed. And this being done, he was committed to the Sheriffs to be had away, and burned the 27th Day of the ſaid Month of January, conſtantly abiding with the others the cruel Torments for the true Confeſſion of his chriſtian Faith.

Sentence againſt T. Brown.

4. John Tudſon, Martyr.

ON the ſame Day that the aforeſaid Thomas Brown with his Fellows were condemned (as is above related) being the 15th Day of January, John Tudſon was alſo brought forth with the reſt of the ſaid Company unto the like Condemnation. This John Tudſon was born in Ipſwich in the County of Suffolk, after that Apprentice in London, dwelling with one George Goodyear of the Pariſh of St. Mary Botolph, within the Dioceſs of London, who being complained of to Sir Richard Cholmley and Dr. Story, was by them ſent unto Bonner Biſhop of London, and was divers Times before him in Examination.

The Articles and Interrogatories miniſtred unto him as unto the reſt, are before ſpecified, with his Anſwers alſo to the ſame annexed, &c. After this he was brought into the open Conſiſtory, where the ſaid John Tudſon appearing before the ſaid Biſhop and his Accompliees, was moved with ſundry Perſuaſions (as their Manner is) to go from his Opinion (which they named Hereſy) and to perſiſt in the Unity of the Church which they were of; but he, conſtantly perſiſting in that which he had received by the Preachers in King Edward's Time, refuſed ſo to do, ſaying, there was no Hereſy in his Anſwers. For I, ſaid he, defy all Hereſy. The Biſhop yet ſtill uſed his old accuſtomed Perſuaſions to remove him, promiſing moreover all his Offences and Errors (as he called them) to be forgiven him, if he would return, &c. Then ſaid Tudſon, Tell me wherein I have offended, and I will return. Then ſaid the Biſhop, In your Anſwers. No, ſaid Tudſon again, I have not therein offended; and ye, my Lord, pretend Charity, but nothing thereof appeareth in your Works. Thus after a few Words, the Biſhop did likewiſe pronounce againſt him

Of theſe Articles read before.

Sentence of Condemnation; which being read, the godly Martyr was committed to the Secular Power, and ſo with much Patience finiſhed this Life with the others before named, the 27th Day of January.

Sentence againſt J. Tudſon.

5. John Went, Martyr.

JOHN WENT born in Langham in Eſſex within the Dioceſs of London, of the Age of 27, and a Sheerman by Occupation, was firſt examined (as is partly mentioned before) by Dr. Story upon the Sacrament of the Altar, and becauſe the poor Man did not accord with him thoroughly in the real Preſence of the Body and Blood of Chriſt, the ſaid Dr. Story ſent him up to Bonner Biſhop of London. Who likewiſe, after divers Examinations upon the Articles aforeſaid in the Conſiſtory, attempted the like Manner of Perſuaſions with him as he did to the others, to recant and return. To whom in few Words, the ſaid Went anſwered again, He would not; but that by the Leave of God, he would ſtand firm and conſtant in that he had ſaid. And when the Biſhop yet notwithſtanding did ſtill urge and call upon him with Words and fair Gloſſes, to give over himſelf to their Opinion, he could have no other Anſwer of him but this, No, I ſay as I have ſaid, &c. Whereupon being condemned by the Biſhop's Sentence, he was committed unto the Sheriffs (whom that ſhameleſs Shaveling at that Time abuſed for his ſervile Butchers) and ſo brought to his Martyrdom, which he with no leſs Conſtancy ſuffered to the End, with the reſt of that bleſſed Society of Martyrs abovenamed.

J. Went condemned.

6. Iſabel Foſter, Martyr.

WITH theſe five Perſons above recited and condemned, were alſo two Women in the ſaid Company condemned the ſame Time, and likewiſe burned for the ſame Cauſe; the one a Wife, called Iſabel Foſter, the other a Maid, named Joan Warne, otherwiſe, Laſkford.

This aforeſaid Iſabel was born in Grafeſtock in the Dioceſs of Carliſle, and was afterwards marry'd to one John Foſter, Cutler, of the Pariſh of St. Bride's in Fleet-ſtreet, being of the Age of fifty five Years. She likewiſe, for not coming to their Church, was ſent to Biſhop Bonner, who put her in Priſon, and examin'd her ſundry Times, but ſhe would never be overcome nor removed from the conſtant Confeſſion of Chriſt's Goſpel.

At length, coming unto her final Examination before the Biſhop in the Conſiſtory the 15th Day of the ſaid Month of January, ſhe was moved again whether ſhe would yet go from her former Anſwers. Whereunto ſhe gave a reſolute Anſwer in few Words; I will not, ſaith ſhe, go from them by God's Grace; and thereunto did adhere, neither being caſt down by the menacing Threats of the Biſhop, nor yet yielding through his alluring Entice-ments, promiſing both Life and Liberty, if ſhe would aſſociate herſelf in the Unity of the catholick Church. Whereunto ſhe ſaid again in this wiſe, That ſhe truſted ſhe was never out of the catholick Church, &c. and ſo perſiſting in the ſame, continued conſtant till the

The Words of Iſabel Foſter at her laſt Examination.

Sentence definitive was pronounced, and then ſhe was committed by Commandment of the Biſhop to the ſecular Power, and ſo brought a few Days after to the Stake, the 27th Day of the aforeſaid Month; where ſhe, like a faithful Witneſs of the Lord's Truth (with the other Five aforeſaid) ended her Troubles here, to find a better Reſt in the Kingdom of Chriſt our Saviour.

Iſabel Foſter condemned.

7. Joan Laſhford, alias Joan Warne, Martyr.

IN this Book mention hath been made of one Elizabeth Warne, who with her Husband John Warne (as is aforeſaid) in the Beginning of Queen Mary's Reign, was apprehended in Bow-church-yard for being there at a Communion, and both ſuffered for the ſame; firſt the Man, in the Month of May; then the Wife, in July after; and now the Daughter, in the Month of January, follow'd her Parents in the ſame Martyrdom. Furthermore, in the ſame Place following, Mention was made alſo of Dr. Story, who there (we ſaid) was ſomewhat near unto the ſaid Parties, either in Kindred or Alliance; however, as I have heard ſince, there was no Kindred between them, but only that ſhe was his Servant. Yet notwithſtanding, the ſaid Dr. Story (as it is above ſpecify'd) before he was a Commiſſoner, made Interceſſion for the Parties to Dr. Martin, then Commiſſioner; but afterwards, being placed in Commiſſion himſelf, he ſo far forgot himſelf, and his old Servant, that he became no ſmall Procurer of their Deaths. I will not here expoſtulate with the hard Heart of that Man, nor with his Inconſtancy; who yet notwithſtanding, after he had brought them to Death, was arreſted himſelf for threeſcore Pounds, charged with Debt in their Behalf; which if it be true, it may thereby appear that he was in ſome Manner ally'd unto them. But leaving that Perſon to the good Pleaſure of God, let us return to what we have in Hand.

This Joan Laſhford, born in the Pariſh of Little Alhallows in Thames-ſtreet, was the Daughter of one Robert Laſhford, Cutler, and of the aforeſaid Elizabeth, who afterwards was marry'd to John Warne, Upholſter, who (as is before ſaid) was perſecuted for the Goſpel of God to the burning Fire; and after him his Wife; and after her, this Joan Laſhford, her Daughter; who, about the Age of twenty Years, miniſtring to her Father and Mother in Priſon, ſuſpected and known to be of the ſame Doctrine and Religion, was ſent to Bonner Biſhop of London by Dr. Story, (as is above in the Anſwer to the Articles declared) and ſo committed to the Poultry Compter, where ſhe remained about five Weeks, and from thence convey'd to Newgate, where ſhe continu'd ſome Months.

After that, remaining Priſoner in the Cuſtody of Bonner, and being examin'd, her Confeſſion was, that for above a Twelve-month before ſhe came not to the Popiſh Maſs Service in the Church, neither would, either to receive the Sacrament of the Altar, or to be confeſſed, becauſe her Conſcience would not ſuffer her ſo to do; confeſſing and proteſting, that in the Sacrament of the Altar there is not the real Preſence of Chriſt's Body and Blood; nor that auricular Confeſſion or Abſolution after the Popiſh Sort, was neceſſary, nor the Maſs to be good, or according to the Scripture, but ſaid, that both the ſaid Sacrament, Confeſſion, Abſolution, and the Maſs, with all their other ſuperfluous Sacraments, Ceremonies, and divine Service, as then uſed in this Realm of England, were moſt vile, and contrary to Chriſt's Word and Inſtitution; ſo that neither they were at the Beginning, nor ſhall be at the latter End. This godly Damſel, feeble and tender of Age, yet ſtrong by Grace, in this her Confeſſion and Faith ſtood ſo firm, that neither the flattering Promiſes, nor the violent Threats of the Biſhops could turn her; but being moved and exhorted by the Biſhop to return to the catholick Unity of the Church, boldly ſaid to him again, If ye will leave off your Abomination, ſo I will return, and otherwiſe I will not.

The worthy Conſtancy of a Maid.

Whereupon the Biſhop yet again promiſed her Pardon of all her Errors (as he called them) if ſhe would be conformed. To this ſhe anſwered again, ſaying to the Biſhop, Do as it pleaſeth you, and I pray God that you may do that which may pleaſe God.

The Condemnation of Joan Laſhford.

And thus ſhe conſtantly perſevering in the Lord's holy Truth, was by the Sentence definitive condemned and committed to the Sheriffs, by whom the aforeſaid 27th Day of January ſhe with the reſt being brought unto the Stake, there waſhed her Cloaths in the Blood of the Lamb, dying moſt conſtantly for his Word and Truth, to whom moſt lovingly ſhe eſpouſed herſelf.

And thus much concerning the Life, Story, and Condemnation of theſe ſeven Martyrs, before ſpecify'd.

The Hiſtory of five Martyrs who were burnt at Canterbury, at two Stakes in one Fire.

THESE five Martyrs ſuffered for the Truth of the Goſpel at Canterbury on the 31ſt Day of January, being one Man and four Women, whoſe Names be theſe:

John Lomas, a young Man, Anne Albright, Joan Catmer, Agnes Snoth, Widow, Joan Sole, Wife.

1. John Lomas, Martyr.

JOHN LOMAS, of the Pariſh of Tenderden, detected and preſented of that Religion which the Papiſts call Hereſy, and cited upon the ſame to appear at Canterbury, examined there of the firſt Article, whether he believed the catholick Church or no, anſwered thus; that he believed ſo much as is contained in God's Book, and no more.

Then being aſſigned to appear again under the Pain of the Law the next Wedneſday ſevennight after, which was the 17th Day of January, the ſaid Lomas was examined whether he would be confeſſed by a Prieſt or no, anſwered and ſaid, that he found it not written that he ſhould be confeſſed to any Prieſt in God's Book, neither would be confeſſed, unleſs he were accuſed by ſome Man of Sin. Again, examined whether he believed the Body of Chriſt to be in the Sacrament of the Anno 1556. Altar really under the Forms of Bread and Wine after the Conſecration, or no; he anſwered, that he believed no Reality of Chriſt's Body to be in the Sacrament; neither found he written, that he is there under Form or Treſſel, but he believed ſo much as is written. Being then demanded, whether he believed that there is a catholick Church or no, and whether he would be content to be a Member of the ſame, he anſwered thereunto, that he believed ſo much as was written in God's Book, and other Anſwer than this he refuſed to give, &c. Whereupon the Sentence was given and read againſt him the 18th Day of January, and ſo committed to the ſecular Power, he conſtantly ſuffered for the Conſcience of a true Faith, with the four Women here following:

Sentence againſt John Lomas.

2. Agnes Snoth, Martyr.

AGNES SNOTH, Widow, of the Pariſh of Smarden, likewiſe accuſed and cited for the true Profeſſion of Chriſt's Religion, was divers Times examined before the phariſaical Fathers. Who, there compelled to anſwer to ſuch Articles and Interrogatories as ſhould be adminiſtred unto her, firſt denied to be confeſſed to a Prieſt; notwithſtanding ſhe denied not to confeſs her Offences as one to another, but not auricularly to any Prieſt. And as touching the Sacrament of the Altar, ſhe proteſted that if ſhe or any other did receive the Sacrament ſo as Chriſt and his Apoſtles after him did deliver it, then ſhe and they did receive it to their Comfort: But as it is now uſed in the Church, ſhe ſaid that no Man could otherwiſe receive it than to his Damnation, as ſhe thought. Afterwards being examined again concerning Penance, whether it were a Sacrament or no, ſhe plainly denied the ſame, and that the popiſh Manner of their Abſolution was not conſonant to the Word, nor neceſſary to be taken; with other ſuch like, agreeing with the Anſwers and Confeſſion of John Lomas before mention'd. Whereupon the Sentence being likewiſe read, ſhe was committed to the Sheriffs of Canterbury, and ſo ſuffering Martyrdom with the reſt, declared herſelf a perfect and conſtant Witneſs of Chriſt and of his Truth, the 31ſt Day of January.

Auricular Confeſſion refuſed.

3. Anne Albright, alias Champnes, Martyr.

AGainſt Anne Albright, likewiſe appearing before the Judge and his Colleagues, it was alſo objected concerning the ſame Matter of Confeſſion. Whereunto ſhe anſwered in theſe Words, ſaying, That ſhe would not be confeſſed by a Prieſt; and added moreover, ſpeaking unto the Prieſts, You Prieſts (ſaid ſhe) are the Children of Perdition, and can do no good by your Confeſſion. And likewiſe ſpeaking unto the Judge and his Aſſiſtants, ſhe told them that they were Subverters of Chriſt's Truth.

And concerning the Sacrament of the Altar, ſhe ſaid it was a naughty and abominable Idol, and ſo utterly denied the ſame Sacrament. Thus perſiſting and perſevering in her former Sayings and Anſwers, ſhe was condemned the ſaid 18th Day of January, with the others abovementioned; with whom alſo ſhe ſuffered quietly, and with great Comfort, for the Truth of Chriſt's Religion.

4. Joan Sole.

IN like Manner Joan Sole, of the Pariſh of Horton, was condemned by the ſame Phariſees and Prieſts for not allowing auricular Confeſſion, and for denying the real Preſence and Subſtance of Chriſt to be in the Sacrament. Who, after their phariſaical Sentence being pronounced, was brought by the Sheriffs to the Stake with the other four, and ſuſtained the like Martyrdom with them, through the Aſſiſtance of God's holy Grace and Spirit mightily working in her, to the Glory of his Name, and Confirmation of his Truth.

5. Joan Catmer.

THE fifth and laſt of this heavenly Company of Martyrs, was Joan Catmer of the Pariſh of Hith, Wife (as it ſhould ſeem) of George Catmer burned before. Who being asked what ſhe ſaid to Confeſſion made to a Prieſt, denied to be confeſſed to any ſuch Prieſt. And moreover, the Judge ſpeaking of the Sacrament of the Altar, ſhe ſaid and affirmed, That ſhe believed not in that Sacrament, as it was then uſed, for that it was made, ſaid ſhe, a very Idol. In this her Confeſſion ſhe remaining and perſiſting, was by the like Sentence cruelly by them condemned, and ſo ſuffered with the aforeſaid John Lomas, and the other three Martyrs, ratifying and confeſſing with their Blood the true Knowledge and Doctrine of the glorious Goſpel of Chriſt Jeſus our Saviour.

Theſe five Perſons were burnt at two Stakes in one Fire, together at Canterbury, as is before ſaid; who, when the Fire was flaming about their Ears, did ſing Pſalms. Whereat the good Knight Sir John Norton, being there preſent, wept bitterly at the Sight thereof.

The Judges and other Aſſiſtants which ſate upon her and the other four abovementioned, were Richard Faucet, John Warren, John Mills, Robert Collins, and John Baker the Notary.

The Hiſtory of the Reverend Paſtor and Prelate, Thomas Cranmer, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Martyr, burnt at Oxford for the Confeſſion of Chriſt's true Doctrine under Queen MARY, March 21, 1556.

AS concerning the Life and Eſtate of that moſt reverend Father in God, and worthy Prelate of godly Memory, Thomas Cranmer late Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and of the original Cauſe and Occaſion of his Preferment unto the archiepiſcopal Dignity, who by many hath been thought to have procured the ſame by Friendſhip only, and of ſome others eſteemed unworthy ſo high a Vocation; it is firſt therefore to be noted and conſidered, that the ſame Thomas Cranmer coming of an ancient Parentage, from the Conqueſt to be deduced, and continuing ſince in the Name and Family of a Gentleman, was born in a Village called Arſelacton in Nottinghamſhire, of whoſe ſaid Name and Family there remaineth at theſe Days one Mannor and Manſion-houſe in Lincolnſhire, called Cranmer-hall, &c. ſometime the Heritage of the ſaid Stock and Family. Who being from his Infancy kept at School, and carefully brought up, came in Proceſs of Time unto the Univerſity of Cambridge, and there proſpering in good Knowledge amongſt the better Sort of Students, was choſen Fellow of Jeſus-college in Cambridge. And ſo being Maſter of Art, and Fellow of the ſame College, it chanced him to marry a Gentleman's Daughter: By Means whereof he loſt and gave over his Fellowſhip there, and became the Reader in Buckingham College; and becauſe he would with more Diligence apply that his Office of reading, he placed his ſaid Wife in an Inn, called the Dolphin in Cambridge, the Wife of the Houſe being of Affinity unto her. By reaſon whereof, and for that his often Reſort unto his Wife in that Inn, he was much marked by ſome popiſh Merchants: Whereupon aroſe the ſlanderous Noiſe and Report againſt him, after he was preferred to the Archbiſhoprick of Canterbury, raiſed up by the malicious Diſdain of certain malignant Adverſaries to Chriſt and his Truth, bruting Abroad every where, that he was but an Hoſtler, and therefore without all good Learning. Of whoſe malicious Reports, one of their Practices in that Behalf ſhall hereafter be declared, as Place and Time ſhall ſerve.

But in the mean Time to return to the Matter preſent: Whilſt this ſaid Mr. Cranmer continued as a Reader in Buckingham College, his Wife died in Childbed. After whoſe Death the Maſters and Fellows of Jeſus College deſirous again of their old Companion, namely for his Towardlineſs in Learning, choſe him again Fellow of the ſame College. Where he remaining at his Study, became in few Years after the Reader of Divinity Lecture in the ſame College, and in ſuch ſpecial Eſtimation and Reputation with the whole Univerſity, that being Doctor of Divinity, he was commonly appointed one of the Heads (which are two or three of the chiefeſt learned Men) to examine ſuch as yearly proceed in Commencement, either Bachelors or Doctors of Divinity, by whoſe Approbation the whole Univerſity licenſed them to proceed unto their Degree, and again by whoſe Diſallowance the Univerſity alſo rejected them for a Time to proceed, until they be better furniſhed with more Knowledge.

Now Dr. Cranmer, ever much favouring the Knowledge of the Scripture, would never admit any to proceed in Divinity, unleſs they were ſubſtantially ſeen in the Hiſtory of the Bible: By means whereof certain Friars, and other religious Perſons, who were principally brought up in the Study of School-authors, without Regard had to the Authority of the Scripture, were commonly rejected by him; ſo that he was greatly, for that his ſevere Examination, of the religious Sort much hated, and had in great Indignation; and yet it came to paſs in the End, that divers of them being thus compelled to ſtudy the Scriptures, became afterwards very well learned and well-affected; inſomuch that when they proceeded Doctors of Divinity, they could not overmuch extol and commend Dr. Cranmer's Goodneſs towards them, who for a Time had put them back, to aſpire unto better Knowledge and Perfection. Among whom Dr. Barret, a white Friar, who afterwards dwelt at Norwich, was handled after that Manner, giving him no leſs Commendation for his happy rejecting of him for a better Amendment. Thus much I repeat, that our apiſh and popiſh Sort of ignorant Prieſts, may well underſtand, that this his Exerciſe, Kind of Life, and Vocation, was not altogether Hoſtler-like. Anno 1556.

Well, to go forwards; like as he was neither in Fame unknown, nor in Knowledge obſcure, ſo was he greatly ſollicited by Dr. Capon, to have been one of the Fellows in the Foundation of Cardinal Wolſey's College in Oxford, which he utterly refuſed, not without Danger of Indignation. Notwithſtanding, foreſeeing that which after happened, to the utter Confuſion of many well-affected learned Men there, without Conſideration (becauſe Man's Glory was there more ſought for than God's) he ſtood to the Danger of the ſaid Indignation, which chanced more proſperouſly unto him within few Years after than he looked for. For while he thus continued in Cambridge, the great and weighty Cauſe of King Henry the Eighth's Divorce with the Lady Katherine Dowager of Spain, came into Queſtion; which being many Ways by the Space of two or three Years amongſt the Canoniſts, Civilians, and other learned Men, diverſly diſputed and debated, it came to paſs that this ſaid Dr. Cranmer, by reaſon that the Plague was in Cambridge, reſorted to Waltham-Abbey, to one Mr. Creſſey's Houſe there, whoſe Wife was of Kin to the ſaid Mr. Cranmer. And for that he had two Sons of the ſaid Mr. Creſſey with him at Cambridge as his Pupils, he reſted at Waltham-croſs, at the Houſe of the ſaid Mr. Creſſey, with the ſaid two Children, during that Summer-time while the Plague reigned.

Queſtion of the King's Divorce with Katherine Dowager.

In this Summer-time Cardinal Campeius and Cardinal Wolſey, being in Commiſſion from the Pope, to hear and determine that great Cauſe in Controverſy between the King and the Queen, his pretended Wife, dallied and delayed all the Summer-time until the Month of Auguſt came, in hearing the ſaid Cauſe in Controverſy debated. When Auguſt was come, the ſaid Cardinals little minding to proceed to give Sentence, took Occaſion to finiſh their Commiſſion, and not further to determine therein, pretending that it was not permitted by the Laws to keep Courts of eccleſiaſtical Matters in Harveſt-time: Which ſudden Stay and giving over of the ſaid Commiſſion by both the Cardinals, being unknown to the King, it ſo much moved him, that he taking it as a Mock at the Cardinals Hands, commanded the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk to diſpatch forthwith Cardinal Campeius home again to Rome; and ſo in haſte removed himſelf from London to Waltham for a Night or two, while his Houſhold removed to Greenwich: By Means whereof it happened that the Harbingers lodged Dr. Stephen Gardiner, Secretary, and Dr. Foxe, Almoner, (who were the chief Furtherers, Preferrers, and Defenders on the King's Behalf of the ſaid Cauſe) in the Houſe of the ſaid Mr. Creſſey, where the ſaid Dr. Cranmer was alſo lodged and reſident. When Supper-time came, the three Doctors met together; Dr. Stephen Gardiner and Dr.

Foxe

Anno 1556. Foxe much marvelling at Dr. Cranmer's being there. Who declared to them the Cauſe of his being there, namely, becauſe the Plague was in Cambridge: And as they were of old Acquaintance, ſo the Secretary and the Almoner right well entertained Dr. Cranmer, minding to underſtand his Opinion concerning the great Buſineſs they had in Hand. And ſo as good Occaſion ſerved, while they were at Supper, they conferred with Dr. Cranmer concerning the King's Cauſe, requeſting him to give his Judgment and Opinion what he thought therein.

Dr. Gardiner, Dr. Foxe, and Dr. Cranmer conferring together in the King's Cauſe.

Whereunto Dr. Cranmer anſwered, That he could ſay little to the Matter, for that he had not ſtudied nor looked for it. Notwithſtanding he ſaid to them, that in his Opinion, they made more ado in proſecuting the Law Eccleſiaſtical, than needed. It were better, as I ſuppoſe, ſaid Dr. Cranmer, that the Queſtion, Whether a Man may marry his Brother's Wife or no? were diſcuſſed by the Divines, and by the Authority of the Word of God, whereby the Conſcience of the Prince might be better ſatisfied and quieted, than thus from Year to Year by unneceſſary Delays to prolong the Time, leaving the very Truth of the Matter unboulted out by the Word of God. There is but one Truth in it, which the Scripture will ſoon declare, make open and manifeſt, being by learned Men well handled, and that may be as well done in England in the Univerſities here, as at Rome, or elſewhere in any foreign Nation, the Authority whereof will compel any Judge ſoon to come to a definitive Sentence: And therefore, as I take it, you might this Way have made an End of this Matter long ſince. When Dr. Cranmer had thus ended his Tale, the other two liked well his Device, and wiſhed that they had ſo proceeded beforetime, and thereupon conceived ſome Matter of that Device to inſtruct the King withal, who was then minded to ſend to Rome again for a new Commiſſion.

Dr. Cranmer's Anſwer in the Queſtion of the King's Divorce.

Now the next Day, when the King removed to Greenwich, like as he took himſelf not well handled by the Cardinals in thus deferring his Cauſe, ſo his Mind being uneaſy, and deſirous to ſee an End of this long and tedious Sute, he called unto him the two principal Managers of his Cauſe, namely, Dr. Gardiner and Dr. Foxe, What now, my Maſters (quoth the King) ſhall we do in this infinite Cauſe of mine? I ſee by it there muſt be a new Commiſſion procured from Rome, and when we ſhall have an End, God knoweth, and not I.

When the King had declared ſomewhat of his Mind herein, Dr. Foxe the Almoner ſaid to the King again, We truſt that there ſhall be better Ways deviſed for your Majeſty, than to make travel ſo far as to Rome any more in your Highneſs's Cauſe, which by chance was put into our Heads the other Night being at Waltham. The King being very deſirous to underſtand his Meaning, ſaid, Who hath taken in hand to inſtruct you by any better or ſhorter Way to proceed in our ſaid Cauſe? Then ſaid Dr. Fox, We happened to lodge the other Night at one Mr. Creſſey's Houſe in Waltham, your Highneſs being there, where we met with an old Acquaintance of ours, named Dr. Cranmer, with whom having Conference concerning your Highneſs's Cauſe, he thought that the neareſt Way was, firſt to inſtruct and quiet your Majeſty's Conſcience by trying your Highneſs's Queſtion out by the Word of God, and thereupon to proceed to a final Sentence. With this Report the Secretary was diſpleas'd with the Almoner, becauſe they did not take the Glory of this Invention to themſelves. And when the Secretary would have ſeemed by colourable Words to make it appear to the King, that it was a Project of their own deviſing, the King immediately cry'd out, Where is this Dr. Cranmer, is he ſtill at Waltham? They anſwered that they left him there. Marry, ſaid the King, I will ſurely ſpeak with him, and therefore let him be ſent for out of Hand. I perceive (quoth the King) that that Man hath the Sow by the Right Ear. And if I had known this Device but two Years ago, it had been in my Way a great Piece of Money, and had alſo rid me out of much Diſquietneſs. Whereupon Dr. Cranmer was ſent for, and being removed from Waltham to Cambridge, and ſo towards his Friends in Nottinghamſhire, a Poſt went for him. But when he came to London, he began to quarrel with his two Acquaintances, that he by their Means was thus troubled and brought thither to be incumber'd in a Matter wherein he had nothing at all travelled in Study; and therefore moſt inſtantly intreated them, that they would make his Excuſe in ſuch a Manner, that he might be diſpatched away from coming in the King's Preſence. They promiſed and took the Matter upon them ſo to do, if by any Means they might compaſs it. But all was in vain; for the more they began to excuſe Dr. Cranmer's Abſence, the more the King inſiſted to have him brought into his Preſence out of Hand; ſo that no Excuſe ſerving, he was obliged immediately to wait on the King at Court, whom the gentle Prince benignly accepting, demanded his Name, and ſaid unto him, Were not you at Waltham at ſuch a Time, in the Company of my Secretary and my Almoner? Dr. Cranmer confeſſing the ſame; the King ſaid again, Had you not Conference with them concerning our Matter of Divorce now in Queſtion after this Sort, repeating the Manner and Order thereof? That is right true, if it pleaſe your Highneſs, quoth Dr. Cranmer. Well (ſaid the King) I well perceive that you have the right Scope of this Matter. You muſt underſtand (quoth the King) that I have been long troubled in Conſcience, and now I perceive that by this Means I might have been long ago relieved one Way or other from the ſame, if we had this Way proceeded. And therefore Mr. Doctor, I pray you, and nevertheleſs becauſe you are a Subject, I charge and command you (all your other Buſineſs and Affairs ſet apart) to take ſome Pains to ſee this my Cauſe to be furthered according to your Device, as much as it may lie in you, ſo that I may ſhortly underſtand whereunto I may truſt. For this I proteſt before God and the World, that I ſeek not to be divorced from the Queen, if by any Means I might juſtly be perſwaded that this our Matrimony were inviolable, and not againſt the Laws of God; for otherwiſe there was never Cauſe to move me to ſeek any ſuch Extremity. Neither was there ever Prince had a more gentle, a more obedient and loving Companion and Wife than the Queen is, nor did I ever fancy Woman in all Reſpects better, if this doubt had not riſen; aſſuring you that for the ſingular Virtues wherewith ſhe is

Dr. Cranmer ſent for to the King.

Diſcourſe between the King and Dr. Cranmer.

Mark this you Papiſts, who ſo raſhly judge the King's Divorce, and the Pope's Overthrow to have ſprung of light Cauſes.

Dr. Cranmer's Device reported to the King.

indued, beſides the Conſideration of her noble Stock, I could be right well contented ſtill to remain with her, if ſo it would ſtand with the Will and Pleaſure of Almighty God. And thus greatly commending her many and ſingular Qualities, the King further ſaid, I therefore pray you with an indifferent Eye, and with as much Dexterity as lieth in you, that you for your Part do handle the Matter for the diſcharging of both our Conſciences.

Dr. Cranmer much diſabling himſelf to meddle in ſo weighty a Matter, beſought the King's Highneſs to commit the Trial and examining of this Matter by the Word of God, unto the beſt learned Men of both his Univerſities, Cambridge and Oxford. You ſay well, ſaid the King, and I am content therewith. But yet nevertheleſs, I will have you eſpecially to write your Mind therein. And ſo calling the Earl of Wiltſhire to him, ſaid, I pray you my Lord, let Dr. Cranmer have Entertainment in your Houſe at Durham Place for a Time, to the Intent he may be there quiet to accompliſh my Requeſt, and let him lack neither Books, nor any Thing requiſite for his Study. And thus after the King's Departure, Dr. Cranmer went with my Lord of Wiltſhire unto his Houſe, wherein he incontinently wrote his Mind concerning the King's Queſtion; adding to the ſame, beſides the Authorities of the Scriptures, of general Councils, and of ancient Writers, alſo his Opinion which was this; That the Biſhop of Rome had no ſuch Authority, as whereby he might diſpenſe with the Word of God and the Scripture. When Dr. Cranmer had wrote this Book, and committed it to the King, the King ſaid unto him, Will you ſtand to this that you have here written before the Biſhop of Rome? That will I do, by God's Grace, quoth Dr. Cranmer, if your Majeſty do ſend me thither. Marry, quoth the King, I will ſend you even to him in a ſure Ambaſſage.

And thus by the Means of Dr. Cranmer's handling of this Matter with the King, not only certain learned Men were ſent Abroad to the moſt Part of the Univerſities in Chriſtendom, to diſpute the Queſtion, but alſo the ſame being by Commiſſion diſputed by the Divines in both Univerſities of Cambridge and Oxford, it was there concluded, That no ſuch Matrimony was by the Word of God lawful.

Whereupon a ſolemn Ambaſſage was then prepared and ſent to the Biſhop of Rome, then being at Bonony, wherein went the Earl of Wiltſhire, Dr. Cranmer, Dr. Stokeſley, Dr. Carne, Dr. Bennet, and divers other learned Men and Gentlemen.

And when the Time came that they ſhould come before the Biſhop of Rome to declare the Cauſe of their Ambaſſage, the Biſhop ſitting on high in his Cloth of State, and in his rich Apparel, with his Sandals on his Feet, offering, as it were, his Foot to be kiſſed by the Ambaſſadors; the Earl of Wiltſhire diſdaining thereat, ſtood ſtill, and made no Countenance thereunto, ſo that all the reſt kept themſelves from that Idolatry.

Howbeit, one Thing is not here to be omitted, as a Prognoſticate of our Separation from the See of Rome, which then chanced by a Spaniel of the Earl of Wiltſhire. For he having there a great Spaniel which came with him out of England, ſtood directly between the Earl and the Biſhop of Rome.

And when the ſaid Biſhop, that Servant of the Servants of God (as he in great Humility ſtyleth himſelf) offered his Foot to be kiſſed, and, while they ſtood ſtill and declin'd it, the ſaid * Spaniel ſeeing the Foot ſhining with Gold and Jewels, caught hold of it, as taking it to be ſome Kind of Repaſt, and bit it. The Pope diſdaining the Affront, in haſte pulled in that glorious Foot, and kicked the Dog with the other: And while the Engliſhmen ſmil'd in their Sleeves at the Omen, the Pontifical Biſhop, knitting his Brows, demanded the Cauſe of their Embaſſy. Which being declared, the Earl of Wiltſhire deliver'd Cranmer's Book to the Pope, telling him withal, That there were learned Men come along with him from England, who were ready to defend what was contained in that Book, by the holy Scriptures, the Councils, and the Writings of the Orthodox Fathers, againſt all who ſhould contradict it. Anno 1556.

The un-mannerly Nature of a Dog preſuming to kiſs the Pope's Foot.

* Fludd like a ſcurrilous Buffoon, in citing this Paſſage, doth not call this a Proteſtant's Dog, but a Proteſtant Dog! As if even a Dog were capable of the Proteſtant Religion.

The Pope often promis'd the Ambaſſador to appoint a Day for the Diſputation; but it was a Promiſe which he never perform'd; by affected Delays ſpinning out the Time, as his Cardinals had before done in England. So giving the Ambaſſadors moſt honourable and court-like Entertainment, and having made Cranmer (whom he either knew or ſuppos'd to be the Author of that Book concerning the King's Marriage with Catherine) his Penitentiary in England, Ireland and Wales; being mighty timerous, and equally afraid of the Emperor, the French King, and ours, he durſt not come to any Reſolution in a Matter of ſuch Moment, but diſmiſs'd the Aſſembly, without determining, or even propoſing any Thing about it.

Dr. Cranmer made Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

From hence, while the reſt return'd Home, Cranmer, by the King's private Order, made the Emperor and the Princes of Germany in his Way. At that Time the Emperor was in an Expedition againſt the Turk, who was engag'd in the Siege of Vienna, the Capital of Auſtria. Whom when Cranmer attended, and asked him in the King's Name, which of his Domeſticks or others that he knew would contradict him? Cornelius Agrippa was mention'd; a Man better verſed in the Secrets of Philoſophy than in Divinity. But he being eaſily brought over to Cranmer's Side of the Queſtion, did readily join in perſuading the other learned Men of the Emperor's Retinue, not to oppoſe Cranmer; who, he ſaid, had brought the Truth along with him. Therefore meeting with no Oppoſition, he took his Leave of the Emperor. From whence taking a Tour throughout Germany, he brought home with him to the King the Opinions and Judgment of the moſt learned Men there, as well in the Univerſities, as in the Courts of Princes, all agreeing with his own.

This Matter thus proſpering on Dr. Cranmer's Behalf, as well touching the King's Queſtion, as concerning the Invalidity of the Pope's Authority, Biſhop Warham, then Archbiſhop of Canterbury, departed this tranſitory Life, whereby that Dignity then being in the King's Gift, was immediately given to Dr. Cranmer, as worthy, for his good Services, of ſuch a Promotion. Thus much concerning the Preferment of Dr. Cranmer, and by what Means he arrived at this Dignity: Not by Flattery, nor by Bribes, nor by any other unlawful Means; which Things I have more at large diſcourſed, to ſtop the railing Mouths Anno 1556. of ſuch, who being themſelves obſcure and unlearned, are not aſhamed moſt ſcurrilouſly to detract ſo learned a Man with the Nickname of Hoſtler, whom for his godly Zeal to ſincere Religion, they ought with much Humility to have had in Regard and Reputation.

Now as concerning his Behaviour and Method of living towards God and the World, being now entered into his ſaid Dignity, and forſomuch as the Apoſtle St. Paul writing to two Biſhops, Timothy and Titus, ſetteth out unto us a perfect Deſcription of a true Biſhop, with all the other Properties and Conditions belonging to the ſame, unto which Pattern it is rare in theſe ſtrange Days to find the Image of any Biſhop correſpondent; yet for Example ſake let us take this Archbiſhop of Canterbury; and try him by the Rule thereof, to ſee either how near he cometh to the Deſcription of St. Paul, or elſe how far off he ſwerveth from the common Courſe of others in his Time, of his Calling. The Rule of St. Paul is found, 1 Tim. 3. alſo in his Epiſtle to Titus, chap. 1. in theſe Words:

The Rule of a true Biſhop. A Biſhop muſt be faultleſs, as becometh the Miniſter of God. Not ſtubborn, nor angry, no Drunkard, no Fighter, nor given to filthy Lucre; but Harborous, one that loveth Goodneſs, ſober-minded, righteous, holy, temperate, and ſuch as cleaveth unto the true Word and Doctrine, that he may be able to exhort, &c.

Unto this Rule and Touch-ſtone, to lay now the Life and Converſation of this Archbiſhop, we will firſt begin with that which is thus written,

A Biſhop muſt be faultleſs, as becometh the Miniſter of God.

As no Man is without Sin, and as every man carrieth about him his peculiar Vice or Failings; yet nevertheleſs the Apoſtle meaneth, that the Biſhop and Miniſter muſt be faultleſs in Compariſon of the common Converſation of Men of the World, who ſeem to live more licentiouſly at their own Liberties and Pleaſures, than a Biſhop or Miniſter ought to do, having a ſmall Regard to the giving of good Example; which a Biſhop and Miniſter moſt carefully ought to conſider, leſt by his diſſolute Life the Word of God be ſlandered and evil ſpoken of: To avoid which, and the better to accompliſh this Precept of the Apoſtle, this worthy Man gave himſelf up to continual Study, ſtrictly obſerving the Order that he in the Univerſity commonly uſed, that is, to be by five a Clock in the Morning at his Book, and ſo continuing in Prayer and Study till nine, he then apply'd himſelf (if the Prince's Affairs did not call him away) until Dinner time to hear Suiters, and to diſpatch ſuch Matters as appertained to his ſpecial Cure and Charge, committing his temporal Affairs, both of his Houſhold and other foreign Buſineſs, to his Officers: So that ſuch Things were never Impediments either to his Study, or to his paſtoral Charge, which principally conſiſted in Reformation of corrupt Religion, and in ſetting forth of true and ſincere Doctrine. For the moſt Part always being in Commiſſion, he aſſociated himſelf with learned Men for ſifting or bolting ſomething or other for the Advantage and Profit of the Church of England. By Means whereof, and what for his private Study, he was never idle; beſides that, he accounted it no idle Point to beſtow an Hour or two of the Day in reading over ſuch Works and Books as daily came from beyond the Seas.

After Dinner, if any Suters were attendant, he would very diligently hear them, and diſpatch them in ſuch an obliging Manner, that every one admired and commended his Lenity and Gentleneſs, although the Caſe required that ſometimes divers of them were committed by him to Priſon. And having no Suters after Dinner, for an Hour, or thereabouts, he would play at Cheſs, or behold ſuch as were at Play. That done, then again to his ordinary Study, where he commonly ſtood (ſeldom ſat down) till five of the Clock, which Hour he beſtowed in hearing the Common Prayer, and walking, or uſing ſome innocent Recreation till Supper-time. At Supper, if he had no Appetite (as many Times he would not ſup) yet he would ſit down at the Table, having his ordinary Proviſion of his Meſs furniſhed with expedient Company, he wearing his Gloves on his Hands, becauſe he would, as it were, thereby wean himſelf from eating of Meat, but yet entertaining the Company with ſuch edifying Diſcourſe as did much delight the Hearers; ſo that by this Means Hoſpitality was well furniſhed, and the Alms-cheſt well maintained for Relief of the Poor. After Supper, he would ſpend, at leaſt, one Hour in walking, or ſome other harmleſs paſs-time, and then again till nine o' Clock at his Study: So that no Hour of the Day was ſpent in vain, but the ſame was ſo beſtow'd, as tended to the Glory of God, the Service of the Prince, or the Advantage of the Church. By all which he gained a good Report amongſt Men, ſo that his Converſation, in Compariſon with other Men, ſeem'd to be faultleſs, as the Miniſter of God.

That a Biſhop ought not to be ſtubborn.

Secondly, it is required, That a Biſhop ought not to be ſtubborn. With which Kind of Vice, without great wrong, this Archbiſhop in no wiſe ought to be charged; whoſe Nature was ſuch, as none more gentle, or ſooner won to an honeſt Suit or Purpoſe, eſpecially in ſuch Things, wherein by his Word, Writing, Counſel or Deed, he might gratify either any gentle or noble Man, or do good to any mean Perſon, or elſe relieve the Needy and Poor. Only in Cauſes pertaining to God or his Prince, no Man more ſtout, more conſtant, or more hard to be won; as in that Part his earneſt Defence in the Parliament-houſe above three Days together, in diſputing againſt the ſix Articles of Gardiner's Device, can teſtify. And though the King would needs have them upon ſome politick Conſideration to go forward, yet he ſo handled himſelf as well in the Parliament-houſe, as afterwards by writing ſo obediently and with ſuch humble Behaviour in Words towards his Prince, proteſting the Cauſe not to be his, but Almighty God's, who was the Author of all Truth, that the King did not only well like his Defence (willing him to depart out of the Parliament-houſe into the Council-chamber, whilſt the Act ſhould paſs and be granted for Safeguard of his Conſcience; which he with humble Proteſtation refuſed, hoping that his Majeſty in Proceſs of Time would revoke them again) but alſo after the Parliament was finiſhed, the King perceiving the zealous Affection that the Archbiſhop bare towards the Defence of his Cauſe, which many Ways by Scriptures and manifold Authorities and Reaſons he had ſubſtantially confirmed and defended, ſent the Lord Cromwell, then Vicegerent, with the two Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk, and all the Lords of the Parliament, to dine with him at Lambeth; where it was declared by the Vicegerent, and the two Dukes, that it was the King's Pleaſure, that they all ſhould in his Highneſs's Behalf, cheriſh, comfort, and animate him, as one that for his Travel in that Parliament had ſhewed himſelf both greatly learned, and alſo diſcreet and wiſe, and therefore they willed him not to be diſcouraged for any Thing that was paſſed contrary to his Allegations. He moſt humbly thanked the King's Majeſty for his great Goodneſs towards him, and them for all their Pains, ſaying, I hope in God, that hereafter my Allegations and Authorities ſhall take Place to the Glory of God and the Advantage of the Realm; in the mean Time I will ſatisfy myſelf with the honourable Conſent of your Honours, and the whole Parliament.

Here is to be noted, that this Man's ſtout and godly Defence of the Truth herein ſo bound the Prince's Conſcience, that he would not permit the Truth in that Man to be clean overthrown with Authority and Power; and therefore this Way God working in the Prince's Mind, a plain Token was declared hereby, that all Things were not ſo ſincerely handled in the Confirmation of the ſaid ſix Articles as it ought to have been, for elſe the Prince might have had a juſt Cauſe to have born his great Indignation towards the Archbiſhop. Let us pray that the like Stoutneſs may be perceived in all eccleſiaſtical and learned Men, where the Truth ought to be defended, and alſo the like relenting and flexibility may take Place in Princes and Noblemen, when they ſhall have Occaſion offered them to maintain the ſame, ſo that they utterly overwhelm not the Truth by Self-will, Power and Authority. Now in the End this Archbiſhop's Conſtancy was ſuch towards God's Cauſe, that he confirmed all his Doings by bitter Death in the Fire, without Reſpect of any worldly Treaſure or Pleaſure. And as concerning his Stoutneſs in his Prince's Cauſe, the contrary Reſiſtance of the Duke of Northumberland againſt him proved right well his good Mind that Way; which chanced by reaſon that he would not conſent unto the diſſolving of Chantries, until the King came of Age, to the Intent that they might then better ſerve to furniſh his royal Eſtate, than to have ſo great Treaſure conſumed in his Nonage. Which his Stoutneſs, joined with ſuch Simplicity, ſurely was thought to divers of the Council a Thing incredible, eſpecially in ſuch Sort to contend with him, who was ſo accounted in this Realm, as few or none would or durſt withſtand him.

Example for eccleſiaſtical Paſtors.

So dear to him was the Cauſe of God, and of his Prince, that for the one he would not keep his Conſcience clogged, nor for the other lurk or hide his Head. Otherwiſe (as it is ſaid) his very Enemies might eaſily intreat him in any Cauſe reaſonable; ſo that he was altogether free from the Vice of Stubbornneſs, and rather culpable of overmuch Facility and Gentleneſs. Anno 1556.

Not Angry.

Then followeth, Not Angry. Surely if over-much Patience may be a Vice, this Man may ſeem to offend rather on this Side than on the contrary. Albeit for all his Doings I cannot ſay: For the moſt Part ſuch was his Mortification that Way, that few we ſhall find in whom the Saying of our Saviour Chriſt ſo much prevailed as with him, who would not only have a Man to forgive his Enemies, but alſo to pray for them; that Leſſon never went out of his Memory. It was known that he had many cruel Enemies, not for his own Deſerts, but only for the Sake of his Religion: And yet whoſoever he was that ſought his Hindrance, either in Goods, Eſtimation, or Life, and upon Conference would ſeem never ſo ſlenderly to relent and excuſe himſelf, he would both forget the Offence, and ever afterwards familiarly entertain the Offender: Inſomuch that it became a common Proverb; Do unto my Lord of Canterbury a Diſpleaſure, or a ſhrewd Turn, and then you may be ſure to have him your Friend whilſt he liveth. Of which his gentle Diſpoſition in abſtaining from Revenge, amongſt many Examples thereof, I ſhall repeat one. The ſingular Patience of this Archbiſhop.

It happened an ignorant Prieſt and Parſon in the North Parts, (the Town is not now in Remembrance, but he was Kinſman to one Cherſey a Grocer in London; being one of thoſe Prieſts that uſed more to ſtudy at the Ale-houſe, than in his Chamber) to ſit on a Time with his honeſt Neighbours at the Ale-houſe in his own Pariſh, where they were talking in the Praiſe of my Lord Cranmer Archbiſhop of Canterbury: And this Prieſt envying his Name only for Religion ſake, ſaid to his Neighbours, What make you of him, he was but an Hoſtler, and hath no more Learning than the Goſlins that go yonder on the Green, with ſuch like ſlanderous and uncomely Words. His honeſt Neighbours not much liking his irreverend Speech, articled againſt him, and ſent their Complaint to the Lord Cromwel, then Vicegerent in Cauſes Eccleſiaſtical, who ſent for the Prieſt, and committed him to the Fleet, intending to have made him recant thoſe ſlanderous Words publickly at Paul Croſs. However the Lord Cromwel, having great Affairs of the Prince then in Hand, forgot his Priſoner in the Fleet: So that the ſaid Cherſey the Grocer, underſtanding that his Kinſman was in Confinement, only for ſpeaking Words againſt my Lord of Canterbury; conſulted with the Prieſt, and between them deviſed to apply rather to the Archbiſhop for his Deliverance, than to the Lord Cromwell, before whom he was accuſed: Well knowing the Difference of their Tempers, the one gentle and full of Clemency, the other ſomewhat more ſevere and rigid, eſpecially againſt a Papiſt: So that Cherſey took upon him firſt to try my Lord of Canterbury's Benignity, inaſmuch as his Couſin's Offence was only againſt him, and none other. Whereupon the ſaid Cherſey came to one of the Archbiſhop's Gentlemen (whoſe Father bought all his Spices and Fruit of the ſaid A Story between the Archbiſhop of Canterbury and a popiſh Prieſt.

Cherſey ſuing for his Kinſman to the Archbiſhop.

Anno 1556.

ſaid Cherſey, and ſo thereby of familiar Acquaintance with the Gentleman) and acquainted him with the Trouble his Kinſman was in, deſiring him to be a Means to my Lord his Maſter, to hear his Sute in the Behalf of his Kinſman.

The Matter was moved. The Archbiſhop, like a good-natur'd Man, would never ſhew himſelf ſtrange to the meaneſt Petitioner: He immediately ſent for the ſaid Cherſey, who appearing before him, declared, that there was a Kinſman of his in the Fleet, a Prieſt of the North Country, and as I may tell your Grace the Truth (quoth Cherſey) a Man of ſmall Civility, and of leſs Learning. And yet he hath a Parſonage there, which now (by reaſon that my Lord Cromwell hath laid him in Priſon) being in his Cure, is unſerved, and he hath continued in durance above theſe two Months, and is called to no Anſwer, and knows not when he ſhall come to any End; ſo that this Impriſonment conſumeth his Subſtance, and will utterly undo him, unleſs your Grace be his good Lord.

I know not the Man, ſaid the Archbiſhop, nor what he hath done why he ſhould be thus in Trouble.

Said Cherſey again, He only hath offended againſt your Grace, and againſt no Man elſe, as may well be perceived by the Articles objected againſt him, the Copy whereof the ſaid Cherſey then exhibited to the ſaid Archbiſhop of Canterbury; who well peruſing the ſaid Articles ſaid, This is the common Talk of all the ignorant popiſh Prieſts in England againſt me. Surely, ſaid he, I was never made privy to this Accuſation, and of his Confinement I never heard before this Time. Notwithſtanding, if there be nothing elſe to charge him withal againſt the Prince or any of the Council, I will at your Requeſt take Order with him, and ſend him Home again to his Cure to do his Duty; and ſo thereupon ſent his Ring to the Warden of the Fleet, deſiring him to ſend the Priſoner unto him, with his Keeper in the Afternoon.

The Prieſt ſent for to the Archbiſhop.

When the Keeper had brought the Priſoner at the Hour appointed, and Cherſey had well inſtructed his Couſin in any wiſe to ſubmit himſelf to the Archbiſhop, confeſſing his Fault, whereby that Way he ſhould moſt eaſily have an End and win his Favour: The Parſon was carried into the Garden at Lambeth, and there the Archbiſhop ſitting under the Vine, demanded of the Parſon what was the Cauſe of his Confinement, and who committed him to the Fleet. The Parſon anſwered and ſaid, that the Lord Cromwel ſent him thither, for that certain malicious Pariſhioners of his Pariſh had wrongfully accuſed him of Words which he never ſpake nor meant. Cherſey hearing his fooliſh Couſin ſo far out of the Way from his former Inſtruction, ſaid, Thou daſtardly Dolt and Varlet, is this thy Promiſe thou madeſt to me? Are there not a great Number of thy honeſt Neighbours Hands againſt thee, to prove thee a Liar? Surely my Lord (quoth Cherſey) it is Pity to do him good. I am ſorry that I have troubled your Grace thus far with him.

The Archbiſhop's Words to the Prieſt.

Well, ſaid the Archbiſhop unto the Parſon, if you have not offended me, I can do you no good: For I am intreated to help one out of Trouble that hath offended againſt me. If my Lord Cromwell hath committed you to Priſon wrongfully, that lieth in himſelf to amend, and not in me. If your Offence only hath touched me, I will be bold to do ſomewhat for your Friend's ſake here. If you have not offended againſt me, then have I nothing to do with you, but that you may go and remain from whence you came.

Lord, what ado his Kinſman Cherſey made with him, calling him all Kind of opprobious Names! In the End my Lord of Canterbury ſeeming to riſe and go his Ways, the Prieſt fell on his Knees, and ſaid, I beſeech your Grace to forgive me this Offence, aſſuring your Grace that I ſpake thoſe Words being drunk and not well adviſed.

Ah, ſaid my Lord, this is ſomewhat, and yet it is no good Excuſe: For Drunkenneſs alway uttereth that which lieth hid in the Heart of Man when he is ſober, alledging a Text or two out of the Scriptures concerning the Vice of Drunkenneſs, which cometh not now to Remembrance.

Now therefore (ſaid the Archbiſhop) that you acknowledge ſomewhat your Fault, I am content to commune with you, hoping that you are at this Preſent of an indifferent Sobriety. Tell me then, quoth he, did you ever ſee me, or were you ever acquainted with me before this Day?

The Prieſt anſwered and ſaid, that he never ſaw his Grace in his Life. Why then, ſaid the Archbiſhop, what Occaſion had you to call me an Hoſtler, and that I had not ſo much Learning as the Goſlins which then went upon the Green before your Face? If I have no Learning you may now try it, and be out of doubt thereof: Therefore I pray you poſe me, either in Grammar or in other liberal Sciences, for I have at one Time or other taſted partly of them. Or elſe if you are a Divine, ſay ſomewhat that Way.

The Prieſt's Anſwer.

The Prieſt being amazed at my Lord's familiar Talk, anſwered and ſaid, I beſeech your Grace to pardon me. I am altogether unlearned, and underſtand not the Latin Tongue, but very ſimply. My only Study hath been to ſay my Service and Maſs, fair and deliberate, which I can do as well as any Prieſt in the Country where I dwell, I thank God.

Well, ſaid my Lord, if you will not poſe me, I will make bold to poſe you, and yet as eaſily as I can deviſe, and that only in the Story of the Bible now in Engliſh, in which I ſuppoſe that you are daily exerciſed. Tell me therefore who was King David's Father, ſaid my Lord. The Prieſt ſtood ſtill pauſing a while, and ſaid, In good Faith, my Lord, I have forgotten his Name. Then ſaid my Lord again to him, If you cannot tell that, I pray you tell me then, who was Solomon's Father? The fooliſh Prieſt without all Conſideration of what was demanded of him before, made Anſwer, Good my Lord, bear with me, I am no further ſeen in the Bible, than is daily read in our Service in the Church.

The Prieſt ignorant in the Scripture.

Then the Archbiſhop ſaid, This my Queſtion may be found well anſwered in your Service. But I well perceive, howſoever ye have judged heretofore of my Learning, ſure I am that you have none at all. But this is the common Practice of all you that be ignorant and ſuperſtitious Prieſts, to ſlander, back-bite, and hate all ſuch as are learned and well affected towards God's Word and ſincere Religion. Common Reaſon might have taught you what an unlikely Thing it was, and contrary to all manner of Reaſon, that a Prince having two Univerſities within his Realm of well learned Men, and deſirous to be reſolved of as doubtful a Queſtion as in theſe many Years the like was not moved within Chriſtendom, ſhould be driven to that Neceſſity for the Defence of his Cauſe, to ſend out of his Realm an Hoſtler, being a Man of no better Knowledge than is a Goſlin, in an Ambaſſy to anſwer all learned Men, both in the Court of Rome, and the Emperor's Court, in ſo difficult a Queſtion as toucheth the King's Matrimony, and the Divorce thereof. I ſay, if you were a Man of any reaſonable Conſideration, you might think it both unſeemly and uncomely for a Prince ſo to do. But look, where Malice reigneth in Man, there Reaſon can take no Place: And therefore I ſee by it, that you are all at a Point, that no Reaſon or Authority can perſwade you to favour my Name, who never meant Evil to you, but both your Advantage and Profit. Howbeit, God amend you all, forgive you, and ſend you better Minds.

Ill-will never ſaith well.

The Archbiſhop forgiveth and diſmiſſeth the Prieſt.

With theſe Words the Prieſt ſeem'd to weep, and deſired his Grace to pardon his Fault and Frailty, ſo that by this Means he might return to his Cure again, and he would certainly recant thoſe fooliſh Words before his Pariſhioners ſo ſoon as he came home, and would become a new Man. Well, ſaid the Archbiſhop, ſo had you need: And giving him a godly Admonition to refuſe the haunting of the Alehouſe, and to beſtow his Time better in the continual reading of the Scriptures, he diſmiſs'd him from the Fleet.

The Lord Cromwell, perceiving within a Fortnight after that his Priſoner was ſent Home without any open Puniſhment, came to Lambeth to the Archbiſhop, and in a great Heat ſaid to him, My Lord, I underſtand that you have diſpatched the northern Prieſt home again, that I of late ſent to the Fleet for railing againſt you, and calling you an Hoſtler.

Indeed I have done ſo, ſaid the Archbiſhop, for that in his Abſence the People of his Cure wanted their divine Service. It is very devout divine Service that he ſaith, quoth the Lord Cromwell; It were more meet for him to be an Hoſtler than a Curate, who ſticked not to call you an Hoſtler. But I thought ſo much what you would do, and therefore I would not tell you of his Knavery when I ſent him to Priſon. Howbeit, henceforth, they ſhall cut your Throat before that I ſay any Thing more to them on your Behalf. Why? what would you have done with him, quoth the Archbiſhop? there was nothing laid to his Charge, other than Words ſpoken againſt me, and now the Man hath repented, and is well reconciled, and hath been at great Charges in Priſon; it is Time therefore that he was rid out of his Trouble. Well, ſaid my Lord Cromwell, I meant that he ſhould have preached a Recantation at Paul's Croſs before he had gone home. That had been well done, quoth the Archbiſhop, for then you would have had all the World to wonder at me as well as at him. Well, well, ſaid the Lord Cromwell, we ſhall ſo long bear with theſe popiſh Knaves, that at length they will bring us indeed to be wonder'd at of all the World.

This Example among others ſerveth to declare, that there remained ſmall Deſire of revenging in the ſaid Archbiſhop. But what ſhould I ſay more? His Quietneſs and Mortification this Way was ſuch, that it is reported by all that knew him, that he never raged ſo far with any of his Houſhold Servants, as once to call the meaneſt of them Varlet or Knave in Anger, much leſs to reprove a Stranger with any reproachful Words. Much unlike in this Part to the Property, (as it ſeemeth) of ſome other inferior Biſhops of this Realm, which have not ſpared to fly in the Faces, to pluck off the Beards, to burn the Hands, to beat and ſcourge with Rods the Bodies both of Gentlemen, married Men and others, having almoſt nothing elſe in their Mouths, but Fools and Knaves, &c. and yet after all this, think themſelves good perfect Biſhops, after the Rule which followeth and ſaith,

Anno 1556.

No Striker, no Fighter.

From which kind of Vice, the Nature of this Archbiſhop was ſo far off, as was his Doctrine which he profeſſed, and Death which he ſuffer'd, far from all Condition and Example of blind Popery. After the Prohibition of theſe foreſaid Vices, ſucceedeth the Mother of all good Virtues neceſſarily required by all true Chriſtians, but chiefly of a ſpiritual Prelate; which is,

Not given to filthy Lucre, but harborous.

The contrary whereof was ſo odious unto St. Paul, that he eſteemed the ſame no leſs than a kind of Idolatry, in that it maketh Men forget their Duty to God ſo far, and inſtead of him to worſhip their Treaſure. How little this Prelate we ſpeak of was infected with this Vice, and how he was no Niggard, all kind of People that knew him, as well learned beyond the Seas and on this Side, to whom yearly he gave in Exhibition great Sums of Money, as others both Gentlemen, mean Men, and poor Men, who had in their Neceſſity that which he could conveniently ſpare, lend or make, can well teſtify. And albeit ſuch was his Liberality to all ſorts of Men, that no Man did lack whom he could do for, either in giving or lending; yet nevertheleſs ſuch was again his Circumſpection, that when he was apprehended and committed to the Tower by Queen Mary, he owed no Man living a Penny, that could or would demand any Duty of him, but ſatisfied every Man to the uttermoſt; whereas ſeveral Sums of Money were owing him by divers Perſons, which by breaking their Bills and Obligations he freely forgave, and ſuppreſſed before his Attainder. Inſomuch that when he perceived the fatal End of King Edward would work to him no good Succeſs touching his Body and Goods, he immediately called for his Officers, his Steward and others, commanding them in any wiſe to pay where any Money was owing, which was out of Hand diſpatched. And then he ſaid, now I thank God I am mine own Man, and in Conſcience with God's Help able elſe to anſwer all the World and worldly Adverſities, which ſome Men ſuppoſe he might alſo have avoided, if he would have been counſelled by ſome of his Friends. It followeth moreover:

The Liberality of the Archbiſhop.

The Archbiſhop clearing his Debts before his Attainder.

Harborous.

And as touching this Word Harborous, whereby is meant the good Maintenance of Hoſpi-

Anno 1556.

Hoſpitality; ſo little was this Property lacking in him, that ſome Men diſliking the ſame, thought it rather a Houſe of overmuch laviſhing and unprofitable Expence. But as nothing can be ſo well done, which by ſome others ſhall not be maligned and detracted; ſo neither did this Man lack his Cavillers, ſome finding Fault with his overmuch Prodigality, ſome on the contrary Part repining and complaining of his ſcanty Houſekeeping, and ſtrict Order, much beneath his Revenues and Calling. Of which two, the firſt Sort muſt conſider the Cauſes which moved him to that liberal and large kind of Expences. Wherein here cometh to be conſidered, the Time wherein he ſerved; which was when Reformation of Religion began firſt to be advanced. In which Time the whole Weight and Care of the ſame chiefly depended upon him. During which Seaſon almoſt for the Space of ſixteen Years together, his Houſe was never lightly unfurniſhed of a Number both of learned Men and Commiſſioners, from Time to Time appointed for deciding eccleſiaſtical Affairs.

And thus as he ſeemed to ſome to be too laviſh and open-handed, even more than Hoſpitality required; ſo on the other Side, there wanted not ſome, by whom he was much noted and accuſed, yea, and complained of to King Henry the Eighth, for too niggardly and ſlender Houſekeeping, as not worthy to be accounted the Hoſpitality of a mean Gentleman, as by the following doth appear.

After that the ample and great Poſſeſſions, Revenues, Jewels, rich Ornaments, and other Treaſures of the Abbies were diſſolved and brought into the King's Hands, in the diſſolving whereof many Cormorants were fed and ſatisfy'd, and yet not ſo fully ſatisfy'd but that in a few Years they began to be hungry again; and becauſe no more could be ſcraped out of the Abbies, they began to ſeek ſome other Prey to ſatisfy their Appetites, which was to tickle the King's Ears with the rich Revenue of the Biſhops Lands. And to bring this Device to paſs, they procured Sir Thomas Seymour, Knight of the privy Chamber, to be a Promoter of the Matter; who not in all Points much favouring the Archbiſhop, having a convenient Opportunity, declared to the King, that my Lord of Canterbury did nothing elſe but ſell his Woods, and let his Leaſes by great and many Fines, making Havock of all the Royalties of the Archbiſhoprick, and that only to the Intent to gather up Treaſure for his Wife and Children, keeping no Manner of Hoſpitality, in reſpect of ſo great a Revenue; advertiſing the King further, that it was the Opinion of many wiſe Men, that it were more meet for the Biſhops to have a ſufficient yearly Stipend in Money out of the Exchequer, than to be encumber'd with thoſe temporal Affairs of their Royalties, being Impediments to their Study and paſtoral Charge, and his Highneſs to have their Lands and Royalties converted to his proper Uſe, which beſides their honeſt Stipends would be no ſmall Advantage and Profit to his Majeſty.

When the King had heard his fair Tale, he ſaid little thereunto, other than this. Well, quoth he, we will talk more of this: Matter at another Time. Now, within a Fortnight after, or thereabouts (whether by Chance, or by Intention, it is not known) it came to paſs, that one Day his Highneſs going to Dinner, had waſhed, Sir Thomas Seymour holding the Baſon, and ſaid to the ſaid Sir Thomas, Go you out of Hand to Lambeth unto my Lord of Canterbury, and bid him to be with me at two o'Clock in the Afternoon, and fail not. Sir Thomas immediately went to Lambeth, and as he came to the Gate, the Porter being in the Lodge, came out, and convey'd him to the Hall, which was thoroughly furniſhed and ſet, both with the Houſhold Servants and Strangers, with four principal head Meſſes of Officers as daily it was accuſtomed to be. When Sir Thomas Seymour ſaw that ſtately large Hall ſo well ſet and furniſhed, being therewith abaſhed, and ſomewhat guilty of an Untruth told to the King before, he returned back, and would needs have gone to the Archbiſhop by the Chapel, and not thro' the Hall. Richard Nevil, Gentleman, then Steward of the Houſhold, perceiving him to retire, came to him, and deſired to know whether he would ſpeak with my Lord: Sir Thomas anſwered, that he muſt needs do ſo from the King's Highneſs, ſaying to him, And this Way I am going to my Lord's Grace. Sir, ſaid the Steward, you cannot go that Way, for the Door is ſhut faſt in Dinner-time; and ſo by gentle Means brought him up through the Hall into the Chamber where my Lord was at Dinner; with whom he dined after he had done his Meſſage, whoſe common Fare might always well beſeem a right honourable Perſonage. When Dinner was ſcarce done, Sir Thomas took his Leave of my Lord, and went again to the Court.

So ſoon as the King ſaw him, he ſaid to him, Have you been with my Lord of Canterbury? Sir Thomas anſwered, That I have, if it pleaſe your Majeſty, and he will be with your Highneſs immediately. Dined you not with him, ſaid the King? Yes Sir, ſaid he, that have I done. And with that Word, whether he eſpy'd by the King's Countenance, or by his Words any Thing tending to Diſpleaſure, he preſently without Delay, kneeled down upon his Knee, and ſaid, I beſeech your Majeſty to pardon me; I do well now remember and underſtand, that of late I told your Highneſs a great Untruth concerning my Lord of Canterbury's Houſekeeping; but from henceforth I intend never to believe that Perſon which did put that vain Tale into my Head: For I aſſure your Highneſs that I never ſaw ſo honourable a Hall ſet in this Realm, except your Majeſty's, in all my Life, with better Order, and ſo well furniſhed in each Degree. If I had not ſeen it myſelf, I could never have believed it, and himſelf alſo ſo honourably ſerved.

Ah Sir, quoth the King, have you now eſpy'd the Truth? I thought you would have told me another Tale when you had been there. He was a Varlet, quoth the King, that told you that Tale; for he ſpendeth (ah good Man!) all that he hath in Houſekeeping. But now I perceive which way the Wind bloweth. There are a Sort of you to whom I have liberally given of the Poſſeſſions and Revenues of the ſuppreſſed Monaſteries, which like as you have lightly gotten, ſo have you more unthriftily ſpent, ſome at Dice, other ſome in gay Apparel, and other Ways worſe I fear; and now that all is gone, you would fain have me make another Chevance of the Biſhops Lands, to accompliſh your greedy Appetites. But let no other Biſhops beſtow their Revenues worſe than my Lord of Canterbury doth, then ſhall you have no Cauſe to complain of their keeping of Houſe.

And thus the Tale being ſhut up, and ended by the King himſelf, neither Sir Thomas Seymour, nor any other on his Behalf ever after durſt renew or revive that Suit, or any other againſt the Archbiſhop in King Henry's Days; ſo that it may be evident to all impartial Men, the Liberality of the Archbiſhop in Houſekeeping what it was, which being defended and commended by the Prince himſelf, may rather give a good Example to his Poſterity to follow, than was then to be depraved of any private Subject, ſuch as knew him not.

The Alms of the Archbiſhop to the Poor.

In which Archbiſhop this moreover is to be noted with a Memorandum touching the Relief of the Poor, Impotent, Sick, and ſuch as then came from the Wars at Bullen, and other Parts beyond the Seas, Lame, Wounded, and Deſtitute: For whom he provided, beſides his Manſion-houſe at Beckisborn in Kent, the Parſonage Barn well furniſhed with certain Lodgings for the ſick and maimed Soldiers. To whom were alſo appointed the Almoner, a Phyſician, and a Surgeon to attend upon them, and to dreſs and cure ſuch as were not able to reſort to their Countries, having daily from the Biſhop's Kitchin hot Broth and Meat: For otherwiſe the common Alms of the Houſhold was beſtow'd upon the poor Neighbours of the Shire. And when any of the Impotent did recover, and were able to travel, they had convenient Money to bear their Charges, according to the Number of Miles from that Place diſtant. And this good Example of Mercy and liberal Benignity, I thought here good not in Silence to be ſuppreſſed, whereby others may be moved according to their Vocation, to walk in the Steps of no leſs leſs Liberality, than in him in this Behalf appeared.

One that loveth Goodneſs, ſober-minded, righteous, holy, and temperate.

As concerning theſe Qualities, the Buſineſs of his Life before joined with his benign and gentle Diſpoſition, do teſtify that he could not be void of theſe Virtues reigning in him, which was ſo abundantly adorned with the other, which above we have declared.

To cleave faſt unto the true Word of Doctrine, that he may be able to exhort with wholſome Learning, and to reprove them that ſay againſt it.

Then concludeth St. Paul with the moſt excellent Virtue of all others to be wiſhed in a Prelate of the Church. For if this Conſtancy be not in him to this End, that is, To cleave faſt unto the true Word of Doctrine, that he may be able to exhort with wholſome Learning and to reprove them that ſay againſt it. If he be void, I ſay, of theſe Gifts and Graces, he is worthy of no Commendation, but ſhall ſeem an Idol, and a Deceiver of the World. Neither ſhall he deſerve the Name of a Biſhop, if either for Dread or Reward, Affection or Favour, he do at any Time, or in any Point ſwerve from the Truth. As in this Behalf the worthy Conſtancy of this ſaid Archbiſhop never, for the moſt Part, ſhrunk for any Manner of Storm; but was ſo many Ways try'd, that neither the Fear or Favour of his Prince, nor any other Reſpect could alienate or change his Purpoſe, grounded upon that infallible Doctrine of the Goſpel. Notwithſtanding, his conſtant Defence of God's Truth, was ever joined with ſuch Meekneſs toward the King, that he never took Occaſion of Offence againſt him. Anno 1556.

At the Time of ſetting forth the ſix Articles, this Archbiſhop was the Man, and the only Man that oppoſed them, and diſputed with the whole Parliament three Days together againſt them. Inſomuch that the King who could not miſlike his Reaſons, and yet would needs have the Articles paſs, required him to abſent himſelf for a Time out of the Chamber while the Act ſhould paſs, and ſo he did; and ſoon after the King ſent all the Lords to Lambeth to comfort and chear up his Heart, that he might not be diſcouraged.

And this was done during the Time of the Lord Cromwell's Authority; but that the Archbiſhop's Conſtancy did not decay with the Fall of the Lord Cromwell, will appear by what followeth.

After the Apprehenſion of the Lord Cromwell, the Adverſaries of the Goſpel thought all Things ſure and ſafe on their own Side, it was ſo appointed amongſt them, that ten or twelve Biſhops, and other learned Men, joined together in Commiſſion, ſhould come to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury for the eſtabliſhing of certain Articles of our Religion, which the Papiſts then thought to win to their Purpoſe againſt the ſaid Archbiſhop. For having now the Lord Cromwell faſt and ſure, they thought all had been ſafe and ſure for ever: As indeed to all Men's reaſonable Conſideration, that Time appeared ſo dangerous, that there was no manner of Hope that Religion reformed ſhould ſtand one Week longer, ſuch Account was then made of the King's Untowardneſs thereunto. Inſomuch that of all thoſe Commiſſions there was not one left to ſtay on the Archbiſhop's Part, but he alone againſt them all ſtood in Defence of the Truth; and thoſe that he moſt truſted to, namely, Biſhop Heath and Biſhop Skip, left him in the plain Field, who then ſo turned againſt him, that they took upon them to perſwade him to their Purpoſe: And having him down from the reſt of the Commiſſioners into his Gardens at Lambeth, there by all Manner of effectual Perſwaſions entreated him to leave off his over much Conſtancy, and to incline unto the King's Intent, who was fully ſet to have it otherwiſe than he then had penned, or meant to have ſet Abroad. When thoſe two his Familiars, with one or two of his other Friends, had uſed all their Eloquence and Policy, he little regarding their Inconſtancy and Remiſneſs in God's Cauſe and Quarrel, very notably ſaid unto them;

You make much ado (quoth the Archbiſhop) to have me come to your Purpoſe, alledging, that it is the King's Pleaſure to have the Articles, in that Sort you have deviſed them, to proceed; and now that you do perceive his Highneſs by ſiniſter Information, to be bent that Way, you think it a convenient Thing to apply unto his Highneſs's Mind. You be both my Friends, eſpecially one of you I did put to his Majeſty as of truſt. Beware, I ſay, what you do: There is but one Truth

Anno 1556. Truth in our Articles to be concluded upon, which if you do hide from his Highneſs by conſenting unto a contrary Doctrine, and then after in Proceſs of Time, when the Truth cannot be hidden from him, his Highneſs ſhall perceive how that you have dealt colourably with him, I know his Grace's Nature ſo well (quoth the Archbiſhop) that he will never after truſt and credit you, or put any good Confidence in you. And as you are both my Friends, ſo therefore I will you to beware thereof in Time, and diſcharge your Conſciences in Maintenance of the Truth.

But all this would not ſerve, for they ſtill ſwerved; and in diſcharging his Conſcience, and declaring the Truth unto the King, God ſo wrought with the King, that his Highneſs joined with him againſt all the reſt, ſo that the Book of Articles paſſing on his Side, he won the Prize from them all, contrary to all their Expectations, when many Wagers would have been laid in London, that he ſhould have been laid up with Cromwell at that Time in the Tower for his ſtiff ſtanding to his Tackle. After that Day there could neither Counſellor, Biſhop, nor Papiſt bring him out of the King's Favour.

Notwithſtanding, not long after that, certain of the Council, whoſe Names need not be mentioned, by the Inticement and Provocation of his old Enemy the Biſhop of Wincheſter, and others of the ſame Sect, attempted the King againſt him, declaring plainly, that the Realm was ſo infected with Hereſies and Hereticks, that it was dangerous for his Highneſs further to permit it unreformed, leſt peradventure by long ſuffering, ſuch Contention ſhould ariſe, and enſue in the Realm among his Subjects, that thereby might ſpring horrible Commotions and Uproars, like as in ſome Parts of Germany it did not long ago. The Enormity whereof they could not impute to any ſo much as to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, who by his own preaching, and his Chaplains, had filled the Realm with divers and pernicious Hereſies. The King would needs know his Accuſers. They anſwered, foraſmuch as he was a Counſellor, no Man durſt take upon him to accuſe him; but if it would pleaſe his Highneſs to commit him to the Tower for a Time, there would be Accuſations and Proofs enough againſt him: For otherwiſe, juſt Teſtimony and Witneſs againſt him would not appear, and therefore your Highneſs (ſaid they) muſt needs give us the Counſel, Liberty and Leave to commit him to Priſon.

The King ſent for the Archbiſhop at Midnight, and waited in the Gallery for his coming.

The King perceiving their importunate Suit againſt the Archbiſhop (but yet meaning not to have him wrong'd and utterly given over into their Hands) granted unto them that they ſhould the next Day commit him to the Tower for his Trial. When Night came, the King ſent Sir Anthony Deny about Midnight to Lambeth to the Archbiſhop, willing him forthwith to reſort unto him at the Court. The Meſſage done, the Archbiſhop ſpeedily addreſſed himſelf at the Court, and coming into the Gallery where the King walked and tarried for him, his Highneſs ſaid, Ah, my Lord of Canterbury, I can tell you News. For divers weighty Conſiderations it is determin'd by me and the Council, that you tomorrow by nine o'Clock ſhould be committed to the Tower, for that you and your Chaplains (as Information is given us) have taught and preached, and thereby ſown within the Realm ſuch a Number of execrable Hereſies, that it is feared, the whole Realm being infected with them, no ſmall Contentions and Commotions will ariſe thereby among my Subjects, as of late Days the like was in divers Parts of Germany: And therefore the Council have requeſted me, for the Trial of the Matter, to ſuffer them to commit you to the Tower, or elſe no Man dare come forth, as Witneſs in theſe Matters, you being a Counſellor.

When the King had ſaid his Mind, the Archbiſhop kneeled down and ſaid, I am content, if it pleaſe your Grace, with all my Heart to go thither at your Highneſs's Commandment, and I moſt humbly thank your Majeſty that I may come to my Trial; for there be thoſe that have many Ways ſlandered me, and now by this Way I hope to try myſelf not worthy of ſuch Report.

The King perceiving the Man's Uprightneſs, joined with ſuch Simplicity, ſaid; O Lord! what manner of Man be you! what Simplicity is in you! I thought that you would rather have ſued to us to have taken the Pains to have heard you and your Accuſers together for your Trial, without any ſuch Impriſonment. Do you not know what State you be in with the whole World, and how many great Enemies you have? Do you not conſider what an eaſy Thing it is, to procure three or four falſe Knaves to witneſs againſt you? Think you have better luck that Way than your Maſter Chriſt had? I ſee by it you will run headlong to your own Ruin, if I would ſuffer you. Your Enemies ſhall not ſo prevail againſt you, for I have otherwiſe deviſed with myſelf to keep you out of their Hands. Yet notwithſtanding, to morrow when the Council ſhall ſit, and ſend for you, reſort unto them, and if charging you with this Matter, they do commit you to the Tower, require of them, (becauſe you are one of them, a Counſellor) that you may have your Accuſers brought before them without any further Confinement, and uſe for yourſelf as good Arguments that Way as you may deviſe; and if no Intreaty or reaſonable Requeſt will ſerve, then deliver unto them this my Ring (which then the King delivered unto the Archbiſhop) and ſay unto them, If there be no Remedy, my Lords, but that I muſt needs go to the Tower, then I revoke my Cauſe from you, and appeal to the King's own Perſon by this his Token unto you all; for (ſaid the King to the Archbiſhop) ſo ſoon as they ſhall ſee this my Ring, they will know it ſo well, that they ſhall underſtand that I have reſumed the whole Cauſe into mine own Hands and Determination, and that I have diſcharged them thereof.

The Archbiſhop perceiving the King's Benignity ſo much towards him, had much ado to forbear Tears. Well, ſaid the King, go your Ways, my Lord, and do as I have bidden you. My Lord humbling himſelf with Thanks, took his Leave of his Majeſty for that Night.

On the Morrow about nine o'Clock before Noon, the Council ſent a Gentleman-uſher for the Archbiſhop, who when he came to the Council-chamber Door, could not be let in, but of Purpoſe (as it ſeemed) was compelled there to wait among the Pages, Lacquies, and ſerving Men. Dr. Butts the King's Phyſician reſort-reſorting that Way, and ſeeing how my Lord of Canterbury was uſed, went immediately to the King's Highneſs, and ſaid, May it pleaſe your Grace, my Lord of Canterbury is well promoted; for now he is become a Footman: Yonder he hath ſtood this half Hour at the Council-chamber Door amongſt them. Sure it is not ſo! (quoth the King) the Council hath not ſo little Diſcretion as to uſe the Metropolitan of all the Realm in that Manner, eſpecially being one of their own Number. But let him alone (ſaid the King) you ſhall hear more by and by.

Anon the Archbiſhop was called into the Council-chamber, to whom was alledged as before is rehearſed. The Archbiſhop anſwered as the King had before adviſed him; and in the End, when he perceived that no Manner of Perſwaſion or Intreaty could ſerve, he deliver'd the King's Ring, revoking his Cauſe into the King's Hands. At this the whole Council were much amaz'd, and it is an eaſy Matter to imagine how fooliſhly they looked upon one another. The Earl of Bedford, with a loud Voice, and rapping out a great Oath, ſaid, When you firſt began the Matter, my Lords, I told you what would come of it. Do you think that the King will ſuffer this Man's Finger to ake? much more, I warrant you, will he defend his Life againſt brabling Varlets. You do but encumber yourſelves to hear Tales and Fables againſt him. And ſo immediately upon Receipt of the King's Token, they all aroſe, and carried the King his Ring, ſurrendering the Matter, as the Order and Cuſtom was, into his own Hands.

When they were all come into the King's Preſence, his Highneſs, with a ſevere Countenance ſaid unto them, Ah, my Lords, I thought I had had wiſer Men of my Council than now I find you. What Diſcretion was this in you, thus to make the Primate of all the Realm, and one of you in Office, to wait at the Council-chamber Door amougſt Footmen? you might have conſider'd that he was a Counſellor as well as you, and you had no ſuch Commiſſion of me ſo to handle him. I was willing that you ſhould try him as a Counſellor, and not as a mean Subject. But now I well perceive that Things be done againſt him maliciouſly, and if ſome of you might have had your Minds, you would have tried him to the uttermoſt. But I would have you all to know, and I do proteſt, that if a Prince may be beholden to his Subject (ſolemnly laying his Hand upon his Breaſt) by the Faith I owe to God, I take this Man here, my Lord of Canterbury, to be of all other a moſt faithful Subject unto us, and one to whom we are much beholden, giving him great Commendations otherwiſe. And with that one or two of the Chief of the Council, making their Excuſe, declared, that in deſiring his Confinement, it was rather meant for his Trial, that he might have an Opportunity of clearing himſelf of the ſlanderous Reports of the World, than for any Malice conceived againſt him. Well, well, quoth the King, take him and uſe him well, as he is worthy to be, and make no more ado. And with that every Man caught him by the Hand, and made fair Weather of altogethers, which might eaſily be done with that Man.

And it was much to be marvelled, that they would go ſo far with him, thus to ſeek his Ruin, when they well knew that the King moſt entirely loved him, and would always ſtand in his Defence, whoſoever ſpake againſt him; as many other Times the King's Patience was by ſiniſter Informations againſt him tried; inſomuch that the Lord Cromwell was commonly wont to ſay unto him, My Lord of Canterbury, you are moſt happy of all Men; for you may do and ſpeak what you liſt; and ſay what all Men can againſt you, the King will never believe one Word to your Detriment or Hindrance. I am ſure I take more Pains than all the Council doth, and ſpend more largely in the King's Affairs, as well beyond the Seas as on this Side: Yea I aſſure you, even very Spies in other foreign Realms, at Rome and elſewhere, coſt me above a thouſand Marks a Year: And do what I can to bring Matters to Knowledge, for the Advantage of the King and the Realm, I am every Day chidden, and many falſe Tales now and then believed againſt me; and therefore you are moſt happy, for in no Point can you be diſcredited with the King. To this the Archbiſhop anſwered, If the King's Majeſty were not good to me that Way, I were not able to ſtand and endure one whole Week; but your Wiſdom and Policy is ſuch, that you are able to ſhift well enough for yourſelf. Anno 1556.

Now when the King's Highneſs had thus benignly and mercifully diſpatched the ſaid Archbiſhop from this ſore Accuſation by the Council laid againſt him, all wiſe Men would have thought that it had been mere Folly afterwards to have attempted any Matter againſt him: But yet look where Malice reigneth, there neither Reaſon nor Honeſty can take Place. Such therefore as had conceived deep Rancour and Diſpleaſure againſt him, ceaſed not to perſecute him by all poſſible Means. Then brought they againſt him a new Kind of Accuſation, and cauſed Sir John Goſtwike Knight, a Man of a contrary Religion, to accuſe the Archbiſhop openly in the Parliament-houſe, laying to his Charge his Sermons preached at Sandwich, and his Lectures read at Canterbury, wherein ſhould be contained manifeſt Hereſies againſt the Sacrament of the Altar, &c. Which Accuſation came to the King's Ear. Why (quoth the King) where dwelleth Goſtwike? as I take it, either in Bedfordſhire or Buckinghamſhire, and hath he ſo open an Ear that he can hear my Lord of Canterbury preaching out of Kent? This is very likely, ſaid the King. If he had been a Kentiſh-man, there had been ſomething worthy of Conſideration: But as for Goſtwike I know him well enough, and what good Religion he is of. Go to him and tell him, ſaid the King to one of his Privy-chamber, if he go not to my Lord of Canterbury, and ſo reconcile himſelf to him, that he may become his good Lord, I will pull the Goſlin's Feathers ſo, that hereafter he ſhall have little luſt to ſlander the Metropolitan, or any other learned Man. When Sir John Goſtwike heard theſe Words, there was no need to bid him haſten to Lambeth unto the Metropolitan, making to him as many Friends as poſſibly he might. When he came to the Archbiſhop he was fain to diſcloſe unto him, by what Means he was procured to do that which he did, requeſting his Clemency to be his good Lord, or elſe he took himſelf to be utterly undone, being ſo in the King's Indignation, as he underſtood he was by that before declared, which Petition was ſoon granted by that good-natured Archbiſhop, who not only forgave Sir John all his Ingratitude, but alſo went to the King, and procur'd him his Majeſty's Favour again. And thus the King made a ſhort End of this Accuſation.

An Accuſation brought into the Parliament-houſe by Sir John Goſtwike againſt the Archbiſhop.

Sir John is checkt by the King for the ſame, and is glad to be Friends with the Archbiſhop again.

Anno 1556.

A new Accuſation brought againſt the Archbiſhop by the Prebendaries of his own Cathedral, and the Juſtices of Kent.

Well, here you may perceive that malicious Invention went not the wiſeſt Way to work, to procure a Stranger dwelling afar off, to accuſe the Archbiſhop of his Doctrine preached in his Dioceſs: And therefore hath blind Malice learned ſome more Wiſdom now to accuſe their Archbiſhop in ſuch a Manner as he ſhall never be able to avoid it. And therefore it was procured by his ancient Enemies, that not only the Prebendaries of his Cathedral Church in Canterbury, but alſo the moſt famous Juſtices of the Peace in the Shire ſhould accuſe him, article againſt him; which in very Deed was moſt ſubſtantially brought to paſs, and the Articles both well written and ſubſcribed, were delivered to the King's Highneſs as a Thing of ſuch Effect, that there muſt needs follow to the ſaid Archbiſhop, both Indignation of the Prince, and condign Puniſhment for his grievous Offence committed by him and his Chaplains, in preaching ſuch erroneous Doctrine as they did within his Dioceſs of Canterbury; whereof they being ſuch Witneſſes of Credit, no Man had Cauſe to doubt of their circumſpect Doings. This Accuſation particularly ſent out was deliver'd to the King by the Means of ſome of the Council: When the King had peruſed the Book, he wrapt it up and put it in his Sleeve; and finding Occaſion to ſolace himſelf upon the Thames, came with his Barge furniſhed with his Muſicians along by Lambeth Bridge towards Chelſea. The Noiſe of the Muſicians provoked the Archbiſhop to reſort to the Bridge to do his Duty, and to ſalute his Prince. Whom when the King had perceived to ſtand at the Bridge, immediately commanded the Waterman to draw towards the Shoar, and ſo came ſtraight to the Bridge.

Ah, my Chaplain (ſaid the King to the Archbiſhop) come into the Barge to me. The Archbiſhop told his Highneſs that he would take his own Barge, and wait on his Majeſty. No, ſaid the King, you muſt come into my Barge, for I want to talk with you. When the King and the Archbiſhop were both together alone in the Barge, the King ſaid to the Archbiſhop, I have News out of Kent for you my Lord. The Archbiſhop anſwered, Good I hope, if it pleaſe your Highneſs. Marry, quoth the King, it is ſo good that I now know the greateſt Heretick in Kent, and with that pulled the Book of Articles out of his Sleeve againſt both the Archbiſhop and his Preachers, and gave the Book to him, deſiring him to peruſe the ſame. When the Archbiſhop had read the Articles, and ſaw himſelf ſo uncourteouſly handled of his own Church whereof he was Head, I mean the Prebendaries of his Cathedral, and of ſuch his Neighbours as he had many Ways gratify'd, I mean the Juſtices of the Peace, it much grieved him. Notwithſtanding he kneeled down to the King, and beſought his Majeſty to grant out a Commiſſion to whomſoever it pleaſed his Highneſs, for them to try out the Truth of this Accuſation. In very Deed, ſaid the King, I do mean ſo to do, and you your ſelf ſhall be chief Commiſſioner, to adjoin to you ſuch two or three more as you ſhall think good yourſelf. Then it will be thought, quoth the Archbiſhop, that it is not fair and impartial that I ſhould be my own Judge and my Chaplains alſo. Well, ſaid the King, I will have none other but yourſelf, and ſuch as you will appoint: For I am ſure that you will not halt with me in any Thing, although you be driven to accuſe yourſelf, and I know partly how this Gear proceedeth, and if you handle the Matter wiſely, you ſhall find a pretty Conſpiracy deviſed againſt you. Whom will you have with you, ſaid the King? Whomſoever it ſhall pleaſe your Grace to name, quoth the Archbiſhop. I will appoint Dr. Belhouſe for one, name you the other, ſaid the King, meet for that purpoſe. My Chancellor, Dr. Cox, and Huſſey my Regiſter, ſaid the Archbiſhop, are Men expert to examine ſuch troubleſome Matters. Well, ſaid the King, let there be a Commiſſion made forth, and out of hand get you into Kent, and advertiſe me of your Doings.

They came into Kent, and there they ſat about three Weeks to bolt out who was the firſt Occaſion of this Accuſation, for thereof the King would chiefly be advertiſed. Now the Inquiſition being begun by the Commiſſioners, every Man ſhrunk in his Horns, and no Man would confeſs any Thing to the Purpoſe. For Dr. Cox and Huſſey, being friendly to the Papiſts, handled the Matter ſo, that they would permit nothing material to come to light. This Thing being well perceived by the Archbiſhop's Secretary, he wrote immediately to Dr. Buts and Mr. Deny, declaring that if the King did not ſend ſome other to aſſiſt my Lord, than thoſe that then were there with him, it were impoſſible that any Thing ſhould come to Light: And therefore wiſhed that Dr. Lee, or ſome other ſtout Man that had been exerciſed in the King's eccleſiaſtical Affairs in his Viſitations, might be ſent to the Archbiſhop. Upon theſe Letters Dr. Lee was ſent for to York by the King, and having the King's farther Mind declared unto him, when he came to the Court, he reſorted immediately into Kent, ſo that on All-hallow Even he deliver'd to the Archbiſhop the King's Ring, with a Declaration of his Highneſs's farther Pleaſure: And by and by upon his Meſſage done, he appointed the Archbiſhop to name him a Dozen or Sixteen of his Officers and Gentlemen, ſuch as had both Diſcretion, Wit, and Audacity, to whom he gave in Commiſſion from the King, to ſearch both the Purſes, Cheſts, and Chambers of all thoſe that were deemed or ſuſpected to be of this Confederacy, both within the Cathedral Church and without, and ſuch Letters and Writings as they could find about them, to bring them to the Archbiſhop and him.

Theſe Men thus appointed, went in one Hour and Inſtant to all the Houſes and Places they were appointed to; and within four Hours afterwards the whole Conſpiracy was diſcloſed by finding of Letters, ſome from the Biſhop of Wincheſter, ſome from Dr. London at Oxford, and from Juſtices of the Shire, with others; ſo that the firſt Beginning, the Proceeding, and what ſhould have been the End of their Conſpiracy, was now made manifeſt. Certain Chambers and Cheſts of Gentlemen of the Shire were alſo ſearched, where likewiſe Letters were found tending to this Purpoſe. Amongſt others two Letters came to my Lord's Hands, the one wrote by the Suffragan of Dover, and the other by Dr. Barbar a Civilian, whom the Archbiſhop continually retained in his Houſe for the Expedition of Matters in Suit before him, as a Counſellor in the Law when Need required. Theſe two Men being well promoted by the Archbiſhop, he uſed ever in ſuch Familiarity, that when the Suffragan, being Prebendary of Canterbury, came to him, he always ſet him at his own Meſs, and the other never from his Table, as Men in whom he had much Delight and Comfort, when Time of Care and Penſiveneſs happened. But that which they did was altogether counterfeit, and the Devil was turned into the Angel of Light, for they were both of this Confederacy.

When my Lord had gotten theſe their Letters into his Hands, he on a Day, when the Suffragan happened to come to him at his Houſe as Bekisburn, called to him into his Study the ſaid Suffragan of Dover and Dr. Barbar, ſaying, Come your Ways with me, for I muſt have your Advice in a Matter. When they were both with him in his Study, he ſaid to them, You twain be Men in whom I have had much Confidence and Truſt; you muſt now give me ſome good Counſel, for I am ſhamefully abuſed by one or twain to whom I have ſhewed all my Secrets from Time to Time, and did truſt them as myſelf. The Matter is ſo now fallen out, that they not only have diſcloſed my Secrets, but alſo have taken upon them to accuſe me of Hereſy, and are become Witneſſes againſt me. I require you therefore of your good Advice how I ſhall behave myſelf towards them. You are both my Friends, and ſuch as I always have uſed when I needed Counſel. What ſay you to the Matter, quoth the Archbiſhop?

Theſe falſe Knaves and Villains give Judgment againſt themſelves.

Marry, quoth Dr. Barbar, ſuch Villains and Knaves (ſaving your Honour) were worthy to be hanged out of Hand without any other Law. Hanging were too good, quoth the Suffragan, and if there lacked one to do Execution, I would be Hangman myſelf.

At theſe Words the Archbiſhop being aſtoniſhed, caſt up his Hands to Heaven and ſaid, O Lord moſt merciful God, whom may a Man truſt now-a-days! It is moſt true which is ſaid, Curſed is he who putteth his Truſt in Man, and in his own Strength. There was never Man handled as I am: But, O Lord, thou haſt evermore defended me, and lent me one great Friend and Maſter (meaning the King) without whoſe Protection I were not able to ſtand upright one Day unoverthrown, I praiſe thy holy Name therefore: And with that he pulled out of his Boſom their two Letters, and ſaid, Know ye theſe two Letters, my Maſters? With that they fell down upon their Knees, and deſired Forgiveneſs, declaring how they a Year before were attempted to do the ſame, and ſo very lamentably weeping and bewailing their Doings, beſought his Grace to pardon and forgive them. Well, ſaid the gentle Archbiſhop, God make you both good Men, I never deſerved this at your Hands: But ask God Forgiveneſs, againſt whom you have highly offended. If ſuch Men as you are not to be truſted, what ſhould I do alive? I perceive now, that there is no Fidelity or Truſt amongſt Men. I am brought to this Point now, that I fear my Left Hand will accuſe my Right Hand. I need not much marvel hereat, for our Saviour Chriſt truly propheſied of ſuch a World to come in the latter Days. I beſeech him of his great Mercy to finiſh that Time ſhortly; and ſo departing, he diſmiſſed them both with gentle and comfortable Words, in ſuch Sort that never after appeared in his Countenance or Words any Remembrance thereof. Anno 1556.

Now, when all thoſe Letters and Accuſations were found, they were put into a Cheſt, the King's Majeſty minding to have peruſed ſome of them, and to have partly puniſhed the Principals of it. The Cheſt and Writings were brought to Lambeth; at which Time began the Parliament. Lord, what ado there was to procure the King a Subſidy, to the Intent that thereupon might enſue a Pardon, which indeed followed, and ſo nothing was done, other than their Falſhood known. This was the laſt Puſh of the Pike that was inferred againſt the Archbiſhop in King Henry the Eighth's Days: For never after durſt any Man move Matter againſt him in his Time.

And thus have ye both the working and diſcloſing of this popiſh Conſpiracy againſt this worthy Archbiſhop and Martyr of Chriſt, Thomas Cranmer. In which Conſpiracy, forſomuch as Complaint was alſo made to the King of his Chaplains and good Preachers in Kent, it ſhall not be out of the Story ſomething likewiſe to touch thereof, eſpecially of Richard Turner, then Preacher in the Archbiſhop's Dioceſs, and Curate to Mr. Morrice the Archbiſhop's Secretary, in the Town of Chartham, by whoſe diligent preaching a great Part of this Heatt-burning of the Papiſts took its firſt kindling againſt the Archbiſhop. Touching the Deſcription of which Story, becauſe by me nothing ſhall be ſaid, either more or leſs, than is the Truth, ye ſhall hear the very Certainty thereof truly compiled in a Letter ſent the ſame Time to Dr. Buts and Sir Anthony Deny, to be ſhewed unto the King, and ſo it was, written by the aforeſaid Mr. Morice, then Secretary to the Archbiſhop, Farmer of the ſame Benefice of Chartham and Patron to Mr. Turner there Miniſter and Preacher aforeſaid.

A Letter of Apology wrote by Mr. Morrice to Sir William Buts, and Sir Anthony Deny, defending the Cauſe of Mr. Richard Turner Preacher, againſt the Papiſts.

THE Letter firſt beginning in theſe Words: I am certain (right worſhipful) that it is not unknown to your diſcreet Wiſdom, &c. And after a few Lines, coming to the Matter, thus the ſaid Letter proceedeth.

As your Worſhips well know, it was my Chance to be brought up under my Lord of Canterbury my Maſter, in writing of the eccleſiaſtical Affairs of this Realm, as well concerning Reformation of corrupt Religion, as concerning the Advancement of that pure and ſincere Religion received by the Doctrine of the Goſpel; which I take to be ſo ſubſtantially handled and built upon the Doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles, That Hell-gates ſhall never prevail againſt it. The Conſideration whereof compelled me, being a Farmer of the Parſonage of Chartham in Kent, to retain with me one named Richard Turner, a Man not only learned in the Scriptures of God,

but

Anno 1556. but alſo in Converſation of Life towards the World irreprehenſible, whom for diſcharging of my Conſcience I placed at Chartham atoreſaid, to be Curate there. This Man, becauſe he was a Stranger in the Country there, and ſo thereby void of Grudge or Diſpleaſure of any old Rancour in the Country, I thought it had been a Mean to have gotten him the better Credit in his Doctrine; but where Malice once taketh Fire againſt Truth, no Policy I ſee is able to quench it. Well, this Man as he knew what appertained to his Office, ſo he ſpared not weekly, both Sundays and Holidays to open the Goſpel and Epiſtle unto his Audience after ſuch a Sort, when Occaſion ſerved, that as well by his vehement inveighing againſt the Biſhop of Rome's uſurped Power and Authority, as in the earneſt ſetting forth and advancing of the King's Majeſty's Supremacy, innumerable of the People of the Country reſorting unto his Sermons, changed their Opinions, and favoured effectually the Religion received. The Confluence of the People ſo daily increaſed, that the Church being a fair, ample, and large Church, was not now and then able to receive the Number. The Fame of this new Inſtruction of the People was ſo blazed abroad, that the Popiſh Prieſts were wonderfully amazed and diſpleaſed, to ſee their Pope ſo to be defaced, and their Prince ſo highly advanced.

The great Concourſe of People to Mr. Turner's Preaching.

Now thought they it is high Time for us to work, or elſe all here will be utterly loſt by this Man's Preaching: Some of them went with Capons, ſome with Hens, ſome with Chickens, ſome with one thing, ſome with another, unto the Juſtices, ſuch as then favoured their Cauſe and Faction, and ſuch as were no ſmall Fools, as Sir John Baker, Sir Chriſtopher Hales, Sir Thomas Moile, Knights, with other Juſtices. The Prebendaries of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury were made privy hereof, giving their Succour and Aid thereunto. So that in Concluſion poor Turner, and other Preachers, were grievouſly complained of unto the King's Majeſty. Whereupon my Lord of Canterbury, and certain other Commiſſioners, were appointed at Lambeth to ſit upon the Examination of theſe ſeditious Preachers. Howbeit, before Turner went up to his Examination, I obtained of Sir Thomas Moile, that he in Eaſter Week was content to hear Turner preach a rehearſal Sermon in his Pariſh-Church at Weſtwell, of all the Doctrine of his Sermons preached at his Cure in Chartham; which he moſt gently granting, heard Turner both Beforenoon and Afternoon on the Wedneſday in Eaſter Week laſt paſt, and, as it ſeemed, took all Things in good Part, remitting Turner home to his ſaid Cure with gentle and favourable Words. I ſuppoſed by this Means to have ſtayed Mr. Turner at home from further Examination, hoping that Sir Thomas Moile would have anſwered for him at Lambeth before the Commiſſioners. Notwithſtanding, after Mr. Moile's coming to London, ſuch Information was laid in againſt Turner, that he was ſent for to make Anſwer himſelf before the ſaid Commiſſioners; and there appearing before them, he made ſuch an honeſt, perfect, and learned Anſwer unto the Articles objected, that he was with a good Exhortation diſcharged home again, without any manner of Recantation or other Injunction.

Now when the Pope-Catholick Clergy of Kent underſtood of his coming Home without Controlment, ſo that he preached as freely as he did before againſt their blind and dumb Ceremonies, ſtraightway by the Help of Stephen Gardiner Biſhop of Wincheſter, they found a new Means to put him to utter Confuſion, deviſing that he came home from Examination in ſuch glorious Pomp by the Highways-ſide in the Woods adjoining, that five hundred Perſons met him then with banquetting Diſhes to welcome him Home, ſtirring the People rather to an Uproar and Commotion, than to keep them in any quiet Obedience; when in very Deed, contrary to this Surmiſe, (as God would) on this Side Rocheſter a Mile or two, for avoiding all ſuch light and glorious Talk with any his Familiars and Acquaintance, he of Purpoſe left the Highway, and came thro' the Woods all alone above eighteen Miles together on Foot, ſo wearied and meagered for Want of Suſtenance, that when he came into my Houſe at Chartham, he was not well able to ſtand or ſpeak for Faintneſs and Thirſt.

This malicious Tale being reported to the King's Highneſs, his Majeſty was ſo ſore grieved therewith, that he ſent for the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, willing him to cauſe Turner to be whip'd out of the Country. By Means whereof the Archbiſhop of Canterbury ſent again for Turner: I hearing thereof immediately made Report by my Letters, with ſuch Vehemency proving it mere Malice, that the Archbiſhop underſtanding the Truth, pacify'd again the King's Wrath. Home cometh Turner once again to his Cure without Blot; which ſo wrung the Papiſts in that they could not prevail, that they thought it all in vain any further to attempt againſt him concerning any Accuſation for Matters in Kent, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury being his Ordinary. Well, yet would they not thus leave him undiſcredited. Then was there one new Matter deviſed, how that he had preached erroneous Doctrines in other Countries before he came into Kent, laying to his Charge that he had both tranſlated the Maſs into Engliſh, and ſaid, or miniſtred the ſame, and that he had preached againſt Purgatory, Pilgrimages, and Praying for the Dead, &c. By Means whereof, he was now convened before the whole Council by the Biſhop of Wincheſter, who ſent Syriake Petite Gentleman for him, who brought him up to London bound (as I heard ſay) and being examined before the ſaid Biſhop of Wincheſter and others, he was committed to Ward for a Seaſon.

Conſpiracy againſt the Archbiſhop in Kent.

In the mean Time, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury being in Kent about the Trial of a Conſpiracy purpoſed againſt himſelf by the Juſtices of the Shire, and the Prebendaries of Chriſt-Church: Turner is now ſent down to the Archbiſhop, to the Intent he ſhould recant that Doctrine which long ago he in other Places out of Kent had preached, to the utter Subverſion and defacing of all that he had moſt godly and earneſtly here in Kent taught both to the Glory of God, and the Furtherance and ſetting forth of the King's Highneſs Proceedings. If his Majeſty will thus permit learned honeſt Men thus daily to be over-crowned and trodden under Foot with a ſort of tyrannous or rather traiterous Papiſts (who cannot abide to hear his Majeſty's Supremacy advanced, nor the ſincere Word of God preached) it were better for Men to dwell amongſt the Infidels and Miſcreants than in England.

What Reaſon is this, that Turner ſhould recant cant here in Kent the Doctrine which in other Counties he hath taught, to the wounding and overthrowing moſt deſperately of five hundred Mens Conſciences and above, (I dare ſay) who lately by his ſincere Preaching have embraced a right good Opinion both of the King's Supremacy, and alſo of the reformed Religion received? All good Subjects may well lament the King's Majeſty's Eſtate in this Behalf, that no Man may dare to be ſo bold to advance his Highneſs's Title, but that every ignorant and malicious Papiſt ſhall ſpurn againſt him, ſeeking his utter Undoing, and that by the Aid of papiſtical Juſtices ſet in Authority. I beſeech your Worſhips to pardon me of my rude and homely Terms. They herein deſerve worſe, if worſe may be deviſed. For what honeſt Man can bear with this, that ſo noble a Prince's Ears ſhall be thus impudently abuſed with manifeſt Lies and Fables, as this one is of Turner's coming Home in ſuch a Triumph as they craftily and falſly had deviſed? It is eaſily to be eſpied what they mean and go about, that, the Prince being alive, dare take in hand ſo uncourteouſly to abuſe both the gentle Nature of the Prince, and his godly Preacher, the Advancer and Extoller of his juſt Authority.

What think your Worſhips they would attempt if his Majeſty were at God's Mercy (as God forefend that ever any of us ſhould ſee that Day, without better Reformation) that can thus dally with his Highneſs, blinding his Eyes with Miſts, whilſt he liveth and reigneth amongſt us in moſt Proſperity? As for my Lord of Canterbury, he dare nothing do for the poor Man's Delivery, he hath done ſo much for him already. And his Grace hath told me plainly, that it is put into the King's Head, that he is the Maintainer and Supporter of all the Hereticks within the Realm; nor will he permit me or my Neighbours to reſort unto the Council, for his Purgation while he was at Chartham, ſaying only I have obtained this at his Hand, that I may become a Suitor in Writing to my Friends and good Maſters in the Court for his Delivery.

And therefore it is (right worſhipful) that I have now taken Pen in Hand, thus to diſcourſe and open our Miſery unto you concerning the extreme handling of this poor honeſt Man, Mr. Turner, that if it may poſſibly be brought to paſs by your godly Wiſdom, the poor Man may be releaſed and diſcharged of his Recantation; you cannot do to God and your Prince a more acceptable Service in my poor Opinion. For otherwiſe if he ſhould be driven to recant (as I am ſure he will ſooner die) both the Cauſe of God and the King will ſuffer no ſmall Detriment amongſt his poor loving Subjects here. For if there be no better Stay for the Maintenance of theſe godly Preachers, the King's Authority concerning his Supremacy ſhall lie poſt alone hidden in the Act of Parliament, and not in the Hearts of his Subjects.

If they can bring to paſs that Turner may recant, to the defacing of his good Doctrine preached here, then have they that for which they have thus long travelled. And yet in Effect ſhall not Turner recant, but King Henry the Eighth in Turner's Perſon ſhall moſt odiouſly recant, to the Wounding of all Men's Conſciences here. If the King's Majeſty do not eſteem his Authority given to his Highneſs by God's Word and his Parliament; it were well done that the Preachers had good Warning to talk no more to the People thereof, rather than thus to be toſſed and troubled for doing their Duties by the Members of Antichriſt. Anno 1556.

And now to the Intent that they might effectually for ever ſlander Turner's Doctrine here, they have indicted him for offending againſt the ſix Articles this laſt Seſſions, by the Witneſs of two Papiſts of the Pariſh of Chartham his utter Enemies, Saunders and Brown by Name, for a Sermon preached at Chartham on Paſſion-Sunday, which chanced on St. Gregory's Even, they both being abſent that Day at Wye Fair, as it is well proved, namely, for that he preached againſt the Maſs: Saying, that our Saviour Chriſt was the only ſole Prieſt, which ſung Maſs on the Altar of the Croſs, there ſacrificing for the Sins of the World once for ever, and that all other Maſſes were but Remembrances and Thankſgiving for that one Sacrifice; or ſuch Words in Effect.

Wherefore to conclude (right worſhipful) knowing your godly Zeal, as well towards the Preferment of ſincere Religion, as your no leſs Affection towards the King's Majeſty's Perſon and his godly Proceedings, I moſt humbly beſeech you, in the Bowels of our Saviour Chriſt, ſo to ponder the weighty Conſideration of the Premiſſes, as by your Travels unto the King's Majeſty, or to the honourable Council, we here in Kent that have now of late our Hearts bent towards the Obſervation of the Law of God and the Prince, through Turner's godly Perſuaſions, may receive from your Worſhips ſome comfortable Words of his Deliverance, or elſe certainly many an honeſt and ſimple Man, lately embracing the Truth, may perhaps fall away deſperately from the ſame, not without Danger of their Souls. In accompliſhing whereof your Worſhips ſhall not only do unto Almighty God and the Prince moſt true and acceptable Service, but alſo bind the ſaid Mr. Turner, with all others to whom this Cauſe doth appertain, both daily to pray for your Proſperities, and alſo to be at your Commandments during their Lives. From Canterbury the ſecond Day of November.

Your Worſhips evermore at Command,
R. M.

And thus much containeth the Letter ſent (as is ſaid) by Mr. Morrice to Dr. Buts and Sir Anthony Deny. Now, what Succeſs and Speed this Letter had, hereafter ſhall be declared. For Dr. Buts, the King's Phyſician aforeſaid, after the Receipts of theſe Letters, conſidering the weighty Contents of the ſame, as he was ever a forward Friend in the Goſpel's Cauſe, ſo he thought not to foreſlack this Matter to the uttermoſt of his Diligence, and ſo watching his Opportunity when the King was in trimming and in waſhing (as his Manner was at certain Times to call for his Barber) Dr. Buts (whoſe Manner was at ſuch Times ever to be preſent, and with ſome pleaſant Conceits to refreſh and ſolace the King's Mind) brought with him in his Hand this Letter. The King asking what News, Dr. Buts pleaſantly and merrily beginneth to inſinuate to the King the Effect of the Matter, and ſo at the King's Command read out the Letter; which when the King had heard, and pauſed a little thereon, commanded the Letter to be read again. The Hearing and Conſideration whereof ſo altered the King's Mind, that whereas before he commanded the ſaid Turner to be whipped out of the Country, he now commanded him to be retained as a faithful Subject. And here of that Matter an End. Let us now return to the Archbiſhop again.

Who although he was encompaſſed about (as is ſaid) with mighty Enemies, and by many crafty Trains impugned, yet through God's more mighty Providence, working in the King's Heart ſo to favour him, he rubbed out all King Henry's Time without Blemiſh or Foil, by means of the King's Protection; who not only defended the ſaid Archbiſhop againſt ſuch conſpired Adverſaries, but alſo extended ſuch ſpecial Favonr to him in ſuch a Manner, that he being not ignorant of his Wife, whom he had married before at Noremberge, (being Niece to the Wife of Oſiander) keeping her alſo their ſix Articles Time contrary to Law, notwithſtanding he both permitted the ſame, and kept his Counſel.

Then after the Death of King Henry, immediately ſucceeded his Son King Edward, under whoſe Government and Protection the State of this Archbiſhop, being his Godfather, was not impaired, but rather more advanced.

During all this mean Time of King Henry aforeſaid, unril the entering in of King Edward, it ſeemed that Cranmer was ſcarcely yet thoroughly perſwaded in the right Knowledge of the Sacrament, or at leaſt was not yet fully ripened in the ſame: Wherein ſhortly after he being more groundedly confirmed by Confidence with Biſhop Ridley, in Proceſs of Time did ſo profit in more ripe Knowledge, that at laſt he took upon him the Defence of that whole Doctrine, that is, to refute and throw down firſt the corporal Preſence; ſecondly, the fantaſtical Tranſubſtantiation; thirdly, the idolatrous Adoration; fourthly, the falſe Error of the Papiſts, that wicked Men do eat the natural Body of Chriſt; and laſtly, the blaſphemous Sacrifice of the Maſs. Whereupon in Concluſion he wrote five Books for the publick Inſtruction of the Church of England, which Inſtruction to this Day ſtandeth, and is received in the Church of England.

The true Doctrine of the Sacrament in five Books, ſet forth by the Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

Againſt theſe five Books of the Archbiſhop, Stephen Gardiner, the Arch-enemy to Chriſt and his Goſpel, being then in the Tower, ſlubbereth up a certain Anſwer, ſuch as it was, which he in open Court exhibited up at Lambeth, being there examined by the Archbiſhop aforeſaid, and other the King's Commiſſioners in King Edward's Days, which Book was intituled, An Explication and Aſſertion of the true catholick Faith, touching the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar, with a Confutation of a Book written againſt the ſame.

Stephen Gardiner's Explication againſt the Archbiſhop.

Againſt this Explication, or rather caviling Sophiſtication of Stephen Gardiner Doctor of Law, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury learnedly and copiouſly reply'd again, which alſo he publiſh'd Abroad to the Eyes and Judgments of all Men.

The unquiet Spirit of Stephen Gardiner being not yet contented, after all this thruſteth out another Book in Latin of the like popiſh Argument, but after another Title, named Marcus Antonius Conſtantinus. Whereunto firſt the Archbiſhop again intending a full Confutation, had already abſolved three Parts of his Anſwer lying in Priſon. Of which Parts two periſhed in Oxford; the other yet remaineth in my Hands ready to be ſeen and ſet forth, as the Lord ſhall ſee good. Alſo Biſhop Ridley lying likewiſe the ſame Time in Priſon having there the ſaid Book of Marcus Antonius, for lack of Pen and Paper, with a Lead of a Window, in the Margin of the Book wrote Annotations, as Streightneſs of Time would ſerve him, in Refutation of the ſame Book. And finally, becauſe theſe worthy Martyrs had neither Liberty nor Leiſure to go through with that Travel, that which lacked in them, for Accompliſhment of that Behalf, was ſupply'd ſhortly after by Peter Martyr, who abundantly and ſubſtantially hath overthrown that Book in his learned Defence of the Truth, againſt the falſe Sophiſtication of Marcus Antonius aforeſaid.

Beſides theſe Books above cited of this Archbiſhop, divers other Things there were alſo of his doing, as the Book of the Reformation, the Catechiſm, with the Book of Homilies, whereof Part was by him contrived, Part by his Procurement approved and publiſhed. Whereunto alſo may be adjoined another Writing or Confutation of his againſt 88 Articles by the Convoeation deviſed and propounded, but yet not ratify'd nor received in the Reign of King Henry VIII.

And thus much concerning the Actions of this Archbiſhop of Canterbury, during the Lives of King Henry VIII. and King Edward his Son. During whoſe Lives this Archbiſhop lacked no ſtay of Maintenance againſt all his Maligners.

Afterward this King Edward, a Prince of moſt worthy Qualifications, falling ſick, when he perceived that his Death was at hand, and the Force of his painful Diſeaſe would not ſuffer him to live longer, and knowing that his Siſter Mary was wholly wedded to the popiſh Religion, bequeathed the Succeſſion of this Realm to the Lady Jane (a Lady of great Birth, but of greater Learning, being Niece to King Henry VIII. by his Siſter) by Conſent of the Council and Lawyers of this Realm. To this Teſtament of the King's, when all the Nobles of the Realm, Eſtates and Judges had ſubſcribed; they ſent for the Archbiſhop, and required him that he alſo would ſubſcribe. But he excuſing himſelf on this Manner, ſaid, That it was otherwiſe in the Teſtament of King Henry his Father, and that he had ſworn to the Succeſſion of Mary, as then the next Heir; by which Oath he was ſo bound, that without manifeſt Perjury he could not go from it.

The Council anſwered, that they were not ignorant of that, and that they had Conſcience as well as he; and moreover, that they were ſworn to that Teſtament, and therefore he ſhould not think there was any Danger therein, or that he ſhould be in more peril of Perjury than the reſt.

To this the Archbiſhop anſwered, that he was Judge of no Man's Conſcience but his own: And therefore as he would not be prejudicial to others, ſo he would not commit his Conſcience unto other Mens Facts, or caſt himſelf into Danger, ſeeing that every Man ſhould give Account of his own Conſcience, and not of other Mens. And as concerning Subſcription, before he had ſpoken with the King himſelf, he utterly refuſed to do it.

The King therefore being demanded of the Archbiſhop concerning this Matter, ſaid, That the Nobles and Lawyers of this Realm counſelled him unto it, and perſwaded him that the Bond of the firſt Teſtament could nothing hinder, but that this Lady Jane might ſucceed him as Heir, and the People without Danger acknowledge her as their Queen. Who then demanding Leave of the King that he might firſt talk with certain Lawyers that were in the Court; when they all agreed that by Law of the Realm it might be ſo, returning to the King, with much ado he ſubſcribed.

Well, not long after this King Edward died, being almoſt ſixteen Years old, to the great Sorrow, but greater Calamity of the whole Realm. After whoſe Deceaſe immediately it was commanded that the Lady Jane (who was unwilling thereunto) ſhould be proclaimed Queen. Which Thing the common People much miſliked, not that they did ſo much favour the Lady Mary, before whom they ſaw the Lady Jane preferred, as for the Hatred conceived againſt ſome whom they could not favour.

Beſides this, there happened alſo other Cauſes of Diſcord between the Nobles and Commons the ſame Time: For what Injuries of Commons and Encloſures wrongfully held, with other inordinate Pollings and uncharitable Dealing between the Landlords and Tenants, I cannot tell. But in fine, thus the Matter fell out, that the Lady Mary hearing of the Death of her Brother, and ſhifting for herſelf, was ſo aſſiſted by the Commons, that ſhe ſoon prevailed. Who being eſtabliſhed in the Poſſeſſion of the Realm, not long after came to London; and after ſhe had firſt cauſed the two Fathers, the Duke of Northumberland and the Duke of Suffolk to be beheaded (as has been already related) ſhe likewiſe cauſed the Lady Jane, being both in Age tender, and innocent from this Crime, after ſhe could by no Means be turned from the Conſtancy of her Faith, together with her Husband, to be beheaded.

The reſt of the Nobles, paying Fines, were forgiven, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury only excepted; who though he deſired Pardon (by means of his Friends) could obtain none; inſomuch that the Queen would not once vouchſafe to ſee him. For as yet the old Grudge againſt the Archbiſhop for the Divorcement of her Mother, remained hid in the Bottom of her Heart. Beſides this Divorce ſhe remembered the State of Religion changed; all which was imputed to the Archbiſhop as the Cauſe thereof.

While theſe Things were in doing, a Rumour was in all Mens Mouths, That the Archbiſhop, to curry Favour with the Queen, had promiſed to ſay a Dirige Maſs after the old Cuſtom, for the Funeral of King Edward her Brother. Neither wanted there ſome who reported that he had already ſaid Maſs at Canterbury; which Maſs indeed was ſaid by Dr. Thornton. This Rumour Cranmer thinking ſpeedily to ſtay, gave forth a Writing of his Purgation: The Tenor whereof being before expreſſed, I need not here again to recite.

This Bill being thus written, and lying openly in a Window in his Chamber, cometh in by Chance Mr. Story then Biſhop of Rocheſter, who after he had read and peruſed the ſame, required the Archbiſhop to have a Copy of the Bill. The Archbiſhop granting the ſame, and by Mr. Story's lending it to another Friend, there were divers Copies taken, and the Thing publiſhed Abroad among the common People, inſomuch that almoſt every Scrivener's Shop was occupy'd in copying out the ſame: And ſo at length ſome of theſe Copies coming to the Biſhop's Hands, and ſo brought to the Council, and they ſending it to the Commiſſioners, the Matter was known, and ſo he commanded to appear. Anno 1556.

Whereupon Dr. Cranmer appeared at the Day prefixed, before the ſaid Commiſſioners, bringing a true Inventory, as he was commanded, of all his Goods. That done, a Biſhop of the Queen's privy Council, being one of the ſaid Commiſſioners, after the Inventory was received, bringing in mention of the Bill; My Lord, ſaid he, there is a Bill put forth in your Name, wherein you ſeem to be aggrieved with ſetting up the Maſs again; we doubt not but you are ſorry that it is gone Abroad. This Biſhop was Dr. Heath, afterwards Archbiſhop of York.

To whom the Archbiſhop anſwered, As I do not deny myſelf to be the Author of that Bill or Letter, ſo muſt I confeſs here unto you, concerning the ſame Bill, that I am ſorry that the ſaid Bill went from me in ſuch Sort as it did. For when I had written it, Mr. Story got the Copy from me, and it is now come Abroad, and as I underſtand, the City is full of it. For which I am ſorry, that it ſo paſſed my Hands: For I intended otherwiſe to have made it in a more large and ample Manner, and minded to have ſet it on Paul's Church Door, and on the Doors of all the Churches in London, with mine own Seal joined thereunto.

At which Words, when they ſaw the Conſtancy of the Man, they diſmiſſed him, affirming they had no more at preſent to ſay unto him, but that ſhortly he ſhould hear farther. The ſaid Biſhop declared afterwards to one of Dr. Cranmer's Friends, that notwithſtanding his Attainder of Treaſon, the Queen's Determination at that Time was, that Cranmer ſhould only have been deprived of his Archbiſhoprick, and have had a ſufficient Living aſſigned him, upon his exhibiting of a true Inventory, with Commandment to keep his Houſe without meddling in Matters of Religion. But how true that was I have not to ſay. This is certain, that not long after this, he was ſent to the Tower, and ſoon after condemned for Treaſon. Notwithſtanding the Queen, when ſhe could not honeſtly deny him his Pardon, ſeeing all the reſt were diſcharged, and eſpecially, ſeeing he laſt (of all others) ſubſcribed to King Edward's Requeſt, and that againſt his own Will, releaſed to him his Action of Treaſon, and accuſed him only of Hereſy, which the Archbiſhop liked well, and came to paſs as he wiſhed, becauſe the Cauſe was not his own, but Chriſt's; not the Queen's but the Church's. Thus ſtood the Cauſe of Cranmer, till at length it was determined by the Queen and the Council, that he ſhould be removed from the Tower where he was Priſoner, to Oxford, there to diſpute with the Doctors and Divines. And privily Word was ſent before to them of Oxford to prepare themſelves, and make them ready to diſpute. And although the Queen and the Biſhops had concluded before what ſhould become of him, yet it pleaſed them that the Matter ſhould be debated with Arguments, that under ſome honeſt Shew of Diſputation the Murder of the Man might be covered. Neither could their haſty Anno 1556. haſty Speed of Revenge abide any long Delay; and therefore in all haſte he was carried to Oxford.

What this Diſputation was, and how it was handled, what were the Queſtions and Reaſons on both Sides, and alſo touching his Condemnation by the Univerſity and the Prolocutor, becauſe it hath been ſufficiently declared, we intend now therefore to proceed to his final Judgment and Order of Condemnation, which was the 12th Day of September 1555, and ſeven Days before the Condemnation of Biſhop Ridley and Mr. Latimer, as is beforementioned. The Story whereof followeth, faithfully corrected by the Report and Narration (coming by Chance to our Hands) of one who being both preſent thereat, and alſo a devout Favourer of the See and Faction of Rome, can lack no Credit (I think) with ſuch who ſeek what they can to diſcredit whatſoever maketh not with their phantaſied Religion of Rome.

After the Diſputations done and finiſhed in Oxford between the Doctors of both Univerſities, and the three worthy Biſhops, Dr. Cranmer, Ridley, and Latimer, ye heard then how Sentence condemnatory immediately upon the ſame was adminiſtred againſt them by Dr. Weſton and others of the Univerſity; whereby they were judged to be Hereticks, and ſo committed to the Mayor and Sheriffs of Oxford. But foraſmuch as the Sentence given againſt them was void in Law (for at that Time the Authority of the Pope was not yet received into the Land) therefore a new Commiſſion was ſent from Rome, and a new Proceſs framed for the Conviction of theſe reverend and godly learned Men aforeſaid. In which Commiſſion, firſt was Dr. James Brooks Biſhop of Glouceſter the Pope's Sub-delegate, with Dr. Martin and Dr. Story, Commiſſioners in the King and Queen's Behalf for the Execution of the ſame. Of which three Commiſſioners abovenamed, as touching Dr. Martin, this by the Way is to be underſtood, that although he was uſed for an Inſtrument of the Pope's Side to ſerve a Turn (whoſe Book alſo is extant againſt the lawful Marriage of Prieſts) yet notwithſtanding neither was he ſo bitter an Enemy in this Perſecution as other Commiſſioners were; and alſo in the Time of Queen Elizabeth, where divers other Doctors of the Arches refuſed to be ſworn againſt the Pope, he denied not the Oath; and yet notwithſtanding not altogether here to be excuſed. But to the Purpoſe of this Story. Whereof firſt it ſhall be requiſite to declare the Circumſtance, and the whole State of the Matter, as in a general Deſcription, before we come to their Orations, according as in a Parcel of a certain Letter concerning the ſame it came to our Hands.

Imprimis, Here is to be underſtood, that at the coming down of the aforeſaid Commiſſioners, which was upon Thurſday the 12th of September 1555, in the Church of St. Mary, and in the Eaſt End of the ſaid Church at the high Altar, was erected a ſolemn Scaffold for Biſhop Brooks aforeſaid, repreſenting the Pope's Perſon, ten Foot high. The Seat was made that he might ſit under the Sacrament of the Altar. And on the right Hand of the Pope's Delegate, beneath him ſate Dr. Martin, and on the left Hand ſate Dr. Story the King and Queen's Commiſſioners, who were both Doctors of the Civil Law, and underneath them other Doctors, Scribes and Phariſees alſo, with the Pope's Collector, and a Rabblement of ſuch others.

And thus theſe Biſhops being placed in their Pontificalibus, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury was ſent for to come before them. He having Intelligence of them that were there, thus ordered himſelf. He came forth of the Priſon to the Church of St. Mary, ſet forth with Bills and Gleves for fear he ſhould ſtart away, being clothed in a fair black Gown with his Hood on both Shoulders, ſuch as Doctors of Divinity uſe to wear in the Univerſity. Who, after he was come into the Church, and did ſee them ſit in their Pontificalibus, he did not put off his Cap to any of them, but ſtood ſtill till he was called.

And anon one of the Proctors for the Pope, or elſe his Doctor, called Thomas Archbiſhop of Canterbury, appear here and make Anſwer to what ſhall be laid to thy Charge; that is to ſay, for Blaſphemy, Incontinence and Hereſy; and make Anſwer here to the Biſhop of Glouceſter, repreſenting the Pope's Perſon.

Upon this he being brought nearer unto the Scaffold, where the aforeſaid Biſhop ſate, he firſt well viewed the Place of Judgment, and eſpying where the King and Queen's Majeſty's Proctors were, putting off his Cap, he firſt humbly bowing his Knee to the Ground, made Reverence to the one, and after to the other.

The Archbiſhop giveth Reverence to the Queen's Commiſſioners, but refuſeth the ſame to the Pope's Delegate.

That done, beholding the Biſhop in the Face, he put on his Bonnet again, making no manner of Token of Obedience towards him at all. Whereat the Biſhop being offended, ſaid unto him, that it might beſeem him right well, weighing the Authority he did repreſent, to do his Duty unto him.

Whereunto Dr. Cranmer anſwered and ſaid, That he had once taken a ſolemn Oath, never to conſent to the admitting of the Biſhop of Rome's Authority into this Realm of England again; and that he had done it adviſedly, and meant by God's Grace to keep it; and therefore would commit nothing either by Sign or Token, which might argue his Conſent to the receiving of the ſame, and ſo he deſired the ſaid Biſhop to judge of him, and that he did it not for any Contempt to his Perſon, which he could willingly have honoured as well as any of the others, if his Commiſſion had come from as good an Authority as theirs. This anſwered he both modeſtly, wiſely, and patiently, with his Cap on his Head, not once bowing or making any Reverence to him that repreſented the Pope's Perſon, which was wonderouſly marked by the People that were there preſent and ſaw it, and marked it as nigh as could be poſſible.

The Oration of Dr. Brooks Biſhop of Glouceſter, unto Dr. Cranmer Archbiſhop of Canterbury, in the Church of St. Mary at Oxford, March 12, 1556.

WHEN after many Means uſed, they perceived that the Archbiſhop would not move his Bonnet, the Biſhop proceeded in theſe Words following.

My Lord, at this preſent we are to come to you as Commiſſioners, and for you, not intruding truding ourſelves by our own Authority, but ſent by Commiſſion, partly from the Pope's Holineſs, partly from the King and Queen's moſt excellent Majeſties, not to your utter Diſcomfort, but to your Comfort if you will yourſelf. We come, not to judge you, but to put you in Remembrance of what you have been, and may be. Neither come we to diſpute with you, but to examine you in certain Matters; which being done, to make Relation thereof to him that hath Power to judge you. The Firſt being well taken, ſhall make the Second to be well taken. For if you, of your Part be moved to come to a Conformity, then ſhall not only we of our Side take Joy of our Examination, but alſo they that have ſent us.

And firſt, as Charity doth move us, I would think good ſomewhat to exhort you, and that by the ſecond Chapter of St. John in the Revelations, Remember from whence thou art fallen, and do the firſt Works, or if not, and ſo as ye know what followeth. Remember yourſelf from whence you have fallen. You have fallen from the Univerſal and Catholick Church of Chriſt, from the very true and received Faith of all Chriſtendom, and that by open Hereſy. You have fallen from your Promiſe to God, from your Fidelity and Allegiance, and that by open Preaching, Marriage, and Adultery. You have fallen from your ſovereign Prince and Queen by open Treaſon. Remember therefore from whence you are fallen. Your Fall is great, the Danger cannot be ſeen. Wherefore, when I ſay, Remember from whence you are fallen, I put you mind, not only of your Fall, but alſo of the State you were in before your Fall. You were ſometime, as I and other poor Men, in a mean Eſtate, God I take to witneſs, I ſpeak it to no Reproach or Abaſement of you, but to put you in Memory, how God hath called you from a low to an high Degree, from one Degree to another, from better to better, and never gave you over, till he had appointed you an Ambaſſador, Metropolitan of all England, and Paſtor of his own Flock: Such great Truſt did he put you in, in his Church; What could he do more? for even as he ordained Moſes to be a Ruler over his Church of Iſrael, and gave him full Authority of the ſame: So did he make you over his Church of England. And when did he this for you? forſooth, when you gave no Occaſion or Cauſe of miſtruſt either to him or to his Magiſtrates. For although it be conjectured, that in all your Time ye were not upright in the Honour and Faith of Chriſt, but rather ſet up of Purpoſe as a fit Inſtrument, whereby the Church might be ſpoiled and brought into Ruin; yet may it appear by many your Doings otherwiſe, and I for my Part, as it behoveth each one of us, ſhall think the beſt. For who was thought as then more devout? who was more religious in the Face of the World? who was thought to have more Conſcience of a Vow making, and obſerving the Order of the Church, more earneſt in the Defence of the real Preſence of Chriſt's Body and Blood in the Sacrament of the Altar than ye were? and then all Things proſper'd with you; your Prince favoured you; yea, God himſelf favoured you; your Candleſtick was ſet up in the higheſt Place of the Church, and the Light of your Candle was over all the Church; I would God it had ſo continued ſtill. Anno 1556.

But after ye began to fall by Schiſm, and would not acknowledge the Pope's Holineſs as ſupream Head, but would ſtoutly uphold the unlawful Requeſts of King Henry VIII. and would bear with what ſhould not be born withal, then began you to fancy unlawful Liberty; and when you had exiled a good Conſcience, then enſued great Shipwrack in the Sea, which was out of the true and catholick Church caſt into the Sea of Deſparation: For, as he ſaith, Without the Church there is no Salvation. When ye had forſaken God, God forſook you, and gave you over to your own Will, and ſuffered you to fall from Schiſm to Apoſtacy, from Apoſtacy to Hereſy, and from Hereſy to Perjury, from Perjury to Treaſon, and ſo in Concluſion, into the full Indignation of our ſovereign Prince, which you may think a juſt Puniſhment of God for your other abominable Opinions.

After that, ye fell lower and lower, and now to the loweſt Degree of all, to the End of Honour and Life. For if the Light of your Candle be as it hath been hitherto dusky, your Candleſtick is like to be removed, and have a great Fall, ſo low, and ſo far out of Knowledge, that it be quite of God's Favour, and paſt all Hope of Recovery: For in Hell there is no Redemption. The Danger whereof being ſo great, very Pity cauſeth me to ſay, Remember from whence thou haſt fallen. I add alſo, and whither you fall.

But here peradventure you will ſay to me, What Sir, my Fall is not ſo great as you make it: I have not yet faln from the catholick Church. For that is not the catholick Church that the Pope is Head of. There is another Church. But as touching that I anſwer, You are ſure of that as the Donatiſts were, for they ſaid they had the true Church, and that the Name of true Chriſtians remained only in Africk, were only their ſeditious Sect was preached. And as you think, ſo thought Novatus, That all they that did acknowledge their ſupream Head at the See of Rome, were out of the Church of Chriſt. But here St. Cyprian defending Cornelius againſt Novatus, Book 2. Epiſt. 6. ſaith on this wiſe, The Church is one, which Church whereas it is one, it cannot be here and there. So that if Novatus were in the Church, then was not Cornelius, who indeed by lawful Succeſſion ſucceeded Pope Fabian. Here St. Cyprian intendeth by the whole Proceſs to prove, and concludeth thereupon, that the true Church was only Rome. Gather you then what will follow of your Fall. But you will ſay peradventure, that you fell not by Hereſy, and ſo ſaid the Arians, alledging for themſelves that they had Scripture, and going about to perſuade their Schiſm by Scripture; for indeed they had more Places by two and forty, which by their Torture ſeemed to depend upon Scripture, than the Catholicks had.

So did the Marcions provoke their Hereſy to Scripture. But thoſe are no Scriptures; for they are not truly alledged, nor truly interpreted, but untruly reſted and wrong, according to their own Fantaſies. And therefore were they all juſtly condemned for their wrong taking of the Scriptures, and the Church replieth againſt them, ſaying, What make make you here in my Heritage? from whence came you? the Scripture is mine Inheritance; I am right Heir thereof: I hold it by true Succeſſion of the Apoſtles; for as the Apoſtles required me to hold, ſo do I hold it. The Apoſtles have received me, and put me in my right, and have rejected you as Baſtards, having no Title thereunto.

Alſo ye will deny that ye have fallen by Apoſtacy, by breaking your Vow; and ſo Vigilantius ſaid, inſomuch that he would admit none to his Miniſtry, but thoſe who had their Wives bagged with Children. What now? ſhall we ſay that Vigilantius did not fall therefore? Did not Donatus and Novatus fall, becauſe they ſaid ſo, and brought Scripture for their Defence? Then let us believe as we liſt, pretending well, and ſay ſo; nay, there is no Man ſo blind that will not ſay ſo: For except the Church which condemneth them for their ſay-ſo, do approve us for to do-ſo, then will ſhe condemn you alſo. So that your Denial will not ſtand. And therefore I tell you, Remember from whence ye are fallen, and how long you ſhall fall if you hold on as you do begin. But I truſt you will not continue, but revoke yourſelf in Time, and the Remedy followeth.

Repent, and do thy firſt Works, for by ſuch Means as ye have fallen ye muſt riſe again. Firſt, your Heart hath fallen, then your Tongue and your Pen, and beſides your own Damage, hath cauſed many more to fall. Therefore, firſt your Heart muſt turn, and then ſhall the Tongue and the Pen be quickly turned; or elſe I will come unto thee quickly, and will remove thy Candleſtick out of his Place.

I need not to teach you a Method to turn; you know the ready Way yourſelf. But I would God I could but exhort you to the Right and Truth, then the Way ſhould ſoon be found out. For if ye remember how many ye have brought by abominable Hereſy into the Way of Perdition, I doubt not but very Conſcience would move you, as much for them as for yourſelf, to come again. And ſo would you ſpare neither Tongue nor Pen, if the Heart were once reformed; for as touching that Point, the Holy Ghoſt toucheth their Hearts very near by the Mouth of his Holy Prophet Ezekiel, when he requireth the Blood of his Flock at the Prieſt's Hands, for lack of good and wholſome Food. How much more ſhould this touch your guilty Heart, having overmuch Diligence to teach them the Way of Perdition, and feeding them with Baggage and corrupt Food, which is Hereſy; Ezek. 33. He that ſhall convert a Sinner from his wicked Life, ſhall ſave his Soul from Death, and ſhall cover the Multitude of Sins. So that if it be true that he who converteth a Sinner, ſaveth a Soul; then the contrary muſt needs be true, that he that perverteth a Soul, and teacheth him the Way of Perdition, muſt needs be damned.

Origen, on the Epiſtle of St. Paul to the Romans, ſaith, The Damnation of thoſe that preach Hereſy doth increaſe to the Day of Judgment. The more that periſh by heretical Doctrine, the more grievous ſhall their Torment be, that miniſter ſuch Doctrine. Berengarius, who ſeemed to fear that Danger, provided for it in his Life-time, but not without a troubled and diſquiet Conſcience. He did not only repent, but recant, and not ſo much for himſelf, as for them whom he had with moſt peſtilent Hereſies infected. For as he lay in his Death-bed upon Epiphany-day, he demanded of them that were preſent, Is this (quoth he) the Day of Epiphany, and appearing of the Lord? they anſwered him Yea. Then (quoth he) this Day ſhall the Lord appear to me, either to my Comfort, or to my Diſcomfort. This Remorſe argueth, that he feared the Danger of them whom he had taught and led out of the Faith of Chriſt. Origines upon him ſaith in this wiſe, Although his own Blood was not upon his Head, for that he did repent, and was ſorry for his former Errors, yet being converted, he feared the Blood of them whom he had infected, and who received his Doctrine.

Let this moe you even at the laſt Point. Inſomuch as your Caſe is not unlike to Berengarius, let your Repentance be like alſo. And what ſhould ſtay you (tell me) from this godly Return? Fear that ye have gone ſo far, ye may not return. Nay then I may ſay as David ſaid, Ye fear where ye have no Cauſe to fear. For if ye repent and be heartily ſorry for your former Hereſy and Apoſtacy, ye need not to fear. For as God of his Part is merciful and gracious to the repentant Sinner, ſo is the King, ſo is the Queen merciful, which ye may well perceive by your own Caſe, ſince ye might have ſuffered a great while ago for Treaſon committed againſt her Highneſs, but that ye have been ſpared and reſerved upon hope of Amendment, which ſhe conceived very good of you, but now (as it ſeemth) is but a very deſperate Hope. And what do you thereby? According to the Hardneſs of your Heart ye treaſure up to yourſelf Anger in the Day of Wrath.

Well, what is it then, if Fear do not hinder you? Shame, to unſay that that you have ſaid? Nay, it is no Shame, unleſs you think it Shame to agree with the true and the catholick Church of Chriſt. And if that be Shame, then blame St. Paul, who perſecuted the Diſciples of Chriſt with the Sword; then blame St. Peter, who deny'd his Maſter Chriſt with an Oath, that he never knew him. St. Cyprian before his Return being a Witch; St. Auſtin being nine Years out of the Church: They thought it no Shame after their Return of that they had returned. Shall it then be Shame for you to convert and conſent with the Church of Chriſt? No, no.

What is it then that doth hinder you? Glory of the World? nay, as for the Vanity of the World, I for my Part judge not in you, being a Man of Learning and knowing your Eſtate.

And as for the Loſs of your Eſtimation, it is ten to one that where you were Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and Metropolitan of all England, it is ten to one (I ſay) that ye ſhall be as well ſtill, yea, and rather better.

And as for the winning of good Men, there is no doubt but all that be here preſent, and the whole Congregation of Chriſt's Church alſo will more rejoice of your Return, than they were ſorry for your Fall. And as for the other, ye need not to doubt for they ſhall all come after; and to ſay the Truth, if you ſhould loſe them for ever it were no Force, ye ſhould have no leſs thereby at all. I do not here touch them which ſhould confirm your Eſtimation. For as St. Paul, after his Converſion, was received into the Church of Chriſt, with wonderful Joy to the whole Congregation, even ſo ſhall you be. The Fame of your Return ſhall be ſpread Abroad throughout all Chriſtendom, where your Face was never known.

But you will ſay perhaps, your Conſcienee will not ſuffer you. My Lord, there is a good Conſcience, and there is a bad Conſcience. The good Conſcience have not they, as St. Paul declareth to Timothy concerning Hymeneus and Alexander. The evil and bad Conſcience is, ſaith St. Cyprian, well to be known by his Mark. What Mark? This Conſcience is marked with the Print of Hereſy. This Conſcience is a naughty, filthy, and a branded Conſcience, which I truſt is not in you. I have conceived a better Hope of you than ſo, or elſe would I never go about to perſwade or exhort you. But what Conſcience ſhould ſtay you to return to the catholick Faith and univerſal Church of Chriſt? What Conſcience doth ſeparate you to that deviliſh and ſeveral Church! to a Liberty which never had Ground in the Holy Scriptures? If you judge your Liberty to be good, then judge you all Chriſtendom to do Evil beſides you.

O what a preſumptuous Perſwaſion is this, upon this utterly to forſake the Church of Chriſt? Under what Colour or Pretence do you this? For the Abuſes? as though in your Church were no Abuſes: Yes that there were. And if you forſake the univerſal Church for the Abuſes, why do you not then forſake your particular Church, and ſo be flitting from one to another? That is not the next Way, to ſlip from the Church for the Abuſes; for if you had ſeen Abuſes, you ſhould rather have endeavoured for a Reformation than for a Defection. He is a good Surgeon, who for a little Pain in the Toe will cut off the whole Leg. He helpeth well the Tooth-ach, which cutteth away the Head by the Shoulders. It is mere Folly to amend Abuſes by Abuſes. Ye are like Diogenes; for Diogenes on a Time envying the Cleanlineſs of Plato, ſaid on this wiſe, Behold, I tread upon the Pride of Plato. Plato anſwered, But with another ſort of Pride. So that Diogenes ſeemed more faulty of the two.

Abuſes in the Church require a Reformation, and not a Defection.

But when we have ſaid all that we can, peradventure you will ſay, I will not return. And to that I ſay, I will not anſwer. Nevertheleſs hear what Chriſt ſaith to ſuch obſtinate and ſtiff-necked People in the Parable of the Supper. When he had ſent out his Men to call them in that were appointed, and they would not come, he bade his Servants go into the Ways and Streets, to compel Men to come in. If then the Church will not loſe any Member that may be compelled to come in, ye muſt think it good to take the Compulſion, leſt you loſe your Part of the Supper which the Lord hath prepared for you, and this Compulſion ſtandeth well with Charity.

But it may be perhaps, that ſome hath animated you to ſtick to your Tackle, and not to give over, bearing you in Hand that your Opinion is good, and that ye ſhall die in a good Quarrel, and God ſhall accept your Oblation. But hear what Chriſt ſaith of a meaner Gift; If thou come to the Altar to offer thy Oblation, and knoweſt that thy Brother hath ſomewhat to ſay againſt thee, leave there thy Gift, and go and be reconciled to thy Brother, and then come and offer up thy Gift, or elſe thy Brother will make thy Offering unſavoury before God. This he ſaid unto all the World, to the End they ſhould know how their Offerings ſhould be received, if they were not according. Anno 1556.

Matth. 7.

Remember you therefore before you offer up your Offering, whether your Gift be qualified or no. Remember the Church of Rome, and alſo of England, where not one only Brother, but a Number have Matter againſt you, ſo juſt that they will make your Burnt-offering to ſtink before God, except you be reconciled. If you muſt needs appoint upon a Sacrifice, make yet a Mean firſt to them that have to lay againſt you. I ſay no more than the Church hath allowed me to ſay. For the Sacrifice that is offered without the Church is not profitable. The Premiſſes therefore conſidered, for God's ſake, I ſay, Remember therefore from whence thou art fallen, and repent, and do thy firſt Works, or elſe I will come unto thee quickly, and will remove thy Candleſtick out of his Place, except thou repent. Caſt not yourſelf away, ſpare your Body, ſpare your Soul, ſpare them alſo whom you have ſeduced, ſpare the ſhedding of Chriſt's Blood for you in vain. Harden not your Heart, acknowledge the Truth, yield to the preſcript Word of God, to the catholick Church of Rome, to the received Verity of all Chriſtendom. Wed not yourſelf to your own Self-will. Stand not too much in your own Conceit. Think not yourſelf wiſer than all Chriſtendom is beſides you. Leave off this unjuſt Cavil. How? leave what? Leave Reaſon, leave Wonder, and believe as the catholick Church doth believe and teach you. Perſwade with yourſelf, that without the Church there is no Salvation. And thus much have I ſaid of Charity. If this poor ſimple Exhortation of mine may ſink into your Head, and take Effect with you, then have I ſaid as I would have ſaid, otherwiſe not as I would, but as I could for this Preſent.

And thus Biſhop Brooks finiſhing his Oration, ſat down. After whom, Dr. Martin taking the Matter in Hand, beginneth thus.

The Oration of Dr. Martin.

ALbeit there be two Governments, the one Spiritual, and the other Temporal, the one having the Keys, and the other the Sword; yet in all Ages we read that for the Honour and Glory of God both theſe Powers have been adjoined together. For if we read the Old Teſtament, we ſhall find that ſo did Joſias and Ezekias. So did the King of the Ninivites compel a general Faſt through all the whole City. So did Darius in breaking the great idol Bel, and delivered godly Daniel out of the Den of Lions. So did Nebuchadonoſor make and inſtitute Laws againſt the Blaſphemers of God. But to let paſs theſe Examples, with a great Number more, and to come to Chriſt's Time, it is not unknown what a great Travel they took to ſet forth God's Honour: And although the Rule and Government of the Church did only appertain to the Spiritualty, yet for the Suppreſſion of Hereſies and Schiſms, Kings were admitted as Aiders thereunto. Firſt, Conſtantine the Great called a Council at Nice for the Suppreſſion of the Arian Sect, where the ſame Time was raiſed a great Contention among them. And after long Diſputation had, when the Fathers could not agree upon the putting down the Arians, they referred their Judgment to Conſtantine. God forbid, quoth Conſtantine; You ought to rule me, and not I you. And as Conſtantine did, ſo did Theodoſius againſt the Neſtorians, ſo did Marcianus againſt Manicheus. Jovinian made a Law, that no Man ſhould marry with a Nun, that had wedded herſelf to the Church.

So had King Henry VIII. the Title of Defender of the Faith, becauſe he wrote againſt Luther and his Accomplices. So theſe 900 Years the King of Spain had that Title of Catholick, for the Expulſion of the Arians, and to ſay the Truth, the King and Queen's Majeſties do nothing degenerate from their Anceſtors, taking upon them to reſtore again the Title to be Defender of the Faith, to the right Heir hereof, the Pope's Holineſs.

Therefore theſe two Princes, perceiving this noble Realm, how it hath been brought from the Unity of the true and catholick Church, which you and your Confederates do and have renounced; perceiving alſo that you do perſiſt in your deteſtable Errors, and will by no Means be revoked from the ſame, have made their humble Requeſt and Petition to the Pope's Holineſs, Paul the Fourth, as ſupream Head of the Church of Chriſt, declaring to him, that where you were Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and Metropolitan of England, and at your Conſecration took two ſolemn Oaths for your due Obedience to be given to the See of Rome, to become a true Preacher or Paſtor of his Flock, yet contrary to your Oath and Allegiance for Unity have ſowed Diſcord; for Chaſtity, Marriage and Adultery; for Obedience, Contention; and for Faith, ye have been the Author of all Miſchief. The Pope's Holineſs, conſidering their Requeſt and Petition, hath granted them, that according to the Cenſure of this Realm, Proceſs ſhould be made againſt you.

And whereas in this late Time you both excluded Charity and Juſtice, yet hath his Holineſs decreed, that you ſhall have both Charity and Juſtice ſhewed unto you. He willeth you ſhould have the Laws in moſt ample Manner to anſwer in your Behalf, and that you ſhall here come before my Lord of Glouceſter, as high Commiſſioner from his Holineſs, to the Examination of ſuch Articles as ſhall be propoſed againſt you, and that we ſhould require the Examination of you in the King's and Queen's Majeſties Behalf. The King and Queen as touching themſelves becauſe by the Law they cannot appear perſonally, [Quia ſunt illuſtriſ. perſonæ] have appointed as their Attorneys Dr. Story and me. Wherefore here I offer to your good Lordſhip our Proxy, ſealed with the Broad Seal of England, and offer myſelf to be Proctor in the King's Majeſties Behalf. I exhibit here alſo certain Articles, containing the manifeſt Adultery and Perjury: Alſo Books of Hereſy made partly by him, partly ſet forth by his Authority. And here I produce him as Party principal to anſwer to your good Lordſhip.

Thus when Dr. Martin had ended his Oration, the Archbiſhop began as followeth.

Cranmer. Shall I then make my Anſwer.

Martin. As you think good, no Man ſhall hinder you.

And here the Archbiſhop kneeling down on both Knees towards the Weſt, ſaid firſt the Lord's-Prayer. Then riſing up he reciteth the Articles of the Creed. Which done, he entreth with his Proteſtation in Form as followeth.

The Faith and Profeſſion of Dr. Cranmer Archbiſhop of Canterbury before the Commiſſioners.

THIS I do profeſs as touching my Faith, and make my Proteſtation, which I deſire you to note. I will never conſent that the Biſhop of Rome ſhall have any Juriſdiction within this Realm.

Story. Take a Note thereof.

Martin. Mark, Mr. Cranmer, how you anſwer for yourſelf. You refuſe and deny him, by whoſe Laws you do remain in Life, being otherwiſe attained of High-treaſon, and but a dead Man by the Laws of the Realm.

Cranmer. I proteſt before God I was no Traitor, but indeed I confeſſed more at my Arraignment than was true.

Martin. That is not to be reaſoned at this preſent. Ye know ye were condemned for a Traitor, and a Cauſe determined is taken for a Truth. But proceed to your Matter.

Cranmer. I will never conſent to the Biſhop of Rome, for then ſhould I give myſelf to the Devil; for I have made an Oath to the King, and I muſt obey the King by God's Laws. By the Scripture the King is Chief, and no foreign Perſon in his own Realm above him. There is no Subject but to a King. I am a Subject, I owe my Fidelity to the Crown. The Pope is contrary to the Crown. I cannot obey both; for no Man can ſerve two Maſters at once, as you in the Beginning of your Oration declared by the Sword and Keys, attributing the Keys to the Pope, and the Sword to the King. But I ſay the King hath both. Therefore he that is ſubject to Rome, and the Laws of Rome, he is perjured; for the Pope's and the Judges Laws are contrary, they are uncertain and confounded.

Cauſes alledged why Dr. Cranmer cannot receive the Pope.

A Prieſt indebted, by the Laws of the Realm ſhall be ſued before a temporal Judge; by the Pope's Laws contrary.

The Pope doth the King Injury, in that he hath his Power from the Pope. The King is Head in his own Realm: But the Pope claimeth all Biſhops, Prieſts, Curates, &c. So the Pope in every Realm hath a Realm.

Again, by the Laws of Rome the Benefice muſt be given by the Biſhop, by the Laws of the Realm the Patron giveth the Benefice. Herein the Laws be as contrary as Fire and Water.

No Man can by the Laws of Rome proceed in a Premunire, and ſo is the Law of the Realm expelled, and the King ſtandeth accurſed in maintaining his own Lands. Therefore in Conſideration that the King and the Queen take their Power of him, as though God ſhould give it to them, there is no true Subject, unleſs he be abrogate, ſeeing the Crown is held of him being out of the Realm.

The Biſhop of Rome is contrary to God, and injurious to his Laws; for God commanded all Men to be diligent in the Knowledge of his Law; and therefore hath appointed one holy Day in the Week at the leaſt, for the People to come to the Church and hear the Word of God expounded unto them, and that they might the better underſtand it, to hear it in in their Mother Tongue which they know. The Pope doth contrary; for he willeth the Service to be had in the Latin Tongue, which they do not underſtand. God would have it to be perceived; the Pope will not. When the Prieſt giveth Thanks, God would that the People ſhould do ſo too, and God will them to confeſs altogether, the Pope will not.

Now as concerning the Sacrament, I have taught no falſe Doctrine of the Sacrament of the Altar: For if it can be proved by any Doctor above a thouſand Years after Chriſt, that Chriſt's Body is there really, I will give over. My Book was made ſeven Years ago, and no Man hath brought any Authors againſt it. I believe that whoſo eateth and drinketh that Sacrament, Chriſt is within them, whole Chriſt, his Nativity, Paſſion, Reſurrection and Aſcenſion; but not that corporally that ſitteth in Heaven.

Now Chriſt commanded all to drink of the Cup: The Pope taketh it away from the Laymen; and yet one ſaith, that if Chriſt had died for the Devil, that he ſhould drink thereof. Chriſt biddeth us to obey the King, [etiam Diſcolo.] the Biſhop of Rome biddeth us to obey him; therefore, unleſs he be Antichriſt, I cannot tell what to make of him. Wherefore if I ſhould obey him, I cannot obey Chriſt.

He is like the Devil in his Doings; for the Devil ſaid to Chriſt, If thou wilt fall down and worſhip me, I will give thee all the Kingdoms of the World. Thus he took upon him to give that which was not his own. Even ſo the Biſhop of Rome giveth Princes their Crowns being none of his own; for where Princes either by Election, either by Succeſſion, either by Inheritance obtain their Crown, he ſaith that they ſhould have it from him.

Chriſt ſaith, that Antichriſt ſhall be. And who ſhall he be? Forſooth he that advanceth himſelf above all other Creatures. Now if there be none already that hath advanced himſelf after ſuch Sort beſides the Pope, then in the mean Time let him be Antichriſt.

Story. Pleaſeth it you to make an End.

Cranmer. For he will be the Vicar of Chriſt, he will diſpenſe with the Old and New Teſtament alſo, yea and with Apoſtacy.

Now I have declared why I cannot with my Conſcience obey the Pope. I ſpeak not this for Hatred I bear to him that now ſupplieth the Room, for I know him not. I pray God give him Grace not to follow his Anceſtors. Neither ſay I this for my Defence, but to declare my Conſcience for the Zeal that I bear to God's Word trodden under Foot by the Biſhop of Rome. I caſt Fear apart, for Chriſt ſaid to his Apoſtles, that in the latter Days they ſhould ſuffer much Sorrow, and be put to Death for his Name Sake: Fear them not (ſaith he) but fear him which when he hath killed the Body hath Power to caſt the Soul into Fire everlaſting. Alſo Chriſt ſaith, Matt. 16. that he that will live ſhall die, and he that loſeth his Life for my Name's Sake, he ſhall Matt. 8. find it again. Moreover he ſaid, confeſs me before Men, and be not afraid; for if you do ſo, I will ſtand with you; if you ſhrink from me I will ſhrink from you. This is a comfortable and terrible Saying, this maketh me to ſet all Fear apart. I ſay therefore the Biſhop of Rome treadeth under foot God's Laws and the King's.

The Pope would give Biſhopricks, ſo would the King. But at the laſt the King got the upper Hand, and ſo are all Biſhops perjured, firſt to the Pope, and then to the King. Anno 1556.

The Crown hath nothing to do with the Clergy. For if a Clerk come before a Judge, the Judge ſhall make Proceſs againſt him, but not to execute any Laws. For if the Judge ſhould put him to Execution, then is the King accurſed in maintaining his own Laws. And therefore ſay I, that he is neither true to God, neither to the King, that firſt received the Pope. But I ſhall heartily pray for ſuch Counſellors as may inform her the Truth; for the King and Queen, if they be well informed, will do well.

Martin. As you underſtand, then if they maintain the Supremacy of Rome, they cannot maintain England too.

Cranmer. I require you to declare to the King and Queen what I have ſaid, and how their Oaths do ſtand with the Realm and the Pope. St. Gregory ſaith, he that taketh upon him to be Head of the univerſal Church, is worſe than the Antichriſt. If any Man can ſhew me, that it is not againſt God's Word to hold his Stirrop when he taketh his Horſe, and kiſs his Feet (as Kings do) then will I kiſs his Feet alſo.

And you for your Part, my Lord, are perjured; for now you ye ſit Judge for the Pope, and yet you did receive your Biſhoprick of the King. You have taken an Oath to be Adverſary to the Realm; for the Pope's Laws are contrary to the Laws of the Realm.

Glouceſter. You were the Cauſe that I did forſake the Pope, and did ſwear that he ought not to be ſupream Head, and gave it to King Henry the Eighth, that he ought to be it; and this you made me to do.

Cranmer. To this I anſwer: You report me ill, and ſay not the Truth, and I will prove it here before you all. The Truth is, that my Predeceſſor, Archbiſhop Warham, gave the Supremacy to King Henry the Eighth, and ſaid, that he ought to have it before the Biſhop of Rome, and that God's Word would bear him. And upon the ſame was there ſent to both the Univerſities, Oxford and Cambridge, to know what the Word of God would do touching the Supremacy, and it was reaſoned upon, and argued at length. So at the laſt both the Univerſities agreed, and ſet to their Seals, and ſent it to King Henry the Eighth to the Court, that he ought to be ſupreme Head, and not the Pope. Whereupon you were at that time Doctor of Divinity, and your Conſent was thereunto, as by your Hand doth appear. Therefore you miſ-report me, that I was the Cauſe of your falling away from the Pope, but it was your ſelf. All this was in Archbiſhop Warham's Time, and while he was alive, ſo that it was three Quarters of a Year after e'er ever I had the Archbiſhoprick of Canterbury in my Hands, and before I might do any thing. So that here ye have reported of me that which ye cannot prove, which is ill done. All this while his Cap was on his Head.

Archbp. Warham firſt gave up the Supremacy to the King.

Glouceſter. We come to examine you, and you, methinks, examine us.

Dr. Story's Oration.

PLeaſeth it your good Lordſhip, becauſe it hath pleaſed the King and Queen's Majeſties to appoint my Companion and me

Anno 1556. to hear the Examination of this Man before your good Lordſhip, to give me Leave ſomewhat to talk in that Behalf. Although I know that in Talk with Hereticks there cometh Hurt to all Men; for it wearieth the Stedfaſt, troubleth the Doubtful, and taketh in Snare the Weak and Simple: Yet becauſe he ſaith, he is not bound to anſwer your Lordſhip ſitting for the Pope's Holineſs, becauſe of a Premunire, and the Word of God as he termeth it; I think good ſomewhat to ſay, that all Men may ſee how he runneth out of his Race of Reaſon into the Rage of common Talk, ſuch as here I truſt hath done much good. And as the King and Queen's Majeſties will be glad to hear of your moſt charitable Dealing with him; ſo will they be weary to hear the Blundering of this ſtubborn Heretick. And where he alledgeth Divinity, mingling right and wrong together, he ſhould not have been heard. For ſhall it be ſufficient for him to alledge, the Judge is not competent? Do we not ſee that in the Common Law it is not lawful for a Man in Weſtminſter Hall to refuſe his Judge? And ſhall we diſpute againſt one that denies Principals? Although there be here a great Company of learned Men, that know it unmeet ſo to do, yet have I here a plain Canon, wherein he declareth himſelf convicted Ipſo facto. The Canon [as we have tranſlated it into Engliſh] is this; Let it be their own Deſtruction whoſoever acts contrary to the apoſtolick Decrees, let them have no Place amongſt the Prieſts, but be put out from the holy Miniſtry, neither be capable of holding any Cure, ſeeing they are condemned by the holy apoſtolick Church for their Diſobedience and Preſumption, but let them be caſt out by the greater Excommunication, to whom the Diſcipline of the Holy Church being committed, not only ought to obey themſelves, but alſo teach others to do ſo, yet will reſiſt her Divine and pontifical Services, and ſo diſobey the apoſtolical Precepts.

Note the worſhipful Reaſons of Dr. Story, wherewith he proveth the Pope's Supremacy.

He hath alledged many Matters againſt the Supremacy, but maliciouſly. Ye ſay the King in his Realm is ſupreme Head of the Church. Well Sir, you will grant me that there was a perfect catholick Church before any King was chriſtened. Then if it were a perfect Church, it muſt needs have a Head, which muſt needs be before any King was Member thereof; for you know Conſtantinus the Emperor was the firſt chriſtened King that ever was. And although you are bound (as St. Paul ſaith) to obey your Rulers, and Kings have Rule of the People, yet doth it not follow that they have Cure of Souls: For if you argue from the more powerful, the Head may do that the Miniſter cannot do; but the Prieſt may conſecrate, and the King cannot, therefore the King is not Head.

Dr. Story reaſoneth, as though to feed with the Word, and to govern with the Sword were all one.

It was licenſed by Chriſt do every Man to bring into the Sheepfold, and to augment the Flock, but not to rule, for that was only given to Peter.

And where the Apoſtles to call upon Men to obey their Princes, to pay Tribute to whom Tribute is due; Cuſtom to whom Cuſtom; they perceiving that Men were bent to a kind of Liberty and Diſobedience, were enforced to exhort them to Obedience and Payment of their Tribute, which Exhortation extendeth only to temporal Matters.

And again where you ſay that the Biſhop of Rome maketh Laws contrary to the Laws of the Realm; that is not true: For this is a Maxim in the Law, That which is true in a Part, cannot be falſe in the whole.

Now as touching that monſtrous Talk of your Conſcience, that is no Conſcience that ye profeſs; it is but private Judgment, Choice, and Opinion. And as yet for all your glorious Babble, you have not proved by God's Laws that ye ought not to anſwer the Pope's Holineſs.

The Canons which be received of all Chriſtendom compel you to anſwer, therefore you are bound ſo to do. And although this Realm of late-time, through ſuch Shciſmaticks as you were, hath exiled and baniſhed the Canons, yet that cannot make for you: For you know yourſelf, that equal Things produce equal Things, nor can a Part oblige the whole. Wherefore this Iſland, being indeed but a Member of the whole, could not determine againſt the whole. That notwithſtanding the ſame Laws, being put away by Parliament, are now received again by a Parliament, and have as full Authority now as they had then, and they will now that ye anſwer to the Pope's Holineſs; therefore by the Laws of this Realm ye are bound to anſwer him. Wherefore, my good Lord, all that this Thomas Cranmer (I cannot otherwiſe term him, conſidering his Diſobedience) hath brought for his Defence, ſhall nothing prevail with you, nor take any Effect. Require him therefore to anſwer directly to your good Lordſhip; command him to ſet aſide his Trifles, and to be obedient to the Laws and Ordinances of this Realm. Take witneſs here of his ſtubborn Contempt againſt the King and Queen's Majeſties, and compel him to anſwer directly to ſuch Articles as we ſhall here lay againſt him, and in Refuſal your good Lordſhip is to excommunicate him.

As ſoon as Dr. Story had thus ended his Tale, Dr. Martin began again to enter Speech with the Archbiſhop; which Diſcourſe I thought proper here to mention, although the Report of the ſame be ſuch, as the Author thereof ſeemeth in his Writings very partial; for as he expreſſeth the Speech of Dr. Martin at full, and to the uttermoſt of his Diligence, leaving out nothing in that Part that either was or could be ſaid more; ſo again on the other Part, how raw and weak he leaveth the Matter, it is eaſy to perceive; who neither comprehendeth all that Dr. Cranmer again anſwered for his Defence, nor yet in thoſe ſhort Speeches which he expreſſeth, ſeemeth to diſcharge the Part of a ſincere and faithful Reporter. Notwithſtanding, ſuch as it is I thought good to let the Reader underſtand, who in peruſing the ſame may uſe therein his own Judgment and Conſideration.

Talk between Dr. Martin and Archbiſhop Cranmer.

MARTIN. Mr. Cranmer, ye have told here a long glorious Tale, pretending ſome Matter of Conſcience in Appearance, but in Verity you have no Conſcience at all. You ſay that you have ſworn once to King Henry VIII. againſt the Pope's Juriſdiction, and therefore you may never forſwear the ſame; and ſo ye make a great Matter of Conſcience in the Breach of the ſaid Oath. Here will I ask you a Queſtion or two. What if ye made an Oath to an Harlot, to live with her in continual Adultery, ought you to keep it?

Cranmer. I think not.

Unadviſed Oaths are not to be kept.

Martin. What if you did ſwear never to lend a poor Man one Penny, ought you to keep it?

Cranmer. I think not.

Martin. Herod did ſwear whatſoever his Harlot asked of him he would give her, and he gave her John Baptiſt's Head; did he well in keeping his Oath?

Cranmer. I think not.

Jephtha's Oath.

Martin. Jephtha one of the Judges of Iſrael did ſwear unto God, that if he would give him Victory over his Enemies, he would offer unto God the firſt Soul that came forth of his Houſe; it happened that his own Daughter came firſt, and he ſlew her to ſave his Oath. Did he well?

Cranmer. I think not.

Martin. So ſaith St. Ambroſe De officiis, It is a miſerable Neceſſity which is paid with Parricide. Then Mr. Cranmer, you can no leſs confeſs by the Premiſſes, but that you ought not to have Conſcience of every Oath, but if it be juſt, lawful, and adviſedly taken.

Cranmer. So was that Oath.

Martin. That is not ſo, for firſt it was unjuſt, for it tended to the taking away of another Man's Right. It was not lawful, for the Laws of God and the Church were againſt it. Beſides, it was not voluntary; for every Man and Woman were compelled to take it.

Cranmer. It pleaſeth you to ſay ſo.

The Archbiſhop being ſworn to the King, ought not to ſwear to the Pope.

Martin. Let all the World be Judge. But Sir, you that pretend to have ſuch a Conſcience to break an Oath, I pray you did you never ſwear and break the ſame?

Cranmer. I remember not.

Martin. I will help your Memory. Did you never ſwear Obedience to the See of Rome?

Cranmer. Indeed I did once ſwear unto the ſame.

Martin. Yea, that you did twice, as appeareth by Records and Writings here ready to be ſhewed.

The Archbiſhop ſworn firſt to the Pope by Proteſtation.

Cranmer. But I remember I ſaved all by Proteſtation that I made by the Counſel of the beſt learned Men I could get at that Time.

Martin. Hearken good People what this Man ſaith. He made a Proteſtation one Day, to keep never a whit of that which he would ſwear the next Day; was this the Part of a chriſtian Man? If a chriſtian Man would bargain with a Turk, and before he maketh his Bargain, ſolemnly, before Witneſs readeth in his Paper that he holdeth ſecretly in his Hand, or peradventure proteſteth before one or two, that he mindeth not to perform whatſoever he ſhall promiſe to the Turk; I ſay, if a chriſtian Man ſhould ſerve a Turk in this Manner, that the chriſtian Man were worſe than the Turk. What would you then ſay to this Man, that made a ſolemn Oath and Promiſe unto God and his Church, and made a Proteſtation before quite contrary.

Cranmer. That which I did, I did by the beſt learned Mens Advice I could get at that Time.

Martin. I proteſt before all the learned Men here, that there is no Learning will ſave your Perjury herein; for there be two Rules of the Civil Law clean contrary againſt you, and ſo brought forth his Rules, which being done he proceeded further. But will you have the Truth of the Matter. King Henry the Eighth even then meant the lamentable Change which after you ſee came to paſs, and to further his piriful Proceedings from the Divorcement of his moſt lawful Wife, to the deteſtable departing from the bleſſed Unity of Chriſt's Church, this Man made the aforeſaid Proteſtation; and on the other Side he letted not to make two ſolemn Oaths quite contrary, and why? for otherwiſe by the Laws and Canons of this Realm, he could not aſpire to the Archbiſhoprick of Canterbury. Anno 1556.

Dr. Cranmer unwilling to be made Archbiſhop.

Cranmer. I proteſt before you all, there was never Man came more unwillingly to a Biſhoprick, than I did to that. Inſomuch that when King Henry ſent for me in Poſt, that I ſhould come over, I prolonged my Journey by ſeven Weeks at the leaſt, thinking that he would be forgetful of me in the mean Time.

Martin. You declare well by the Way that the King took you to be a Man of good Conſcience, who could not find within all his Realm any Man that would ſet forth his ſtrange Attempts, but was inforced to ſend for you in Poſt to come out of Germany. What may we conjecture hereby, but that there was a Compact between you, being then Queen's Anne's Chaplain, and the King: Give me the Archbiſhoprick of Canterbury, and I will give you Licence to live in Adultery.

Cranmer. You ſay not true.

Martin. Let your Proteſtation, joined with the reſt of your Talk, give Judgment. [Hinc prima mali labes.] Of that your execrable Perjury, and his coloured and too ſhamefully ſuffered Adultery, came Hereſy and all Miſchief to this Realm.

And thus have I ſpoken as touching the Conſcience you make for breaking your heretical Oath made to the King. But to break your former Oath made at two ſundry Times both to God and his Church, you have no Conſcience at all. And now to anſwer another Part of your Oration, wherein you bring in God's Word, that you have it on your Side and no Man elſe, and that the Pope hath deviſed a new Scripture contrary to the Scripture of God; ye play herein as the Phariſees did, which cried always, The * Word of the Lord, the Word of the Lord, when they meant nothing ſo. This bettereth not your Cauſe, becauſe you have God's Word for you; for Baſilides and Phontinus the Hereticks ſaid, that they had God's Word to maintain their Hereſy. So Neſtorius, ſo Macedonius, ſo Pelagius, and briefly, all the Hereticks that ever were, pretended that they had God's Word for them; yea, and ſo the Devil being the Father of Hereſies, alledged God's Word for him, ſaying, It is written: So ſaid he to Chriſt, Caſt thyſelf downward, which you applied moſt falſly againſt the Pope. But if you mark the Devil's Language well, it agreed with your Proceedings moſt truly. For, Caſt thy ſelf downward, ſaid he, and ſo taught you to caſt all Things downward. Down with the Sacrament, down with the Maſs, down with the Altars, down with the Arms of Chriſt, and up with a Lion and a Dog; down with the Abbeys, down with the Chauntries, down with Hoſpitals and Colleges, down with † Faſting and Prayer, yea, down with all that good and godly is. All your Proceedings and Preachings tended to no other, but to fulfil the Devil's Requeſt, Caſt thyſelf downward. And therefore tell not us, that

* Nay, the Phariſees cried not The Word of the Lord, but the Temple of the Lord, as the Papiſts do now againſt the Proteſtants.

So did King Ezekias and Joſias down with the Monuments of Idolatry, and are commended.

Anno 1556. that you have God's Word. For God hath given us by his Word a Mark to know that your teaching proceeded not of God, but of the Devil, and that your Doctrine came not of Chriſt but of Antichriſt. For Chriſt foreſaid, there ſhould come againſt his Church, ravening Wolves, and falſe Apoſtles. But how ſhould we know them? Chriſt teacheth us, ſaying, By their Fruits ye ſhall know them. Why, what be their Fruits? St. Paul declareth, After the Fleſh they walk in Concupiſcence and Uncleanneſs, they contemn Powers. Again, In the latter Days there ſhall be perilous Times. Then ſhall there be Men loving themſelves, covetous, proud, diſobedient to Parents, Treaſon-workers. Whether theſe be not the Fruits of your Goſpel, I refer me to this worſhipful Audience; whether the ſaid Goſpel began not with Perjury, proceeded with Adultery, was maintained with Hereſy, and ended in Conſpiracy.

Whether theſe be the Fruits of the Papiſts more, let the Converſation of them both give Judgment.

Now Sir, two Points more I marked in your raging Diſcourſe that you made here: The one againſt the Holy Sacrament; the other againſt the Pope's Juriſdiction, and the Authority of the See Apoſtolick.

Touching the Firſt, ye ſay you have God's Word with you, yea and all the Doctors. I would here ask you one Queſtion, whether God's Word be contrary to itſelf, and whether the Doctors teach Doctrine contrary to themſelves, or no? for you Mr. Cranmer have taught in this high Sacrament of the Altar three contrary Doctrines, and yet you pretended in every one the Word of the Lord.

Cranmer. Nay, I taught but two contrary Doctrines in the ſame.

Martin. What Doctrine taught you when you condemned Lambert the Sacramentary in the King's Preſence in Whitehall.

So was St. Auguſtine firſt a Pagan, then a Manichee, and then a Catholick.

Cranmer. I maintained then the Papiſts Doctrine.

Martin. That is to ſay, the catholick and univerſal Doctrine of Chriſt's Church. And how when King Henry died; did you not tranſlate Juſtus Jones's Book?

Cranmer. I did ſo.

Martin. Then there you defended another Doctrine touching the Sacrament, by the ſame Token, that you ſent to Lynn your Printer, that whereas in the firſt Print there was an Affirmative, that is to ſay Chriſt's Body really in the Sacrament, you ſent then to your Printer to put in a [not], whereby it came miraculouſly to paſs, that Chriſt's Body was clean convey'd out of the Sacrament.

Cranmer. I remember there were two Printers of my ſaid Book, but where the ſame [not] was put in, I cannot tell.

Martin. Then from a Lutheran ye became a Zwinglian, which is the vileſt Hereſy of all in the high Myſtery of the Sacrament, and for the ſame Hereſy you did help to burn Lambert the Sacramentary, which you now call the catholick Faith, and God's Word.

Cranmer. I grant then that I believed otherwiſe than I do now, and ſo I did until my Lord of London, Dr. Ridley, did confer with me, and by ſundry Perſwaſions and Authorities of Doctors drew me quite from my Opinion.

Martin. Now Sir, as touching the laſt Part of your Oration, you denied that the Pope's Holineſs was ſupreme Head of the Church of Chriſt.

Cranmer. I did ſo.

Martin. Who ſay you then is ſupreme Head?

Cranmer. Chriſt.

Martin. But whom hath Chriſt left here in Earth his Vicar and Head of his Church?

Cranmer. No Body.

Martin. Ah, why told you not King Henry this when you made him ſupreme Head? and now no Body is. This is Treaſon againſt his own Perſon, as you then made him.

Cranmer. I mean not but every King in his own Realm and Dominion is ſupreme Head, and ſo was he ſupreme Head of the Church of Chriſt in England.

Martin. Is this always true? and was it ever ſo in Chriſt's Church?

Cranmer. It was ſo.

Martin. Then what ſay you by Nero? He was the mightieſt Prince of the Earth after Chriſt was aſcended: Was he Head of Chriſt's Church?

Cranmer. Nero was Peter's Head.

Martin. I ask whether Nero was Head of the Church or no? if he were not, it is falſe that you ſaid before, that all Princes be, and ever were Heads of the Church within their Realms.

Cranmer. Nay, it is true, for Nero was Head of the Church: That is, in worldly Reſpect of the temporal Bodies of Men, of whom the Church conſiſteth; for ſo he beheaded Peter and the Apoſtles. And the Turk too is Head of the Church in Turkey.

Martin. Then he that beheaded the Heads of the Church, and crucify'd the Apoſtles, was Head of Chriſt's Church; and he that was never Member of the Church, is Head of the Church, by your new-found underſtanding of God's Word.

It is not to be ſuppoſed contrary, but much other Matter paſſed in this Communication between them, eſpecially on the Archbiſhop's Behalf. Whoſe Anſwers I do not think to be ſo ſlender, nor altogether in the ſame Form of Words framed, if the Truth as it was, might be known: But ſo it pleaſed the Notary thereof, being too much partially addicted to his Mother See of Rome in favour of his Faction, to diminiſh and drive down the other Side, either in not ſhewing all, or in reporting the Thing otherwiſe than it was; as the common Guiſe is of moſt Writers, to what ſide their Affection moſt weigheth, their Oration commonly inclineth. But let us proceed further in the Story of this Matter.

It followed then (ſaid this Reporter) when the Archbiſhop thus had anſwered, and the Standers by began to murmur againſt him, the Judges not content with his Anſwers, willed him to anſwer directly to the Interrogatories; which Interrogatories articulated againſt him in form of Law, where theſe under following.

Interrogatories objected to the Archbiſhop, with his Anſwers annexed to the ſame.

1. Interrog. Firſt was objected, That he the aforeſaid Thomas Cranmer, being yet free, and before he entered into holy Orders, married one Joan, ſurnamed Black or Brown, dwelling at the Sign of the Dolphin in Cambridge.

Anſwer. Whereunto he anſwered, that whether ſhe was called Black or Brown, he knew not, but that he married there one Joan, that he granted.

2. Interrog. That after the Death of the aforeſaid Wife, he entered into holy Orders, and after that was made Archbiſhop by the Pope.

Anſwer. He received (he ſaid) a certain Bull of the Pope, which he delivered unto the King, and was Archbiſhop by him.

3. Interrog. Item, That he being in holy Orders, married another Woman as his ſecond Wife, named Anne, and ſo was twice married.

Anſwer. To this he granted.

4. Interrog. Item, In the Time of King Henry the Eighth, he kept the ſaid Wife ſecretly, and had Children by her.

Anſwer. Hereunto he alſo granted, affirming that it was better for him to have his own, than to do like other Prieſts, holding and keeping other Men's Wives.

5. Interrog. Item, In the Time of King Edward, he brought out the ſaid Wife openly, affirming and profeſſing publickly the ſame to be his Wife.

Anſwer. He denied not but he ſo did, and lawfully might do the ſame, foraſmuch as the Laws of the Realm did ſo permit him.

6. Interrog. Item, That he ſhamed not openly to glory himſelf to have had his Wife in ſecret many Years.

Anſwer. And though he ſo did (he ſaid) there was no Cauſe why he ſhould be aſhamed thereof.

7. Interrog. Item, That the ſaid Thomas Cranmer falling afterward into the deep Bottom of Errors, did fly and refuſe the Authority of the Church, did hold and follow the Hereſy concerning the Sacrament of the Altar, and alſo did compile, and cauſed to be ſet Abroad divers Books.

Anſwer. Whereunto when the Names of the Books were recited to him, he denied not ſuch Books which he was the Author of. As touching the Treatiſe of Peter Martyr upon the Sacrament, he denied that he ever ſaw it before it was Abroad, yet did approve and well like of the ſame. As for the Catechiſm, the Book of the Articles, with the other Book againſt Wincheſter, he granted the ſame to be his Doings.

8. Interrog. Item, That he compelled many againſt their Wills to ſubſcribe to the ſame Articles.

Anſwer. He exhorted (he ſaid) ſuch as were willing to ſubſcribe; but againſt their Wills he compelled none.

9. Interrog. Item, Forſomuch as he ceaſed not to perpetrate enormous and inordinate Crimes, he was therefore caſt into the Tower, and from thence was brought to Oxford, at what Time it was commonly thought that the Parliament there ſhould be held.

Anſwer. To this he ſaid, that he knew no ſuch enormous and inordinate Crimes that ever he committed.

10. Interrog. Item, That in the ſaid City of Oxford he did openly maintain his Hereſy, and there was convict upon the ſame.

Anſwer. He defended (he ſaid) there the Cauſe of the Sacrament; but that he was convicted in the ſame, that he denied. Anno 1556.

11. Interrog. Item, When he perſevered ſtill in the ſame, he was by the publick Cenſure of the Univerſity pronounced an Heretick, and his Books to be heretical.

Anſwer. That he was ſo denounced he denied not, but that he was an Heretick, or his Books heretical, that he denied.

12. Interrog. Item, That he was and is notoriouſly infamed with the Note of Schiſm, as who not only himſelf receded from the catholick Church and See of Rome, but alſo moved the King and Subjects of this Realm to the ſame.

Anſwer. As touching the receding, that he well granted; but that receding or departing (ſaid he) was only from the See of Rome, and had in it no Matter of any Schiſm.

13. Interrog. Item, That he had been twice ſworn to the Pope; and withal Dr. Martin brought out the Inſtrument of the publick Notary, wherein was contained his Proteſtation made when he ſhould be conſecrated, asking if he had any Thing elſe proteſted.

Anſwer. Whereunto he anſwered, that he did nothing but by the Laws of the Realm.

14. Interrog. Iiem, That he the ſaid Archbiſhop of Canterbury did not only offend in the Premiſſes, but alſo in taking upon him the Authority of the See of Rome, in that without Leave and Licenſe from the ſaid See, he conſecrated Biſhops and Prieſts.

Anſwer. He granted that he did execute ſuch Things as were wont to be referred to the Pope, at what Time it was permitted to him by the publick Laws and Determination of the Realm.

15. Interrog. Item, That when the whole Realm had ſubſcribed to the Authority of the Pope, he only ſtill perſiſted in his Error.

Anſwer. That he did not admit the Pope's Authority, he confeſſed to be true. But that he erred in the ſame, that he denied.

16. Interrog. Item, That all and ſingular the Premiſſes be true.

Anſwer. That likewiſe he granted, excepting thoſe Things whereunto he had now anſwered.

After he had thus anſwered to the Objections aforeſaid, and the publick Notary had entered the ſame, the Judges and Commiſſioners, as having now accompliſhed that wherefore they came, were about to ariſe and depart. But the Biſhop of Glouceſter thinking it not proper ſo to diſmiſs the People, being ſomewhat ſtirred with the Words of the Archbiſhop bagan his Oration in the hearing of the People, thus to declaim.

The Oration of Biſhop Brooks, in cloſing up his Examinations againſt Dr. Cranmer Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

MR. Cranmer (I cannot otherwiſe term you, conſidering your Obſtinacy) I am right ſorry, I am right heartily ſorry to hear ſuch Words eſcape your Mouth ſo unadviſedly. I had conceived a right good Hope of your Amendment. I ſuppoſe that this Obſtinacy of yours came not of a Vain-glory, but rather of a corrupt Conſcience, which was the Occaſion that I hoped ſo well of your Return.

But

But now I perceive by your fooliſh Babble that it is far otherwiſe. Ye are ſo puffed up with Vain-glory, there is ſuch a notorious Mark of Hereſy crept into your Conſcience, that I am clean void of Hope, and my Hope is turned into Perdition. Who can ſave that will be loſt? God would have you to be ſaved, and you refuſe it. Thy Perdition is only upon thyſelf, O Iſrael; only in me is thy Salvation, ſaith the Lord by his Prophet. You have uttered ſo erroneous Talk, with ſuch open Malice againſt the Pope's Holineſs, with ſuch open lying againſt the Church of Rome, with ſuch open Blaſphemy againſt the Sacrament of the Altar, that no Mouth could have expreſſed more maliciouſly, more lyingly, more blaſphemouſly.

To reaſon with you, although I would of myſelf to ſatisfy this Audience, yet may I not by our Commiſſion, neither can I find how I may do it with the Scriptures: For the Apoſtle doth command, that ſuch a one ſhould not only not be talked withal, but alſo ſhunned and avoided; ſaying, An heretical Perſon after once or twice conferring, ſhun, knowing that he is perverſe and ſinneth, being of his own Judgment condemned. Ye have been conferred withal not once or twice, but oftentimes, ye have oft been lovingly admoniſhed, ye have been oft ſecretly diſputed with. And the laſt Year in the open School, in open Diſputations, ye have been openly convict, ye have been openly driven out of the School with Hiſſes: Your Book which ye brag you made ſeven Years ago, and no Man anſwered it, Marcus Antonius hath ſufficiently detected and confuted, and yet ye perſiſt ſtill in your wonted Hereſy.

Wherefore being ſo oft admoniſhed, conferred withal, and convicted, if ye deny you to be the Man whom the Apoſtle noteth, hear then what Origen ſaith, who wrote above 1300 Years ago, and interpreteth the Saying of the Apoſtle in this wiſe, in Apologia Pamphili; All thoſe ought to be eſteemed Hereticks, who profeſſing to believe in Chriſt, judge otherwiſe of his Truth, than the eccleſiaſtical Tradition. Even now you profeſſed a Kind of Chriſtianity and Holineſs unto us, for at your Beginning you fell down upon your Knees, and ſaid the Lord's Prayer (God knows like an Hypocrite) and then ſtanding upon your Feet, you rehearſed the Articles of your Faith; but to what End I pray you elſe, but to cloak that inward Hereſy rooted in you, that you might blind the poor, ſimple, and unlearned Peoples Eyes? For what will they ſay or think, if they do not thus ſay? Good Lord, what mean theſe Men to ſay that he is an Heretick, they are deceived, this is a good Chriſtian, he believeth as we believe.

What an Heretick is, after the Pope's making.

But is this ſufficient to eſcape the Name of an Heretick? To the ſimple and unlearned it is ſufficient, but for you that have profeſſed a greater Knowledge and higher Doctrine, it is not enough to recite your Belief. For unleſs (as Origen ſaith) ye believe all Things that the Church hath decreed beſides, you are no chriſtian Man. In which becauſe you do halt, and will come to no Conformity; from henceforth ye are to be taken for an Heretick, with whom we ought neither to diſpute, neither to reaſon, whom we ought rather to eſchew and avoid.

Nevertheleſs, although I do not intend to reaſon with you, but to give you up as an Abject and an Out-caſt from God's Favour, yet becauſe ye have uttered, to the annoying of the People, ſuch peſtilent Hereſies as may do Harm among ſome rude and unlearned, I think meet to ſay ſomewhat herein; not becauſe I hope to have any good at your Hands, which I would willingly wiſh, but that I may eſtabliſh the ſimple People which be here preſent, leſt they being ſeduced by your diabolical Doctrine, may periſh thereby.

And firſt (as it behoveth every Man to purge himſelf firſt before he enter with any other) where you accuſe me of an Oath made againſt the Biſhop of Rome. I confeſs it, and deny it not, and therefore do ſay with the reſt of this Realm, good and catholick Men, the Saying of the Prophet, We have ſinned with our Fathers, we have done unjuſtly and wickedly. The Sins of my Youth, and my Ignorances, O Lord, do not remember. I was then a young Man, and as young a Scholar here in the Univerſity.

I knew not then what an Oath did mean, and yet to ſay the Truth, I did it compulſed, compulſed I ſay by you Mr. Cranmer, and here were you the Author and Cauſe of my Perjury, you are to be blamed herein, and not I. Now where you ſay I made two Oaths, the one contrary to the other, it is not ſo, for the Oath I made to the Pope's Holineſs appertaineth only to ſpiritual Things; the other Oath that I made to the King pertaineth only to temporal Things; that is to ſay, that I do acknowledge all my temporal Livings to proceed only from the King, and from none elſe. But all Men may ſee, as you agree in this, ſo ye agree in the reſt of your Opinions.

Now Sir, as concerning the Supremacy which is only due to the See of Rome, a Word or two. Although there be a Number of Places which do confirm that Chriſt appointed Peter Head of the Church, yet this is a moſt evident Place. When Chriſt demanded of his Apoſtles whom Men called him, they anſwered, Some Elias, ſome a Propher, &c. But Chriſt reply'd unto Peter and ſaid, Whom ſay'ſt thou Peter that I am? Peter anſwered, Thou art Chriſt the Son of God: And Chriſt reply'd, Thou art Peter, and upon this Rock will I build my Church. The Doctors interpreting this Place, Upon this Rock, expound it thus, Not only on the Faith of Peter, but upon Peter himſelf. And why did Chriſt change his Name from Simon to Peter, which in Latin is a Stone, but only to declare that he was only the Foundation and Head of the Church?

Again, where Chriſt demanded of Peter, being amongſt the reſt of his Apoſtles, three Times a-row, Peter, loveſt thou me? he gave him Charge over his Sheep, Feed my Sheep, feed my Lambs. Which Place Chryſoſtom interpreting, ſaith, Feed, that is, be you in my Stead, and Head of your Brethren. To conclude, when they came that required Didrachma of Chriſt, he commanded Peter to caſt his Net into the Sea, and to take out of the Fiſhes Mouth that he took, a Piece of Money which was a double Didrachma, and give it, ſays he, for thee and me. Which Words do ſignify, that when he had paid for them two he had paid for all the reſt. For as in the old Law there were appointed two Heads over the People of Iſrael, Moſes and Aaron, Moſes as Chief, and Aaron next Head under him; ſo in the new Law there were two Heads of the Church, which were Chriſt and Peter. Chriſt is Head of all, and Peter next under him. St. Auſtin, in 75 queſt. Veteris & Novi Teſtamenti, ſaith, Our Saviour Chriſt commanding the Tribute to be given for him and for Peter, meant thereby the ſame to be given for all others, for he appointed him to be Head of them. What can be more plain than this? but I will not tarry upon this Matter.

Now as touching the Pope's Laws, where you ſay they be contrary, becauſe the Service which ſhould be (as you ſay) in Engliſh, is in Latin; I anſwer, Whoſoever will take the Pains to peruſe the fourteenth Chapter of the firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians, ſhall find, that his Meaning is concerning Preaching, and by the Way only of Praying.

Again, where you ſay, that the Pope's Holineſs doth take away one Part of the Sacrament from the Laymen, and Chriſt would have it under both, ye can ſay no more but this, Drink ye all of this. And what followeth, And all drank thereof. Now if a Man would be ſo froward with you, he might ſay that Chriſt gave it only to his Apoſtles, in whoſe Places ſucceeded Prieſts, and not Laymen.

The Authority of the Church in changing our Saviour's Ordinances.

And admit that Chriſt commanded it to be received under both Kinds, yet the Church hath Authority to change that, as well as others. Ye read, that Chriſt calling his Apoſtles together, ſaid unto them, Go, and preach the Goſpel to every Nation, baptizing them in the Name of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt. But the Apoſtles being deſirous to publiſh Chriſt's Name every where, did baptize only in Chriſt's Name. Again, Chriſt before his laſt Supper waſhed his Apoſtles Feet, ſaying, If I have waſhed your Feet, being your Lord and Maſter, alſo you ought to waſh the Feet one of another. I have given you Example. This was a Precept, yet hath the Church altered it, that the ſimple People ſhould not think a Re-baptization in it. So becauſe, ſaith the Apoſtle, I have received of the Lord the ſame which I have delivered unto you, that our Lord, the ſame Night in which he was betrayed, &c. Notwithſtanding that this was a Precept that the Sacrament ſhould be adminiſtred after Supper, the Church hath altered it, and commanded it to be received faſting. And where Chriſt did break the Bread, we receive the whole Hoſt. Chriſt adminiſtred ſitting at the Table, we ſtanding at the Altar.

It was alſo commanded in Acts 25. that Chriſtian Men ſhould abſtain from ſtrangled and Blood. But the Church perceiving it to be a Precept but for a Time, hath altered it. Chriſt commanded to keep holy the Sabbath-day, and the Church hath alter'd it to Sunday. If then the Church may change Things that be ſo expreſſed in the Scriptures, ſhe may alſo change the Form of receiving of Lay-men under both Kinds, for divers Occaſions.

Reaſons why Laymen receive not under both Kinds.

Firſt, That in carrying it to the Sick, the Blood may not be ſhed, loſt, or miſuſed.

And next, That no Occaſion might be given to Hereticks to think, that there is not ſo much under one Kind as under both.

But why would you have it under both Kinds, I pray you elſe, but only to pervert and contradict the Commandment of the Church? For when you had it under both Kinds, you believed in neither. And we having but one, believe both Kinds. Now, Sir, as concerning the Sacrament of the Altar, where you ſay, you have a Number of Doctors on your Side, and we none of our Side, that is to ſay, to confirm the real Preſence of Chriſt in the Sacrament of the Altar, indeed one to ſtop your Mouth I think it not poſſible to find. Nevertheleſs where your Requeſt is to have one ſhewed unto you, and then you will recant, I will ſhew you two. Anno 1556.

St. Auſtin upon Pſalm 33. He carried himſelf in his own Hands: I find not how this is true in David (ſaith he) literally, that he was borne in his own Hands; but in Chriſt I find it literally, when he gave his Body to his Apoſtles at his laſt Supper.

Again, St. Cyprian de Cœna Domini, ſaith, The Bread which our Lord gave to his Diſciples, was not a bare Likeneſs, but the Nature being changed, was made Fleſh by his Almighty Word. What can be more plain than this? yet to your Expoſition it is not plain enough. But give me your figurative, ſignificative, and other ſuch like Terms, and I will defend that Chriſt hath not yet aſcended; no nor yet that he was incarnate, &c. Wherefore I can do no other but put you in the Number of them, whom Chryſoſtom ſpake of in this wiſe, ſaying, Hear O thou Chriſtian Man, wilt thou do more than Chriſt could do? Chriſt confuted the Phariſees, yet he could not put them to Silence, and art thou ſtronger than Chriſt? Wilt thou go about to bring them to Silence that will receive no Anſwer? as who ſhould ſay, thou canſt not. Thus much have I ſaid, not for you, Mr. Cranmer, for my Hope that I conceived of you is now gone and paſt; but ſomewhat to ſatisfy the rude and unlearned People, that they perceiving your arrogant Lying, and lying Arrogancy, may the better eſchew your deteſtable and abominable Schiſm.

And thus the Prelate ended his worſhipful Tale. After whom Dr. Story taketh the Matter, and thus inferr'd in Words, as followeth:

Mr. Cranmer, you have made a goodly Proceſs concerning your heretical Oath made to the King, but you forget your Oath made to the See apoſtolick. As concerning your Oath made to the King, if you made it to him only, it took an End by his Death, and ſo it is releaſed; if you made it to his Succeſſors, well Sir, the true Succeſſors have the Empire, and they will you to diſſolve the ſame, and become a Member of Chriſt's Church again, and it ſtandeth well with Charity.

To this the Archbiſhop anſwered again, ſaith the Reporter: But what his Anſwer was, that he ſuppreſſeth, and returneth to the Words of Dr. Story, who imperiouſly turning his Speech again to the Archbiſhop, ſaid as followeth:

Hold your Peace Sir, and ſo ſhall it right well become you, conſidering that I gave you Licenſe before to ſay your Fancy. Your Oath was no Oath: For it lacked the three Points of an Oath, that is to ſay, Judgment, Righteouſneſs, and Truth.

Theſe, with the like Words to the ſame Effect, being uttered by Dr. Story, ſeeking to break up and make an End of that Seſſion, immediately called for Witneſſes to be produced, who ſhould be ſworn upon the Book, to utter and declare the next Day whatſoever they knew, or could remember to be inferred againſt Dr. Cranmer's Hereſy. The Names of the Witneſſes are theſe following:

Dr.

Anno 1556.

Dr. Marſhall, Commiſſary, and Dean of Chriſt-Church.
Dr. Smith, Under Commiſſary.
Dr. Treſham, Mr. Curtop,
Dr. Crook, Mr. Warde,
Mr. London, Mr. Serles.

After the Depoſitions of which Witneſſes being taken, Dr. Story admoniſhed the Archbiſhop, permitting him to make his Exceptions, if he thought any of the ſaid Witneſſes were to be refuſed. The Archbiſhop refuſed them all, as being Men perjured, and not in chriſtian Religion. For if to ſwear, ſaid he, againſt the Pope were unlawful, they ſhould rather have given their Lives, than their Oath. But if it were lawful, then they are perjured, to defend him whom they forſwore before. Nevertheleſs, this Anſwer of the Archbiſhop being lightly regarded, as little to the Purpoſe appertaining, he was commanded again to the Place from whence he came. Who at his departing out, like as at his firſt coming in, ſhewed low Obedience to Dr. Martin and Dr. Story, the Queen's Commiſſioners. Then Dr. Story pointing him to the Biſhop of Glouceſter, ſaid, that he ought rather to give Reverence unto him. So the moſt reverend Archbiſhop departing without any Obeyſance exhibited to the ſaid Biſhop of Glouceſter the Pope's Delegate, all the others roſe up, and departed every one to his own. And thus brake up the Seſſion for that Day, about two of the Clock in the Afternoon.

And thus much hitherto concerning the ſummary Effect of this Action or Seſſion, with the Orations, Diſcourſes, and Articles commenced againſt the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, alſo with the Reaſons and Anſwers of the ſaid Archbiſhop to their Objections and Interrogatories. Touching which his Anſwers, forſomuch as they being recited by Report of a Papiſt, (as is aforeſaid) ſeem to be partially handled, it ſhall therefore not greatly be out of the Matter, as ye have heard the Orations of Biſhop Brooks, with the Reaſons and Talk of the other Commiſſioners, amplify'd and ſet forth at large on the one Side, ſo now in repeating the Words and Anſwers of the other Part, to declare and ſet forth ſomewhat more amply and effectually, what Speech the ſaid Archbiſhop uſed for himſelf in the ſame Action, by the faithful Relation and Teſtimony of certain others, who were likewiſe there preſent, and do thus report the Effect of the Archbiſhop's Words, anſwering to the firſt Oration of Biſhop Brooks in Manner as followeth.

A more full Anſwer of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury to the firſt Oration of Biſhop Brooks.

MY Lord, you have very learnedly and eloquently in your Oration put me in Remembrance of many Things touching my ſelf, wherein I do not mean to ſpend the Time in anſwering of them. I acknowledge God's Goodneſs to me in all his Gifts, and thank him as heartily for this State wherein I find myſelf now, as ever I did for the Time of my Proſperity; and it is not the Loſs of my Promotions that grieveth me. The greateſt Grief I have at this Time is, and one of the greateſt that ever I had in all my Life, to ſee the King and Queen's Majeſties by their Proctors here to become my Accuſers, and that in their own Realm and Country, before a foreign Power. If I have tranſgreſſed the Laws of the Land, their Majeſties have ſufficient Authority and Power both from God, and by the Ordinance of the Realm, to puniſh me, whereunto I both have, and at all Times ſhall be content to ſubmit myſelf.

Alas! what hath the Pope to do in England? whoſe Juriſdiction is ſo far different from the Juriſdiction of this Realm, that it is impoſſible to be true to the one, and true to the other. The Laws alſo are ſo diverſe, that whoſoever ſweareth to both, muſt needs incur Perjury to the one. Which as often as I remember, even for the Love that I bear to her Grace, I cannot but be heartily ſorry to think upon it, how that her Highneſs the Day of her Coronation, at which Time ſhe took a ſolemn Oath to obſerve all the Laws and Liberties of this Realm of England, at the ſame Time alſo took an Oath to the Biſhop of Rome, and promiſed to maintain that See. The State of England being ſo repugnant to the Supremacy of the Pope, it was impoſſible but ſhe muſt needs be forſworn in the one. Wherein if her Grace had been faithfully advertized by her Council, then ſurely ſhe would never have done it.

The Laws of this Realm are, that the King of England is the ſupreme and ſole Governor of all his Countries and Dominions: And that he holdeth his Crown and Sceptre of himſelf, by the antient Laws, Cuſtoms, and Deſcents of the Kings of the Realm, and of none other. The Pope ſaith, that all Emperors and Kings hold their Crowns and Regalties of him, and that he may depoſe them when he liſt; which is High Treaſon for any Man to affirm and think, being born within the King's Dominions.

The Laws of England are, that all Biſhops and Prieſts offending in Caſes of Felony or Treaſon, are to be judg'd and try'd by the Laws and Cuſtoms of the Realm. The Pope's Laws are, that the ſecular Power cannot judge the ſpiritual Power, and that they are not under their Juriſdiction; which robbeth the King of one Part of his People.

The Laws alſo of England are, that whoſoever hindereth the Execution or Proceeding of the Laws of England for any other foreign Laws eccleſiaſtical or temporal, incurreth the Danger of a Premunire. The Pope's Laws are, that whoſoever hindereth the Proceedings or Executions of his Laws, for any other Laws, of any other King or Country, both the Prince himſelf, his Council, all his Officers, Scribes, Clerks, and whoſoever give Conſent or Aid to the making or executing of any ſuch Laws, ſtand accurſed. An heavy Caſe (if his Curſe were any Thing worth) that the King and Queen cannot uſe their own Laws, but they and theirs muſt ſtand accurſed.

Theſe Things and many more Examples he alledged, which (he ſaid) ſtirred him, that he could not give his Conſent to the receiving of ſuch an Enemy into the Realm, ſo ſubverting the Dignity and ancient Liberties of the ſame.

And as for the Matter of Hereſy and Schiſm, wherewith he was charged, he proteſted, and called God to witneſs, that he knew none that he maintained. But if that were an Hereſy to deny the Pope's Authority, and the Religion which the See of Rome hath publiſhed to the World theſe latter Years, then all the ancient

Fathers

Fathers of the Primitive Church, the Apoſtles and Chriſt himſelf taught Hereſy; and he deſired all then preſent to bear him witneſs, that he took the Traditions and Religion of that uſurping Prelate to be moſt erroneous, falſe, and againſt the Doctrine of the whole Scripture; which he had oftentimes well proved by Writing, and the Author of the ſame to be very Antichriſt, ſo often preached of by the Apoſtles and Prophets, in whom did moſt evidently concur all Signs and Tokens whereby he was painted out to the World to be known.

For it was moſt evident that he had advanced himſelf above all Emperors and Kings of the World, whom he affirmeth to hold their Eſtates and Empires of him, as of their Chief, and to be at his Commandment to depoſe and erect at his good Will and Pleaſure, and that Stories make Mention of his intolerable and inſolent Pride and Tyranny, uſed over them in ſuch Sort, as no King would have uſed to his chriſtian Subjects, nor yet a good Maſter to his Servants, ſetting his Feet on the Emperor's Neck, affirming that to be verify'd in him, which was ſpoken only of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, in theſe Words, Thou ſhalt go upon the Lion and the Adder, the young Lion and the Dragon ſhalt thou tread under thy Feet. Other ſome had he made to hold his Stirrup, others he had diſplaced and removed from their Empires and Seats Royal: And not content herewithal, more inſolent than Lucifer, he hath occupy'd not only the higheſt Place in this World, above Kings and Princes, but hath further preſum'd to ſit in the Seat of Almighty God, which only he reſerved to himſelf, which is the Conſcience of Man; and to keep the Poſſeſſion thereof, he hath promiſed Forgiveneſs of Sins Toties Quoties.

Marks of Antichriſt.

He hath brought in Gods of his own framing, and invented a new Religion, full of Gain and Lucre, quite contrary to the Doctrine of the holy Scripture, only for the maintaining of his Kingdom, diſplacing Chriſt from his Glory, and holding his People in a miſerable Servitude of Blindneſs to the Loſs of a great Number of Souls, which God at the latter Day ſhall exact at his Hand; boaſting many Times in his Canons and Decrees, that he can diſpenſe againſt Peter, againſt Paul, againſt the Old and New Teſtament: And that he of the Fulneſs of Power may do as much as God. O Lord! who ever heard ſuch Blaſphemy? if there be any Man that can advance himſelf above him, let him be judged Antichriſt.

The Pope diſpenſeth againſt the New and Old Teſtament.

This Enemy of God and of our Redemption, is ſo evidently painted out in the Scriptures by ſuch manifeſt Signs and Tokens, which all ſo clearly appear in him, that except a Man will ſhut up his Eyes and Heart againſt the Light, he cannnot but know him: And therefore for my Part I will never give my Conſent to the receiving of him into this Church of England. And you, my Lord, and the reſt that ſit here in Commiſſion, conſider well and examine your own Conſciences; you have ſworn againſt him, you are learned, and can judge of the Truth. I pray God you be not wilfully blind. As for me, I have herein diſcharged mine own Conſcience toward the World, and I will write alſo my Mind to her Grace, touching this Matter.

The Copy of which Letter ſent to the Queen, ye ſhall find after in the End of his Story. While he thus made his Anſwer, ye heard before how Dr. Martin and Dr. Story interrupted him divers Times with blaſphemous Talk, and would fain have had the Biſhop of Glouceſter to put him to Silence: Who notwithſtanding did not, but ſuffered him to end his Tale at full. After this ye heard alſo how they proceeded to examine him of divers Articles, whereof the Chief was, That at the Time of being created Archbiſhop of Canterbury, he was ſworn to the Pope, and had his Inſtitution and Induction from him, and then promiſed to maintain the Authority of that See, and therefore was perjured: Wherefore he ſhould rather ſtick to his firſt Oath, and return to his old Fold again, than to continue obſtinate in an Oath forced in the Time of Schiſm.

To that he anſwered, ſaving his Proteſtation (which Term he uſed before all his Anſwers) That at ſuch Time Archbiſhop Warham died, he was Ambaſſador in Germany for the King, who thereupon ſent for him Home, and having Intelligence by ſome of his Friends (who were near about the King) how he intended to beſtow the Archbiſhoprick upon him, and therefore counſelled him in that Caſe to make haſte Home, he feeling in himſelf a great Inability to ſuch a Promotion, and very ſorry to leave his Study, and eſpecially conſidering by what Means he muſt have it, which was clean againſt his Conſcience, which he could not utter without great Peril and Danger, deviſed an Excuſe to the King of Matter of great Importance, for which his longer Abode there ſhould be moſt neceſſary, thinking by that Means in his Abſence, that the King would have beſtow'd it upon ſome other, and ſo remained there by that Deviee, one half Year after the King had written for him to come Home. But after that no ſuch Matter fell out, as he ſeemed to make Suſpicion of, the King ſent for him again. Who after his Return, underſtanding ſtill the Archbiſhoprick to be reſerved for him, made Means by divers of his beſt Friends to ſhift it off, deſiring rather ſome ſmaller Living, that he might more quietly follow his Book.

How Dr. Cranmer was made Archbiſhop againſt his Will.

To be brief, when the King himſelf ſpake with him, declaring that his full Intention, for his Service ſake, and for the good Opinion he conceived of him, was to beſtow that Dignity upon him, after long diſabling of himſelf, perceiving he could by no Perſwaſions alter the King's Determination, he freely opened his Conſcience unto him, moſt humbly craving his Grace's Pardon, for that he ſhould declare unto his Highneſs. Which obtained, he declared, that if he accepted the Office, then he muſt receive it at the Pope's Hand, which he neither would nor could do, for that his Highneſs was only the ſupreme Governour of this Church of England, as well in Cauſes Eccleſiaſtical as Temporal; and that the full Right and Donation of all Manner of Biſhopricks and Benefices, as well as of any other temporal Dignities and Promotions, appertained to his Grace, and not to any other foreign Authority, whatſoever it was, and therefore if he might in that Vocation ſerve God, him, and his Country, ſeeing it was his Pleaſure ſo to have it, he would accept it, and receive it of his Majeſty, and of none other Stranger, who had no Authority within this Realm, neither in any ſuch Gift, nor in any other Thing. Whereat the King, ſaid he, ſtaying a while and muſing, asked me how I was able to prove it. At which Time I alledged many Texts out of the Scriptures, and the Fathers alſo, approving the ſupreme and higheſt Authority of Kings in their Realms and Dominions, diſcloſing therewithal the intolerable Uſurpation of the Pope of Rome.

Afterwards it pleaſed his Highneſs (quoth the Archbiſhop) many and ſundry Times to talk with me of it, and perceiving that I could not be brought to acknowledge the Authority of the Biſhop of Rome, the King himſelf called Dr. Oliver, and other civil Lawyers, and deviſed with them how he might beſtow it upon me, inforcing me nothing againſt my Conſcience. Who thereupon informed him, that I might do it by the Way of Proteſtation, and ſo one to be ſent to Rome who might take the Oath, and do every Thing in my Name. Which when I underſtood, I ſaid, he ſhould do it Super animam ſuam: And I indeed Bona fide made my Proteſtation, that I did not acknowledge his Authority any further than as it agreed with the expreſs Word of God, and that it might be lawful for me at all Times to ſpeak againſt him, and ſo to impugn his Errors, when Time and Occaſion ſhould ſerve me. And this my Proteſtation I did cauſe to be inrolled, and there I think it remaineth.

The Archbiſhop anſwereth for his Wife and Children.

They objected to him alſo that he was married, which he confeſſed. Whereunto Dr. Martin ſaid, that his Children were Bondmen to the See of Canterbury. At which Saying the Archbiſhop ſmiled, and asked him if a Prieſt at his Benefice kept a Concubine, and had by her Baſtards, whether they were Bondmen to the Benefice or no, ſaying, I truſt you will make my Children's Cauſes no worſe.

Becauſe there was Offence taken at this Word Supreme Head, it was declared in the Queen's Stile to be Supreme Governor.

After this Dr. Martin demanded of him, who was ſupreme Head of the Church of England? Marry, quoth my Lord of Canterbury, Chriſt is Head of this Member, as he is of the whole Body of the univerſal Church. Why, quoth Dr. Marin, you made King Henry VIII. ſupreme Head of the Church. Yea, ſaid the Archbiſhop, of all the People of England, as well Eccleſiaſtical as Temporal. And not of the Church, ſaid Dr. Martin? No, ſaid he, for Chriſt is the only Head of his Church, and of the Faith and Religion of the ſame. The King is Head and Governour of his People, which are the viſible Church. What, quoth Martin, you never durſt tell the King ſo. Yes, that I durſt, quoth he, and did in the Publication of his Stile, wherein he was named ſupreme Head of the Church, there was never other Thing meant. A Number of other fond and fooliſh Objections were made, with Repetition whereof I thought not to trouble the Reader.

Thus after they had received his Anſwers to all their Objections, they cited him (as is aforeſaid) to appear at Rome within fourſcore Days, to make there his perſonal Anſwers: Which he ſaid, if the King and Queen would ſend him, he would be content to do; and ſo thence was carried to Priſon again, where he continually remained, notwithſtanding that he was commanded to appear at Rome.

Wherein all Men that have Eyes to ſee, may eaſily perceive the crafty Practice of theſe Prelates, and the vizored Face of their Juſtice, as though the Court of Rome would condemn a Man before he anſwered for himſelf, as all Law and Equity required. But the very ſame inſtant Time, the Holineſs of that unholy Father, contrary to all Reaſon and Juſtice, ſent his Letter Executory unto the King and Queen to degrade and deprive him of his Dignity: Which Thing he did not only before the fourſcore Days were ended, but before there were twenty Days ſpent. Furthermore, whereas the ſaid Archbiſhop was firſt detained in ſtrait Confinement, ſo that he could not appear (as was notorious both in England and alſo in the Romiſh Court) and therefore had a lawful and moſt juſt Excuſe of his Abſence by all Laws, both Popiſh and others: Yet in the End of the ſaid fourſcore Days, was that worthy Martyr decreed Contumax, that is, ſturdily, frowardly, and wilfully abſent, and in Pain of the ſame his Abſence condemned and put to Death.

Dr. Thirlby and Dr. Bonner coming with a new Commiſſion to ſit upon the Archbiſhop, February 14.

THIS Letter or Sentence definitive of the Pope, was dated about the firſt Day of January, and was delivered here in England about the midſt of February. Upon the Receipt of which Letters, another Seſſion was appointed, for the Archbiſhop to appear the 14th Day of February, before certain Commiſſioners directed down by the Queen, the chief whereof was the Biſhop of Ely, Dr. Thirlby. Concerning which Dr. Thirlby by the Way here is to be noted, that albeit he was not the ſaid Archbiſhop's Houſhold Chaplain, yet he was ſo familiarly acquainted with him, ſo dearly beloved, ſo inwardly accepted and advanced of him (not like a Chaplain, but rather like a natural Brother) that there was never any Thing in the Archbiſhop's Houſe ſo dear, were it Plate, Jewels, Horſe, Maps, Books, or any Thing elſe, but if Thirlby did never ſo little commend it (a ſubtle Kind of begging) the Archbiſhop ſoon after either gave it to him, or elſe ſent it after him to his Houſe. So greatly was the Archbiſhop enamoured with him, that whoſoever would obtain any Thing of him, moſt commonly would make their Way before by Dr. Thirlby. Which by-matter of the ſaid Dr. Thirlby I thought here to recite; not ſo much to upbraid the Man with the Vice of Unthankfulneſs, as chiefly and only for this, to admoniſh him of old Benefits received, whereby he may the better remember his old Benefactor, and ſo to favour the Cauſe and Quarrel of him whom he was ſo ſingularly bounden unto.

With the ſaid Dr. Thirlby Biſhop of Ely, was alſo aſſigned in the ſame Commiſſion Dr. Bonner Biſhop of London; which two coming to Oxford upon St. Valentine's Day, as the Pope's Delegates, with a new Commiſſion from Rome, by the Virtue thereof commanded the Archbiſhop aforeſaid to come before them, in the Choir of Chriſt's-church, before the High Altar, where they ſitting (according to their Manner) in their Pontificalibus, firſt began as the Faſhion is, to read their Commiſſion: Wherein is contained, how that in the Court of Rome all Things being indifferently examined, both the Articles laid to his Charge, with the Anſwers made unto them, and Witneſſes examined on both Parts, and Council heard as well on the King and Queen's Behalf, half, his Accuſers, as on the Behalf of Thomas Cranmer, the Party guilty, ſo that he wanted nothing appertaining to his neceſſary Defence, &c. which foreſaid Commiſſion, as it was in reading, O Lord, ſaid the Archbiſhop, what Lies be theſe, that I being continually in Priſon, and never could be ſuffered to have Counſel or Advocate at Home, ſhould produce Witneſs and appoint my Counſel at Rome? God muſt needs puniſh this open and ſhameleſs lying. They read on the Commiſſion which came from the Pope, Plenitudine poteſtatis, ſupplying all Manner of Defects in Law or Proceſs, committed in dealing with the Archbiſhop, and giving them full Authority to proceeding to Deprivation and Degradation of him, and ſo upon Excommunication to deliver him up to the Secular Power.

The Order of the Archbiſhop's Degradation.

When the Commiſſion was read thus, they proceeding thereupon to his Degradation, firſt cloathed and diſguiſed him, putting on him a Surplice, and then an Albe; after that the Veſtment of a Sub-deacon, and every other Furniture, as a Prieſt ready to Maſs.

When they had apparelled him ſo far; What, ſaid he, I think I ſhall ſay Maſs: Yea, ſaid Coſins, one of Bonner's Chaplains, my Lord, I truſt to ſee you ſay Maſs for all this. Do you ſo, quoth he? that ſhall you never ſee, nor will I ever do it.

Then they inveſted him in all Manner of Robes of a Biſhop and Archbiſhop, as he is at his Inſtallment, ſaving that as every Thing then is moſt rich and coſtly, ſo every Thing here was of Canvas and old Rags, with a Mitre and a Pall of the ſame Suit put upon him in Mockery, and then the Croſier-ſtaff was put in his Hand.

This done after the Pope's pontifical Form and Manner, Bonner, who for the Space of many Years had borne, as it ſeemed, no great good Will towards him, and now rejoiced to ſee this Day wherein he might triumph over him, and take his Pleaſure at full, began to ſtretch out his Eloquence making his Oration to the Aſſembly after this Manner of Sort.

Bonner's eloquent Oration againſt the Archbiſhop.

This is the Man that hath ever deſpiſed the Pope's Holineſs, and now is to be judged by him. This is the Man that hath pulled down ſo many Churches, and now is come to be judged in a Church. This is the Man that condemned the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar, and now is come to be condemned before that bleſſed Sacrament hanging over the Altar. This is the Man that like Lucifer ſat in the Place of Chriſt upon an Altar to judge others, and now is come before an Altar to be judged himſelf.

Whereunto the Archbiſhop interrupting him, ſaid, that in that he bely'd him, as he did in many other Things: For that which he would now ſeem to charge him withal, was his own Fault, if it was any, and none of his. For the Thing you mean was in Paul's-church, ſaid he, where I came to ſit in Commiſſion; and there was a Scaffold prepared for me and others, by you and your Officers, and whether there were any Altar under it or not, I could not perceive it, nor once ſuſpected it, wherefore you do wittingly Evil to charge me with it.

Bonner's ill Manners to his Brother in Time of Adverſity.

But Bonner went on ſtill in his rhetorical Repetition, lying and railing againſt the Archbiſhop, beginning every Sentence with, This is the Man, this is the Man, till at length every Man grew tired of his unmannerly Uſage of him in that Time and Place; inſomuch that the Biſhop of Ely divers Times pulled him by the Sleeve to make an End, and ſaid to him afterward when they went to Dinner, that he had broken Promiſe with him: For he had intreated him earneſtly to uſe him with Reverence. Anno 1556.

After all this was done and finiſhed, they began then to buſtle toward his degrading, and firſt to take from him his Croſier-ſtaff out of his Hands, which he held faſt, and refuſed to deliver, and withal imitating the Example of Martin Luther, pulled an Appeal out of his left Sleeve under the Wriſt, which he there and then delivered unto them, ſaying, I appeal to the next general Council; and herein I have comprehended my Cauſe and Form of it, which I deſire may be admitted; and pray'd divers of the Standers by, by Name to be Witneſſes, and eſpecially Mr. Curtop, to whom he ſpake twice.

The Copy of which Appellation, becauſe it was not printed before, I thought here to exhibit, ad rei memoriam, as in Form here followeth.

The Tenor of the Appeal of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury from the Pope to the next General Council.

IN the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt.

Firſt, my plain Proteſtation made, that I intend to ſpeak nothing againſt one holy catholick and apoſtolical Church, or the Authority thereof (which Authority I have in great Reverence, and to whom my Mind is in all Things to obey) and if any Thing peradventure, either by Slipperineſs of Tongue, or by Indignation of Abuſes, or elſe by the Provocation of mine Adverſaries be ſpoken or done otherwiſe than well, or not with ſuch Reverence as becometh me, I am moſt ready to amend it.

Although the Biſhop of Rome (whom they call Pope) beareth the room of Chriſt in Earth, and hath Authority of God, yet by that Power or Authority he is not become unſinnable, neither hath he received that Power to deſtroy, but to edify the Congregation. Therefore if he ſhall command any Thing that is not right to be done, he ought to take it patiently and in good Part, in caſe he be not therein obeyed. And he muſt not be obey'd, if he command any Thing againſt the Precepts of God: No, rather he may lawfully be reſiſted, even as Paul withſtood Peter. And if he be aided by help of Princes, deceived perchance by falſe Suggeſtion, or with evil Counſel, cannot be reſiſted, but the Remedies of withſtanding him be taken away, there is nevertheleſs one Remedy of appealing (which no Prince can take away) uttered by the Law of Nature: Forſomuch as it is a certain Defence, which is meet for every Body by the Law of God, of Nature, and of Man.

And whereas the Laws do permit a Man to appeal, not only from the Griefs and Injuries done, but alſo from ſuch as ſhall be done hereafter, or threatned to be done, inſomuch that the Inferior cannot make Laws of not appealing to a Superior Power; and ſince it is openly enough confeſſed, that a holy general Council, Anno 1556. cil, lawfully gathered together in the Holy Ghoſt, and repreſenting the holy catholick Church, is above the Pope, eſpecially in Matters concerning Faith; that he cannot make Decrees that Men ſhall not appeal from him to a general Council: Therefore I Thomas Cranmer, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, or in Time paſt Ruler of the metropolitical Church of Canterbury, Doctor in Divinity, do ſay and publiſh before you the Publick Notary, and Witneſſes here preſent, with Mind and Intent to challenge and appeal from the Perſons and Griefs underneath written, and to proffer myſelf in Place and Time convenient and meet, to prove the Articles that follow. And I openly confeſs, that I would lawfully have publiſhed them before this Day, if I might have had either Liberty to come Abroad myſelf, or Licenſe of a Notary and Witneſſes. But further than I am able to do, I know well is not required of the Laws.

1. Firſt, I ſay, and publiſh, that James by the Mercy of God, Prieſt, called Cardinal of the Pit, and of the Title of our Lady in the Church of Rome, Judge and Commiſſary ſpecially deputed of our moſt holy Lord the Pope (as he affirmed) cauſed me to be cited to Rome, there to appear fourſcore Days after the Citation ſerved on me, to make anſwer to certain Articles touching the Peril of my State and Life: And whereas I was kept in Priſon with moſt ſtrait Ward, ſo that I could in no wiſe be ſuffered to go to Rome, nor to come out of Priſon (and in ſo grievous Cauſes concerning State and Liſe, no Man is bound to ſend a Proctor) and though I would never ſo fain ſend my Proctor, yet by reaſon of Poverty I am not able (for all that ever I had, wherewith I ſhould bear my Proctor's Coſts and Charges, is quite taken from me) nevertheleſs the moſt reverend Cardinal aforeſaid doth ſore threaten me, that whether I ſhall appear or not, he will nevertheleſs yet proceed in Judgment againſt me; wherein I feel myſelf ſo grieved, that nothing can be imagined more miſchievous or further from Reaſon.

Note with what Juſtice and Sincerity this catholick Church doth proceed.

2. Secondly, The reverend Father James Brooks, by the Mercy of God Biſhop of Glouceſter, Judge and Under-deputy (as he affirmeth) of the moſt reverend Cardinal, cauſed me to be cited at Oxford (where I was then kept in Priſon) to anſwer to certain Articles, concerning the Danger of my State and Life. And when I being unlearned and ignorant in the Laws, deſired Counſel of the learned in the Law, that Thing was moſt unrighteouſly denied me, contrary to the Equity of all Laws both of God and Man. Wherein again I feel myſelf moſt wrongfully grieved.

3. And when I refuſed the ſaid Biſhop of Glouceſter to be my Judge, for moſt juſt Cauſes, which I then declared, he nevertheleſs went on ſtill, and made Proceſs againſt me, contrary to the Rule of the Laws of appealing, which ſay, A Judge that is refuſed ought not to proceed in the Cauſe, but to leave off. And when he had required of me Anſwers to certain Articles, I refuſed to make him any Anſwer: I ſaid I would yet gladly make Anſwer to the moſt renowned King's and Queen's Deputies or Attorneys then preſent, with this Condition notwithſtanding, that mine Anſwer ſhould be extrajudicial, and that was permitted me. And with this my Proteſtation made and admitted, I made Anſwer; but my Anſwer was ſudden and unprovided for: And therefore I deſired to have a Copy of mine Anſwers, that I might put to, take away, change and amend them; and this was alſo permitted me. Nevertheleſs, contrary to his Promiſe made unto me, no Reſpect had to my Proteſtation, nor Licence given to amend mine Anſwer, the ſaid reverend Father Biſhop of Glouceſter (as I hear) commanded mine Anſwers to be inacted contrary to the Equity of the Law. In which Thing again I feel me much grieved.

4. Furthermore, I could not for many Cauſes admit the Biſhop of Rome's uſurped Authority in this Realm, nor conſent to it: For my ſolemn Oath hindering me, which I made in the Time of King Henry VIII. of moſt famous Memory, according to the Laws of England: Secondly, becauſe I knew the Authority of the Biſhop of Rome which he uſurpeth, to be againſt the Crown, Cuſtoms, and Laws of this Realm of England, inſomuch, that neither the King can be crowned in this Realm, without the moſt grievous Crime of Perjury, nor may Biſhops enjoy their Biſhopricks, nor Judgments to be uſed according to the Laws and Cuſtoms of this Realm, except by the Biſhop of Rome's Authority, be accurſed both the King and Queen, the Judges, Writers, and Executors of the Laws and Cuſtoms, with all that conſent to them. Finally, the whole Realm ſhall be accurſed.

5. Moreover that heinous and uſurped Authority of the Biſhop of Rome, through Reſervations of the Biſhopricks, Proviſions, Annuates, Diſpenſations, Pardons, Appellations, Bulls, and other Merchandize of Rome, was wont exceedingly to ſpoil and conſume the Riches and Subſtance of this Realm, all which Things ſhould follow again by recognizing and receiving of that uſurped Authority unto the unmeaſurable Loſs of this Realm.

6. Finally, it is moſt evident by that uſurped Authority, not only the Crown of England to be under Yoke, the Laws and Cuſtoms of this Realm to be thrown down, and trodden under Foot, but alſo the moſt holy Decrees of Councils, together with the Precepts both of the Goſpel and of God.

The primitive State of the Church of Rome ſincere and pure.

When in Times paſt the Son of Righteouſneſs being riſen in the World, chriſtian Religion by the Preaching of the Apoſtles began to be ſpread very far Abroad, and to flouriſh, inſomuch that their Sound went out into all the World; innumerable People, which walked in Darkneſs ſaw a great Light, God's Glory every where publiſhed did flouriſh, the only Cark and Care of the Miniſters of the Church was purely and ſincerely to preach Chriſt; the People to embrace and follow Chriſt's Doctrine. Then the Church of Rome, as it were Lady of the World, both was, and alſo was counted worthily the Mother of other Churches, foraſmuch as then ſhe firſt begat to Chriſt, nouriſhed with the Food of pure Doctrine, did help them with their Riches, ſuccoured the oppreſſed, and was a Sanctuary for the miſerable, ſhe rejoiced with them that rejoiced, and wept with them that wept. Then by the Examples of the Biſhops of Rome, Riches were deſpiſed, worly Glory and Pomp was trodden under Foot, Pleaſures and Riot nothing regarded. Then this frail and uncertain Life, being full of all Miſeries, was laughed to Scorn, whilſt through the Example of Romiſh Martyrs, Men did every where preſs forward to the Life to come. But afterward when the Ungraciouſneſs neſs of damnable Ambition, never-ſatisfy'd Avarice, and the horrible Enormity of Vices had corrupted and taken the See of Rome, there followed every where almoſt the Deformities of all Churches, growing out of Kind into the Manners of the Church their Mother, leaving their former Innocency and Purity, and ſlipping into foul and heinous Uſages.

For the aforeſaid and many other Griefs and Abuſes (which I intend to prove, and to proffer myſelf in Time convenient to prove hereafter) ſince Reformation of the abovementioned Abuſes is not to be looked for of the Biſhop of Rome, neither can I hope by reaſon of his wicked Abuſes and uſurped Authority, to have him an equal Judge in his own Cauſe: Therefore I do challenge and appeal in theſe Writings from the Pope, having no good Council, and from the above-named Pretences, Commiſſions, and Judges, from their Citations, Proceſſes, and from all other Things that have or ſhall follow thereupon, and from every one of them, and from all their Sentences, Cenſures, Pains and Puniſhments of Curſing, Suſpenſion, and Interdicting, and from all others whatſoever their Denouncings and Declarations (as they pretend) of Schiſm, of Hereſy, Adultery, Deprivation, degrading by them, or by any of them, in any manner wiſe attempted, done and ſet forward to be attempted, to be done, and to be ſet forward hereafter (ſaving always their Honours and Reverences) as unequal and unrighteous, moſt tyrannical and violent, and from every Grief to come, which ſhall happen to me, as well for myſelf as for all and every one that cleaveth to me, or will hereafter be on my Side, unto a free general Council, that ſhall hereafter lawfully be, and in a ſure Place, to which Place I, or a Proctor deputed by me, may freely and with Safety come, and to him or them, to whom a Man may by the Law, Privilege, Cuſtom, or otherwiſe challenge and appeal.

And I deſire the firſt, the ſecond, and third Time, inſtantly, more inſtantly, and moſt inſtantly, that I may have * Meſſengers, if there be any Man that will and can give me them. And I make open Promiſe of proſecuting this mine Appellation, by the way of Diſannulling, Abuſe, Inequality, and Unrighteouſneſs, or otherwiſe as I ſhall be better able: Choice and Liberty reſerved to me, to put to, diminiſh, change, correct, and interpret my Sayings, and to reform all Things after a better Faſhion, ſaving always to me every other Benefit of the Law, and to them that either be, or will be on my Part.

* Letters of Protection and Defence.

And touching my Doctrine of the Sacrament, and other my Doctrine, of what kind ſoever it be, I proteſt that it was never my Mind to write, ſpeak, or underſtand any thing contrary to the moſt holy Word of God, or elſe againſt the holy catholick Church of Chriſt, but purely and ſimply to imitate and teach thoſe Things only, which I had learned of the ſacred Scripture, and of the holy catholick Church of Chriſt from the Beginning, and alſo according to the Expoſition of the moſt holy and learned Fathers and Martyrs of the Church.

And if any Thing hath peradventure chanced otherwiſe than I thought, I may err, but Heretick I cannot be, foraſmuch as I am ready in all Things to follow the Judgment of the moſt ſacred Word of God, and of the holy catholick Church, deſiring none other Thing than meekly and gently to be taught, if any where (which God forbid) I have ſwerved from the Truth. Anno 1556.

And I proteſt and openly confeſs, that in all my Doctrine and Preaching, both of the Sacrament, and of other my Doctrine whatſoever it be, not only I mean and judge thoſe Things, as the catholick Church, and the moſt holy Fathers of old with one Accord have meant and judged, but alſo I would gladly uſe the ſame Words that they uſed, and not uſe any other Words, but to ſet my Hand to all and ſingular their Speeches, Phraſes, Ways and Forms of Speech, which they do uſe in their Treatiſes upon the Sacrament, and to keep ſtill their Interpretation. But in this Thing I only am accuſed for an Heretick, becauſe I allow not the Doctrine lately brought in of the Sacrament, and becauſe I conſent not to Words not accuſtomed in Scripture, and unknown to the ancient Fathers, but newly invented and brought in by Men, and belonging to the Deſtruction of Souls, and overthrowing of pure and old Religion. Yea, even, &c.

This Appeal being put up to the Biſhop of Ely, he ſaid to the Archbiſhop, My Lord, our Commiſſion is to proceed againſt you, Omni appellatione remota, and therefore we cannot admit it.

Why (quoth the Archbiſhop) then you do me the more wrong; for my Caſe is not as every private Man's Caſe. The Matter is immediately between the Pope and me, and none otherwiſe: And I think no Man ought to be a Judge in his own Cauſe.

Well, quoth Ely, if it may be admitted it ſhall, and ſo received it of him. And then he began earneſtly to perſwade with the Archbiſhop to conſider his State, and to weigh it well, while there was Time to do him good, promiſing to become a Suiter to the King and Queen for him; and ſo proteſted his great Love and Friendſhip that had been between them, heartily weeping, ſo that for a Time he could not go on with his Tale. After going forward, he earneſtly affirmed, that if it had not been the King and Queen's Commandment, whom he could not deny, elſe no worldly Advantage ſhould have made him to have done it, concluding that to be one of the ſorrowfulleſt Things that ever happened unto him. The Archbiſhop gently ſeeming to comfort him, ſaid, he was very well content withal; and ſo they proceeded to his Degradation: The perfect Form whereof, with all the Rites and Ceremonies thereunto appertaining, taken out of the Pope's Pontifical, we have already deſcribed.

To be ſhort, when they came to take off his Pall (which is a ſolemn Veſture only belonging to an Archbiſhop) then ſaid he, Which of you hath a Pall, to take off my Pall? which imported as much as they being his Inferiors, could not degrade him. Whereunto one of them anſwered, confeſſing that as they were but Biſhops they were inferior to him, and therefore not competent Judges; but, as being the Pope's Delegates, they had Authority to take his Pall, which accordingly they did; and ſo proceeding took every thing in Order from him, as it was put on. Then a Barber clipped his Hair round about, and the Biſhop ſcraped the Tops of his Fingers, where he had been anointed, wherein Biſhop Bonner behaved Anno 1556. himſelf as roughly and unmannerly, as the other Biſhop was to him ſoft and gentle. Whilſt they were thus doing, All this, quoth the Archbiſhop, needed not; I had myſelf done with this Gear long ago. Laſt of all they ſtripped him out of his Gown into his Jacket, and put upon him a poor yeoman Beadle's Gown, full bare and nearly worn, and as ill ſhaped, as one might probably ſee, and a Towniman's Cap on his Head, and ſo delivered him to the ſecular Power.

Lord Bonner unlordeth the Archbiſhop.

After this Pageant of Degradation, and all was finiſhed, then ſpake Lord Bonner, ſaying to him, Now are you no Lord any more: And ſo whenſoever he ſpake to the People of him (as he was continually barking againſt him) he ever uſed this Term, This Gentleman here, &c.

It's happy this Biſhop had ſo much Manners yet to call him Gentleman.

And thus with great Compaſſion and Pity of every Man in this evil-favoured Gown was he carried to Priſon. Whom there followed a Gentleman of Glouceſterſhire, with the Archbiſhop's own Gown, who ſtanding by, and being thought to be toward one of the Biſhops, had it delivered unto him; who by the Way talking with him, ſaid, the Biſhop of Ely proteſted his Friendſhip with Tears. Yet (ſaid he) he might have uſed a great deal more Friendſhip towards me, and never have been the worſe thought on, for I have well deſerved it: And going up into the Priſon with him, asked him if he would drink. Who anſwered him, ſaying, if he had a Piece of Salt Fiſh, that he had a better Will to eat: For he had been that Day ſomewhat troubled with this Matter, and had eaten little, but now that it is paſt, my Heart (ſaid he) is well quieted. Whereupon the Gentleman ſaid, he would give him Money with all his Heart, for he was able to do it. But he being one toward the Law, and fearing Mr. Farmer's Caſe, durſt therefore give him nothing, but gave Money to the Bailiffs that ſtood by, and ſaid, that if they were good Men they would beſtow it on him (for my Lord of Canterbury had not one Penny in his Purſe to help him) and ſo left him, my Lord bidding him earneſtly farewel, commending himſelf to his Prayers and all his Friends. That Night this Gentleman was ſtayed by Bonner and Ely, for giving him this Money: And but for the Help of his Friends, he had been ſent up to the Council. Such was the Cruelty and Iniquity of the Time, that Men could not do Good without Puniſhment.

Courteſy ſhewed to the Archbiſhop by a Gentleman.

This Mr. Farmer had loſt all his Lands for relieving a Prieſt in the Tower in King Henry's Time.

In this mean Time while the Archbiſhop was thus remaining in Durance (whom they had kept now in Priſon almoſt the Space of three Years) the Doctors and Divines of Oxford buſied themſelves all that ever they could about Dr. Cranmer to perſuade him to recant, endeavouring by all the crafty Practices and Allurements they could invent to bring their Purpoſe to paſs. And to the Intent they might win him the more eaſily, they entertain'd him in the Dean's Houſe of Chriſt-Church in the ſaid Univerſity, where he lacked no delicate Fare, play'd at Bowls, had his Pleaſure for walking, and all other Things that might bring him from Chriſt. And beſides all this, they ſecretly ſuborned certain Men, who when they could not expugn him by Arguments and Diſputation, ſhould by Intreaty and fair Promiſes, or any other Means allure him to a Recantation; perceiving otherwiſe what a great Wound they ſhould receive, if the Archbiſhop had ſtood ſtedfaſt in his Sentence: And again on the other Side, how great Profit they ſhould get, if he, as the principal Stander-bearer, ſhould be overthrown. By reaſon whereof the wily Papiſts flocked about him, with threatning, flattering, intreating and promiſing, and all other Means; eſpecially Henry Sydall, and Frier John de Villa Garcina a Spaniard, to the End to drive him, to the uttermoſt of their Poſſibility, from his former Sentence to Recantation.

Firſt, they ſet forth how acceptable it would be both to the King and Queen, and eſpecially how gainful to him, and for his Soul's Health the ſame ſhould be. They added moreover, how the Council and the Noblemen bare him good Will. They put him in hope, that he ſhould not only have his Life, but alſo be reſtored to his ancient Dignity, ſaying, it was but a ſmall Matter, and ſo eaſy that they required him to do, only that he would ſubſcribe to a few Words with his own Hand; which if he did, there ſhould be nothing in the Realm that the Queen would not eaſily grant him, whether he would have Riches or Dignity, or elſe if he had rather live a private Life in quiet Reſt, in whatſoever Place he liſted, without all publick Miniſtry, only that he would ſet his Name in two Words to a little Leaf of Paper; but if he refuſed there was no hope of Health and Pardon: For the Queen was ſo purpoſed, that ſhe would have Cranmer a Catholick, or elſe no Cranmer at all. Therefore he ſhould chuſe whether he thought it better to end his Life ſhortly in the Flames and Fire-brands now ready to be kindled, than with much Honour to prolong his Life until the Courſe of Nature did call him: For there was no middle Way.

Moreover, they exhorted him that he would look to his Wealth, his Eſtimation and Quietneſs, ſaying, that he was not ſo old, but that many Years yet remained in this his ſo luſty Age; and if he would not do it in reſpect of the Queen, yet he ſhould do it for reſpect of his Life, and not ſuffer that other Men ſhould be more careful for his Health than he was himſelf; ſaying, that this was agreeable to his Learning and notable Virtues; which being adjoined with his Life would be profitable both to himſelf and to many others; but being extinct by Death, ſhould be fruitful to no Man: That he ſhould take good Heed that he went not too far; yet there was Time enough to reſtore all Things ſafe, and nothing wanted, if he wanted not to himſelf. Therefore they would have him to lay hold upon the Occaſion of his Health while it was offered, leſt if he would now refuſe it, he might hereafter ſeek it when he could not have it.

Finally, if the Deſire of Life did nothing move him, yet he ſhould remember that to die is grievous in all Ages, and eſpecially in theſe his Years and Flower of Dignity it were more grievous: But to die in the Fire and ſuch Torments is moſt grievous of all. With theſe and like Provocations theſe fair Flatterers ceaſed not to ſollicit and urge him, uſing all poſſible Means they could to draw him to their Side; whoſe Force his manly Conſtancy did a great while reſiſt. But at laſt when they made no End of calling and crying upon him, the Archbiſhop being overcome, whether through their Importunity, or by his own Imbecility, or of what Mind I cannot tell, at length gave his Hand.

Dr. Cranmer recanteth.

It might be ſupppoſed that it was done for the Hope of Life, and better Days to come. But as we may ſince perceive by a Letter of his to a Lawyer, the greateſt Cauſe why he deſired his Time to be delayed, was that he would make an End of Marcus Antonius, which he had already begun: But howſoever it was, plain it was to be againſt his Conſcience. The Form of which Recantation, made by the Friars and Doctors, whereto he ſubſcribed, was this:

The Copy and Words of Dr. Cranmer's Recantation.

I Thomas Cranmer, late Archbiſhop of Canterbury, do renounce, abhor and deteſt all Manner of Hereſies and Errors of Luther and Zuinglius, and all other Teachings which be contrary to ſound and true Doctrine. And I believe moſt conſtantly in my Heart, and with my Mouth I confeſs one holy and catholick Church viſible, without which there is no Salvation; and thereof I acknowledge the Biſhop of Rome to be ſupreme Head in Earth, whom I acknowledge to be the higheſt Biſhop and Pope, and Chriſt's Vicar, unto whom all chriſtian People ought to be ſubject.

And as concerning the Sacraments, I believe and worſhip in the Sacrament of the Altar the very Body and Blood of Chriſt, being contained moſt truly under the Forms of Bread and Wine; the Bread through the mighty Power of God being turned into the Body of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, and the Wine into his Blood.

And in the other ſix Sacraments alſo (like as in this) I believe and hold as the univerſal Church holdeth, and the Church of Rome judgeth and determineth.

Furthermore, I believe that there is a Place of Purgatory, where Souls departed be puniſhed for a Time, for whom the Church doth godly and wholeſomely pray, like as it doth honour Saints and make Prayers to them.

Finally, in all Things I profeſs, that I do not otherwiſe believe, than the catholick Church and the Church of Rome holdeth and teacheth. I am ſorry that ever I held or thought otherwiſe. And I beſeech Almighty God, that of his Mercy he will vouchſafe to forgive me, whatſoever I have offended againſt God or his Church, and alſo I deſire and beſeech all chriſtian People to pray for me.

And all ſuch as have been deceived either by mine Example or Doctrine, I require them by the Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, that they will return to the Unity of the Church, that we may be all of one Mind, without Schiſm or Diviſion.

And to conclude, as I ſubmit myſelf to the catholick Church of Chriſt, and to the ſupreme Head thereof, ſo I ſubmit myſelf unto the moſt excellent Majeſties of Philip and Mary, King and Queen of this Realm of England, &c. and to all other their Laws and Ordinances, being ready always as a faithful Subject ever to obey them. And God is my Witneſs, that I have not done this for Favour or Fear of any Perſon, but willingly and of mine own Mind, as well to the Diſcharge of mine own Conſcience, as to the Inſtruction of others.

This Recantation of the Archbiſhop was not ſo ſoon conceived, but the Doctors and Prelates without Delay cauſed the ſame to be imprinted, and ſet Abroad in all Mens Hands. Whereunto for better Credit, firſt was added the Name of Thomas Cranmer, with a ſolemn Subſcription, then followed the Witneſſes of this Recantation, Henry Sydal, and Friar John de villa Garcina. All this while Cranmer had no certain Aſſurance of his Life, although the ſame was faithfully promiſed to him by the Doctors; but after they had their Purpoſe, the reſt they committed to all Adventure, as became Men of that Religion to do. The Queen, having now gotten a Time to revenge her old Grief, received his Recantation very gladly: But of her Purpoſe to put him to Death ſhe would nothing relent. Anno 1556.

Now was Dr. Cranmer in a miſerable Caſe, having neither inwardly any Quietneſs in his own Conſcience, nor yet outwardly any Help in his Adverſaries. Cranmer is drawn into a miſerable Condition by the falſe and cruel Papiſts.

Beſides this, on the one Side was Praiſe, on the other Side Scorn, on both Sides Danger, ſo that he could neither die honeſtly, nor yet honeſtly live. And whereas he ſought Profit, he fell into double Diſprofit, that neither with good Men he could avoid ſecret Shame, nor yet with evil Men the Note of Diſſimulation.

In the mean Time while theſe Things were doing (as I ſaid) in the Priſon amongſt the Doctors, the Queen taking ſecret Counſel how to diſpatch Cranmer out of the Way (who as yet knew not of her ſecret Hate, and not expecting Death) appointed Dr. Cole, and ſecretly gave him in Commandment, that againſt the 21ſt of March, he ſhould prepare a funeral Sermon for Cranmer's burning, and ſo inſtructing him orderly and diligently of her Will and Pleaſure in that Behalf, ſendeth him away.

Soon after the Lord Williams of Tame, and the Lord Chandois, Sir Thomas Bridges, and Sir John Brown were ſent for, with other worſhipful Men and Juſtices, commanded in the Queen's Name to be at Oxford at the ſame Day, with their Servants and Retinue, leſt Cranmer's Death ſhould raiſe there any Tumult.

Dr. Cole having this Leſſon given him before, and charged by her Commandment, returned to Oxford, ready to play his Part; who as the Day of Execution drew near, even the Day before, came into the Priſon to Dr. Cranmer, to try whether he abode in the catholick Faith wherein before he had left him. To whom, when Cranmer had anſwered, that by God's Grace he would be daily more confirmed in the catholick Faith; Cole departing for that Time, the next Day following repaired to the Archbiſhop again, giving no Signification as yet of his Death that was prepared: And therefore in the Morning, which was the 21ſt Day of March appointed for Cranmer's Execution, the ſaid Cole coming to him, asked him if he had any Money; to whom when he had anſwered that he had none, he delivered him fifteen Crowns to give to the Poor to whom he would: And ſo exhorting him as much as he could to Conſtancy in Faith, departed thence about his Buſineſs, as to his Sermon appertained.

By this partly, and other like Arguments, the Archbiſhop began more and more to ſurmiſe what they went about. Then becauſe the Day was not far paſt, and the Lords and Knights that were looked for were not yet come, there came to him the Spaniſh Friar, Witneſs of his Recantation, bringing a Paper with Articles, which Cranmer ſhould openly profeſs in his Recantation before the People, earneſtly deſiring him that he would write the Anno 1556. the ſaid Inſtrument with the Articles with his own Hand, and ſign it with his Name: Which when he had done, the Friar deſired that he would write another Copy thereof which ſhould remain with him, and that he did alſo. But yet the Archbiſhop being not ignorant whereunto their ſecret Devices tended, and thinking that the Time was at Hand in which he could no longer diſſemble the Profeſſion of his Faith with Chriſt's People, he put his Prayer and his Exhortation written in another Paper ſecretly into his Boſom, which he intended to recite to the People before he ſhould make the laſt Profeſſion of his Faith, fearing leſt if they heard the Confeſſion of his Faith firſt, they would not afterwards have ſuffered him to exhort the People.

Soon after about nine of the Clock, the Lord Williams, Sir Thomas Bridges, Sir John Browne, and the other Juſtices, with certain other Noblemen, that were ſent of the Queen's Council, came to Oxford with a great Train of waiting-men. Alſo of the other Multitude on every Side (as is wont in ſuch a Matter) was made a great Concourſe, and greater Expectation: For firſt of all, they that were of the Pope's Side were in great Hope that Day to hear ſomething of Cranmer that ſhould eſtabliſh the Vanity of their Opinion: The other Part, who were indu'd with a better Mind, could not yet doubt, that he who by continual Study and Labour for ſo many Years, had ſet forth the Doctrine of the Goſpel, either would or could now in the laſt Act of his Life forſake his Part. Briefly, as every Man's Will inclined, either to this Part or to that, ſo according to the Diverſity of the Deſires, every Man wiſhed and hoped for. And yet becauſe in an uncertain Thing the Certainty could be known of none what would be the End; all their Minds were hanging between Hope and Doubt. So that the greater the Expectation was in ſo doubtful a Matter, the more was the Multitude that was gathered thither to hear and behold.

During this great Expectation, Dr. Cranmer at length came from the Priſon of Bocardo unto St. Mary's Church, becauſe it was a foul and rainy Day, the chief Church in the Univerſity, in this Order. The Mayor went before, next him the Aldermen in their Place and Degree; after them was Cranmer brought between two Friars, who mumbling two and and fro certain Pſalms in the Streets, anſwered one another until they came to the Church Door, and there they began the Song of Simeon, Nunc dimittis; and entering into the Church, the Pſalm-ſaying Friars brought him to his Standing, and there left him. There was a Stage over-againſt the Pulpit, of a mean Height from the Ground, where Cranmer had his Standing, waiting until Dr. Cole made him ready to his Sermon.

The lamentable Caſe and Sight of that Man gave a ſorrowful Spectacle to all chriſtian Eyes that beheld him. He that late was Archbiſhop, Metropolitan, and Primate of all England, and the King's Privy Counſellor, being now in a bare and ragged Gown, and ill favouredly cloathed, with an old ſquare Cap, expoſed to the Contempt of all Men, did admoniſh Men not only of his own Calamity, but alſo of their State and Fortune. For who would not pity his Caſe and bewail his Fortune, and might not fear his own Chance, to ſee ſuch a Prelate, ſo grave a Counſellor, and of ſo long continued Honour, after ſo many Dignities, in his old Years to be deprived of his Eſtate, adjudged to die, and in ſo painful a Death to end his Life, and now preſently from ſuch freſh Ornaments, to deſcend to ſuch vile and ragged Apparel?

In this Habit, when he had ſtood a good Space upon the Stage, turning to a Pillar near adjoining thereunto, he lifted up his Hands to Heaven and pray'd unto God once or twice, till at length Dr Cole coming into the Pulpit, and beginning his Sermon, entered firſt into mention of Tobas and Zachary; whom after he had praiſed in the Beginning of his Sermon for their Perſeverance in the true worſhipping of God, he then divided his whole Sermon into three Parts (according to the ſolemn Cuſtom of the Schools) intending to ſpeak firſt of the Mercy of God: Secondly, of his Juſtice to be ſhewed: And laſt of all, how the Prince's Secrets are not to be opened. And proceeding a little from the Beginning, he took Occaſion by and by to turn his Tale to Cranmer, and with many hot Words reproved him, that once he being indu'd with the Savour and Feeling of wholſome and catholick Doctrine, fell into the contrary Opinion of pernicious Error; which he had not only defended by Writings, and all his Power, but alſo allured other Men to do the like, with great Liberality of Gifts, as it were appointing Rewards for Error; and after he had allured them, by all Means did cheriſh them.

It were too long to repeat all Things, that in long Order were pronounced. The Sum of his Tripartite Declamation was, that he ſaid God's Mercy was ſo tempered with his Juſtice, that he did not altogether require Puniſhment according to the Merits of the Offenders, nor yet ſometimes ſuffered the ſame altogether to go unpuniſhed, yea though they had repented. As in David, who when he was bidden chuſe of three Kinds of Puniſhment which he would, and he had choſen Peſtilence for three Days; the Lord forgave him half the Time, but did not releaſe all: And that the ſame Thing came to paſs in him alſo, to whom although Pardon and Reconciliation was due according to the Canons, ſeeing he repented him of his Errors, yet there were Cauſes why the Queen and the Council at this Time judged him to Death; of which, leſt he ſhould marvel too much, he ſhould hear ſome.

If Cole gave this Judgment upon Cranmer when he had repented, what Judgment is then to be given of Cole, who always continued in Error, and never yet repented.

Firſt, that being a Traitor, he had diſſolved the lawful Matrimony between the King her Father and Mother; beſides the driving out of the Pope's Authority, while he was Metropolitan.

Secondly, that he had been an Heretick, from whom as from an Author and only Fountain, all heretical Doctrine and ſchiſmatical Opinions, that ſo many Years have prevailed in England, did firſt riſe and ſpring; of which he had not been a ſecret Favourer only, but alſo a moſt earneſt Defender even to the End of his Life, ſowing them Abroad by Writings and Arguments, privately and openly, not without great Ruin and Decay of the catholick Church.

If all Hereticks in England ſhould be burnt, where would Dr. Cole have been ere now?

And further, it ſeemed meet, according to the Law of Equality, that as the Death of the Duke of Northumberland of late, made even with Thomas Moor, Chancellor, that died for the Church, ſo there ſhould be one that ſhould make even with Fiſher of Rocheſter: And becauſe becauſe that Ridley, Hooper, Farrar, were not able to make even with that Man, it ſeemed that Cranmer ſhould be joined to them to fill up their Part of Equality.

Beſides theſe, there were other juſt and weighty Cauſes, which ſeemed to the Queen and Council, which was not meet at that Time to be opened to the common People.

After this, turning his Tale to the Hearers, he bade all Men beware by this Man's Example, that among Men nothing is ſo high that can promiſe itſelf Safety on the Earth, and that God's Vengeance is equally ſtretched againſt all Men and ſpareth none: Therefore they ſhould beware and learn to fear their Prince. And ſeeing the Queen's Majeſty would not ſpare ſo notable a Man as this, much leſs in the like Cauſe would ſhe ſpare other Men, that no Man ſhould think thereby to make any Defence of his Error, either in Riches or any kind of Authority. They had now an Example to teach them all, by whoſe Calamity every Man might conſider his own Fortune; who from the Top of Dignity, none being more honourable than he in the whole Realm, and next the King, was fallen into ſo great Miſery, as they might now ſee, being a Man of ſo high Degree, ſometime one of the chiefeſt Prelates in the Church, and an Archbiſhop, the Chief of the Council, the ſecond Perſon in the Realm of long Time, a Man thought in greateſt Aſſurance, having a King on his Side; notwithſtanding all his Authority and Defence, to be debaſed from high Eſtate to a low Degree, of a Counſellor to become a Caitiff, and to be ſet in ſo wretched a State, that the pooreſt Wretch would not change Condition with him; briefly ſo heaped with Miſery on all Sides, that neither was left in him any Hope of better Fortune, nor Place for worſe.

No State in this Earth ſo high nor ſo ſure, but it may fall.

The latter Part of his Sermon he converted to the Archbiſhop, whom he comforted and encouraged to take his Death well, by many Places of Scripture, as with theſe and ſuch like; bidding him not to miſtruſt, but he ſhould incontinently receive that the Thief did, to whom Chriſt ſaid, This Day thou ſhalt be with me in Paradiſe: And out of St. Paul he armed him againſt the Terror of the Fire by this, The Lord is faithful which will not ſuffer you to be tempted above your Strength: By the Example of the three Children, to whom God made the Flame to ſeem like a pleaſant Dew, adding alſo the rejoicing of St. Andrew in his Croſs, the Patience of St. Laurence on the Fire, aſſuring him, that God, if he called on him, and to ſuch as die in his Faith, either would abate the Fury of the Flame, or give him Strength to abide it.

Dr. Cole rejoiceth in the Archbiſhop's Converſion, but that rejoicing laſted not long.

He glorified God much in his Converſion, becauſe it appeared to be only his Work, declaring what Travel and Conference had been with him to convert him, and all prevailed not, till that it pleaſed God of his Mercy to reclaim him, and call him Home. In diſcourſing of which Place, he much commended Cranmer, and qualified his former Doings, thus tempering his Judgment and Talk of him, that all the Time (ſaid he) he flowed in Riches and Honour, he was unworthy of his Life; and now that he might not live, he was unworthy of Death. But leſt he ſhould carry with him no Comfort, he would diligently labour (he ſaid) and alſo did promiſe in the Name of all the Prieſts that were preſent, that immediately after his Death there ſhould Dirges, Maſſes, and Funerals executed for him in all the Churches of Oxford for the Succour of his Soul. Anno 1556.

Cranmer in all this Time with what great Grief of Mind he ſtood hearing this Sermon, the outward Shews of his Body and Countenance did better expreſs, than any Man can declare; one while lifting up his Hands and Eyes unto Heaven, and then again for Shame letting them down to the Earth. A Man might have ſeen the very Image and Shape of perfect Sorrow lively in him expreſſed. More than twenty ſeveral Times the Tears guſhed out abundantly, dropping down marvellouſly from his fatherly Face. They that were preſent do teſtify, that they never ſaw in any Child more Tears, than came from him at that Time, all the Sermon while; but eſpecially when they recited his Prayer before the People. It is marvellous what Commiſeration and Pity moved all Mens Hearts, that beheld ſo heavy a Countenance, and ſuch Abundance of Tears in an old Man of ſo reverend Dignity.

After Cole had ended his Sermon, he called back the People to Prayers that were ready to depart. Brethren (ſaid he) leſt any Man ſhould doubt of this Man's earneſt Converſion and Repentance, you ſhall hear him ſpeak before you, and therefore I pray you Mr. Cranmer, to perform that now which you promiſed not long ago; namely, that you would openly expreſs the true and undoubted Profeſſion of your Faith, that you may take away all Suſpicion from Men, and that all Men may underſtand that you are a Catholick indeed. I will do it (ſaid the Archbiſhop) and that with a good Will; who by and by riſing up, and putting off his Cap, began to ſpeak thus unto the People.

I deſire you, well beloved Brethren in the Lord, that you will pray to God for me, to forgive me my Sins, which above all Men, both in Number and Greatneſs I have committed. But among all the reſt there is one Offence which moſt of all at this Time doth vex and trouble me, whereof in Proceſs of my Talk you ſhall hear more in its proper Place; and then putting his Hand into his Boſom he drew forth his Prayer, which he recited to the People, beginning in the following Manner.

Good chriſtian People, my dearly beloved Brethren and Siſters in Chriſt, I beſeech you moſt heartily to pray for me to Almighty God, that he will forgive me all my Sins and Offences, which be many without Number, and great above Meaſure. But yet one Thing grieveth my Conſcience more than all the reſt, whereof, God willing, I intend to ſpeak more hereafter. But how great and how many ſoever my Sins be, I beſeech you to pray God of his Mercy to pardon and forgive them all. And here kneeling down he ſaid the following Prayer.

The Prayer of Dr. Cranmer, Archbiſhop.

O Father of Heaven, O Son of God Redeemer of the World, O Holy Ghoſt three Perſons and one God, have Mercy upon me moſt wretched Caitiff and miſerable Sinner. I have offended both againſt Heaven and Earth, more than my Tongue can expreſs. Whither then may I go, or whither ſhall I flee? To Heaven I may be aſhamed to lift up mine Eyes, and in Earth I find no Place of Refuge or Succour. To thee therefore, O Lord, do I run; to thee do I humble myſelf, ſaying, O Lord my God, my Sins be great, but yet have Mercy upon me for thy great Mercy. The great Myſtery that God became Man, was not wrought for little or few Offences. Thou didſt not give thy Son (O Heavenly Father) unto Death for ſmall Sins only, but for all the greateſt Sins of the World, ſo that the Sinner return to thee with his whole Heart, as I do here at this preſent. Wherefore have Mercy on me, O God, whoſe Property is always to have Mercy, have Mercy upon me, O Lord, for thy great Mercy. I crave nothing for mine own Merits, but for thy Name's ſake, that it may be hallowed thereby, and for thy dear Son Jeſus Chriſt's ſake. And now therefore Our Father of Heaven, hallowed be thy Name, &c. And then he riſing, ſaid:

Every Man (good People) deſireth at the Time of his Death to give ſome good Exhortation, that others may remember the ſame before their Death and be the better thereby: So I beſeech God grant me Grace, that I may ſpeak ſomething at this my departing, whereby God may be glorify'd, and you edify'd.

Firſt, it is an heavy Cauſe to ſee that ſo many Folk ſo much doat upon the Love of this falſe World, and be ſo careful for it, that of the Love of God, or the World to come, they ſeem to care very little or nothing. Therefore this ſhall be my firſt Exhortation: That you ſet not your Minds overmuch upon this deceitful World, but upon God, and upon the World to come, and to learn to know what this Leſſon meaneth which St. John teacheth, That the Love of this World is Hatred againſt God.

The ſecond Exhortation is, That next under God you obey your King and Queen willingly and gladly, without murmuring or grudging; not for Fear of them only, but much more for the Fear of God; knowing that they be God's Miniſters, appointed by God to rule and govern you: And therefore whoſoever reſiſteth them, reſiſteth the Ordinance of God.

The third Exhortation is, that you love altogether like Brethren and Siſters. For alas, Pity it is to ſee what Contention and Hatred one Chriſtian Man beareth to another, not taking each other as Brother and Siſter, but rather as Strangers and mortal Enemies. But I pray you learn and bear well away this one Leſſon, To do good unto all Men, as much as in you liveth, and to hurt no Man, no more than you would hurt your own natural loving Brother or Siſter. For this you may be ſure of, that whoſoever hateth any Perſon, and goeth about maliciouſly to hinder or hurt him, ſurely, and without all doubt, God is not with that Man, although he think himſelf never ſo much in God's Favour.

The fourth Exhortation ſhall be to them that have great Subſtance and Riches of this World, That they will well conſider and weigh three Sayings of the Scripture: One is of our Saviour himſelf, who ſaith, Luke 18. It is hard for a rich Man to enter into the Kingdom of Heaven. A ſore Saying, and yet ſpoken by him who knoweth the Truth.

The ſecond is of St. John, 1 John 3. whoſe Saying is this, He that hath the Subſtance of this World, and ſeeth his Brother in Neceſſity, and ſhutteth up his Mercy from him, how can he ſay that he loveth God?

The third is of St. James, who ſpeaketh to the covetous rich Man after this Manner, Weep you and howl for the Miſery that ſhall come upon you: Your Riches do rot, your Cloaths be moth-eaten, your Gold and Silver doth canker and ruſt, and their Ruſt ſhall bear witneſs againſt you, and conſume you like Fire; you gather a Hoard or Treaſure of God's Indignation againſt the laſt Day. Let them that be rich ponder well theſe three Sentences: For if they ever had Occaſion to ſhew their Charity, they have it now at this preſent, the poor People being ſo many, and Victuals ſo dear.

And now foraſmuch as I am come to the laſt End of my Life, whereupon hangeth all my Life paſt, and all my Life to come, either to live with my Maſter Chriſt for ever in Joy, or elſe to be in Pain for ever with wicked Devils in Hell, and I ſee before mine Eyes preſently either Heaven ready to receive me, or elſe Hell ready to ſwallow me up: I ſhall therefore declare unto you my very Faith how I believe, without any Colour or Diſſimulation: For now is no Time to diſſemble, whatſoever I have ſaid or written in Times paſt.

Firſt, I believe in God the Father Almighty, Maker of Heaven and Earth, &c. And I believe every Article of the catholick Faith, every Word and Sentence taught by our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, his Apoſtles and Prophets, in the New and Old Teſtament.

The Archbiſhop declareth the true Confeſſion of his Faith without all colour or diſſembling.

And now I come to the great Thing which ſo much troubleth my Conſcience, more than any Thing that ever I did or ſaid in my whole Life, and that is the ſetting Abroad of a Writing contrary to the Truth; which now here I renounce and refuſe, as Things written with my Hand contrary to the Truth which I thought in my Heart, and written for fear of Death, and to ſave my Life if it might be, and that is, all ſuch Bills and Papers which I have written or ſigned with my Hand ſince my Degradation; wherein I have written many Things untrue. And foraſmuch as my Hand offended, writing contrary to my Heart, therefore my Hand ſhall firſt be puniſhed: For may I come to the Fire, it ſhall be firſt burned.

The Archbiſhop revoketh his former Recantation, and repenteth of the ſame.

And as for the Pope, I refuſe him, as Chriſt's Enemy and Antichriſt, with all his falſe Doctrine.

And as for the Sacrament, I believe as I have taught in my Book againſt the Biſhop of Wincheſter, which my Book teacheth ſo true a Doctrine of the Sacrament, that it ſhall ſtand at the laſt Day before the Judgment of God, where the papiſtical Doctrine contrary thereto ſhall be aſhamed to ſhew her Face.

Here the Standers by were all aſtoniſhed, marvelled and amazed, and look'd one upon another, whoſe Expectation he had ſo notably deceived. Some began to admoniſh him of his Recantation, and to accuſe him of Falſhood.

Briefly, it was a World to ſee the Doctors beguiled of ſo great an Hope. I think there was never Cruelty more notably or better in Time deluded and deceived. For it is not to be doubted but they looked for a glorious Victory, and a perpetual Triumph by this Man's Retractation.

Who, as ſoon as they heard theſe Things, began to let down their Ears, to rage, fret and fume; and ſo much, the more, becauſe they could not revenge their Grief: For they could now no longer threaten or hurt him. For the moſt miſerable Man in the World can die but once: And whereas of Neceſſity he muſt needs die that Day, though the Papiſts had been never ſo well pleaſed; now being never ſo much offended with him, yet could he not be twice killed by them. And ſo when they could do nothing elſe unto him, yet leſt they ſhould ſay nothing, they ceaſed not to object unto him his Falſhood and Diſſimulation.

Unto which Accuſation he anſwered, Ah my Maſters (quoth he) do you not take it ſo. Always ſince I lived hitherto, I have been a Hater of Falſhood, and a Lover of Simplicity, and never before this Time have I diſſembled; and in ſaying this, all the Tears that remained in his Body appeared in his Eyes. And when he began to ſpeak more of the Sacrament and of the Papacy, ſome of them began to cry out, yelp, and baul, and eſpecially Cole cried out upon him, Stop the Heretick's Mouth, and take him away.

And then Cranmer being pulled down from the Stage was led to the Fire, accompany'd with thoſe Friars, vexing, trembling, and threatning him moſt cruelly. What Madneſs (ſay they) hath brought thee again into this Error, by which thou wilt draw innumerable Souls with thee into Hell? To whom he anſwered nothing, but directed all his Talk to the People, ſaying that to one troubling him in the Way, he ſpake, and exhorted him to get him Home to his Study, and apply his Book diligently, ſaying, if he did diligently call upon God, by reading more he ſhould get Knowledge.

But the other Spaniſh Barker, raging and foaming, was almoſt out of his Wits, always having this in his Mouth, Non feciſti? Didſt thou it not?

But when he came to the Place where the holy Biſhops and Martyrs of God, Biſhop Latimer and Biſhop Ridley were burnt before him for the Confeſſion of the Truth, kneeling down he pray'd to God, and not long tarrying in his Prayers, putting off his Garments to his Shirt, he prepared himſelf for Death. His Shirt was made long down to his Feet. His Feet were bare. Likewiſe his Head, when both his Caps were off, was ſo bare that one Hair could not be ſeen upon it. His Beard was ſo long and thick, that it covered his Face with marvellous Gravity; and his reverend Countenance moved the Hearts both of his Friends and Enemies.

Then the Spaniſh Friars John and Richard, of whom mention was made before, began to exhort him, and play their Parts with him afreſh, but with vain and loſt Labour. Cranmer with ſtedfaſt Purpoſe abiding in the Profeſſion of his Doctrine, gave his Hand to certain old Men and others that ſtood by, bidding them farewel.

And when he had thought to have done ſo likewiſe to Mr. Ely, the ſaid Ely drew back his Hand and refuſed, ſaying, it was not lawful to ſalute Hereticks, and eſpecially ſuch a one as falſely returned unto the Opinions that he had forſworn. And if he had known before that he would have done ſo, he would never have uſed his Company ſo familiarly; and chid thoſe Sergeants and Citizens, who had not refuſed to give him their Hands. This Mr. Ely was a Student in Divinity, and lately made a Prieſt, being then one of the Fellows in Brazen-noſe College. Anno 1556. 552.

Then was an Iron Chain ty'd about Cranmer, and they commanded the Fire to be ſet unto him.

And when the Wood was kindled, and the Fire began to burn near him, he ſtretched forth his right Hand, which had ſigned his Recantation, into the Flames, and there held ſo ſtedfaſt that all the People might ſee it burnt to a Coal before his Body was touch'd. In ſhort, he was ſo patient and conſtant in the midſt of theſe extreme Tortures, that he ſeemed to move no more than the Stake to which he was bound; his Eyes were lifted up to Heaven, and often he repeated his Unworthy right Hand, ſo long as his Voice would ſuffer him; and as often uſing the Words of the bleſſed Martyr St. Stephen, Lord Jeſus receive my Spirit, till the Fury of the Flames putting him to Silence he gave up the Ghoſt. Dr. Cranmer putteth his right Hand which ſubſcribed, firſt into the Fire.

This Fortitude of Mind, which perchance is rare and not found among the Spaniards, when Friar John ſaw, thinking it came not of Fortitude, but of Deſperation, although ſuch manner of Examples which are of like Conſtancy, have been common here in England, he ran to the Lord Williams of Tame, crying that the Archbiſhop was vexed in Mind, and died in great Deſparation. But he who was not ignorant of the Archbiſhop's Conſtancy, being unknown to the Spaniards, ſmiled only, and as it were by Silence rebuked the Friar's Folly. And this was the End of this learned Archbiſhop, whom, leſt, by evil ſubſcribing he ſhould have periſhed, by well recanting God preſerved; and leſt he ſhould have lived longer with Shame and Reproof, it pleaſed God rather to take him away, to the Glory of his Name and Profit of his Church. So good was the Lord both to his Church, in fortifying the ſame with the Teſtimony and Blood of ſuch a Martyr; and ſo good alſo to the Man with this Croſs of Tribulation, to purge his Offences in this World, not only of his Recantation, but alſo of his ſtanding againſt John Lambert and Mr. Allen, or if there were any other, with whoſe burning or Blood his Hand had been any thing before polluted. But eſpecially he had to rejoice, that dying in ſuch a Cauſe, he was numbered amongſt the Martyrs of Chriſt, and much more worthy of the Name of St. Thomas of Canterbury, than he whom the Pope falſly before did canonize.

And thus have you the full Story concerning the Life and Death of this reverend Archbiſhop and Martyr of God, Thomas Cranmer, and alſo of divers others, of whom this Archbiſhop was the laſt that ſuffered in the Middle of the Reign of Queen Mary, and almoſt the middle Man that was burnt in her Time.

Now proceed we to exhibit ſome of the Letters which this worthy Martyr left behind him, beginning firſt with his famous Letter to Queen Mary, which he wrote immediately after he was cited up to Rome, by Biſhop Brooks and his Fellows, the Tenor whereof is as followeth.

The Archbiſhop of Canterbury's Letter to Queen Mary.

MAY it pleaſe your Majeſty to pardon my Preſumption, that I dare be ſo bold to write to your Highneſs. But very Neceſſity conſtraineth me, that your Majeſty may know my Mind, rather by my own Writing than by other Mens Reports. So it is that upon Wedneſday, being the 12th Day of this Month, I was cited to appear at Rome the 80th Day after, there to make anſwer to ſuch Matters as ſhould be objected againſt me upon the Behalf of the King and your moſt excellent Majeſty, which Matters the Thurſday following were objected againſt me by Dr. Martin and Dr. Story, your Majeſty's Proctors, before the Biſhop of Glouceſter, ſitting in Judgment by Commiſſion from Rome. But (alas) it cannot but grieve the Heart of a natural Subject, to be accuſed of the King and Queen of his own Realm; and eſpecially before an outward Judge, or by Authority coming from any Perſon out of this Realm: Where the King and Queen, as if they were Subjects within their own Realm, ſhall complain and require Juſtice at a Stranger's Hands againſt their own Subject, being already condemned to Death by their own Laws. As though the King and Queen could not do or have Juſtice within their own Realms againſt their own Subjects; but they muſt ſeek it at Strangers Hands in a ſtrange Land; the like whereof (I think) was never ſeen. I would have wiſhed to have had ſome meaner Adverſaries: And, I think, that Death ſhall not grieve me much more, than to have my moſt dread and moſt gracious Sovereign Lord and Lady, to whom, under God, I do own all Obedience, to be mine Accuſers in Judgment within their own Realm, before any Stranger and outward Power. But foraſmuch as in the Time of the Prince of moſt famous Memory, King Henry the Eighth your Grace's Father, I was ſworn never to conſent, that the Biſhop of Rome ſhould have or exerciſe any Authority or Juriſdiction in this Realm of England, therefore leſt I ſhould allow his Authority contrary to mine own Oath, I refuſed to make Anſwer to the Biſhop of Glouceſter ſitting here in Judgment by the Pope's Authority, leſt I ſhould run into Perjury.

Another Cauſe why I refuſed the Pope's Authority, is this, that his Authority, as he claimeth it, repugneth to the Crown imperial of this Realm, and to the Laws of the ſame; which every true Subject is bound to defend. Firſt, for that the Pope ſaith, that all manner of Power, as well temporal as ſpiritual, is given firſt to him of God; and that the temporal Power he giveth unto Emperors and Kings, to uſe it under him, but ſo as to be always at his Commandment and Beck.

But contrary to this Claim, the imperial Crown and Juriſdiction temporal of this Realm is taken immediately from God, to be uſed under him only, and is ſubject to none but God alone.

Moreover, to the imperial Laws and Cuſtoms of this Realm the King in his Coronation, and all Juſtices when they receive their Offices, be ſworn, and all the whole Realm is bound to defend and maintain. But contrary hereunto, the Pope by his Authority maketh void, and commandeth to blot out of our Books, all Laws and Cuſtoms being repugnant to his Laws, and declareth accurſed all Rulers and Governours, all the Makers, Writers, and Executors of all ſuch Laws or Cuſtoms; as it appeareth by many of the Pope's Laws, whereof one or two I ſhall rehearſe. In the Decrees, Dict. 10. is written thus: The Conſtitutions or Statutes enacted againſt the Canons and Decrees of the Biſhops of Rome, or their good Cuſtoms, are of none Effect. Alſo, We excommunicate all Hereticks of both Sexes, what Name ſoever they be called by, and their Favourers, Receptors, and Defenders; and alſo them that ſhall hereafter cauſe to be obſerved the Statutes and Cuſtoms made againſt the Liberty of the Church, except they cauſe the ſame to be put out of their Records and Chapters within two Months after the Publication thereof. Alſo we excommunicate the Statute-makers and Writers of thoſe Statutes, and all the Poteſtates, Conſuls, Governors and Counſellors of Places, where ſuch Statutes or Cuſtoms ſhall be made or kept; and alſo thoſe that ſhall preſume to give Judgment according to them, or ſhall notify in publick Form the Matter ſo adjudged.

Now by theſe Laws, if the Biſhop of Rome's Authority, which he claimeth by God, be lawful, all your Grace's Laws and Cuſtoms of your Realm, being contrary to the Pope's Laws, be naught, and as well your Majeſty, as your Judges, Juſtices, and all other Executors of the ſame, ſtand accurſed amongſt Hereticks, which God forbid. And yet this Curſe can never be avoided (if the Pope hath ſuch Power as he claimeth) until ſuch Times as the Laws and Cuſtoms of this Realm (being contrary to his Laws) be taken away and blotted out of the Law-Books. And although there be many Laws of this Realm contrary to the Laws of Rome, yet I named but a few; as to convict a Clerk before any temporal Judge of this Realm for Debt, Felony, Murder, or for any other Crime; which Clerks by the Pope's Laws are ſo exempt from the King's Laws, that they can be no where ſued, but before their Ordinary.

Alſo the Pope by his Laws may give all Biſhopricks and Benefices ſpiritual; which by the Laws of this Realm can be given but only by the King and other Patrons of the ſame, except they fall into the Lapſe.

By the Pope's Laws, Jus patronatus ſhall be ſued only before the eccleſiaſtical Judge; but by the Laws of the Realm it ſhall be ſued before the temporal Judge.

And to be ſhort, the Laws of this Realm do agree with the Pope's Laws like Fire and Water. And yet the Kings of this Realm have provided for their Laws by the Premunire; ſo that if any Man have let the Execution of the Laws of this Realm by any Authority from the See of Rome, he falleth into the Premunire.

But to meet with this, the Popes have provided for their Laws by Curſing. For whoſoever hindereth the Pope's Laws to have full Courſe within this Realm, by the Pope's Power ſtandeth accurſed; ſo that the Pope's Power treadeth all the Laws and Cuſtoms of this Realm under his Feet, curſing all that execute them, until ſuch Time as they do give Place unto his Laws.

But it may be ſaid, that notwithſtanding all the Pope's Decrees, yet we do ſtill execute the Laws and Cuſtoms of this Realm. Nay, not all quietly without Interruption of the Pope. And where we do execute them, yet we do it unjuſtly, if the Pope's Power be of Force, and for the ſame we ſtand excommunicate, and ſhall do until we leave the Execution of our own Laws and Cuſtoms. Thus we be well reconciled to Rome allowing ſuch Authority, whereby the Realm ſtandeth accurſed before God, if the Pope have any ſuch Authority. Mark this well.

Theſe Things (as I ſuppoſe) were not fully opened in the Parliament Houſe, when the Pope's Authority was received again within this Realm; for if they had, I do not believe that either the King or Queen's Majesty, or the Nobles of this Realm, or the Commons of the same would ever have consented to receive again such a foreign Authority, so injurious, hurtful, and prejudicial as well to the Crown as to the Laws and Customs and State of this Realm, as whereby they must needs acknowledge themselves to be accursed. * But none could open this Matter well but the Clergy, and such of them as had read the Pope's Laws, whereby the Pope had made himself as it were a God. These seek to maintain the Pope whom they desired to have their chief Head, to the Intent they might have as it were a Kingdom and Laws within themselves, distinct from the Laws of the Crown, and wherewith the Crown may not meddle; and so being exempted from the Laws of the Realm, might live in this Realm like Lords and Kings, without Damage or Fear of any Man, so that they please their High and Supreme Head, at Rome. For this Consideration, (I think) some that knew the Truth, held their Peace in the Parliament, whereas if they had done their Duties to the Crown and whole Realm, they should have opened their Mouths, declared the Truth, and shewed the Perils and Dangers that might ensue to the Crown and Realm.

* The Clergy's Duty in the Parliament.

And if I should agree to allow such Authority within this Realm, whereby I must needs confess, that your most gracious Highness, and also your Realm should ever continue accursed, until ye shall cease from the Execution of your own Laws and Customs of your Realm; I could not think myself true either to your Highness, or to this my natural Country, knowing that I do know. Ignorance, I know, may excuse other Men; but he that knoweth how prejudicial and injurious the Power and Authority which he challengeth every where, is to the Crown-laws and Customs of this Realm, and yet will allow the same, I cannot see in any wise how he can keep his due Allegiance, Fidelity, and Truth to the Crown and State of this Realm.

Another Cause I alledged, why I could not allow the Authority of the Pope, which is this; That by his Authority he subverteth not only the Laws of this Realm, but also the Laws of God: So that whosoever be under his Authority, he suffereth them not to be under Christ's Religion purely, as Christ did command.

And for one Example I brought forth, that whereas by God's Laws all christian People be bounden diligently to learn his Word, that they may know how to believe and live accordingly, for that Purpose he ordained Holy-days, when they ought, leaving apart all other Business to give themselves wholly to know and serve God. Therefore God's Will and Commandment is, that when the People be gathered together, Ministers should use such Language as the People may understand and take Profit thereby, or else hold their Peace. For as an Harp or Lute, if it be given no certain Sound that Men may know what is stricken, who can dance after it? for all the Sound is in vain. So is it in vain, and profiteth nothing, saith Almighty God by the Mouth of St. Paul, if the Priest speak to the People in a Language which they know not; For else he may profit himself, but profiteth not the People, saith St. Paul. But herein I was answered thus; that St. Paul spake only of Preaching, that the Preacher should preach in a Tongue which the People did know, or else his Preaching availeth nothing: But if the Preaching availeth nothing, being spoke in a Language which the People understand not, how should any other Service avail them, being spoken in the same Language?

Why Latin Service ought not to be restored in England.

And yet that St. Paul meant not only of Preaching, it appeareth plainly by his own Words. For he speaketh by Name expresly of praying, singing, and thanking of God, and of all other Things which the Priests say in the Churches, whereunto the People say Amen; which they use not in Preaching, but in other Divine Service; that whether the Priests rehearse the wonderful Works of God, or the great Benefits of God unto Mankind above all other Creatures, or give Thanks unto God, or make open Profession of their Faith, or humble Confession of their Sins, with earnest Request of Mercy and Forgiveness, or make Suit or Request unto God for any Thing; then all the People understanding what the Priests say, might give their Minds and Voices with them, and say, Amen, that is to say, allow what the Priests say; that the Rehearsal of God's universal Works and Benefits, the Giving of Thanks, the Profession of Faith, the Confession of Sins, and the Requests and Petitions of the Priests and of the People, might ascend up into the Ears of God altogether, and be as a sweet Savour, Odour, and Incense in his Nose; and thus it was used many hundred Years after Christ's Ascension. Anno 1556.

But the aforesaid Things cannot be done when the Priests speak to the People in a Language not known, and so they (or their Clerk in their Name) say Amen, but they cannot tell whereunto. Whereas St. Paul saith, How can the People say Amen to thy Well-saying, when they understand not what thou sayest? And thus was St. Paul understood by all Interpreters, both the Greeks and Latins, old and new, School-Authors and others that I have read, until above thirty Years past. At which Time one Eckius, with others of his Sort, began to devise a new Exposition, understanding St. Paul of Preaching only.

But when a good Number of the best learned Men reputed within this Realm, some favouring the old, some the new Learning, as they term it, (where indeed that which they call the old is the new, and that which they call the new is indeed the old) but when a great Number of such learned Men of both Sorts, were gathered together at Windsor for the Reformation of the Service of the Church, it was agreed by both, without Controversy (not one saying contrary) that the Service of the Church ought to be in the Mother Tongue; and that St. Paul in the fourteenth Chapter to the Corinthians was so to be understood. And so is St. Paul to be understood in the civil Law, more than a thousand Years past, where Justinian, a most godly Emperor, in a Synod writeth on this Manner: We command that all Bishops and Priests celebrate the holy Oblation and Prayer used in holy Baptism, not after a still and close Manner, but with a clear loud Voice, that they may be plainly heard by the faithful People, so as the Hearers Minds may be lifted up thereby with the greater Devotion, in uttering the Praises of the Lord God. For so Paul teacheth also in the Epistle to the Corinthians, If the Spirit do only bless (or say well) how shall he that occupieth the Place of a private Person say Amen, to thy Thanksgiving? For he perceiveth not what thou sayest: Thou dost give Thanks well, but the other is not edified. And not only the civil Law, and all other Writers a Thousand and five Hundred Years continually together have expounded St. Paul not of Preaching only, but of other Service said in the Church; but also Reason giveth the same, that if Men be commanded to hear any Thing, it must be spoken in a Language which the Hearer understand, or else (as St. Paul saith) what what availeth it to hear? So that the Pope giving a contrary Commandment, that the People coming to the Church shall hear they know not what, and shall answer they know not whereto; taketh upon him to command, not only against Reason, but also directly against God.

This Agreement was made Anno 1549.

Anno 1556.

The Sacrament ought to be received in both Kinds.

And again I said, whereas our Saviour Christ ordained the Sacrament of his most precious Body and Blood to be received by all Christian People under the Forms of Bread and Wine, and said of the Cup, Drink ye all of this; the Pope giveth a clean contrary Commandment, that no Layman shall drink of the Cup of their Salvation; as tho' the Cup of Salvation by the Blood of Christ pertained not to Laymen. And whereas Theophilus Alexandrinus (whose Works St. Jerom did translate about eleven hundred Years past) saith, That if Christ had been crucified for the Devils, his Cup should not be denied them; yet the Pope denieth the Cup of Christ to christian People, for whom Christ was crucified. So that if I should obey the Pope in these Things, I must needs disobey my Saviour Christ.

The Excuse of the Papists why they take away the Cup.

But I was answered hereunto (as commonly the Papists do answer) that under the Form of Bread is whole Christ's Flesh and Blood: So that whosoever receiveth the Form of Bread, receiveth as well Christ's Blood as his Flesh. Let it be so, yet in the Form of Bread only, Christ's Blood is not drunk, but eaten; nor is it received in the Cup in the Form of Wine, as Christ commanded, but eaten with the Flesh under the Form of Bread. And moreover, the Bread is not the Sacrament of his Blood, but of his Flesh only; nor is the Cup the Sacrament of his Flesh, but of his Blood only. And so the Pope keepeth from all Lay-persons, the Sacrament of their Redemption by Christ's Blood, which Christ commandeth to be given unto them.

And furthermore, Christ ordained the Sacrament in two Kinds, the one separated from the other, to be a Representation of his Death, where his Blood was separated from his Flesh, which is not represented in one Kind alone: So that the Lay-people receive not the whole Sacrament whereby Christ's Death is represented as he commanded.

Moreover, as the Pope taketh upon him to give the temporal Sword, by royal and imperial Power, to Kings and Princes: So doth he likewise take upon him to depose them from their imperial States, if they be disobedient to him, and commandeth the Subjects to disobey their Princes, assoyling the Subjects as well of their Obedience, as of their lawful Oaths made unto their true Kings and Princes, directly contrary to God's Commandment, who commandeth all Subjects to obey their Kings, or their Rulers under them.

One John, Patriarch of Constantinople, in the Time of St. Gregory, claimed Superiority above all other Bishops. To whom St. Gregory writeth, that therein he did Injury to his three Brethren, which were equal with him, that is to say, the Bishop of Rome, the Bishop of Alexandria, and of Antioch: Which three were patriarchal Sees, as well as Constantinople, and were Brethren one to another. But (saith St. Gregory) if any one shall exalt himself above all the rest, to be the universal Bishop, the same passeth in Pride. But now the Bishop of Rome exalteth himself not only above all Kings and Emperors, and above all the whole World, but takes upon him to give and take away, to set up and pull down as he shall think good. And as the Devil having no such Authority, yet took upon him to give unto Christ all the Kingdoms of the World, if he would fall down and worship him: In like Manner the Pope taketh upon him to give Empires and Kingdoms being none of his, to such as will fall down and worship him, and kiss his Feet.

Note the Saying of Gregory.

The Devil and the Pope are alike.

And moreover, his Lawyers and Glossers so flatter him, that they feign he may command Emperors and Kings to hold his Stirrop when he alighteth from his Horse, and to be his Footmen: And that if any Emperor or King give him any Thing, they give him nothing but what is his own, and that he may dispense against God's Word, against both the Old and New Testament, against St. Paul's Epistles, and against the Gospel. And furthermore, whatsoever he doth, although he draw innumerable People by Heaps with himself into Hell, yet may not mortal Man reprove him, because he being Judge of all Men, may be judged of no Man. And thus he sitteth in the Temple of God as if he were a God, and nameth himself God's Vicar, and yet he dispenseth against God. If this be not to play Antichrist's Part, I cannot tell what is Antichrist, which is no more to say, but Christ's Enemy and Adversary; who shall sit in the Temple of God advancing himself above all other, yet by Hypocrisy and feigned Religion, shall subvert the true Religion of Christ, and under Pretence and Colour of Christ's Religion shall work against Christ, and therefore hath the Name of Antichrist. Now if any Man lift himself higher than the Pope hath done, who lifteth himself above all the World; or can be more Adversary to Christ, than to dispense against God's Laws; and where Christ hath given any Commandment, to command directly the contrary, that Man must needs be taken for Antichrist. But until the Time that such a Person may be found, Men may easily conjecture where to find Antichrist.

Emperors and Kings made the Pope's Footmen.

Wherefore seeing the Pope thus to overthrow both God's Laws and Mans Laws, taketh upon him to make Emperors and Kings to be Vassals and Subjects unto him, especially the Crown of this Realm, with the Laws and Customs of the same, I see no mean how I may consent to admit his usurped Power within this Realm, contrary to mine Oath, mine Obedience to God's Laws, mine Allegiance and Duty to your Majesty, and my Love and Affection to this Realm.

Note this Conclusion.

This that I have spoken against the Power and Authority of the Pope, I have not spoken (I take God to record and judge) for any Malice I owe to the Pope's Person, whom I know not, but I shall pray to God to give him Grace, that he may seek above all Things to promote God's Honour and Glory, and not to follow the Trade of his Predecessors in these latter Days.

Nor have I spoken it for fear of Punishment, and to avoid the same, thinking it rather an Occasion to aggravate than to diminish my Trouble; but I have spoken it for my most bounden Duty to the Crown, Liberties, Laws, and Customs of this Realm of England, but most especially to discharge my Conscience in uttering the Truth to God's Glory, casting away all Fear by the Comfort which I have in Christ, who saith, Matth. 10. Fear not them that kill the Body, and cannot kill the Soul, but fear them that can cast both Body and Soul into Hell-fire. He that for fear to lose this Life will forsake the Truth, shall lose the Life everlasting: And he that for the Truth's sake will spend his Life, shall find everlasting Life. And Christ promiseth to stand fast with them before his Father, which will stand fast with him here. Which Comfort is so great, that whosoever hath his Eyes fixed upon Christ, cannot greatly pass on this Life, knowing that he may be sure to have Christ stand by him in the Presence of his Father in Heaven.

And as touching the Sacrament, I said; Forasmuch as the whole Matter standeth in the Understanding of these Words of Christ, This is my Body, This is my Blood; I said, that Christ in these Words made Demonstration of the Bread and Wine, and spake figuratively, calling Bread his Body, and Wine his Blood, because he ordained them to be Sacraments of his Body and Blood. And where the Papists say in those two Points contrary unto me, that Christ called not Bread his Body, but a Substance uncertain, nor spake figuratively: Herein I said I would be judged by the old Church, and which Doctrine could be proved the elder, that I would stand unto. And forasmuch as I have alledged in my Book many old Authors, both Greeks and Latins, which above a thousand Years after Christ continually taught as I do: If they could bring forth but one old Author, that saith in these two Points as they say, I offered six or seven Years ago, and do offer yet still, that I will give Place unto them.

But when I bring forth any Author that saith in most plain Terms as I do, yet saith the other Part, that the Authors meant not so; as who should say, that the Authors spake one Thing and meant clean contrary. And upon the other Part, when they cannot find any one Author, that saith in Words as they say; yet say they, that the Authors meant as they say. Now, whether I or they speak more to the Purpose herein, I refer me to the Judgment of all impartial Hearers; yea, the old Church of Rome, above a thousand Years together, neither believed nor used the Sacrament, as the Church of Rome hath done of late Years.

For in the Beginning, the Church of Rome taught a pure and a sound Doctrine of the Sacrament. But after that the Church of Rome fell into a new Doctrine of Transubstantiation; with the Doctrine they changed the Use of the Sacrament contrary to that Christ commanded, and the old Church of Rome used above a thousand Years. And yet to deface the Old, they say that the New is the Old: Wherein for my Part I am content to stand to the Trial. But their Doctrine is so foolish and uncomfortable, that I marvel that any Man would allow it, if he knew what it was. But howsoever they bear the People in Hand, that which they write in their Books hath neither Truth nor Comfort.

Mark the Errors of the Papists in their Doctrine of the Sacrament.

For by their Doctrine, of one Body of Christ is made two Bodies: One natural having distance of Members, with Form and Proportion of Man's perfect Body, and this Body is in Heaven: But the Body of Christ in the Sacrament, by their own Doctrine, must needs be a monstrous Body, having neither distance of Members nor Form, Fashion or Proportion of a Man's natural Body. And such a Body is in the Sacrament (teach they) and goeth into the Mouth with the Form of Bread, and entereth no farther than the Form of Bread goeth, and tarrieth no longer than the Form of Bread is by natural Heat in digesting. So that when the Form of Bread is digested, that Body of Christ is gone. And forasmuch as evil Men be as long in digesting as good Men, the Body of Christ (by their Doctrine) entereth as far, and tarrieth as long in wicked Men as in godly Men. And what Comfort can be herein to any christian Man, to receive Christ's unshapen Body, and it to enter no further than the Stomach, and to depart by and by as soon as the Bread is consumed?

It seemeth to me a more sound and comfortable Doctrine, that Christ hath but one Body, and that hath Form and Fashion of a Man's true Body; which Body spiritually entereth into the whole Man, Body and Soul: And though the Sacrament be consumed, yet whole Christ remaineth, and feedeth the Receiver unto eternal Life, if he continue in Godliness, and never departeth until the Receiver forsake him. And as for the wicked, they have not Christ within them at all, who cannot be where Belial is. And this is my Faith, and (as me seemeth) a sound Doctrine, according to God's Word, and sufficient for a Christian to believe in that Matter. And if it can be shewed unto me, that the Pope's Authority is not prejudicial to the Things before mentioned, or that my Doctrine in the Sacrament is erroneous (which I think cannot be shewed) then I never was nor will be so perverse to stand wilfully in mine own Opinion, but I shall with all Humility submit myself unto the Pope, not only to kiss his Feet, but another Part also. Anno 1556.

Another Cause why I refused to take the Bishop of Gloucester for my Judge, was in Respect of his own Person, being more than once perjured. First, for that he being divers Times sworn never to consent that the Bishop of Rome should have any Jurisdiction within this Realm, but to take the King and his Successors for supreme Heads of this Realm, as by God's Laws they be; contrary to that lawful Oath the said Bishop sat then in Judgment by Authority from Rome, wherein he was perjured, and not worthy to sit as Judge.

The second Perjury was, that he took his Bishoprick both of the Queen's Majesty and of the Pope, making to each of them a solemn Oath, which Oath be so contrary that the one must needs be perjured. And furthermore in swearing to the Pope to maintain his Laws, Decrees, Constitutions, Ordinances, Reservations, and Provisions, he declareth himself an Enemy to the imperial Crown, and to the Laws and State of this Realm, whereby he declareth himself not worthy to sit as a Judge within this Realm. And for these Considerations I refused to take him for my Judge.

Part of another Letter to the Queen.

I Learned by Dr. Martin, that at the Day of your Majesty's Coronation, you took an Oath of Obedience to the Pope of Rome, and the same Time you took another Oath to this Realm, to maintain the Laws, Liberties, and Customs of the same. And if your Majesty did make an Oath to the Pope, I think it was according to the other Oaths which he useth to administer to Princes; which is, to be obedient to him, to defend his Person, to maintain his Authority, Honour, Laws, Lands and Privileges. And if it be so (which I know not but by Report) then I beseech your Majesty to look upon your Oath made to the Crown and Realm, and to expend and weigh the two Oaths together, to see how they do agree, and then do as your Grace's Conscience shall give you: For I am surely persuaded, that willingly your Majesty will not offend, nor do against your Conscience for any Thing.

But I fear that there be Contradictions in your Oaths, and that those which should have informed your Grace thoroughly, did not their Duties therein. And if your Majesty ponder the two Oaths diligently, I think you shall perceive you were deceived; and then your Highness may use the Matter as God shall put in your Heart. Furthermore, I am kept here from Company of learned Men, from Books, from Counsel, from Pen and Ink, except at this Time to write unto your Majesty, which all were necessary for a Man being in my Case. Wherefore I beseech your Majesty, that I may have such of these as may stand with your Majesty's Pleasure. And as for my Appearance at Rome, if your Majesty will give me Leave, I will appear there. And I trust that God shall put in my Mouth to defend ſend his Truth there, as well as here. But I refer it wholly your Majeſty's Pleaſure.

Another Letter of the Archbiſhop's to Dr. Martin and Dr. Story.

I Have me commended unto you. And as I promiſed, I have ſent my Letters unto the Queen's Majeſty unſigned, praying you to ſign them, and deliver them with all Speed. I might have ſent them by the Carrier ſooner, but not ſurer. But hearing Mr. Bayliff ſay, that he will go to the Court on Friday, I thought him a meet Meſſenger to ſend my Letters by. For better is later and ſurer, than ſooner and never to be delivered. Yet one Thing I have written to the Queen's Majeſty incloſed and ſealed; which I require you may be ſo delivered without Delay, and not be opened until it be delivered unto her Grace's own Hands. I have written all that I remember I ſaid, except that which I ſpake againſt the Biſhop of Glouceſter's own Perſon, which I thought not meet to write. And in ſome Places I have written more than I ſaid, which I would have anſwered to the Biſhop, if you would have ſuffered me.

You promiſed I ſhould ſee mine Anſwers to the ſixteen Articles, that I might correct, amend, and change them where I thought good, which your Promiſe you kept not. And mine Anſwer was not made upon mine Oath, nor repeated, nor made in Judicio, but extra Judicium, as I proteſted; nor to the Biſhop of Glouceſter as Judge, but to you the King's and Queen's Proctors. I truſt you deal ſincerely with me without Fraud or Craft, and uſe me as you would wiſh to be in like Caſe yourſelves. Remember, that what meaſure you mete, the ſame ſhall be meaſured to you again. Thus fare you well, and God ſend you his Spirit to induce you into Truth.

Ye have heard how Archbiſhop Cranmer in the Month of February was cited up to Rome, and in the Month of March next following was degraded by the Biſhop of Ely and Biſhop Bonner. In Time of which his Degradation he put up his Appellation.

In this his Appellation, becauſe he needed the Help of ſome good Lawyer, he writeth to a Friend of his about the ſame: The Copy of which Letter I thought good here to inſert as followeth.

A Letter of Archbiſhop Cranmer to a Lawyer, for the drawing out of his Appeal.

THE Law of Nature requireth of all Men, that ſo far forth as it may be done without Offence to God, every one ſhould ſeek to defend and preſerve his own Life. Which Thing when I about three Days ago bethought myſelf of, and therewithal remembered how that Martin Luther appealed in his Time from Pope Leo the Tenth to a general Council (leſt I ſhould ſeem raſhly and unadviſedly to caſt away myſelf) I determined to appeal in like Sort to ſome lawful and free general Council. But ſeeing the Order and Form of an Appeal pertaineth to the Lawyers, whereof I myſelf am ignorant, and ſeeing that Luther's Appeal cometh not to my Hand, I purpoſed to break my Mind in this Matter to ſome faithful Friend, and ſkilful in the Law, whoſe Help I might uſe in this Behalf, and you only among others came to my Remembrance, as a Man moſt meet in this Univerſity for my Purpoſe. But this is a Matter that requireth great ſilence, ſo that no Man know of it before it be done. It is ſo that I am ſummoned to make mine Anſwer at Rome, the 16th Day of this Month, before which Day I think it good after Sentence pronounced, to make mine Appeal. But whether I ſhould firſt appeal from the Judge Delegate to the Pope, and ſo afterward to the general Council, or elſe leaving the Pope, I ſhould appeal immediately to the Council, herein I ſtand in need of your Counſel.

Many Cauſes there be for which I think good to appeal. Firſt, becauſe I am by an Oath bound never to conſent to the receiving of the Biſhop of Rome's Authority into this Realm. Beſides this, whereas I utterly refuſed to make anſwer to the Articles objected unto me by the Biſhop of Glouceſter, appointed by the Pope to be my Judge, yet I was content to anſwer Martin and Story with this Proteſtation, that mine Anſwer ſhould not be taken as made before a Judge, nor yet in place of Judgment, but as pertaining nothing to Judgment at all: Moreover, after I had made mine Anſwer, I required to have a Copy of the ſame, that I might either by adding thereunto, or by altering or taking from it, correct and amend it as I thought good: Which, though both the Biſhop of Glouceſter, and alſo the King and the Queen's Proctors promiſed me, yet have they altogether broken Promiſe with me, and have not permitted me to correct my ſaid Anſwers according to my Requeſt; and yet notwithſtanding have (as I underſtand) regiſtred the ſame as Acts formally done in place of Judgment.

Finally, foraſmuch as all this my Trouble cometh upon my departing from the Biſhop of Rome, and from the popiſh Religion, ſo that now the Quarrel is betwixt the Pope himſelf and me, and no Man can be a lawful and indifferent Judge in his own Cauſe; it ſeemeth (methinks) good Reaſon, that I ſhould be ſuffered to appear to ſome general Council in this Matter; eſpecially ſeeing the Law of Nature (as they ſay) denieth no Man the Remedy of Appeal in ſuch Caſes.

Now, ſince it is very requiſite that this Matter ſhould be kept as cloſe as may be, if perhaps for lack of perfect Skill herein you ſhall have need of further Advice; then I beſeech you even for the Fidelity and Love you bear to me in Chriſt, that you will open to no Creature alive whoſe the Caſe is. And foraſmuch as the Time is now at Hand, and the Matter requireth great Expedition, let me obtain thus much of you, I beſeech you, that laying aſide all other your Studies and Buſineſs for the Time, you will apply this my Matter only, till you have brought it to paſs. The chiefeſt Cauſe in very Deed (to tell you the Truth) of this mine Appeal is, that I might gain Time (if it ſhall ſo pleaſe God) to live until I have finiſhed mine Anſwer againſt Marcus Antonius Conſtantius, which I have now in Hand. But if the Adverſaries of the Truth will not admit mine Appeal, as I fear they will not, God's Will be done; I paſs not upon it, ſo that God may therein be glorified, be it by my Life, or by my Death. For it is much better for me to die in Chriſt's Quarrel, and to reign with him, than here to be ſhut up and kept in the Priſon of this Body, unleſs it were to continue yet ſtill a while in this Warfare, for the Advantage and Profit of my Brethren, and to the further advancing of God's Glory. To whom be all Glory for evermore, Amen.

This Conſtantius was Stephen Gardiner, as conſtant indeed as a Weather-cock, who thus named himſelf, writing againſt this good Archbiſhop.

There is alſo yet another Cauſe why I think good to appeal, that whereas I am cited to go to Rome to anſwer there for myſelf, I am notwithſtanding kept here faſt in Priſon, that I cannot there appear at the Time appointed: And moreover, foraſmuch as the State I ſtand in is a Matter of Life and Death, ſo that I have great need of learned Counſel for my Defence in this Behalf; yet when I made my earneſt Requeſt for the ſame, all Manner of Counſel, and Help of Proctors, Advocates and Lawyers was utterly denied me.

Your loving Friend,

Thomas Cranmer.

Another Letter of Archbiſhop Cranmer to Mrs. Wilkinſon, exhorting her to fly in the Time of Perſecution.

THE true Comforter in all Diſtreſs is only God, through his Son Jeſus Chriſt; and whoſoever hath him, hath Company enough if he were in a Wilderneſs all alone: And he that hath twenty thouſand in his Company, if God be abſent, is in a miſerable Wilderneſs and Deſolation. In him is all Comfort, and without him is none. Wherefore I beſeech you ſeek your dwelling there where you may truly and rightly ſerve God, and dwell in him, and have him ever dwelling in you. What can be ſo heavy a Burden as an unquiet Conſcience, to be in ſuch a Place as a Man cannot be ſuffered to ſerve God in Chriſt's Religion? If you be loth to depart from your Kindred and Friends, remember that Chriſt calleth them his Mother, Siſters and Brothers, that do his Father's Will. Where we Matth. 3. find therefore God truly honoured according to his Will, there we can lack neither Friend nor Kindred.

If you be loth to depart for the Slander of God's Word, remember that Chriſt, when his Hour was John 4. not yet come, departed out of his Country into Samaria, to avoid the Malice of the Scribes and Matth. 5. Phariſees; and commanded his Apoſtles that if they were purſued in one Place they ſhould fly to another.
2 Cor. 12. And was not Paul let down by a Baſket out at a Window, to avoid the Perſecution of Aretas? And what Wiſdom and Policy he uſed from Time to Time to eſcape the Malice of his Enemies, the Acts of the Apoſtles do declare. And after the ſame ſort did the other Apoſtles, albeit, when it came to ſuch a Point, that they could no longer eſcape Danger of the Perſecutors of God's true Religion, then they ſhewed themſelves, that they flying before came not of Fear, but of godly Wiſdom to do more good; and that they would not raſhly without urgent Neceſſity offer themſelves to Death, which had been but a Temptation of God. Yea, when they were apprehended, and could no longer avoid then they ſtood boldly to the Profeſſion of Chriſt; then they ſhewed how little they paſſed of Death; how much they feared God more than Men; how much they loved and preferred the eternal Life to come above this ſhort and miſerable Life.

Wherefore I exhort you as well by Chriſt's Commandment, as by the Example of him and his Apoſtles, to withdraw yourſelf from the Malice of yours and God's Enemies, into ſome Place where God is moſt purely ſerved; which is no ſlandering of the Truth, but a preſerving of yourſelf to God, and the Truth, and to the Society and Comfort of Chriſt's little Flock. And that you will do, do it with Speed, leſt by your own Folly you fall into the Perſecutors Hands. And the Lord ſend his Holy Spirit to lead and guide you whereſoever you go, and all that be godly will ſay, Amen.

Unto theſe former Letters of Dr. Cranmer Archbiſhop, written by him unto others, it ſeemeth to me not much out of Place to annex withal a certain Letter alſo of Dr. Taylor, written to him and his fellow Priſoners: The Tenor of which Letter here followeth.

To my dear Fathers and Brethren, Dr. Cranmer, Dr. Ridley, and Mr. Latimer, Priſoners in Oxford for the faithful Teſtimony of God's holy Word.

RIght reverend Fathers in the Lord, I wiſh you to enjoy continually God's Grace and Peace through Jeſus Chriſt; and God be praiſed again for this your moſt excellent Promotion which ye are called unto at this preſent, that is, that ye are counted worthy to be allowed amongſt the Number of Chriſt's Records and Witneſſes. England hath had but a few learned Biſhops, that would ſtick to Chriſt * ad ignem incluſive. Once again I thank God heartily in Chriſt for your moſt happy Onſet, moſt valiant proceeding, moſt conſtant ſuffering of all ſuch Infamies, Hiſſings, Clappings, Taunts, open Rebukes, Loſs of Living and Liberty, for the Defence of God's Cauſe, Truth and Glory, I cannot utter with Pen how I rejoice in my Heart for you three ſuch Captains in the foreward under Chriſt's Croſs, Banner or Standard, in ſuch a Cauſe and Skirmiſh, when not only one or two of our dear Redeemer's ſtrong Holds are beſieged, but all his chief Caſtles ordained for our Safeguard, are traiterouſly impugned. This your Enterprize in the Sight of all that be in Heaven, and of all God's People in Earth, is moſt pleaſant to behold. This is another Manner of Nobility than to be in the Fore-front in worldly Warfares. For God's ſake pray for us, for we fail not daily to pray for you. We are ſtronger and ſtronger in the Lord, his Name be praiſed, and we doubt not but ye be ſo in Chriſt's own ſweet School. Heaven is all and wholly of our Side; therefore, Rejoyce always in the Lord: And again, Rejoyce and be glad.

* Many profeſs God Ad ignem excluſive, that is, in Words and outward Profeſſion: But few ſtick to him Ad ignem incluſive, that is, in Deed and Suffering for his Sake.

Your aſſured in Chriſt,

Rowland Taylor.

On the Recantation of Archbiſhop Cranmer, while in Priſon.

HOW near, great Cranmer, had thy Footſteps fail'd,
But thou'rt recover'd with a ſteddier Pace:
Thy Fall to thy ſure Goings much avail'd,
And brought thee more into thy Saviour's Grace.
Denying makes thee bolder own thy Cauſe;
So Good from Evil oft th'Almighty draws.

Beſides 'tis lawful Fraud 'gainſt Fraud to uſe,
Since the falſe popiſh Tribe (we always find)
Endeavour ſtrongly others to abuſe. [Kind.
They're now but juſtly ſerv'd in their own
This pious Fraud then let us boldly own,
And give the Glory unto God alone.

On

Anno 1556.

On his Death.

UNhappy's he wh' offends his God, howe'er
His outward Bleſſings to the World appear,
But he who ſerves him's happy, tho' forlorn,
Tho' doom'd to Death and univerſal Scorn.
This, Cranmer, was thy Fate, unhappy made,
By the too flatt'ring Love of Life betray'd.
But, to that Trifle, when you Death preferr'd,
Eternal Happineſs was your Reward.

Agnes Potten, and Joan Trunchfield, Martyrs, perſecuted in Suffolk.

IN the Story of Robert Samuel, mention was made before of two pious Women of the ſame Town of Ipſwich, who ſhortly after him ſuffered likewiſe, and obtained the Crown of Martyrdom; the Names of whom was Agnes, Wife of Robert Potten; and another, Wife of Michael Trunchfield, a Shoemaker, both dwelling in one Town; who, about the ſame Time that the Archbiſhop aforeſaid was burnt at Oxford, ſuffered likewiſe in the aforeſaid Town of Ipſwich, either in the ſame Month of March, or (as ſome ſay) in the End of February before.

Their Opinion or Perſuaſion was this, that in the Sacrament was the Memorial only of Chriſt's Death and Paſſion: For (ſaid they) Jeſus Chriſt is aſcended up into Heaven, and is on the Right-Hand of God the Father, according to the Scriptures, and not in the Sacrament, as he was born of the Virgin Mary.

For this they were burnt. In whoſe Suffering their Conſtancy worthily was to be wonder'd at, who being ſo ſimple Women, ſo manfully ſtood to the Confeſſion and Teſtimony of God's Word and Verity; inſomuch, that when they had prepared and undreſſed themſelves ready to the Fire, with comfortable Words of the Scripture they earneſtly required the People to credit and lay hold on the Word of God, and not upon Man's Devices and Inventions, deſpiſing the Ordinances and Inſtitutions of the Romiſh Antichriſt, with all his Superſtitions and rotten Religion; and ſo continuing in the Torment of Fire, they held up their Hands and called unto God conſtantly ſo long as Life did endure.

This Potten's Wife, one Night a little before her Death, being aſleep in her Bed, ſaw a bright burning Fire, right up as a Pole, and on the ſide of the Fire ſhe thought there ſtood a Number of Queen Mary's Friends looking on. Then being aſleep, ſhe ſeemed to muſe with herſelf whether her Fire ſhould burn ſo bright or no; and indeed her Suffering was not far unlike to her Dream.

This alſo I thought further to note, how theſe two being always together in Priſon, the one which was Michael's Wife, ſeemed to be nothing ſo ardent and zealous as Potten's Wife was, although (God be thanked) they did both ſtoutly ſtand to the Confeſſion of the Truth; but when the ſaid Michael's Wife came to the Stake, and ſaw nothing but preſent Death before her, ſhe much exceeded the other in Joy and Comfort; albeit both of them did ſo joyfully ſuffer, as it was marvelled at of thoſe who knew them, and did behold their End. And thus theſe two Martyrs ended their Lives with great Triumph: The Lord grant we may do the like. Amen.

The Hiſtory of John Maundrel, William Coberley, and John Spicer, Martyrs, perſecuted in the Dioceſe of Saliſbury.

JOHN Maundrel, was the Son of Robert Maundrel of Rowd in the County of Wilts, Farmer: He was from his Childhood brought up in Husbandry, and when he came to Man's Eſtate, he dwelt in a Village call'd Buchampten, in the Pariſh of Kevel, in the County aforeſaid, where he lived in good Repute with his Wife and Children. After the Scripture was tranſlated into Engliſh by William Tindal, this John Maundrel became a diligent Hearer thereof, and a fervent Embracer of God's true Religion, ſo that he delighted in nothing ſo much, as to hear and ſpeak of God's Word, never being without the New Teſtament about him altho' he could not read himſelf. But when he came into any Company that could read, his Book was always ready, having a very good Memory, ſo that he could recite by heart moſt Places of the New Teſtament; his Life and Converſation being very honeſt and charitable, as his Neighbours are able to teſtify.

So it was, that in the Days of King Henry the Eighth, at which time Dr. Trigonion and Dr. Lee did viſit Abbeys, the ſaid John Maundrel was brought before Dr. Trigonion at an Abbey called Edyngton in Wiltſhire; where he was accuſed that he had ſpoken againſt the holy Water and holy Bread, and ſuch like Ceremonies, and for the ſame did wear a white Sheet, bearing a Candle in his Hand about the Market, in the Town of the Devizes, which is in the ſaid County. Nevertheleſs his Fervency did not abate, but by God's merciful Aſſiſtance he took better hold, as the Sequel thereof did declare.

For in the Days of Queen Mary, when Popery was reſtored again, and God's true Religion put to Silence, the ſaid John Maundrel left his own Houſe and went into Glouceſterſhire, and into the north Part of Wiltſhire, wandering from one to another to ſuch Men as he knew feared God, with whom, as a Servant to keep their Cattle, he there did remain with one John Bridges, or ſome other at Kingſwood; but after a Time he returned to his Country, and there coming to the Devizes to a Friend of his named Anthony Clee, had Talk and Conference with him in a Garden, of returning home to his Houſe.

And when the other exhorted him by the Words of Scripture, to fly from one City to another, he replied again by the Words of the Revelations xxi. of them that be fearful, &c. ſaid, that he muſt needs go home, and ſo did. Where he with Spicer and Coberley uſed at Times to reſort and confer together.

At length upon the Sunday following they agreed together to go to the Pariſh-Church called Kevel, where the ſaid Maundrel and the other two ſeeing the Pariſhioners in the Proceſſion to follow and worſhip the Idol there carried, carried, advertiſed them to leave the ſame, and to return to the living God, namely, ſpeaking to one Robert Barkſdale head Man of the Pariſh, but he took no Regard to their Words.

After this the Vicar came into the Pulpit, who there being about to read his Bead-roll, and to pray for the Souls in Purgatory; the ſaid John Maundrel ſpeaking with an audible Voice, ſaid, that was the Pope's Pinfold, the other two affirming the ſame. After which Words, by Command of the Prieſt, they were had to the Stocks, where they remained till their Service was done, and then were brought before a Juſtice of Peace, and the next Day were all three carried to Salisbury, and preſented before Biſhop Capon, and W. Geffrey being Chancellor of the Dioceſe. By whom they were impriſoned, and oftentimes examined of their Faith in their Houſes, but ſeldom openly. And at the laſt Examination theſe were the Articles which the Chancellor alledged againſt them, being accompanied with the Sheriff of the Shire, Mr. St. Johns, and other popiſh Prieſts in the Pariſh-church of Fiſherton Anger, demanding how they did believe.

They anſwered, as chriſtian Men ſhould and ought to believe: And firſt they ſaid, they believed in God the Father, and in the Son, and in the Holy Ghoſt, the twelve Articles of the Creed, the holy Scripture from the firſt of Geneſis to the laſt of the Revelations.

But that Faith the Chancellor would not allow. Wherefore he poſed them in particular Articles: Firſt, whether they did not believe, that in the Sacrament of the Altar (as he termed it) after the Words of Conſecration ſpoken by the Prieſt at Maſs, there remained no Subſtance of Bread nor Wine, but Chriſt's Body, Fleſh and Blood, as he was born of the Virgin Mary. Whereunto they anſwered negatively, ſaying, that the popiſh Maſs was abominable Idolatry, and injurious to the Blood of Chriſt; but confeſſing, that in a faithful Congregation, receiving the Sacrament of Chriſt's Body and Blood, being duly adminiſtred according to Chriſt's Inſtitution, Chriſt's Body and Blood is ſpiritually received of the faithful Believer.

Alſo, being asked whether the Pope was ſupreme Head of the Church, and Chriſt's Vicar on Earth; they anſwered negatively, ſaying, that the Biſhop of Rome doth uſurp over Emperors and Kings, being Antichriſt, and God's Enemy.

The Chancellor ſaid, Will you have the Church without Head? They anſwered, Chriſt was Head of his Church, and under Chriſt the Queen's Majeſty.

What, ſaid the Chancellor, a Woman Head of the Church? Yea, ſaid they, within her Grace's Dominions.

Alſo, whether the Souls in Purgatory were delivered by the Pope's Pardon, and the Suffrages of the Church?

They ſaid, they believed faithfully that the Blood of Chriſt had purged their Sins, and the Sins of them that were ſaved, unto the End of the World, ſo that they feared nothing the Pope's Purgatory, or eſteemed his Pardons.

Alſo, whether Images were neceſſary to be in the Churches, as Lay-mens Books, and Saints to be prayed unto and worſhipped.

They anſwered negatively, John Maundrel adding, that wooden Images were good to roaſt a Shoulder of Mutton, but evil in the Church; whereby Idolatry was committed.

Anno 1556.

Thoſe Articles thus anſwered (for their Articles were one, and their Anſwers in Manner alike) the Chancellor read their Condemnation, and ſo delivered them to the Sheriff. Then ſpake John Spicer, ſaying, O Maſter Sheriff, now muſt you be their Butcher, that you may be guilty alſo with them of innocent Blood before the Lord. This was the 23d Day of March 1556, and the 24th Day of the ſame Month they were carried out of the common Gaol to a Place betwixt Salisbury and Wilton, where were two Poſts ſet for them to be burnt at. Which Men coming to the Place, kneeled down, and made their Prayers ſecretly together, and then being uncloathed to their Shirts, John Maundrel ſpake with a loud Voice, Not for all Salisbury. Which Words Men judged to be an Anſwer to the Sheriff, who offered him the Queen's Pardon if he would recant. And after that in like Manner ſpake John Spicer, ſaying, This is the joyfulleſt Day that ever I ſaw. Thus were they three burnt at two Stakes; Where moſt conſtantly they gave their Bodies to the Fire, and their Souls to the Lord, for Teſtimony of his Truth.

As touching William Coberly, this moreover is to be noted, that his Wife alſo, called Alice, being apprehended, was detained in the Keeper's Houſe at the ſame Time that her Husband was in Priſon. Where the Keeper's Wife, named Agnes Penicote, had ſecretly heated a Key Fire-hot, and laid it in the Graſs in the Backſide. So ſpeaking to Alice Coberly to fetch her the Key in all Haſte, the ſaid Alice went with Speed to bring the Key, and ſo taking up the Key in haſte did pitiouſly burn her Hand. Whereupon ſhe crying out at the ſudden burning of her Hand, Ah thou Drab, quoth the other, thou that canſt not abide the burning of the Key, how wilt thou be able to abide burning thy whole Body? and ſo ſhe afterward revoked.

But to return again to the Story of Coberly, who being at the Stake, was ſomewhat longer a burning as the Wind ſtood: After his Body was ſcorched with the Fire, and his left Arm drawn and taking from him by the Violence of the Fire, that the Fleſh being burnt to the white Bone, at length he ſtooped over the Chain, and with the right Hand, being ſomewhat ſtarkned, knock'd upon his Breaſt ſoftly, the Blood and Matter iſſuing out of his Mouth. Afterward when they all thought he had been dead, ſuddenly he roſe upright with his Body again. And thus much concerning theſe three Salisbury Martyrs.

A Diſcourſe of the Death of Six other Martyrs ſuffering at London, whoſe Names follow.

ABOUT the 23d Day of April, 1556, were burned in Smithfield at one Fire, theſe ſix conſtant Martyrs of Chriſt, ſuffering for the Profeſſion of the Goſpel, viz.

Anno 1556.

John Cavel, Weaver.
George Ambroſe, Fuller.

They were all of Eſſex, and ſo of the Dioceſe of London, and were ſent up, ſome by the Lord Rich, and ſome by others at ſundry Times, unto Stephen Gardiner Biſhop of Wincheſter, then Lord Chancellor of England, about the 22d Day of March, 1555; who after ſmall Examination, ſent them, ſome unto the King's-Bench, and others unto the Marſhalſea, where they remained almoſt all the whole Year, until the Death of the ſaid Biſhop of Wincheſter, and had during that Time nothing ſaid unto them. Whereupon after that Dr. Heath Archbiſhop of York was choſen to the Office of Lord Chancellor, four of theſe perſecuted Brethren, being now weary of this their long Impriſonment, made their Supplication unto the ſaid Dr. Heath, requiring his Favour and Aid for their Deliverance: The Copy whereof enſueth.

To the Moſt Reverend Father in God, Thomas, Archbiſhop of York, Lord Chancellor of England.

MAY it pleaſe your honourable good Lordſhip, for the Love of God to tender the humble Suit of your Lordſhip's poor Orators, whoſe Names are ſubſcribed, who have lain in great Miſery in the Marſhalſea, for the ſpace of ten Months and more, at the Commandment of the late Lord Chancellor, to their utter Ruin, with their Wives and Children. In Conſideration whereof your Lordſhip's ſaid Orators do moſt humbly pray and beſeech your good Lordſhip to ſuffer them to be brought before your Honour; and there, if any Man of good Conſcience can lay any Thing to our Charge, we truſt either to declare our Innocency againſt their Accuſations, or if otherwiſe their Accuſations can be proved true and we faulty, we are ready (God helping us) with our condign Puniſhments to ſatisfy the Law according to your wiſe Judgment, as we hope, full of fatherly Mercy toward us and all Men, according to your godly Office, and in which we pray for your godly Succeſs to the good Pleaſure of God, Amen.

This Supplication was ſent (as is ſaid) and ſubſcribed with the Names of theſe four under written:

Richard Spurge.
Thomas Spurge.
George Ambroſe.
John Cavel.

Richard Spurge.

UPON the Receipt hereof, it was not long after, but Sir Richard Read, Knt. then one of the Officers of the Court of Chancery, the 16th Day of January, was ſent unto the Marſhalſea to examine the ſaid four Priſoners; and therefore beginning firſt with Richard Spurge upon certain Demands, received his Anſwers thereunto: The Effect whereof was, that he with others were complained upon by the Parſon of Bocking unto the Lord Rich, for not coming to their Pariſh-church of Bocking, where they had inhabited; thereupon was by the ſaid Lord Rich ſent unto the late Lord Chancellor, about the 22d of March laſt, Anno 1555.

And farther, he ſaid, that he came not to the Church ſince the firſt Alteration of the Engliſh Service into Latin (Chriſtmas Day then a Twelvemonth only excepted) and that becauſe he miſliked both the ſame and the Maſs alſo, as not conſonant and agreeing with God's holy Word.

Moreover, he required that he might not be any more examined upon the Matter, unleſs it pleaſed the Lord Chancellor, that then was, to know his Fault therein, which to him he would willingly utter.

Thomas Spurge.

THomas Spurge being then next examined, made the ſame Anſwer in Effect that the other had done; confeſſing, that he abſented himſelf from the Church, becauſe the Word of God was not there truly taught, nor the Sacraments of Chriſt duly adminiſtred in ſuch Sort as was preſcribed by the ſame Word. And being farther examined of his Belief concerning the Sacrament of the Altar, he ſaid, That if any could accuſe him thereof, he would then make Anſwer as God had given him Knowledge therein.

George Ambroſe.

THE like Anſwer made George Ambroſe, adding moreover, that after he had read the late Biſhop of Wincheſter's Book intituled, De vera Obedientia, with Bonner's Preface thereunto annexed, inveighing both againſt the Authority of the Biſhop of Rome, he did ſet much leſs by their Doings than before.

John Cavel.

JOHN CAVEL agreeing in other Matters with them, anſwered, that the Cauſe why he did forbear coming to the Church, was, that the Parſon there had preached two contrary Doctrines. For firſt, in a Sermon that he made at the Queen's firſt entry to the Crown, he did exhort the People to believe the Goſpel; for it was the Truth, and if they did not believe it, they ſhould be damned. But in a ſecond Sermon, he preached that the Teſtament was falſe * in forty Places, which Contrariety in him was a Cauſe, amongſt others, of his abſenting from the Church.

The Parſon of Bocking falſe and contrary to his own Doctrine.

Robert Drakes.

ABout the fourth Day of March next after, Robert Drakes was alſo examined, who was Parſon of Thunderſley in Eſſex, and had there remained for the Space of three Years. He was firſt made Deacon by Dr. Taylor of Hadley, at the Commandment of Dr. Cranmer, late Archbiſhop of Canterbury. And within one Year after (which was the third Year after King Edward) he was by the ſaid Archbiſhop and Dr. Ridley Biſhop of London, admitted Miniſter of God's Holy Word and Sacraments, not after the Order then in force, but after ſuch Order as was after eſtabliſhed; and was preſented unto the ſaid Benefice of Thunderſley by the Lord Rich, at the Suit of Mr. Cauſton and Mr. Treheron; and now notwithſtanding was ſent up by the ſaid Lord Rich, with the others before mentioned: And at his coming to the Biſhop of Wincheſter, was by him demanded whether he could conform himſelf ſelf like a Subject to the Laws of this Realm then in force. To whom he ſaid, he would abide all Laws that ſtood with the Laws of God; and thereupon was committed to Priſon, where he, and the reſt above named did remain ever ſince.

The Hiſtory of William Tyms, Deacon, and Curate of Hockley in Eſſex.

IN the Days of Queen Mary there were two Sermons preach'd in the Woods at Hockley, which Woods belonged to one Mr. Tyrel; one was called Plumborough-wood and the other Beches-wood, and there was at the ſame Sermons an honeſt Man and his Wife, whoſe Name was John Gye, and Servant to Mr. Tyrel at the Farm called Plumborough. Shortly after it was known to Mr. Tyrel that his Woods were polluted with Sermons, which he took very ill, and much Matter did ariſe about it as an unlawful Aſſembly, which was laid to John Gye's Charge, becauſe he did not diſcloſe that unlawful Act to his Maſter, being then in the Commiſſion of the Peace, appointed at that Time to keep down the Goſpel, which he did to the utmoſt, as it may appear by many of his Acts. Good God give him Repentance if it be thy Will.

Soon after Mr. Tyrel came to Hockley to ſift out this Matter, and to know who was at theſe Preachings. Well, there were many faulty; for it is ſuppoſed there were an hundred Perſons at the leaſt. So it pleaſed Mr. Tyrel to begin firſt with John Gye, and asked where that naughty Fellow was that ſerved their Pariſh, one Tyms; for it is told me, ſaid he, that he is the Cauſe to bring theſe naughty Fellows into the Country. Therefore I charge thee, Gye, to fetch me this naughty Fellow Tyms; for thou knoweſt where he is. No, ſaid Gye, I do not know. So in no wiſe could he make him fetch him.

Then ſtepped forth another of Mr. Tyrel's Men, willing to pleaſe his Maſter, whoſe Name was Richard Sheriff, and ſaid to him; Sir, I know where he is. Well, ſaid his Maſter, Go to the Conſtables, and charge them to bring him to me.

So this Richard Sheriff being very diligent, made ſure work, and had him brought by the Conſtables (whoſe Names were Edward Hedge and John James) before his Maſter.

Then Mr. Tyrel commanded all the reſt to depart; and it was wiſely done, for he was not able to open his Mouth againſt Tyms without Reproach; and there he kept him about three Hours. But there were ſome that liſtened at the Walls, and heard Mr. Tyrel ſay thus to Tyms.

Methinketh, ſaid he, when I ſee the bleſſed Rood, it maketh me think of God.

Why Sir, ſaid Tyms, if an Idol that is made with Man's Hands doth make you remember God, how much more ought the Creatures of God, as Man, being his Workmanſhip, or the Graſs, or the Trees that bring forth Fruit, make you remember God?

So Mr. Tyrel ended his Talk with Tyms, as it were in a Heat, calling him a traitorly Knave.

Why Sir, ſaid Tyms, in King Edward's Days you affirmed the Truth that I do now. Anno 1556.

Affirm! quoth Tyrel, nay, by God's Body I never thought it with my Heart.

Well, ſaid Tyms, I pray you Mr. Tyrel bear with me, for I have been a Traitor but a while, but you have been a Traitor ſix Years.

After this Tyms was ſent to London to the Biſhop, and from him to the Biſhop of Wincheſter, and ſo from him to the King's-Bench, and then was Mr. Tyrel's Rage ceaſed with them that were in the Woods at the Sermons. So Mr. Tyrel took away Gye's Coat, and gave it to John Traiford, and ſent him to St. Toſies to ſee good Rule kept there.

When Tyms came before the Biſhop of London, there was at that Time the Biſhop of Bath, and William Tyms was examined of his Faith before them both. So mightily God wrought with this true-hearted Man, that he had therewith to anſwer them both; for the Conſtables ſaid that brought him before the Biſhop, that they never heard the like. Then the Biſhop (as though he would have had Tyms to turn from the Truth) ſaid to the Conſtables, I pray you give him good Counſel, that he may turn from his Error. My Lord, ſaid the Conſtables, he is at a Point, for he will not turn. W. Tyms examined before Biſhop Bonner and the Biſhop of Bath.

Then both the Biſhops began to grow weary of him, for he had troubled them about ſix or ſeven Hours. Then the Biſhops began to pity Tyms's Caſe, and to flatter him, ſaying, Ah good Fellow (ſaid they) thou art bold, and thou haſt a good freſh Spirit, we would thou hadſt Learning to thy Spirit. I thank you, my Lords, ſaid Tyms, and both you be learned, and I would you had a good Spirit to your Learning.

So thus they broke up, and ſent Tyms to the Biſhop of Wincheſter, and there were Edward Hedge and John James the Conſtables aforenamed diſcharged, and Tyms was commanded to the King's-Bench, where he was mightily ſtrengthened with the good Men that he found there.

And thus hitherto ye have heard, firſt upon what Occaſion this Williams Tyms was apprehended, how he was treated by Mr. Tyrel the Juſtice, and by him ſent up to the Ordinary of the Dioceſs, which was Biſhop Bonner; who after ſome Talk and Debating with the ſaid Tyms, at length directed him to the Biſhop of Wincheſter, being then Lord Chancellor, and was commanded by him upon the ſame to the King's-Bench. W. Tyms ſent from Biſhop Bonner to the Biſhop of Wincheſter.

Here by the Way is to be underſtood, that Tyms as he was but a Deacon, ſo he was but ſimply, or at leaſt not prieſtly apparelled, foraſmuch as he went not in a Gown, but in a Coat; and his Hoſe were of two Colours, the upper Part White, and the nether Stocks of Sheeps-ruſſet. Whereupon the Prelate ſending for him to come before him, and ſeeing his ſimple Attire, began to mock him, ſaying, Ah, Sirrah, are you a Deacon? Yes, my Lord, that I am, quoth Tyms. So methinketh, ſaid the Biſhop, ye are decked like a Deacon. My Lord, ſaid Tyms, my Veſture doth not ſo much vary from a Deacon; but methinketh your Apparel doth as much vary from an Apoſtle.

So then there ſpake one of the Biſhop's Gentlemen, My Lord (ſaid he in Mockery) give him a Chair, a Toaſt and Drink, and he will be luſty. But the Biſhop bade to have him away, way, and commanded him to come before him again the next Day at an Hour appointed.

But Winchester, for lack of Leiſure, or becauſe of Sickneſs growing upon him, or for what Cauſe elſe I know not, either would not, or could not attend unto him, but returned him again to his ordinary Biſhop from whence he came. So William Tyms being put off again to Biſhop Bonner, was placed together and coupled with the other five Martyrs abovenamed, and with them brought together to publick Examination before the Biſhop the 21ſt Day of March, firſt in the Biſhop's Palace of London, where the ſaid Biſhop after his accuſtomed Manner proceeding againſt them, enquired of them their Faith upon the Sacrament of the Altar. To whom they anſwered, that the Body of Chriſt was not in the Sacrament of the Altar really and corporally, after the Words of Conſecration ſpoken by the Prieſt: Of which Opinion they had been of long Time, ſome later, ſome ſooner, even as God of his Mercy did call upon them unto the Knowledge of his Goſpel.

R. Drakes, T. Spurge, R. Spurge. Cavel and Ambroſe, examined before the Biſhop of London.

Then the Biſhop's Chaplains began to reaſon with them, but with no great Authorities either of the Scriptures or of the ancient Fathers, as other their large Conferences with the learned do already declare.

Another Examination of Tyms and Drakes, &c. before the Biſhop of London.

THE 23d Day of the ſame Month of March, the Biſhop ſent again for Tyms and Drakes, and Ex Officio, did object unto them certain Articles, the Sum and Manner whereof were the ſame which before were objected to Whittle, Green, Tudſon, &c. And the 26th Day of the ſame Month he ſent for the other Four, adminiſtring to them alſo the ſame general Articles. Unto which they all in Effect anſwered in Matters touching their Faith, as did the ſaid Bartlet Green and the reſt. Other Appearings they had, as the Biſhop's common Manner of Proceeding was more (as I have often ſaid) for Order and Form of Law, than for any Zeal or Juſtice.

But in Concluſion, the 28th Day of the ſaid Month, William Tyms and Robert Drakes, with the other four abovenamed, were brought to the open Conſiſtory in Paul's before the ſaid Biſhop of London to be condemned for Hereſy.

The Biſhop firſt began in this Manner: Tyms, ſaid he, I will begin with thee firſt, for thou art and haſt been the Ringleader of theſe thy Companions, thou haſt taught them Hereſies, and confirmed them in their erroneous Opinions, and haſt endeavoured as much as in thee lieth, to make them like unto thyſelf. If thy Fault had not tended to the Hurt of others, I would then have uſed thee more charitably, and not have brought thee to this open Rebuke. I would according to the Rule of Chriſt in the 18th of Matthew, have told thee thy Fault between me and thee; if thou wouldſt not have heard me, I would not ſo have left thee, but I with two or three others would have exhorted thee; if that would not have ſerved, then would I have told the Church, &c. But for that thy Fault is open and manifeſt to the World, and thou thyſelf remaineſt ſtout in thine Error, this charitable Dealing is not to be extended towards thee: I have therefore thought good to proceed by another Rule, whereof St. Paul ſpeaketh, 1 Tim. 5. Such as ſin, rebuke them openly, that others may fear. For this Cauſe art thou brought before me in the Face of this People, to receive Judgment according to thy Deſerts. Let me hear what thou canſt ſay, why I ſhould not proceed againſt thee as thine Ordinary.

My Lord, quoth Tyms, will you now give me leave to ſpeak? Yea, quoth the Biſhop. Then ſaid Tyms, My Lord, I marvel that you will begin with a Lie. You call me the Ringleader and Teacher of this Company, but how untruly you have ſaid ſhall ſhortly appear: For there is none of all theſe my Brethren, which are brought hither as Priſoners, but when they were at Liberty and out of Priſon, they diſſented from you and your Doings, as much as they do at this preſent; and for that Cauſe they are now Priſoners.

So it is evident, that they learned not their Religion in Priſon. And as for me, I never knew them, until ſuch Time as I by your Commandment was Priſoner with them; how could I then be their Ringleader and Teacher? ſo that all the World may ſee how untruly you have ſpoken. And as for my Fault which you make ſo grievous, whatſoever you judge of me, I am well aſſured that I hold none other Religion than Chriſt preached, the Apoſtles witneſſed, the primitive Church received, and now of late the apoſtolical and evangelical Preachers of this Realm have faithfully taught; for which you have cruelly burnt them, and now you ſeek our Blood alſo. Proceed on hardly by what Rule you will, I care not, I do not refuſe you for mine Ordinary.

Then ſaid the Biſhop, I perceive thou wilt not be counted their Ringleader. How ſaiſt thou, wilt thou ſubmit thyſelf to the catholick Church as an obedient Child? in ſo doing thou ſhalt be received and do well enough, otherwiſe thou ſhalt have Judgment as an Heretick.

Then one of the Priſoners (whoſe Name is not certainly known) ſaid, My Lord, you are no upright Judge, for you judge after your own Luſt. But if you will judge us according to the holy Teſtament of Chriſt, which is the Word of Truth, we will accord to your Judgment; for unto that Word we wholly ſubmit ourſelves. But as for your Judgment without the Truth, God ſhall condemn. This was very earneſtly expreſs'd, inſiſting that they might be judged by the Word of God.

At this the Biſhop was offended, calling him buſy Knave, and commanded him to hold his Tongue, or elſe he ſhould be had away to a Place of ſmaller Eaſe.

Then Tyms anſwered and ſaid, My Lord, I doubt not but I am of the catholick Church, whatſoever you judge of me. But as for your Church, you have before this Day, renounced it, and by corporal Oath, promiſed never to conſent to the ſame. Contrary to which you have received into this Realm the Pope's Authority, and therefore you are falſly perjured and forſworn all the Sort of you. Beſides this, you have both ſpoken and written very earneſtly againſt that uſurped Power, and now you burn Men that will not acknowledge the Pope to be ſupreme Head.

Have I, quoth the Biſhop? where have

I written any Thing againſt the Church of Rome?

My Lord, quoth Tyms, the Biſhop of Wincheſter wrote a very learned Oration, intituled, De vera Obedientia, which containeth worthy Matter againſt the Romiſh Authority: Unto which Book you made a Preface inveighing againſt the Biſhop of Rome, reproving his Tyranny and Falſhood, calling his Power falſe and pretenſed. The Book is extant, and you cannot deny it.

Then was the Biſhop ſomewhat aſhamed, and looking upon thoſe that were preſent, ſpake very gently ſaying, Lo, here is a good Matter indeed. My Lord of Wincheſter being a great learned Man, did write a Book againſt the Supremacy of the Pope's Holineſs, and I alſo did write a Preface before the ſame Book, tending to the ſame Effect. And thus did we becauſe of the perillous World that then was. For then was it made Treaſon by the Laws of this Realm to maintain the Pope's Authority, and great Danger it was to be ſuſpected a Favourer of the See of Rome; and therefore Fear compelled us to comply with the Time, for otherwiſe there had been no Way but one. You know when any uttered his Conſcience in maintaining the Pope's Authority, he ſuffered Death for it.

Bonner took care of his Life in Time of Danger, though againſt his Conſcience, if he had any. If Bonner did not love his Religion ſo as to die for it, theſe pious Men loved Chriſt even unto Death, which at once declared the Goodneſs of their Cauſe and the Sincerity of their Hearts.

And then turning his Tale unto Tyms, he ſaid, But ſince that Time, even ſince the coming in of the Queen's Majeſty, when we might be bold to ſpeak our Conſcience we have acknowledged our Faults, and my Lord of Wincheſter ſhamed not to recant the ſame at Paul's-Croſs. And alſo thou thyſelf ſeeſt that I ſtand not in it, but willingly have ſubmitted myſelf. Do thou alſo as we have done.

My Lord, quoth Tyms, that which you have written againſt the Supremacy of the Pope, may be well approved by the Scriptures. But that which you now do, is againſt the Word of God, as I can well prove.

Then another, I think it was Dr. Cooke, ſaid; Tyms, I pray thee let me talk with thee a little, for I think we two are learned alike. Thou ſpeakeſt much of the Scripture, and yet underſtandeſt it not. I will tell thee to whom thou mayſt be compared: Thou art like to one which intending to go on Hunting, riſeth up early in the Morning, taketh his Hounds, and forth he goeth, up to the Hills, and down into the Valleys; he paſſeth over the Fields, over Hedge and Ditch, he ſearched the Woods and Thickets; thus laboureth he all the whole Day, without finding any Game. At Night Home he cometh, weary of his Travel, not having caught any Thing at all; and thus fareth it by thee. Thou laboureſt in reading of the Scriptures, thou takeſt the Letter, but the Meaning thou knoweſt not, and thus thy reading is as unprofitable unto thee, as hunting was unto the Man I ſpake of even now.

An Hunter's Parable againſt William Tyms, wiſely apply'd.

Sir, quoth Tyms, you have not well apply'd your Similitude; for I praiſe God, I have not read the Scriptures unprofitably: But God, I thank him, hath revealed unto me ſo much as I doubt not is ſufficient for my Salvation.

Tyms's Anſwer to the Hunter's Similitude.

Then ſaid the Biſhop, You brag much of Knowledge, and yet you know nothing: You ſpeak much of Scripture, and you know not what Scripture is. I pray thee tell me; How knoweſt thou that Thing to be the Word of God, which thou calleſt Scripture?

To this anſwered Robert Drakes, that he knew it to be the Word of God, becauſe it ſhewed unto Men their Salvation in Chriſt, and doth revoke and call back all Men from wicked Life, unto a pure and undefiled Converſation. Anno 1556.

The Biſhop reply'd, That the heathen Writers have taught Precepts of good living, as well as the Scripture, and yet their Writings are not eſteemed to be God's Word.

Then ſaid Tyms, The Old Teſtamant beareth Witneſs of thoſe Things which are written in the New; for (quoth he) there is nothing taught in the New Teſtament but it was fore-ſhewed in the Law and the Prophets.

I will deny all, quoth the Biſhop, I will deny all; what ſay'ſt thou then? Then Robert Drakes alledged a Sentence in Latin out of the 59th Chapter of Iſaiah's Propheſy; Spiritus meus qui eſt in te, &c. that is, My Spirit which is in thee, and my Words which I have put in thy Mouth, ſhall not depart out of the Mouth of thy Seed, nor out of the Mouth of the Seed of thy Seed from henceforth even for ever? meaning thereby to prove, that he who had the Spirit of God, could thereby diſcern and judge truly which was God's Word: But before he could explicate his Mind, he was interrupted by the Biſhop, who ſpake unto Dr. Pendleton, ſaying.

Mr. Doctor, I pray you ſay ſomewhat unto theſe Folks that may do them ſome good. Then Dr. Pendleton leaning near the Biſhop, covered his Face with both his Hands, to the End he might the more quietly deviſe what to ſay; but other Talk was preſently miniſtred, ſo that for that Time he ſaid nothing.

Bonner calleth for help, Pendleton doth ſtudy to help him.

And thus much William Alsbury, Witneſs hereof, being preſent thereat, ſo far as he heard hath faithfully recorded and reported. What more was ſpoken and there ſaid (for they made not yet an End a good while after) becauſe he departed then out of the Houſe, he doth not know, nor did hear.

Then the Biſhop, after this, and ſuch like Communication, proceeded at length in form of Law, cauſing both the Articles and his Anſwers to the ſame, to be then and there openly read: The Sum of which his Confeſſion recorded and left by his own Hand-writing, tendeth to this Effect as followeth.

The Articles for which William Tyms of Hockley in Eſſex, was condemned in the Conſiſtory of St. Paul's, the 28*th of* March, with his Anſwers and Confeſſion upon the ſame.

FIRST, I did truly confeſs and believe that I was baptized in the true catholick Church of Chriſt; for when I was baptized, there was the Element and the Word of God, according to Chriſt's Inſtitution. And my Godfathers and Godmothers did promiſe for me, that I ſhould forſake the Devil, and all his Works, and that I ſhould keep God's Commandments, and believe all the Articles of the chriſtian Faith; all which I do believe at this Day, and with God's Help I truſt to do while I live: for it was not the Wickedneſs of the Miniſter that made the Sacrament of none Effect, &c.

Item,

Anno 1556.

Item, I confeſſed two Sacraments, and but two in Chriſt's true Church; that is, the Sacrament of Baptiſm, and the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Chriſt, and that Chriſt is preſent with his Sacraments, as it pleaſeth him.

Item, I confeſſed, that Chriſt hath a viſible Church, wherein the Word of God is truly preached, and the Sacraments truly adminiſtred.

Item, I confeſſed the See of Rome to be as the late Biſhop of Wincheſter hath written in his Book, De vera Obedientia, to which I ſaid unto the Biſhop of London, that he had made a godly Preface; and alſo John Bale hath plainly declared in his Book, called The Image of both Churches, even ſo much as I believe thereof.

Item, I confeſſed the Maſs to be Blaſphemy to Chriſt's Death and Paſſion.

Item, I confeſſed that in the Sacrament of the Altar Chriſt is preſent, either ſpiritually or corporally; but as they uſe it, it is an abominable Idol.

Laſt of all, I confeſſed the Biſhop of London to be mine Ordinary.

After this the Biſhop fell to Intreaty and Perſuaſions, and earneſtly exhorted him to revoke his Hereſies (as he termed them) and to reform himſelf unto the Church of Rome, and not to ſtick ſo much to the literal Senſe of the Scriptures, but to uſe the Interpretation of the old Fathers.

To which Tyms anſwered, I will not reform myſelf thereunto. And I thank God for this Day, for I truſt he will turn your Curſings into Bleſſings.

And furthermore, asking this Queſtion, he ſaid: And what have you to maintain the real Preſence of Chriſt in the Sacrament, but only the bare Letter?

We have (quoth the Biſhop) the Catholick Church.

No, ſaid Tyms, you have the popiſh Church of Rome for you, for which you be perjured and forſworn. And the See of Rome is the See of Antichriſt; and therefore to that Church I will not conform myſelf, nor once conſent unto it.

Then the Biſhop ſeeing his conſtant Boldneſs to be unmoveable, proceeding to his Condemnation, pronounced the Sentence definitive upon him, and gave him over to the ſecular Power.

Afterwards calling for Robert Drakes, he uſed towards him the like Manner of Exhortation that he did before.

To whom Drakes ſaid, As for your Church of Rome, I utterly defy and deny it, with all the Works thereof, even as I deny the Devil and all his Works.

The Biſhop then uſing his accuſtomed Order of Law, with his like Exhortations, at laſt gave him the like Bleſſing that Tyms had, and ſo charged the Sheriff with him.

Thomas Spurge being next demanded if he would return to the Catholick Church, ſaid as followeth: As for your Church of Rome I do utterly deny it; but to the true Catholick Church I am content to return, and continue in the ſame, whereof I believe the Church of Rome to be no Part or Member.

Then in fine, calling the reſt in their Turns, and upon the like Demands receiving the like Anſwers, the ſaid Biſhop gave unto each of them their ſeveral Judgments; and ſo ridding his bloody Hands, committed them unto the Cuſtody of the Sheriffs of London, who ſent them unto Newgate, whither they all went moſt joyfully, abiding there the Lord's good Time, wherein they ſhould ſeal this their Faith with the ſhedding of their Blood; which they moſt ſtoutly and willingly performed in the Month of April.

A Letter of William Tyms to his faithful Siſter in the Lord, Agnes Glaſcock, Pariſhioner in the Town of Hockley.

THE Grace, Mercy, and Peace of God our Father through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord and Saviour, with the ſweet Comfort of his holy and mighty Spirit, to the Performance of his Will, to your everlaſting Comfort, be with you my dear Siſter Glaſcock, both now and evermore. Amen.

My moſt dear and entirely beloved Siſter, yea Mother I might rightly well call you for the motherly Care which you have always had for me, I have me moſt heartily commended unto you, giving God moſt hearty Thanks for you, that he hath given you ſo loving a Heart to Chriſt's poor Goſpel, and his poor afflicted Flock for the ſame: And as you have full godly begun, ſo I beſeech God to give you Power to go forward in the ſame, and never more to look back, fearing neither Fire nor Sword; and then I warrant you, you have not far to run.

And now (my dear Heart) remember well what I have taught you when I was preſent with you, and alſo written being abſent, and no doubt we ſhall ſhortly meet again with a moſt joyful Meeting. I go on Friday next to the Biſhop of London's Coal-houſe, which is the 20th Day of March, where I think it will be hard for any of my Friends to ſpeak with me. Howbeit I truſt I ſhall not long tarry there, but ſhortly after be carried up after my dear Brethren and Siſters, which are gone before me into Heaven in a fiery Chariot: Therefore now I take my Leave of you till we meet in Heaven; and haſten you after.

I have tarried a great while for you, and ſeeing you are ſo long making ready, I will tarry no longer for you. You ſhall find me merrily ſinging, Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God of Sabbath, at my Journey's End. Therefore now (my dear Heart) make good Haſte, and loiter not by the Way, leſt Night take you, and ſo ye be ſhut out of the Gate with the fooliſh Virgins. And now (my Siſter) in Witneſs that I have taught you nothing but the Truth, here I write my Name with my Blood for a Teſtimonial unto you, that I will ſeal the ſimple Doctrine which I have taught you, with the reſt. And thus fare you well: And God defend you from Antichriſt, and all his Miniſters, the falſe Prieſts. Amen.

Theſe Words following were written with his own Blood:

Continue in Prayer.
Ask in Faith.
And obtain your Deſire.

By me W. Tyms in the King's-Bench for the Goſpel of Chriſt.

Another Letter of the ſaid William Tyms, wherein he comforteth his Siſter Glaſcock, being in great Sorrow and Repentance for going to the Maſs.

GOD be merciful unto you, pardon and forgive all your Sins, and ſend you Faith to believe the ſame, that you may be Partaker of his heavenly Kingdom. Amen.

My dear Siſter, I have me moſt heartily commended unto you; and as I have lamented your falling from God, by being Partaker with that idolatrous Prieſt; ſo have I, ſince I heard of your earneſt Repentance, very much rejoyced, and alſo praiſed Almighty God for his Mercy ſhewed unto you, in that he hath not left you to yourſelf, but ſince your Denial he hath ſhewed his Mercy on you, by looking back on you as he did on Peter, and ſo cauſed you to repent as Peter did, and bitterly to weep for your Sins: Whereas if God had left you to yourſelf, you had run forward from one Evil to another, till at length your Heart ſhould either have been hardened, or elſe you ſhould have deſpaired of the Mercy of God. And ſeeing that God hath been ſo merciful unto you as he hath been, be you not unthankful to him for the ſame. For I certify you, that your ſorrowful Heart that you have had, doth declare unto me that God hath pardoned and forgiven all your Sins for the Bloodſhedding of that immaculate Lamb, Jeſus Chriſt our Lord and Saviour.

Therefore as Peter, after the Time that Chriſt had forgiven him his Sin, did boldly confeſs Chriſt before all his Enemies; even ſo my dear Heart in the Lord, ſeeing that God hath ſo mercifully pardoned and forgiven you your Sins, now cleave unto him, and be at Defiance with his Enemies the Papiſts: And as they do bear witneſs with their Father the Devil, by going to the Church, and ſhedding the innocent Blood of all thoſe that will not go with them; even ſo do you bear witneſs with Chriſt, by not coming there: For all thoſe that go thither ſhall be Partakers of their Brethrens Blood, that is ſhed for the Teſtimony of Chriſt, except they repent and amend; which Grace that they may ſo do, I beſeech the eternal God, for his Chriſt's Sake, if it be his good Will, to give them in his good Time. And the ſame good God that hath been ſo merciful unto you to call you to Repentance, him I beſeech to keep you in his Fear and Love, that you may have always Affiance in him, and evermore ſeek his Honour and Glory to your everlaſting Comfort in Chriſt. Amen. Thus fare you well. From the King's-Bench this 28th of Auguſt. By me, William Tyms.

Another Letter of William Tyms, giving Thanks to his Pariſhioners, for their Charity ſhewed to his Wife, being brought to Bed of a Child in his Captivity.

THE everlaſting Peace of our dear Lord and only Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, with the ſweet Comfort of his holy and mighty Spirit, to the Increaſe of your Faith, to the Performance of his Will, and to your eternal Comfort in the everlaſting Kingdom of Heaven, be with you my dear Brethren and Siſters both now and ever. Amen.

Anno 1556.

My moſt dear Brethren and Siſters in our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, I have me moſt heartily commended unto you, with hearty Thanks for all the great Liberality that you have ſhewed unto me, and eſpecially now in the Time of my Neceſſity, when that God hath ſent my poor Wife a Child in my Captivity; which is no little Care to me, ſo to provide, that I might keep both the Child and my Wife from the Antichriſtian Church: Which Thing I thank my God, through his moſt gracious Providence, I have yet done, though it be (as ye know) great Charge, not to me, but to the Congregation of God; and it grieveth me that I have been ſo chargeable to them as I have been, and eſpecially you my dear Brethren, I being ſo unworthy a Member as I have been, and alſo of ſo ſmall Acquaintance; but ſuch is the merciful Goodneſs of God, ſo to move your Hearts with Charity towards me. And as he hath moved your Hearts ſo to do, even ſo I beſeech God to give you Power to forſake and refuſe all Things which be diſpleaſant in his Sight, and to do all Things which are requiſite to a Chriſtian; and ſend you Grace to go forwards in the ſame as you have godly begun, neither fearing Fire nor Sword. And, my moſt dear Hearts, remember well the ſimple plain Doctrine which I have taught you, and alſo written unto you, which was the Truth, and for a Teſtimony of the ſame I truſt that you ſhall ſhortly hear, or elſe ſee that I will ſeal the ſame with my Blood. And in the mean Time I deſire you all to remember me in your Prayers, as I know you do, and as with God's Help I will do for you, that God, for his dear Son Chriſt's Sake, will ſo finiſh the Days of our Pilgrimage, that we may reſt together with Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob, in the everlaſting Kingdom of Heaven, to which I beſeech the eternal God for his Chriſt's Sake to bring both you and all yours, Amen.

By me William Tyms.

Another Letter of William Tyms, with an Exhortation to all God's faithful Servants, to eſchew the Society of Idolaters.

GRace be with you, and Peace from the Father, and from the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

I thank my God with all Remembrance of you always in my Prayers for you, and pray with Gladneſs, becauſe of the Fellowſhip which ye have in the Goſpel, from the firſt Day that I knew you, until this Day; and I am ſurely certify'd of this, that he who hath begun a good Work in you, ſhall go forth with it, until the Day of Jeſus Chriſt, as it becometh me to judge of you; whom I have in my Heart, and as Companions of Grace with me, even in my Bonds. And thus I pray, that your Love may increaſe more and more in Knowledge. Good Brethren, I moſt heartily deſire God, that as you have a willing Mind to comfort my vile earthly Body in this Time of Perſecution, ſo he will ſtrengthen you with his Holy Spirit, that my Impriſonment do not diſcomfort, but rather ſtrengthen and comfort you, to ſee the Goodneſs of God ſhewed unto me, in that being a Man without Learning, and brought before three ſuch Biſhops concerning worldly Wiſdom, he gave me both Mouth and Wiſdom; inſomuch that the Biſhop of London went away in a great Haſte from me, and after that he ſent his Man with a Bible, turning to the ninth Chapter to the Hebrews, and the Biſhop of Bath looking on it, ſaid, What meaneth my Lord? this maketh nothing for Bonner went away from Tyms, belike not able to make his Part good.

Anno 1556.

for his Purpose. Then I looked on it, and said, My Lord seeth that I was weak, and therefore he hath holpen me; for here he hath condemned the Sacrifice of your Mass: For you say that you offer a daily Sacrifice in your Mass, both for the Quick and the Dead; and here St. Paul saith, Without Blood-shedding there is no Forgiveness of Sins; therefore that is here condemned. He answered, Yea, saith he so? So say all such Hereticks, and so forth, with many like Arguments, which my Neighbours that heard them can declare, therefore I leave them. This have I written that you should not be afraid, but call upon God as he hath commanded us to ask and you shall have; seek and you shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you. Also he hath commanded us to call on him in the Day of Trouble, and he hath promised to hear us. Therefore if we have not both Mouth and Wisdom at his Hand, the Fault is in us, that either we will not repent us of our Wickedness, and amend our Lives, or else we be unfaithful, and believe not the Promises of God; and so we ourselves are the Cause that this Wisdom is lacking in us. Therefore let us repent and amend our Lives, and God is merciful. And in any Case, as I have always said unto you, since I first knew you, so say I now: Beware of Idolatry, and of your good Intents; if not, mark what hath followed upon them that have left God's Commandments, and done their own good Intents. Remember when the Children of Israel had made them a Golden Calf, did not God say they had marr'd all, and would have destroy'd them, had not Moses earnestly pray'd for them? I let many other Places alone that prove the Wrath of God to come upon the People for Idolatry; therefore as we will avoid the Wrath of God, let us keep us unstained from it. You have Example out of the Old Testament, how loth the godly Fathers were to be Partakers with the Wicked: And yet to see how little we regarded it, it would make any christian Man's Heart to weep. God send us more Grace.

Heb. 9. God giveth Mouth and Utterance to his Saints.

Warning to come away from the Wicked.

First, look in the 11*th and* 12*th of* Genesis; Abraham, because he would not be Partaker of their Idolatry, fled from the People of Chaldea, being his native Country. And in the 19*th of* Genesis, Lot at the Commandment of the Angels departed from Sodom, lest he tarrying with the Sodomites should have been consumed with them. In the 21*st of* Genesis, Sarah would not suffer Ishmael, who was given to mocking, to keep company with her Son Isaac, lest he should also become a Mocker. Look in the 16*th of* Numbers, Moses at God's Appointment commanded the People to depart from the Dwelling-places of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, lest they also should be all wrapped in their Sins, and so perish among them. So do I, even as Moses commanded them that they should not keep company with those wicked People, lest the Vengeance of God should light on them; so do I (I say) give you warning, that you should not keep company with the Idolaters, in their idolatrous Temples, lest the Wrath of God come upon you to destroy you.

Look what St. Paul saith in the second Epistle, and the sixth Chapter to the Corinthians: Set yourselves (saith he) therefore at large, and bear no strange Yoke with the Unbelievers: For what Fellowship hath Righteousness with Unrighteousness? what Company hath Light with Darkness? what Concord hath Christ with Belial? either what Part hath he that believeth, with an Infidel? How agreeth the Temple of God with Images? And ye are the Temple of God, as saith God; I will dwell among them, and walk among them, and will be their God, and they shall be my People. Wherefore come out from among them, and separate yourselves saith the Lord, and touch no unclean Thing.

Good Brethren, mark what cometh of keeping company with the Wicked. Syrach saith, He that toucheth Pitch, shall be defiled therewith; and he that keepeth company with the Proud, shall cloath himself with Pride. Even so he that is familiar with Idolaters, cannot be unstained from Idolatry, except he do it to win them to Christ, as there be but a few that do: Yea, it may not be where Idolatry is openly committed, as for an Example: Peter, so long as he continued with Christ and Christ's Disciples, he continued in the Truth, preached the Truth, confessed openly Christ to be the Son of the Living God, and promised that he would not only go to Prison but also to very Death with him: But when he came once in- What it is to be associate in ill Company. to the Court, into the Bishop's House, he straightway was stricken with sure Fear that a poor Maiden, and simple Ruffian (such a one as my Lord of London hath, that said, By God's Blood, if I meet with any of these vile Hereticks, I will thrust an Arrow in him) when Peter, I say, was amongst them, he denied his Master, and swore that he never knew him, whom he, before he came there, boldly confessed before all Men: And again, after that he had repented him of his wicked Deed, he boldly preached to the believing Jews, commanding them, among other his godly Exhortations, to save themselves from that untoward Generation. How many of our Priests before this Storm of Persecution, when the Gospel was truly preached, were bold, and could say, They would die rather than deny their Master: But when they come once into the Bishops Houses, they preach no more Christ, but utterly deny him: Therefore I pray God keep them from thence, or else send them more Grace and Strength. It is needful to pray; therefore watch in Prayer.

Acts 1.

Paul, all the while he was among the Bishops, was a cruel Persecutor; but after he was called by God from the Bishops, he became a true Preacher: Therefore God keep all christian Men out of the Hands of our Bishops. St. Paul in the fifteenth to the Romans, saith, I dare not speak any of those Things that Christ hath not wrought by me. He saith also, Rom. 16. I beseech you Brethren, mark them that make Division, and give Occasion of Evil, contrary to the Doctrine that ye have learned, and them avoid: For they that are such serve not the Lord Jesus Christ, but their own Bellies, and with sweet and flattering Words deceive the Hearts of the Simple. Our Master Christ himself hath given us warning which they be; for he hath set the plain Mark on them, in the 24*th of* Matthew, If they say here is Christ, or there is Christ, believe them not. If they say, he is in the Desart, go not forth. If they say, he is in the secret Place, believe them not. And I pray you, where can he be more secret, than in so small a Peace of Bread? For my Lord of London, like a Liar, said to me, that after the Words be spoken, there remaineth neither Bread nor Wine. Then I asked him what he said to † David, where he saith, Thou shalt not suffer thy holy One to see Corruption. *How say you to that? Will not the Sacrament of the Altar putrify or corrupt: He answered, Yes. I asked him, what it was that did corrupt, if there were neither Bread nor Wine. He answered, and said the Accidents. I said unto him, It was a mad Accident without Substance: For you say, there is neither Bread nor Wine, and then there is nothing to * corrupt: with many such like Arguments.*

† Bonner not able to answer to this Place of David: * How can Corruption be referred to Accidents, when by all Philosophy Generation and Corruption belong only to the Predicament of Substance.

Therefore beware of them, for they go about to deceive you with such Arguments. Say not but ye be warned, warned, and a great Deal the more worthy of your Damnation, if they deceive you, becauſe you have have had ſo much warning. Repent you betimes of your ſinful Lives, and amend, and then no doubt but God will either turn their Hearts, or elſe take them away, or elſe he will give us that which he promiſed to his Diſciples, if we be contented to take the ſame Reward that they had. And if we diſdain the one, let us not look for the other. For he that will be his Father's Heir, muſt be contented to receive his Father's Correction. For St. Paul ſaith in the 12th to the Hebrews, If we be not under Correction, whereof all are Partakers, then are we Baſtards and not Sons.

And you know what belongeth to a Baſtard; he ſhall not be his Father's Heir. And if we remember ourſelves well, how negligent we have been to our Father's Commandment, we ſhall find ourſelves worthy to be corrected at his Hand. If we refuſe his Correction, he will refuſe us to be his Sons. I pray you look what he promiſed to his Diſciples, and I pray you alſo look how willingly they received it: And ſo muſt we do if we will be Partakers with them. Firſt let us ſee what Chriſt promiſed to his Diſciples. Look in the tenth Chapter of St. Matthew, and there ſhall you ſee theſe Words, Behold, I ſend you forth as Sheep among Wolves. Be wiſe therefore as Serpents and innocent as Doves. Beware of Men, for they ſhall deliver you up to the Councils, and ſhall ſcourge you in their Synagogues: Ye ſhall be brought before the Head-rulers and Kings for my Names ſake. But when they put you up, take ye no Thought how or what ye ſhall ſpeak: For it ſhall be given you in the ſame Hour what you ſhall ſpeak. For it is not you that ſpeak, but the Spirit of my Father, &c. Read the whole Chapter, for it is very comfortable to a chriſtian Man; and mark it well, and you ſhall find what we ought to do in the Time of Perſecution. Alſo look into the fourth Chapter of the ſecond Epiſtle of St. Paul to the Corinthians, where it is ſaid, For we which live are always delivered unto Death for Jeſus ſake, that the Life alſo of Jeſus might appear in our mortal Fleſh. Thus have you heard that St. Paul doth boaſt of Perſecution; even ſo ſhould we, for it is the Way to bring us to reſt.

Therefore let us ſtrive to enter in at the narrow Gate, and let us remember the Saying of St. Paul in the 21ſt Chapter of the Acts of the Apoſtles, when he was going to Jeruſalem. When he was in the Houſe of Philip the Evangeliſt, there came in a Prophet, and took off his Girdle, and bound his Hands and his Feet, ſaying, Thus ſhall they do with the Man that owneth this Girdle when he cometh to Jeruſalem. When the Diſciples heard that, they would have perſuaded him that he ſhould not go thither. Here you ſhall ſee what Anſwer this Paſtor made them; he was a faithful Shepherd; What do ye weeping and breaking of my Heart? I am not ready to be bound only, but alſo to die at Jeruſalem, for the Name of the Lord Jeſus.

Yet I think there be ſome that will ſay, that I needed not to have been taken, if I would have kept me out of the Way. But I ſay unto them, that the ſhrinking away of ſo many of our Shepherds as be gone, maketh ſo many of the Flock to ſcatter; which will be required at their Hands, of the Maſter of the Sheep. What will he ſay to them at the Day of Account, when they ſhall come to receive their Wages? He ſhall ſay to them, Depart from me ye wicked Hirelings, for when ye ſaw the Wolf come, ye ran away, and left my Sheep in the Wilderneſs. If you had been good Shepherds you would rather have loſt your Lives than have loſt one Sheep committed to your Charge, through your Fault. And I pray you, what caſe be the Sheep in, when the Shepherd runneth away from them? I need not tell you, you know the Danger that followeth ſo well. Anno 1556.

A Note for them who ſhrunk away having Cure.

Therefore let us pray to God to ſend us faithful Shepherds, and alſo obedient Sheep, that will not hear a Stranger's Voice. I would all Men would mark well the Saying of St. Paul in the eighth Chapter of his Epiſtle to the Romans, where he thus ſaith, Who ſhall ſeparate us from the Love of God? Shall Tribulation, or Anguiſh, or Perſecution, or Nakedneſs, or Peril, or Sword? As it is written, For thy Sake are we killed all the Day long, and are counted as Sheep appointed to be ſlain: Nevertheleſs we overcome ſtrongly through his Help that loved us. Yea, I am ſure, that neither Death nor Life, neither Angels nor Rule, neither Power; neither Things preſent nor Things to come, neither Height nor Depth, nor any other Creature ſhall be able to ſeparate us from the Love of God, &c. Alſo he ſaith in another Place, All that will live godly in Chriſt Jeſus muſt ſuffer Perſecution, 2 Tim. 3. Thus I prove it to be our heavenly Father's Rod: Therefore let us thankfully receive it like obedient Children, and then our Father will love us.

Yet hear what St. Peter ſaith in his firſt Epiſtle, and the fourth Chapter, Dearly beloved (ſaith he) be not troubled in this Heat which is now come among you to try you, as though ſome ſtrange Thing had happened unto you: But rejoyce inaſmuch as ye are Partakers of Chriſt's Paſſions, that when his Glory appeareth you may be merry and glad. If ye be railed on for the Name of Chriſt, happy are ye, for the Spirit of Glory and the Spirit of God reſteth upon you. On their Part he is evil ſpoken of, but on your Part he is glorified. Here St. Peter ſaith, it is no ſtrange Thing; and that I have partly proved before, becauſe we have nothing elſe promiſed us in this World.

Therefore let us call on God for Grace. Be ye ſure that they can do nothing to us, till God permit it. As for Example, look in the firſt Book of Samuel, chap. 19. you ſhall ſee how Saul perſecuted David, purpoſing to kill him: But his Labour was in vain.

Alſo in the 19th Chapter of the firſt Book of Kings, Jezebel threatned and ſware to ſlay Elias, but the Lord preſerved him. Alſo in the ſecond Chapter of Job, you ſee that Satan could do nothing to Job till God ſuffered him, neither exerciſe his Cruelty any farther than God had appointed him. The godly Woman Suſannah, through the falſe Accuſation of the wicked Judges, was even at a Point to die, yet God wonderfully delivered her. Theſe have I written to put you in Remembrance, that Man can do no more than is the Will of God: Therefore let us not reſiſt his Will, but refer all to him: And let us be doing that Thing that God hath commanded us in his holy Word.

Dear Brethren, for the Blood of Chriſt refuſe not the Croſs of Chriſt, but remember the Saying of the godly Man David in his 119th Pſalm, where he ſaith, It is good for me that I have been in Trouble, that I may learn thy Statutes. In the ſame Place he ſaith, Before I was in Trouble I went wrong, but now I have kept thy Word. Even ſo it is in Trouble with us, for the Word of God was never ſo ſweet and comfortable as it is now that we be in Trouble. Alſo St. Paul in the fifth Chapter to the Romans, We rejoice in Tribulation: For we know that Tribulation bringeth God's Word never ſo ſweet as in Trouble.

Anno 1556.

bringeth Patience, Patience bringeth Experience, Experience bringeth Hope, and Hope maketh not aſhamed.

Alſo I pray you remember the Saying of St. Paul in the firſt Chapter of the ſecond Epiſtle to Timothy, where he ſaith, Be not aſhamed to teſtify the Lord: Neither be aſhamed of me. Even ſo I ſay unto you, dear Brethren, be not aſhamed of my Impriſonment, neither ſorry, but rejoice with me, that it hath pleaſed God of his Goodneſs to call me to ſuch a Dignity as this ſhall be unto me, if I may have his Grace to loſe my Life (which I regard as moſt vile) for his Name's ſake: for then I ſhall be ſure to find it again with Advantage. Therefore I deſire you all that you will pray with me unto Almighty God, that he of his merciful Goodneſs will ſend me his Grace and Strength, that I may continue unto the End; as I will pray for you, that God will preſerve you from all the wicked Ways of Antichriſt, and ſtrengthen and comfort you, if it be his good Pleaſure, that you ſhall ſuffer any Thing for his Name's ſake, as he hath faithfully promiſed to do.

Experience of God's Comfort in the Impriſonment of his Servants.

And I certify you, that if all Men knew the Comfort they ſhould receive at the Hand of God being in Priſon, I think there would come more to Priſon than there do. For ſurely we find ſuch Comfort at the Hand of God ſince we have been in Priſon, that we had rather die than be Abroad to ſee the Idolatry that is committed among them that be Abroad; beſide the ſeeking one of another's Blood, with other Wickedneſs too much; God ſend me more Grace. But I truſt, among you there be none ſuch: And if there be, repent and amend, leſt it be verified on you that is ſpoken by the Prophet Jeremy, the ſecond Chapter, where he ſaith, My People hath committed two great Evils: They have forſaken me the Fountain of the living Waters, and digged them Pits: Pits (I ſay) that are broken, and can hold no Water. Alſo in the ſeventh Chapter he ſaith, Hear not the Words of the Prophets that preach their own Dreams. Good Brethren, beware of thoſe falſe Prophets that I have given you warning of.

Dearly beloved, here I make an End for this Time deſiring the ſame Health of Body and Soul unto you all that I would have myſelf, and I end with the ſame that St. Peter ſaith in the fifth Chapter of his firſt Epiſtle: Submit yourſelves therefore under the mighty Hand of God, that he may exalt you when the Time is come. Caſt all your Care on him, for he careth for you. Be ſober and watch, for your Adverſary the Devil like a roaring Lion walketh about ſeeking whom he may devour, whom reſiſt ſtedfaſt in Faith: Remembring that ye do but fulfil the ſame Afflictions, that are appointed to your Brethren that are in the World. The God of all Grace that called you unto his eternal Glory by Chriſt Jeſus, ſhall his own ſelf, after you have ſuffered a little Affliction, make you perfect, ſhall ſettle ſtrengthen and eſtabliſh you. To him be Glory and Dominion for ever, and while the World endureth. Amen.

Greet one another with an holy Kiſs of Love. Peace be with you all which are in Chriſt Jeſus. I pray you all ſay. Amen.

Theſe be in the ſame Priſon where I am; the Biſhop of St. David's, Dr. Taylor of Hadley, Mr. Philpot, and my ſingular good Father Mr. Bradford, with five others, Laymen of Suſſex.

I deſire ſome good Brother to write this anew, for I wrote it (as I do many Times) with Fear. For if the Keepers had found me, they would have taken it from me, and my Pen and Ink alſo.

Good Brethren, I am kept alone, and yet I thank God he comforteth me paſt all the Comfort of any Man: For I thank him, I was never merrier in Chriſt.

By me, William Tyms, Priſoner in the King's-bench.

ABout this Time certain Commiſſioners aſſigned by the Queen and Council, came to Norfolk, (as they did to other Countries) to enquire after Matters of Religion: Unto which Commiſſioners there was a Supplication then exhibited by ſome well-diſpoſed Men dwelling about thoſe Parts. Which Supplication, for the worthy Matter contained in it, I thought proper here to inſert.

The Supplication exhibited by certain Inhabitants of the County of Norfolk, fruitful to be read and obſerved by all Men.

IN moſt humble and lowly wiſe, we beſeech your Honours, Right Honourable Commiſſioners, to tender and pity the humble Suit of us poor Men, and true, faithful, and obedient Subjects, who as we have ever heretofore, ſo intend we, with God's Grace, to continue in chriſtian Obedience unto the End, and (according to the Word of God) with all reverend Fear of God, to do our bounden Duty to all thoſe ſuperiour Powers, whom God hath appointed over us, doing as St. Paul ſaith, Rom. 13. Let every Soul be ſubject to the Superior Powers. For there is no Power but of God: But thoſe Powers that are, are ordained of God. Wherefore whoſoever reſiſteth the Powers, the ſame reſiſteth God, and they that reſiſt get themſelves Judgment. Theſe Leſſons (Right Honourable Commiſſioners) we have learned of the holy Word of God, in our Mother Tongue.

The Authority of Kings and Queens approved.

Firſt, That the Authority of a King, Queen, Lord, and other their Officers under them, is no tyrannical Uſurpation, but a juſt, holy, lawful, and neceſſary Eſtate for Man to be governed by, and that the ſame is of God, the Fountain and Author of Righteouſneſs.

Secondly, That to obey the ſame in all Things not againſt God, is to obey God, and to reſiſt them, is to reſiſt God. Therefore, as to obey God in his Miniſters and Magiſtrates bringeth Life; ſo to reſiſt God in them, bringeth Puniſhment and Death. The ſame Leſſon have we learned of St. Peter, 1 Pet. 2. ſaying, Be ye ſubject to all human Ordinances for the Lord's Sake, whether it be to the King, as Supreme, or unto Governors, as unto them that are ſent by him, for the Puniſhment of evil-doers, and for the Praiſe of them that do well. For ſo is the Will of God, that with well-doing ye may put to Silence the Ignorance of fooliſh Men. As free, and not uſing your Liberty for a Cloak of Maliciouſneſs, but as the Servants of God.

Wherefore conſidering with ourſelves, both that the Magiſtrates Power is of God, and that for the Lord's Sake we be bound to chriſtian Obedience unto them, having now preſently a Commandment, as though it were from the Queen's Majeſty; with all humble

Obedience

Obedience due to the regal Power and Authority ordained of God (which we acknowledge to stand wholly and perfectly in her Grace) and with due Reverence unto you her Grace's Commissioners, we humbly beseech you with Patience and Pity to receive this our Answer unto this Commandment, given unto us.

The Honour of God to be preferred before all regal Honour and Power.

First, Right Honourable Commissioners, we have considered ourselves to be not only Englishmen, but also Christians, and therefore bound by the holy Vow made to God in our Baptism, to prefer God's Honour in all Things, and that all Obedience (not only of us mortal Men, but even of the Angels and heavenly Spirits) is due unto God's Word; insomuch that no Obedience can be true and perfect, either before God or Man, that fully and wholly agreeth not with God's Word.

Then have we weighed the Commandment concerning the Restitution of the late abolished Latin Service, giving unto us to dissent and disagree from God's Word, and to command manifest Impiety, and the Overthrow of Godliness and true Religion, and to import a Subversion of the regal Power of this our native Country and Realm of England, with the bringing in of the Romish Bishop's Supremacy, with all Errors, Superstitions, and Idolatry, wasting of our Goods and Bodies, destroying of our Souls, bringing with it nothing but the severe Wrath of God, which we already feel, and fear lest the same shall be more fiercely kindled upon ns. Wherefore we humbly protest, that we cannot be persuaded, that the same wicked Commandment should come from the Queen's Majesty, but rather from some other, abusing the Queen's Goodness and Favour, and studying to work some Feat against the Queen, her Crown, and the Realm, to please with it the Roman Bishop, at whose Hands the same thinketh hereafter to be advanced.

Esther 3. 1 Esd. 4.

As the Agagite Haman wrought maliciously against the noble King Ahasuerus, and as the Princes of Babel wrought against the good King Darius; so think we the Queen's most gentle Heart to be abused by some, who seeking themselves and their own vain Glory, procure such Commandments as are against the Glory of God. For we cannot have so evil an Opinion in her Majesty, that she should subvert the most godly and holy Religion (so accordingly to God's Word set forth by the most noble, virtuous and innocent King, our late most dear King Edward, her Grace's Brother) except she were wonderfully abused; who, as hating Reformation, will rather the Destruction of all others, than acknowledge their Errors, and to be according to God's Word, reformed. For truly, the Religion lately set forth by King Edward, is such in our Consciences, as every christian Man is bound to confess to be the Truth of God, and every Member of Christ's Church here in England must needs imbrace the same in Heart, and confess it with Mouth, and (if Need require) lose and forsake, not only House, Lands and Possessions, Riches, Wife, Children and Friends; but also (if God will so call them) gladly to suffer all Manner of Persecution, and to lose their Lives in the Defence of God's Word and Truth set out amongst us. For our Saviour Christ requireth the same of us, saying, Luke 9. Whosoever shall be ashamed of me and my Word before this adulterous and sinful Generation, the Son of Man will also be ashamed of him, when he shall come in the Glory of his Father with the holy Angels. And again saith he, Matt. 10. Whosoever will confess me before Men, I will confess him before my Father which is in Heaven. Mat. 11. And whosoever will deny me before Men, I will also deny him before my Father that is in Heaven. And whosoever shall speak a Word against the Son of Man, it shall be forgiven him, but whosoever shall rail against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven him. Anno 1556.

An honest Petition to Q. Mary.

We humbly beseech the Queen's Majesty, and you her Honourable Commissioners, be not offended with us, for confessing this Truth of God, so straitly given us in Charge of Christ; neither bring upon us that great Sin that never shall be forgiven, and shall cause our Saviour Jesus Christ in the great Day of Judgment, before his heavenly Father and all his Angels, to deny us, and to take from us, the blessed Price and Ransom of his Bloodshed, wherewith we are redeemed.

For in that Day, neither the Queen's Highness, neither you, nor any Man shall be able to excuse us, nor to purchase a Pardon of Christ for this horrible Sin and Blasphemy of casting aside and condemning his Word. We cannot agree nor consent unto this so horrible a Sin; but we beseech God for his Mercy to give us and all Men Grace, most earnestly to flee from it, and rather (if the Will of God be so) to suffer all Extremity and Punishment in this World, than to incur such Damnation before God.

Example of K. Manasses.

Manasses, who restored again the Wickedness of idolatrous Religion (before put down by Ezechias his Father) brought the Wrath of God upon the People: So that the Scripture saith, 2 Kings 23. Notwithstanding the Reformation made by Josias, the Lord turned not from the Fierceness of his great Wrath wherewith he was angry against Judah, because of the Provocation with which Manasses provoked him. And the Lord said, Even Judah will I take away from my Presence, as I cast away Israel: And I will cast away this City of Jerusalem, and the House whereof I said, my Name shall be there.

Example of Jeroboam.

Jeroboam, who at Bethel and Dan erected up a new-found Service of God, and not only sinned himself, but also made all Israel to sin with him, so that not only he was damned for commanding, but the Wrath of God came upon all Israel, for obeying that his ungodly Commandment: Yet was it not so heinous an Offence to bring in an Idolatry never yet heard of, as after Reformation made by the godly Kings and Princes, by the virtuous and holy Bishops, by the Prophets and Servants of God, to reject and cast off the Word and true Religion of God, and to receive again a damned Impiety.

This most heinous Offence is now offered unto us, although the same be painted and coloured with the Name of Reformation, restoring of Religion, ancient Faith, with the Name of the catholick Church, of Unity, catholick Truth, and with the Cloak of feigned Holiness. These are Sheep-skins, under which (as Christ saith) ravening Wolves hide themselves. But Christ willeth us to look upon their Fruits, whereby we may know them; and truly that is no good Fruit to cast aside God's Word, and to banish the English Service out of the Churches, and in the Place of it to bring in a Latin Tongue unknown unto the People. Which as it edifieth no Man, so it hath been Occasion of all Blindness and

Error

Anno 1556. Error among the People. For before the bleſſed Reformation begun by the moſt noble Prince of godly Memory, the Queen's good Father; and by our late holy and innocent King, her good Brother finiſhed; it is not unknown what Blindneſs and Error we were all in, when not one Man in all this Realm unlearned in the Latin, could ſay in Engliſh, the Lord's Prayer, or knew any one Article of his Belief, or rehearſe any one of the Ten Commandments. And that Ignorance, Mother of Miſchief, was the very Root and Well-ſpring of all Idolatry, Sodomitical Monkery, and whoriſh Chaſtity of unmarry'd Prieſts, of all Whoredom, Drunkenneſs, Covetouſneſs, Swearing, and Blaſphemy, with all other wicked ſinful Living. Theſe brought in the ſevere Wrath and Vengeance of God plaguing Sin, with Famine and Peſtilence; and at laſt the Sword conſumed and avenged all their Impiety and wicked living. As it is greatly to be feared the ſame or more grievous Plagues ſhall now again follow.

Ignorance wilfully maintained.

We cannot therefore conſent nor agree that the Word of God and Prayers in our Engliſh Tongue, which we underſtand, ſhould be taken away from us, and for it a Latin Service, we know not what, (for none of us underſtand it) to be again brought in amongſt us, eſpecially ſeeing that Chriſt hath ſaid, My Sheep hear my Voice, and follow me, and I give to them everlaſting Life. The Service in Engliſh teacheth us, that we are the Lord's People, and the Sheep of his Paſture, and commanded that we harden not our Hearts, as when they provoked the Lord's Wrath in the Wilderneſs, leſt he ſwear unto us, as he did ſwear unto them, that they ſhould not enter into his Reſt.

John 10.

The Service in Latin is a confuſed Noiſe; which if it be good (as they ſay it is) yet unto us that lack Underſtanding, what Goodneſs can it bring? St. Paul commandeth, that in the Churches all Things ſhould be done to edifying, which we are ſure is God's Commandment. But in the Latin Service nothing is done to edifying, but contrarily all to deſtroy thoſe that are already edify'd, and to drive us from God's Word and Truth, and from believing of the ſame, and ſo to bring us to believe Lies and Fables, that tempting and provoking God, we ſhould be brought into that Judgment that bleſſed Paul ſpeaketh of, ſaying, Antichriſt ſhall come according to the working of Satan, with all manner of Power and Signs, and lying Wonders in all Deceivableneſs of Unrighteouſneſs in thoſe that periſh: Becauſe they have not received the Love of the Truth, that they might be ſaved. And therefore God will ſend them ſtrong Deluſion, that they ſhould believe Lies and be damned, as many as have not believed the Truth, but have approved Unrighteouſneſs.

In the Pope's Service there is no edifying. What Fables be in it the Lord knoweth. 2 Theſſ. 2.

Thus, altogether drawn from God, we ſhall fall into his Wrath through Unbelief, till he ſwear unto us as he did unto the unfaithful Jews, that ſuch Infidels ſhould not enter into his Reſt.

In the Adminiſtration of the Lord's Supper, which we confeſs to be the holy Communion, and partaking with Chriſt and his holy Congregation, we have learned God's holy Commandments, and at the Rehearſal of every one of them to ask God Mercy for our moſt grievous Tranſgreſſions againſt them, and to ask Grace of God, to keep them in Time to come, that the ſame may not only outwardly ſound in our Ears, but alſo inwardly by the Holy Ghoſt be written in our Hearts.

We have learned alſo the holy Prayer made for the Queen's Majeſty; wherein we learn that her Power and Authority is of God, therefore we pray to God for her, that ſhe and all Magiſtrates under her, may rule according to God's Word, and we her Subjects obey according to the ſame.

Truly (moſt honourable Commiſſioners) we cannot think theſe Things evil, but think them moſt worthy to be retained in our Churches, and we ſhould think ourſelves not to have true Subjects Hearts, if we ſhould go about to put away ſuch godly Prayers, as put us perpetually in Memory of our bounden Obedience and Duty to God and our Rulers. For, as we think, at this preſent the unquiet Multitude had more need to have theſe Things more often and earneſtly beaten and driven into them (eſpecially given in many Places to ſtir and trouble) than to take from them that bleſſed Doctrine, whereby only they may to their Salvation be kept in quiet.

Furthermore, we cannot forſake that bleſſed partaking of the Body and Blood of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt's Inſtitution, miniſtred with ſuch godly Prayers, Exhortations and Admonitions, teaching us the Knowledge of God, the exceeding Love and Charity of our loving Redeemer Chriſt, breaking his Body upon the Croſs for our Sins, and ſhedding his moſt precious Blood for our Redemption: Which we in eating of that bleſſed Bread, and drinking of the bleſſed Cup, aſſuredly believe that we receive, and be perfectly joined with Chriſt and his holy catholick Church into one Body, and into one Unity and brotherly Love, whereby every Member faithfully embraceth each other. We muſt needs confeſs this Inſtitution of Chriſt to be moſt holy and godly, whereof we have the only Comfort in Conſcience againſt Sin and Damnation with the Aſſurance of Salvation, and whereof hath enſued Reformation of many heinous Sins, much Lawing, Strife and Contention is ended; Drunkenneſs, Whoredom, and other Vices in ſome reformed, Goodneſs and Virtue increaſed and nouriſhed.

In the Latin Maſs we never had any ſuch edifying, but only we ſaw a great many of Ceremonies and ſtrange Geſtures; as turning of the Prieſt, Croſſings, Bleſſings, Breathings, Waſhing of Hands, and Spreading abroad of his Arms, with like Ceremonies that we underſtand not. And concerning the Latin Tongue, wherein the Prieſt prayeth, we know not whether he bleſſeth or curſeth us. We are not Partakers of the Sacrament, as Chriſt's Inſtitution appointeth we ſhould be.

The Maſs hath nothing in it but an Heap of Ceremonies.

In the Miniſtring of the Sacrament the Prieſts after the Inſtitution of Chriſt, committing Theft and Sacrilege, robbing us of the Cup of Chriſt's Blood, contrary to Chriſt's Commandment, ſaying, Drink ye all of this.

They rob us alſo of God's Word, ſpeaking all Things in Latin, which nothing edifieth us either in Faith or Manners. Chriſt commandeth not that his Supper ſhould be adminiſtred in an unknown Tongue: But foraſmuch as Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing cometh by God's Word, how can we believe Chriſt's Word and Promiſe made unto us in this holy Sacrament, ſaying, This is my Body broken for you, and this is my Blood of the New Teſtament, which is ſhed for you, for the Remiſſion of Sins; if the ſame Promiſes of Chriſt either be not at all recited, or elſe ſo recited in Latin, that the Congregation underſtandeth not, nor heareth not what is ſpoken? St. Paul ſaith thus, reciting the Saying of Iſaiah, As truly as I live, ſaith the Lord, all Knees ſhall bow unto me, all Tongues ſhall give Praiſe unto God. Alſo he ſaith, All Tongues muſt confeſs that Jeſus Chriſt is the Lord, unto the Glory of God the Father. The Holy Ghoſt came upon the Apoſtles in fiery Tongues, ſo that they ſpake the Tongues of all Nations under Heaven. St. Paul miniſtred to the Corinthians, and preached to them in their own Mother-tongue, and rebuked the bringing in of ſtrange Tongues into the Congregations. We cannot think that to be well which ſo holy an Apoſtle rebuked. And whatſoever Virtue the Latin Tongue hath to ſuch as underſtand it, to us Engliſhmen not underſtanding it, it is altogether without Virtue and edifying, and therefore unmeet for our Churches.

Phil. 2.

All things done in the Church ought to be in a known Tongue.

The Prieſts complain that we Laymen love them not, nor have them in Honour, but it is their own Fault: For how ſhould we love them that only ſeek to keep us in Blindneſs and Ignorance, to damn our Souls, to deſtroy our Bodies, to rob and ſpoil our Goods and Subſtance under a Colour of pretended Holineſs? We know (Right Honourable Commiſſioners) what Honour is due to ſuch Wolves, and how by the Authority of God's Word ſuch are to be fled, as Peſtilences to the Lord's Lambs, who they miſerably daily murder.

But we have rather choſe by this our meek Supplication, humbly to deſire the Queen's Majeſty, and you her Honourable Commiſſioners, to render God's Word again into the Churches, and to permit us freely to enjoy the ſame. For we certainly know, that the whole Religion lately ſet out by the holy Saint of God, our late moſt dear King Edward, is Chriſt's true Religion written in the holy Scripture of God, and by Chriſt and his Apoſtles taught unto his Church. Wherefore we cannot allow with ſafe Conſciences this Refuſal of it, and caſting of it out of our Churches; foraſmuch as to refuſe, caſt off, and to reject it, is to caſt off Chriſt himſelf, and to refuſe our Part in his bleſſed Body broken for our Sins, and his Blood ſhed for our Redemption. Which Thing whoſo doth, the ſame without Repentance can look for no Sacrifice for his Sins, but muſt fearfully wait for the Judgment, and for that vehement Fire that ſhall deſtroy Chriſt's Adverſaries. For if he that deſpiſeth the Law of Moſes, is without Mercy put to Death under two or three Witneſſes, how much more grievous Torments ſhall he ſuffer that treadeth under Foot the Son of God, and eſteemeth the Blood of the Teſtament (whereby he was ſanctified) as a profane Thing, and contumelioufly uſeth the Spirit of Grace?

Wherefore we moſt humbly pray and beſeech the Queen's gracious Majeſty, to have Mercy and Pity upon us her poor and faithful Subjects, and not to compel us to do the Thing that is againſt our Conſciences, and ſhall ſo incurably wound us in Heart, by bringing into the Church the Latin Maſs and Service that nothing edifieth us, and caſting out of Chriſt's holy Communion and Engliſh Service, ſo cauſing us to ſin againſt our Redemption. For ſuch as wittingly and willingly againſt their Conſciences ſhall ſo do (as it is to be feared many a one doth) they are in a miſerable Eſtate, until the Mercy of God turn them, which if he doth not, we certainly believe that they ſhall eternally be damn'd: And as in this World they deny Chriſt's holy Word and Communion before Men, ſo ſhall Chriſt deny them before his heavenly Father and his Angels. Anno 1556.

And whereas it is very earneſtly required, that we ſhould go in Proceſſion (as they call it) at which Time the Prieſts ſay in Latin ſuch Things as we are ignorant of, the ſame edifieth nothing at all unto Godlineſs, and we have learned that to follow Chriſt's Croſs is another Matter, namely, to take up our Croſs, and to follow Chriſt in patient Suffering for his Love, Tribulations, Sickneſs, Poverty, Priſon, or any other Adverſity, whenſoever God's holy Will and Pleaſure is to lay the ſame upon us. The triumphant Paſſion and Death of Chriſt, whereby in his own Perſon he conquered Death, Sin, Hell, and Damnation, hath moſt lively been preached unto us, and the Glory of Chriſt's Croſs declared by our Preachers; whereby we have learned the Cauſes and Effects of the ſame more lively in one Sermon, than in all the Proceſſions that ever we went in, or ever ſhall go in.

When we worſhipped the Divine Trinity kneeling, and in the Litany invocating the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghoſt, asking Mercy for our Sins, and deſiring ſuch Petitions as the need of our frail Eſtate and this mortal Life required, we were edified, both to know unto whom all chriſtian Prayers ſhould be directed, and alſo to know that of God's Hand we receive all Things, as well to the Salvation of our Souls, as to the Relief of our mortal Neceſſities. And we humbly beſeech the Queen's Majeſty, that the ſame moſt holy Prayers may be continued amongſt us; that our Miniſters praying in our Mother-tongue, and we underſtanding their Prayers and Petitions, may anſwer, Amen, unto them. At Evening Service we underſtood our Miniſter's Prayers, we were taught and admoniſhed by the Scriptures then read; which in the Latin Even-ſong is all gone.

At the Miniſtration of holy Baptiſm, we learned what League and Covenant God had made with us, and what Vows and Promiſes we upon our Part had made, namely, to believe in him, to forſake Satan and his Works, and to walk in the way of God's holy Word and Commandments.

The chriſtian Catechiſm continually taught and called to Remembrance the ſame, whereas before no Man knew any Thing at all. And many good Men of forty Years, that had been Godfathers to thirty Children, knew no more of the Godfather's Office, but to waſh their Hands e're they departed the Church, or elſe to faſt five Fridays with Bread and Water.

O merciful God, have pity upon us. Shall we be altogether caſt from thy Preſence? We may well lament our miſerable Eſtate, to receive ſuch a Commandment, to reject and caſt out of our Churches all theſe moſt godly Prayers, Inſtructions, Admonitions and Doctrines, and thus to be compelled to deny God, and Chriſt our Saviour, his holy Word, and all his Doctrine of our Salvation, the Candle to our Feet, and the Light to our Steps, the Bread coming down from Heaven that giveth Life, which whoſo eateth, it ſhall be in him

Anno 1556. a Well-ſpring ſtreaming unto eternal Life; whereby we have learned all Righteouſneſs, all true Religion, all true Obedience towards our Governours, all Charity one towards another, all good Works that God would have us to walk in, what Puniſhment abideth the Wicked, and what heavenly Reward God will give to thoſe that reverently walk in his Ways and Commandments.

Wherefore Right Honourable Commiſſioners, we cannot without Impiety refuſe and caſt from us the holy Word of God which we have received, or condemn any Thing ſet forth by our moſt godly late King Edward and his virtuous Proceedings, ſo agreeable to God's Word. And our moſt humble Suit is, that the Commandment may be revoked, ſo that we not conſtrained thereunto. For we proteſt before God, we think if the holy Word of God had not taken ſome Root amongſt us, we could not in Times paſt have done that poor Duty of ours, which we did in aſſiſting the Queen, our moſt dear Sovereign, againſt her Grace's mortal Foe, that then ſought her Deſtruction. It was our bounden Duty, and we thank God for the Knowledge of his Word and Grace, that we then did ſome part of our bounden Service.

Suffolk and Norfolk Men moved by God's Word, did ſet up the Queen.

And we meekly pray and beſeech the Queen's Majeſty for the dear Paſſion of Jeſus Chriſt, that the ſame Word may not be taken away out of our Churches, nor from us her loving, faithful, and true Subjects; leſt if the like Neceſſity ſhould hereafter chance (which God for his Mercy ſake forbid, and ever ſave and defend her Grace, and us all) the Want of Knowledge and due Remembrance of God's Word may be Occaſion of great Ruin to an infinite Number of her Grace's true Subjects. And truly we judge this to be one ſubtil Part of the Devil (Enemy to all godly Peace and Quietneſs) that by taking God's Word from among us, and planting Ignorance, he may make a Way to all Miſchief and Wickedneſs; and by baniſhing the holy Goſpel of Peace he may bring upon us the heavy Wrath of God, with all manner of Plagues; as Death, ſtrange Sickneſs, Peſtilence, Murrain, moſt terrible Uproars, Commotions and Seditions. Theſe Things did the Lord threaten unto the Jews for refuſing his Word, ſaying, Go, and thou ſhalt ſay unto this People: Ye ſhall hear indeed, but ye ſhall not underſtand; ye ſhall plainly ſee, and not perceive. Harden the Heart of this People, ſtop their Ears, and ſhut their Eyes, that they ſee not with their Eyes, hear not with their Ears, underſtand not with their Hearts, and convert and be healed. And I ſaid, How long Lord? And he anſwered, Until the Cities be deſtroy'd, utterly waſted without Inhabitants, and the Houſes without Men, till the Land alſo be deſolate, and lie unbuilded. And the Prophet Micah, in the ſeventh Chapter, conſidering the Contempt of God's Word among the Iſraelites, threatned them thus: When the Day that thy Preachers warned thee of, cometh, thou ſhalt be waſted away. And let no Man believe his Friend, or put Confidence in his Brother. Keep the Door of thy Mouth from her that lieth in thy Boſom: for the Son ſhall put his Father to Diſhonour, and the Daughter ſhall riſe againſt her Mother, the Daughter-in-law againſt the Mother-in-law; and a Man's Foes ſhall be even thoſe of his own Houſehold. The ſame Plague Chriſt threatned unto the Jews, for refuſing his Peace proffer'd them in the Goſpel, and he wept on the City of Jeruſalem which murdered the Prophets, and ſtoned ſuch as were ſent unto her.

Iſaiah 6.

Luke 19.

The ſame Plagues, we are afraid, will alſo fall upon us. For whereas heretofore with the receiving of Chriſt's Word and peaceable Goſpel, we had great Benedictions of God, eſpecially this chriſtian Concord and holy Peace, ſo that all were at a full and perfect Stay in Religion, and no Man offended with another, but as the Sons of Peace, each of us with chriſtian Charity embraced other: Now, alas, for Pity, the Devil (riding upon the red Horſe, ſhewed unto St. John in the Revelation) is come forth, and Power is given unto him to take Peace from the Earth. For now a Man can go to no Place, but malicious Buſy-bodies curiouſly ſearch out his Deeds, mark his Words, and if he agree not with them in deſpiſing God's Word, then will they ſpitefully and hatefully rail againſt him and it, calling it Error and Hereſy, and the Profeſſors thereof Hereticks and Schiſmaticks, with other odious and ſpiteful Names, as Traitors and not the Queen's Friends, not Favourers of the Queen's Proceedings; as if to love God's Word were Hereſy, and as though to talk of Chriſt were to be Schiſmatick; as though none could be true to the Queen that were not falſe to God; as though none were the Queen's Friends, but ſuch as deſpitefully rail on her Grace's Father and Brother, and on God's Word that they ſet forth; as though none favoured the Queen's Majeſty, but ſuch as hate all godly Knowledge.

Rev. 6.

Loving God's Word made Hereſy.

And in very Deed theſe Things that all this Turmoil is made for, are mere Inventions of Popes, brought into the Church of their own Imaginations, without Commandment or Enſample either of Chriſt or of his Apoſtles; and there is not one Word in the Bible, that being truly alledged, maintaineth them, nor any Doctor of Antiquity before St. Auguſtine's Days, as it hath been divers Times ſufficiently proved before all the whole Parliament and Convocation of this Realm. Yet theſe being mere Traditions of Biſhops, are ſet out for God's Commandments; and the Queen's Authority (given to her of God to maintain his Word) muſt be abuſed to put down God's Word. And you, Right Honourable Juſtices, and Keepers of Laws and Righteouſneſs, are alſo abuſed and made the Biſhops Apparators, to ſet forth ſuch Romiſh Traſh as is to Chriſt's Diſhonour, and againſt the ſupreme Authority of the regal State of this Realm. And we poor Subjects, for ſpeaking of that which is Truth, and our bounden Allegiance, are daily puniſhed, railed upon, and noted for ſeditious, and not the Queen's Friends.

All that the Papiſts ſtrive for are but Man's mere Inventions beſides God's Word.

But God (who is bleſſed for ever (knoweth that they ſlander us, and pull the Thorn out of their own Foot, and put it in ours: For the Searcher of Hearts knoweth, that we bear a faithful and true Heart unto her Grace, and unto all her Proceedings, that are not againſt God and his holy Word. And we daily pray unto the heavenly Father, to enlighten her Grace's royal Heart with the glorious Light of the Goſpel, that ſhe may eſtabliſh and confirm that Religion, that her Grace's Brother, our moſt dear King did ſet out amongſt us; and ſo governing and ruling this her Realm in the fear and true way of God, ſhe may long live, and with Proſperity, Peace, and Honour reign over us.

True Subjects wrongfully ſlandered.

But we cannot think that thoſe Men do ſeek either either God's Honour, or her Grace's Prosperity, or Wealth of the Realm, that take from her Grace's faithful Subjects God's Word, which only is the Root of all Love and faithful Obedience under her Grace, and of all Honesty, good Life, and virtuous Concord among her Commons. And this we fear, lest the Root being taken away, the Branches will soon wither and be fruitless. And when the Philistines have stopped up the Well-spring, the fair Streams that should flow will soon be dried up. All our Watchmen, our true Preachers have taught us, that as long as we retained God's Word, we shall have God our gracious merciful Father; but if we refused and cast off the Lord's Yoke of his Doctrine, then shall we look for the Lord's Wrath and severe Visitation to plague us as he did the Jews for the like Offences. And Paul saith, Rom. 2. God gave to them the Spirit of Unquietness and Uproar, Eyes wherewith they should not see, and Ears wherewith they should not hear, until this Day: And as David said, Psalm 69. Let their Table be made a Snare to take themselves withal, a Trap to catch them, and a Stumbling-block to fall at. Let their Eyes be blinded that they see not, and bow thou down their Backs always.

What Unquietness followeth the Lack of God's Word.

O merciful God, all this is now come upon us, and daily more and more increased, and we fear at last it will so bow down our Backs, that we shall be utterly destroy'd; the troublesome Spirit of Uproars and Unquietness daily troubleth Mens Hearts, and worketh such Unquietness in all Places, that no Man that loveth Quietness can tell where to place himself. Men have Eyes and see not how grievous an Offence it is to cast off the Yoke of God's Doctrine, and to bear the heavy Burden that unfaithful Hypocrites lay upon us. We have Ears, and hear not the Warning of God's Word, calling us to true Repentance, nor his Threats against our Impiety. Our most sweet Table of Christ's Word and most holy Communion is taken away, and turned to a most perilous Snare, through the brawling Disputations of Men. And as the Idol of Abomination betokened final Subversion unto the Jewish Nation; so we fear, this setting aside of the Gospel and holy Communion of Christ, and the placing in of a Romish Religion, betokeneth Desolation of this noble Realm of England to be at Hand.

For the Plagues of Hunger, Pestilence and Sword, cannot long tarry; but except we repent, and turn again to the Lord, our Backs shall be so bowed, that the like horrible Plagues were never seen. And no marvel: For the like Offence was never committed, as to reject and cast off Christ and his Word, and in plain English to say, We will not have him to reign over us. O Lord how terrible is that which followeth in the Gospel? Those mine Enemies that would not have me reign over them, bring them hither, and slay them before me, Luke 19. God be merciful to us, and move the Heart of the Queen's Majesty, and the Hearts of her honourable Council, and your Hearts (right worshipful Commissioners) to weigh these Dangers in due Time; and to call God's Word into your Council, and then you shall see how it agreeth with this unreasonable Commandment; and to be as wary to avoid the Contempt of the eternal God, and Dangers of the same, as you are prudent and wise in Matters of this World, lest if the Almighty be contemned, he stretch forth his Arm which no Man can turn, and kindle his Wrath, which no Man can quench. Anno 1556.

We have humbly opened to you our Consciences, doubtless sore wounded and grieved by this Commandment; and we meekly pray and beseech the Queen's Majesty, for the precious Death and Blood-shedding of Jesus Christ our Saviour, to have Mercy and Pity upon us her Grace's poor Commons, faithful and true Subjects, Members of the same Body Politick, whereof her Grace is supreme Head. All our Bodies, Lands, Goods, and Lives are ready to do her Grace faithful Obedience, and true Service of all Commandments that are not against God and his Word: But in Things that import a Denial of Christ, and Refusal of his Word and holy Communion, we cannot consent nor agree unto it. For we have bound ourselves in Baptism to be Christ's Disciples, and to keep his holy Word and Ordinances. And if we deny him before Men, he will deny us before his heavenly Father and his holy Angels in the Day of Judgment: Which we trust her benign Grace will not require of us.

How far a Prince ought to require Obedience of his Subjects.

And we humbly beseech her Majesty, that we be not enforced unto it; but as we serve her Grace with Body and Goods, and due Obedience, according to God's Commandment; so we may be permitted freely to serve God and Christ our Saviour, and keep unto him our Souls, which he hath with his precious Blood redeemed, that so (as Christ teacheth) we may render to Cæsar that which is due to Cæsar, and to God that which is due to God.

For we think it no true Obedience unto the Queen's Majesty, or to any other Magistrate ordained of God under her, to obey in the Things contrary to God's Word, altho' the same be never so streightly charged in her Grace's Name. The Bishop of Winchester hath truly taught in the Point, in his Book of true Obedience, that true Obedience is in the Lord, and not against the Lord: As the Apostle answered before the Council at Jerusalem, commanding them no more to preach in the Name of the Lord Jesus: Judge you (said they) whether it be right in the Sight of God, to hear you rather than God. And again they said, We must obey God rather than Man. Wherefore we learn, that true Obedience is to obey God, King of all Kings, and Lord of all Lords, and for him, in him, and not against him and his Word, to obey the Princes and Magistrates of this World, who are not truly obeyed when God is disobeyed, nor yet disobeyed when God is faithfully obeyed.

How far true Obedience extendeth.

Acts 4.

Tobias disobeyed not his King, although contrary to his Commandment, and contrary to the Usage of all others, when they went to Dan and Bethel, he went unto Jerusalem, and worshipped in the Temple of the Lord. The three young Men in Babylon, refusing Nebuchadnezzar's Commandment, pleased God more than the whole Multitude that obeyed. And Daniel that prayed to the God of Heaven, contrary to King Darius's Commandment, bare a more true and faithful Heart to the King, than those wicked Counsellors that procured that wicked Law, or those that for Fear or Flattery obeyed it. Which two Pestilences (Fear and Flattery) have ever destroyed true Obedience to God and Man; when wicked Men (that care not if the Devil were worshipped, so they might get and obtain tain Riches, Promotions, Dignity, and worldly Glory) turn to and fro as every Wind bloweth; and weak and frail Men fearing Loſs of Goods, Puniſhment, or Death, do outwardly in Body that Thing, that their Hearts and Conſciences inwardly abhorreth, and ſo outwardly diſobey God, and in Heart diſſemble with Man, which Diſſimulation we think worthy the Hate of all Men, and moſt uncomely for chriſtian Men.

Fear and Flattery, Enemies to true Obedience to God and Man.

Wherefore we humbly beſeech the Queen's Majeſty, with Pity and Mercy to tender the lamentable Suit of us her poor Subjects, which be by this Commandment ſore hurt, and wounded in our Conſciences, and driven to many Miſeries, and by the malicious Attempts of wicked Men ſuffer great Wrongs and Injuries, Slanders, Loſs of Goods, and bodily Vexations. We think not good, by any unlawful Stir or Commotion to ſeek Remedy; but intend, by God's Grace, to obey her Majeſty in all Things not againſt God, and his holy Word. But unto ſuch ungodly Commandments as are againſt God, we anſwer with the Apoſtles, God muſt be obeyed rather than Man. If Perſecution ſhall enſue, which ſome threaten us with, we deſire the heavenly Father, according to his Promiſe, to look from Heaven, to hear our Cry, to judge between us and our Adverſaries, and to give us Faith, Strength and Patience to continue faithful unto the End, and to ſhorten theſe evil Days for his Choſens ſake; and ſo we faithfully believe he will.

Notwithſtanding, we truſt the Queen's gracious and merciful Heart will not ſuffer ſuch Tyranny to be done againſt her poor, innocent, faithful and obedient Subjects, that daily pray unto God for her, which have no Remedy in this World but to ſue unto her Highneſs, our moſt gracious and benign Sovereign; whom we pray and beſeech, for the dear Blood of Chriſt, to pity our lamentable Caſe and Hurt of Conſcience, and to call back all ſuch Commandments as are againſt God's Honour, as the good King Darius, Ahaſuerus, Trajan, Theodoſius, and divers others have done, and permit the holy Word of God and true Religion (ſet forth by our moſt holy and innocent King Edward) to be reſtored again unto our Churches, to be frequented amongſt us. So ſhall we grow and increaſe in the Knowledge of God and of Chriſt, in true Repentance and Amendment of Life: So ſhall we exhibit true Obedience to our lawful Magiſtrates, and all Superiors ordained of God: So ſhall Love and Charity (of late thro' this Commandment ſo decayed) be again reſtored, the Honour of her regal Eſtate the more confirmed and eſtabliſhed, and Godlineſs and virtuous Life among her loving Subjects increaſed and maintained.

And we moſt heartily pray you (Right Honourable Commiſſioners) to be Means unto the Queen's Highneſs, and to her Honourable Council, that this our humble Suit may be favourably tendered, and graciouſly heard and granted. And we ſhall not ceaſe Day and Night to pray unto the heavenly Father long to preſerve her Grace and all other Magiſtrates in his Fear and Love, and in proſperous Peace and Wealth, with long Life and Honour. Amen.

Your poor Suppliants, the Lovers of Chriſt's true Religion in Norfolk and Suffolk.

The Hiſtory of John Harpole of Rocheſter, and Joan Beach, Widow, of Tunbridge, Martyrs.

TOuching the Examination of Joan Beach, Widow, and of John Harpole, within the Dioceſe of Rocheſter, by Maurice Biſhop of the ſaid Dioceſe, mention was made before in the Story of Nicholas Hall, wherein was declared the four Articles conſiſtorial of the Biſhop, objected and laid, as unto the ſaid Nicholas Hall and his Company, ſo alſo to this Joan Beach, Widow; whereof the firſt was this:

1. That ſhe was of the Pariſh of Tunbridge, in the Dioceſe of Rocheſter.

2. Item, That all Perſons which preach, teach, believe or ſay otherwiſe or contrary to that their Mother holy catholick Church of Chriſt are excommunicate Perſons and Hereticks.

3. Item, That the ſaid Joan Beach hath, and yet doth affirm, maintain, and believe contrary to the ſaid Mother Church of Chriſt, namely, that in the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar, under Form of Bread and Wine, there is not the very Body and Blood of our Saviour in Subſtance, but only a Token and Memorial thereof; that the very Body and Blood of Chriſt is in Heaven, and not in the Sacrament.

4. Item, That ſhe hath been, and yet is, amongſt the Pariſhioners of Tunbridge, openly noted, and vehemently ſuſpected to be a Sacramentary, and Heretick.

To which aforeſaid Articles her Anſwers were theſe:

1. That ſhe was and is of the ſaid Pariſh of Tunbridge in the Dioceſe of Rocheſter.

2. That all Perſons which do preach and hold otherwiſe and contrary to that which the holy catholick Church of Chriſt doth, are to be reputed for Excommunicate and Hereticks; adding withal, that nevertheleſs ſhe believeth not the holy catholick Church to be her Mother, but believeth only the Father of Heaven to be her Father.

3. Thirdly, that ſhe hath, and yet doth verily believe, hold and affirm, in the Sacrament of the Altar under Forms of Bread and Wine, not to be the very Body and Blood of our Saviour in Subſtance, but only a Token and Remembrance of his Death to the faithful Receiver, and this his Body and Subſtance is only in Heaven, and not in the Sacrament.

Laſtly, As touching how ſhe hath been or is noted and reputed among the Pariſhioners of Tunbridge, ſhe ſaid ſhe could not tell; however ſhe believed ſhe was not ſo taken and reputed.

J. Harpole and Joan Beach, martyr'd at Rocheſter, April 1. 1556.

The like Matter, and the ſame four Articles were alſo the ſame preſent Time and Place miniſtred to John Harpole by the aforeſaid Biſhop Maurice; who after the like Anſwers received of him, as of the other before, adjudged and condemned them both together to Death, by one Form of Sentence, according to the Tenor and Courſe of their ſeveral Sentences, which may be read before in the Story of Mr. Rogers.

John Hullier, Miniſter and Martyr.

JOHN Hullier, Miniſter, was firſt brought up in Eaton-School, from whence he went to King's-College in Cambridge. He ſuffered under Dr. Thirlby, Biſhop of Ely, and his Chancellor, for the ſincere Preaching of the Goſpel. In whoſe Behalf it is much to be lamented, that among ſo many freſh Wits and ſtirring Pens in that Univerſity, ſo little Matter is left unto us concerning the Proceſs of his Judgment, and Order of his Suffering, who ſo innocently gave his Life in ſuch a Cauſe among the midſt of them. By certain Letters which he himſelf left behind, it appeared that he was zealous and earneſt in that Doctrine of Truth, which every true Chriſtian-Man ought to embrace. His Martyrdom was about the ſecond Day of April.

John Hallier martyr'd at Cambridge, April 2, 1556.

A Letter of John Hullier to the Chriſtian Congregation, exhorting them faithfully to abide in the Doctrine of the Lord.

IT ſtandeth now moſt in Hand (O dear Chriſtians) all of them that look to be accounted of Chriſt's Flock at the great and terrible Day, when a Separation ſhall be made of the Sort that ſhall be received, from the other which ſhall be refuſed, faithfully in this Time of great Afflictions to hear our Maſter Chriſt's Voice, the only true Shepherd of our Souls, who ſaith, "Whoſoever ſhall endure to "the End ſhall be ſafe." For even now is that great Trouble in Hand (as here in England we may well ſee) that our Saviour Chriſt ſpake of long before, which ſhould follow the true and ſincere Preaching of his Goſpel. Therefore in this Time we muſt needs either ſhew that we be his faithful Soldiers, and continue in his Battle unto the End, putting on the Armour of God, the Buckler of Faith, the Breaſt-Plate of Love, the Helmet of Hope and Salvation, and the Sword of his holy Word (which we have heard plentifully) with all Inſtance of Supplication and Prayer; or elſe if we do not work and labour with theſe, we are Apoſtates and falſe Soldiers, ſhrinking moſt unthankfully from our gracious and Sovereign Lord and Captain Chriſt, and leaning to Belial. For as he ſaith plainly, Luke 14. Whoſoever beareth not my Croſs and followeth me, he cannot be my Diſciple. And Matth. 6. No Man can ſerve two Maſters: For either he muſt hate the one, or love the other, or elſe he ſhall lean to the one, and deſpiſe the other. Which Thing the faithful Prophet Elias ſignified when he came to the People, and ſaid, Why halt ye between two Opinions? If the Lord be God, follow him, or if Baal be he, then follow him, 1 Kings 18.

Matth. 24.

1 Theſ. 6. Epheſ. 5.

Now let us not think, but that the ſame was recorded in Writing for our Inſtruction, whom the Ends of the World are come upon, as the Apoſtle St. Paul ſaith, Rom. 15. Whatſoever Things are written aforehand, they are written for our Learning. If Chriſt be that only good and true Shepherd that gave his Life for us, then let us that bear his Mark, and have our Conſciences ſprinkled with his Blood, follow altogether, for our Salvation, his heavenly Voice and Calling, according to our Profeſſion and firſt Promiſe. But if we ſhall not ſo do, certainly (ſay what we can) altho' we bear the Name of Chriſt, yet we be none of his Sheep indeed. For he ſaith very manifeſtly, John 10. My Sheep hear my Voice, and follow me: A Stranger they will not follow, but will flee from him, for they know not the Voice of a Stranger.

Anno 1556.

Therefore let every Man take heed in theſe perilous Days (whereof we have had ſo much Warning aforehand) that he be not beguiled by the goodly outward Shew and Appearance, as Eve was of our old ſubtle Enemy, whoſe Craft and Wilineſs is ſo manifold and divers, and ſo full of cloſe Windings, that if he cannot bring him directly, and the plain ſtrait Way to conſent to his Suggeſtions, then he will allure him and wind him in by ſome other falſe Ways (as it were by a Train) that he ſhall not perceive it, to deceive withal, and to ſteal from him that goodly Victory of the incorruptible and eternal Crown of Glory, which no Man elſe can have, but he that fighteth lawfully: As at this preſent Day, if he cannot induce him thoroughly, as others do, to favour his deviliſh Religion, and of good Will and free Heart to help to uphold the ſame, yet he will inveigle him to reſort to his wicked and whoriſh School-Houſe, and at the leaſtwiſe to be converſant and keep Company with his Congregation there, and to hold his Peace and ſay nothing, whatſoever he think, ſo that he be not a diligent Soldier and a good Labourer on Chriſt's Side, to further his Kingdom; by that ſubtle Means flattering him that he ſhall both ſave his Life, and alſo his Goods, and live in Quiet. But if we look well on Chriſt's holy Will and Teſtament, we ſhall perceive that he came not to make any ſuch Peace upon Earth, nor yet that he gave any ſuch Peace to his Diſciples; I leave Peace with you (ſaith he) my Peace I give you, not as the World giveth it, give I unto you. Let not your Heart be troubled, nor fearful. Theſe Things have I ſpoken unto you, that in me ye ſhould have Peace. In the World ye ſhall have Affliction, but be of good Chear, I have overcome the World. The Servant is not greater than his Lord and Maſter: If they have perſecuted me they ſhall alſo perſecute you. If any Man come to me, and hateth not his own Father and Mother, Wife, Children, Siſters, yea, and moreover his own Life, it is not poſſible for him to be my Diſciple. Bleſſed be ye that now weep, for ye ſhall laugh: and wo be unto you that now laugh, for ye ſhall mourn and weep. He that will find his Life, ſhall loſe it.

The Wilineſs of the ſubtle Serpent.

John 14, 15, 16.

Luke 14.

Therefore the God of that true Peace and Comfort, preſerve and keep us, that we never obey ſuch a falſe Flattering, which at length will pay us Home once for all, bringing for temporal Peace and Quietneſs, everlaſting Trouble, Vexation, and Diſquietneſs; for theſe vain and tranſitory Goods, extreme Loſs and utter Damage of the eternal Treaſure and Inheritance; for this mortal Life, Deprivation of the moſt joyful Life immortal; Finally, the Entrance into endleſs Death moſt miſerable, unmeaſurable Pain and Torment both of Body and Soul.

Now conferring theſe two Schoolmaſters together, let us conſider the Thing well, and determine with ourſelves which Way we ought to take, and not to take the common broad Way which ſeemeth here moſt pleaſant, and that the moſt Part of the People take. Surely I judge it to be better to go to School with our Maſter Chriſt, and to be under his Ferula and Rod (although it ſeemeth ſharp and grievous for a Time) that at the length we may be Inheritors with him of everlaſting Joy, rather than to keep Company with the Devil's Scholars, the adulterous Generation, in his School that is all full of Pleaſure for a while, and at the End to be paid with the Wages of continual Burning in the moſt horrible Lake which burneth evermore with Fire and Brimſtone without any End. What ſhall then theſe vain Goods and temporal Pleaſures avail? Who ſhall then help when we cry inceſſantly, Wo, wo, alas, and weal away, for unmeaſurable Pain, Grief and Sorrow? O let us therefore take heed betime, and rather be content to take Pains in this World for a Time, that we may pleaſe God. Our Saviour Chriſt the true Teacher ſaith, Every Branch that bringeth not forth Fruit in me, my Father will take away, John 15.

Ungodly Company to be avoided.

It is alſo not written in vain, Eccluſ. 41. The Children of the ungodly are abominable Children, and ſo are they that keep Company with the Ungodly. What doth he elſe, I pray you, that reſorteth to the Adminiſtration and Service that is moſt repugnant and contrary to Chriſt's Holy Teſtament, there keeping ſtill Silence, and nothing reproving the ſame, but in the Face of the World, by his very Deed itſelf, declare himſelf to be of a falſe, fearful, diſſembling, feigned, and unfaithful Heart, and to have laid away from him the Armour of Light, diſcouraging as much as lieth in him all the Reſidue of Chriſt's Hoſt, and giving a manifeſt Offence to the Weak, and alſo confirming, encouraging, and rejoicing the Hearts of the Adverſaries in all their Evil-Doing. By which Example he doth ſhew himſelf neither to love God, whom he ſeeth to be diſhonoured and blaſphemed of an Antichriſtian Miniſter, nor yet his Neighbour before whom he ſhould rebuke the Evil, as is expreſſly commanded in God's holy Law, where it is ſaid, Thou ſhalt in any wiſe rebuke thy Neighbour, that thou bear not Sin for his Sake, Lev. 18. Wherefore let ſuch a one never fancy to deceive himſelf, that his Name is regiſtred in the Book of Life, to have the Stipend of Chriſt's Soldier, except he do the Duty, and perform the Part of a faithful and right true Soldier, as others have done before. For ſuch Fearfulneſs cometh not from God, as teſtifieth St. Paul, 2 Tim. 1. ſaying, God hath not given us the Spirit of Fear, but of Power and Love. Be not aſhamed, ſaith he, to teſtify our Lord, but ſuffer Adverſity alſo with the Goſpel, through the Power of God, which ſaved us, and called us with an holy Calling.

Fearfulneſs in Chriſt's Cauſe reproved.

To be now fearful, when moſt need is that we ſhould be of ſtrong Hearts, is utterly the rejecting of the Fear of God, and plain Unfaithfulneſs and Diſobedience to the expreſs Commandment of our Saviour Chriſt, who ſaith in his holy Goſpel, Matth. 10. Fear not them that kill the Body, &c. For what Faithfulneſs do we expreſs towards him, when he ſaith thus to us, and yet we declare in our Doings the very contrary, being ever fearful, even as the unbelieving Iſraelites, who unfaithfully feared God's Enemies the Canaanites, whereas he had oftentimes given them Commandment by his true Prophet Moſes, to do the contrary? For which Cauſe all the whole Number of that Sect were deſtroyed in Proceſs of Time in the Wilderneſs, and enjoyed not the pleaſant Land of Promiſe. Which was a bodily Figure ſhewed before, and now agreeing to the Promiſe of the heavenly Inheritance, which ſhall be given to none other, but only to ſuch as with Love unfeigned be wholly bent without any Fear of Man, to fulfil God's holy Will and Pleaſure. But all they that pertain to the lively Faith, to the Winning of the Soul, will faithfully ſtick to the Commandment, truſting moſt firmly and faithfully that he that gave the ſame, will alſo give Strength plentifully to perform it, even in the weakeſt Veſſels of all, even as we have heard and ſeen by divers Examples; he only therefore be praiſed.

Numbers 13, 14. Example by the fearful Iſraelites.

St. Peter ſaith, 1 Pet. 3. Fear not though they ſeem terrible unto you, neither be troubled, but ſanctify the Lord God in your Hearts. Only (ſaith St. Paul, Phil. 1.) let your Converſation be as it becometh the Goſpel of Chriſt. Continue in one Spirit, and in one Soul, labouring as we do, to maintain the Faith of the Goſpel, and in nothing fearing your Adverſaries, which is to them a Token of Damnation, and to you of Salvation, and that of God: For unto you it is given that not only ye ſhould believe in Chriſt, but alſo ſuffer for his Sake. Wherefore let us be right well aſſured, that we ſhall yield a moſt ſtrict Account, if we tranſgreſs the ſaid moſt wholeſome Precepts given us of our Maſter Chriſt, and of his Apoſtles, and now in this troubleſome Time wherein the Goſpel is perſecuted, ſhew ourſelves fearful Soldiers; as it is manifeſtly declared in the Revelation of St. John, chap. 21. where it is written, That the fearful ſhall have their Part with the unbelieving and abominable, in the Lake that burneth with Fire and Brimſtone, which is the ſecond Death. Again, it is written in the ſame Book for our Warning, Chap. 3. Becauſe thou art betwixt both, and neither cold nor hot, I will ſpew thee out of my Mouth.

Now therefore (good Chriſtians) theſe true Teſtimonies of God's lively Word deeply conſidered and weighed, let us chiefly ſtand in Awe of his moſt terrible Judgments, and be not as they that preſumptuouſly tempt him. Let him always be our Fear and Dread. He now chaſteneth, he now nurtureth us for our Profit, delighting in us even as a loving Father in his beloved Child, to make us perfect, and to have us to be Partakers of his Holineſs. He now judgeth us (not utterly taking away his everlaſting Love and Mercy from us, as he doth from the malignant and wicked) that we ſhould not be condemned with the wicked World: But if we now refuſe his moſt loving Chaſtiſing, and follow the World, we muſt needs have our Portion with the World. Wide is the Gate, and broad is the Way that leadeth to Deſtruction, and many there be which go in thereat: But ſtrait is the Gate, and narrow is the Way that leadeth unto Life, and few there be that find it, Matt. 7. O how much better is it to go this narrow Way with the People of God, than to enjoy the Pleaſures of Sin for a Time? Iſa. 8. Prov. 3. Heb. 11. 1 Cor. 11. 2 Sam. 7.

In Conſideration whereof, let us without any more ſlacking and further Delays in this great Warning by God's loving Viſitation, ſubmit ourſelves betime under his mighty hand, that he may exalt us when the Time is come. And thus I wholly commit you to him, and to the Word of his Grace, which is able to build farther, beſeeching you moſt heartily to pray for me, that I may be ſtrong through the Power of his Might, and ſtand perfect in all Things, being always prepared and ready, looking for the Mercy of our Lord unto eternal Reſt; and I will pray for you as I am moſt bound. So I truſt he will graciouſly hear us for his Promiſe Sake made unto all the faithful in his dearly beloved Son Chriſt our alone Saviour, whoſe Grace be with your Spirit, moſt dear Chriſtians, for ever. So be it. 1 Pet. 5.

By your Chriſtian Brother, John Hullier,
a Priſoner of the Lord.

John Hullier's Letter to the Congregation of Chriſt's faithful Followers.

John Hullier being of long Time Priſoner, and now openly judged to die for the Teſtimony of the Lord Jeſus, wiſheth heartily to the whole Congregation of God, the Strength of his Holy Spirit, to their everlaſting Health both of Body and Soul.

I Now (moſt dear Chriſtians) having the ſweet Comfort of God's Saving-Health, and being confirmed with his free Spirit (he only therefore be praiſed) am conſtrained in my Conſcience, thinking it my very Duty to admoniſh you, as ye tender the Salvation of your Souls, by all Manner of Means to ſeparate yourſelves from the Company of the Pope's Hirelings, conſidering what is ſaid in the Revela-
Rev. 14. tion of St. John, by the Angel of God touching all Men. The Words be theſe; If any Man worſhip the Beaſt and his Image, and receive his Mark in his Forehead, or in his Hand, the ſame ſhall drink the Wine of the Wrath of God, which is poured into the Cup of his Wrath, and he ſhall be puniſhed with Fire and Brimſtone before the holy Angels, and before the Lamb, and the Smoke of their Torment aſcendeth up evermore. Mark well here (good Chriſtians) who is this Beaſt and Worſhippers that ſhall be Partakers of that unſpeakable Torment. The Beaſt is none other but the carnal and fleſhly Kingdom of Antichriſt, the Pope with his Rabble of falſe Prophets and Miniſters, as it is moſt manifeſt: which to maintain their high Titles, worldly Promotions and Dignities, do with much Cruelty, daily more and more ſet forth and eſtabliſh their own Traditions, Decrees, Decretals, contrary to God's holy Ordinances, Statutes, Laws, and Commandments, and wholly repugnant to his ſincere and pure Reli-
2 Pet. 2. gion and true worſhipping.

Now what do they elſe but worſhip this Beaſt and his Image, who after they had onee already eſcaped from the Filthineſs of the World, through the Knowledge of the Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, are yet again intangled therein and overcome, uſing Diſſimulation unfaithfully for Fear of their Diſpleaſure, doing one Thing outwardly, and thinking inwardly another; ſo having them in Reverence under a Cloak and Colour, to whom they ought not ſo much as to ſay, God ſpeed; and adjoining themſelves to the malignant Congregation,
John 10. which they ought to abhor as a Den of Thieves and Murderers, and as the Brothel-houſe of moſt blaſphemous Fornicators: whoſe Voices being contrary to Chriſt's Voice, if they were of his Flock, they would not know, but would flee from them; as he himſelf being the good Shepherd of our Souls doth full well in his holy Goſpel teſtify. Again, what do they elſe I pray you, but receive the Beaſt's Mark in their Foreheads and in their Hands, which do bear a fair Face and Countenance outwardly in ſupporting them as others do, being aſhamed openly to confeſs Chriſt and his holy Goſpel? But this Fainedneſs and Diſſimulation Chriſt and his Goſpel will in no wiſe allow. Of whom it is ſaid, Luke 9. Whoſoever ſhall be aſhamed of me and of my Words in this adulterous and ſinful Generation, of him alſo ſhall the Son of Man be aſhamed, when he ſhall come in the Glory of his Father with his holy Angels. Therefore ſaith Almighty God by his Prophet Malachi, Mal. 1. Curſed be the Diſſemblers. Ye were once enlightened, and taſted of the heavenly Gift, and were become Partakers of the Holy Ghoſt, and taſted of the Word of God, and of the Power of the World to come. And our Saviour ſaith, Luke 6. No Man that putteth his Hand to the Plough, and looketh back, is fit for the Kingdom of God. Therefore St. John the Apoſtle uſeth this for a manifeſt Token, that the Backſliding of the true Preachers of God's Word declare evidently, that they be not of the Number of them. For, ſaith he, 1 John 2. They went out from us, but they were not of us; for if they had been of us, no Doubt they would have continued with us. Surely ſo long as we uſe Diſſimulation, and to play on both Hands, we are not in the Light. For whatſoever is manifeſt, the ſame is Light, as the elect Veſſel of God, St. Paul, witneſſeth in the fourth Chapter to the Epheſians. Anno 1556.

Wherefore (good Chriſtians) for God's moſt dear Love, deceive not yourſelves through your own Wiſdom, and through the Wiſdom of the World, which is Fooliſhneſs before God; but certify and ſtay your own Conſcience with the ſure Truth and faithful Word of God, and with the infallible Teſtimonies of holy Scripture. For although God's Mercy is over all his Works; yet it doth not extend but only to them that hold faſt the Confidence and Rejoicing of Hope unto the End, not being weary in well-doing, but rather waxing every Day ſtronger and ſtronger in the inward Man. Therefore in the Revelation of St. John, where it is entreated of the Beaſt and his Image, it is alſo ſaid, Here is the Sufferance of the Saints, and here are they that keep the Commandments, and the Faith of Jeſus Chriſt, Rev. 13. Whereby Almighty God doth ſhew plainly, that he doth uſe thoſe wicked Men as Inſtruments for a Time, to try the Patience and Faith of his peculiar People, without the Performance whereof we can have no Part among the Living; but as it is ſaid in the ſame Revelation, The fearful ſhall have their Part in the Lake that burneth with Fire and Brimſtone, which is the ſecond Death.

But peradventure ye will object and ſay unto me; What ſhall we do? Shall we caſt ourſelves Headlong to Death? I ſay not ſo. But this I ſay, that we are all bound (if ever we look to receive Salvation at God's Hand) in this Caſe wholly to be obedient to his determinate Counſel and Fore-knowledge, expreſſed by the Gift of the Spirit in holy Scripture; and then to caſt all our Care upon him, who worketh all in all for the beſt unto them that love him: And thus he giveth Commandment, ſaying, Come away from her my People, that ye be not Partakers of her Sins, and that ye receive not of her Plagues, Rev. 18. Now who hearing this terrible Voice of God, which muſt needs be fulfilled, will not with all Speed and Diligence apply himſelf to do thereafter, except ſuch as will preſumptuouſly tempt him? and as touching ſuch, the wiſe Man ſaith, Eccleſ. 3. He that loveth Peril and Danger ſhall periſh therein. But they that be of the Faith of Abraham, even as he did, ſo will they in all Aſſays and Trials be obedient to the heavenly Voice, howſoever it ſeemeth contrary to their own natural Will and carnal Reaſon, according to the ſure Word of Faith, which ſaith, Hope thou in the Lord, and keep his Way: Hold thee ſtill in the Lord, and abide patiently upon him. Let not thy Jealouſy alſo move thee to do Evil. Come out from among them, and join not yourſelves to their unlawful Aſſemblies; yea, do not once ſhew yourſelves with the leaſt Part of your Body to favour their wicked Doings, but glorify God (as moſt right is) as well in your whole Body outwardly, as inwardly in your Spirit, or elſe you can do neither of both well; for your Body doth belong to God as well as your Spirit. At the dreadful Day of Judgment we ſhall all receive the Works of our Bodies, according to that we have done, whether it be good or bad.

Therefore whatſoever we do, we may not bring the Spirit in Bondage to the Body, but contrariwiſe muſt ſubdue the Body and the Will of the Fleſh to the Spirit, that the Spirit may freely accompliſh the Will of God in all Things; for otherwiſe we ſhall never be Partakers of his Promiſe, with the true Children of Abraham. For as St. Paul ſaith, They which are the Children of the Fleſh, are not the Children of God. If we ſhall live according to the Fleſh, we ſhall die. For to be carnally-minded, is Death; but to be ſpiritually-minded, is Life and Peace; becauſe that the fleſhly Mind is Enmity to God: For it is not obedient to the Law of God, neither can be. So then they that are in the Fleſh cannot pleaſe God. Now chuſe you which Way you will take; either the narrow Way that leadeth unto Life, which Chriſt himſelf, and his faithful Followers have gone through before; or elſe the broad Path-way that leadeth to Deſtruction, which the wicked Worldlings take their Pleaſure in for a while. I for my Part have now written this ſhort Admonition unto you of good Will (as God is my Witneſs) to exhort you to that Way, which at length you yourſelves ſhall prove and find to be beſt, yea and rejoice thereof. And I do not only write this, but I will alſo (with the Aſſiſtance of God's Grace) ratify and confirm, and ſeal the ſame with the Effuſion of my Blood, when the full Time ſhall be expired that he hath appointed; which (ſo far forth as I may judge) muſt needs be within theſe few Days. Therefore I now bid you all moſt heartily farewel, in the Lord, whoſe Grace be with your Spirit, Amen. Watch and pray, watch and pray, pray, pray. So be it.

John Hullier.

The Martyrdom of ſix conſtant Profeſſors of Chriſt, burned at Colcheſter for the Teſtimony of the Goſpel, the 28th Day of April.

NOT long after the Death of Robert Drakes, Williams Tyms, and the other Eſſex Martyrs, who ſuffered in Smithfield, as is before ſpecified, followed in the ſame Order likewiſe of Martyrdom, at one Fire in the Town of Colcheſter, (where moſt of them inhabited) ſix other Martyrs, whoſe Names be theſe:

Chriſtopher Lyſter, of Dagenham, Husbandman. John Mace, of Colcheſter, Apothecary. John Spencer, of Colcheſter, Weaver. Simon Joyne, Sawyer. Richard Nichols, of Colcheſter, Weaver. John Hammond, of Colcheſter, Tanner.

With theſe ſix was alſo joined another, whoſe Name was Roger Grasbroke, but he afterwards ſubmitted himſelf. Of theſe abovenamed, the Biſhop, becauſe he (as it ſeemed by the ſhort Proceſs recorded by his Regiſter) waxed now weary, made a very quick Diſpatch. For ſoon after that they were delivered unto one John Kingſtone, Batchelor of the civil Law, and then Commiſſary to the Biſhop, by the Earl of Oxford and other Commiſſioners (as appeareth by a Bill indented made between the Commiſſioners and the ſaid Commiſſary, for the Receipt of the ſaid Priſoners, dated March the 28th, in the ſecond and third Years of the Reign of King Philip and Queen Mary, which was in the Year of our Lord 1556.) and by him ſent up unto his Lord and Maſter, the Biſhop cauſed them to be brought unto his Houſe of Fulham: Where in the open Church, judicially were miniſtred unto them the ſame Articles that were propounded unto Bartlet Green and others, mentioned before. To which they made their ſeveral Anſwers, agreeing altogether in one Truth, as by the Sum and Effect thereof here enſuing more plainly appeareth.

1. To the firſt Article they all conſented and agreed; John Spencer adding further thereto, that the Church malignant, which is the Church of Rome, is no Part of Chriſt's Catholick Church; and that he neither hath nor doth believe the Doctrine and Religion taught and ſet forth in the ſaid Romiſh and Malignant Church.

2. To the ſecond they anſwered, That they believed that in the true Catholick Church of Chriſt there be but two Sacraments; that is to ſay, the Sacrament of Baptiſm, and the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Chriſt.

3. To the third Article they all agreed, confeſſing that they were baptiſed in the Faith and Belief of the Catholick Church, and that their Godfathers and Godmothers had profeſſed and promiſed for them, as is contained in the ſame Article.

4. To the fourth they anſwered, That they always were, and yet then did continue in the Faith and Profeſſion wherein they were baptized; Richard Nichols adding alſo, that he had more plainly learned the Truth of his Profeſſion by the Doctrine ſet forth in King Edward the ſixth's Days, and thereupon he had built his Faith, and would continue in the ſame to his Life's End, God aſſiſting him.

5. To the fifth they anſwered, That they neither ſwerved nor went away from the Catholick Faith of Chriſt. Howbeit they confeſſed, that within the Time articulate (and before) they had miſliked, and earneſtly ſpoken againſt the Sacrifice of the Maſs, and againſt the Sacrament of the Altar, affirming that they would not come to hear or be Partakers thereof, becauſe they had, and then did believe, that they were ſet forth and uſed contrary to God's Word and Glory. And moreover they did grant, that they had ſpoken againſt the uſurped Authority of the Biſhop of Rome, as an Oppreſſor of Chriſt's Church and Goſpel, and that he ought not to have any Authority in England. For all which Sayings they were no whit ſorry, but rather rejoiced and were glad.

6. To the ſixth they anſwered, that they never refuſed, nor yet then preſently did refuſe to be reconciled to the Unity of Chriſt's Catholick Church: But they ſaid they had, and then did, and ſo ever would hereafter utterly refuſe to come to the Church of Rome, or to acknowledge the Authority of the Seat thereof, but did utterly abhor the ſame, for putting down the Book of God, the Bible, and ſetting up the Babylonical Maſs, with all other of Antichriſt's Merchandize.

7. To the ſeventh Article, the Effect thereof they all granted. And Simon Joyne declared further, that the Cauſe of his refuſing to be Partaker of their Trumpery was, for that the Commandments of God were there broken, and Chriſt's Ordinances changed and put out, and the Biſhop of Rome's Ordinances inſtead thereof put in. Moreover, as touching the Sacrament of Chriſt's Body, Chriſtopher Lyſter affirmed, that in the ſaid Sacrament there is the Subſtance of Bread and Wine, as well after the Words of Conſecration as before, and that there is not in the ſame the very Body and Blood of Chriſt really, ſubſtantially and truly, but only ſacramentally and ſpiritually by Faith in the faithful Receivers; and that the Maſs is not propitiatory for the Quick or for the Dead, but meer Idolatry and Abomination.

8. To the Eighth they ſaid that they were ſent to Colcheſter Priſon by the King and Queen's Commiſſioners, becauſe they would not come to to their Pariſh Churches, and by them ſent unto the Biſhop of London to be thereof further examined.

9. To the ninth they all generally agreed, That that which they had ſaid in the Premiſſes was true, and that they were of the Dioceſs of London.

Theſe Anſwers thus made, the Biſhop diſmiſs'd them for that preſent until the Afternoon. At which Time having firſt their Articles and Anſwers read unto them again, and they ſtanding moſt firmly unto their Chriſtian Profeſſion, they were by divers Ways and Means eſſayed and tried if they would revoke the ſame their profeſſed Faith, and return to the Unity of Antichriſt's Church.

Which when they refuſed, the Biſhop ſtoutly pronounced the Sentence of Condemnation againſt them, committing them unto the ſecular Power. Who, upon the Receipt of the King and Queen's Writ, ſent them unto Colcheſter, where the 28th Day of April, moſt cheerfully they ended their Lives, to the Glory of God's holy Name, and the great Encouragement of others.

Hugh Laverock, an old Man, John Apprice, a blind Man, Martyrs, burned at Stratford le Bow.

IN the Diſcourſe of this Parcel or Part of Hiſtory, I know not whether more to marvel at the great and unſearchable Mercies of God (with whom there is no Reſpect in Degrees of Perſons, but he chooſeth as well the Poor, Lame and Blind, as the rich, mighty, and healthful, to ſet forth his Glory) or elſe to note the unreaſonable, or rather unnatural Doing of theſe unmerciful Catholicks, I mean Biſhop Bonner and his Accomplices, in whom was ſo little Favour or Mercy to all Sorts and Kinds of Men, that they ſpared neither impotent Age, neither Lame nor Blind, as may well appear by theſe poor Creatures whoſe Names and Stories here under follow.

Hugh Laverock, of the Pariſh of Barking, Painter, of the Age of 68, a Cripple. John Apprice, a blind Man. Anno 1556.

Theſe two poor and ſimple Creatures being belike accuſed by ſome promoting Neighbour of theirs, unto the Biſhop and other of the King and Queen's Commiſſioners, were ſent for by their Officer; and ſo being brought and delivered into the Hands of the ſaid Biſhop, were the firſt Day of May examined before him in his Palace at London; where he firſt propounded and objected againſt them thoſe nine Articles, whereof mention is made before, miniſtred as well unto Bartlet Greene, as alſo unto many others. To which they anſwered in Effect, as Chriſtopher Lyſter, John Mace, and others before-mentioned had done.

Whereupon they were again ſent to Priſon, and beſide other Times, the ninth Day of the ſame Month, in the Conſiſtory of St. Paul's were again openly produced, and there (after the old Order) travelled withal to recant their Opinions againſt the Sacrament of the Altar. The Words of Hugh Laverock to Bonner.

Whereunto Hugh Laverock firſt ſaid, I will ſtand to mine Anſwers, and to that I have confeſſed; and I cannot find in the Scriptures, that the Prieſts ſhould lift up over their Head a Cake of Bread.

The Biſhop then turned unto John Apprice, and asked what he would ſay.

To whom he anſwered, Your Doctrine that ye ſet forth and teach, is ſo agreeable with the World, and embraced of the ſame, that it cannot be agreeable with the Scripture of God. And ye are not of the Catholick Church; for ye make Laws to kill Men, and make the Queen your Hangman. The Words of John Apprice to the Biſhop.

At which Words the Biſhop belike ſomewhat tickled, and therefore very loth to delay their Condemnation any longer (ſuch was now his hot burning Charity) commanded that they ſhould be brought after him unto Fulham, whither he went before Dinner, and there in the Afternoon, after his ſolemn Manner, in the open Church, he pronounced the definitive Sentence of Condemnation againſt them, and ſo delivering them into the Hands of the temporal Officer, thought to diſpatch his Hands of them, but could not ſo diſpatch his Conſcience before the Judgment of God, from the Guiltineſs of innocent Blood. Sentence of Condemnation given againſt Hugh Laverock and John Apprice.

The poor Men being now in the temporal Officers Hands, might not be ſuffered long to remain there, and therefore the fifteenth Day of May, very early in the Morning, they were carried in a Cart from Newgate to Stratford le Bow, and moſt quietly in the Fire praiſing God, yielded up their Souls into his Hands, through a lively Faith in Jeſus Chriſt, whom unto the End they did moſt conſtantly confeſs.

At their Death, Hugh Laverock, after he was chained, caſt away his Crutch, and comforting John Apprice, his Fellow-Martyr, ſaid unto him: Be of good Comfort, my Brother, for my Lord of London is our good Phyſician. He will heal us both ſhortly, thee of thy Blindneſs, and me of my Lameneſs. And ſo patiently they ſuffered together.

Anno 1556.

The Martyrdom of Katherine Hut, Elizabeth Thackvel, and Joan Horns, in Smithfield.

THE next Day after the Martyrdom of this lame and blind Man above ſpecified, in the ſaid Month of May, were brought to the Fire three Women, with whom alſo was adjoined another, who being in the ſame Conſtancy with them, was likewiſe Partaker of the ſaid Condemnation. Their Names were:

Katherine Hut, of Bocking, Widow. Joan Horns of Billerica, Maid. Elizabeth Thackvel, of Great-Burſted, Maid. Margaret Ellis of Billerica, Maid.

How theſe with divers others were perſecuted and ſent up, eſpecially by Sir John Mordant, and Edmund Tyrel, Eſquire, Juſtices of Peace, the following Letter will declare.

A Letter ſent unto Bonner Biſhop of London, from Sir John Mordant, Knight, and Edmund Tyrel, Eſq; Juſtices of Peace for the County of Eſſex.

OUR humble Commendations to your Lordſhip; theſe ſhall be to advertiſe you, that we have ſent unto your good Lordſhip Joan Potter, the Wife of Hugh Potter, James Harris, Servant of William Harris of Bromhill, and Margaret Ellis, for that they be not conformable to the Orders of the Church, nor to the real Preſence of Chriſt's Body and Blood in the Sacrament of the Altar, to uſe your Lordſhip's Pleaſure with them, as you think good; not doubting with the Puniſhment of theſe and others before ſent to your Lordſhip, but that the Pariſh of Great-Burſted and Billerica ſhall be brought to good Conformity. Thus, committing your good Lordſhip to the Tuition of the Almighty God, we take our Leave. From Great-Burſted this preſent ſecond Day of March, 1556.

Your Lordſhip's to command,

John Mordant, Edmund Tyrel.

After the Receipt of theſe Letters, Biſhop Bonner entring to Examination of theſe four Women abovenamed, laid and objected the like Articles to them, as after his uſual Form he was uſed to adminiſter, and are before expreſſed: Whereunto the ſaid Women likewiſe agreeing in the ſame Unity of the Spirit and Doctrine, accorded in their Anſwers, much agreeing unto the other before them.

1. As firſt, to the Article in the firſt Place objected, they conſented and granted, believing the ſaid Article to be true in every Part thereof.

The ſimple Ignorance of theſe Women had more Need to be inſtructed, than to be burnt.

2. To the ſecond, partly they anſwered, they could not tell what a Sacrament is; Elizabeth Thackvel, and Katharine Hut adding moreover, that Matrimony, and Baptiſm, and the Lord's Supper were Sacraments ordained in the Church: But whether the other ſpecify'd in this Article be Sacraments (as they heard them called) ordained by God or not, they could not tell. Margaret Ellis being examined ſeverally, as the others were, upon the ſame, how many Sacraments there were, anſwered, (as a young Maid unskilled, in her ſimple Ignorance) that ſhe could not tell. However ſhe had heard, ſhe ſaid, that there was one Sacrament, but what it was ſhe could not tell, &c.

3. To the third likewiſe they granted, that they were baptized by their Godfathers and Godmothers, which Godfathers and Godmothers (ſaid Margaret Ellis) did not then know ſo much, as ſhe doth now know: Katherine Hut adding withal, and ſaying, that ſhe was baptized; but what her Godfather and Godmothers did then promiſe for her in her Name, ſhe could nor tell, &c.

4. To the fourth Article Margaret Ellis and Elizabeth Thackvel did grant thereunto: Katherine Hut ſaid moreover, that ſhe, being of the Age of fourteen Years, was of the Faith wherein ſhe was chriſtned; and yet nevertheleſs the ſaid Faith in that Age (ſhe ſaid) was but a dead Faith, becauſe ſhe did not then underſtand what ſhe did believe. Joan Horns added, that ſhe being eleven Years of Age, began to learn the Faith ſet forth in King Edward's Days, in which Faith and Religion (ſhe ſaid) ſhe hath hitherto, and yet doth, and ſo will hereafter continue, God ſo aſſiſting her.

5. To the fifth Article they anſwered and confeſſed, according all in this Effect, that as touching the Maſs, they knew no Goodneſs in it; and as touching the Sacrament of the Altar, they believed that Chriſt's natural Body is in Heaven, and not in the Sacrament of the Altar: And as concerning the See of Rome, they acknowledged no ſuch Supremacy in that See, neither have they any thing to do therewith.

6. In anſwering the ſixth Article, they did all generally refuſe to be reconciled or united to the Church of Rome, or any other Church, contrary to that wherein they now ſtood and did profeſs.

7. To the ſeventh Article they anſwered likewiſe, that they had ſo done and ſaid in all Things, as it is in this Article contained: Katherine Hut adding moreover the Reaſon why; for that (ſaid ſhe) neither the Service in Latin, Maſs, Mattins, and Even-ſong, nor the Sacraments were uſed and miniſtred according to God's Word: And furthermore, that the Maſs is an Idol, neither is the true Body and Blood of Chriſt in the Sacrament of the Altar, as they make Men believe.

8. The Anſwer to the eighth Article, declared that they were all and every one ſent up to Bonner by Sir John Mordant, Knight, and Juſtice of Peace in Eſſex (the Lord of his Mercy ſend us better Juſtices I beſeech him) for that they could not affirm the Preſence of Chriſt's Body and Blood to be truly and really in the Sacrament, and for that they came not to their Popiſh Pariſh-church.

9. To the ninth Article, they anſwered and confeſſed the Premiſſes thereof to be true, and deny'd not the ſame; ſave that Catherine Hut ſaid, that ſhe was of Bocking in Eſſex of the peculiar Juriſdiction of Canterbury, and not of the Dioceſs and Juriſdiction of London.

After theſe their Anſwers received, they were produced again about the thirteenth of April to further Examination, and ſo at length to their final Judgment; where Katherine Hut, Widow, ſtanding before the Biſhop, boldly boldly and constantly stood to that which she had said before, neither yielding to his fair Promises, nor overthrown with his Terror. Who being required to declare her Mind concerning the Sacrament, and to revoke herself unto the Fellowship of the catholick Faith, openly protested, saying, I deny it to be God, because it is a dumb God, and made with Men's Hands. Wherein the good and faithful Martyr of Christ firmly persisting, so received her Sentence, being condemned to the Fire by Bishop Bonner; which she with great Constancy sustained by the Grace and Strength of the Lord, and did abide for the Cause and Love of Christ.

Joan Horns, Maid, produced likewise to her Judgment and Condemnation, with like Firmness and christian Fortitude declared herself a true Martyr and Follower of Christ's Testament, giving no Place to the Adversary; but being charged that she did not believe the Sacrament of Christ's Body and Blood to be Christ himself, of which Sacrament (contrary to the Nature of a Sacrament) the Adversaries are wont to make an idol Service; to this she protesting openly her Mind, said as followeth; If you can make your God to shed Blood, or to shew any Condition of a true lively Body, then will I believe you: But it is but Bread (as touching the Substance thereof) meaning the Matter whereof the Sacrament consisteth; and that which you call Heresy, I trust to serve my Lord God in, &c.

And as concerning the Romish See, she said, My Lord (speaking to Bonner) I forsake all his Abominations, and from them good Lord deliver us. From this her stable and constant Assertion, when the Bishop was too weak to remove her, and too ignorant to convince her, he knock'd her down with the butcherly Ax of his Sentence. And so the holy Virgin and Martyr committed to the Shambles of the secular Sword, was offered up with her other Fellows a burnt Sacrifice to the Lord, in the Savour of a sweet and pleasant Smell.

As touching Margaret Ellis, she likewise persevering in her foresaid Confession, and resisting the false catholick Errors of the Papists, was by the said Bonner adjudged and condemned; but before the Time of her burning came, prevented by Death in Newgate, departed and slept in the Lord.

No less Strength in the Grace of the Lord appeared in the other Maid Elizabeth Thackvell, whose Heart and Mind the Lord had so confirmed in his Truth, so armed with Patience, that as her Adversaries could by no sufficient Knowledge of Scripture convince her Affirmation, so by no forcible Attempts they could remove her Confession. Whereupon she standing to the Death, being in like Sort condemned, by the said unbishoplike Persecutor, gave her Life willingly and mildly for the Confirmation and sealing up of the sincere Truth of God's Word.

These three innocent and godly Women, thus falsly and wrongfully by Men condemned for the just Quarrel and Cause of God's Gospel, were had to Smithfield, and there cruelly bound to the Stake, gave their Bodies to the Tormentors, their Spirits they commended to God. For whose Glory they were willing and ready to suffer whatsoever the cruel Hands of their Enemies should work against them, dying more joyfully in the flaming Fire, than some of them that burned them did peradventure in their Beds. Such a Lord is God, glorious and wonderful in all his Saints. The Martyrdom of these Saints of God was the 16th Day of May. Anno 1556.

Thomas Drowry a blind Boy, and Thomas Croker, Bricklayer, Martyrs.

A Little before ye have heard of two Men, the one blind and the other lame, which suffered about the 15th of May. And here is not to be forgotten another as godly a Couple, who suffer'd the like Passion and Martyrdom for the same Cause of Religion at Glouceſter: Of which two, the one was a blind Boy named Thomas Drowry, mentioned before in the History of Bishop Hooper, whom the said virtuous Bishop confirmed then in the Lord, and in the Doctrine of his Word.

How long this blind Boy was in Prison, and in what Year he suffered, I am not certain. Of this credible Intelligence I have received by the Testimony of the Register then of Glouceſter, named John Taylor, alias Barker, that the said blind Boy at his last Examination and final Condemnation, was brought (by the Officers, under whose Custody he had remained) before Dr. Williams then Chancellor of Glouceſter, sitting judicially with the said Register in the Consistory, near unto the South-door, in the nether End of the Church of Glouceſter. Where the said Chancellor then ministred unto the Boy such usual Articles as are accustomed in such Cases, and are sundry Times mentioned in this Book. Amongst which, he chiefly urged the Article of Transubstantiation, saying in Effect as followeth.

Chancellor. Dost thou not believe, that after the Words of Consecration spoken by the Priest, there remaineth the very real Body of Christ in the Sacrament of the Altar?

To whom Thomas Drowry answered, No, that I do not.

Chancellor. Then thou art an Heretick, and shalt be burned. But who hath taught thee this Heresy?

Drowry. You master Chancellor.

Chancellor. Where I pray thee?

Drowry. Even in yonder Place; pointing with his Hand, and turning towards the Pulpit, standing upon the North side of the Church.

Chancellor. When did I teach thee so?

Drowry. When you preached there (naming the Day) a Sermon to all Men as well as to me, upon the Sacrament. You said the Sacrament was to be received spiritually by Faith, and not carnally and really, as the Papists have heretofore taught.

Chancellor. Then do as I have done, and thou shalt live as I do, and escape burning.

Drowry. Though you can so easily dispense with yourself, and mock with God, the World, and your own Conscience, yet will not I so do.

Chancellor. Then God have Mercy upon thee, for I will read the Condemnation Sentence against thee.

Drowry. God's Will be fulfilled.

The Register being herewith somewhat moved, stood up and said to the Chancellor,

Anno 1556.

Fie for Shame, Man, will you read the Sentence againſt him, and condemn yourſelf? Away, away, and ſubſtitute ſome other to give Sentence and Judgment.

Chancellor. No, Regiſter, I will obey the Law, and give Sentence myſelf according to mine Office.

And ſo he read the Sentence condemnatory againſt the Boy (with an unhappy Tongue, and a more unhappy Conſcience) delivering him over to the ſecular Power. Who the ſaid fifth Day of May, brought the ſaid blind Boy to the Place of Execution at Glouceſter; together with one Thomas Croker a Bricklayer, condemned alſo for the like Teſtimony of the Truth. Where both together in one Fire moſt conſtantly and joytully yielded their Souls into the Hands of the Lord Jeſus.

Perſecution in Suffolk.

AFter the Death of theſe above rehearſed, were three Men burnt at Beckles in Suffolk, in one Fire about the 21ſt Day of May, Anno 1556. Whoſe Names are here ſpecify'd.

Thomas Spicer of Winſton, Labourer; John Denny and Edmund Poole.

This Thomas Spicer was a ſingle Man, of the Age of nineteen Years, and by Vocation a Labourer, dwelling in Winſton in the County of Suffolk, and there taken in his Maſter's Houſe in Summer, about, or ſoon after Sun-riſing (being in his Bed) by James Ling and John Keretch of the ſame Town, and William Davies of Debnam in the ſaid County.

He was apprehended for not coming to hear Maſs, and becauſe he would not receive their Idol at the Commandment of Sir John Tyrrel Knight, of Gipping-hall in Suffolk, and certain other Juſtices there, who ſent both him and them to the Dungeon in the Town of Eye in Suffolk, from whence they were all three together brought before Dunning, then Chancellor of Norwich, and Mr. Mings the Regiſter ſitting at the Town of Beckles to be examined.

And there the Chancellor endeavoured, but to no purpoſe, to perſuade them from the Truth. Wherefore minding in the End to give Sentence on them, he burſt out into Tears, intreating them to remember themſelves, and to turn again to the holy Mother-church, for that they were deceived and out of the Truth, and that they ought not wilfully to caſt themſelves away, with ſuch like Words.

As he was thus labouring with them, and ſeemed very loth to read the Sentence (for they were the firſt that he condemned in that Dioceſs) the Regiſter there ſitting by, being weary belike of tarrying, or elſe perceiving the conſtant Martyrs to be at a Point, called upon the Chancellor in haſte to rid them out of the Way, and to make an End. At which Words the Chancellor read the Condemnation over them with Tears, and deliver'd them to the ſecular Power.

The Articles objected to theſe, and commonly to all others condemned in that Dioceſs by Dr. Hopton Biſhop of Norwich, and by Dunning his Chancellor, were theſe:

1. Firſt, It was articulate againſt them, that they believed not the Pope of Rome to be ſupreme Head immediately under Chriſt in Earth of the univerſal catholick Church.

2. Item, That they believed not holy Bread and holy Water, Aſhes, Palms, and all other like Ceremonies uſed in the Church, to be good and laudable for ſtirring up the People to Devotion.

3. Item, That they believed not, after the Words of Conſecration ſpoken by the Prieſt, the very natural Body of Chriſt, and no other Subſtance of Bread and Wine to be in the Sacrament of the Altar.

4. Item, That they believed it to be Idolatry to worſhip Chriſt in the Sacrament of the Altar.

5. Item, That they took Bread and Wine in Remembrance of Chriſt's Paſſion.

6. Item, That they would not follow the Croſs in Proceſſion, nor be confeſſed to a Prieſt.

7. Item, That they affirmed no mortal Man to have in himſelf Free-will to do good or evil.

For this Doctrine and theſe Articles they were all three condemned by Dr. Dunning, and committed to the ſecular Power, Sir John Silliard being high Sheriff of Norfolk and Suffolk at the ſame Time.

And the next Day following they were all burnt together in the Town of Beckles. Whereupon it is to be thought, that the Writ De Comburendo, was not yet come down, nor could be, the Lord Chancellor Heath being at London the ſame Time. Which, if it be true, then it is plain that both they went beyond their Commiſſions, that were the Executioners, and alſo the Clergy which were the Inſtigators thereof, cannot make good what they now pretend; ſaying, that they did nothing but by Law. But this let the Lord find out when he ſeeth his Time.

In the mean Time while theſe good Men were at the Stake, they pray'd, and ſaid their Belief; and when they mention'd the Catholick Church, Sir John Silliard ſpake to them; That is well ſaid, Sirs, quoth he, I am glad to hear you ſay you do believe the Catholick Church. That is the beſt Word I have heard of you yet.

To which his Sayings Edmund Poole anſwered, That though they believed the Catholick Church, yet do they not believe in their Popiſh Church, which is no Part of Chriſt's Catholick Church, and therefore no part of their Belief.

When they aroſe from Prayer, they all went joyfully to the Stake, and being bound thereto and the Fire burning about them, they praiſed God in ſuch an audible Voice, that it was wonderful to all thoſe that ſtood by and heard them.

Then one Robert Bacon, dwelling in the ſaid Beckles, a very Enemy of God's Truth, and a Perſecutor of his People, being there preſent within Hearing thereof, willed the Tormentors to throw one Faggot to ſtop the Breath of the Knaves, as he termed them; ſo hot was his burning Charity. But theſe good Men not regarding their Malice, confeſſed the Truth, and yielded their Lives to Death for the Teſtimony of the ſame, very glorioufly and joyfully. Which Conſtancy the Lord grant we may imitate, whether it be by Death or by Life, to glorify the Name of Chriſt, Amen.

And foraſmuch as we have here enter'd into the Perſecution of Norfolk and Suffolk, it cometh therefore to mind, by Occaſion hereof, briefly to touch by the Way, ſome part (for the whole Matter cannot be ſo expreſs'd as it was done) touching the Troubles of the Town of Winſon and Mendleſam in Suffolk, raiſed and ſtirred by the ſaid Sir John Tyrrel and other Juſtices there of the like Affinity. The Sum and Effect of which briefly is thus ſignify'd to me by Writing.

The Perſecution in the Towns of Winſon and Mendleſam in Suffolk.

BY the Procurement of Sir John Tyrrel, Knt. and others of his Colleagues, there were perſecuted out of the Town of Winſon in Suffolk, theſe Perſons hereafter following.

Mrs. Alice Twaites, Gentlewoman, of the Age of threeſcore Years and more, and two of her Servants.

Humphrey Smith and his Wife.
William Catchpoole and his Wife.
John Mauling and his Wife.
Nicholas Burlingham and his Wife.
And one Rought and his Wife.

Such as were perſecuted and driven out of the Town of Meudleſam, in the County of Suffolk.

Simon Harlſtone, and Katherine his Wife, with his five Children.
William Whitting, and Katherine his Wife.
Thomas Dobſon and his Wife.
Thomas Hubbard and his Wife.
John Doncon and his Wife and Maid.
William Doncon.
Thomas Woodward the Elder.
———Konnold's Wife.
A poor Widow.
One Mother Semon's Maid.

Beſides thoſe that were conſtrained to do againſt their Conſcience by the Help of the Pariſh Prieſt.

Theſe be the chiefeſt Cauſes why thoſe abovenamed were perſecuted.

Firſt, They held and believed the holy Word of God to be the ſufficient Doctrine unto their Salvation.

Secondly, They denied the Pope's uſurped Authority, and did hold all that Church of Antichriſt to be Chriſt's Adverſaries. And further, they refuſed the abuſed Sacraments, defied the Maſs and all Popiſh Service and Ceremonies, ſaying, they robbed God of his Honour, and Chriſt of his Death and Glory, and would not come at the Church, without it were to the defacing of that they did there.

Thirdly, They did hold that the Miniſters of the Church by God's Word might lawfully marry.

Fourthly, They held the Queen to be as chief Head, and wicked Rulers to be a great Plague ſent of God for Sin, &c.

Fifthly, They denied Man's Free-Will, and held that the Pope's Church did err, and many other in that Point with them, rebuking their falſe Confidence in Works, and their falſe Truſt in Man's Righteouſneſs. Alſo when any rebuked thoſe perſecuted for going ſo openly, and talking ſo freely; their Anſwer was, They acknowledged, confeſſed, and believed, and therefore they muſt ſpeak: And that their Tribulation was God's good Will and Providence, and that his Judgments were right, to puniſh them with others for their Sins; and that of very Faithfulneſs and Mercy God had cauſed them to be troubled, ſo that one Hair of their Heads ſhould not periſh before the Time, but all Things ſhould work unto the beſt to them that love God, and that Chriſt Jeſus was their Life and only Righteouſneſs, and that only by Faith in him, and for his Sake, all good Things were freely given them, alſo Forgiveneſs of Sins, and Life everlaſting. Anno 1556.

Many of theſe perſecuted were of great Subſtance, and had Poſſeſſions of their own.

Give God the Praiſe.

Foraſmuch as we are now in the Month of May, before we overpaſs the ſame, and becauſe the Story is not long, and not unworthy peradventure of noting, it ſhall not grieve the ſtudious Reader, a little to give the hearing thereof, whereby to learn to marvel and muſe at the great Works of the Lord. They that go down (ſaith the Pſalmiſt) into the Sea, labouring upon the Water, have ſeen the Works of the Lord, and his mighty Wonders upon the deep, Pſal. 106. The Truth whereof may well appear in this following Story; which, as it was written to me by the very Perſon himſelf, one Thomas Morſe, who was the Doer thereof, ſo I thought proper to inſert the ſame in the following Manner.

A Story of one Gregory Crow, who was miraculouſly preſerved with his New Teſtament upon the Seas, May 26.

UPON Tueſday in Whitſon-Week, May 26, 1556, (or elſe, as he rather thinketh, in the Year immediately before) a certain poor Man, named Gregory Crow, dwelling in Maulden, went to Sea, intending to have gone into Kent for Fullers-Earth, but by the Way being bad Weather, was driven upon a Sand, where preſently the Boat ſunk, and was full of Water, ſo that the Men were forced to hold by the Maſt of the Boat, and all Things that would ſwim, did ſwim out of her. Amongſt which Crow ſaw his Teſtament in the Water, and caught it, and put it into his Boſom. Now it was ebbing Water, ſo that within one Hour the Boat was dry, but ſo broken that they could not ſave her; but they went themſelves upon the Sand, (being at leaſt ten Miles from the Land) and there made their Prayers together, that God would ſend ſome Ship to their Aſſiſtance (being in all two Men and one Boy) for they could ſtay there but half an Hour longer before it would be Flood. In which Time they found their Cheſt, wherein was five Pounds, ſix Shillings and eightpence, belonging to the ſaid Crow; which Money the other Man (whoſe Name I know not) took up, and gave it to the Owner, who caſt it into the Sea, ſaying, If the Lord will ſave our Lives, he will provide us a Living, and ſo they got upon the Maſt, and there hung by the Arms and Legs for the Space of ten Hours, in which Time the poor Boy was ſo weary, and beaten with the Sea, that he fell off and was drowned.

And when the Water was gone again, and the Sand dry, Crow ſaid to the other Man, It were beſt for us to take down our Maſts, and when the Flood cometh we will ſit upon Anno 1556. them, and ſo it may pleaſe God to bring us to ſome Ship that may take us up. Which accordingly they did, and ſo at ten of the Clock in the Night of the ſame Tueſday, the Flood did bear up the Maſt whereon they ſat.

And upon the Wedneſday in the Night the Man died, being overcome with Hunger and Watching. So that there was none left but Crow, who driving up and down in the Sea, called upon God as he could, and might not ſleep for Fear that the Sea would have beaten him off.

So at length I myſelf (ſaid Thomas Morſe) being laden to Antwerp with my Crayer, going from Lee upon Friday, having within my Veſſel, of Mariners and Merchants, to the Number of 46 Perſons, and ſo coming to the Foreland, the Wind was not very good, ſo that I was conſtrained to go ſomewhat out of my Way, being in the Afternoon about ſix of the Clock, where at the laſt we ſaw a Thing afar off, appearing unto us like a ſmall Buoy, that Fiſhermen do uſe to lay with their Hooks.

God's Providence to be noted.

When we ſaw it, ſome ſaid, Let us have ſome Fiſh. And I ſaid to him that was at the Helm; Keep your Courſe away, for we ſhall but hinder the Fiſherman, and have no Fiſh neither; and ſo at my Commandment he did. But at length he at the Helm ſtanding higher than all we did, ſaid, Methink Maſter, it is a Man. But yet they, being in Doubt that it was but a Fiſherman's Buoy, turned the Ship from him again to keep their Courſe.

Crow beholding the Ship to turn from him, being then in utter Deſpair, and ready now to periſh with Watching, Famine, and moreover miſerably beaten with the Seas, at laſt took his Mariner's Cap from his Head, and holding up the ſame with his Arm as high as he could, thought by ſhaking it as well as he might, to give them ſome Token of better Sight.

Whereupon the Steerman more ſenſibly perceiving a Thing to move, advertiſed us again, declaring how he did plainly ſee a Man's Arm; and with that we all beheld him well, and ſo came to him and took him up. And as ſoon as we had him in our Ship, he began to put his Hand in his Boſom; and one asked him if he had Money there. No, ſaid he, I have a Book here, I think it be wet; and ſo drew out his Teſtament, which we then dried. But the Sea had ſo beaten him, that his Eyes, Noſe and Mouth were almoſt cloſed with Salt, that the Heat of his Face and the Weather had made. So we made a Fire and ſhifted him with dry Cloaths, and gave him Aqua Compoſita to drink, and ſuch Meat as was in the Ship, and then let him ſleep.

Crow with the Teſtament preſerved on the Sea.

The next Day we awaked him about eight of the Clock in the Morning, and his Blood began ſomewhat to appear in his Fleſh (for when we took him up, his Fleſh was even as though it had been ſodden, or as a drowned Man is) and then we talked with him of all the Matter before rehearſed. And ſo ſailing to Antwerp, the ſame Merchants which ſaw the Thing, publiſhed the ſame in Antwerp; and becauſe it was wonderful, many of the People there, both Men and Women, came to the Ship to ſee him. Some gave him a Petticoat, and ſome a Shirt, ſome Hoſe, and ſome Money (always noting how he caſt away his Money and kept his Book.)

And many of the Women wept when they heard and ſaw him. And Maſter Governour of the Engliſh Nation there had him before him, and talked with him of all the Matter; and pitying his Caſe, commanded the Officer of the Engliſh Houſe to go with him to the free Oſte-Houſes amongſt the Engliſh Merchants, and I with them, and at three Houſes there was given him ſix Pounds ten Shillings. And ſo from thence he went with me to Roan, where the People alſo came to him to ſee him, marvelling at the great Works of God.

And thus much concerning this poor Man with his New Teſtament preſerved in the Sea (which Teſtament the Pope's Clergy condemneth on the Land) ye have heard (as I received by the Relation of the Party above-named) who was the Doer thereof, and yet alive dwelling in Lee, well known to all Merchants of London. In which Story this by the Way underſtand, good Reader, (which rightly may be ſuppoſed) that if this poor Man thus found and preſerved in the Sea with a New Teſtament in his Boſom, had had inſtead of that a Pix with a conſecrated Hoſt about him, no doubt it had been rung e're this Time all Chriſtendom over for a Miracle, ſo far as the Pope hath any Land.

But to let the Pope with his falſe Miracles go, let us return again and adjoin another Hiſtory of much like Condition, teſtified likewiſe by the Information of the ſaid Thomas Morſe above-mentioned, to the Intent to make known the worthy Acts of the Almighty; that he may be magnified in all his wondrous Works. The Story is thus declared, which happened Anno 1556, about Michaelmas.

Another Story of God's Providence in the Preſervation of three Men at Sea.

THERE was a Ship (ſaith the ſaid Thomas Morſe) whereof I had a Part, going toward the Bay for Salt, with two Ships of Brickleſey, which were altogether going for Salt, as before is ſaid. At what Time we were within ten Miles of the North-Foreland, otherwiſe called Tenet, the Wind did come ſo contrary to our Ship, that we were forced to go clean out of the Way, and the other two Ships kept their Courſe ſtill, until our Ship was almoſt out of Sight of them. And then they ſaw a Thing driving upon the Sea, and hoiſted up their Boat and went unto it; and it was three Men ſitting upon a Piece of their Ship, who ſat ſo two Days and two Nights.

There had been in their Ship eight Men more which were drowned, being all Frenchmen, dwelling in a Place in France called Oloronne. They had been at Dantzick, and loſt their Ship about Oxford Nas, as might be learned by their Words. They were Men that feared God, the one of them was Owner of the Ship. Their Exerciſe, while they were in our Ship, was, that after their coming in, they gave Thanks for their Deliverance: Both Morning and Evening they exerciſed Prayer, and alſo before and after Meat, and when they came into France, our Ships went to the ſame Place where theſe Men dwelt, and one of them did ſell unto our Men their Ships Lading of Salt, and did uſe them very courteouſly and friendly, and not at that Time only, but always always whenſoever that Ship cometh thither, (as ſhe hath been there twice ſince) he always doth for them, ſo that they can lack nothing. I ſhould have noted, that after our Ship had taken up thoſe three Men out of the Sea, they had the Wind fair preſently, and came and overtook the other two Ships again, and ſo they proceeded in their Voyage together.

For the more Credit of this Story above recited, to ſatisfy either the doubtful, or to prevent the Quarreller, I have not only alledged the Name of the Party which was the Doer thereof, but alſo expreſſed the Matter in his own Words, as I of him receiv'd it; the Party and Reporter himſelf being yet alive, and dwelling at Lee, a Man ſo well known amongſt the Merchants of London, that whoſoever heareth the Name of Thomas Morſe will never doubt thereof. And again, the Matter itſelf being ſo notoriouſly known to Merchants as well here as at Antwerp, that though his Name were not expreſſed, the Story can lack no Witneſſes.

The Death of W. Slech in the King's-Bench.

The laſt Day of the ſaid Month of May, in the Year aforeſaid, William Slech being in Priſon for the ſaid Doctrine of the Lord's Goſpel, and the Confeſſion of his Truth, died in the King's-Bench, and was buried on the Backſide of the ſaid Priſon, for that the Romiſh Catholick Spiritualty thought him not worthy to come within their Pope-holy Church-yards, neither in any other Chriſtian Burial, as they call it.

The Hiſtory of four Men condemned at Lewes, June 6.

IN June next following, about the ſixth Day of the ſame Month, four Martyrs ſuffered together at Lewes, whoſe Names were theſe:

Thomas Harland of Woodmancote, Carpenter.
John Oſwald of Woodmancote, Husbandman.
Thomas Avington of Ardingly, Turner.
Thomas Read.

To Thomas Harland I find in the Biſhop of London's Regiſters, to be objected for not coming to Church. Whereunto he anſwered, That after the Maſs was reſtored, he never had Will to hear the ſame, becauſe (ſaid he) it was in Latin, which he did not underſtand, therefore as good, quoth he, never a whit, as never the better.

John Oſwald denied to anſwer any Thing, until his Accuſers ſhould be brought Face to Face before him; and nevertheleſs ſaid, That Fire and Faggots could not make him afraid: But as the good Preachers which were in King Edward's Time have ſuffered and gone before, ſo was he ready to ſuffer and come after, and would be glad thereof.

Theſe four, after long Impriſonment in the King's-Bench, were burned together at Lewes in Suſſex, in one Fire.

The Martyrdom of T. Whood, and others.

In the ſame Town of Lewes, and in the ſame Month likewiſe, were burned Thomas Whood Miniſter, and Thomas Milles, about the twentieth Day of the ſame Month, for reſiſting the erroneous and heretical Doctrine of the pretended Catholick Church of Rome. Anno 1556.

On the 24th Day of the ſame Month likewiſe William Adherall, Miniſter, died in the Priſon of the King's-Bench, and was buried in the Back-ſide: Alſo John Clement, Wheelwright, who dying in the ſaid Priſon, was buried in like Manner upon the Dunghil in the Back-ſide two Days after, viz. the 25th Day of June.

The next Day following of the ſaid Month, we read of a certain young Man, a Merchant's Servant, who for the like Godlineſs ſuffered cruel Perſecution of the Papiſts, and was burnt at Leiceſter the 26th Day of June.

Thirteen Martyrs burned at Stratford Le-Bow.

NOT long after the Death of the Merchant's Servant before-mentioned, there followed in this bleſſed Order of Martyrs, burned in one Fire at Stratford Le-Bow, by London, Eleven Men and two Women, whoſe Dwellings were in ſundry Places in Eſſex, and whoſe Names hereafter follow.

Henry Adlington,
Laurence Parnam,
Henry Wye,
William Hallywel,
Thomas Bowyer,
George Searles,
Edmund Hurſt,
Lyon Cawch,
Ralp Jackſon,
John Deriſall,
John Routh,
Elizabeth Pepper,
Agnes George.

Unto whom the ſixth of June, 1556, Dr. Darbyſhire, Biſhop Bonner's Chancellor, in Form of Law miniſtred the ſame Articles that were pronounced unto Thomas Whittle and his Company mentioned before, to which they made their ſeveral Anſwers, in Simplicity and in a good Conſcience. The Sum and Effect whereof enſueth.

To the firſt, they all anſwered affirmatively; but Lyon Cawch added further, that he believed that the true Faith and Religion of Chriſt is whereſoever the Word of God is truly preached.

To the ſecond Article they all anſwered in Effect, denying that there be ſeven Sacraments; ſome affirming, that in the Church of Chriſt there be but two Sacraments, that is to ſay, Baptiſm and the Lord's Supper: Others referring themſelves to believe as the Scripture teacheth them: And others refuſed to make Anſwer becauſe of their Simplicity.

To the third Article they all anſwered affirmatively.

To the fourth Article they all anſwered affirmatively, except John Routh, who ſaid he would make no Anſwer thereunto. But Lyon Cawch added, that he believe the Article to be true; but it was becauſe he had no better Knowledge. And Agnes George added, that in the Time of King Edward VI. ſhe went from her old Faith and Religion, and believed in the Faith and Religion that was then taught and ſet forth.

To the fifth, they all anſwered in Effect affirmatively, except John Routh, whoſe Anſwer was, That the Maſs is ſuch a Thing, which neither can nor will enter into his Conſcience.

And

Anno 1556. And Henry Adlington anſwered, That for nine or ten Years before, he miſliked the Maſs, and alſo the Sacrament of the Altar, becauſe they cannot be proved by the Scriptures. And as touching the Authority of the See of Rome, he being but fourteen Years of Age, took an Oath againſt the ſame, which Oath, he ſaid, he intended to keep by the Grace of God.

To the ſixth they all anſwered affirmatively, except John Routh and William Halliwel, who both refuſed to anſwer, becauſe they knew not what they meant by this Article. But the two Women added, That they refuſed to be reconciled to the Faith and Religion that was then uſed in the Realm of England. Aud Laurence Pernam added, That he never refuſed to be reconciled and brought to the Unity of the Catholick Church of Chriſt.

To the ſeventh Article they all anſwered affirmatively; but William Halliwel denied that ever he called the Maſs Idolatry and Abomination. And Henry Wye affirming the Article to be true; yet he confeſſed his Infirmity, that he went to his Pariſh-Church and received, before he was put in Priſon.

To the eighth Article Edmund Hurſt, Ralph Jackſon, and George Searles anſwered affirmatively: Henry Wye ſaid, he was brought before certain Juſtices of Peace in Eſſex, concerning one Higbed his late Maſter, and thereupon he was committed to Colcheſter-Caſtle, and from thence ſent to London to the Biſhop to be further examined. William Halliwel affirmed the like Confeſſion as Henry Wye did, only Higbed excepted. John Derifall ſaid he was called before the Lord Rich and Mr. Mildmay of Chelmsford, and was by them ſent to Bonner, Biſhop of London, to be further examined by him. Thomas Bowyer ſaid he was brought before Mr. Wiſeman of Felſed, and by him was ſent to Colcheſter-Caſtle, and from thence was carried to Bonner, Biſhop of London, to be by him further examined. Lyon Cawch ſaid, that he was ſent to come before the King and Queen's Commiſſioners, and appearing before them three Times, was ſent to Biſhop Bonner, to be by him further examined. Henry Adlington ſaid, That he coming to Newgate to ſpeak with one Gratwike there, being Priſoner for the Teſtimony of Jeſus Chriſt, was apprehended and brought before Dr. Story, and by him ſent to Biſhop Bonner, to be by him further examined. John Routh ſaid, That he was convened before the Earl of Oxford, and by him ſent to the Caſtle of Colcheſter, and from thence conveyed to Biſhop Bonner, to be by him further examined. Laurence Pernam ſaid, That he was committed to Hertford Priſon, becauſe he would not go to Church, and from thence ſent to Biſhop Bonner, to be by him further examined. Agnes George ſaid, That ſhe was committed to Priſon in Colcheſter, at the Commandment of one Mr. Maynard an Alderman of the Town, becauſe ſhe would not go to Church, and from thence was ſent to Biſhop Bonner, to be by him further examined. Elizabeth Pepper ſaid, ſhe was apprehended by two Conſtables and an Alderman, for that ſhe would not come to Church, and by them was ſent to Bonner, Biſhop of London, to be by him further examined.

To the ninth Article, they all believed the Premiſſes to be true above by them confeſſed, and that they were of the Dioceſs and Juriſdiction of London. But Elizabeth Pepper added, That ſhe was of the Town of Colcheſter.

And Agnes George added, That ſhe was of the Pariſh of Bareſold. And Lyon Cawch added, That he was then of the City of London, by Reaſon that he was at preſent a Merchant there.

Henry Wye, Brewer, was of the Pariſh of Stantford le Hore, and of 32 Years of Age.

William Halliwel was a Smith, of the Pariſh of Waltham Holy-Croſs, and of the Age of 24 Years, or thereabouts.

Ralph Jackſon was a Serving-Man of Chipping-Ongar, and of the Age of 24 Years.

Laurence Pernam was a Smith of Hodſdon, within the Pariſh of Amwell, in the County of Hertford, and of the Age of 22 Years.

John Derifall was a Labourer, of the Pariſh of Rettington in Eſſex, and of the Age of 50 Years and above.

Edmund Hurſt, Labourer, of St. James's, in Colcheſter, was 50 Years of Age.

Thomas Bowyer was a Weaver of Much Dunmow, and of the Age of 36 Years.

George Searles was a Taylor, between 20 or 21 Years of Age, of the Pariſh of White Nottle, where he was taken and carried to the Lord Rich, who ſent him to Colcheſter-Caſtle, with a Commandment that no Friend he had in the World ſhould ſpeak with him. There he lay ſix Weeks, and was ſent up to London, where he was ſome Time in the Biſhop's Coal-Houſe, ſome Time in Lollard's-Tower, and laſt of all in Newgate. He was apprehended in Lent, about a Fortnight before Eaſter, in the Place aforeſaid.

Lyon Cawch was a Broker, born in Flanders, but when he was apprehended he reſided in the City of London, and of the Age of 28 Years.

Henry Adlington was a Sawyer, and of Greenſted, in the County of Suſſex, and of the Age of 30 Years.

John Routh was a Labourer, and of the Pariſh of Wiekes in Eſſex, and of the Age of 26 Years.

Elizabeth Pepper was the Wife of Thomas Pepper, Weaver, of the Pariſh of St. James, in the Town of Colcheſter, and of the Age of 30 Years, or thereabouts, who when ſhe was burnt at Stratford, was eleven Weeks gone with Child, as ſhe then teſtified to one Boſom's Wife, who, then unlooſed her Handkerchief, ſaying, moreover, when ſhe was asked why ſhe did not tell them, Why, quoth ſhe, they knew it well enough. O! ſuch be the bloody Hearts of this cruel Generation, that no Occaſion can ſtay them from their miſchievous murdering of the Saints of the Lord, who truly profeſs Chriſt crucify'd only and alone for the Satisfaction of their Sins.

Agnes George was the Wife of Richard George, Husbandman, of Weſt-Bareſold, in the County of Eſſex, and of the Age of 26 Years. This Richard George had another Wife before her, who was burnt in the Poſtern at Colcheſter, and himſelf lay in Priſon 'till Queen Elizabeth came to the Crown, and then he was releaſed.

When theſe thirteen were condemned, and the Day appointed they ſhould ſuffer, which was the 27th of June 1556, they were carried ſtom Newgate in London the ſame Day, to Stratford-Bow, (the Place appointed for their Martyrdom) and there divided into two Parts, in two ſeveral Chambers. Afterwards the Sheriff, who there attended upon them, came to the one Part, and told them that the other had recanted and their Lives therefore ſhould be ſaved, willing and exhorting them to do the like, and not to caſt themſelves away.

A Practice of Policy in the Sheriff of London.

Unto whom they anſwered, that their Faith was not built upon Man, but on Chriſt crucified. Then the Sheriff perceiving no Good to be done with them, went to the other Part, and ſaid (like a Liar) the like to them, that they with whom he had been before, had recanted, and ſhould therefore not ſuffer Death, counſelling them to do the like, and not wilfully to kill themſelves, but to play the wiſe Men, &c.

Unto whom they anſwered as their Brethren had done before, that their Faith was not built on Man, but on Chriſt and his Word, &c.

Now when he ſaw it needleſs to perſwade (for they were, God be praiſed, ſurely grounded on the Rock Jeſus Chriſt) he then led them to the Place, where they ſhould ſuffer, and being all there together, moſt earneſtly they pray'd unto God, and joyfully went to the Stake and kiſſed it, and embraced it very heartily.

Two Women ſtanding at the Stake unbound.

The eleven Men were tied to three Stakes, and the two Women looſe in the Midſt without any Stake, and ſo they were all burnt in one Fire, with ſuch Love to each other, and Conſtancy in our Saviour Chriſt, that it made all the Lookers on to marvel. The Lord grant us the like Grace in the like Need, according to the good Pleaſure of his Will, Amen.

In the Company of theſe aforeſaid thirteen, were three more condemned to die, whoſe Names are hereunder ſpecify'd:

Thomas Freeman.
William Stannard.
William Adams.

Theſe three anſwered to the ſame Articles that were propounded to the aforeſaid thirteen in Effect as they did. And being thus in the Hands of the ſecular Power, Cardinal Pool ſent his Diſpenſation for their Lives, by what Occaſion I cannot ſafely ſay, but by means thereof they then eſcaped.

The Sunday after theſe aforeſaid ſixteen were condemned, Fecknam, Dean of Pauls, preached at Paul's-Croſs, where he declared, that they had as many ſundry Opinions as they were ſundry Perſons. At the Hearing whereof they drew out their Faith, and ſet to their Hands, as hereafter followeth, and directed the ſame to their Friends, and the faithful Congregation, as followeth.

Unto all our dearly beloved Friends, and the holy Congregation of Jeſus Chriſt, even ſo many as love God, Grace be with you, and Peace from God our Father, and from our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. So be it.

A Letter or Apology of the Martyrs clearing themſelves of the Slanders of Mr. Fecknam.

BE it manifeſt to all unto whom this our Certificate ſhall be ſeen, that whereupon Saturday, being the thirteenth Day of June, at Fulham, before the Biſhop of London, ſixteen of us (whoſe Names hereunder are ſubſcribed) were condemned to die for the moſt pure and ſincere Truth of Chriſt's Verity; which moſt godly Truth hath been from the Beginning with the wicked Adverſaries thereof continually defaced, and is by the Devil and his Imps even at this preſent likewiſe daily ſlandered: Upon this Occaſion, dearly beloved Brethren, we are moved, yea conſtrained, in the Ears of all Men to manifeſt our Belief, and alſo briefly the Articles whereof we are condemned, for the avoiding of falſe Reports and ſlanderous Tongues, which might happen by the moſt ungodly and uncharitable Sermon, lately preached at Paul's-Croſs, the fourteenth of the ſaid Month, being Sunday, by Mr. Fecknam now Dean of the ſame Church; where he in that moſt worthy Audience defamed us to be in ſixteen ſundry Opinions, which were a Thing prejudicial to all chriſtian Verity; and for a Teſtimonial thereof, this hereunder-written ſhall anſwer our Cauſe, and therefore we pray you that are of God to judge. Anno 1556.

The firſt, We believe we were baptized in the Faith of Chriſt's Church, and incorporate unto him, and made Members of his Church, in which Faith we continue. And although we have erred for a certain Time, yet the Root of Faith was preſerved in us by the Holy Ghoſt, which hath reduced us into a full Certainty of the ſame, and we do perſiſt, and will by God's Aſſiſtance to the End. Now mark, that although the Miniſter were of the Church malignant, yet his Wickedneſs did not hurt us, for that he baptized us in the Name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghoſt.

There was both the Word and the Element, and our Godfathers and Godmothers renouncing for us the Devil and all his Works, and confeſſing the Articles of the Chriſtian Faith for us, and alſo Witneſſes that we are baptized, not in the Faith of the Church of Rome, but in the Faith of Chriſt's Church.

1. Item, There are but two Sacraments in Chriſt's Church, that is, the Sacrament of Baptiſm, and the Lord's Supper. For in theſe are contained the Faith of Chriſt his Church; that is, the two Teſtaments, the Law and the Goſpel. The Effect of the Law is Repentance, and the Effect of the Goſpel Remiſſion of Sins.

2. Item, We believe that there is a viſible Church, wherein the Word of God is preached, and the holy Sacraments truly adminiſtred, viſible to the wicked World, although it be not credited, and by the Death of Saints confirmed, as it was in the Time of Elias the Prophet as well as now.

3. Item, The See of Rome is the See of Antichriſt, the Congregation of the wicked, &c. whereof the Pope is Head under the Devil.

4. Item, The Maſs is not only a Prophanation of the Lord's Supper, but alſo a blaſphemous Idol.

5. Item, God is neither ſpiritually nor corporally in the Sacrament of the Altar, and there remaineth no Subſtance in the ſame, but only the Subſtance of Bread and Wine.

For theſe the Articles of our Belief, we being condemned to die, do willingly offer our corruptible Bodies to be diſſolved in the Fire, all with one Voice aſſenting and conſenting thereunto, and in no Point diſſenting or diſagreeing from any of our former Articles.

Apparent alſo let it be and known, that being examined of the former Articles before the bloody Biſhop, the ſaid Day and Time, we affirmed to believe all that he or they would prove by the Scriptures. But he ſaid

About the fourteenth of June, in the ſame Year, John Colſtock, who was lately come from London, and now dwelling at Welington, tho' he did not ſuffer Martyrdom, yet ſuſtained ſome Trouble, being examined by the Biſhop, named Ralph Bane, for his Religion, eſpecially for two Points, in holding againſt the Reality of Chriſt in the Sacrament, and againſt auricular Confeſſion to be made to the Prieſt. For which Cauſe being compelled to recant, he was injoined in the Church of St. Cedde to bear a Faggot before the Croſs bareheaded, having in the one Hand a Taper, and in the other a Pair of Beads, &c.

Amongſt divers others which in the ſame Dioceſs, and the ſame Time were ſuſpected and troubled for the like, was Thomas Flier of Uttoxater, Shoemaker, Nich. Ball of Uttoxater, Thomas Pyot of Chedull.

Item, Henry Crimes for marrying his Wife on Palm-Sunday Eve, &c. Some others alſo there were which had the like Penance injoined them, as Thomas Johnſon about the 26th Day of this Month of June, becauſe he ſware by the Holy Maſs before the Biſhop ſitting in Judgment, who for the ſame was driven to go before the Croſs, with his Taper and Beads, &c.

In the ſame Month of June one Thomas Parret died in the Priſon of the Kings-Bench in Southwark, and was buried in the Backſide the 27th Day of the ſaid Month.

Alſo Martin Hunt (as is reported) was famiſhed in the ſame Priſon the 29th Day. At which Time died likewiſe in the ſame Priſon, as I find recorded, one John Norice, and after the ſame Sort as the other was buried on the Backſide of the ſaid Priſon.

The Martyrdom of Roger Bernard, Adam Foſter, and Robert Lawſon.

WHEN Roger Bernard came before the Biſhop, firſt he was asked whether he had been with the Prieſt at Eaſter to be ſhriven, and whether he had received the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar, or no? Unto whom Roger Bernard anſwered, No: I have not been with the Prieſt, nor confeſſed myſelf unto him, but I have confeſſed my Sins to Almighty God, and I truſt he hath forgiven me; whereof I ſhall not need to go to the Prieſt for ſuch Matters, who cannot help himſelf.

Roger Bernard refuſeth auricular Confeſſion.

Biſhop. Surely Bernard thou muſt needs go, and confeſs thyſelf unto him.

Bernard. That will I not do (by God's Grace) while I live.

Biſhop. What a ſtout boyly Heretick is this? How malapertly he anſwereth?

Bernard. My Lord, it grieveth me no whit (I thank God) to be called Heretick at your Hands; for ſo your Forefathers called the Prophets and Confeſſors of Chriſt long before this Time.

At theſe Words the Biſhop roſe up in a great Heat, and bid Bernard follow him. Then the Biſhop went and kneeled before that they call the Sacrament of the Altar, and as he was in his Prayers kneeling, he looked back, and asked Bernard why he came not and did as he did. Unto whom Bernard anſwered, I cannot tell why I ſhould do ſo. Why, quoth the Biſhop, thou lewd Fellow, whom ſeeſt thou yonder, pointing to the Pyx over the Altar?

Bernard. I ſee no Body there. Do you, my Lord?

Biſhop. Why, naughty Man, doſt thou not ſee thy Maker?

Bernard. My Maker? No, I ſee nothing but a few Clouts hanging together on a Heap.

With that the Biſhop roſe up ſore diſpleaſed, and commanded the Jailer to take him away, and to lay Irons enough on him. For, ſaid he, I will tame him e're he go from me, I think ſo: And ſo he was carried away.

Note, The Catholick Charity of this Prelate.

The next Day Bernard was brought again before the Biſhop, who asked him if he did not remember himſelf ſince the Day before that he was before him.

Bernard. Yes, my Lord, I have remembred myſelf very well, for the ſame Man I was Yeſterday, I am this Day, and I hope ſhall be all the Days of my Life, concerning the Matter you talked with me of.

Then one of the Guard ſtanding by, ſaid, My Lord, I pray you trouble not yourſelf any more with him, but let me have the examining of him, I ſhall handle him after another Sort, I think, and make him a fair Child e'er he go, you ſhall ſee.

So was he committed to him, and brought by him to an Inn, where were a great many Prieſts aſſembled together, and there they all fell to flatter him, and perſuaded him with gay enticing Words what they could; but when they could not prevail therein, then they began to threaten him with Whipping, Stocking, Burning, and ſuch like. Unto whom Bernard ſaid, Friend, I am not better than my Maſter Chriſt and the Prophets, which your Fathers ſerved after ſuch Sort; and I for his Name's Sake am content to ſuffer the like at your Hands, if God ſhall ſo permit, truſting that he will ſtrengthen me in the ſame according to his Promiſe, in Spite of the Devil and all his Miniſters. So when they could not make him to relent or yield, they ſaid, behold a right Scholar of John Fortune, whom they had then in Priſon. Then they carried him to the Biſhop, who immediately condemned him as an Heretick, and delivered him to the ſecular Power.

Roger Bernard condemned by the Biſhop of Norwich.

This Roger Bernard was a ſingle Man, and by his Vocation a Labourer, dwelling in Framſden in Suffolk, who was taken in the Night by Mr. Tamage's Men, becauſe he would not go to Church, to hear their unſavoury Service, and ſo by them carried to Priſon.

Adam Foſter.

ADam Foſter, of the Age of twenty-ſix Years, Husbandman, being married, dwelling in Mendleſam in the County of Suffolk, was taken at Home in his Houſe a little before the Sun going down, by the Conſtables of the ſaid Town, George Revet and Thomas Rouſe, at the Commandment of Sir John Tyrrel, of Gipping-Hall, in Suffolk, Knight, becauſe he would not go to Church and hear Maſs, and receive at Eaſter, except he might have it after Chriſt's holy Ordinance. When they came for him, they told him he muſt go with them unto the Juſtice. Unto whom Adam Foſter ſaid, for Chriſt's Cauſe, and to ſave his Conſcience, he was well contented; and ſo they led him to Sir John Tyrrel, and he ſent him to Eye Dungeon in Suffolk, from whence at length he was ſent to Norwich, and there condemned by Biſhop Hopton.

God's Stroke up on wilful Perſecutors.

Now after his Apprehenſion, the ſaid Thomas Rouſe and George Revet were ſtricken with a great Fear and Sickneſs, whereby Rouſe pined and conſumed away even unto Death, although he was a luſty young Man. But George Revet, who was the ſaid Rouſe's Fellow, and a great Reader of the Scripture, or (as a Man may term it) a talkative Goſpeller, would not be premoniſhed by the Works of God, but ſet his Son to help the Prieſt at Maſs, and to be Clerk of the ſame Town of Mendleſam for Lucre Sake, yet was there a fair Warning given him of God, although he had not the Grace ſo to conſider it, which Thing was this:

A young Man of the ſame Pariſh newly married, called Robert Edgore, being of a ripe Wit and ſound, was Clerk in the ſaid Church before the ſaid Revet ſet his Son in that Room, and executed the Office a little, yea alas too long, againſt his own Conſcience; whereby at length the Lord ſo took away his Wits, that many Years after, his poor and woful Wife, good Woman, was compelled to keep him chained, and bound continually, leſt he ſhould unawares do himſelf or ſome other ſome Miſchief, as many Times (the more Pity) he was ready enough to do.

This (as I ſaid) would not admoniſh Revet, but needs he muſt perſiſt in his wicked Purpoſe. Notwithſtanding at the Length, as many Men were offended with him in the Pariſh, ſo honeſt Women eſpecially (being mightily grieved at his ungodly Doings) came to him and ſaid, Neighbour Revet, are ye not afraid to let your Son help the naughty Prieſt to ſay Maſs, and to ſerve that abominable Idol? And he ſaid, No.

Then ſaid they, we fear not to go to Church and hear Maſs, ſeeing you, being a Man that ſo much profeſs Chriſtianity, will let your Son help the Prieſt to ſay Maſs, &c.

Revet p ayeth for a ſtrange Token.

At which Words Revet waxed angry, and in his Rage immediately made his Prayer unto God after this Manner, or with ſuch-like Words, ſaying, O Lord, if it be not thy Will that my Son ſhould ſo do, then I beſeech thee ſend ſome ſtrange Token, to let me underſtand what thy good Pleaſure is therein, &c. So according to his Petition, within ſhort Space after, his Neighbour's Bull came into his Paſture, and there he having a very proper Gelding, which was his Felicity above any Thing he had, the Bull running upon him, did ſo wound and gore him, that immediately thereof his Gelding died, and he thereby nothing amended. For although he knew and confeſſed, that it was the Lord's Hand upon him for the Sufferance of his Son in that wicked Vocation; yet would he not take him from it, but permitted him ſtill to uſe and frequent the ſame againſt his own Conſcience.

Anno 1556.

Revet confeſſed the Lord's Hand againſt him, and yet continued in his Sin.

At the laſt the Lord ſent upon him a great Swelling in his Legs, which did ſo grievouſly vex and trouble him, by Reaſon it ſwelled upward, that at length having thereby brought upon him a very ſtrange Sickneſs, he died moſt miſerably, in ſo impatient a Manner, that it terrify'd all good Hearts to hear thereof. The Lord grant for Chriſt's Sake, that we may obſerve his Judgments better, to his Glory and our Comfort, Amen.

Robert Lawſon.

RObert Lawſon was a ſingle Man, of the Age of thirty Years, and by Vocation a Linen-Weaver, who was apprehended in the Night by one Robert Kereth, at the Command of Sir John Tyrrel, of Gipping-Hall, in Suffolk, Knt. and ſo was immediately carried to Eye Dungeon in Suffolk, where he remained a certain Time, and after was led to Bury. The Cauſe of his being taken, was for that he would not go to Church to hear Maſs, and receive their Popiſh Idol.

The Martyrdom of Roger Bernard, Adam Foſter, and Robert Lawſon, at Bury, June 30, 1556.

When theſe three aforeſaid Martyrs were carried to their Death, namely, Roger Bernard, Adam Foſter, and Robert Lawſon at Bury, after they had made their Prayer, being at the Stake, and the Tormentors attending the Fire, they moſt triumphantly ended their Lives, in ſuch a happy and bleſſed Condition, as did notably ſet forth their Conſtancy and joyful End, to the great Praiſe of God, and their Commendation in him, and alſo to the Encouragement of others in the ſame Quarrel to do the like.

In the Examination of Roger Bernard, ye heard a little before, how he was compared by the Prieſts there, to John Fortune, and called his Scholar. This John Fortune, otherwiſe called Cutler, of Hintleſham in Suffolk, was by his Occupation a Black-Smith, whom they had before them in Examination a little before, on the 20th Day of April. In Spirit he was zealous and ardent, in the Scriptures ready, in Chriſt's Cauſe ſtout and valiant, in his Anſwers marvellous, and no leſs patient in his wrongful ſuffering than conſtant in his Doctrine. Whether he was burnt or died in Priſon, I cannot certainly find; but rather I ſuppoſe that he was burnt. Certain it is, howſoever he was made away, he never yielded. What his Anſwers and Examinations were before Dr. Parker and the Biſhop, ye ſhall hear him, although not with his own Mouth ſpeaking, yet with his own Hand written what he did ſay, as followeth.

The Examination of John Fortune before Dr. Parker and Mr. Foſter.

FIRST, Dr. Parker asked me how I believed in the Catholick Faith.

And I asked him which Faith he meant; whether the Faith that Stephen had, or the Faith of them that put Stephen to Death.

Anno 1556. Dr. Parker being moved, ſaid, What a naughty Fellow is this? You ſhall ſee anon he will deny the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar.

Then ſaid Mr. Foſter, I know you well enough. You are a buſy Merchant. How ſay'ſt thou by the bleſſed Maſs?

And I ſtood ſtill and made no Anſwer.

Then, ſaid Foſter, Why ſpeakeſt thou not, and makeſt the Gentleman an Anſwer?

And I ſaid, Silence is a good Anſwer to a fooliſh Queſtion.

Then ſaid Dr. Parker, I am ſure he will deny the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar alſo.

And I ſaid, I know none ſuch, but only the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

Then ſaid Dr. Parker, You deny the Order of the ſeven Sacraments. And why doſt not thou believe in the Sacrament of the Altar?

And I ſaid, Becauſe it is not written in God's Book.

Then, ſaid he, you will not believe unwritten Verities.

And I ſaid, I will believe that thoſe unwritten Verities that agree with the written Verities be true: but thoſe unwritten Verities that be of your own making, and invented of your own Brain, I do not believe.

Mr. Foſter threatneth John Fortune to be whipped.

Well, ſaid Mr. Foſter, you ſhall be whipped and burnt for this Gear, I trow.

Then ſaid I, if you knew how theſe Words do rejoice my Heart, you would not have ſpoken them.

Then ſaid Mr. Foſter, Away thou Fool, Doſt thou rejoice in whipping?

Yea, ſaid I, for it is written in the Scriptures, and Chriſt ſaith, Thou ſhalt be whipped for my Name's Sake: And ſince the Time that the Sword of Tyranny came into your Hands, I heard of none that were whipped. Happy were I, if I had the Maidenhead of this Perſecution.

Away with him then, ſaid he, for he is ten Times worſe than Samuel; and ſo he was carried to Priſon again.

The ſecond Examination of John Fortune, before the Biſhop of Norwich.

WHEN I came before the Biſhop, he asked me if I did not believe in the Catholick Church.

I ſaid I believe that Church whereof Chriſt is the Head.

Then ſaid the Biſhop, Doſt thou not believe that the Pope is ſupream Head of the Church?

And I ſaid, No, Chriſt is the Head of the true Church.

Biſhop. So do I believe alſo: But the Pope is God's Vicar upon Earth, and the Head of the Church, and I believe that he hath Power to forgive Sins alſo.

Fortune. The Pope is but a Man, and the Prophet David ſaith, That no Man can deliver his Brother, nor make Agreement unto God for him; for it coſt more to redeem their Souls, ſo that he muſt let that alone for ever. Pſal. 49.

The Pope likened to a Bell-weather.

And the Biſhop again fetching about a great Circumſtance, ſaid, Like as the Bellweather weareth the Bell, and is the Head of the Flock of Sheep: So is the Pope our Head. And as the Hives of Bees have a Maſter-Bee that bringeth the Bees to the Hive again: ſo doth our Head bring us Home again to our true Church.

Then I asked him, whether the Pope were a ſpiritual Man. And he ſaid, Yea. And I ſaid again, They are ſpiteful Men; for in 17 Months there were three Popes, and one poiſoned another for that preſumptuous Seat of Antichriſt.

Biſhop. It is malicioufly ſpoken, for thou muſt obey the Power, and not the Man. And thus was the Pope deny'd to be ſupream Head. Well, what ſay'ſt thou to the Ceremonies of the Church?

And I ſaid, All Things that are not planted by my heavenly Father, ſhall be plucked up by the Roots, ſaith our Saviour: For they are not from the Beginning, neither ſhall they continue to the End. Matth. 15.

Biſhop. They are good and godly, and neceſſary to be uſed.

Fortune. St. Paul called them weak and beggarly.

Biſhop. No, That is a Lie.

I hearing that, ſaid, That St. Paul writeth thus in the fourth Chapter to the Galatians, You fooliſh Galatians, (ſaith he) who hath bewitched you, that ye ſeek to be in Bondage to theſe weak and beggarly Ceremonies? Now which of you do lie, you or St. Paul? And alſo it is ſaid, That Works inſtituted, and injoined without the Commandment of God, pertain not to the Worſhip of God, according to the Text, Matth. 15. In vain do Men worſhip me with Mens Traditions and Commandments. And St. Paul ſaith, Wherefore do you carry us away from the Grace of Chriſt to another Kind of Doctrine? And Chriſt openly rebuked the Scribes, Lawyers, Phariſees, Doctors, Prieſts, Biſhops, and Hypocrites, for making God's Commandments of none Effect, to ſupport their own Tradition.

Biſhop. Thou lieſt, there is not ſuch a Word in all the Scriptures, thou naughty Heretick. Thou art worſe than all other Hereticks: For Hooper and Bradford allow them to be good and thou doſt not. Away with him.

It is Pity that Popiſh Prelates cannot lie.

Here you may perceive how that the Catholick Church cannot err, but whatſoever they ſay muſt needs be true. And ſo my Lord Biſhop cannot lie, as it may appear to all Men plainly in the Text.

The third Examination of John Fortune before the Biſhop of Norwich.

THE next Day I was brought before the ſaid Biſhop again, where he made a Sermon upon the ſixth Chapter of St. John's Goſpel, of Chriſt's Words, I am the Bread that came down from Heaven, &c. And thereupon had a great Bibble Babble to no Purpoſe. So in the End I was called before him, and he ſaid to me:

Biſhop. How believeſt thou in the Sacrament of the Altar? Doſt thou not believe, that after the Conſecration, there is the real Subſtance of the Body of Chriſt?

Fortune. That is the greateſt Plague that ever came into England.

Biſhop. Why ſo?

Fortune. If I were a Biſhop, and you a poor Man as I am, I would be aſhamed to ask ſuch a Queſtion: For a Biſhop ſhould be apt to teach and not to learn.

Biſhop. I am appointed by the Law to teach, ſo are not you.

Fortune. Your Law breaketh out very well: For you have burned up the true Biſhops and Preachers, and maintained Liars to be in their ſtead.

Catholick Prelates obſequious to higher Powers ſo long as they make for their Dignity, but when they do otherwiſe, then they excommunicate them.

Biſhop. Now you may underſtand that he is a Traitor: For he denieth the higher Powers.

Fortune. I am no Traitor: For St. Paul ſaith, All Souls muſt obey the higher Powers, and I reſiſt not the higher Powers concerning my Body, but I muſt reſiſt your evil Doctrine wherewith you would infect my Soul.

Then ſaid a Doctor, My Lord, you do not well; let him anſwer ſhortly to his Articles.

Biſhop. How ſayeſt thou? make an Anſwer quickly to theſe Articles.

Fortune. St. Paul ſaith, Heb. 10. Chriſt did one Sacrifice once for all, and ſat him down on the right Hand of his Father, triumphing over Hell and Death, making Interceſſion for Sins.

Biſhop. I ask thee no ſuch Queſtion, but make anſwer to this Article.

Fortune. If it be not God before the Conſecration, it is not God after: For God is without Beginning and without Ending.

Biſhop. Lo, what a ſtiff Heretick is this! He hath denied all together: How ſayeſt thou? Is it Idolatry to worſhip the bleſſed Sacrament or no?

Fortune. God is a Spirit, and will be worſhipped in Spirit and Truth.

Biſhop. I ask thee no ſuch Queſtion: Anſwer me directly.

Fortune. I anſwer that this is the God Mauzzim, that robbed God of his Honour.

Biſhop. It is pity that the Ground beareth thee, or that thou haſt a Tongue to ſpeak.

Then ſaid the Scribe, Here are a great many more Articles.

Then ſaid the Biſhop, Away with him: For he hath ſpoken too much.

Another Examination of J. Fortune.

WHEN I came to my Examination again, the Biſhop asked me if I would ſtand unto mine Anſwer that I had made before: And I ſaid, Yea; for I had ſpoken nothing but the Truth. And after that he made a great Circumſtance upon the Sacrament.

Then I deſired him to ſtand to the Text, and he read the Goſpel on Corpus Chriſti Day, which ſaid, I am the Bread which came down from Heaven: Believeſt thou not this? And I ſaid, Yea truly.

John 6.

And he ſaid, Why doſt thou deny the Sacrament?

Becauſe your Doctrine is falſe, ſaid I.

Then, ſaid he, how can that be falſe which is ſpoken in the Scripture? And I ſaid, Chriſt ſaid, I am the Bread; and you ſay the Bread is he. Therefore your Doctrine is falſe, ſaid I.

And he ſaid, Doſt thou not believe that the Bread is he? And I ſaid, No.

Biſhop. I will bring thee to it by the Scriptures.

Fortune. Hold that faſt, my Lord: For that is the beſt Argument that you have yet.

Biſhop. Thou ſhalt be burned like an Heretick.

Fortune. Who ſhall give Judgment upon me?

Biſhop. I will judge an hundred ſuch as thou art, and never be ſhriven upon it.

Fortune. Is there not Law for the Spiritualty, as well as for the Temporalty?

And Sir Clement Higham ſaid, Yes, what meaneſt thou by that? Anno 1556.

Fortune. When a Man is perjured by the Law, he is caſt over the Bar, and ſitteth no more in Judgment. And the Biſhop is a perjured Man, and ought to ſit in Judgment of no Man. The Biſhop of Norwich charged with Perjury.

Biſhop. How proveſt thou that?

Fortune. Becauſe you took an Oath in King Henry's Days to reſiſt the Pope. So both ſpiritual and temporal are perjured, that here can be no true Judgment.

Biſhop. Thinkeſt thou to eſcape Judgment by that? No: For my Chancellor ſhall judge thee. He took no Oath, for he was then out of the Realm.

C. Higham. It is Time to weed out ſuch Fellows as you be, indeed.

Biſhop. Good Fellow, why believeſt not thou in the Sacrament of the Altar?

Fortune. Becauſe I find it not in God's Book, nor yet in the Doctors. If it were there I would believe it with all my Heart.

Biſhop. How knoweſt thou it is not there?

Fortune. Becauſe it is contrary to the ſecond Commandment: And ſeeing it is not written in God's Book, why do you then rob me of my Life?

Then the Biſhop having no more to ſay, commanded the Bayliff to take him away.

And thus much touching the Examinations of this Man. Now whether he died in Fire, or was otherwiſe prevented with Death, as I ſaid before, I am uncertain.

In the Regiſter of Norwich this I do find, that his Sentence of Condemnation was drawn and regiſtred; but whether it was pronounced, it is not expreſſed in the ſaid Regiſter, according as the uſual manner of the Notary is ſo to declare, in the End of the Sentence. Nevertheleſs this is moſt certain, that he never abjured nor recanted, howſoever it pleaſed the Lord by Death to call him out of the World.

The Death of John Careleſs in the King's-Bench.

ABOUT the firſt of July, John Careleſs of Coventry, Weaver, died in the Priſon of the King's-Bench: Who though he were by the ſecret Judgment of Almighty God prevented by Death, ſo that he came not to the full Martyrdom of his Body, yet is he no leſs worthy to be counted in Honour and Place of Chriſt's Martyrs, than others that ſuffered moſt cruel Torments; as well becauſe he was for the ſame Truth's ſake a long Time impriſoned, as alſo for his willing Mind and zealous Affection he had thereunto, if the Lord had ſo determined it, as may well appear by his Examination before Dr. Martin. Which Examination, becauſe it contained nothing almoſt but wrangling Interrogations, and Matters of Contention wherein Dr. Martin would enter into no Communication about the Articles of his Accuſation, but only urged him to detect his Fellows, it is not therefore greatly material to expreſs the whole, but only to inſert ſo much as pertaining to the Queſtion of Predeſtination, may bring ſome Fruit to the Reader.

Anno 1556.

The Effect of John Careleſs's Examination before Dr. Martin, briefly declared.

John Careleſs examined before Dr. Martin.

FIRST, Dr. Martin calling John Careleſs to him in his Chamber, demanded what was his Name? To whom when the other had anſwered that his Name was John Careleſs, then began Dr. Martin to deſcant at his Pleaſure upon that Name, ſaying, that it would appear by his Condition, by that Time he had done with him, that he would be a true careleſs Man indeed. And ſo after other By-talk there ſpent about much needleſs Matter, then he asked him where he was born.

Forſooth, ſaith Careleſs, at Coventry.

Martin. At Coventry? what ſo far, Man? How cameſt thou hither? Who ſent thee to the King's-Bench Priſon?

Careleſs. I was brought hither by a Writ, I think, what he was I cannot tell. I ſuppoſe Maſter Marſhal can tell you.

Marſhal. In good Faith I cannot tell what the Matter is; but indeed my Lord Chief Juſtice ſent him from the Bar.

Martin. Well Careleſs, I would thou ſhouldſt play the wiſe Man's Part. Thou art a handſome Man, and it is Pity but thou ſhould'ſt do well, and ſave that which God hath bought.

Careleſs. I thank your good Maſterſhip moſt heartily: And I put you out of Doubt, that I am moſt ſure and certain of my Salvation by Jeſus Chriſt; ſo that my Soul is ſafe already, whatſoever Pains my Body ſuffer here for a little Time.

J. Careleſs examined upon Predeſtination.

Martin. Yea marry, you ſay true. For thou art ſo predeſtinate to Life, that thou canſt not periſh in whatſoever Opinion thou doſt die.

Careleſs. That God hath predeſtinated me to eternal Life in Jeſus Chriſt, I am moſt certain, and even ſo am I ſure that his Holy Spirit (wherewith I am ſealed) will ſo preſerve me from all Hereſies and evil Opinions, that I ſhall die in none at all.

Martin. Go to, let me hear thy Faith in Predeſtination. For that ſhall be written alſo.

Careleſs. Your Maſterſhip ſhall pardon me herein. For you ſaid yourſelf ere while, that you had no Commiſſion to examine my Conſcience. I will trouble myſelf with anſwering no more Matters than I needs muſt, until I come before them that ſhall have more Authority further to examine me.

Dr. Martin declareth his Commiſſion.

Martin. I tell thee then I have Commiſſion, yea, and Commandment from the Council to examine thee: For they deliver'd me thy Articles.

Careleſs. Yea, I think indeed that your Maſterſhip is appointed to examine me of my Articles, which you have there in Writing, and I have told you the Truth. I do confeſs them to be mine own Fact and Deed: But you do now examine me of Predeſtination, whereof my Articles ſpeak nothing at all.

Martin. I tell thee yet again, that I muſt alſo examine thee of ſuch Things as be in Controverſy between thee and thy Fellows in the King's-Bench, whereof Predeſtination is a Part, as thy Fellow N----- hath confeſſed, and thyſelf doſt not deny it.

Careleſs. I do not deny it. But he that firſt told you that, might have found himſelf much better occupy'd.

Martin. Why, what if he had not told me, thinkeſt thou that I would not have known it? Yes, or elſe thou ſhould'ſt have withſtood my Commiſſion. For I tell thee the Truth, I may now examine thee of the bleſſed Sacrament, or any other Thing that I liſt, but that I would ſhew thee Favour, and not be too haſty with thee at the firſt.

Marſhal. Yea indeed, Careleſs, Mr. Doctor hath Commiſſion to examine you or any other of your Fellows.

Martin. Yea marry have I, I tell thee the Truth of it.

Careleſs. Then let your Scribe ſet his Pen to the Paper, and you ſhall have it roundly, even as the Truth is. I believe that Almighty God our moſt dear loving Father, of his great Mercy and infinite Goodneſs, did elect in Chriſt.

Martin. Tuſh, What need all that long Circumſtance? write, [I believe God elected] and make no more ado.

Careleſs. No, not ſo, Mr. Doctor: It is an high Myſtery, and ought reverently to be ſpoken of. And if my Words may not be written as I do utter them, I will not ſpeak at all.

Martin. Go to, go to, write what he will. Here is more Buſineſs than needeth.

J. Careleſs his Opinion of God's Election.

Careleſs. I believe that Almighty God our moſt dear and loving Father, of his great Mercy and infinite Goodneſs (through Jeſus Chriſt) did elect and appoint in him before the Foundation of the Earth was laid, a Church or Congregation, which he doth continually guide and govern by his Grace and holy Spirit, ſo that not one of them ſhall ever finally periſh.

When this was written, Mr. Doctor took it in his Hand and read it, ſaying, Why, who will deny this?

Careleſs. If your Maſterſhip do allow it, and other learned Men when they ſhall ſee it, I have my Heart's Deſire.

Martin. And do you hold none otherwiſe, than is there written?

Careleſs. No verily, nor never did.

Martin. Write what he ſaith, otherwiſe he holdeth not. So that was written.

Martin. It was told me alſo, that thou doſt affirm, That Chriſt did not die effectually for all Men.

Careleſs. Whatſoever hath been told you, it is not much material unto me. Let the Tellers of ſuch Tales come before my Face, and I truſt to make them anſwer. For indeed I do believe that Chriſt did effectually die for all thoſe that did effectually repent and believe, and for no other. So that was written alſo.

Martin. Now, Sir, what is Trew's Faith of Predeſtination? He believeth that all Men be predeſtinate, and that none ſhall be damned, Doth he not?

A wrong Faith of Predeſtination believing to be elected in reſpect of good Works.

Careleſs. No forſooth, that he doth not.

Martin. How then?

Careleſs. Truly I think he doth believe as your Maſterſhip and the reſt of the Clergy do believe of Predeſtination, that we be elected in reſpect of our good Works, and ſo long elected, as we do them, and no longer.

Martin. Write what he ſaith, That his Fellow Trew believeth of Predeſtination as the Papiſts do believe.

Careleſs.

Careleſs. Ah Maſter Doctor, did I ſo term you? Seeing that this my Confeſſion ſhall come before the Council, I pray you place my Terms as reverently as I ſpeak them.

Martin. Well, well, write that Trew is of the ſame Faith as the Catholicks be.

Careleſs. I did not ſo call you neither, I wonder what you mean.

Martin. You ſaid the Clergy, did you not, Careleſs?

Careleſs. Yes forſooth did I. So then it was ritten of the Clergy.

Martin. Now Sir, what ſay you more?

Careleſs. Forſooth I have no further to ſay in this Matter.

Martin. Well Careleſs, I pray thee prove thyſelf a wiſe Man, and do not caſt away thy Life wilfully.

Careleſs. Now the Lord he knoweth, good Mr. Doctor, I would full gladly live, ſo that I might do the ſame with a ſafe Conſcience. And your Maſterſhip ſhall right well perceive that I will be no wilful Man, but in all Things that I ſtand upon I will have ſure Ground.

Martin. Now the Lord knoweth, good Careleſs, that I would gladly make ſome Means to preſerve thy Life. But thou ſpeakeſt ſo much of the Lord, the Lord; wilt thou be content to go with my Lord Fitzwalter into Ireland: methinks thou art a goodly tall Fellow to do the Queen Service there. How ſay'ſt thou?

Careleſs. Verily, Mr. Doctor, whether I be in Ireland, France, or Spain, or any Place elſe, I am ready to do her Grace the beſt Service that I can, with Body, Goods and Life, ſo long as it doth laſt.

Martin. That is honeſtly ſaid, I promiſe thee, every Man will not ſay ſo. How ſay you, Mr. Marſhal? this Man is meet for all manner of Service. Indeed thou art worthy, Careleſs, to have the more Favour.

Careleſs. Indeed Sir, I hope to be meet and ready unto all Things that pertain unto a true chriſtian Subject to do. And if her Grace or her Officers under her do require me to do any Thing contrary to Chriſt's Religion, I am ready alſo to do my Service in Smithfield for not obſerving it, as my Bed-fellow and other Brethren have done, praiſed be God for them.

Martin. By my Troth thou art a pleaſant Fellow as ever I talked with of all the Proteſtants, except it were Tomſon. I am ſorry that I muſt depart from thee ſo ſoon; but I have ſuch Buſineſs now, that I can tarry with thee no longer. Well yet thou canſt not deny, but you are at jar among yourſelves in the King's-Bench, and it is ſo throughout all your Congregation: For you will not be a Church.

Careleſs. No, Maſter Doctor, that is not ſo. There is a thouſand Times more Variety in Opinions among your Doctors, which you call of the Catholick Church, yea and that in the Sacrament, for which there is ſo much Blood ſhed now-a-days, I mean of your latter Doctors and new Writers; as for the old they agree wholly with us.

Martin. No, Careleſs, this is not ſo; there thou art deceived.

Careleſs. Verily it is ſo, Maſter Doctor, I am not deceived therein any Thing at all, as it hath been, and is evidently proved by ſuch as God hath indued with great Learning.

Then he turned to the Marſhal, and whiſpered with him awhile.

Turning to me again, he ſaid, Farewel Careleſs: For I can tarry no longer with thee now, my Buſineſs is ſuch. Anno 1556.

Careleſs. God be with you, good Maſter Doctor, the Lord give your Maſterſhip Health of Body and Soul. Dr. Martin taketh his Leave gently of Careleſs.

Martin. God have Mercy, good Careleſs, and God keep thee from all Errors, and give thee Grace to do as well as I would wiſh myſelf.

Careleſs. I thank your good Maſterſhip, I pray God I may do always that is acceptable in his Sight. Whereunto they all ſaid, Amen. And ſo I departed with a glad Heart; God only have the whole Praiſe, Amen.

It appeareth by the Examination of the ſaid John Careleſs, that he ſuffered two whole Years Impriſonment, having a Wife and Children. When he was in Coventry Gaol, he was in ſuch Credit with the Keeper, that upon his Word he was let out to play in the Pageant about the City with his Companions, punctually returning to Priſon again at his Hour appointed.

After that, being brought to London, he was endued with ſuch Patience and conſtant Fortitude, that he longed for nothing more earneſtly, than the Promotion of dying in the Fire for the Profeſſion of his Faith: But it pleaſed God to prevent him with Death in the Priſon, and bury'd in the Fields in Dunghil.

While he was Priſoner in the King's-Bench, he happen'd to be very much troubled in Conſcience, whereupon he wrote to Mr. Philpot, then in Biſhop Bonner's Coalhouſe: Upon Occaſion whereof, Mr. Philpot ſent him an Epiſtle of Conſolation, which is inſerted before among Mr. Philpot's Letters. Unto which Epiſtle John Careleſs made the following Anſwer.

A Letter of Mr. John Careleſs, in Anſwer to the loving Epiſtle ſent to him by Mr. John Philpot.

A faithful Friend is a ſtrong Defence, whoſo findeth ſuch a one, findeth a Treaſure.

A faithful Friend hath no Peer, the Weight of Gold and Silver is not to be compared to the Goodneſs of his Faith.

A faithful Friend is a Medicine of Life, and they that fear the Lord ſhall find him, Eccleſ. 6.

THE Father of Mercy and God of all Conſolation, comfort you with his eternal Spirit (my moſt dear and faithful loving Friend, good Maſter Philpot*) as you have comforted me by the mighty Operation of the ſame; the everlaſting God therefore be praiſed for ever,* Amen.

Ah my dear Heart and moſt loving Brother, if I ſhould do nothing elſe Day and Night ſo long as the Days of Heaven do endure, but kneel on my Knees, and read Pſalms, I can never be able to render unto God condign Thanks, for his great Mercy, fatherly Kindneſs, and moſt loving Compaſſion extended unto me moſt vile, ſinful, wicked, and unworthy Wretch. O that the Lord would open my Mouth, and give me a thankful Heart, that from the Bottom of the ſame might flow his continual Praiſe. O that my ſinful Fleſh (which is the Cauſe of Sorrow) were clean ſeparated from me, that I might ſing

The Lord (ſaith that good Woman) killeth and maketh alive; he bringeth down to Hell, and fetcheth up again. Praiſed be the Lord for ever, yea and praiſed be his Name for that he hath given me true Experience and lively Feeling of the ſame. Bleſſed be the Lord God, whoſe Mercy endureth for ever, which hath not dealt with me according to my Deſerts, nor deſtroy'd me in his Diſpleaſure when I had juſtly deſerved it. Oh what Reward ſhall I give again unto the Lord for all the great Benefits that he hath done for my Soul? I will gladly receive the Cup of Salvation at his Hand, and will worſhip his Name with Prayer and with Praiſe.

1 Sam. 2. John Careleſs raiſed up by the Lord out of great Heavineſs.

Ah my dear Heart, yea moſt dear to me in the Lord, think not this ſudden Change in me, to be ſome fickle Fantaſy of my fooliſh Head (as indeed ſome others would ſurely ſuſpect it to be) for doubtleſs it is the marvellous Doing of the Lord, moſt merciful unto me his unworthy Creature. God for his great Mercies Sake give me Grace to be more thankful unto him than I heretofore have been, and keep me that I never fall forth of his Favour again.

And now my dear Brother, and moſt bleſſed Meſſenger of the Lord, whoſe beautiful Feet have brought much glad Tidings to my Soul, what ſhall I do or ſay unto you, in the leaſt Part to recompenſe the fatherly Affection and godly Care that you continually keep for me? O that God would give me the Spirit of fervent Prayer, that I might yet that Way ſupply ſome little Part of my Duty toward you. Ah my true loving Friend, how ſoon did you lay aſide all other Buſineſs, to make a ſweet Plaiſter for my wounded Conſcience, yea, and that out of a painful pair of Stocks, which Place muſt needs be uneaſy to write in? but God hath brought you into a ſtreight Place, that you might ſet my Soul at Liberty. Out of your pinching and painful Seat, you have plentifully poured upon me your precious Nard, the ſweet Savour whereof hath greatly refreſhed my tired Soul. The Lord likewiſe refreſh you, both Body and Soul, by pouring the Oil of his gracious Spirit in your ſweet Heart.

Of this Comfort read in Mr Philpot's Letter.

Wherefore mine Advice and moſt earneſt Deſire is, with all other of your loving Friends, that you ſtill keep that Order with thoſe Blood-thirſty Biteſheeps, Biſhops I ſhould ſay, that you have begun. For though in Concluſion they will ſurely have your Blood, yet ſhall they come by it with Shame enough, and to their perpetual Infamy whilſt the World doth endure. They would indeed condemn you in Hugger-mugger, to darken God's Glory if it might be: But Satan's Thoughts are not unknown to you, and the Depth of his Subtilty is by you well foreſeen. Therefore let them do whatſoever God ſhall ſuffer them to do: for I know all Things ſhall turn to your beſt. Tho' you lie in the Dark, ſully'd with the Biſhop's black Coal-duſt; yet ſhall you be ſhortly reſtor'd to the heavenly Light, and be made as white as Snow in Salmon, *and as the Wings of a Dove that is covered with Silver Wings, and her Feathers like Gold. O happy be you that you be now in the ſcouring Houſe; for ſhortly you ſhall be ſet upon the celeſtial Shelf as bright as Angels. Therefore my dear Heart, I will now according to your loving Requeſt, caſt away all Care, and rejoyce with you, and praiſe God for you, and pray for you Day and Night; yea, I will now with God's Grace ſing Pſalms of Praiſe and Thankſgiving with you. For now my Soul is turned to her old Reſt again, and hath taken a ſweet Nap in Chriſt's Lap. I have caſt my Care upon the Lord, which careth for me, and will be Careleſs, according to my Name, in that reſpect you would have me. I will leave out my unſeemly Addition as long as I live: For it can take no Place where true Faith and Hope is reſident. So ſoon as I read your moſt godly and comfortable Letter, my Sorrows vaniſhed away as Smoak in the Wind, my Spirit revived, and Comfort came again, whereby I am ſure the Spirit of God was Author of it.

Careleſs's Care turned into Joy.

God's gracious Work thro' Mr. Philpot's Letter.

O my good Mr. Philpot, which art a principal Pot indeed filled with moſt precious Liquor, as it appeareth by the plenteous pouring forth of the ſame: O Pot moſt happy, of the high Potter ordained to Honour, which doſt contain ſuch heavenly Treaſure in the earthen Veſſel: O Pot thrice happy, in whom Chriſt hath wrought a great Miracle, altering thy Nature, and turning Water into Wine, and that of the beſt, whereout the Maſter of the Feaſt hath filled my Cup ſo full, that I am become drunken in the Joy of the Spirit through the ſame. When Martyrdom ſhall break thee (O Veſſel of Honour) I know the fragrant Savour of thy precious Nard will much rejoyce the heavy Hearts of Chriſt's true Members, although the Judaſſes *will grudge and murmur at the ſame. Your Letters of Comfort unto me in each Point do agree, as though the one were a Copy of the other. He hath planted in me, and you do water, the Lord give good Increaſe. My dear Brethren and Fellow-Priſoners here, have them humbly and heartily commended unto you and your Company, mourning for your Miſery, but yet rejoycing for your plenteous Conſolation and Comfort in Chriſt. To his Wife.

AS by the great Mercy of God, at the Time of his good Will and Providence appointed (my dearly beloved Wife) you and I were joined together in the Holy and Chriſtian State of godly Matrimony, as well to our great Joy and Comfort in Chriſt, as alſo to the Increaſe of his bleſſed Church and faithful Congregation, by having lawful Children by and in the ſame, with which God of his Mercy hath bleſſed us, praiſed be his Name therefore: Even ſo now by his merciful Will and divine Ordinance, the Time is come (ſo far as I can perceive) wherein he will, for his Glory and our eternal Comfort, diſſolve the ſame, and ſeparate us aſunder again for a Time. Wherefore I thought it good, yea and my bounden Duty, by this ſimple Letter to provoke, ſtir, and admoniſh you, to behave yourſelf in all your Doings, Sayings and Thoughts, moſt thankfully unto our good God for the ſame. And therefore (my dear Wife) as you have heartily rejoyced in the Lord, and oftentimes given God Thanks for his Goodneſs, in bringing us together in his holy Ordinance: Even ſo now I deſire you, when this Time of our Separation ſhall come, to rejoyce with me in the Lord, and to give him moſt hearty Thanks, that he hath (to his Glory and our endleſs Advantage) ſeparated us again for a little Time, and hath mercifully taken me unto himſelf, forth of this miſerable World into his celeſtial Kingdom; believing and hoping alſo aſſuredly, that God of his Goodneſs, for his Son Chriſt's Sake, will ſhortly bring you, and your dear Children thither to me, that we may moſt joyfully together ſing Praiſes unto his glorious Name for ever. And yet once again I deſire you for the Love of God, and as ever you loved me, to rejoyce with me, and to give God continual Thanks for doing his moſt merciful Will upon me.

True Obedience of a faithful Woman.

I hear ſay, that you do oftentimes repeat this godly Saying, The Lord's Will be fulfilled. Doubtleſs it rejoyceth my poor Heart to hear that Report of you; and for the Lord's Sake uſe that godly Prayer continually, and teach your Children and Family to ſay the ſame Day and Night: And not only ſay it with your Tongues, but alſo with your Heart and Mind, and joyfully ſubmit your Will to God's Will in very Deed, knowing and believing aſſuredly, that nothing ſhall come to you or any of yours, otherwiſe then it ſhall be his Almighty and Fatherly Good-will and Pleaſure, and for your eternal Comfort and Advantage. Which Thing to be moſt true and certain, Chriſt teſtifieth in his holy Goſpel, ſaying, Are not two little Sparrows ſold for a Farthing, and yet not one of them ſhall periſh without the Will of our heavenly Father? And he concludeth ſaying, Fear not ye therefore, for ye are better than many Sparrows. As though he ſhould have ſaid, If God have ſuch Reſpect and Care for a poor Sparrow, which is not worth one Farthing, that it ſhall not be taken in the Lime-Twig, Net nor Pitfal, unleſs it be his good Will and Pleaſure, you may be well aſſured, that not one of you (whom he ſo dearly loveth, that he hath given his only dear Son for you) ſhall periſh, or depart forth of this miſerable Life without his Almighty Good-will and Pleaſure.

Therefore, dear Wife, put your Truſt and Confidence wholly and only in him, and ever pray that his Will be fulfilled, and not yours, except it be agreeing to his Will; which I pray God it may ever be, Amen. And as for worldly Things, take you no Care, but be you well aſſured the Lord your dear God and Father will not ſee you nor yours lack, if you continue in his Love and childly Fear, and keep a clear Conſcience from all Kind of Idolatry, Superſtition and Wickedneſs, as my Truſt is that you will do, although it be with the Loſs and Danger of this temporal Life. And good Margaret, fear not them that can but kill the Body (and yet can they not do that until God give them Leave) but fear to diſpleaſe him that can kill both Body and Soul, and caſt them into Hell-fire. Let not the Remembrance of your Children keep you from God. The Lord himſelf will be a Father and a Mother, better than ever you or I could have been unto them. He himſelf will do all Things neceſſary for them. He hath given his Angels Charge over them, therefore commit them unto him. But if you may live with a clear Conſcience (for elſe I would not have you to live) and ſee the bringing up of your Children yourſelf, look that you nurture them in the Fear of God, and keep them far from Idolatry, Superſtition, and other kind of Wickedneſs; and for God's Sake help them to ſome Learning if it be poſſible, that they may increaſe in Virtue and godly Knowledge, which ſhall be a better Dowry to marry them withal, than any worldly Subſtance; and when they be come to Age, provide them ſuch Husbands as fear God, and love his holy Word. I charge you take heed that you match them with no Papiſts; and if you live and marry again your ſelf (which Thing I would wiſh you to do if Need require, or elſe not) good Wife take Heed how you beſtow yourſelf, that you and my poor Children be not compelled to Wickedneſs. But if you ſhall be well able to live God's true Widow, I would counſel you to live ſo ſtill, for the more Quietneſs of your ſelf and your poor Children. Take heed, Margaret, and play the wiſe Woman's Part. You have warning by others, if you will take an Example. And thus I commit you and my ſweet Children unto God's moſt merciful Defence. The Bleſſing of God be with you, and God ſend us a merry Meeting together in Heaven. Farewel in Chriſt, farewel mine own dear Hearts all. Pray, pray.

Good Counſel given to his Wife.

Care of Children to be caſt upon the Lord.

The Mother's Duty in bringing up her Children.

The Hiſtory of Julius Palmer, ſome Time Fellow of Magdalen-College, in Oxford; with two other Martyrs, named John Gwin, and Thomas Askin.

Of Julius Palmer.

HE was born in Coventry, where alſo his Parents dwelt. His Father had ſome Time been Mayor of the City, and occupied Merchan-

Anno 1556.

Merchandize, although he was an Upholster by his Mystery. How he was brought up in his tender Years, we know not, but as we have learned, he was some Time Scholar to Mr. Harley of Magdalen-College in Oxford; by whose Diligence, and the Goodness of his own Capacity, he became a toward young Scholar in Prose and Verse. He spake Latin with great Facility of Utterance, and wanted not competent Knowledge in the Greek Tongue; insomuch that divers Times he supplied the Room of the Greek Reader in his House. He was a subtle Disputer, both in the publick Schools, and also at Home.

And Scholar to Mr. Harley, Schoolmaster of Magdalen-College.

In private Study he was so indefatigable, that he arose ordinarily every Morning at four of the Clock, and went not to Bed before ten at Night. Insomuch that as he grew in Years and Understanding, so he came to be a Batchelor of Art, and at length, to the Preferment of a Fellowship in Magdalen-College, where also he was admitted to the Office of a Reader in Logick, Anno 1550. Now if he had at the first favoured sincere Religion, so much as he followed his Book, then had we the less Matter to note in him. But indeed he was so much addicted to the Romish Faith, that his Company and Conversation in the same House was altogether with such as were utter Enemies to the Gospel of Christ. If he came to common Prayer at any Time, it was by Violence and Compulsion, for otherwise he came not. Sermons would he hear none himself, nor yet suffer his Scholars to resort unto them by his good Will: For he was fully persuaded, that they might be better occupied at Home. The Preachers themselves he did both disdain and despise, and all such as were Setters forth of sound Doctrine beside. For which Contumacy and Stubbornness, he was so oft called before the Officers of the College, and punished sometimes by the Purse, sometimes by the Lack of his Commons, and otherwhile by certain Tasks, and Exercises of Learning injoined unto him, that divers supposed him to have endeavoured, of set Purpose, continually to seek Occasion, whereby he might be accounted a Sufferer for the fantasied Religion of the Romish Church.

Palmer Fellow of Magdalen-College.

Palmer an utter Enemy to sound Religion.

In the End, not long before the Death of King Edward, certain slanderous Libels and railing Verses, were privily fixed to the Walls and Doors in sundry Places of the College against the President, which was then Dr. Haddon, whereby was administred further Matter of Trouble to Palmer. For whereas it was well known that he and some of his Companions had a very little Time before spoken contumelious Words against the President, it could not be now avoided, but that thereby arose a vehement Surmise and Suspicion, that he conspiring with others, had contrived, made and scattered abroad the said slanderous Writings. Great Inquisition was made in the College, to search out the Author of so despiteful a Deed, but nothing could be found and proved against Palmer, or any of his Companions. Now Palmer being hereupon examined by the Officers, did not only with stout Courage deny the Fact to have been his, but also spake further many reproachful Words touching the said Officers, and sent the same to them in Writing, whereby he was by them adjudged to be an unworthy Member of that Society. And so for this and other Pranks (continuing obstinate still) he was expelled the House.

Julius Palmer expelled the College for Popery.

After he was thus expelled, he was obliged for his own Maintenance to apply himself to be a Teacher of Children in the House of Sir Francis Knolles, in which Trade he continued until the coming in of Queen Mary. And when her Visitors were sent to Magdalen-College, under a Title of Reformation, I mean to displace several of the Fellows that were learned, and to put right Catholicks in their Rooms; then came this Julius Palmer, waiting to be restored to his Living again, of which he had been deprived before, thinking by good Right to be restored by them, whose Faith and Religion (as he said) he did to the uttermost of his Power defend and maintain. And indeed at length he obtained the same. Then after he was restored again to his House in Queen Mary's Reign, God dealt so mercifully with him, that in the End he became of an obstinate Papist, an earnest and zealous Protestant.

Palmer restored again to his College.

Concerning whose Conversion to the Truth, for the more Credit to be given to the same, we have here inserted a Letter written by one Mr. Bullingham, Fellow in some Part of King Edward's Time with the said Palmer, then also of the same Religion with him, and toward the latter End of the said King's Reign a voluntary Exile in France for Popery. In Queen Mary's Days likewise a Chaplain unto Stephen Gardiner, Bishop of Winchester. And after the coming in of Queen Elizabeth, such an one as for his Obstinacy was discharged from all his Livings by her Majesty's Commissioners. And yet now (God be praised for it) a most constant Professor and earnest Teacher of the Word of God. This Man at the Request of a certain Friend of his in London, being desirous to know the certain Truth thereof, wrote unto him concerning this Julius Palmer. The Copy of which Letter we thought good here to insert.

Mr. Bullingham's Letter to his Friend.

MAster Bullingham, I wish you and all yours continual Health in the Lord. Hitherto have I not written any Thing unto you concerning Julius Palmer, that constant Witness of God's Truth, for that his Doings and Sayings known unto me, were worn out of my Remembrance; and to write an Untruth, it were rather to deface and blemish, than to adorn and beautify him. After his Conversion to the most holy Gospel, I never saw his Face. Wherefore the less have I to certify you of. But so much as seemeth to me to serve most unto the Purpose, here I commend unto you; and in Witness that my Sayings are true, I subscribe my Name, willing, praying and beseeching you, to publish the same to the whole World, &c. At what Time I Bullingham intended to forsake England, and to fly into France for the wicked Pope's Sake, (which came to pass indeed, for in Roan I was for a Time) this Julius Palmer and Richard Duck brought me onwards in my Journey 'till we came to London: Where on a Day Julius Palmer and I walked to St. James's, the Queen's Palace; and as we leaned at the great Gate of that Place Palmer spake thus unto me.

Bullingham, You know in what Misery and Calamities we are fallen for the Pope and his Religion. We are young Men, abhorred of all Men now presently, and like to be abhorred more and more.

more. Let us consider what hangeth over our Heads. You are departing into a strange Country, both Friendless and Moneyless, where I fear me you shall taste of sowrer Sauces than hitherto you have done. And as for me, I am at my Wits End. The Face of Hell itself is as amiable unto me, as Magdalen College; for there I am hated as a venemous Toad. Would God I were raked under the Earth. And as touching our Religion, even our Conscience bear Witness that we taste not such an inward Sweetness in the Profession thereof, as we understand the Gospellers to taste in their Religion: Behold the Obstinacy of the Papists, which knowing the Truth will not yield. Yea, to say the Truth, we maintain we know not what, rather of Will than of Knowledge. But what then? Rather than I will yield unto them I will beg my Bread. So Palmer bequeathed himself to the wide World, and I passed over into Normandy. At my Return into England, my Chance was to meet Palmer in Paul's, where a Rood was set up. (This our Meeting was in the Beginning of Queen Mary's Reign, and our miserable Departing not long before the End of King Edward's Days.) Then after our Greeting, thus said Palmer: Bullingham, is this our God, for whom we have smarted? No, Palmer (quoth he) it is an Image of him. An Image! (quoth he) I tell thee plainly, Bullingham, John Calvin, whose Institutions I have perused since our Departure, telleth me plainly by God's Word, that it is an Idol, and that the Pope is Antichrist, and his Clergy the filthy Sink Hole of Hell, and now I believe it; for I feel it sensibly. O that God had revealed these Matters unto me in Times past. I would have bequeathed this Romish Religion, or rather Irreligion, to the Devil of Hell, from whence it came. Behold his Earnestness now he is turned to the Truth. Believe them not, Bullingham. I will rather have these Knees pared off, than I will kneel to yonder Jackanapes (meaning the Rood). God help me, I am born to Trouble and Adversity in this World. Well, Palmer (said I) is the Wind in that Corner with you? I warrant you it will blow you to little Ease at the End. I will never have to do with you again. So I left Palmer walking in Paul's, who through the Element of Fire is exalted above the Elements, where eternal Rest is prepared for persecuted Martyrs. Thus much is true, and let it be known that I Bullingham affirm it to be true. More I have not to say. In these Words and Deeds it appeareth that God had elected him.

From Bridgewater, April 26, 1562.

By me, John Bullingham.

When he was by his Visitors restored to his College, although he began something to savour and taste of God's Truth, by Conference and Company of certain godly and zealous Men abroad, in Time of his Expulsion, especially at the House of Sir Francis Knolles; yet was he not thoroughly persuaded, but in most Points continued for a while either blind, or else doubtful. Neither could he chuse, but utter himself in private Reasoning from Time to Time, both in what Points he was fully resolved, and also of what Points he doubted. For such was always his Nature, utterly to detest all Dissimulation, insomuch that by the Means of his Plainness, and for that he could not flatter, he suffered much Trouble, both in King Edward's, and also in Queen Mary's Time. Whereas he might at the first have lived in great Quietness, if he could have dissembled, and both done and spoken against his Conscience, as many stirring Papists then did. And likewise he might have escaped the Flames in Queen Mary's Time, if he would either have spoken, or kept Silence against his Conscience, as many weak Gospellers did. But Palmer could in no wise dissemble.

Now within a short Time, God so wrought in his Heart, that he became very inquisitive, to hear and understand how the Martyrs were apprehended, what Articles they died for, how they were used, and after what Manner they took their Death. Insomuch that he spared not at his own Charges to send over one of his Scholars, in the Company of a Batchelor of that House, to Gloucester, to see and understand the whole Order of Bishop Hooper's Death, and to bring him true Report thereof. Which Thing some think he rather did, because he was wont in King Edward's Time to say; that none of them all would stand to Death for their Religion. Thus he learned with what great, extreme and horrible Cruelty the Martyrs of God were tried, and how valiantly they overcame all Kind of Torments to the End. Whereof he himself also did see more Experience afterwards, at the Examination and Death of those holy Confessors and Martyrs which were burnt at Oxford before his Eyes; insomuch that the first Hope which the Godly conceived of him, was at his Return from the Burning of Bishop Ridley and Bishop Latimer. At which Time, in the Hearing of divers of his Friends, he brake out into these or such like Words, O raging Cruelty! O Tyranny tragical, and more than barbarous!

From that Day forward he studiously endeavoured to understand the Truth, and therefore with all Speed he borrow'd Peter Martyr's Commentaries on the first to the Corinthians, and other good Books of other Men. And so through hearty Prayer and diligent Search of the Scripture, at length he believed and embraced the Truth with great Joy; and so profited in the same, that daily more and more, he declared it both in Word and Deed: Insomuch that ever afterwards he loved the Truth as much as he before hated it, when it pleased God to open his Eyes, and to reveal unto him the Light of his Word. And now again when he should come to Church, in those Days of Popery, there to be occupied among the rest, in singing of Responds, reading of Legends, &c. he had as much Pleasure, he said, to be at them, as a Bear to be baited and worried with Dogs. When he came, it was more to avoid Displeasure and Danger, than for any good Will, and ready Affection.

At length, through God's Grace, he grew up to such Maturity in the Truth, that he spared not to declare certain Sparks thereof in his outward Behaviour. For when he should keep his bowing Measures at * Confiteor (as the Custom there was) in turning himself to and fro, sometimes Eastward, sometimes Westward, and afterwards knock his Breast at the Time of Elevation, against these idolatrous Adorations his Heart did so vehemently rise, that sometimes he would absent himself from them, and sometimes being there, he would even at the sacring Time (as they termed it) get him out of the Church to avoid those ungodly Gestures, and idolatrous Adoration. To be short, perceiving after a while, that he was greatly suspected as well as disrespected

* By these Measures he meaneth a certain Ceremony of the College, which was this, That in the Confiteor Time at Even-Song the whole Company of the Choir (which was there to the Number of an hundred) standing up, and turning their Faces first to the high Altar, should then turn them to the President, and from the President to the high Altar again, and so after turning and returning three Times together, the President should say, Misereatur, which done, every Man to place himself again in his Stall.

respected by Mr. Cole, the President then being, and divers others who before had been his Friends, and finding great Torment of Conscience daily growing upon him, and also seeing that his new Life and old way of living could not well nor quietly stand together, he addressed himself to depart the House. For he thought it not best to abide the Danger of Expulsion, as he did at first; seeing the Heat of the Times increasing apace. And being demanded at that Time by a particular Friend whither he would go, or how he would live, he made this Answer, (Domini est Terra, & Plenitudo ejus) that is, The Earth is the Lord's, and the Fullness thereof. Let the Lord work, I will commit myself to God, and the wide World.

Palmer is placed by Patent to be Schoolmaster at Reading.

Within a short Time after he had yielded up his Fellowship in Oxford, he was through God's Providence placed Schoolmaster by Patent in the Grammar-school of Reading, where he was well accepted by all those that feared God, and favoured his Word. But Satan, envying his good Proceedings, would not suffer him long there to be quiet. Wherefore he stirred up against him certain double-faced Hypocrites, who by Dissimulation and crafty Insinuation had crept in, to understand his Secrets, under Pretence of a Zeal to the Gospel. Which Men he (suspecting no Deceit) right joyfully embraced, making them privy to all his Doings.

Palmer is circumvented by false Judasses.

His Study searched for Books.

These trusty Brethren, so soon as they had found good Opportunity, spared not in his Absence to rifle his Study of certain Books and Writings; amongst which was his Replication to Morewine's Verses, touching Winchester's Epitaph, and other Arguments both in Latin and English, written by him against the Popish Proceedings, and especially against their unnatural and brutish Tyranny, executed towards the Martyrs of God. When they had thus done, they were not ashamed to threaten him that they would exhibit the same to the Council, unless he would without Delay depart out of their Coasts, and give over the School to a Friend of theirs. The Truth of this Story appeareth in part by a Letter written with his own Hand, out of Prison, eight Days before he was burnt; which, because it is of certain Credit, and came to our Hands, therefore we are the bolder to avouch it for a Truth.

He is forced to depart the Town of Reading.

Thus then was this silly young Man, for the Safeguard of his Life, forced to depart on a sudden from Reading, leaving behind him in the Hands of his Enemies his Goods, and one Quarter's Stipend, and so he took his Journey towards Ensham, where his Mother then dwelt, hoping to obtain at her Hands certain Legacies due to him by his Father's last Will, which he should have received certain Years before; and taking his Journey by Oxford he requested certain of his Friends to accompany him thither. His Mother understanding his State and Errand by Mr. Shipper and his Brother (whom he had sent before to intreat for him) as soon as she beheld him on his Knees, asking her Blessing, as he had been accustomed to do: Thou shalt, said she, have Christ's Curse and mine wheresoever thou goest. He pauzing a little, as one amazed at so heavy a Greeting, at length said, O Mother, your own Curse you may give me, which God knoweth I never deserved, but God's Curse you cannot give me, for he hath already blessed me. Nay, said she, thou didst go from God's Blessing into the warm Sun, when thou wert banished for an Heretick out of that worshipful House in Oxford, and now for the like Knavery, art driven out of Reading too. Alas, Mother, said he, you have been misinformed. I was not expelled nor driven away, but freely resigned of mine own Accord. And Heretick I am none, for I stand not stubbornly against any true Doctrine, but defend it to my Power. And you may be sure, they use not to expel nor banish, but to burn Hereticks (as they term them.) Well, quoth she, I am sure thou dost not believe as thy Father and I, and all our Fore-fathers have done; but as we were taught by the new Law in King Edward's Time, which is damnable Heresy.

The Cruelty of his Popish Mother.

Indeed I confess, said he, that I believe that Doctrine which was taught in King Edward's Days, which is not Heresy but Truth, neither is it new, but as old as Christ and his Apostles. If thou art at that Point, said she, I require thee to depart from my House, and out of my Sight, and never take me more for thy Mother hereafter. As for Money and Goods I have none of thine, thy Father bequeathed nought for Hereticks. Faggots I have to burn thee, more thou getteſt not at my Hands. Mother, said he, whereas you have cursed me, I again pray God to bless you, and prosper you all your Life long; and with like soft Talk, sweet Words, and Abundance of Tears trickling down his Cheeks, he departed from her, wherewith he so molify'd her hard Heart, that she hurled an old Angel * after him, and said, Take that to keep thee a true Man.

The Father shall be divided against the Son, the Mother against the Daughter, &c. Luke 12.

* A gold Coin, worth about ten Shillings.

Thus poor Palmer, being destitute of worldly Friendship, and cruelly repelled by her whom he took to have been his surest Friend, knew not which Way to turn his Face. Soon after, when he had bethought himself, it came to his Mind to return secretly to Magdalen College, upon the assured Trust and Assiance, that he had a secret Friend or two in that House. At which Time, by the Suit of one Alane Cope, then Fellow of the House, he obtained Letters commendatory from Mr. Cole President there, for his Preferment to a School in Gloucestershire. So he getteth him away, committed by his Friends to God's divine Protection, of whom some accompanied him as far as Ensam Ferry, and some to Burford.

Mr. Hampton of Reading, a dissembling Hypocrite.

Afterward as he went alone musing, it came into his Head to leave his appointed Journey, and to return privately to Reading, trusting there by the Help of Friends to receive his Quarter's Stipend, and convey his Goods to the Custody of some trusty Body. To Reading he cometh, and taketh up his Lodging at the Cardinal's Hat, desiring his Hostess instantly to assign him a close Chamber, where he might be alone from all Resort of Company. He came not so closely, but that this viperous Generation had Knowledge thereof. Wherefore without Delay they laid their Heads together, and consulted what Way they might most safely proceed against him, to bring their old cankered Malice to pass. And soon it was concluded, that one Mr. Hampton (who then bare two Faces under one Hood, and under the Colour of a Brother played the Part of a dissembling Hypocrite) should resort to him under the Pretence of Friendship, to feel and fish out the Cause of his Repair to Reading.

Palmer, as he was an innocent Man, and without all Wrinkles of cloaked Deceit, opened to him his whole Intent. But Hampton earnestly persuaded him to the contrary, declaring what Danger might ensue if this were attempted.

tempted. Againſt his Counſel Palmer replied very much, and as they waxed hot in Talk, Hampton flung away in a Fury, and ſaid, As he had fiſhed, ſo ſhould he fowl for him. Palmer not yet ſuſpecting ſuch deviſed Miſchief, as by this crooked Generation was now in brewing againſt him, called for his Supper, and went quietly to Bed. But quietly he could not long reſt there. For within ſhort Space after, the Officers and their Retinue came ruſhing in with Lanthorns and Bills, requiring him in the King and Queen's Name to make himſelf ready, and quietly to depart with them: And led him away as a Lamb to the Slaughter, and committed him to ward, whom the Keeper as a ravening Wolf greedy of his Prey, brought down into a vile, ſtinking and blind Dungeon, prepared for Thieves and Murderers, and there he left him for a Time, hanging by the Hands and Feet in a pair of Stocks, ſo high, that well-near no part of his Body touched the Ground. In this Dungeon he remained about ten Days under the Tyranny of this unmerciful Keeper.

Palmer betrayed and apprehended.

After this he was brought before the Mayor of Reading, and there by the Procurement of certain falſe Brethren divers grievous Crimes were laid to his Charge, as Treaſon, Sedition, ſurmiſed Murder and Adultery.

To whom Palmer anſwered, that if ſuch heinous Crimes might be proved againſt him, he would patiently ſubmit himſelf to all kind of Torments that could be deviſed.

All this while no Mention was made of Hereſy or heretical Writings.

Their greateſt Proofs againſt him were theſe:

Firſt, That Palmer ſaid, the Queen's Sword was not put in her Hand to execute Tyranny, and to kill and murder the true Servants of God.

Item, That her Sword was too blunt toward the Papiſts, but toward the true Chriſtians it was too ſharp.

Item, That certain Servants of Sir Francis Knolles and others, reſorting to his Lectures, had fallen out among themſelves, and were like to have committed Murder, and therefore he was a ſower of Sedition, and a procurer of unlawful Aſſemblies.

Note the worſhipful Proceſs of the quarrelling Papiſts.

Item, That his Hoſteſs had written a Letter unto him (which they had intercepted) wherein ſhe required him to return to Reading, and ſent him her Commendations, by the Token that the Knife lay hid under the Beam, whereby they gathered that ſhe had conſpired with him to murder her Husband.

Item, That they found him alone with his Hoſteſs by the Fire-ſide in the Hall, the Door being ſhut to them forſooth.

When the Evidence was given up, the Mayor diſmiſſed them and went to Dinner, commanding Palmer to the Cage, to make him an open Spectacle of Ignominy to the Eyes of the World.

In the Afternoon Palmer came to his Anſwer, and did ſo clearly deface their Evidence, and defend his own Innocency, proving alſo that the ſaid Letters were forged by themſelves, that the Mayor himſelf was much aſhamed that he had given ſuch Credit to them, and ſo much born with them, ſo that he ſought Means how they might convey him out of the Country privily.

After this, when they ſaw the Matter frame ſo ill-favouredly, fearing that if he ſhould eſcape ſecretly, their Doing would tend no leſs to their Shame and Danger, than to the Mayor's Diſhoneſty; they deviſed a new Policy to bring to paſs their long hidden Malice againſt him, which was by this extreme Refuge. For whereas before they were partly aſhamed to accuſe him of Hereſy, ſeeing they had been counted earneſt Brethren themſelves; and partly afraid, becauſe they had broken up his Study, and committed Theft: Yet now, leſt their Iniquity ſhould have been revealed to the World, they put both Fear and Shame aſide, and began to rip up the old Sore, the Scar whereof had been but ſuperficially cured, as you have heard; and ſo to colour their former Practices with the Pretence of his Reformation in Religion, they charged him with the Writings that they had ſtolen out of his Study. Anno 1556.

Thus Palmer was once again called out of the Priſon to appear before the Mayor, and Bird the Official, and two other Juſtices, to render an Account of his Faith before them: To anſwer to ſuch Articles and Informations as were laid againſt him. And when they had gathered of his own Mouth ſufficient Matter to intrap him, they deviſed a Bill of Inſtructions againſt him, to be directed to Dr. Jeffrey, who had been determin'd to hold his Viſitation the next Tueſday at Newbury, which was the 16th of July. And thus were the falſe Witneſſes and bloody Accuſers winked at, and the Innocent delivered to the Lion to be devoured. When it was therefore concluded that Palmer ſhould be ſent over to Newbury, the ſaid Letters teſtimonial were convey'd over together with him.

On Monday Night Palmer, and Thomas Askin, his Fellow Priſoner for Chriſt's Cauſe, came to Newbury, and were committed to the comfortable Hoſtry of the blind Houſe, where they found John Guin, their faithful Brother in the Lord. Now when they came before the Conſiſtory of Dr. Jeffrey, and how Palmer was examined, it doth in Part appear by this Examination hereunto annexed, which although it be not perfectly and orderly penn'd, as the Report goeth it was ſpoken, nor perchance altogether in ſuch Form of Words, yet as exactly as we are able to compact and diſpoſe it, being gather'd out of ſeveral Notes of Richard Shipper, John Hunt, John Kirry of Newbury, Richard White of Marlborough, who were Eye-witneſſes, and preſent at the Hearing thereof.

The ſecond Examination of Julius Palmer, at Newbury.

ON the 16th of July, in the Year 1556, four or five Seats were prepared in the Choir of the Pariſh-church of Newbury for the Viſitors, whoſe Names here follow. Dr. Jeffrey for the Biſhop of Sarum, Sir Richard Abridges Knight, and then High Sheriff of the County, Sir William Ramsford, Knight, John Winchcomb, Eſquire, and the Parſon of Ingleſield. After the Priſoners were preſented, the Commiſſion read, and other Things done in Order accordingly, Dr. Jeffrey called to Palmer, and ſaid, Art thou that jolly Writer of Three-half-penny Books that we hear of?

Palmer. I know not what you mean.

Jeffrey. Have you taught Latin ſo long, that now you underſtand not Engliſh?

To

Anno 1556.

To this he anſwered nothing *.

Then Dr. Jeffrey ſtanding up, ſaid, We have received certain Writings and Articles againſt you, from the Right worſhipful the Mayor of Reading, and other Juſtices, whereby we underſtand, that being convened before them, you were convicted of certain Hereſies.

* He was too modeſt to anſwer, That the Teaching of Latin did not qualify him to underſtand Engliſh Nonſenſe.

Firſt, That you deny the Supremacy of the Pope's Holineſs.

Secondly, That there are but two Sacraments.

Thirdly, That the Prieſt ſheweth up an Idol at Maſs; and therefore you went to no Maſs, ſince your firſt coming to Reading.

Fourthly, That there is no Purgatory.

Laſt of all, That you be a Sower of Sedition, and have ſought to divide the Unity of the Queen's Subjects.

Sheriff. You were beſt ſee firſt what he will ſay to his own handy-work.

Jeffrey. Ye ſay Truth. Tell me, Palmer, art thou he that wrote this fair Volume? Look upon it.

Palmer. I wrote it indeed, and gathered it out of the Scripture.

Jeffrey. Is this doggiſh Rhime yours alſo? Look.

Palmer. I wrote this, I deny not.

Jeffrey. And what ſay you to theſe Latin Verſes, entituled, Epicedion, &c. Are they yours too?

Palmer. Yea Sir.

Jeffrey. Art thou not aſhamed to affirm it? it came of no good Spirit, that thou didſt both rail at the Dead, and ſlander a learned and catholick Man yet alive.

Palmer. If it be a Slander, he hath ſlandered himſelf: For I do but report his own Writing, and open the Folly therein declared. And I reckon it no Railing to inveigh againſt Annas and Caiaphas being dead.

Jeffrey. Say'ſt thou ſo? I will make thee recant it, and wring Peccavi out of thy lying Lips, 'ere I have done with thee.

Palmer. But I know, that although of myſelf I be able to do nothing, yet if you and all mine Enemies, both Bodily and Ghoſtly, ſhould do your worſt, you ſhall not be able to bring that to paſs, neither ſhall ye prevail againſt God's mighty Spirit, by whom we underſtand the Truth, and ſpeak it ſo boldly.

Jeffrey. Ah, are you full of the Spirit? Are you inſpired with the Holy Ghoſt?

Palmer. Sir, no Man can believe, but by the Inſpiration of the Holy Ghoſt. Therefore, if I were not a ſpiritual Man, and inſpired with God's Holy Spirit, I were not a true Chriſtian, [Qui Spiritum Chriſtum non habet, hic non eſt ejus] that is, He that hath not the Spirit of Chriſt is none of his.

Jeffrey. I perceive you lack no Words.

Palmer Chriſt hath promiſed not only to give us Store of Words neceſſary, but with them, ſuch Force of Matter, as the Gates of Hell ſhall not be able to confound or prevail againſt it.

The Holy Ghoſt ſhall teach you in that Hour what you ſhall anſwer. Luke 12.

Jeffrey. Chriſt made ſuch a Promiſe to his Apoſtles, I hope you will not compare yourſelf with them.

Palmer. With the holy Apoſtles I may not compare, neither have I any Affiance in mine own Wit or Learning, which I know is but ſmall: Yet this Promiſe I am certain pertaineth to all ſuch as are appointed to defend God's Truth againſt his Enemies, in time of their Perſecution for the ſame.

Jeffrey. Then it pertaineth not to thee.

Palmer. Yes, I am right well aſſured, that through his Grace it appertaineth at this preſent to me, as it ſhall (I doubt not) appear, if you give me leave to diſpute with you before this Audience, in Defence of all that I have there written.

Jeffrey. Thou art but a beardleſs Boy, yeſterday an Upſtart out of the Schools, and dareſt thou preſume to offer Diſputation, or to encounter with a Doctor!

A Marvel to the Papiſts, that young Men ſhould have the Gift of the Holy Ghoſt.

Palmer. Remember Mr. Doctor, The Spirit breatheth where it pleaſeth him, &c. And again, Out of the Mouth of Babes haſt thou ordained Strength. And in another Place, Thou haſt hid theſe Things from the wiſe and prudent, and haſt revealed them unto Babes. God is not tied to Time, Wit, Learning, Place nor Perſon. And although your Wit and Learning is greater than mine; yet your Belief in the Truth, and Zeal to defend the ſame, is no greater than mine.

God's Spirit not bound to Place or Perſon.

Regiſter. Sir, if you ſuffer him thus impudently to trifle with you, he will never have done.

Jeffery. Well, ye ſhall underſtand, that I have it not in Commiſſion as this preſent to diſpute with you, neither were it meet that we ſhould call again into Queſtion ſuch Articles as are already diſcuſſed, and perfectly defined by our Mother the Holy Church, whom we ought to believe without why or wherefore, as the Creed telleth us. But the Cauſe why ye be now called hither, is that ye might be examined upon ſuch Articles as are adminiſtred againſt you, and ſuch Matter as is here contained in your Hand-Writing, that it may be ſeen whether you will ſtand to it, or nay. How ſay you to this?

Jeffrey, notwithſtanding his Doctorſhip, is afraid to diſpute with this beardleſs Boy, as he called him.

Palmer. By your holy Church you mean the Synagogue of Rome, which is not univerſal, but a particular Church of Shavelings. The Catholick Church I believe, yet not for her own Sake, but becauſe ſhe is holy, that is to ſay, a Church that grounded her Belief upon the Word of her Spouſe Chriſt.

Jeffrey. Leave railing, and anſwer me directly to my Queſtion. Will you ſtand to your Writing, or will you not?

Palmer. If you prove any Sentence therein comprized not to ſtand with God's Word, I will preſently recant it.

Jeffrey. Thou impudent Fellow, have I not told thee, that I came not to diſpute with thee, but to examine thee?

Here the Parſon of Ingleſield pointing to the Pyx, ſaid, What ſeeſt you yonder?

Palmer. A Canopy of Silk broidered with Gold.

Parſon. Yea, but what is within it?

Palmer. A Piece of Bread in a Clout, I ſuppoſe.

Parſon. Thou art as froward an Heretick as ever I talked withal.

Here was much ſpoken of Confiteor, and other Parts of the Maſs.

Parſon. Do you not believe that they which receive the holy Sacrament of the Altar do truly eat Chriſt's natural Body?

Palmer. If the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper be adminiſtred as Chriſt did ordain it, the faithful Receivers do indeed ſpiritually and truly truly eat and drink in it Chriſt's very natural Body and Blood.

Parſon. The faithful Receivers? Ye cannot blear our Eyes with ſuch Sophiſtry. Do not all manner of Receivers, good and bad, faithful and unfaithful, receive the very natural Body in Form of Bread?

Palmer. No Sir.

Parſon. How prove you that?

Palmer. By this Place, He that eateth me, ſhall live for me.

Parſon. See that fond Fellow, whilſt he taketh himſelf to be a Doctor of the Law, you ſhall ſee me prove him a ſtark fooliſh Daw. Do you not read likewiſe, Whoſoever invocateth the Name of the Lord ſhall be ſaved? Ergo, Do none but the Godly call upon him? Therefore you muſt mark how St. Paul anſwereth you. He ſaith, that the wicked do eat the true Body to their Condemnation.

As Palmer was bent to anſwer him at the full, the Parſon interrupted him, crying ſtill, what ſay'ſt thou to St. Paul?

Palmer. I ſay that St. Paul hath no ſuch Words.

Parſon. See, the impudent Fellow denieth the plain Text: He that eateth and drinketh the Body of the Lord unworthily, is guilty of Judgment.

Palmer. I beſeech you lend me your Book.

Parſon. Not ſo.

The Sheriff. I pray you lend him your Book.

So the Book was given over to him.

Palmer. Your own Book hath, [Qui manducat hunc Panem, &c.] He that eateth this Bread.

Parſon. But St. Jerome's Tranſlation hath [Corpus] Body.

The Parſon confounded with his own Book, and his Mouth is ſtopped.

Palmer. Not ſo, Mr. Parſon, and God be praiſed that I have in the mean Seaſon ſhut up your Lips with your own Book.

Jeffrey. It is no Matter whether ye write Bread or Body, for we be able to prove that he meant the Body. And whereas you ſay, they eat it ſpiritually, that is but a blind Shift of Deſcant.

Palmer. What ſhould I ſay elſe?

Jeffrey. As holy Church ſaith, really, carnally, ſubſtantially.

Palmer. And with as good Scripture, I may ſay groſly or monſtrouſly.

Jeffrey. Thou ſpeakeſt wickedly. But tell me, Is Chriſt preſent in the Sacrament or no?

Palmer. He is preſent.

Jeffrey. How is he preſent?

Palmer. The Doctors ſay, [Modo Ineffabili] in a Manner not to be expreſſed. Therefore why do ye ask me? Would God ye had a Mind ready to believe it, or I a Tongue able to expreſs it unto you.

Jeffrey. What ſay you to the Baptiſm of Infants?

Palmer. I ſay that it ſtandeth with God's Word, and therefore ought of Neceſſity to be retained in the Church.

* Children dying before they come to Baptiſm are ſaved: Of this it followeth not, Ergo, Children that are brought, ought not to be baptized.

Jeffrey. Ye have forgotten yourſelf I believe, for ye write that Children may be ſaved without it.

Palmer. So I write, and ſo I ſay.

* Jeffrey. Then it is not neceſſary to be frequented and continued in the Church.

Palmer. Your Argument is not good, Mr. Doctor.

Jeffrey. Will you ſtand to it?

Palmer. Yea, Mr. Doctor, God willing.

Jeffrey. Note it, Regiſter.

Anno 1556.

More of his Examination is not come to our Hands; whenſoever God ſendeth it, I will communicate the ſame to the Reader. In the mean Seaſon we are credibly informed of this, that Sir Richard Abridges, the ſame Day after Dinner, ſent for him to his Lodging, and there, in the Preſence of divers Perſons yet alive in Newbury and elſewhere, friendly exhorted him to revoke his Opinion, to ſpare his young Years, Wit and Learning. If thou wilt be conformable, and ſhew thyſelf corrigible and repentant, in good Faith, ſaid he, I promiſe thee before this Company, I will give thee Meat and Drink, and Books, and ten Pounds yearly, ſo long as thou wilt dwell with me. And if thou wilt ſet thy Mind to Marriage, I will procure thee a Wife and a Farm, and help to furniſh and fit thy Farm for thee. How ſay'ſt thou?

Palmer thanked him very courteouſly, and made him further anſwer concerning his Religion ſomewhat at large, but very modeſtly and reverently; concluding in the End, that as he had already in two Places renounced his Living for Chriſt's Sake, ſo he would with God's Grace be ready to ſurrender and yield up his Life alſo for the ſame, when God ſhould ſend Time.

When Sir Richard perceived that he would by no means relent: Well Palmer, ſaith he, then I perceive one of us twain ſhall be damned. For we be of two Faiths, and certain I am there is but one Faith that leadeth to Life and Salvation.

Palmer. O Sir, I hope that we both ſhall be ſaved.

Sir Richard. How may that be?

Palmer. Right well, Sir. For as it hath pleaſed our merciful Saviour, according to the Goſpel's Parable, to call me at the third Hour of the Day, even in my Flowers, at the Age of four and twenty Years, even ſo I truſt he hath called, and will call you at the eleventh Hour of this your old Age, and give you everlaſting Life for your Portion.

Sir Richard. Say'ſt thou ſo? Well Palmer well, I would I might have thee but one Month in my Houſe, I doubt not but I would convert thee, or thou ſhouldſt convert me.

Then ſaid Mr. Winchcomb, Take Pity on thy golden Years, and pleaſant Flowers of luſty Youth, before it is too late.

Palmer. Sir, I long for thoſe ſpringing Flowers, that ſhall never fade away.

Winchcomb. If thou be at that Point, I have done with thee.

Then was Palmer commanded again to the Blind-houſe, but the other two Men were led again the ſame Afternoon to the Conſiſtory, and there were condemned, and delivered to the ſecular Power of the Sheriff there preſent, Sir Richard Abridges.

The next Morning the 16th of July, Palmer was required to ſubſcribe to certain Articles, which they had drawn out, concerning the Cauſe of his Condemnation: In the Front whereof, were heaped together many heinous Terms, as horrible, heretical, damnable, deviliſh, and execrable Doctrine. To theſe Words Palmer refuſed to ſubſcribe, affirming that the Doctrine which he profeſſed, was not ſuch, but good and ſound Doctrine.

Jeffrey. Ye may ſee, good People, what Shifts theſe Hereticks ſeek, to eſcape Burn-

Anno 1556. ing, when they ſee Juſtice adminiſtred unto them. But I tell thee, this Stile is agreeable to the Law, and therefore I cannot alter it.

Palmer. Then I cannot ſubſcribe to it.

Jeffrey. Wilt thou then crave Mercy, if thou likeſt not Juſtice, and revoke thy Hereſy?

Palmer. I forſake the Pope and his Popelings, with all popiſh Hereſy.

Jeffrey. Then ſubſcribe to the Articles.

Palmer. Alter the Epithethons, and I will ſubſcribe.

Jeffrey. Subſcribe, and qualify the Matter with thine own Pen. So he ſubſcribed. Whereupon Dr. Jeffrey proceeded to read the popiſh Sentence of his cruel Condemnation, and ſo was he delivered to the Charge of the ſecular Power, and was burnt the ſame Day in the Afternoon, about Five of the Clock.

Within one Hour before they went to the Place of Execution, Palmer, in the Preſence of many People, comforted his Companions with theſe Words. Brethren, ſaid he, be of good Chear in the Lord, and faint not. Remember the Words of our Saviour Chriſt, where he ſaith, Happy are you when Men revile you and perſecute you for Righteouſneſs ſake. Rejoice and be glad, for great is your Reward in Heaven. Fear not them that kill the Body, and be not able to touch the Soul. God is faithful, and will not ſuffer us to be tempted further than we ſhall be able to bear it. We ſhall not end our Lives in the Fire, but make a Change for a better Life. Yea, for Coals, we ſhall receive Pearls. For God's Holy Spirit certifieth our Spirit, that he hath even now prepared for us a ſweet Supper in Heaven for his Sake who ſuffered firſt for us.

With theſe and ſuch like Words, he did not only comfort the Hearts of his weak Brethren that were with him appointed as Sheep to be ſlain, but alſo wreſted out plentiful Tears from the Eyes of many that heard him. And as they were ſinging a Pſalm, came Sir Richard Abridges the Sheriff, and the Bailiffs of the Town, with a great Company of armed Men, to conduct them to the Fire. When they were come to the Place appointed for their Suffering, they all three fell to the Ground, and Palmer, with an audible Voice pronounced the 31ſt Pſalm, but the other two made their Prayers ſecretly to Almighty God.

And as Palmer began to ariſe, there came behind him two Popiſh Prieſts, exhorting him yet to recant and ſave his Soul. Palmer anſwered and ſaid, Away, away, tempt me no longer. Away, I ſay, all ye that work Iniquity; for the Lord hath heard the Voice of my Tears. And ſo forthwith they put off their Raiment, and went to the Stake and kiſſed it. And when they were bound to the Poſt, Palmer ſaid, Good People, pray for us, that we may perſevere to the End. And for Chriſt's Sake beware of popiſh Teachers, for they deceive you.

As he ſpake this, a Servant of one of the Bailiffs threw a Faggot at his Face, that the Blood guſhed out in divers Places. At which the Sheriff was very angry, and called him a cruel Tormentor, and with his Walking-ſtaff broke his Head, that the Blood likewiſe ran down about his Ears. When the Fire was kindled, and began to take hold upon their Bodies, they lifted up their Hands towards Heaven, and quietly and chearfully, as tho' they had felt no Smart, they cried, Lord Jeſus ſtrengthen us, Lord Jeſus aſſiſt us, Lord Jeſus receive our Souls. And ſo they continued without any Struggling, holding up their Hands, and knocking their Hearts, and calling upon Jeſus until they had ended their mortal Lives.

A wonderful Spectacle in the Martyrdom of Julius Palmer.

It was very remarkable that when their three Heads by Force of the devouring Flames were fallen together in a Lump, inſomuch that the Spectators thought they were all certainly dead, Palmer, as a Man awaked out of Sleep, moved his Tongue and Jaws, and was heard to pronounce this Word Jeſus. So being diſſolved into Aſhes, he yielded to God as joyful a Soul (confirmed with the ſweet Promiſes of Chriſt) as any one that ever was called beſide to ſuffer for his bleſſed Name. God grant us all to be moved with the like Spirit, working in our Hearts conſtantly to ſtand in Defence and Confeſſion of Chriſt's holy Goſpel to the End, Amen.

On the Martyrdom of Julius Palmer.

WHilſt for Chriſt's Sake, Palmer endures the Flame.

Like the fam'd Tree that bears this Hero's Name,
Which higher ſhoots the more they it oppreſs,
The ſtrengthen'd Flames his ſtronger Faith confeſs.
Henceforth amidſt the heav'nly Hoſts he'll bear
That Palm of Righteouſneſs he dy'd for here.

The Juſt ſhall flouriſh as the Palm-Tree.

A memorable Story of Agnes Wardall in the Town of Ipſwich.

ABout the Month of July, in this preſent Year, 1556. there was one Richard Argentine, alias Sexten, a Doctor of Phyſick, with certain others dwelling in the Town of Ipſwich, not many in Number, but maliciouſly bent upon the Deſtruction of the Goſpel, and the Favourers of the ſame. Among whom were Philip Ulmes, Edmund Leach, John Steward, and Matthew Butler Apothecary. This Butler being then Conſtable in the Town of Ipſwich, as he was on the Watch by Night upon Cornhil, Dr. Argentine came to him in great Haſte, giving him Intelligence of one Agnes Wardall, being then lately come home to her Houſe in Ipſwich. Whereupon immediately ſuch a Way was contrived between them, that the ſaid Agnes Wardall forthwith ſhould be apprehended: But God, ſo graciouſly provided for his Servant, and ſo prevented their malignant Devices, that they came to nought, notwithſtanding all their Zeal and Diligence; as by the further Relation of the Story you ſhall find.

This Agnes Wardall was a Woman that lived in God's Fear, and defy'd the popiſh Traſh, deſiring rather with hard Fare and bad Lodging to be abroad, than to be at home in her Houſe, and among the Tents of the ungodly: Her Husband alſo being a Man living in the Fear of God, and for the Teſtimony of his Conſcience being alſo hunted, by Force of the Law was conſtrained to avoid his Houſe, and got into a Crayer with an honeſt Man, ſerving as a Sailor, an Occupation which till now he had been a Stranger to, and alſo what render'd him the more incapable was his having a ſtumped Foot, which prevented his ready climbing to Top and Yard; yet it pleaſed God to enable him with Strength that he did good Service, as they can well witneſs that were of his Company.

His Wife is perſecuted by Dr. Argentine and others.

The ſaid Agnes Wardall happened one Day to come home to her Houſe to ſee her poor Children, who were under the Management of a young Maid, and being eſpy'd, the News was ſoon brought to Dr. Argentine, who immediately went to the Conſtable, the Apothecary as aforeſaid, and told him what a notable Cure was to be wrought on Wardall's Wife in the apprehending of her. Which was more like to ſpeed than miſs, had not the good Providence of God otherwiſe order'd it.

The Watch was ſpeedily charg'd, and each Company ſent to its Place. Argentine and the Conſtable took a good Number with them, and forth they went to the Houſe of this poor Woman to lay Hands upon her, which they beſet on both Sides, ſome lying in the open Fields, and others were ſent to the Houſe of Wardall's Mother, which was not far from his Houſe. This done one knock'd at the Street-door where Argentine and Butler was, and no Anſwer was made; the ſecond Time ſomewhat harder, but had no Anſwer. In the mean Time they fearing that ſome Conveyance was made, knocked the third Time harder than before.

There was not far from the Door where they knocked, a certain Window, where one might look out and ſpeak: And ſo at the third knocking, a Woman who at that Time was Tenant to Robert Wardall's Mother, ſpeaking out hard by their Ears, asked who was there?

Ah Sirrah, ſaid Argentine, are you ſo nigh and will not ſpeak? How fortuned it that ye ſpake not at the firſt, being ſo nigh?

How fortuned it, ſaid the Woman, marry I ſhall tell you: I am but a Stranger here, and I have heard ſay, that there be Spirits walking hereabout, which if a Man do anſwer at the firſt Call or ſecond, he ſtands in great Danger, and I was never ſo afraid in my Life. At this her Anſwer they laughed, and commanded her to open the Door in the Queen's Name, for they were the Queen's Watch.

The Lord bleſs every good Man and Woman from ſuch wicked Spirits.

Agnes Wardall being at that Time in Bed in an inner Chamber, having her Maid with her, and her two Children, and being at that Time very heavy aſleep, heard not the Knocking. Her Maid hearing at the ſecond Knock, called and jogged her Dame, and with much ado awaked her, and ſaid, The Watch is at the Door. What, thou lieſt, ſaid ſhe. Yes truly, ſaid the Maid, and hath knock'd twice. With that ſhe aroſe with all Speed, and put on her Cloaths very ſlightly, and took with her a Buckram Apron, which afterward ſhe caſt on her Head when ſhe was fain to creep in a Ditch with Nettles, and ſo paſſed down into a Parlour, wherein ſtood a Cup-board with a fair Preſs, into which the Maid did lock her.

Behold, He that keepeth Iſrael ſhall neither ſlumber nor ſleep, Pſal. 121.

And immediately went up to a Chamber which was hard by the Street, where ſhe might ſee and ſpeak to the Watch, and ſaid, who is there. Then they bade her open the Door. And ſhe ſaid, We have no Candle. And they ſaid, Open the Door, or we will lay it on the Floor. With that ſhe came down and opened the Door. Then asked they the Maid, who is within? And ſhe ſaid, None but a Woman that dwelleth with us, and two Children. Then ſaid they, Where is thy Dame? Truly, ſaid ſhe, I cannot tell, ſhe is not within. She was here in the Evening, ſaid they. Yea, ſaid the Maid, but ſhe went forth I know not whither. Notwithſtanding they charged her that ſhe knew where ſhe was, which ſhe denied. Then got they a Candle lighted at one of the Neighbour's Houſes, and came in, and in the Entry met the Woman which had anſwered them at the Window, and ſaid ſhe was afraid of Spirits. Argentine looking upon her, clapp'd her on the Back, and ſaid, Thou art not the Woman whom we ſeek for. Anno 1556.

So they entered the Houſe, and ſearched a Parlour next to the Street where the Woman lay which was his Mother's Tenant, and a young Child that ſucked on her Breaſt, and not only in the Bed, but alſo under the Bed, behind the painted Clothes, and in the Chimney, and up into the Chimney; and finding the Bed hot, ſaid, Who lay here in the Bed? The Woman ſaid, I and the Child. And none elſe, quoth they. No, ſaid the Woman. When they could find nothing there for their Purpoſe, from thence they went into an inner Parlour, in which ſtood the Cupboard wherein ſhe was, and ſearched the Parlour, which was but a little one. And one of the Company laying his Hand on the Cupboard, ſaid, This is a fair Cupboard, ſhe may be here for any Thing that is done. That is true, ſaith another of them. Notwithſtanding they looked no farther, but went from that into the Chamber above, wherein the ſaid Agnes had lain with her Maid and Children, with all other Rooms and Chambers.

At length they came down into the Yard, where they found a Horſe tied at a Pale eating of ſhorn Graſs. Then asked they the Maid, Whoſe Horſe is this? She anſwered, It is her Horſe indeed, and ſhe came in before Night, and went abroad again, but I know not whither. Then were they in good hopes to find their Prey, and beſtirred them with Speed, and went into an Out-chamber that was in the Yard, in which was a Boy in Bed of twelve or fourteen Years old. And being in his dead Sleep, they ſuddenly awaked him and examined him for his Dame. Who anſwered, He knew not where ſhe was; and unto that ſtood firmly, altho' their Threats were vehement, not only to the poor ſilly Boy, but alſo to the good ſimple plain Maid. Then they cauſed him to ariſe and dreſs him, and ſent both Maid and Boy up to the Cage, where they put the Maid, but kept the Boy among their truſty Soldiers, ſo that one of them ſhould not ſpeak with another.

Now while ſome were on the Corn hill, and others ſearching the Neighbours Houſes, and Backſides, the Wife of Wardall being in the Preſs faſt locked up, and almoſt ſmothered for want of Breath, deſired the Woman her Mother's Tenant, when ſhe heard her in the Parlour, to let her out. She asked her where the Keys were, who anſwered, they were in a Hamper, which ſhe found, and endeavoured to unlock the Preſs, but could not, though ſhe try'd a long Time. Then ſhe deſired her to break it open; for (ſaid ſhe) I had rather fall into their Hands, than to kill myſelf. Then ſhe ſought for her Husband's Hammer and Chiſel, but could not find them, to break it open withal, and came again and told her ſhe could find nothing for the Purpoſe.

Then, ſaid ſhe, try once more, for I truſt

Anno 1556. God will give Power to open it. And being within in great Extremity, ſhe heartily pray'd to God, who heard her Prayer, and helped her, for at the firſt Turn of the Key it opened eaſily. When ſhe came out ſhe looked as pale and as bleak as if ſhe had been dead and laid out, and as ſhe herſelf looked afterwards when ſhe was really dead, as the ſame Woman reported who then let her out, and was alſo at her Death long after in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, and ſhe was all in a violent Sweat like Drops of Rain.

Then ſhe went out into the Backſide, where, towards the Fields, were Pales fixed for the Defence of the Garden, one or two of which being looſe, both ſhe and her Husband had often gone out and came in that Way, out ſhe got into the Fields, and paſſing one little Field, and over a Stile, ſhe hid herſelf in a deep Ditch full of Nettles, and covered her Head with the Buckram Apron before-mentioned, and ſo crept low, and lay in the Ditch. After long Search to no purpoſe in the Town, ſome of the Watch return'd again to the Field's ſide; among whom was one George Manning, and John Bate the Crier of the ſame Town coming together. This Manning was an honeſt plain Man, but Bate a very Enemy, and one that in Queen Mary's Time would have been a Prieſt, as it was reported, if he had not been marry'd.

George Manning an honeſt Man.

Manning eſpying where ſhe lay, gave a Hem, and made a Noiſe with his Bill, he being before Bate; at which ſhe lay ſtill, at laſt they departed to the Street ſide to the Conſtable. All this Time the Maid was in the Cage, and the Boy with the reſt of the Watch untill perfect Day-light. Then went they up and let out the Maid, and ſent her home, and the Boy alſo; but they made the Maid believe they had found her Dame. Who anſwered, If ye have her, keep her faſt.

On the Morrow Manning ſent her Word to beware that ſhe hid herſelf no more ſo near.

Thus by the Might and Power of God was his faithful Servant deliver'd from their Cruelty, and they known to be his Adverſaries, not only at that Time, but divers Times before and after.

The Trouble of Peter Moon and his Wife, and others, at Ipſwich.

IN the Year 1556, a Viſitation was held by Dr. Hopton then Biſhop of Norwich, and Miles Dunnings his Chancellor, at Ipſwich in Suffolk, where divers were much troubled; among whom were Peter Moon a Taylor, and his Wife: They were accuſed of Diſobedience to the Law, in not coming to Church, and refuſing to partake of ſuch Romiſh Obſervances as at that Time were uſed.

And firſt the ſaid Peter Moon was commanded to come before the Biſhop, where he was examined of three ſeveral Articles, viz. 1. Whether the Pope were ſupreme Head. 2. Whether King Philip and Queen Mary were right Heirs to the Crown. 3. And whether in the Sacrament of the Altar was the very Body of Chriſt ſubſtantially and really there preſent.

Unto which the ſaid Peter Moon being timorous and weak, fearing more the Face of Men than the heavy Wrath of God, affirmed, and in a manner granted unto their Demands. Whereupon the Biſhop being in good Hope, that although he had not come to Church, nor received the Sacrament of the Altar, nor been ready to do his Duty as the Law had commanded, yet there ſhewing his Mind, ſaid, that he liked the Man well: For ſuch as have been, ſaid he, earneſt in evil Things, will alſo be earneſt in that that is good and godly, if once they be won.

Thus as this ſpiritual Father was commanding his carnal Child, and rather preferring him to Hell-fire, than unto the ſincere Word and Commandments of God, it happened amongſt many others in the Chamber, was one of the Portmen of the ſame Town, named Smart, an earneſt Member of their Romiſh Law, doing of a very good Conſcience what he did, who after the Death of Queen Mary lived not many Years, but rendered his Life in godly Repentance, proteſting, that if God ſhould ſuffer him to live, he would never be the Man he had been before, what Laws ſoever ſhould come again: So that before the Time of his Sickneſs he frequenting earneſtly the Sermons in the ſame Town, msde by divers godly learned Men, would weep as it had been a Child, being notwithſtanding of Courage as ſtout as any Man in Ipſwich. Such is the marvellous Mercy of God in calling to his Kitgdom, whom, and when he pleaſeth.

This Portman aforeſaid, perceiving the Biſhop thus, as it were at an End with the ſaid Moon, and ſo he like to be diſcharged, ſaid unto the Biſhop, My Lord, I have a good Opinion of the Man, and that he will be conformable: But my Lord, he hath a perilous Woman to his Wife. For I will tell you, my Lord, ſhe never came to Church yet ſince the Queen's Reign, except it were at Even-ſong, or when ſhe was churched, and not then till Maſs were done. Wherefore your good Lordſhip might do a good Deed to cauſe her to come before you, and to ſee if you could do any Good. And therefore I beſeech your good Lordſhip to command him to pray her to come before your Lordſhip.

At which Words Moon was ſomewhat moved, in that he ſaid, Command him to pray her to come before your Lordſhip. And he ſaid unto him, Under my Lord's Correction I ſpeak, I am as able to command her to come before my Lord, as ye are to command the worſt Boy in your Houſe. Yea, my Lord, ſaid the other, I cry your Lordſhip's Mercy: I have informed your Lordſhip with an Untruth, if this be ſo. But if he be ſo able as he ſaith, he might have commanded her to have come to Church in all this Time, if it had pleaſed him. Well, ſaid the Biſhop, look you come before me at Afternoon, and bring your Wife with you; I will talk with thee.

As my Lord's Dinner at that Time was ſerving up, Moon departed, and tarried not to take part thereof, having ſuch an hard Breakfaſt given him before to digeſt. At Afternoon Moon delayed and waited his Time, bethinking when he might moſt conveniently come, eſpecially when his Accuſer and his Wife's ſhould not have been there. And according to the Commandment came with his Wife, which was not ſo ſecretly done, but his Accuſer had Knowledge thereof, and came with all Expedition in ſuch Poſt-ſpeed, that he was in in a Manner breathleſs when he enter'd the Biſhop's Chamber.

Moon and his Wife brought before the Biſhop.

The Biſhop hearing that Moon and his Wife were come, called for them, and ſaid to Moon, Is this your Wife, Moon? Yea, my Lord, ſaid he. O good Lord, ſaid the Biſhop, how a Man may be deceiv'd in a Woman! I promiſe you a Man would take her for as honeſt a Woman, by all outward Appearance, as can be. Why, my Lord, ſaid Moon's Wife, I truſt there is none that can charge me with any Diſhoneſty, as concerning my Body; I defy all the World in that reſpect.

Nay, quoth the Biſhop, I meant not as concerning the Diſhoneſty of thy Body: But thou hadſt better to have given the Uſe of thy Body unto twenty ſundry Men, than to do as thou haſt done. For thou haſt done as much as in thee lieth, to pluck the King and the Queen's Majeſties' out of their Royal Seats through thy Diſobedience, in ſhewing thyſelf an open Enemy unto God's Laws, and their Proceedings.

Then the Biſhop began to examine the ſaid Moon again with the aforeſaid Articles, and his Wife alſo. And ſhe hearing her Husband relent, did alſo affirm the ſame, which turned to their great Trouble of Mind afterward; but yet neither were they like thus to eſcape, but that in the mean Time Dunning the Biſhop's Chancellor came up in great Haſte, and brought News to the Biſhop, that there was ſuch a Number of Hereticks come, of which ſome came from Boxford, ſome from Lanham, and about from the Cloth-country, that it would make a Man out of his Wits to hear them: And there are among them both Hereticks and Anabaptiſts, ſaid he. And thus Dr. Dunning with his bluſtring Words interrupting Moon's Examination, went down again to keep his Stir among them, and to take Order what ſhould be done with them.

The Biſhop beginning to bewail the State of the Country, in that it was ſo infected with ſuch a Number of Hereticks, and rehearſing partly their Opinions to thoſe that were at that Time in the Chamber, Moon's Wife had a young Child which ſhe nurſed herſelf, and the Child being brought into the Yard under the Biſhop's Chamber, cried, ſo that ſhe heard it; and then ſaid, My Lord, I truſt ye have done with me. My Child crieth beneath, I muſt go give my Child ſuck, with ſuch like Words. And the Biſhop being (as it were) out of Wind to talk with them any more, ſaid, Go your way, I will talk with you in the Morning: With this they both departed.

And beneath in the Stone-hall of the ſame Houſe, the Chancellor Dunning being very buſy about his bloody Buſineſs, eſpied Moon and his Wife coming, and muſt needs paſs by the Place where he ſtood, and ſaid; Nay, ſoft, I muſt talk with you both; for ye are as evil as any that are here to Day. To whom Moon's Wife anſwered, My Lord hath had us in Examination, and therefore ye ſhall have nought to do with us. Nay, quoth he, ye ſhall not ſo eſcape, I muſt talk with you alſo. Unto whom Moon anſwered, in the Preſence of the greater, the leſs hath no Power: My Lord hath taken Order with us, and therefore we are as his Lordſhip hath appointed, and muſt repair again before him To morrow. At which he let them go, although he was earneſtly importuned by the Party above ſpecify'd to have ſhewed his Quality, which was nothing elſe but Tyranny.

Moon's Anſwer to the Biſhop and his Chancellor.

Anno 1556.

Moon and his Wife eſcape from the Biſhop and his Chancellor.

They are confounded in Conſcience for their Denial.

So departed Moon and his Wife without Hurt of Body: But afterwards when they with Peter the Apoſtle, beheld the Face of Chriſt, they were ſore wounded in their Conſciences, aſhamed of their Doings, and alſo at the Door of Deſparation. Inſomuch that when he came home to his Houſe, and entering into a Parlour alone by himſelf, conſidering his Eſtate, and ſeeing where a Sword of his did hang againſt a Wall, he was earneſtly allured by the Enemy Satan to have taken it down, and therewith to have ſlain himſelf: But God who caſteth not away the penitent Sinner, repenting his Fall with a ſincere Heart, defended his unworthy Servant from that Temptation, and hath (I truſt) left him to the Amendment of Life by the Aſſiſtance of his Holy Spirit, and to make him one among the Elect that ſhall be ſaved.

The Morrow they both remained and kept Houſe with no ſmall Grief of Conſcience, waiting and looking with Fear when to be ſent for to the Biſhop, rather than offering their Diligence to keep the Biſhop's Appointment: But God ſo wrought, that when the Time drew near that they feared the Biſhop's Call, the Bells rung for his Departure out of Town, for which they were not only glad, but alſo many a good Heart in Ipſwich rejoiced and gave Thanks to God. God for his Mercy grant, that our Sin may never deſerve to provoke God's Anger, leſt the like Days ſhould come again. And if they ſo do, God make them, with all other Weaklings, ſtrong and worthy Soldiers to encounter with the ghoſtly Enemies, the World, the Fleſh, and the Devil; and boldly to ſtand to the Confeſſion of Chriſt, and of his Goſpel, ſaying with the Apoſtles, Whether it be right in the Sight of God, that we ſhould obey you more than God, judge ye.

A tragical Story of a cruel Murder committed upon three Women and an Infant, viz. the Mother, her two Daughters, and the Child, in the Iſle of Garnſey, July 18, 1556.

OF all the tragical Hiſtories in this Book, nothing can be more barbarous, if any Thing can come up to the Inhumanity of this Execution upon three Women and one Infant, whoſe Names be theſe following;

Catherine Cawches, the Mother.
Guillemine Gilbert, the Daughter.
Perotine Maſſey, the other Daughter.
An Infant the Son of Perotine.

Before I come to the Story itſelf, it will be neceſſary, for the better explaining of it, to relate the Circumſtances, from whence this Cruelty did originally ſpring, which was as followeth.

The 17th Day of May, in the Year 1556, in the Iſle of Garnſey (which is a Member of England) in a Town there called St. Peter's Port, was a naughty Woman named Vincent Goſſet, who being evil diſpoſed went (the Day aforeſaid) to the Houſe of one Nicholas le Conronney, Anno 1556. ronney, dwelling in the Town of the ſaid St. Peter's Port, about ten of the Clock at Night, and there taking the Key of the Houſe (lying under the Door) entered into a Chamber toward the Street, where ſhe eſpying a Cup of Silver within a Cupboard, took it away, and ſo convey'd herſelf out of the Houſe again. Who immediately after this Fact was done (whether by Counſel or by what Occaſion elſe I know not) brought the Cup to the aboveſaid Perotine Maſſey, an honeſt Woman, dwelling in the ſaid Town, deſiring her to lend her Six-pence upon the ſame.

Perotine ſeeing the Cup, and ſuſpecting the ſame to be ſtolen, anſwered, that ſhe would not take it: Yet nevertheleſs, having Knowledge of the Owner thereof, took it to reſtore it again to whom it did belong; and to the End ſhe ſhould not carry it to another, gave her Six-pence then preſently. Where moreover is to be noted, that Thomas Effart ſaith and teſtifieth, that Knowledge was given by the ſaid Perotine to Conronney touching the ſtealing of this Piece, who ſoon upon the Miſliking thereof attached the ſaid Vincent Goſſet of the Treſpaſs; who being apprehended and examined upon the ſame, immediately confeſſed the Fact, deſiring to have one ſent with her (which was Collas de Loutre) with Sixpence to fetch the Cup again, which he accordingly did.

The next Day following, the King's Officers being informed of the Premiſſes by one Nicholas Cary, of the ſaid Town, Conſtable, aſſembled the Juſtices there to enquire and examine further, as well upon the Fact of Vincent Goſſet, as upon other Griefs and Things there amiſs. So that after Declaration made by the Officers and Conſtable before the Juſtice, for that the ſaid Conſtable did report to have found a certain Veſſel of Pewter in the Houſe of the aforeſaid Perotine Maſſey (who then dwelt with her Mother Katherine Cawches, and her Siſter Guillemine Gilbert) which Veſſel did bear no Mark, and eſpecially for that there was a Pewter Diſh, whereof the Name was ſcraped out, their Bodies upon the ſame were attached and put in Priſon, and their moveable Goods taken by Inventory. Within a few Days after theſe Things thus done and paſt, theſe three ſilly Women, abiding thus in Durance in the Caſtle, made their Supplication to the Juſtices to have Juſtice miniſtred unto them, viz. If they had offended the Law, then to let them have the Law; if not, beſeeching to grant them the Benefit of Subjects, &c. which Supplication put up, they were thereupon appointed to come to their Anſwer the fifth Day of June in the Year aforeſaid. Upon which Day, after ſtrict examining of the Matter, and the honeſt anſwering of the Cauſe by the ſaid good Women, at laſt they ſubmitted themſelves to the Report of their Neighbours, that they were no Thieves, nor evil diſpoſed Perſons, but lived truly and honeſtly, as became chriſtian Women to do, notwithſtanding the falſe Report of their Accuſers.

So the Cauſe being thus debated, after the Inquiry made by the King's Officers, they were found by the ſaid Neighbours not guilty of what they were charged with, but had always lived as honeſt Women among them; ſaving only that to the Commandments of holy Church they had not been obedient, &c. Upon this Trial and Verdict of their Neighbours, it was in fine adjudged, firſt, that the ſaid Vincent Goſſet, being attainted of Felony, and condemned for the ſame, ſhould be whipped, and after her Ear being nailed to the Pillory, ſhould ſo be baniſhed out of the Iſle without further Puniſhment. And as touching the other three Women, the Mother with her two Daughters, for their not coming to Church, they were returned Priſoners again into the Caſtle the firſt of July. And thus far concerning the true Diſcourſe of this Matter, according to the faithful Teſtimony of the Garnſey Men, written with their own Hands both in the French and Engliſh Tongue. Wherein you ſee what falſe ſurmiſed Matter was pretended againſt theſe Women, and nothing proved, and how by the Atteſtation of their Neighbours they were fully cleared of the Fact, and ſhould by the temporal Court have been diſmiſſed, had not the ſpiritual Clergymen picked Matter of Religion againſt them, exerciſed ſuch Extremity in perſecuting theſe miſerable Priſoners, that in no Caſe they ſhould eſcape their bloody Hands, till at length they had brought them to their End. For after the Time of this Declaration abovementioned made by the Neighbours, whereby they were purged of all other Things, and being then known of their not coming to Church, the Bailiff's Lieutenant and the Juſtice thinking the Matter not to pertain to them, but to the Clergy, forthwith wrote their Letters or Mandate under their Signets to the Dean, whoſe Name was Jaques Amy, and Curates of the ſaid Iſle: The Contents whereof here follow.

A Letter ſent from the Bayliffs, Lieutenant, and Jurates of St. Peter's-Port, to the Dean and Curates of the Iſle of Garnſey.

MAſter Dean and Juſtices in your Court and Juriſdiction, after all amicable Recommendations, pleaſeth you to know that we are informed by the Depoſition of certain honeſt Men, paſs'd before us in manner of an Enquiry; in which Enquiry, Katherine Cawches and her two Daughters have ſubmitted themſelves in a certain Matter criminal: Wherein we be informed that they have been diſobedient to the Commandments and Ordinances of the Church, in contemning and forſaking the Maſs, and the Ordinances of the ſame, againſt the Will and Commandment of our Sovereign Lord the King and the Queen. Whereof we ſend you the ſaid Matter, foraſmuch as the Matter is ſpiritual, to the End you may proceed therein after your good Diſcretions, and as briefly as you can poſſible, and alſo that it pertaineth to your Office, recommending you to God, who give you Grace to do that which pertaineth to Right and Juſtice. Written the firſt Day of the Month of July, in the Year of our Lord 1556.

After theſe Letters and Information thus addreſſed to Jaques Amy Dean, and the other Clergy, the ſaid Women were again convented before the Juſtice aforeſaid, with his Aſſiſtants. In the Preſence of whom they being examined of their Faith, concerning the Ordinances of the Romiſh Church, made their Anſwer that they would obey and keep the Ordinances of the King and Queen, and the Commandments of the Church, notwithſtanding that they had ſaid and done the contrary in the Time of King Edward the ſixth, in ſhewing Obedience to his Ordinances and Commandments before. After which Anſwer taken, they were returned again to Priſon, until the other had an Anſwer of their Letter from the Dean and his Accomplices. During which Time, the Dean and Curate gave their Information touching the ſaid Women, and delivered the ſame to the Bailiff and Jurates, condemning and reputing them for Hereticks, the Women neither hearing of any Information, neither yet being ever examined at any Time before of their Faith and Religion. Whereupon when the ſaid Bailiff and Jurates underſtood that the ſaid Dean and Curates had not examined the Women of their Faith, they would not ſit in Judgment on that Day, but ordained the Women to come firſt before the Dean and Curates to be examined of their Faith. And ſo the Officers, at the Commandment of the Juſtices, did fetch and preſent them before the ſaid Dean and Curates; which being done, they were examined apart, and then returned to Priſon again.

The 14th Day of the ſaid Month of July, in the Year aforeſaid, after the Examination abovementioned before Elier Goſſelin Bailiff, in the Preſence of Thomas Devicke, Pierres Martin, Nicholas Cary, John Blundel, Nicholas de Liſle, John Laverchaunt, John le Fever, Pierres Bonamy, Nicholas Martine, John de la March, Jurates; Sir Jaques Amy, Dean, and the Curates, did deliver before the Juſtice, under the Seal of the Dean, and under the Signs of the Curates, a certain Act and Sentence, the Sum whereof was, that Katherine Cawches and her two Daughters were found Hereticks, and ſuch they reputed them, and have delivered them to Juſtice, to do Execution according to the Sentence; the Tenor of which here followeth.

In the Year of our Lord 1556, July 13, at the Church of St. Peter's Port, in the Iſle of Garnſey, Inquiry being made by us the Dean and Curates, concerning the Catholick Faith and the Sacraments of the Church, viz. of Baptiſm, Confirmation, Penance, Orders, Marriage, Euchariſt, and extreme Unction, as alſo about eccleſiaſtical Ceremonies, and the Honour and Worſhip of the Virgin Mary and the Saints, alſo of the Maſs and its Efficacy; where Katherine Cawches, and her two Daughters Perotine and Guillemine, being called together, and ſeparately, according to Law; and although often deſired and exhorted to confeſs their Faults and ask Pardon, yet they obſtinately deny'd whatever they had formerly ſaid vilely and diſhoneſtly againſt the Catholick Faith, the Sacraments of the Church and other eccleſiaſtical Ceremonies, wherefore their Denial, Atteſtation and Depoſition, being heard, and we ſeeing, conſidering and well weighing the Evidence againſt them; as alſo the Opinions of the Curates and Vicars there aſſiſting, have found and do declare the ſaid Katherine and Perotine, as alſo Guillemine, to be guilty of Hereſy, wherefore we command them back from whence they came.

Thomas le Coll, John Alles, William Panquet, Peter Tardiſe, and John Manatiel.

When this was done the King's Officers were commanded to go to the Caſtle to fetch the ſaid Women, to hear the Sentence againſt them in the Preſence aforeſaid. And they appearing before them, ſaid in the Ears of all the Auditory, that they would ſee their Accuſers, and know them that have depoſed againſt them, becauſe they might make Anſwers to their Sayings and Perſonages, and to have their Libel accordingly; for they knew not that they had offended the Majeſties of the King and Queen, nor of the Church, but entirely would obey, ſerve and keep the Ordinances of the King and Queen, and of the Church, as all good and true Subjects are bound to do. And for any Breach of the King's and Queen's Laws that they had done, they required Juſtice. Notwithſtanding all which their Reaſons and Allegations, the ſaid poor Women were condemned, and adjudged to be burnt until they were conſumed to Aſhes: According to a Sentence given by Elier Goſſelin Bailiff: Of which Sentence the Subſtance here followeth. Anno 1556.

Katherine Cawches, Perotine Maſſey *, and Guillemine Gilbert, are all condemned and judged this Day to be burned, until they be conſumed to Aſhes in the Place accuſtomed, with the Confiſcation of all their Goods, Moveables and Heritages, to be in the Hands of the King's and Queen's Majeſties, according and after the Effect of a Sentence delivered in Juſtice by Mr. Dean and the Curates, the 13*th Day of* July 1556, in which they have been approved Hereticks. In the Preſence of Thomas Devicke, Pierres Martine, Nicholas Cary, John Bloundel, Nicholas Deviſe, John le Merchant, &c. Jurates.

* Perotine and Guillemine were the Daughters of Katherine Cawches.

After which Sentence pronounced, the ſaid Women appealed unto the King and Queen, and their honourable Council, ſaying, That againſt Reaſon and Right they were condemned, and for that Cauſe they made their Appeal; notwithſtanding they could not be heard, but were delivered by the ſaid Bailiff to the King and Queen's Officers, to ſee the Execution done on them according to the ſaid Sentence.

The Time then being come when theſe Innocents ſhould ſuffer, in the Place, where they ſhould conſummate their Martyrdom were three Stakes ſet up. At the middle Poſt was the Mother, the eldeſt Daughter on the right Hand, the youngeſt on the other. They were firſt ſtrangled, but the Rope brake before they were dead, and ſo the poor Women fell in the Fire. Perotine, who was then great with Child, did fall on her Side, where happened a rueful Sight, not only to the Eyes of all that ſtood there, but alſo to the Ears of all true-hearted Chriſtians that ſhall read this Hiſtory. For as the Belly of the Woman burſt aſunder by the Vehemency of the Flame, the Infant, being a fair Man-child, fell into the Fire, and being immediately taken out by one W. Houſe, was laid upon the Graſs.

Then was the Child carry'd to the Provoſt, and from him to the Bailiff, who gave Order, that it ſhould be carry'd back again and caſt into the Fire. And ſo the Infant baptized in his own Blood, to fill up the Number of God's innocent Saints, was both born and died a Martyr, leaving behind to the World, which it never ſaw, a Spectacle wherein the whole World may ſee the Herodian Cruelty of this graceleſs Generation of Popiſh Tormentors, to their perpetual Shame and Infamy.

Now forſomuch as this Story, perhaps for the horrible Strangeneſs of the Fact, will be hardly believed by ſome, but rather thought

Anno 1556. to be forged, or else more amplify'd by me than Truth will bear me out, therefore to discharge my Credit herein, I have not only foretold thee a little before, how I received this Story by the faithful Relation both of the French and English, of them which were there present Witnesses, and Lookers on, but also have hereto annexed the true Supplication of the said Inhabitants of Garnsey, and of the Brother of the said two Sisters, complaining to the Queen and her Commissioners, concerning the Horribleness of the Act; which Supplication, for the more Evidence, hereunder followeth.

To the Right Honourable the Queen's most gracious Commissioners, for the hearing and determining of Matters of Religion and Causes Ecclesiastical.

This Supplication was put up to Queen Elizabeth.

MOST lamentably and wofully complaining, sheweth unto your gracious and honourable Lordships, your poor and humble Orator Matthew Cawches, of the Isle of Garnsey, that where Jaques Amy Clerk, Dean of the Isle aforesaid, assisted by the Curates there, against all Order, Law, and Reason, by Colour of a Sentence of Heresy, pronounced against Katherine Cawches, the Sister of your Honours said Supplicant, and Perotine and Guillemine her two Daughters, did cause the said Katherine, being a poor Widow, and her said two Daughters most cruelly to be burned, although the said Persons, nor any of them, did hold, maintain, or defend any Thing directly against the ecclesiastical Laws then in place, under the Reign of the late Queen Mary, but in all Things submitted themselves obediently to the Laws then in Force: And yet the Cruelty of the said Dean and his Accomplices, in perpetrating such Murder aforesaid, raged so far, that whereas, whilst the said Persons did consume with violent Fire, the Womb of the said Perotine being burnt, there did issue from her a goodly Manchild, which by the Officers was taken up and handled, and after in a most despiteful Manner thrown into the Fire, and there also with the innocent Mother cruelly burnt: In tender Consideration whereof, and forsomuch as this bloody Murder was not in due Order of any Law, or in any Manner according to Justice, but of mere malicious Hatred, as the true Copy of the whole Proceedings in this Matter, by the said Dean and his Accomplices, here ready to be shewed to your Honours, will make very plain and manifest: May it therefore please your good and gracious Lordships, of the Zeal that you bear to Justice, and for our Lord Jesus Christ's Sake, to have due Consideration in Justice of such horrible Murder, so cruelly committed as aforesaid, according to the right Demerit thereof. And that it may please your honourable Lordships to order and decree also, that all the Goods of all the said Parties, by Pretence aforesaid wrongfully taken as confiscate, may be delivered to your said poor Beseecher, to whom of Right they do belong. And your Honours said Supplicant will daily pray to God for your long Preservation, to his Glory, and your everlasting Health.

This Supplication being presented in Manner aforesaid to the Queen's honourable Commissioners, in the Year 1562. such Order therein was taken, that the Matter being returned again down to the said Country, further to be examined, the Dean was committed to Prison, and dispossessed of all his Livings. So that in Conclusion, both he, and all other Partakers of that bloody Murder, whether of Conscience, or for Fear of the Law were driven to acknowledge their Trespass, and to submit themselves to the Queen's Mercy. The Tenor of whose several Submissions, as they are left in the Rolls, I thought here to publish to the World, for a Memorial of the more Truth of this Story.

The Submission of several Garnsey Men, confessing their Trespass in the Condemnation of the three Women above specify'd.

These Submissions were made to Queen Elizabeth.

ELier Gosseline, of the Parish of St. Peter le Port in Garnsey, Merchant; Nicholas Cary the elder, John Merchant, Peter Bonamy, of the Parish of St. Martin, and Nicholas Martin, Son of John, having humbly submitted themselves to the Queen's most excellent Majesty, acknowledging their erroneous Judgments, as well against Katherine Cawches, and Guillemine, and Perotine her two Daughters, and the Infant of the said Perotine, executed by Fire for supposed Heresy, as also for the acquitting of Nicholas Norman, a wilful Murderer, and other Matters contained in their several Submissions; pray the Pardon of the Queen's Majesty for the said Crimes and others committed in their several Submissions.

John Blundel the elder, of the Parish of St. Saviour, within the Isle of Garnsey, upon like Submission, and acknowledging of his Offence, prayeth like Grace and Pardon for his Consent given to the Execution of the said three Women.

Richard Devicke, of the Parish of St. Peter le Port, Merchant, prayeth like Grace and Pardon for his Consent and Judgment given for the acquitting of the said Norman, according to his Supplication and Submission late presented by Peter Bonamy, the same Devicke, and Peter Pelley, of the Parish of St. Peter le Port, Merchants.

The said Peter Pelley prayeth the Benefit of the said Pardon to be extended unto him, according to his Submission in the said Supplication.

Jaques Amy Clerk, prayeth the Benefit of the said Pardon for his Sentence with the Clergy against the said Women, according to his Submission.

Thomas Effart, of the Parish of St. Peter le Port, humbly prayeth, as Procurator lawfully constituted by the Chapter, Bailiff and Jurates, that the same Pardon may extend to acquit all the Inhabitants of the said Isle, of the Arrearages, &c.

The Copy of the Queen's Pardon to them of Garnsey.

Three Martyrs burnt at Greenſtead in Suſſex.

NEAR about the ſame Time that theſe three Women with the Infant, were burnt at Garnſey, ſuffered other three likewiſe at Greenſtead in Suſſex, two Men and one Woman; the Names of whom were Thomas Dungate, John Foreman, and Mother Tree, who for Righteouſneſs ſake gave themſelves to Death and Torments of the Fire, patiently abiding what the furious Rage of Man could ſay or work againſt them, at the ſaid Town of Greenſtead ending their Lives the 18th of July, and in the Year aforeſaid.

The Martyrdom of Thomas Moor at Leiceſter, June 26, 1556.

AS the bloody Rage of this Perſecution ſpared neither Man, Woman, nor Child, Wife nor Maid, Lame nor Blind, and ſo thro' all Anno 1556. all Men and Women, and as there was no Difference either of Age or Sex conſidered, ſo neither was there any Condition or Quality reſpected of any Perſon; but whoſoever he were that held not as they did on the Pope and the Sacrament of the Altar, were he learned or unlearned, wiſe or ſimple innocent, all went to the Fire, as may appear by this ſimple poor Creature and innocent Soul, named Thomas Moor, retained as a Servant in a Man's Houſe in the Town of Leiceſter, about the Age of 24 Years, and after the Manner of an Husbandman, who for ſpeaking certain Words, that his Maker was in Heaven, and not in the Pix, was thereupon apprehended in the Country, being with his Friends. Who coming before his Ordinary, firſt was asked, whether he did not believe his Maker there to be, pointing to the high Altar. Which he deny'd.

How then, ſaid the Biſhop, doſt thou believe?

The young Man anſwered, As my Creed doth teach me.

Then ſaid the Biſhop, And what is yonder that thou ſeeſt above the Altar?

He anſwered, Forſooth, I cannot tell what you would have me to ſee. I ſee there fine Cloaths, with golden Taſſels, and other gay Matters hanging about the Pix, what is within I cannot ſee.

Why, doſt thou not believe, ſaid the Biſhop, Chriſt to be there, Fleſh, Blood and Bone? No, that I do not, ſaid he.

Whereupon the Ordinary making ſhort with him, read the Sentence, and ſo condemned the faithful Servant of Chriſt to Death in St. Margaret's Church in Leiceſter; who was burnt, and ſuffered a joyful and glorious Martyrdom for the Teſtimony of Righteouſneſs, in the ſame Town, about the 26th Day of June 1556.

To this Thomas Moore, we have alſo annexed the Examination and Anſwers of one John Jackſon, before Dr. Cook one of the Commiſſioners, for that it belongeth much unto the ſame Time.

The Examination of John Jackſon before Dr. Cook, March 11. 1556.

FIRST when I came before him, he railed on me, and called me Heretick.

I anſwered and ſaid, I am no Heretick.

Cook. Yes thou art. For Mr. Read told me, that thou wert the rankeſt Heretick of all them in the King's-Bench.

Jackſon. I know him not.

Cook. No? Yes, he examined thee at the King's-Bench.

Jackſon. He examined five others, but not me.

Cook. Then anſwer me: What ſayeſt thou to the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar? Tell me.

Jackſon. It is a diffuſe Queſtion, to ask me at the firſt Daſh, you promiſing to deliver me.

Cook. What an Heretick is this?

Jackſon. It is eaſier to call a Man Heretick, than to prove him one.

Cook. What Church art thou of?

Jackſon. What Church? I am of the ſame Church that is built on the Foundation of the Prophets and the Apoſtles, Jeſus Chriſt himſelf being the head Corner-ſtone.

Cook. Thou art an Heretick.

Jackſon. How can that be, ſeeing that I am of that Church? I am ſure that you will not ſay that the Prophets and Apoſtles were Hereticks.

Cook. No. But what ſayſt thou to the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar again? Tell me.

Jackſon. I find it not written.

Cook. No? Keeper away with him.

Yet I tarried there long, and did talk with him; and I ſaid, Sir, I am content to be tractable, and obedient to the Word of God.

Dr. Cook anſwered and ſaid to me, that I knew not what the Word of God meant, nor yet whether it were true or not.

Jackſon. Yea that I do.

Cook. Whereby?

Jackſon. Hereby, ſaid I. Our Saviour Chriſt ſaith; Search the Scriptures; for in them you think to have eternal Life. For they be they that teſtify of me.

Cook. This is a wiſe Proof.

Jackſon. Is it ſo? What ſay you then to theſe Words that the Prophet David ſaid? Whatſoever he be that feareth the Lord, he will ſhew him the Way that he hath choſen: His Soul ſhall dwell at Eaſe, and his Seed ſhall poſſeſs the Land. The Secrets of the Lord are among them that fear him, and he ſheweth them his Covenant.

Cook. Well, you ſhall be rid ſhortly one Way or other.

Jackſon. My Life lieth not in Man's Hands; therefore no Man ſhall do more unto me than God will ſuffer him.

Cook. No? Thou art a ſtubborn and naughty Fellow.

Jackſon. You cannot ſo judge of me, except you did ſee ſome Evil by me.

Cook. No? Why may not I judge thee, as well as thou and thy Fellows judge us, and call us Papiſts.

Jackſon. Why, that is no Judgment: But Chriſt ſaith, If you refuſe me, and receive not my Word, you have one that judged you. The Word that I have ſpoken unto you now, ſhall judge you in the laſt Day.

Cook. I pray thee tell me, who is the Head of the Congregation?

Jackſon. Chriſt is the Head.

Cook. But who is Head in Earth.

Jackſon. Chriſt hath Members here in Earth.

Cook. Who are they?

Jackſon. They that are ruled by the Word of God.

Cook. You are a good Fellow.

Jackſon. I am that I am.

Then Dr. Cook ſaid to my Keeper, Have him to Priſon again.

I am contented with that, ſaid I, and ſo we departed.

I anſwer no further in this Matter, becauſe I thought he ſhould not have my Blood in a Corner. But I hope in the living God, that when the Time ſhall come, before the Congregation I ſhall ſhake their Building after another manner of Faſhion. For they build but upon the Sand, and their Walls be daubed with untempered Mortar, and therefore they cannot ſtand long.

Therefore (good Brothers and Siſters) be of good Cheer: For I truſt in my God, I and my other Priſon-fellows ſhall go joyfully before you, praiſing God moſt heartily, that we are counted worthy to be Witneſſes of his Truth. I pray you accept my ſimple Anſwer at this Time, committing you unto God.

Of this John Jackſon, beſides theſe his foreſaid Anſwers and Examination before Dr. Cook one of the Commiſſioners, no more came to our Hands.

The Martyrdom of Joan Waſte, a blind Woman, in Derby.

THE firſt Day of Auguſt, ſuffered likewiſe at the Town of Derby, a poor honeſt Woman, being blind from her Birth, and unmarried, about the Age of 22, named Joan Waſte, of the Pariſh of Alhallows. Of them that ſate upon this innocent Woman's Blood, the chiefeſt was Ralph Baine Biſhop of the Dioceſs, Dr. Draicot his Chancellor, Sir John Port, Knight, Henry Vernon, Eſquire, Peter Finch Official of Derby, with the Aſſiſtance alſo of divers others, Richard Ward and William Bembridge the ſame Time being Bailiffs of the Town of Derby, &c.

Firſt, After the abovenamed Biſhop and Dr. Draicot had cauſed the ſaid Joan Waſte to be apprehended in the Town of Derby, ſuſpecting her to be guilty of certain Hereſies, ſhe was divers Times privily examined, as well in Priſon as out of Priſon, by Peter Finch the Official: After that brought to publick Examination before the Biſhop; at laſt, was there burnt in Derby, as is aboveſaid. Concerning whoſe Life, bringing up, and Converſation, ſomewhat more amply we mind to diſcourſe, as by faithful Relation hath come to my Hands.

Firſt, This Joan Waſte was the Daughter of William Waſte, an honeſt poor Man, a Barber, who ſometimes alſo uſed to make Ropes. His Wife had the ſame Joan and one other at one Birth, and ſhe was born blind. And when ſhe was about twelve or fourteen Years old, ſhe learned to knit Hoſe and Sleeves, and other Things, which in Time ſhe could do very well. Furthermore, as Time ſerved, ſhe would help her Father to turn Ropes, and do ſuch other Things as ſhe was able, and in no Caſe would be idle. Thus ſhe continued with her Father and Mother during their Lives. After whoſe Deceaſe ſhe lived with her Brother Roger Waſte, and in the Time of King Edward the ſixth of bleſſed Memory, gave herſelf daily to hear divine Service read in the vulgar Tongue. And thus by hearing Homilies and Sermons, ſhe became marvellouſly well affected to the Religion then taught. So at length having ſaved ſo much Money as would buy her a New Teſtament, ſhe cauſed one to be provided for her. And altho' ſhe was of herſelf unlearned, and by reaſon of her Blindneſs unable to read, yet for the great Deſire ſhe had to underſtand, and have imprinted in her Memory the Sayings of the old Scriptures contained in the New Teſtament, ſhe acquainted herſelf chiefly with John Hurt, then Priſoner in the common Hall of Derby for Debts.

The earneſt Deſire of Joan Waſte to learn the Scriptures.

The ſame John Hurt being a grave ſober Man, of the Age of threeſcore and ten Years, by her earneſt Intreaty, and being a Priſoner, and many Times idle and without Company, did for his Exerciſe daily read unto her ſome one Chapter of the New Teſtament. And if at any Time he were otherwiſe occupied or hindered through Sickneſs, ſhe would repair unto John Pemerton Clerk of the Pariſh Church of All-Saints in the ſame Town of Derby, or to ſome other Perſon which could read, and ſometimes ſhe would give a Penny or two (as ſhe might ſpare) to ſuch Perſons as would not freely read unto her, appointing unto them how many Chapters of the New Teſtament they ſhould read, or how often they ſhould repeat one Chapter upon a Price. Anno 1556.

Moreover in the ſaid Joan Waſte this was notorious, that ſhe being utterly blind, could notwithſtanding, without a Guide, go to any Church within the ſaid Town of Derby, or to any other Place or Perſon, with whom ſhe had any ſuch Exerciſe. By which Exerciſe ſhe ſo profited, that ſhe was able not only to recite many Chapters of the New Teſtament, but alſo could aptly diſprove, by divers Places of Scriptures, as well Sin, as ſuch Abuſes in Religion, as then were too much in uſe in divers and ſundry Perſons.

As this godly Woman thus daily increaſed in the Knowledge of God's Holy Word, and no leſs in her Life expreſſed the virtuous Fruits and Exerciſe of the ſame: Not long after, through the fatal Death of bleſſed King Edward, followed the woful Ruin of Religion in the Reign of Queen Mary his Siſter. In which Alteration notwithſtanding the general Backſliding of the greateſt Part and Multitude of the whole Realm into Popery again, yet this poor blind Woman, continuing in a conſtant Conſcience, proceeded ſtill in her former Exerciſe, being both zealous in that ſhe had learned, and alſo refuſing to communicate in Religion with thoſe, which taught contrary Doctrine to that ſhe had before learned in King Edward's Time.

For which ſhe was called and convented before the aforeſaid Biſhop and Dr. Draicot, with divers others called in to bear witneſs.

The Articles miniſtred unto her, and wherewith ſhe was charged, were theſe: Firſt, that ſhe did hold the Sacrament of the Altar to be but only a Memory or Repreſentation of Chriſt's Body, material Bread and Wine, but not his natural Body, unleſs it were received. And that it ought not to be reſerved from Time to Time over the Altar, but immediately to be received, &c.

Item, That ſhe did hold, in receiving of the Sacrament of the Altar, ſhe did not receive the ſame Body that was born of the Virgin Mary, and ſuffered upon the Croſs for our Redemption, &c.

Item, She did hold, that Chriſt at his laſt Supper did not bleſs the Bread that he had then in his Hands, but was bleſſed himſelf, and by the Virtue of the Words of Conſecration, the Subſtance of the Bread and Wine is not converted and turned into the Subſtance of the Body and Blood of Chriſt.

Item, That ſhe did grant that ſhe was of the Pariſh of Allhallows in Derby, &c.

Item, That all and ſingular the Premiſſes are true and notorious by publick Report and Fame, &c.

Whereunto ſhe anſwered, that ſhe believed therein ſo much as the Holy Scripture taught her, and according to that ſhe had heard preached unto her by divers learned Men.

Whereof

Anno 1556. Whereof ſome ſuffered Impriſonment, and others ſuffered Death for the ſame Doctrine: Among whom ſhe named, beſides others, Dr. Taylor, who, ſhe ſaid, took it of his Conſcience, that the Doctrine which he taught was true, and asked of them, if they would do ſo in like Caſe for their Doctrine: Which if they would not, ſhe deſired them for God's Sake not to trouble her, being a blind, poor, and unlearned Woman, with any further Talk, ſaying, that by God's Aſſiſtance, ſhe was ready to yield up her Life in that Faith, in ſuch Sort as they ſhould appoint.

And yet notwithſtanding being preſt by the ſaid Biſhop and Dr. Draicot, with many Arguments of Chriſt's Omnipotency, as, Why was not Chriſt able as well to make the Bread his Body, as to turn Water into Wine, raiſe Lazarus from the Dead? and ſuch other like Arguments; and many Times being threatned with grievous Impriſonments, Torments, and Death. The poor Woman thus being as it were half aſtoniſhed through their Errors and Threats, and probably deſirous to prolong her Life, offered to the Biſhop then preſent, that if he would before that Company, take it upon his Conſcience, that the Doctrine which he would have her to believe concerning the Sacrament was true, and that he would at the dreadful Day of Judgment anſwer for her therein (as the ſaid Dr. Taylor in divers of his Sermons did offer) ſhe would then further anſwer them.

Well argued. Becauſe Chriſt is Omnipotent, Ergo, there is no Bread in the Sacrament.

Whereunto the Biſhop anſwered, he would. But Dr. Draicot his Chancellor hearing that, ſaid, My Lord, you know not what you do, you may in no Caſe anſwer for an Heretick. And he immediately asked the poor Woman whether ſhe would recant or no, and ſaid ſhe ſhould anſwer for herſelf. Unto whoſe Sayings the Biſhop alſo conform'd himſelf.

The poor Woman perceiving this, anſwered again, that if they refuſed to take of their Conſcience that it was true they would have her to believe, ſhe would anſwer no farther, but deſired them to do their Pleaſure; and ſo after certain Circumſtances, they pronounced Sentence againſt her, and deliver'd her to the Bailiffs of the ſaid Town of Derby aforenamed; who after they had kept her about a Month or five Weeks, there came unto them a Writ De Heretico Comburendo; by Virtue whereof they were appointed by the ſaid Biſhop to bring her to the Pariſh Church of All-Saints at a Day appointed, where Dr. Draicot was to make a Sermon.

When the Time was come that this innocent Martyr ſhould ſuffer, firſt came to the Church Dr. Draicot, accompany'd with divers Gentlemen, as Mr. Thomas Powthread, Mr. Henry Vernon, Mr. Dethick of Newal, and divers others. This done, and all Things now in a Readineſs, at laſt the poor blind Creature and Servant of God, was brought and ſet before the Pulpit, where the ſaid Doctor being entered into his Sermon, and there inveighing againſt many Matters, which he called Hereſies, declared unto the People that that Woman was condemned for denying the Sacrament of the Altar to be the very Body and Blood of Chriſt really and ſubſtantially, and was thereby cut off from the Body of the Catholick Church; and ſaid, that ſhe was not only blind of her bodily Eyes, but alſo blind in the Eyes of her Soul. And he ſaid, As her Body ſhould be preſently conſumed with material Fire, ſo her Soul ſhould be burned in Hell with everlaſting Fire, as ſoon as it ſhall be ſeparated from the Body, and there remain World without End; and ſaid it was not lawful for the People to pray for her: and ſo with many terrible Threats he made an End of his Sermon, and commanded the Bailiffs and thoſe Gentlemen to ſee her executed. Then this bleſſed Servant of God was carry'd away from the Church, to a Place called the Windmil Pit, near to the ſaid Town; and holding Roger Waſte her Brother by the Hand ſhe prepared herſelf, and deſired the People to pray with her, and ſaid ſuch Prayers as ſhe before had learned, and cried upon Chriſt to have Mercy upon her, as long as Life ſerved. In this mean Seaſon the ſaid Dr. Draicot went to his Inn, for great Sorrow of her Death, and there laid him down and ſlept, during all the Time of her Execution. And thus much of Joan Waſte.

The Martyrdom of Joan Waſte.

Of Edward Sharp, John Hart, Thomas Ravenſdale, a Shoemaker, a Currier, a Carpenter, John Horn, and a Woman.

ON the 8th Day of September a certain aged, devout Perſon, born in Wiltſhire, named Edward Sharp, of the Age of forty Years, or thereabouts, was condemned at Briſtol to the like Martyrdom, where he conſtantly and manfully perſiſting in the juſt Quarrel of Chriſt's Goſpel, for miſliking and renouncing the Ordinances of the Romiſh Church, was tried as pure Gold, and made a lively Sacrifice in the Fire: In whoſe Death, as in the Death of all his other Saints, the Lord be glorify'd and thanked for his great Grace of Conſtancy; to whom be Praiſe for ever, Amen.

On the 24th of the ſame Month, 1556, John Hart, Thomas Ravenſdale, a Shoemaker, and a Currier, ſuffered at Mayfield in Suſſex: Who being at the Place where they ſhould ſuffer, after they had made their Prayers, and were at the Stake ready to undergo the Force of the Fire, they conſtantly and joyfully yielded their Lives for the Teſtimony of the glorious Goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt, unto whom be Praiſe for ever and ever, Amen.

The Day following, which was the 25th of the ſaid Month, a young Man, by Trade a Carpenter (whoſe Name we have not) was put to Death for the like Teſtimony of Jeſus Chriſt, at Briſtol, where he yielded himſelf to the Torments of the Fire, gave up his Life into the Hands of the Lord, with ſuch joyful Conſtancy and Triumph, as all the Church of Chriſt have juſt Cauſe to praiſe God for him.

On the 27th of the ſame Month of September, John Horn and a Woman ſuffered Death by Fire at Wotton-under-edge in Glouceſterſhire, and died very glorioufly in a conſtant Faith to the Terror of the Wicked, and Comfort of the Godly. So glorioufly did the Lord work in them, that Death unto them was Life, and Life with a blotted Conſcience was Death.

The unmerciful Handling of William Dangerfield and Joan his Wife, being in Child-Bed, taken out of her House, with her ſucking Infant of fourteen Days old, and laid in the common Gaol among Thieves and Murderers.

WHEN I had written and finiſhed the Story of the three Garnſey Women, with the young Infant there burned with them, and alſo had paſſed the Burning of the poor blind Woman Joan Waſte at Derby, I well hoped I ſhould have found no more ſuch Stories of unmerciful Cruelty ſhewed upon innocent Women with their Children and young Infants: But now coming to the Perſecution in Glouceſterſhire about the Parts of Briſtol, I find another Story of ſuch Unmercifulneſs ſhewed againſt a Woman in Childbed, as far from all Charity and Humanity, as any other Story that hath hitherto been rehearſed, as by the Sequel hereof may appear.

In the Pariſh of Wotton-under-edge, not far from Briſtol, dwelt William Dangerfield, an honeſt poor Man, who by his Wife Joan had nine Children, and ſhe now lying in Child-Bed of the Tenth. This William after he had been Abroad from his Houſe a certain Space for fear of Perſecution, hearing that his Wife was brought to Bed, repaired Home to viſit her, as natural Duty required, and to ſee his Children, ſhe being delivered four Days before.

William Dangerfield apprehended in his own Houſe.

The Return of this Man was no ſooner known to ſome of his unkind Neighbours, but they immediately beſet the Houſe, and apprehended him, and carried him to Priſon, and ſo at length he was brought to the Biſhop, Dr. Brooks; in whoſe cruel Handling he remained ſo long, till his Legs were almoſt fretted off with Irons.

Joan his Wife taken with her young Infant out of Child-Bed and committed to Priſon.

After the Apprehenſion of the Husband, the Wife likewiſe was taken, with her young-born Child, being but fourteen Days old, out of her Childbed, and carried into the common Gaol, and there confined among Thieves and Murderers; where ſhe and her innocent Babe found ſo little Charity, that ſhe could never come to any Fire, but was driven to warm the Cloaths ſhe was to put about the Child in her Boſom.

In the mean Seaſon while the Husband and Wife lay thus incloſed in ſeveral Priſons, the Biſhop began to practiſe not with the Woman firſt, as the Serpent did with Eve, but with the Man, craftily deceiving his Simplicity with fair gloſſing Words, falſly perſuading him that his Wife had recanted, and asking him, wherefore he ſhould ſtand in his own Conceit, than ſhe, being as well learned as he; and ſo ſubtily drew out a Form of Recantation, wherewith he deceived the ſimple Soul. Whereunto after that he had once granted that he would conſent, although he had not yet recanted, they ſuffered him to go to his Wife, where ſhe lay in the common Gaol.

Then they with melting Hearts opening their Minds one to another, when he ſaw his Wife not releaſed, and perceiving that he had not done well, he declared unto her the whole Matter, how falſly he was circumvented by the ſubtle Flatterings of the Biſhop, telling him that ſhe had certainly recanted: And thus deceiving me (ſaid he) brought this unto me, and ſo plucked out of his Boſom the Copy of the Recantation, whereunto he had granted his Promiſe. At the Sight whereof the Wife hearing what her Husband had done, her Heart clave aſunder, ſaying, Alack, thus long have we continued one, and hath Satan ſo prevailed, to cauſe you to break your firſt Vow made to Chriſt in Baptiſm? And ſo departed the ſaid William and Joan his Wife, with what Hearts the Lord knoweth. Then began he greatly to bewail his Promiſe made to the Biſhop, and to make his Prayer to Almighty God, deſiring him that he might not live ſo long as to call Evil Good, and Good Evil; or Light Darkneſs, or Darkneſs Light; and ſo he departed toward his Houſe: Where by the Way homeward (as it is affirmed) he took his Death, and ſhortly after departed, according to his Prayer, after he had been in Priſon twelve Weeks. Anno 1556.

The Prayer of Dangerfield to God.

The Death of the Huſband.

After this, Joan his Wife continued ſtill in Priſon with her tender Infant, till at laſt ſhe was brought before that Biſhop to be examined. Whereunto, what her Anſwers were, it is not certainly known. Howbeit moſt like it is whatſoever they were, they pleaſed not the Biſhop, as appeared by his Anger increaſed againſt the poor Woman, and her long Continuance in the Priſon, together with her tender Babe, which alſo remained with her in the Gaol, Partaker of her Martyrdom, ſo long as her Milk would ſerve to give it ſuck; till at length the Child, being ſtarved for Cold and Famine, was ſent away when it was paſt all Remedy, and ſo ſhortly after died: And not long after the Mother alſo followed. Beſides, the old Woman, which was Mother of the Husband, of the Age of eighty Years and upwards, who being left in the Houſe after their Apprehenſion, for lack of Comfort there periſhed alſo.

The young Infant famiſhed in Priſon.

The Martyrdom of the Mother.

The Death of the old Woman.

And thus have ye in one Story the Death of four together; firſt of the old Woman, then of the Husband, after that of the innocent Child, and laſtly of the Mother. What became of the other nine Children, I am not perfectly ſure, but that I partly underſtand that they were all undone by the ſame.

This Story is reported and teſtify'd as well by others, as namely by Mrs. Bridges dwelling in the ſame Town, and Partaker then of the like Afflictions, and hardly eſcaped her Life.

In the Month of October following, was burnt at the Town of Northampton, a Shoemaker, a true Witneſs and Diſciple of the Lord, who according to the Grace of God given unto him, cleaving faſt to the ſound Doctrine and preaching of God's Word, renounced the Religion of the Romiſh See, wherein many a good Man hath been drowned.

After whom, not long after in the ſame Month of October, died alſo in the Caſtle of Chicheſter three godly Confeſſors, being there in Bonds for the like Cauſe of Chriſt's Goſpel, who alſo ſhould have ſuffered the like Martyrdom, had not their natural Death, or rather (as it is to be ſuſpected) the cruel handling of the Papiſts, made them away before, and afterwards buried them in the Fields.

Anno 1556. I read moreover, that in this preſent Year, to wit, 1556, one named Hooke, a true Witneſs of the Lord's Truth was burnt at Cheſter.

Five Perſons famiſhed in Canterbury Caſtle, by the unmerciful Tyranny of the Papiſts, about the Beginning of November.

AS among all the Biſhops, Bonner Biſhop of London, principally excelled in perſecuting the poor Members of Chriſt; ſo of all Archdeacons, Nicholas Harpsfield Archdeacon of Canterbury, was of leaſt Compaſſion (only Dunning of Norwich excepted) by whoſe unmerciful and ſurly Diſpoſition very many were put to death in that Dioceſs of Canterbury, not only in the Time of Queen Mary, but ſome alſo in the beginning of the Reign of our renowned and moſt gracious Queen Elizabeth, as by the Grace of Chriſt hereafter ſhall appear.

Of thoſe that ſuffered in the Dioceſs of Canterbury in the Time of Queen Mary, ſome be recited already, with the Order and Form of ſuch Articles as then were moſt commonly adminiſtred to the Examinates by Thornton Suffragan of Dover, and the ſaid Nicholas Harpsfield, and others, as before-mentioned.

Now to proceed in Order and Courſe of Time where we left, next followeth the Month of November.

In the Beginning whereof fifteen innocent Martyrs, were together in the Caſtle of Canterbury, of which Number not one eſcaped with Life, but either were burnt, or elſe famiſhed in Priſon: Of which two Sorts, which is the eaſier Death, God knoweth, is hard to judge. Notwithſtanding, the Truth is, that of theſe fifteen, ten ſuffered in the Fire, of whom in the next Book more (God willing) ſhall be ſaid: The other five pined, and were moſt cruelly famiſhed in the cloſe Priſon, of whom we ſhall now treat. The Names of whom were theſe.

1. John Clark
2. Dunſton Chittenden.

} Theſe were yet uncondemned.

3. William Foſter of Stone.
4. Alice Potkins.
5. John Archer of Cambroke, Weaver.

} Theſe three were condemned to be burnt.

Of theſe five Priſoners, the firſt two were uncondemned, the other three were condemned, and ſhould have been burned, but ſuffered no leſs Torments than if they had abode the Fire, being pined to death by Famine. What their Articles and Anſwers were I need not here recite, ſeeing all they in the Time of Queen Mary commonly ſuffered for one manner of Cauſe, that is, for holding againſt the ſeven Sacraments, againſt the Reality of Chriſt being in his Supper, for ſpeaking againſt the Church of Rome, and Determinations of the ſame, againſt Images ſet up and worſhipped in the Church, for not coming to Church, &c.

Firſt, William Foſter anſwering to theſe and like Articles, ſaid, That he believed well in all the Articles of the Creed; but to believe that there be more Sacraments than two, and to pray to Saints either to profit us, or to pray for Souls in Purgatory to profit them, that Faith and Works do juſtify, or to allow the Popiſh Ceremonies in the Church, that he denied. Moreover he ſaid, to carry Candles upon Candlemas-day, were as good for him as to carry a Dung-fork; and that it is as neceſſary to carry the Gallows about, if his Father were hanged, as the Croſs. To come to the Church he could not, he ſaid, with a ſafe Conſcience. Concerning Fiſh-days and Fleſh-days, he granted it good to put Difference therein, except where Neceſſity required the contrary.

This William Foſter was a labouring Man, of the Age of forty Years. He was apprehended and impriſoned by Sir Thomas Moyle, Knight.

Alice Potkins for the like Confeſſion, was condemned to be burnt, for that ſhe was not, neither would be confeſſed to the Prieſt, for that ſhe received not the Sacrament of the Altar, becauſe ſhe would not pray to Saints, nor creep to the Croſs, &c. Being demanded of her Age, ſhe ſaid that ſhe was forty-nine Years old, according to her old Age; and according to her young Age, ſince ſhe learned Chriſt, ſhe was of one Years Age, and was committed to Priſon by Mr. Roberts.

The Anſwer and Confeſſion of John Archer of Cambroke was much in like ſort. And altho' ſome of theſe upon ignorant Simplicity ſwerved a little in the Number of Sacraments, ſome granting one Sacrament, that is, the Body of Chriſt hanging upon the Croſs, ſome more, ſome leſs, &c. yet in the principal Matter concerning the Doctrine of Salvation for Faith to ſtay upon, and in diſagreeing from the dreaming Determinations of the popiſh Church, they moſt agreed. Concerning the not praying to Saints, and for the Dead in Purgatory, for not creeping to the Croſs, for Faith only to juſtify, for taking of an Oath, and other ſuch like, he granted as the other had done. This Father Archer, by his Occupation a Weaver, of the Town of Cambroke, of the Age of fifty Years, was impriſoned by Sir John Gilford, Knight.

And thus have ye the Cauſe and Impriſonment of theſe five Priſoners.

The Perſecution of divers good People in the Dioceſs of Litchfield.

THESE aforeſaid Months of September, November, and December, as they were troubleſome to many other Places, and eſpecially to the Dioceſs of Canterbury, by reaſon of the Archdeacon above-named; ſo likewiſe they brought no little Buſineſs in the Country to Litchfield and Coventry, by a cruel Biſhop there, named Ralph Baine, and a more cruel Chancellor called Dr. Draicot, through the fierce Inquiſition of whom great Stir was there among the People, being called to Examination of their Faith, and many cauſed to bear Faggots. Who, although they were not put to the Torment of Death, yet becauſe it may appear what a Number there is in the Countries of England abroad, who in their Hearts have a Miſliking of the Pope's Romiſh Laws and Religion, if for Fear they durſt utter their Minds, I thought to make a Rehearſal of their Names, which in the aforeſaid Dioceſs of Co- ventry and Litchfield were taken in Suſpicion, and examined for their Religion.

The Names of them that did Penance in the Dioceſe of Litchfield and Coventry.

And firſt amongſt them that were detected and enjoin'd to the popiſh Penance, that is, to bear a Faggot, Candle, and Beads about in Proceſſion, were Agnes Foreman, detected, examined, and by Witneſs convicted, and bare a Faggot the 12th of September. Likewiſe Margery Kirry, Thomas Norris, Thomas Stiffe, William Kaime, Robert Katrenes, Tho. Smith, John Borſley the younger. Item, John Waterhouſe, againſt whom came in Witneſs and Accuſers Richard Caterbanke, J. Edge, William Smith, Robert Cooke, laying againſt him for ſeldom coming to Church, for giving no Reverence at the Elevation of the Sacrament, but looking upon his Book, for not kiſſing the Pix, &c. Robert Biſſel, Leonard Weſt, Richard Baily of the Pariſh of Whitacre.

Theſe were deprived.

Theſe forenamed Perſons, with many more following in the next Year after, altho' they did ſubſcribe and relent through Fear of Death; yet for this Cauſe I do here recite them, that by them it might appear what a Number there were, not only in the Country of Litchfield, but alſo in other Parts, in Heart ſet againſt the Pope's Proceedings, if that Fear rather than Conſcience had not compelled them to the contrary.

The Concluſion of the ſecond Book, containing a Brief Declaration of Sir John Cheeke's Recantation.

Thus have ye the whole Perſecution of this Year declared, with the Names of all them which ſuffered Martyrdom within the Compaſs of the Year 1556: The Number of all which, ſlain and martyred in divers Places of England at ſundry Times this Year, came to above 84 Perſons, whereof many were Women, Wives, Widows, and Maidens; beſides thoſe who by ſecret Practices were otherwiſe made away, or driven from their Goods, out of their Houſes, or out of the Realm, or elſe within the Realm were put to Penance and conſtrained by forcible Violence to recant, ſave only that I have omitted the Story of Sir John Cheeke, Knight, and Schoolmaſter ſome Time to King Edward. The Worthineſs of which Man deſerveth much to be ſaid of him; but his Fall ſhould rather be covered in Silence and Oblivion. It ſhall ſuffice only to note a Word or two of a few Things appertaining to the preſent Story. Anno 1556.

Sir John Cheeke being in the Country of Germany, out of all Danger of Perſecution, with many more of his own Countrymen and Acquaintance, was not only in Safety, but alſo with Reputation accordingly eſteemed among the Germans, and alſo well placed in the City of Strasbourg. Where if he had contented himſelf to have remained, rather giving Place to Time, than to preſume upon Adventures, peradventure it had been better for him. But what fatal Inſtigation wrought in his Mind I know not. In the End ſo it fell, that he would needs take his Journey with Sir Peter Carew, from High Germany to Bruſſels; having, as it is ſaid, King Philip's ſafe Conduct to paſs and repaſs, and that by the Means, as I find, of the Lord Paget, and Sir John Maſ. pledging for his Safeguard, King Philip's Fidelity, he came to Bruſſels to ſee the Queen's Ambaſſadors: And having brought the Lord Paget on his Way toward England, in the Return between Bruſſels and Antwerp, he was taken with Sir Peter Carew by the Provoſt Marſhal, ſpoiled of their Horſes, and clapped into a Cart, their Legs, Arms, and Bodies tied with Halters to the Body of the Cart, and ſo ſhipped, being blindfold under the Hatches, and ſo brought to the Tower of London.

Thus the good Man being intrapped, and in the Hands now of his Enemies, had but one of theſe two Ways to take, either to change his Religion, or to change his Life, other Remedy with thoſe holy Catholicks there was none. Neither could his Conſcience excuſe him, nor Truth defend him, nor his Learning help him.

However Mr. Fecknam, whether ſuborned by the Queen, or upon his own Devotion and Friendſhip toward his old Acquaintance, took upon him the Defence and Commendation of Sir John Cheeke, ſpeaking in his Behalf: Yet no Mercy could be had with the Queen, but he muſt needs recant, and ſo he did.

Then after this Recantation, he was thro' the crafty handling of the Papiſts, allured firſt to dine and accompany with them, at length drawn unawares to ſit in place, where the poor Martyrs were brought before Bonner and other Biſhops to be condemned; the Remorſe whereof ſo mightily wrought in his Heart, that not long after he left this mortal Life. Whoſe Fall, although it was full of Infirmity, yet his riſing again by Repentance was great, and his End comfortable, the Lord be praiſed.

BOOK III.

The Order and Manner of Cardinal Poole's Viſitation in Cambridge, with the condemning, taking up, and burning the Bones and Books of Martin Bucer and Paulus Phagius, January 9, 1557.

Anno 1557.

CArdinal Poole, three Years after his Return into England, having ſomewhat withdrawn his Mind from other Affairs of the Realm, and having in all Points eſtabliſhed the Romiſh Religion, began to have an Eye to the Univerſity of Cambridge, which Place among others, eſpecially ſeemed to have need of Reformation out of Hand. To perform this Charge were choſen Cuthbert Scot, not long before conſecrated Biſhop of Cheſter, Nicholas Ormanet an Italian, Arch-prieſt of the People of Eodolon, in the Dioceſs of Vernon, profeſſed in both the Laws, and bearing the Name of the Pope's Datary, Thomas Watſon elected Biſhop of Lincoln, Chriſtopherſon elected Biſhop of Chicheſter, and Henry Cole Provoſt of the College of Eaton. There was good Cauſe why the Mattter was eſpecially committed to theſe Perſons: For as touching Ormanet, it is well known that he was a Man of much Eſtimation with Julius the third, and at that Time Biſhop of Rome, and was appointed to come into England with Cardinal Poole, becauſe without his Knowledge (as in whom he put his chief Truſt and Confidence) the Biſhop would have nothing done that was of any Importance or Weight.

Theſe Perſons thus appointed (in the mean while as the Viſitors were addreſſing themſelves to their Journey) ſent their Letters with the Cardinal's Citation before to Dr. Andrew Perne then Vice-chancellor of Cambridge, with the other Commiſſioners aſſociate, commanding him to warn all the Graduates of the Univerſity, in their Name, to be in Readineſs againſt the 11th Day of January, betwixt eight and ten of the Clock, in the Church of St. Mary the Virgin: Willing him eſpecially to be there himſelf in Preſence, and alſo to ſet forward all the Reſidue, to whoſe Charge it belonged, that they ſhould ſearch out all Statutes, Books, Privileges, and Monuments appertaining to the Univerſity, or to any of the Colleges, or finally to any of themſelves, and theſe to preſent the ſame before them at the Day appointed, and every Man to appear there perſonally; for they would not fail being there at the ſame Time, to lay before them ſuch Things as ſhould ſeem neceſſary to this Charge of reforming the University, and further to give Charge of all such Things as should seem most for the Profit and Behoof of the same, together with such Things as were to be done on their Part, according as should seem most agreeable to the Decrees of the canon Law.

This Citation of the Cardinal, being brought to Cambridge by Mr. Bullock, was first exhibited in the Convocation-house of Regents, and there openly read by the Orator of the University the 11th of December.

Preparation in Cambridge toward the Visitation.

After this, upon the 24th of December, which was Christmas-Eve, the Vice-chancellor with the Heads of the Houses, meeting together in the Schools, it was there concluded, that the Visitors Charges should be born by the University and Colleges (which then cost the University an hundred Pounds) and also that no Master of any College should suffer any of the Fellows, Scholars, or Ministers, to go forth of the Town, but to return before the Visitation.

On Friday the 8th of January, the Queen's Commissioners, namely, Dr. Perne Vice-chancellor, Dr. Sedgwick, Dr. Harvy, Mr. Frank, Kust, and another who is here nameless, and also Sir James Dyer the Recorder, Mr. Chapman Evered, sitting together in the Hall, some were there called by the Appointment of L. Hawes, and Charge given what should be done. And first the Commission was read. Then were all the High-constables called to bring in their Precepts, and sworn. Also two of every Parish of ten or twelve hundreds, were sworn to enquire of Heresy, Lollardy, Conspiracy, seditious Words, Tales, and Rumours against the King and Queen. Item, For heretical and seditious Books, for Negligences and Misdemeanours in the Church, for Observation of Ceremonies, for Ornaments, and Stock of the Church.

The Cause why the Reformation was taken in Hand.

We said at the first, that the Cardinal thought the University to have need of Reformation. The Reason why he should think so was this; either because the same of long Continuance had cast off the Bishop of Rome, and cleaved to the wholesome Doctrine of the Gospel; or else by reason that both for the late Schism, not yet worn out of Memory, and for the Doctrine of Martin Bucer, who not long before openly in the said University interpreted holy Scripture, they saw many so sore corrupted and spotted with this Infection, that (even as when Fire is spread in a Town) unless a speedy Remedy were applied out of Hand, it were not possible to their thinking, to quench it many Years after. Who also feared (if it were not looked to in Time) lest this Mischief should take Root, and by little and little infect all the Members next unto it, which yet were whole and sound.

The coming of the Inquisitors, and of their Entertainment.

This was in the Year 1556. To the Intent therefore to make a Salve for this Sore, the Inquisitors, of whom we spake before, came unto Cambridge the ninth Day of January. And as they were yet in their Journey, and far from the Town, divers of the Masters and Presidents of the Colleges met them, and brought them courteously, first into the Town, and after to their Lodgings. They were entertained in Trinity-college by Mr. John Christopherson, Master of the said House, and a little before elected Bishop of Chichester. Notwithstanding they were desired, some to one Place, and some to another, as Occasion served, either to do their Duties, or to shew their good Wills: Dr. Cole to the King's-College, and Dr. Watson to St. John's. But whether it were for the Acquaintance of Christopherson, or for the Largeness of the House, which seemed most convenient for their Purpose, they all took up their Lodgings in the said College with Mr. Christopherson. Anno 1556.

At their coming thither an Oration was made by a Fellow of the House, who in the Name of all the rest, with long Protestation declared that they were most heartily welcome thither, and that he and his Fellows gave them great Thanks, that it had pleased their Lordships to have so good Opinion of them, as to choose their House especially to lodge in, whereby they had both encouraged them to stand in hope of some further Benevolence towards them, and also done great Honour to their College by their being there: Wherefore they should look at their Hand again for as much Duty and Reverence, as lay in their Power to perform.

To this Oration Dr. Watson made Answer, That this forward and earnest good Wills and Minds of theirs, in doing such Courtesy, was right thankfully taken both of him and his, exhorting them to continue stedfastly in the same, and to proceed also when Need should require: For it was so far from any of their Thoughts, to stop them in this their Race, that they would rather haste them forward to run through more speedily, being not without good Cause persuaded to conceive good Hope of their Benevolence towards them, in as much as they would do for them, whatsoever might turn to their Profit and Advantage.

This Day, forasmuch as it was towards Evening e're they came, and the Sun was going down, nothing else was done. The next Day, being the 10th of January, they bestowed in recreating themselves after their Journey, and in setting other Things at a Stay. Nevertheless, to the Intent the same should not escape altogether without doing somewhat, they interdicted the two Churches, namely, St. Mary's where Mr. Bucer, and St. Michael's, where Paulus Phagius lay buried. St. Mary's and St. Michael's interdicted because of Martin Bucer and P. Phagius Burial.

These Men were dead a good while before, Paulus Phagius had scarce yet shewed the Proof of his Wit and Learning when he departed to God 1549. Bucer lived but a little after. During which Time somewhat by writing, but chiefly by reading and preaching openly (wherein the old Man, being painful in the Word of God, never spared himself nor regarded his Health) he brought all Men into such Admiration of him, that neither his Friends could sufficiently praise him, nor his Enemies in any Point find Fault with his singular Life and sincere Doctrine. A most certain Token whereof may be his sumptuous Burial, solemnized with so great Assistance and Gladness of all the Degrees of the University, that it was not possible to devise more to the setting out and amplifying of the same. The whole Manner and Order of the doing whereof being written by Mr. Nicholas Carre, a learned Man, in a little Treatise to Sir John Cheeke, Knight, with an Epistle full of Consolation, as concerning his Departure added thereunto, was sent afterward unto Peter Martyr, then abiding at Oxford.

From the Burial of Bucer and Phagius, unto the coming of these Visitors, three or four Anno 1557. Years were passed. And from the Time of the Decease of King Edward the sixth unto that Day, the Priests celebrated their Masses, and other kind of Ceremonies in those Places, and that without Scruple of Conscience, as far as Men could perceive. But after the Time that these Commissioners came hither, those Things that before were accounted for sacred and holy, began to be denounced for prophane and unholy. For they commanded that all those Assemblies that should hereafter be made for the executing of holy Ceremonies, should be removed to the King's-Chappel, which is a Place far more stately than all the other.

Now was come the 11th Day, in which the Vice-chancellor of the University, with the Masters and Presidents of Colleges, and all the other Graduates of every House, were commanded to appear before the said Commissioners in their Habits. It was commanded, that the Scholars also should come in their Surplices, but that was not done. They assembled in great Numbers to Trinity-College, having the University Cross born before them, and in the Gatehouse a Form was set and covered, with Cushions and Carpets on the Ground for the Visitors. Where the Vice-chancellor, having on a Tissue Cope, sprinkled holy Water on them, and purposed to cense them, but they refused it there, which notwithstanding afterward in the Queen's-College, and elsewhere, they refused not.

There Mr. John Stokes, common Orator of the University, made a Latin Oration in the Name of all the rest: A Copy whereof, now rendered into English, here followeth.

Mr. Stoke's Oration to Queen MARY's Visitors at Cambridge, Jan. 11. 1557.

THIS University, most Reverend Fathers, has been a long Time sollicitous about your coming, now greatly pleased freely beholds your Honours; and as a Testimony of her Willingness, pours out herself and all her Treasures. Assembled here see all the Cambridge Scholars, all Orders present, who I assure your Lordships upon my own Knowledge, one and all congratulate your much wished Arrival. For we are all persuaded, that the Business of this Day, through God's Assistance, and your Excellencies, will prove auspicious to the common Benefit of this University; nor, in a Matter so necessary to the common Good, will your Help be wanting. And by many Things I am confirmed in this Opinion, but I shall mention only those that so nearly relate to the Business in hand, that they can't possibly be omitted; and these truly in Number are certain and finite, but in their Virtue and Power so immense, that no Faculty of Speech is able to express; because, as I said before, the Joy this University received from your coming was very great, I beseech you, while briefly I relate the Manner, to grant a favourable Ear.

The most Reverend Father in Christ, Cardinal Poole, Legate, who had restored oppress'd Religion, supported the Ruins of his Country, brought back from Exile our Laws, he, I say, that English Poole, and our true Moses, was the Author of your Visitation, from whose excellent Virtue many Blessings have redounded to all Parts of his Country. Yet there was a stricter and nearer Cause than the Bond of Necessity, seeing we was part of that Republick, which he had separately taken the Government on himself. For the Year before he most kindly took on himself the Government of this University, which he managed with so much Prudence, that he not only removed whatever might impede our Studies, but also added such Ornaments, as greatly increased the Glory of our University; these Things confirmed our former Hopes, and now brings so fresh into our Minds, that we can't choose but think all his Kindness to be collected in this Visitation, from which we expect all those Things which the remarkable Love of our great Chancellor, who looked on our University as his proper Pupil, promis'd. And I wish truly that he himself, was it not detrimental to the Publick, could have been here at this Time; that he with his Rays might have illuminated his University, involved in Darkness and a profound Night, with the Glory of the true Religion. But this our Desire is repugnant to the publick Good, and the Interest of the most holy Apostolick See; the Legate therefore has appointed you his Substitutes, whose natural Parts for Wisdom, whose Persons for Worth, and whose Minds for Knowledge, he judged most fit for this Imployment: I can therefore assure you truly, we all esteem you, as Men whose Religion we love, Virtue we honour, and on whose good Will, Belief and Counsel for the Publick Good we depend on. For after by the singular and extraordinary Virtue of the Legate, Cardinal Poole, from the Darkness and Night of former Times, we began to review the Light in publick, together with a clearer Sight of our former Unhappiness, to the Greatness of which our Ignorance of it contributed not a little; for, in my Opinion, we ought to be accounted so much the more miserable, who labouring under so damnable an Heresy, yet saw not the Danger we were in. As that Distemper is by much the worse, which destroys Nature without being perceiv'd to afflict the Senses; and the Man is often dead before he knew he was sick. This was the Disease of our University, which however sharp-sighted other Ways, in this Case of Religion, the Head of the Church being hurt, (whence springs all the Power of judging) became stupid, lethargick, and as it were without any Sense; till about three Years ago, the divine Compassion of the most holy Father Julius, to us English almost dead, again incorporated us in his most holy Church, again restored Health to our Bodies, and Peace to our Minds. How easy was it then for Britannia to see how near she had approached the Jaws of Hell, this University especially plainly discern'd, how our Nation was miserably afflicted with this Desolation and Schism of Religion. There is no need here to repeat the Dissolution of the Monasteries, the robbing the Church, the slaying the Priests, the murdering the Nobles, the Riots and Tumults of the People, the impoverishing the whole Kingdom, these Things might possibly have happened and we blameless, but here the Judgment was so remarkable, that we must needs look on it as a Punishment for our Sins and Wickednesses. But granting these Things only the Sport of Chance, we suffered worse in our Religion and Conscience. Piety towards God was vanish'd, the Chastity of the Priests was turn'd into open Prostitution, the Soul lay as it was asleep, no religious Ceremonies to awaken it; the Mind by the Variety of Opinions so distracted, so differing from itself, that it embraced an Infinity of Errors, among which there were two principal Fountains, of the Streams of which this University drinking a little too much, we confess became intoxicated. The first owed its Birth from the unnatural Separation from the Unity of the Catholick Church, not unlike what of old Menenius Agrippa mentions of the Members and the Belly. The second arose from Wickliffe's Mud and Mire, which made the Celebration of the Sacrament of the Altar an Abomination. For the Truth of which let any Man consult himself:

For we imitating Philosophers, and those none of the best, have borrowed a Light to the Scriptures from the School of the Epicureans. For whereas Christ (in the Truth of whose Words is placed the Foundation of our Faith) affirms every where, distinctly, and without Exception, the true and perpetual Presence of his Body, yet we are truly to interpret these Expressions as if they were imperfect, or had another Meaning, unless we had Recourse to the Atomes of Epicurus, and that the true Body and Blood of Christ was only as it were the Body and Blood. But this is not a Time to make a particular Mention of all the Things that have past, no, I rather wish they could be eternally forgot, that no Remembrance of them might be handed down to our Posterity. Yet I thought myself obliged to say something in the general, as a Confession of our past Errors: Still remembring, that as this University received her Wounds from her former Visitors, so from you her present, she may be restored to her former Health. And here she promises both for herself and hers, by her unwearied preaching of Repentance, to bring back to the true Religion all her erring Children, and make them so diligent in the present, as to redeem the Time past. For they that are first in this Race, contend so earnestly, as makes it plainly appear they voluntarily entered it; and they that came in last, and as it were at the eleventh Hour, shew such Zeal for their Religion, as well witnesses they left it rashly, and not on mature Judgment and Deliberation; our University thus restored, the desired Religion seems more to please, than had her Precepts been constantly obeyed, and her Glory never obscured.

Wherefore this University suppliant and prostrate, first begs Pardon and Peace of the eternal God, and that he will preserve the right Faith of her and hers, and cause this University once more to flourish and abound. Then for her and hers, all and singular, she offers this Petition to your Highnesses, that the Industry of her present Sons may make amends for the Errors and Offences of her former. For the rest she submits wholly to the Sentence your great Wisdom and singular Love shall pronounce, hoping your Justice will find her Cause good, or your Mercy make it so: Either will be an equal Benefit, whether you judge this University innocent from the Justice of her Cause, or whether you make her so by the Abundance of your Love. Now to return you Thanks, we again promise you, the greatest Regard to Things sacred, unwearied Diligence in searching the Scriptures and Fathers, a perpetual Love of the true Religion, and an eternal Remembrance of your Favours.

The Answer of Mr. Scot, Bishop of Chester, to Mr. Stokes's Oration.

When he made an End of speaking, the Bishop of Chester answered thereunto:

That they took in right good Part, that the Mother the University had made so open a Declaration of her good Will toward them: For which he gave most hearty Thanks, desiring her to perform in Deed, and in her Works, the Things that she had so largely promised of herself in Words and Communication.

As concerning their good Wills, there was no Cause to mistrust. For their coming thither was not to deal any Thing roughly with such as fell to the Amendment: But both the Cardinal himself and they also, were fully minded to shew Favour, devising how to bring all Things to Peace and Tranquility, desiring nothing more earnestly, than that they which have erred and gone astray, should return into the right Path again. The right reverend Father, the Lord Cardinal, whom he wished to have been present, wished the self same Thing also, desiring nothing so much as he with his own Hands to sustain and hold up, now ready to fall, or rather to raise up already fallen to the Ground, the University of his Ward: For he gladly taketh upon him the Name and Duty of her Guardian, whom it greatly grieved, that the Infections of the Time past had spread Abroad so grievous Diseases, that even the University itself was touched with the contagious Air thereof. For he would more gladly have come hither to visit and salute it, than to correct it, if the weighty Affairs of the Realm would have permitted it. But now seeing he could not so do, he had appointed this Commission, in which he had assigned them to be his Deputies, which (because they knew him to set so much Store by the University) should extend the more Favour to it, and because they themselves had been there brought up) would the more earnestly embrace it. The chief Matter that they came for, tended to this End, that such as had erred should confess their Faults, and return into the right Way again. For they were in good Forwardness of healing, that acknowledged themselves to have offended. And therefore it was wisely propounded on his Part, that he would not altogether excuse the Faults of the University, nor of other Men, but confess and acknowledge the Crime, as that there were many Things had need to be corrected and amended.

Anno 1557.

The Causes declared.

The Commission signed by the Cardinal, and why?

The Cause why they were sent thither, was to raise up them that were fallen, and to receive into Favour such as were sorry and would amend, wherein, if (contrary to their Expectation) they should not be able to do so much with some Men as they would: Yet notwithstanding, according to their Duty, they would shew themselves so diligent for their Part, as that no lack might be found in them. For it was more openly known, than that it could be denied, that many Men did divers Things of a froward Wilfulness, and took stoutly upon them: Wherewith as they were greatly moved and grieved, as Reason was, so they coveted to remedy the Mischief. Against whom, if any Thing should seem hereafter to be streightly determined, it was to be imputed to their own Deserts, and not to the Wills of them. Neither ought such as are whole and sound, to be moved at the Chastisements of others, for so much as it pertained not only to the wiping out of the foul Blot which now sticked on the University, but also to the Health of many others which had taken much Hurt by the Infection of them. For their own Parts they more inclined unto Mercy than Rigour. Howbeit, considering that so great Diseases could not by gentle Medicines be healed, they were driven of Necessity to use stronger. And yet if they would be contented to be brought again to their right Minds, which Thing they chiefly coveted (for they wished that all should amend and be led by wholesome Counsel) and would yet at length wax weary of their Errors, and instead of them frequent again the ancient Customs of themselves, and of their Forefathers, they might boldly look for all Kind of Humanity and Gentleness at their Hands, in all this their Business of Reformation, which they had now entered and begun, requesting no more of the University but to do as became them: Which being performed, he promised that their Benevolence, neither in any publick or private Person's Case, should in any wise be behind hand.

A Mass at the King's College.

These Things being finished, they were brought in Procession to the King's College, by all the Graduates of the Univerlity, where was sung a Mass of the Holy Ghost with great Solemnity, nothing wanting in that Behalf that might make to the setting forth of Anno 1557. the ſame. In this Place it was marked, that Nicholas Ormanet, commonly ſirnamed Datary, (who albeit he was inferior in Eſtate unto Cheſter being a Biſhop, yet was ſuperior to them all in Authority) while the Maſs was celebrating, ſometimes ſtanding, anon ſitting, and afterwards kneeling on his Knees, obſerved certain Ceremonies, which afterward were required to be obſerved of all others, as in Proceſs hereof was to be ſeen.

From thence they all attended upon the Legates to St. Mary's Church, which we declared before to have been interdicted. In which Place, foraſmuch as it was ſuſpended, although no Maſs might be ſung, yet there was a Sermon made in open Audience by Mr. Peacock in the Latin Tongue, preaching againſt Hereſies and Hereticks, as Bilney, Cranmer, Latimer, Ridley, &c. Which being ended, they immediately proceeded to the Viſitation: Where firſt Dr. Harvy did in the Cardinal's Name, exhibit the Commiſſion to the Biſhop of Cheſter with a few Words in Latin. Which being accepted, and by Maſter Clerk openly read to the End, then the Vice-chancellor with an Oration did exhibit the Certificate under his Seal of Office with the Cardinal's Citation annexed, containing every Man's Name in the Univerſity and Colleges, with the Officers and all the Maſters of Houſes. Among whom was alſo Robert Braſſey, Maſter of King's-College, a worthy old Man, both for his Wiſdom and his hoary Hairs: Who hearing his own Name recited next after the Vice-chancellor's, ſaid, He was there preſent as all the others were: Nevertheleſs, foraſmuch as the Reformation of his Houſe was wholly reſerved to the Diſcretion of the Biſhop of Lincoln, not only by the King's Letters Patents, but alſo by grant of Confirmation from the Biſhop of Rome himſelf, under a Penalty if he ſhould ſuffer any Strangers to intermeddle, he openly proteſted, in Diſcharge of his Duty, that unleſs their Commiſſion gave them Authority and Juriſdiction upon the College, either by expreſs Words, or manifeſt Senſe, he utterly exempted himſelf from being preſent.

Mr Peacock preacheth at St. Mary's.

The Citation of the Maſters of Colleges.

Mr. Braſſey's Exception.

This his Exception they all took in great Diſpleaſure; alledging that they were fully authorized for the Order of the Matter by the Cardinal, out of whoſe Juriſdiction no Place nor Perſons was exempted: Wherefore he had done Evil to call into Queſtion their Authority, ſo well known to all Men. The Biſhop of Cheſter ſeemed to be more moved with the Matter than all the others; and that was becauſe Braſſey had a little before obtained the Worſhip of that Room, even utterly againſt his Will, he doing the worſt he could againſt him.

After the formal Solemnity of theſe Things thus accompliſhed, the Commiſſion being read, and the Citation exhibited, all the Maſters of Houſes being openly cited, every Man for a while departed home to his own Houſe, with Command to be at the common Schools of the ſaid Univerſity, at one of the Clock the ſame Day. When the Degrees of the Univerſity, commonly called Regents and Non-regents, were aſſembled thither, they ſpent the reſt of the Day in reading over the Charters granted to the Univerſity by Kings and Princes, in ſearching out of Bulls and Pardons from the Pope, and in peruſing of other Monuments pertaining to the Univerſity.

Inquiſition at the common Schools.

The next Day following, being the 12th of January, they reſorted to the King's-College to make Inquiſition, either becauſe the ſame for the Worthineſs thereof was Chief and Sovereign of all the Reſidue, or elſe becauſe that that Houſe eſpecially before all others, had been accounted, Time out of Mind, never to be without an Heretick (as they termed them) or twain. And at that preſent Time, albeit that many now of late had withdrawn themſelves from thence, yet they judged there were ſome ſtill remaining. The Order and Manner how they would be entertained of every College, when they ſhould come to make Inquiſition, they themſelves appointed, which was in this Sort.

Inquiſition at the King's-College.

They commanded the Maſter of every Houſe, together with the Reſidue, as well Fellows as Scholars, apparelled in Prieſt-like Garments (which they call Habits) to meet them at the uttermoſt Gate of their Houſe towards the Town. The Maſter himſelf to be dreſſed in like Apparel as the Prieſt when he dreſſeth himſelf to Maſs, ſaving that he ſhould put on uppermoſt his Habit, as the reſt did.

The Manner of receiving the Inquiſitors when they went to make Inquiſition.

The Order of their going they appointed to be in this wiſe: The Maſter of the Houſe to go foremoſt; next unto him every Man in his Order, as he was of Degree, Seniority, or of Years. Before the Maſter ſhould be carried a Croſs and holy Water to ſprinkle the Commiſſioners withal, and then after that the ſaid Commiſſioners to be cenſed. And ſo after this Meeting, and mumbling of a few Devotions, they determined with this Pomp and Solemnity to be brought to the Chappel.

Many thought they took more Honour upon them than belonged to the State of Man. Others (foraſmuch as at that Time they not only pretended the Juriſdiction of the Cardinal, but alſo repreſented the Power and Authority of the Biſhop of Rome himſelf, who was accounted to be more than a mortal Man) ſaid; It was far leſs than of Duty appertained to his Holineſs, in that the Honour that was done to his Legates, was not done to them, but to his Holineſs.

The Commiſſioners repreſent the Pope.

Now was the Hour come, at which they appointed to meet; and being entered the King's-College Gate, where they looked for the Maſter and Fellows of the Houſe, ſeeing no Man came to meet them, they proceeded to the Church-door, where they ſtayed. There perceiving how the Maſter and the reſt of the Houſe were dreſſing themſelves as faſt as they could, in ſuch Order as was appointed before they came in ſuddenly upon them, before they had ſet out any Foot out of their Places.

Here was a foul Fault committed, that theſe Men came in without Proceſſion.

Then the Maſter firſt excuſed himſelf, that he was ready no ſooner, acknowledging that it had been his Duty to have been in a Readineſs. Secondly, he ſaid he was very glad of their coming, promiſing firſt in his own Name, and after in the Name of all the reſt, as much Reverence as might be, in all Matters concerning their common Utility, which he doubted not but ſhould be performed at their Hands, according to his Expectation. But, like as he had done the other Day in St. Mary's Church, the ſame Exception he made to them now alſo; which his Doing he beſought them not to be offended withal. For ſeeing he did it only for the Diſcharge of his Duty, he had juſter Cauſe to be held excuſed.

Mr. Braſſey maketh Exception again.

He had ſcarcely yet finiſhed his Tale, but the Biſhop of Cheſter with a frowning Look,

Dr. Scot's Anſwer to Mr. Braſſey.

Look, and an angry Countenance, interrupting him in his Talk; and ſaid, he needed not to repeat the Things he had proteſted before, nor they to make Anſwer any more to thoſe Things wherein they had ſufficiently informed him before. He rather feared, that their Quarrel was not good, that they made ſuch ado about it, and ſought ſuch ſtarting Holes. For ſo were diſeaſed Perſons oftentimes wont to do, when for the Pain and Grief they are not able to abide a ſtrong Medicine. As though that any Man were able to grant ſo ſtrong a Privilege, as to withſtand the Pope's Authority. As for the Pope's Letters, he ſaid, muſt needs make on his Side, and with ſuch as were with him, and could not in any wiſe be alledged againſt him. Therefore he admoniſhed him to deſiſt from his unprofitable Altercation, and to conform himſelf, and his, to ſuch Things as then were in doing.

After this they went to Maſs. Which finiſhed, with great Solemnity, firſt they went to the high Altar of the Church, and having there ſaluted their God, and ſearching whether all were about him or no, they walked thorough all the inner Chappels of the Church. The Church Goods, the Croſſes, the Chalices, the Maſs-books, the Veſtments, and whatſoever Ornaments were beſides, were commanded to be brought out unto them. When they had ſufficiently viewed all Things, and had called forth by Name every Fellow and Scholar of the Houſe, they went to the Maſter's Lodging, where firſt and foremoſt ſwearing them upon a Book, to anſwer to all ſuch Interrogatories as ſhould be propounded unto them (as far as they knew) they examined firſt the Maſter himſelf, and afterward all the Reſidue, every Man in his Turn. But there were ſome that refuſed to take this Oath, becauſe they had given their Faith to the College before, and alſo becauſe they thought it againſt all Right and Reaſon to ſwear againſt themſelves: For it was contrary to all Law, that a Man ſhould be compelled to bewray himſelf, and not be ſuffered to keep his Conſcience free, when there is no manifeſt Proof to be laid to his Charge, but much more unjuſt it is, that a Man ſhould be conſtrained perforce to accuſe himſelf. Nevertheleſs theſe Perſons alſo, after ſuch Altercation, at length (conditionally, that their Faith given before to the College were not impeached thereby) were contented to be ſworn.

The Oath refuſed by ſome in the King's College, and why?

Three Days long laſted the Inquiſition there. This was now the Third Day of their coming, and it was thought that the Caſe of Martin Bucer and Phagius, was delayed longer than needed. For they looked to have had much Wrangling and Buſineſs about the Matter. Now, foraſmuch as the preſent State of the Caſe required good Deliberation and Advice, the Vice-chancellor and the Maſters of the Colleges aſſembled at the common Schools, where every Man gave his Verdict what he thought meet to be done in this Matter of Bucer. After much debating, they agreed all together in this Determination.

That foraſmuch as Martin Bucer, while he lived, had not only ſowed pernicious and erroneous Doctrine among them, but alſo had himſelf been a Sectary and famous Heretick, erring from the Catholick Church, and giving others Occaſion to fall from the ſame likewiſe; a Supplication ſhould be made to the Lords Commiſſioners, in the Name of the whole Univerſity, that his dead Carcaſe might forthwith be digged up (for ſo it was needful to be done) to the Intent that Inquiſition might be made as touching his Doctrine, which being brought in Examination, if it were not found to be good and wholeſome, the Law might proceed againſt him: For it was againſt the Rule of the Holy Canons, that his Body ſhould be buried in Chriſtian Burial. Yea, and beſides that it was to the open Derogation of God's Honour, and the violating of his holy Laws, with the great Peril of many Mens Souls, and the Offence of the Faithful, eſpecially in ſo difficult and contagious a Time as that was. Wherefore it was not to be ſuffered, that they, which utterly diſſented from all other Men in the Trade of their Living, Laws, and Cuſtoms, ſhould have any Part with them in the Honour of Burial. And therefore the Glory of God, firſt and before all Things, ought to be defended, the Infamy (which through this Thing riſeth on them) with all Speed put away, no room at all left unto thoſe Perſons to reſt in, who even in the ſame Places where they lay, were injurious and noiſome to the very Elements; but the Place ought to be purged, and all Things ſo ordered as might be to the ſatisfying the Conſciences of the weak. In executing whereof ſo notable an Example ought to be given to all Men, that no Man hereafter ſhould be ſo bold to attempt the like.

Anno 1557.

Cauſes why the Bodies of Martin Bucer and P. Phagius ought to be taken up.

Inquiſition to be made of Martin Bucer's Doctrine.

They gave the ſame Verdict by common Conſent againſt Phagius alſo.

Unto this Writing they annexed another, by which they lawfully authorized Andrew Perne the Vice-chancellor, to be the common Factor for the Univerſity. He was a Man fitteſt for the Purpoſe, both for the Office that he bare, and alſo becauſe that by the Teſtimony of Mr. Chriſtopherſon, he was judged to be the moſt Catholick of all others. This Supplication, confirmed by the Conſent of all the Degrees of the Univerſity, and ſigned with their common Seal, the next Day, which was the 13th Day of January, the Vice-chancellor put up to the Commiſſioners.

Note here, good Reader, what a Feat of Conveyance this was, to ſuborn the Univerſity under a colourable Pretence, to deſire this Thing of them by Way of Petition. As who ſhould ſay, if they had not done ſo, the other would never have gone about it of themſelves.

But this Gloſs was ſoon found out. For the Commiſſioners had given the Vice-chancellor Inſtructions in writing before. But now peradventure they thought by this Means to remove the Envy of this Act from themſelves.

Thus the Vice-chancellor came unto the Commiſſioners, according to the Appointment made the Day before, about ſeven o'Clock in the Morning. He had ſcarce declared the Cauſe of his coming, but that he had not only obtained his Sute, but alſo even at the very ſame Time received the Sentence of Condemnation, for taking up Bucer and Phagius, fair copied out by Ormanet Datary himſelf. This was to be confirmed by the Conſent of the Degrees of the Univerſity. Whereupon a ſolemn Convocation, called Congregatio Regentium & non Regentium, for the ſame Purpoſe was appointed to be at Nine o'Clock; where the Graduates being aſſembled together, the

The Sentence of Condemnation againſt Martin Bucer and Paulus Phagius, copied out by the Datary.

Anno 1557. Demand was propounded concerning the Condemnation of Bucer and Phagius, and the Grace asked, which was this:

Grace aſked in the Congregation for the taking up of Bucer.

Pleaſeth it you that Martin Bucer, for the Hereſies now recited, and many others by him written, preached and taught, wherein he died without Repentance, and was buried in Chriſtian Burial, may be exhumate and taken up again, &c.

Immediately after this Grace was granted, the Sentence of Condemnation being drawn by the Datary, was openly read, and another Grace asked, that the ſame might be ſigned with the common Seal. Which Requeſt was very eaſily obtained: And it was no marvel.

For after the Death of King Edward, when the Realm was governed by Queen Mary, all ſuch Perſons were driven away as had rejected the Romiſh Religion (in whom alone well nigh reſted whatſoever Wit and Learning was in the whole Univerſity beſides) and ſuch a Sort of Men were put in their room, that all Places now ſwarmed with unlearned Chaplains: To whom nothing was greater Pleaſure, than to cauſe all Men to ſpeak reproachfully of Bucer. There were divers yet left among them to ſpeak againſt their Demands. But they (becauſe as it commonly cometh to paſs, that Might overcometh Right) could nothing avail. For this is a common Cuſtom in all ſuch Matters and Ordinances, that what the greater Number decreeth, is publiſhed in the Name of all: And that which the better Part diſalloweth, ſeemeth as though no Man at all diſallowed it.

The next Day being the 14*th* of January, all the Viſitors (Mr. Chriſtopherſon only excepted) came to the King's College: Where firſt going into the Church, and there making their Prayers at the Greeſings, they ſo proceeded into the Stalls, there ſitting all the Maſs Time, the Company ſtanding in their Copes, and ſinging a ſolemn Reſpond in Honour of the Viſitors. After the Reſpond done, the Provoſt made to them his Proteſtation, unto whom the Biſhop of Cheſter made Anſwer alſo in Latin, declaring that he could not perceive to what Purpoſe his Proteſtation was, notwithſtanding they would accept it and bear with him. Then went they to Maſs, which ended, the Catholick Viſitors approached up to the Altar, and took down the Sacrament and ſearched the Pyx, but firſt the two Biſhops cenſed the Sacrament.

Then they went unto the Veſtry, and opened the Chalices, Corporas Caſes and Chryſmatory, and viewed all thoſe Things: And ſo returning into the Provoſt's Chamber, divided themſelves in Examination of the Provoſt, Vice-provoſt, and the reſt of the Company. The ſame Day Dr. Bacon Maſter of Gonvile-hall, invited the Vice-chancellor, Dr. Young, Dr. Harvey, Swineborn, Maptide, with others, home to Dinner. Theſe Men immediately after Dinner, cauſed the common Seal of the Univerſity to be put to the foreſaid Inſtrument of Condemnation, according as was determined the Day before by the general Conſent of the Graduates of the Univerſity: And afterwards they carried the ſame to the Commiſſioners to their Lodging. Which when they had received and carefully peruſed, it pleaſed them not in all Points, and therefore they raſed out ſome Things, ſome they interlined, others they changed; ſo that in fine, they were fain to take the Pains to ingroſs it new again.

To the ſigning whereof a Congregation was immediately called of all the Graduates of the Univerſity againſt the next Day, which there being read over, a new Grace again was asked and granted for ſetting the Seal. Then were the Graduates diſmiſſed, with Command to reſort forthwith to St. Mary's Church, whither the Commiſſioners alſo repaired. When they had taken their Places, Dr. Harvey preſented to them before all the Company, a new Commiſſion to make Inqueſt upon Hereſy then newly ſent from the Cardinal, which was immediately read by Ormanet's Clerk. This done, Dr. Perne, who was Factor for the Univerſity, exhibited to the Commiſſioners in the Name of the Univerſity, the Sentence of the aforeſaid Condemnation. This Condemnation being openly read, then Dr. Perne deſired to ſend out Proceſs to cite Bucer and Phagius to appear, or any other that would take upon them to plead their Cauſe, and to ſtand to the Order of the Court againſt the next Monday: To the Intent that when they had exhibited themſelves, the Court might the better determine what ought to be done to them by Order of Law.

Dr. Harvy preſenteth a Mandate from the Cardinal.

Dr. Perne maketh Petition that Bucer and Phagius may be cited to the Court.

The Commiſſioners condeſcended to his Requeſt, and the next Day Proceſs went out to cite the Offenders. This Citation Vincent of Noally their common Notary, having firſt read it over before certain Witneſſes appointed for the ſame Purpoſe, cauſed to be fixed up in Places convenient, to wit, upon St. Mary's Church Door, the Door of the Common Schools, and the Croſs in the Market-place of the ſame Town. In this was ſpecified, that whoſoever would maintain Bucer and Phagius, or ſtand in Defence of their Doctrine, ſhould at the eighth Day of the ſame Month ſtand forth before the Lords Commiſſioners in St. Mary's Church, which was appointed the Place of Judgment, and there every Man ſhould be ſufficiently heard what he could ſay. This Commandment was ſet out with many Words.

Bucer and Phagius cited out of their Graves to appear, or any other that would anſwer for them.

Shortly after the Matter drew toward Judgment. Therefore the Day before the limited Day, which was the 17*th* of January, the Vice-chancellor called to him to Peter-houſe (whereof he was Maſter) Dr. Young, Dr. Sedgwick, and with them Bullock, Taylor, Parker, Redman, Whitlock, Mitch, and certain others. Theſe Men caſt their Heads together how they might bear Witneſs againſt Bucer and Phagius, to convice them of Hereſy. For ſeeing the Matter was brought in face of open Court, and becauſe it might ſo come to paſs, that ſome Patrons of their Cauſe would come out, they thought it needful to have Witneſſes to depoſe of their Doctrine. What came of this their Conſultation is not perfectly known.

Witneſſes ſworn againſt Bucer.

The eighteenth Day, the Vice-chancellor going to the Inquiſitors ſitting at the King's-College, put them in Remembrance, that that was the Day in which by their Proceſs ſent forth the 16*th*, they had commanded to appear in St. Mary's Church, ſuch as would take upon them to defend Bucer and Phagius by the Law. He deſired therefore that they would vouchſafe to ſit there, if perchance any Man would try the Adventure of the Law. They ſoon condeſcended thereunto. When the Vice-chancellor had brought them thither, he exhibited unto them the Proceſs of the Citation which he had received of them to publiſh a little before, ſaying, that he had diligently executed whatſoever the Contents of the ſame required. After that they had taken their Places, and no Man putting forth himſelf to anſwer for the Offenders, the Judges call aſide Dr. Young, Sedgwick, Bullock, Taylor, Maptide, Hunter, Parker, Redman, abovementioned. Alſo Brown, Gogman, Rud, Johnſon, Mitch, Raven, and Carre, who had before written out the Burial of Bucer, with a ſingular Commendation of him, and ſent it to Sir John Cheeke, Knight. Theſe Men taking firſt their Oath upon a Book, were commanded to bear Witneſs againſt the Hereſies and Doctrine of Bucer and Phagius. The twenty-ſecond Day of the ſame Month was limited to this Jury to bring in their Verdict.

In the mean while, Ormanet and Dr. Watſon abode at home in their Lodging to take the Depoſition of them, whom we ſhewed you before to have been called to Peter-houſe, and to have communicated with the Vice-chancellor as concerning that Matter, whoſe Depoſitions (as I told you) never came to light. The Biſhop of Cheſter, and Dr. Cole this Day viſited them of Katherine-hall, where, as far as could be learned, nothing was done worthy of Rehearſal.

A Relick given by Ormanet to Trinity-college.

As Ormanet the Pope's Datary, was ſitting at Trinity College, John Dale one of Queen's College came to him, whom he had commanded before to bring with him the Pix, wherein the Biſhop of Rome's God of Bread is wont to be encloſed. For Ormanet told them he had a precious Jewel; the ſame was a linnen Clout that the Pope had conſecrated with his own Hands, which he promiſed to beſtow upon them for a Gift. But Dale miſunderſtanding Ormanet, in ſtead of the Pix brought a Chalice and a ſinging Cake called the Hoſt, which he had wrapped up and put in his Boſom. When he was come, Ormanet demanded if he had brought him the Thing he ſent him for. To whom he anſwered, he had brought it. Then give it me, quoth he. Dale pulled out the Chalice, and the ſinging Cake. When Ormanet ſaw that, he ſtepped ſomewhat back, as it had been in a Wonder, calling him Blockhead, and little better than a Madman, demanding what he meant by thoſe Things, ſaying, he deſired him to bring none of that Gear, and that he was unworthy to enjoy ſo high a Benefit: Yet notwithſtanding, foraſmuch as he had promiſed before to give it them, he would perform his Promiſe. Whereupon with great Reverence and Ceremony he pulled out the Linnen Cloth and laid it in the Chalice, and the Bread with it, commanding them both for the Holineſs of the Thing, and alſo for the Author of it, to keep it among them with ſuch due Reverence as belonged to ſo holy a Relick.

Heretical Books commanded to be brought in.

About the ſame Time the Commiſſioners had commanded the Maſters of the Colleges, that every Man ſhould put in Writing what Books he had, with the Authors Names. And to the Intent that every Man ſhould execute it without Deceit, they took an Oath of them. This Command ſome executed exactly and diligently; others, foraſmuch as they deemed it wrongfully, executed it ſlack enough.

We declared before that the eighteenth Day was limited for the Day of Judgment. When the Day came, and that neither Bucer nor Phagius would appear at their Call in the Court, nor any put forth himſelf to defend them, yet the courteous Commiſſioners would not proceed to Judgment; which nevertheleſs for their Contumacy in abſenting themſelves, they might have done, conſidering how that Day was peremptory. But theſe Men, being bent altogether to Equity and Mercy, had rather ſhew ſome Favour, than to do the uttermoſt they might by the Law. Whereupon Vincent publiſhed the ſecond Proceſs, and ſet it up in the ſame Places, as in Manner before. The Meaning thereof varied not much from the firſt, but that it put off the Judgment-day unto the 26th of the ſame Month. Upon which Day the Vice-chancellor was ſent for to their Lodging, with whom they agreed concerning the Order of publiſhing the Sentence. And becauſe there ſhould want no Solemnity in the Matter, they commanded him further to warn the Mayor of the Town to be there at the Day appointed with all his Burgeſſes, which the Vice-chancellor did ſpeed with all Readineſs. Anno 1556.

This Day (as I ſaid) was the twenty-ſixth of January, which being now come, firſt all Degrees of the Mother Univerſity were aſſembled. And to fill up this Pageant, thither came alſo the Mayor and his Townſmen, and all met together in St. Mary's Church, to behold what there ſhould be determined upon theſe Men. After long Attendance, at length the Commiſſioners came forth, and went up to a Scaffold that was ſomewhat higher than the Reſidue, prepared for the ſame Purpoſe. When they had taken their Places, Dr. Perne the Vice-chancellor, the Player of this Interlude, faſhioning his Coutenance with great Gravity, reached to them the Proceſs that was lately publiſhed to cite them, ſaying theſe Words: I bring forth again (ſaid he) to you Right Reverend Father, and Commiſſioners of the moſt Reverend my Lord Cardinal Poole, this Citation executed according to the Purport and Effect of the ſame; omitting nothing for his Part that might make to the Commendation of this Matter.

When he had thus finiſhed his Tale, the Biſhop of Cheſter, after he had viewed the People a little, began in the following Manner.

The Oration of Dr. Scot Biſhop of Cheſter, before the Condemnation of Bucer and Phagius.

YE ſee how ſore the Univerſity preſſeth upon us, how earneſt Interceſſion it maketh unto us, not only to denounce Bucer and Phagius, which theſe certain Years paſt have ſpread moſt pernicious Doctrine among you, to be Hereticks, as they be indeed, but alſo that we will command their dead Carcaſes, which unto this Day have obtained honourable Burial among you, to be digged up, and as it is excellently ordained by the Canon Law, to be caſt into Fire, or whatſoever is more grievous than Fire, if any can be. For the Degrees of the Univerſity deal not ſlightly nor ſlackly with us in this Caſe, but do ſo preſs upon us, and follow the Suit ſo earneſtly, that they ſcarce give us any reſpite of Delay. And I aſſure you, albeit this Caſe of itſelf be ſuch, as that even the Unworthineſs of thoſe Perſons, though there were no further Cauſe, ought to indnce us to the Doing thereof, much the rather moved with theſe ſo wholeſome Petitions; it is meet and convenient we ſhould grant it. For howſoever we of ourſelves are inclined to Mercy in our Hearts (than which we proteſt proteſt there is nothing under the Sun to us more dear and acceptable) yet notwithſtanding the very Law riſeth up to Revenge; ſo that the common Salvation of you all, which the Law provideth for, muſt be preferred before the private Charity of our Minds. Neither ought any ſuch Negligence to overtake us for our Parts, that we, being ſcarce yet eſcaped out of the Shipwreck of our former Calamity, ſhould now ſuffer this unexpiable Miſchief to diſquiet any longer the Conſciences of the Weak.

O Lord God, as though this were the Doing of the Univerſity, and not your own!

Moreover, it is but Reaſon that we ſhould do ſomewhat at ſo earneſt Intreaty and Suit of the Univerſity. I need not to ſpeak much of ourſelves. For if we had been deſirous to enterprize this Matter, it had been lawful after the firſt Citation, to have proceeded to Judgment: But becauſe we were willing that their Defenders ſhould be heard, and that the Matter ſhould be denounced and tried by Law, we ſent out the ſecond Proceſs.

The Wolf pretendeth to be a Lamb.

If we had deſired Revenge, we might have ſhewed Cruelty upon them that are alive: Of which (alas the more Pity) there are too many that embrace this Doctrine. If we thirſted for Blood, it was not ſo to be ſought in withered Carcaſes and dry Bones. Therefore ye may well perceive, it was no part of our Wills that we now came hither: But partly induced at the Intreaty of the Univerſity, partly moved with the Unworthineſs of the Caſe itſelf: But eſpecially for the Care and Regard we have of your Health and Salvation, which we covet by all Means to preſerve.

For you yourſelves are the Cauſe of this Buſineſs: You gave Occaſion of this Confeſſion, among whom this Day ought to be a notable Example, to remain as a Memorial to them that ſhall come after, as in that which ye may learn not only to ſhake off the Filth which ye have taken of theſe Perſons; but alſo to beware hereafter that ye fall no more ſo ſhameful as ye have done. But I truſt, God will defend you, and give you Minds to keep yourſelves from it.

As concerning the Parties themſelves, whoſe Caſe now hangeth in Law, they bear about the Name of the Goſpel, whereas indeed they wrought nothing elſe than Thievery and Deceit. And ſo much the more wicked were they, in that they ſought to cover ſo ſhameful Acts, with the Cloaks of ſo fair and holy a Name. Wherefore it is not to be doubted, but that God will puniſh this Deſpite, of itſelf wicked, to you pernicious, but the Authors thereof ſhameful and abominable.

But if God, as he is ſlow to Wrath and Vengeance, will wink at it for a Time, yet notwithſtanding if we, upon whom the Charge of the Lord's Flock leaneth, ſhould permit ſo execrable Crimes to eſcape unpuniſhed, we ſhould not live in quiet one Hour.

When he had thus ſpoken, he recited the Sentence out of a Scroll, and condemned Bucer and Phagius of Herefy; the Form and Tenor of which Sentence, now rendered into Engliſh, here followeth:

The Sentence of Condemnation againſt Martin Bucer and Phagius.

WE Cutbert, by the Grace of God and the apoſtolick See, Biſhop of Cheſter, Nicholas Ormanet Archbiſhop of Verona, within the Dioceſs underwritten, Auditor of the Reverend Lord Cardinal and Legate; Thomas Watſon, Dean of Durham; and Henry Cole, Provoſt of Eaton-college, Viſitors to the Univerſity and Town of Cambridge, within the Dioceſs of Ely, alſo to all Perſons dwelling in the ſaid Town and Places adjacent, for certain Motions, Cauſes and Reaſons thereunto moving, we are to enquire, and in what Manner we think fit proceed againſt thoſe, who have run into vile Hereſies, and condemn their Memory; we are impowered by Letters from the moſt illuſtrious and Reverend Father in Chriſt, Reginald Poole, Cardinal and Prieſt of the moſt holy Roman Church, Legate de Latere from our moſt holy Lord the Pope, and the Apoſtolick See, to the moſt ſerene Philip and Mary, King and Queen of England, and to the whole Kingdom, to depute Commiſſioners or Delegates, ſufficiently inſtructed in the Knowledge of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and having the Fear of God before their Eyes, to conſtitute a Court, and by this our definitive Sentence, which we give according to the Opinion of the moſt learned Divines and Lawyers, herein contained, to condemn thoſe Sons of Iniquity, Martin Bucer and Paulus Phagius, by Nation Germans, but both of old living and dying in this Town, whom we here declare, pronounce, judge and condemn as notorious Hereticks whilſt they lived; for truly Martin Bucer, contrary to the Rules and Precepts of the holy Fathers, as alſo to the Traditions of the apoſtolick Roman Church and holy Councils, and of the Chriſtian Religion, thoſe Rites and Proceſſions (which are every Year on the Day of the Supper of our Lord celebrated and read by the Roman Prieſts, in which among others the Wickliffians and Lutherans, and all other Hereticks are condemned and anathematized) of the Sacraments having continued in the Church hitherto, he eſpecially taught and preached about the Number of them, contrary to what our holy Mother the Church had preached and obſerved: And he denied and openly condemned the Authority of the holy Apoſtolick See, and the Supremacy of our great High-prieſt, and he eſpecially held this Article:

"That the Church may err in Faith and Worſhip.

This he particularly defended in the publick Aſſemblies, and there maintained and determined it to be true, and many others, as well by John Wickliffe, Martin Luther, and other chief Hereticks invented, and condemned by the Church, eſpecially that,

"That all Things were governed by Fate and an abſolute "Neceſſity."

As by himſelf firſt broached, believing and following falſe and heretical Principles, and moreover alſo writing Books, and cauſing them to be printed, and publiſhing them being printed, and in reading theſe Writings publickly, and defending them in publick Diſputations, as alſo by an obſtinate living and dying in this Manner, not only as a notorious Heretick, but as a Founder of Hereſy.

Alſo Paul Phagius, who among other Things which ſavour of Hereſy, ſcattered up and down in his Writings, printed and commonly read, not only approves, but gives the higheſt Encomiums to the impious Memory of John Œcolampade, the aforeſaid Martin Bucer, Philip Melancthon, John Brent, and their Doctrines; which manifeſtly ſhews, he not only favoured Hereticks, but aſſented, believed and approved their falſe Principles, and endeavoured to induce others to believe and approve the ſame: Thus he lived a common, notorious Heretick, and died impenitent. We therefore pronounce the ſaid Martin Bucer and Paulus Phagius excommunicated and anathematized, as well by the common

coumon Law, as by Letters Proceſs, and that their Memory be condemned, we alſo condemn their Bodies and Bones (which in that moſt wicked Time of Schiſm, and other Hereſies flouriſhing in this Kingdom, were raſhly buried in holy Ground) to be dug up, and caſt far from the Church, that they may be known from the Bodies and Bones of the Faithful, according to the holy Canons; and we command that they and their Writings, if any be there found, be publickly burnt; and we interdict all Perſons whatſoever of this Univerſity, Town or Places adjacent, who ſhall read or conceal their heretical Books, as well by the common Law, as by our Letters of Proceſs.

After the Sentence thus read, the Biſhop commanded their Bodies to be digged out of their Graves, and being degraded from holy Orders, delivered them into the Hands of the Secular Power. For it was not lawful for ſuch innocent Perſons as they were, abhorring from all Bloodſhed, and deteſting all Deſire of Murder, to put any Man to Death.

Beſides this Oration and Sentence of Dr. Scot, came in alſo Dr. Perne Vice-chancellor, with his Sermon tending to the ſame Effect, to the depraving of Mr. Bucer, taking for his Theam the Place of the 133 Pſalm, Behold how good and pleaſant a Thing it is, &c.

Theſe Things being diſpatched, Dr. Perne was of Courteſy bidden to Dinner to Trinity-College by the Commiſſioners. Where, after the Table was taken up, they cauſed the Sentence of Condemnation to be copied out with all Speed: Which being ſigned with the Biſhop of Cheſter's Seal, the next Day following was for a Triumph ſent to London.

The Sentence of Condemnation ſent to London with the Commiſſioners Letters.

Beſides this, they ſent alſo their own Letters, wherein they both advertiſed the Cardinal how far they had proceeded in that Matter, and alſo deſired his Grace, that he would cauſe to be ſent out of Hand to Smith, the Mayor of the Town, the Commandment, commonly called a Writ, for the Burning of Hereticks. For unleſs he had the Queen's Warrant to ſave him harmleſs, he would not have to do in the Matter: And that which remained to be done in that Caſe, could not be diſpatched till that Warrant came.

While this Purſivant went on his Journey, they ordered to be brought unto them the Books that they commanded before to be ſearched out. For they determined to throw them into the Fire with Bucer and Phagius.

Dr. Watſon's Sermon upon Candlemas-Day.

About the ſame Time Dr. Watſon taking Occaſion upon the Day, becauſe it was a high Feaſt, in which was wont to be celebrated the Memorial of the Purification of the Bleſſed Virgin, made a Sermon to the People upon that Pſalm, We have received thy Mercy, O Lord, in the midſt of thy Temple, &c. In which Sermon he ſpake much Reproach of Bucer and Phagius, and of their Doctrine.

He ſaid, that theſe Men, and all the Hereticks of our Time that were of the ſame Opinion (which for the moſt Part, he ſaid, were budded out of Germany) among other Things which they had perniciouſly put into Mens Heads, taught to caſt away all Ceremonies. Whereas notwithſtanding the Apoſtle himſelf commanded all Things to be done in due Order.

And upon that Deed of the Bleſſed Virgin and Joſeph, which was done by them as upon that Day, if was manifeſtly apparent, that they with our Saviour, being then a little Babe, obſerved theſe Rites and Ceremonies for Catholick Men to teach. For he ſaid, that they came to the Temple the ſame Time with Wax Candles in their Hands, after the Manner of Proceſſion (as they term it) in good Order with much Reverence and Devotion, and yet we were not aſhamed to laugh and mock at theſe Things with the Hereticks and Schiſmaticks. Anno 1557.

As he was ſpeaking of Chriſt, Mary and Joſeph, one of them that heard him, a pleaſant and merry-conceited Fellow, turning himſelf to him that ſtood next him, And if it be true, ſaid he, that this Man preacheth, which of them I pray you (if a Man might ask him a Queſtion) bare the Croſs before them? for that might not be miſſing in ſuch ſolemn Ceremonies. Not only this Man jeſted at the Preachers Folly, but divers others alſo laughed at his manifeſt Unſhamefacedneſs, in preaching theſe ſo vain and fooliſh Superſtitions.

By this Time the Purſivant was returned again, who (as we ſaid before) was ſent to London with the Commiſſioners Letters, and brought with him a Warrant for the Burning of theſe Men.

The Day aſſigned for burning Martin Bucer and Paulus Phagius.

Upon the Receipt whereof, they appointed the ſixth Day of February for the Accompliſhment of the Matter: For it had been in Hand a great while already.

Therefore when the ſaid Day was come, the Commiſſioners ſent for the Vice-chancellor, demanding of him in what Caſe Things ſtood, whether all Things were in a Readineſs for the Accompliſhment of this Buſineſs. Underſtanding by him that all Things were ready, they commanded the Matter to be broached out of Hand.

The Vice-chancellor therefore taking with him Marſhal the common Notary, went firſt to St. Michael's Church where Phagius was buried. Then he called forth Andrew Smith, Henry Sawyer, and Henry Adams, Men of the ſame Pariſh, and bound them with an Oath, to dig up the Bones of Phagius, and to bring them to the Place of Execution. Marſhal took their Oaths, receiving the like of Roger Smith and William Haſell the Town Serjeants, and of John Caper, Warden of the ſame Church, for doing the like with Bucer. Smith the Mayor of the Town, who ſhould be their Executioner (for it was not lawful for them to intermeddle in Caſes of Blood) commanded certain of his Townſmen to wait upon him in Harneſs, by whom the dead Bodies were guarded; and being bound with Ropes, and laid upon Men's Shoulders (for they were incloſed in Cheſts, Bucer in the ſame that he was buried, and Phagius in a new one) they were carried into the midſt of the Market-place, with a great Train of People following them.

The Burning of M. Bucer's and Paulus Phagius's Bones.

This Place was prepared before, and a great Poſt was ſet faſt in the Ground to bind the Carcaſes to, and a great Heap of Wood was laid ready to burn them withal.

When they came thither, the Cheſts were ſet up on End with the Dead Bodies in them, and faſtned on both Sides with Stakes, and bound to the Poſt with a long Iron Chain, as if they had been alive. Fire being forthwith put to, as ſoon as it began to flame round about, a great many Books that were condemned with them were caſt into the ſame.

Anno 1557. There was that Day gathered into the Town a great Multitude of Country Folks (for it was Market-day) who ſeeing Men borne to Execution, and learning by Enquiry that they were dead before, partly deteſted and abhorred the extream Cruelty of the Commiſſioners toward the rotten Carcaſes, and partly laughed at their Folly in making ſuch Preparatives. For what needeth any Weapon, ſaid they? As though they were afraid that the dead Bodies, which felt them not, would do them ſome Harm. Or to what Purpoſe ſerveth that Chain wherewith they were tied, ſince they might be burnt looſe without Peril: For it was not to be feared that they would run away.

Dr. Watſon's Sermon at the burning of Bucer and Phagius.

In the mean Time that they were a roaſting in the Fire, Dr. Watſon went into the Pulpit in St. Mary's Church, and there before his Audience railed upon their Doctrine, as wicked and erroneous, ſaying, that it was the Ground of all the Miſchief that had happened of a long Time in the Common-wealth. For behold (ſaid he) as well the Proſperity as the Adverſity of theſe Years that enſued, and ye ſhall find that all Things have chanced unluckily to them that have followed this new-found Faith; as contrarily, all Things have happened fortunately to them that have eſchewed it. What robbing and polling (quoth he) have we ſeen in this Realm, as long as Religion was defaced with Sects; the common Treaſure (gathered for the Maintenance of the whole publick Weal) and the Goods of the Realm ſhamefully ſpent in waſte for the Maintenance of a few Peoples Luſts, all good Order broken, all Diſcipline caſt aſide, Holidays appointed to the ſolemnizing of Ceremonies neglected; and what is more, the Places themſelves beaten down, Fleſh and other kind of prohibited Suſtenance eaten every where upon Days forbidden, without Remorſe of Conſcience, the Prieſts had in Deriſion, the Maſs railed upon, no Honour done to the Sacraments of the Church; all Eſtates and Degrees given to ſuch a licentious Liberty, without Check, that all Things may ſeem to draw to their utter Ruin and Decay.

Watſon ſlanderouſly depraveth the Doctrine of the Proteſtants.

And yet in the mean Time the Name of the Goſpel was pretended outwardly, as tho' that for it Men ought of Duty to give Credit to their erroneous Opinions; whereas indeed there is nothing more different, or more to the Slander of God's Word than the ſame. For what other Thing taught they to remain in that moſt bleſſed and myſtical Sacrament of the Body of our Lord, than bare unleavened Bread? And what elſe do the Remnant of them teach unto this Day? Whereas Chriſt by expreſs Words doth aſſure it to be his very Body. How perilous a Doctrine is that which concerneth the fatal and abſolute Neceſſity of Predeſtination? And yet they ſet it out in ſuch wiſe, that they have left no Choice at all in Things. As who ſhould ſay, it skilled not what a Man purpoſed of any Matter, ſince he had not the Power to determine otherwiſe than the Matter ſhould come to paſs. Which was the peculiar Opinion of them, that made God the Author of Evil, bringing Men through this Perſwaſion into ſuch a careleſs Security of the everlaſting Eternity, that in the mean Seaſon it made no Matter either toward Salvation, or Damnation, what a Man did in this Life. Theſe Errors (which were not even among the heathen Men) were defended by them with great Stoutneſs.

Theſe and many other ſuch Things he falſly alledged againſt Bucer, whoſe Doctrine (in ſuch Sort as he himſelf taught it) either he would not underſtand, or elſe he was minded to ſlander. And yet he was not ignorant, that Bucer taught none other Things than the very ſame whereunto both he and Scot, in the Reign of King Edward VI, had willingly aſſented, by ſubſcribing thereto with their own Hands. While he talked in this wiſe before the People, many of them that had written Verſes before, did now ſet up others, in which, like a Sort of Water Frogs, they ſpued out their venemous Malice againſt Bucer and Phagius. This was the laſt Act of this Interlude, and yet there remained a few Things to be done, among which was the reconciling of Two-Churches, of our Lady, and of St. Michael, which we declared to have been interdicted before.

Watſon and Scot had both ſubſcribed to the Doctrine of the Goſpel in the Reign of King Edward the ſixth.

This was done the next Day following by the aforeſaid Biſhop of Cheſter, with as much ceremonial Solemnity as the Law required. But that impanate God, whom Bucer's Carcaſe had chaſed from thence, was not yet turned thither again: Neither was it lawful for him to come there any more, unleſs he was brought thither with great Solemnity: As I ſuppoſe, during all the Time of his Abſence, he was entertained by the Commiſſioners at Trinity-college, and there continued as a Sojourner. For thither came all the Graduates of the Univerſity, the 8th of February, of Gentleneſs and Courteſy, to bring him Home again. Amongſt which Number, the Biſhop of Cheſter (worthy for his Eſtate to come neareſt to him, becauſe he was a Biſhop) took and carried him clad in a long Rochet, and a large Tippet of Sarcenet about his Neck, wherein he wrapped his Idol alſo. Ormanet had given the ſame a little before to the Univerſity, for that and ſuch like Purpoſes.

The Reconciling of the Churches that were interdicted.

A Solemn Proceſſion of the Univerſity and of the Townſmen.

When this Idol ſhould return Home, he went not out the neareſt Way as other Folks are wont to go, but he fetched a Compaſs about moſt Part of the Town, and roamed through ſo many of the Streets, that it was an Hour or more e're he could find the Way into this Church again. I believe the ancient Romans obſerved a Cuſtom not much unlike this in their Proceſſions, when they made Supplications at the Shrines of all their Gods. The Order of which Proceſſion was this: The Maſters Regents went before, ſinging with a loud Voice, Salve feſta dies, &c. Next them followed the Biſhop of Cheſter, about him went Ormanet and his Fellow-Commiſſioners, with the Maſters of the Colleges, bearing every Man a long Taper lighted in his Hand. After whom, a little Space off, followed other Degrees of the Univerſity. Laſtly came the Mayor and his Townſmen. Before them all went the Beadles, crying to ſuch as they met, that they ſhould bow themſelves humbly before the Hoſt. If any refuſed ſo to do, they threatned to ſend them forthwith to the Tolbooth. Their God being led with this Pomp, and pacified with great ſacrificed Hoſts of Bucer and Phagius, at length ſettled himſelf again in his accuſtomed room.

The Order of Proceſſion in Cambridge.

Dr. Scot Biſhop of Cheſter prayed with many Words, that that Day might be lucky and fortunate to himſelf, and to all that were preſent, sent, and that from that Day forward (now that God's Wrath was appeased, and all other Things set in good Order) all Men should make themselves conformable to Peace and Quietness, namely, in Matters pertaining to Religion.

After this they bestowed a few Days in punishing and amercing such as they thought had deserved it. Some they suspended from giving Voices either to their own Preferment, or to the Preferment of any other. Some they forbade to have the Charge of Pupils, lest they should infect the tender Youth (being pliable to take what Print soever should be laid upon them) with corrupt Doctrine and Heresy, others they chastised wrongfully without any Desert, and many a one they punished, contrary to all Right and Reason.

The Decrees of the Inquisitors.

Last of all they set forth certain Statutes, by which they would have the University hereafter ordered. Wherein they enacted many Things, as concerning the Election of their Officers of their University, of keeping and administring the Goods of the University, and of many other Things. But especially they handled the Matter very circumspectly for Religion. In which they were so scrupulous, that they replenished all Things either with open Blasphemy or with ridiculous Superstition. For they prescribed at how many Masses every Man should be Day by Day, and how many Pater Nosters and Ave's every Man should say when he should enter into the Church; and in his Entrance, after what Sort he should bow himself to the Altar, and how to the Master of the House, what he should do there, and how long he should tarry, how many, and what Prayers he should say, what, and how he should sing, what Meditations others should use while the Priest is in his Memento, mumbling secretly to himself, what Time of the Mass a Man should stand, and when he should sit down, when he should make Courtesy, when exclusively, when inclusively, and many other superstitious Toys they decreed, that it was a Sport then to behold their Superstitions, and were tedious now to recite them.

Moreover these Masters of good Order, for Fashion sake, ordained that every Man should put on a Surplice, not torn nor worn, but clean, forbidding them in any wise to wipe their Noses thereon.

Ormanet and Cole made Doctors.

These Things thus set at a Stay, when the Commissioners were now ready to go their Ways, the University for so great Benefits coveting to shew some Token of Courtesy towards them again, dignified Ormanet and Cole with the Degree of Doctorship; for all the rest, saving Christopherson, who now, by reason he was elected Bishop, preventing that Degree, had received that Order before. Thus at length were sent away these Peacemakers, that came to pacify Strifes and Quarrels, who through provoking every Man to accuse one another, left such Gaps and Breaches in Mens Hearts at their Departure, that they could never be joyned together again.

Forasmuch as mention hath been made of the Death of the worthy and famous Clerk Martin Bucer, and of the Burning of his Bones after his Death, it will not be improper here to insert the Funeral Verse of Dr. Redman upon Bucer's Death, now translated into English.

The Epitaph or Funeral Verse of Dr. Redman, upon the Death of Bucer.

Anno 1557.

HENCE, O far hence let Envy fly,
Nor be Revenge nor Mock'ry nigh:
The lying Lips and faithless Mind,
Let here no Rest or Refuge find.
These from the Man God's Image take,
And him more like the Devils make.
But Holy Truth be present here,
Thou Virgin everlasting fair.
And to the inquiring many show,
From whence proceeds this Scene of Woe.
Bucer, who lead the Church before,
Bucer, that Light of Learning, is no more;
As the Sun glides the World around,
So he in Learning's Orb was found.
The Morning Schools his Loss confess,
But who can Cambridge's Grief express?
High as the Stars her Sighs ascend,
Lamenting thus her wonted Friend:
No more shall we a Master find,
Like him so just, like him so kind:
Whose exemplary Life was fraught,
With all the Virtues which he taught:
His Rest so small, Labour so great,
Nature sunk down beneath the Weight,
And yielded to Death's fatal Power,
Before his short appointed Hour.
But stop, my Muse, thy Labour's vain,
Thy Lines can't half his Praise contain:
Then farewel Bucer, thy Remains,
An humble Sepulchre retains,
'Till the Great Judge of all shall come,
And pass his universal Doom:
Then he thy Body will restore,
More glorious than it was before.
'Till when thy Soul amongst the Blest remains,
There happily thou liv'st, there happily thou reigns.

The despiteful Handling and Madness of the Papists towards Peter Martyr's Wife at Oxford, taken up from her Grave at the Command of Cardinal Poole, and afterwards buried in a Dunghil.

AND becaufe one University should not mock the other, like Cruelty was also declared upon the dead Body of Peter-Martyr's Wife at Oxford, an honest, grave and sober Matron while she lived, and always a great Helper of poor People, as many dwelling there can testify.

In the Year of our Lord 1552, she departed this Life, with great Sorrow of all those needy Persons, whose Necessities many Times and often she had liberally eased and relieved. Now when Brooks Bishop of Glocester, Nicholas Ormanet, Datary, Robert Morwen President of Corpus Christi College, Cole and Wright Doctors of the Civil Law, came thither as the Cardinal's Visitors, they among other Things had in Commission to take up this good Woman again out of her Grave, and to consume her Carcase with Fire, not doubting but that she was of the same Religion that her Husband had professed before, when he read the King's Lecture there. And to make a Shew that they would do nothing disorderly, they cal-

Anno 1557. led all thoſe before them that had any Acquaintance with her or her Husband. They adminiſtred an Oath unto them, that they ſhould not conceal whatſoever was demanded. In fine, their Anſwer was, that they knew not what Religion ſhe was of, by reaſon they underſtood not her Language.

To be ſhort, after theſe Viſitors had ſped their Buſineſs they came for, they went to the Cardinal again, certifying him that upon due Inquiſition made, they could learn nothing upon which by the Law they might burn her. Notwithſtanding the Cardinal did not leave the Matter ſo, but wrote down his Letters a good while after to Marſhall, then Dean of Frideſwides, that he ſhould dig her up, and lay her out of Chriſtian Burial, becauſe ſhe was interred nigh unto St. Frideſwide's Relicks, ſometime had in great Reverence in that College. Dr. Marſhall calling his Spades and Mattocks together in the Evening, when he was well whitled, cauſed her to be taken up and buried in a Dunghil.

Peter Martyr's Wife's Bones taken out of her Grave and buried in a Dunghil.

Howbeit, when it pleaſed God under good Queen Elizabeth to give Quietneſs to his Church, long Time perſecuted with Priſon and Death, then Dr. Parker, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Edmund Grindall Biſhop of London, Richard Goodrick, with divers others her Majeſty's high Commiſſioners in Matters of Religion, willed certain of that College, in which this uncourteous Touch was attempted or done, to take her out of the Dunghil where ſhe lay, and ſolemnly in the Face of the whole Town to bury her again in a more decent Monument. For though the Body being once dead, no great Eſtimation were to be had, how or where the Bones were laid; yet was ſome Reverence to be uſed toward her for Sex and Womanhood Sake. Beſides, to ſay the Truth, it was great Shame, that he which had travelled ſo far at King Edward's Requeſt, from the Place wherein he dwelt quietly and had taken ſo earneſt Pains, being an old Man, in reading and ſetting forth the Truth all he could, with learning to teach and inſtruct, and ſo well deſerved of that Univerſity; ſhould with ſo ungentlè a Recompence of Ingratitude be rewarded again, as to have his Wife that was a godly Woman, a Stranger, good to many, eſpecially to the Poor, and hurtful to none, either in Word or Deed, without juſt deſerving, and beſide their own Law, not proceeding againſt her according to the Order thereof, ſpitefully to be laid in a ſtinking Dunghil.

Great Ingratitude ſhewed to Peter Martyr.

To all good Natures the Fact ſeemed odious, and of ſuch as be indued with Humanity, utterly to be abhorred. Wherefore Mr. Calfield, then Sub-dean of the College, diligently provided, that from Marſhall's Dunghill ſhe was reſtored and tranſlated to her proper Place again, yea, and withal coupled her with Frideſwide's Bones, that in caſe any Cardinal will be ſo mad hereafter to remove this Woman's Bones again, it ſhall be hard for them to diſcern the Bones of her from the other. And to the Intent the ſame might be notified to the Minds of Men the better, the next Day after, which was Sunday, Mr. Rogerſon preached unto the People, in which Sermon by the way he declared the rough Dealing of the Adverſaries, which not contented to practiſe their Cruelty againſt the Living, but they muſt alſo rage againſt one that was dead, and had lain two Years in her Grave. God grant them once to ſee their own Wickedneſs. Amen.

An Account of Ten Martyrs condemned and burnt within the Dioceſe of Canterbury.

MEntion has been already made of the Perſecution in Kent: Where we declared that 15 were impriſoned and condemned in the Caſtle of Canterbury. Of which 15 we declared five to be famiſhed to death within the ſaid Caſtle, and buried by the High-way, about the beginning of November. The other ten in January 1557, were committed unto the Fire, and there conſumed to Aſhes, by Thornton Suffragan of Dover, and Nicholas Harpsfield Archdeacon of Canterbury.

Their Names be theſe: John Philpot of Tenterden, William Waterer of Beddingden, Stephen Kempe of Norgate, William Hay of Hithe, Thomas Hudſon of Salenge, Matt. Bradbridge of Tenterden, Thomas Stephens of Beddingden, Nich. Final of Tenterden, W. Lowick of Cranbroke, W. Prowting of Thornham.

Of theſe ten godly Martyrs, ſix were burnt at Canterbury about the 15th of January, that is, Kempe, Waterer, Prowting, Lowick, Hudſon and Haye. Other two, Stephens and Philpot at Wye, about the ſame Month. The other two, Final and Bradbridge, were burnt together at Aſhford the 16th of the ſame.

What the ordinary Articles were that were commonly objected to them of Canterbury Dioceſs is before rehearſed, ſave only that to ſome of theſe, as to them that follow after, as the Time of their Perſecution did grow, ſo their Articles withal did increaſe to the Number of two and twenty, containing ſuch like Matter as ſeemed to the Maintenance of the Romiſh See.

Their Anſwers likewiſe to theſe Articles need not to be rehearſed, ſeeing they all agreed together, tho' not in the ſame Form of Words, yet to the ſame Effect, &c.

The next Month following, which was February, came out another bloody Commiſſion from the King and Queen, to kindle up the Fire of Perſecution, as though it were not hot enough already; the Contents of which Commiſſion I thought here not to omit; not for lack of Matter, whereof I have too much; but that the Reader may underſtand how Kings and Princes of this World, like as in the firſt Perſecutions of the primitive Church under Valerian, Decus, Maximinian, Diocleſian, Licinius, &c. ſo now alſo in theſe latter perilous Days, have ſet out all their main Force and Power, with Laws, Policy and Authority to the uttermoſt they could deviſe againſt Chriſt and his Goſpel. And yet notwithſtanding all theſe Laws, Conſtitutions, Injunctions, and terrible Proclamations provided againſt Chriſt and his Goſpel, Chriſt yet ſtill continueth, his Goſpel flouriſheth, and Truth pervaileth; Kings and Emperors in their own Purpoſes overthrown, their Devices diſſolved, their Counſels confounded; as Examples both of this and of all Times and Ages do make manifeſt. But now let us hear the Intent of this Commiſſion, in Tenor as followeth.

Examples how Kings and Princes, and the Power of the World band themſelves againſt Chriſt and his Word, and yet could never prevail.

A bloody Commiſſion given forth by King Philip and Queen Mary, to perſecute the poor Members of Chriſt.

And alſo to enquire and ſearch out all ſuch Perſons as obſtinately do refuſe to receive the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar, to hear Maſs, or to come to their Pariſh Churches, or other convenient Places appointed for divine Service, and all ſuch as refuſe to go on Proceſſion, to take holy Bread or holy Water, or otherwiſe do miſuſe themſelves in any Church or other hallowed Place, whereſoever any of the ſame Offences have been, or hereafter ſhall be committed within this our ſaid Realm.

Nevertheleſs, Our Will and Pleaſure is, that when, and as often as any Perſon or Perſons hereafter being called or convented before you, do obſtinately perſiſt, or ſtand in any manner of Hereſy, or heretical Opinion, that then ye, or three of you do immediately take Order, that the ſame Perſon or Perſons, ſo ſtanding or perſiſting, be delivered or committed to his Ordinary, there to be uſed according to the ſpiritual and eccleſiaſtical Laws.

And alſo We give unto you, or three of you, full Power and Authority, to enquire and ſearch out all Vagabonds, and maſterleſs Men, Barretours, Quarrellers, and ſuſpected Perſons, abiding within Our City of London, and ten Miles Compaſs of the ſame, and all Aſſaults and Affrays done and committed within the ſame City and Compaſs.

And further to ſearch out all Waſtes, Decays, and Ruins of Churches, Chancels, Chapels, Parſonages, and Vicarages in the Dioceſs of the ſame, being within this Realm, giving you, and every of you full Power and Authority by Virtue hereof to hear and determine the ſame, and all other Offences and Matters above ſpecify'd and rehearſed, according to your Wiſdoms, Conſciences, and Diſcretions, willing and commanding you, or three of you, from Time to Time, to uſe and deviſe all ſuch politick Ways and Means, for the Trial and ſearching out of the Premiſſes, as by you, or three of you, ſhall be thought moſt expedient and neceſſary: And upon Enquiry and due Proof had, known, perceived, and tried out, by the Confeſſion of the Parties, or by ſufficient Witneſſes before you, or three of you, concerning the Premiſſes or any part thereof, or by any other Ways or Means requiſite, to give and award ſuch Puniſhment to the Offenders, by Fine, Impriſonment, or otherwiſe, and to take ſuch Order for Redreſs and Reformation of the Premiſſes, as to your Wiſdoms, or three of you ſhall be thought meet and convenient.

Further willing and commanding you and every three of you, in caſe you ſhall find any Perſon or Perſons obſtinate or diſobedient, either in their Appearance before you, or three of you at your Calling or Aſſignment, or elſe in not accompliſhing, or not obeying your Decrees, Orders and Commandments in any Thing or Things, touching the Premiſſes or any Part thereof, to commit the ſame Perſon or Perſons ſo offending to ward, there to remain, till by you, or three of you he be diſcharged or delivered, &c.

Inventy Invo Prisoners brought in one Band from Colchester to London.

Hulett Sculp.

Anno 1557. Day of February, in the third and fourth Years of the Reign of the King and Queen, theſe new Inquiſitors, eſpecially ſome of them, began to ruffle, and to take upon them not a little; ſo that all Quarters were full of Perſecution, and Priſons almoſt full of Priſoners; namely, in the Dioceſs of Canterbury, whereof we will ſpeak more anon.

Perſecution about Colcheſter. In the mean Time, about the Town of Colcheſter, the Wind of Perſecution began fiercely to riſe; inſomuch that three and twenty together, Men and Women, were apprehended at one Clap; of which Number, one eſcaped; the other twenty two were driven up like a Flock of Chriſtian Lambs to London, with two or three Leaders with them at moſt, ready to give their Skins to be plucked off for the Goſpel's ſake. Notwithſtanding the Biſhops, afraid belike of the Number, to put ſo many at once to death, ſought Means to deliver them, and ſo they did, drawing out a very eaſy Submiſſion for them, or rather ſuffering them to draw it out themſelves; notwithſtanding divers of them were afterward taken again and ſuffered, as ye ſhall hear hereafter.

The Order of bringing 22 Priſoners to London. Such as met them by the Way coming up, ſaw them in the Fields ſcattering in ſuch Sort, as that they might eaſily have eſcaped away. And when they entered into the Towns, their Keepers called them again into Aray, to go two and two together, having a Band or Line going between them, they holding the ſame in their Hands, every one having another Cord about his Arm, as tho' they were tied. And ſo were theſe fourteen Men and eight Women carried up to London, the People by the way praying to God for them, to give them Strength. At their entering into London they were pinioned, and ſo came into the City, as the Picture doth deſcribe. But firſt let us declare concerning their being taken and their Attachers, contained in the Commiſſary's Letter written to Bonner; then, the Indenture made between the Commiſſioners and the popiſh Commiſſary. The Letter of the Commiſſary is this:

AFTER my Duty done in receiving and accompliſhing your honourable and moſt loving Letters, dated Auguſt 7: Be it known unto your Lordſhip, that the 28th of Auguſt, the Lord of Oxenford, Lord Darcy, H. Tyrel, A Brown, W. Bendlows, E. Tyrel, R. Weſton, R. Appleton, publiſhed their Commiſſion, to ſeize the Lands, Tenements and Goods of the Fugitives, ſo that the Owners ſhould have neither Uſe nor Advantage thereof, but by Inventory remain in ſafe Keeping, until the Cauſe were determined.

And alſo there was likewiſe proclaimed the Queen's Warrant for the Reſtitution of the Church Goods within Colcheſter, and the Hundreds thereabout, to the Uſe of God's Service. And then were called the Pariſhes particularly, and the Hereticks partly committed to my Examination. And that divers Perſons ſhould certify me of the Ornaments of their Churches, betwixt this and the Juſtices next Appearance, which ſhall be on Michaelmas next. And the Pariſhes which had preſented at two ſeveral Times, to have all Ornaments with other Things in good Order, were exonerated for ever, till they were warned again, and others to make their Appearance from Time to Time. And thoſe Names blotted in the Indenture, were indicted for Treaſon, Fugitives, or Diſobedients, and were put forth by Mr. Brown's Commandment. And before the ſealing, my Lord Darcy ſaid unto me apart, and Mr. Bendlows, that I ſhould have ſufficient Time to ſend unto your Lordſhip, yea, if Need were, the Hereticks to remain in Durance till I had an Anſwer from you, yea, till the Lord Legate Graces Commiſſioners come into the Country.

And Mr. Brown came unto my Lord Darcy's Houſe and Parlour belonging unto Mr. Barnaby, before my ſaid Lord and all the Juſtices, and laid his Hand on my Shoulder, with a ſmiling Countenance, and deſired me to make his hearty Commendations to your good Lordſhip, and asked me if I would: And I ſaid, Yea, with a good Will. Wherefore I was glad, and thought that I ſhould not have been charged with ſo ſudden Carriage.

But after Dinner, the Juſtices counſelled with the Bailiffs, and with the Jaylers, and then after took me into them, and made Collation of the Indentures, and ſealed them; and then Mr. Brown commanded me this Afternoon, being the 30th of Auguſt, to go and receive my Priſoners by and by. And then I ſaid, it is an unreaſonable Commandment, for that I have attended on you here theſe three Days, and this Sunday early I have ſent home my Men. Wherefore I deſire you to have a convenient Time appointed, wherein I may know, whether it will pleaſe my Lord my Maſter to ſend his Commiſſioners hither, or that I ſhall make Carriage of them unto his Lordſhip. Then Mr. Brown ſaid, We are certified that the Council have written to your Maſter to make Speed, and to rid theſe Priſoners out of Hand: Therefore go receive your Priſoners in Haſte. I anſwered, Sir, I ſhall receive them within theſe ten Days. Then Mr. Brown ſaid, The Limitation lieth in us, and not in you, wherefore get you hence.

I replied, Sir, ye have indicted and delivered me by this Indenture, whoſe Faith or Opinions I knew not, truſting that ye will grant me a Time to examine them, leſt I ſhould puniſh the Catholicks. Well, ſaid Mr. Brown, for that Cauſe ye ſhall have Time betwixt this and Wedneſday. And I ſay unto you, Mr. Bailiffs, if he do not receive them at your Hands on Wedneſday, ſet open your Door, and let them go.

Then I ſaid, My Lord, and Maſters all, I promiſe to diſcharge the Town and Country of theſe Hereticks within theſe ten Days. The Lord Darcy anſwered, Commiſſary, we do and muſt all agree in one. Wherefore do ye receive them on or before Wedneſday.

To which I replied, My Lord, the laſt I carried, I was going betwixt the Caſtle and St. Katherine's Chappel two Hours and a half, and in great Preſs and Danger: Wherefore this may be to deſire your Lordſhip, to give in Commandment unto Mr. Sayer, my Bailiff, here preſent, to aid me through his Liberties, not only with Men and Weapons, but that the Town-clerk may be ready there with his Book to write the Names of the moſt buſy Perſons, and this upon three Hours Warning; all which both my Lord and Mr. Brown commanded.

What ado is here with the Butchers to bring the poor Lambs to the Shambles?

The 31ſt of Auguſt, William Goodwin of Muchbirch, Husbandman, this Bringer, and Tho. Alſey of Copford, your Lordſhip's Apparator of your Conſiſtory in Colcheſter, covenanted with me, that they ſhould hire two other Men at the leaſt, whereof one ſhould be a Bow-man, to come to me the next Day about two of the Clock in the Afternoon, ſo that I might recite this Bargain before Mr. Archdeacon, and pay the Money, that is, forty ſix Shillings and eight Pence. Wherefore they ſhould then go forth with me unto Colcheſter, and on Wedneſday before three of the Clock in the Morning receive there at my Hand within the Caſtle and Mote-hall, 14 Men and 8 Women, bound with Cords and Fetters, and drive, carry, or lead and feed with Meat and Drink, as Hereticks ought to be found continually, unto ſuch Time that the ſaid Goodwin and Alſey ſhall cauſe the ſaid two and twenty Perſons to be delivered unto my Lord of London's Officers, and within the ſafe Keeping of my ſaid Lord, and then to bring unto me again the ſaid Fetters, with a perfect Token of or from my ſaid Lord, and then this Covenant is void, or elſe, &c.

Twenty two poor Priſoners in Bonds for Chriſt and his Word.

Mr. Bendlows ſaid unto me in my Lord of Oxenford's Chamber at the King's-Head, after I had ſaid Maſs before the Lords, that on the Morrow after Holy-Rood Day, when we ſhall meet at Chelmsford for the Diviſion of theſe Lands, I think Mr. Archdeacon, you, and Mr. Smith, ſhall be fain to ride with certain of the Jury to thoſe Portions and Manors in your Part of Eſſex, and in like Caſe divide yourſelves, to tread and view the Ground with the Queſt, or elſe I think they will not labour the Matter, and ſo do you ſay unto Mr. Archdeacon.

Alice the Wife of William Walley of Colcheſter, hath ſubmitted herſelf, abjured her erroneous Opinions, asked Abſolution, promiſed to do her ſolemn Penance in her Pariſh Church at St. Peter's on Sunday next, and to continue a Catholick and faithful Woman, as long as God ſhall ſend her Life. And for theſe Covenants her Husband ſtandeth bound in five Pounds. Which Alice is one of the nine Women of this your Indenture, and ſhe is big with Child. Wherefore ſhe remaineth at Home, and this done in the Preſence of the Bailiffs, Aldermen, and Town-clerk. And becauſe Mr. Brown was certified there was no Curate at Lexdon, he enquired who was the former? The Anſwer was made, Sir Francis Jobſon. Who is the Parſon? They of the Queſt-men anſwered, Sir Roger Ghoſtlow. When was he with you? Not theſe Fourteen Years. How is your Cure ſerved? now and then. Who is the Patron? My Lord of Arundel. And within ſhort Time after, Sir Francis Jobſon came with great Courteſy unto my Lord Darcy's Place. And of all Gentlemen about us, I ſaw no more come in.

Sir Robert Smith Prieſt, ſometime Canon of Bridlington, now Curate of Appledoore in the Wild of Kent, came to Colcheſter the 28*th* Day of Auguſt, with his Wife big with Child, of late divorced, taken on Suſpicion, examined by the Lords, and Mr. Brown told me that they have received Letters from the Council for the Attachment of certain Perſons, and eſpecially of one Prieſt, whoſe Name is Pullen (but his right Name is Smith) doubting this Prieſt to be the ſaid Pullen, although neither he nor his Wife would confeſs the ſame.

Wherefore he lieth ſtill in Priſon, but ſurely this is not Pullen. If it pleaſe your Lordſhip to have in Remembrance, that the Houſholders might be compelled to bring every Man his own Wife to her own Seat in the Church in Time of divine Service, it would profit much. And alſo there be yet ſtanding Hoſpitals, and others of like Foundation about Colcheſter, which I have not known to appear at any Viſitation, as the Maſters and Lazars of Mary Magdalen in Colcheſter, the Proctor of St. Katherine's Chappel in Colcheſter, the Hoſpital or Breadhouſe of the Foundation of the Lord H. Harney in Laremarky, the Hoſpital and Beadman of Little Horkſley. Thus preſuming on your Lordſhip's Goodneſs, I am more than bold ever to trouble you with this worldly Buſineſs, beſeeching Almighty God to ſend your honourable Lordſhip a condign Reward. Anno 1557.

From Eaſtthorp this preſent 30*th Day of* Auguſt.

We found a Letter concerning the Marriage of Prieſts in the Hands of the aforeſaid Sir Robert Smith. Alſo I deſired Mr. Brown, the Doer of all Things, to require the Audience to bring in their unlawful Writings and Books; who asked me, If I had proclaimed the Proclamation? I ſaid, Yea. Then he ſaid openly upon the Bench, that they ſhould be proclaimed once every Quarter. And then take the Conſtables and Officers, and they alone take and puniſh the Offenders accordingly.

By your poor Beadman,

John Kingſton, Prieſt.

An Indenture made between the Lords and Juſtices within ſpecify'd, and Bonner's Commiſſary, concerning the Delivery of the Priſoners above-named.

The twenty two aforeſaid Priſoners thus ſent from Colcheſter to London, were brought at length to Biſhop Bonner: Concerning whom Bonner himſelf writeth to Cardinal Poole, in the following Manner.

A Letter of Biſhop Bonner to Cardinal Poole.

MAY it pleaſe your Grace, with my moſt humble Obedience, Reverence, and Duty, to underſtand, that going to London upon Thurſday laſt, and thinking to be troubled with Mr. Germaine's Matter only, and ſuch other common Matters as are accuſtomed, enough to weary a right ſtrong Body, I had the Day following to comfort my Stomach withal, Letters from Colcheſter, that either that Day or the Day following, I ſhould have ſent thence twenty two Hereticks, indicted before the Commiſſioners, and indeed ſo I had, and compelled to bear their Charges as I did of the others, both of which coſt me above twenty Nobles, a Sum of Money that I thought full evil beſtow'd. And theſe Hereticks notwithſtanding they had honeſt Catholick Keepers to conduct and bring them up to me, and in all the Way from Colcheſter to Stratford-Bow did go quietly and obediently, yet coming to Stratford they began to take Heart of Grace, and to do as pleaſed themſelves, for they began to have their Guard, which generally increaſed till they came to Aldgate, where they were lodged Friday Night.

And albeit I took Order that the ſaid Heretieks ſhould be with me very early on Saturday Morning, to the Intent they might quietly come and be examined by me; yet it was between ten and eleven of the Clock before they would come, and no Way would they take but through Cheapſide, ſo that they were brought to my Houſe with about a thouſand Perſons. Which Thing I took very ſtrange, and ſpake to Sir John Greſſam then being with me, to tell the Mayor and the Sheriffs that this Thing was not well ſuffered in the City. Theſe naughty Hereticks all the Way they came through Cheapſide, both exhorted the People to their Part, and had much Comfort from the promiſcuous Multitude; and being entered into my Houſe, and talked withal, they ſhewed themſelves deſperate, and very obſtinate; yet I uſed all the honeſt Means I could, both of myſelf and others, to have won them, cauſing divers learned Men to talk with them; and finding nothing in them but Pride and Wilfulneſs, I thought to have had them all hither to Fulham, and here to give Sentence againſt them. Nevertheleſs, perceiving by my laſt Doing that your Grace was offended, I thought it my Duty before I any Thing further proceeded herein, to advertiſe firſt your Grace hereof, and know your good Pleaſure, which I beſeech your Grace I may do by this truſty Bearer. And thus moſt humbly I take my Leave of your good Grace, beſeeching Almighty God always to preſerve the ſame. At Fulham, Anno 1556.

Your Grace's moſt bounden Beadſman and Servant,
Edmund Bonner.

By this Letter of Biſhop Bonner to the Cardinal, is to be underſtood, what good Will was in this Biſhop to have the Blood of theſe Men, and to have paſs'd with Sentence of Condemation againſt them, had not the Cardinal ſomewhat (as it ſeemed) ſtay'd his fervent Headineſs. Concerning which Cardinal, although it cannot be deny'd by his Acts and Writings, but that he was a profeſſed Enemy, and no otherwiſe to be reputed but for a Papiſt: Yet again it is to be ſuppoſed, that he was none of the bloody and cruel Sort of Papiſts, as may appear not only by ſtaying the Rage of this Biſhop, but alſo by the ſollicitous Writing, and long Letters written to Cranmer, alſo by the Complaints of certain Papiſts accuſing him to the Pope, to be a Bearer with the Hereticks, and by the Pope's Letters ſent to him upon the ſame, calling him up to Rome, and ſetting Friar Peto in his Place, had not Queen Mary by ſpecial Intreaty, kept him out of the Pope's Danger. All which Letters I have (if Need be) to ſhew: And beſides alſo, that is thought of him that toward his latter End a little before his coming from Rome to England, he began ſomewhat to favour the Doctrine of Luther, and was no leſs ſuſpected at Rome: Yea, and furthermore, did there at Rome convert a certain learned Spaniard from Popery to Luther's Side; notwithſtanding the Pomp and Glory of the World afterward carried him away to play the Papiſt thus as he did. But of this Cardinal enough.

Bonner's Cruelty ſomewhat ſtayed by Cardinal Poole.

Cardinal Poole half ſuſpected for a Lutheran at Rome.

To return now to this godly Company again, firſt how they were brought up in Bands to London, ye have heard; alſo how Bonner was about to have read the Sentence of Death upon them, and how he was ſtayed by the Cardinal, ye underſtand. As touching their Confeſſion, which they articled up in Writing, it were too tedious to recite, but we ſhall inſert this ſhort Supplication to the Commiſſioners, requiring that Juſtice might be adminiſtred unto them.

A Supplication of the Priſoners to the Judges.

TO the right honourable Audience, before whom theſe our ſimple Writings, and the Confeſſion of our Faith ſhall come to be heard or ſeen, we poor Priſoners being faſt in Bonds upon the Trial of our Faith, which we offer to be tried by the Scriptures, pray moſt heartily, that foraſmuch as God hath given you Power and Strength over us as concerning our Bodies, under whom we ſubmit ourſelves as obedient Subjects in all Things due, ye being Officers and Rulers of the People, may execute true Judgment, keep the Laws of Righteouſneſs, govern the People according to right, and hear the Poor and Helpleſs in Truth, and defend their Cauſe.

God for his Son Jeſus Chriſt's ſake, give you the Wiſdom and Underſtanding of Solomon, David, Hezekiah, Moſes, with divers other moſt virtuous Rulers, by whoſe Wiſdom and moſt godly Underſtanding, the People were juſtly ruled and governed in the Fear of God, all Wickedneſs was by them overthrown and beaten down, and all Godlineſs and Virtue did flouriſh and ſpring. O God which art the moſt Higheſt, the Creator and Maker of all Things, and of all Men both great and ſmall, and careſt for all alike, who doſt try all Mens Works and Imaginations, before whoſe Judgment Seat ſhall come both High and Low, Rich and Poor; we moſt humbly beſeech thee to put into our Rulers Hearts the pure Love and Fear of thy Name, that even as they themſelves would be judged, and as they ſhall make Anſwer before thee, ſo they may hear our Cauſes, judge with Mercy, and read over theſe our Requeſts and Confeſſions of our Faith, with Deliberation and a godly Judgment.

And if any Thing here ſeemeth to your honourable Audience to be erroneous or diſagreeing to the Scripture, if it ſhall pleaſe your Lordſhips to hear us patiently, which do offer ourſelves to the Scriptures, thereby to make Anſwer, and to be tried, in ſo doing we poor Subjects being in much Captivity and Bondage, are moſt bound to pray for your noble Eſtate and long Preſervation.

The Requeſt of theſe Men being ſo juſt, and their Doctrine ſo ſound, yet all this could not prevail with the Biſhop and other Judges, but that Sentence ſhould have proceeded againſt them immediately, had not the Goodneſs of the Lord better provided for his Servants, than the Biſhop had intended. For as they were now under the Edge of the Ax, ready to be condemned by Sentence, it was thought otherwiſe by the Cardinal, and ſome other wiſer Heads; fearing belike, leſt by the Death of ſo many together, ſome Diſturbance might riſe peradventure among the People; and ſo it was decreed among themſelves, that they ſhould rather make ſome Submiſſion or Confeſſion, ſuch as they would themſelves, and ſo be ſent Home again, as they were indeed; howbeit divers of them were afterward apprehended and put to Death. But in the mean Space as touching their Submiſſion which they made, this it was as in Form here followeth:

The Submiſſion or Confeſſion of the aforeſaid Priſoners.

BEcauſe our Saviour Chriſt at his laſt Supper took Bread, and when he had given Thanks, he brake it, and gave it unto his Diſciples, and ſaid, Take eat, this is my Body which is given for you, this do in Remembrance of me. Therefore according to the Words of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, we do believe in the Sacrament to be Chriſt's Body. And likewiſe he took the Cup, gave Thanks, and gave it to his Diſciples, and ſaid, This is my Blood of the New Teſtament which is ſhed for many. Anno 1557.

Therefore likewiſe we do believe that it is the Blood of Chriſt, according as Chriſt's Church doth adminiſter the ſame. Unto which catholick Church of Chriſt we do in this like as in all other Matters ſubmit ourſelves, promiſing therein to live as it becometh good chriſtian Men, and here in this Realm to uſe ourſelves as it becometh faithful Subjects unto our moſt gracious King and Queen, to all other Superiors both Spiritual and Temporal, according to our bounden Duties.

Theſe Names of thoſe who ſubſcribed to this Submiſſion, were theſe,

The Story of five godly Martyrs, burnt at one Fire in Smithfield, on the 12th Day of April, 1557.

TO proceed further in this Hiſtory of perſecuted Martyrs, next in order follow theſe five, namely,

Thomas Loſeby.
Henry Ramſey.
Thomas Thirtel.
Margaret Hide,
and Agnes Stanley.

Who being, ſome by the Lord Rich, ſome by other Juſtices of Peace, and Conſtables (their own Neighbours) at the firſt accuſed and apprehended for not coming to their Pariſh Churches, were in the End ſent unto Bonner Biſhop of London, and by his Commandment, the 27*th* Day of January were examined before Dr. Darbiſhire, then Chancellor to the ſaid Biſhop, upon the former general Articles mentioned.

Anſwers to the Articles.

WHOSE Anſwers thereunto were, that as they confeſſed there was one true and Catholick Church, whereof they ſtedfaſtly believed, and thought the Church of Rome to be no Part or Member: So in the ſame Church they believed there were but two Sacraments, that is to ſay, Baptiſm, and the Supper of the Lord. Howbeit, ſome of them attributed the Title and Honour of a Sacrament to the holy Eſtate of Matrimony, which undoubtedly was done rather out of ſimple Ignorance than of any wilful Opinion, and are thereof to be adjudged as before is admoniſhed.

Moreover, they acknowledged themſelves to be baptized into the Faith of that true Church, as in the third Article is ſpecify'd. And here in reading, as well of theſe Articles, as alſo of the reſt, mark I beſeech you, the crafty Subtilty of theſe Catholick Companions, who intermixing certain Points of Faith, and of the true Church, with the idolatrous latrous and ſuperſtitious Maumetry of their Romiſh Synagogue, becauſe the poor and ſimple People, for lack of Knowledge, oftentimes to fall into their crafty Nets.

For after they have made them grant a true Church, with the Sacraments of the ſame, tho' not in ſuch Number as they would have them, and alſo that they were chriſtened into the Faith thereof, that is, In the Name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghoſt, they craftily now in their other Objections, deſcending, as it were, from the Faith of the Trinity unto their idolatrous Maſs and other ſuperſtitious Ceremonies, would make them grant, that now in denying thereof they have ſevered themſelves from the Faith of the true Church, whereinto they were baptized, which is moſt falſe: For tho' the true Light of God's Goſpel and holy Word, was marvellouſly darkened, and in a Manner utterly extinguiſhed, yet the true Faith of the Trinity, by the merciful Providence of God, was ſtill preſerved, and into the Faith thereof were we baptized, and not into the Belief and Profeſſion of their horrible Idolatry and vain Ceremonies.

Theſe Things not thoroughly weigh'd by theſe poor, yet faithful and true Members of Chriſt, cauſed ſome of them ignorantly to grant, that when they came to the Years of Diſcretion, and underſtood the Light of the Goſpel, they did ſeparate themſelves from the Faith of the Church, meaning none other but only to ſeparate themſelves from admitting or allowing of ſuch their Popiſh and erroneous Traſh as they now had defiled the Church of Chriſt withal, and not from their Faith received in Baptiſm, which in expreſs Words in their Anſwers to the other Articles they conſtantly affirmed, declaring the Maſs and Sacrament of the Altar to be moſt wicked Blaſphemy againſt Jeſus Chriſt, and contrary to the Truth of his Goſpel, and therefore utterly they refuſed to aſſent unto, and to be reconciled again thereunto.

They who ſeparate themſelves from certain Traſh brought into the Church, do not ſeparate themſelves from the Church.

Theſe Anſwers in Effect of them thus taken by the ſaid Chancellor, they were for that Time diſmiſſed; but the Biſhop, taking the Matter into his own Hands, the 6th Day of March, propounded unto them certain other new Articles: The Copy whereof followeth:

Other Articles objected by Bonner Biſhop of London, againſt Thomas Loſeby, Henry Ramſey, Thomas Thirtell, Margaret Hide, and Agnes Stanley, the ſixth Day of March, being the ſecond Time of Examination.

1. FIRST, That thou haſt thought, believed, and ſpoken, within ſome Part of the City and Dioceſs of London, that the Faith, Religion, and eccleſiaſtical Service here obſerved and kept, as it is in the Realm of England, is not a true and a laudible Faith, Religion, and Service, eſpecially concerning the Maſs, and the ſeven Sacraments, nor is agreeable to God's Word, and Teſtament, and that thou canſt not find in thy Heart without murmuring, grudging, or ſcruple, to receive and uſe it, and to conform thyſelf unto it, as other Subjects of this Realm cuſtomably have done and do.

2. Item, That thou haſt thought, &c. that the Engliſh Service ſet forth in the Time of King Edward VI. here in this Realm of England, was and is good and godly, and Catholick in all Points, and that it alone ought here in this Realm to be received, uſed, and practiſed, and none other.

3. Item, Likewiſe thou haſt thought, &c. that thou art not bound to come to thy Pariſh Church, and there to be preſent, and hear Mattins, Maſs, Even-ſong, and other divine Service, ſung or ſaid there.

4. Item, Thou haſt thought, &c. that thou art not bound to come to Proceſſion to the Church upon Days and Times appointed, and to go in the ſame with others of the Pariſh, ſinging or ſaying then the accuſtomed Prayers uſed in the Church, nor to bear a Taper or Candle on Candlemaſs-day, nor take Aſhes upon Aſh-Wedneſday, nor bear Palms upon Palm-Sunday, nor to creep to the Croſs upon Days accuſtomed, nor to receive and kiſs the Pax at Maſs Time, nor to receive holy Water or holy Bread, nor to accept and allow the Ceremonies and Uſages of the Church, after the Manner and Faſhion as they are uſed in this Realm.

5. Thou haſt thought, &c. that thou art not bound at any Time to confeſs thy Sins to any Prieſt, and to receive Abſolution at his Hands, as God's Miniſter, nor to receive at any Time the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar, eſpecially as it is uſed in this Church of England.

6. Item, Thou haſt thought, &c. That in Matters of Religion and Faith, thou muſt follow and believe thine own Conſcience only, and not give Credit to the Determination and common Order of the Catholick Church, and the See of Rome, nor to any Member thereof.

7. Item, Thou haſt thought, &c. that all Things do chance of an abſolute and preciſe mere Neceſſity, ſo that whether a Man do well or evil, he could not chuſe but do ſo, and that therefore no Man hath any free Will at all.

8. Item, Thou haſt thought, &c. that the Faſhion and Manner of Chriſtening of Infants, is not agreeable to God's Word, and that none can be effectually baptized, and thereby ſaved, except he have Years of Diſcretion to believe himſelf, and ſo willingly accept or refuſe Baptiſm at his Pleaſure.

9. Item, Thou haſt thought, &c. that Prayers to Saints, or Prayers for the Dead, are not available, and not allowable by God's Word, or profitable in any wiſe, and that the Souls departed do ſtraightways go to Heaven or Hell, or elſe do ſleep till the Day of Doom, ſo that there is no place of Purgation at all.

10. Item, Thou haſt thought, &c. that all ſuch as in the Time of King Henry VIII, or in the Time of Queen Mary in England, have been burned as Hereticks, were no Hereticks at all, but faithful and good Chriſtian People; eſpecially Barnes, Garret, Jerome, Frith, Rogers, Hooper, Cardmaker, Latimer, Taylor, Bradford, Philpot, Cranmer, Ridley, and ſuch like; and that thou didſt and doſt allow, like, and approve all their Opinions, and doſt miſlike their Condemnations and Burnings.

11. Item, Thou haſt thought, &c. that faſting and Prayers uſed in this Church of England, and the appointing of Days for faſting, and the abſtaining from Fleſh upon Faſting-days, and eſpecially in the Time of Lent, is not laudable or allowable by God's Word, but is Hypocriſy and Fooliſhneſs; and that Men ought to have Liberty to eat at all Times all Kinds of Meat.

12. Item, Thou haſt taught, &c. that the Sacrament of the Altar is an Idol, and to reſerve and keep it, or to honour it, is plain Idolatry and Superſtition: And likewiſe of the Maſs and Elevation of the Sacrament.

13. Item. Thou haſt thought, &c. that thou or any elſe, convented before an eccleſiaſtical Judge concerning Matters of Belief and Faith, are not, nor is bound to make Anſwer at all eſpecially under an Oath upon a Book.

Their Anſwers to the Articles.

CONcerning the firſt, ſecond, third, fourth, fifth, ninth, tenth, and twelfth, they generally granted unto, ſaving that they denied the Souls of the departed to ſleep till the Day of Judgment, as is mentioned in the ninth Article.

And as concerning the ſixth Objection, they thought themſelves bound to believe the true Catholick Church, ſo far forth as the ſame doth inſtruct them according to God's holy Word, but not to follow the Determinations of the erroneous and Babylonical Church of Rome.

As for the ſeventh, eighth and thirteenth, they utterly denied, that ever they were of any ſuch abſurd Opinions as are contained therein, but that they granted that Man of himſelf, without the Help and Aſſiſtance of God's holy Spirit, hath no Power to do any good Thing acceptable in God's Sight.

To the eleventh they ſaid, that true faſting and Prayer, uſed according to God's Word, are allowable and available in his Sight, and that by the ſame Word every faithful Man may eat all Meats at all Times, with Thankſgiving to God for the ſame.

After this, the firſt Day of April, they were again convented before the Biſhop in his Palace at London, where little appeareth to be done, except it were to know whether they would ſtand to their Anſwers, and whether they would recant or no. But when they refuſed to recant, and deny the received and infallible Truth, the Biſhop cauſed them to be brought into the open Conſiſtory, the third Day of the ſame Month of April in the Forenoon, where firſt underſtanding by them their immutable Conſtancy and Stedfaſtneſs, he demanded particularly of every one what they had to ſay, why he ſhould not pronounce the Sentence of Condemnation.

Loſeby's Words to Biſhop Bonner.

To whom Thomas Loſeby firſt anſwered, God give me Grace and Strength to ſtand againſt you, and your Sentence, and alſo againſt your Law, which is a devouring Law, for it devoureth the Flock of Chriſt. And I perceive there is no Way with me but Death, except I would conſent to your devouring Law, and believe in that Idol the Maſs.

Thirtel's Words to the Biſhop.

Next unto him anſwered Thomas Thirtel, ſaying, My Lord, I ſay thus, if you make me an Heretick, then you make Chriſt and all the twelve Apoſtles Hereticks: For I am in the true Faith and right Belief, and I will ſtand in it, for I know full well I ſhall have eternal Life therefore.

The Biſhop then asked the like Queſtion of Henry Ramſey; who ſaid again, My Lord, will you have me to go from the Truth that I am in; I ſay unto you, that my Opinions be the very Truth, which I will ſtand unto, and not go from them: And I ſay unto you further, that there are two Churches upon the Earth, and we (meaning himſelf and other true Martyrs and Profeſſors of Chriſt) be of the true Church, and ye be not. Anno 1557. Ramſey's Words to Biſhop Bonner.

Unto this Queſtion next anſwered Margaret Hide, ſaying, My Lord, you have no Cauſe to give Sentence againſt me, for I am in the true Faith and Opinion, and will never forſake it; and I do wiſh that I were more ſtrong in it than I am. Margaret Hide's Words to the Biſhop.

Laſt of all anſwered Agnes Stanley, and ſaid, I had rather every Hair of my Head were burned, if it were never ſo much worth, than that I will forſake my Faith and Opinion, which is the true Faith. Agnes Stanley's Words to the Biſhop.

The Time being now ſpent, they were commanded to appear again in the Afternoon in the ſame Place: Which Commandment being obeyed, the Biſhop firſt called for Loſeby, and after his accuſtomed Manner ordered his Articles and Anſwers to be read: In reading whereof, when Mention was made of the Sacrament of the Altar, the Biſhop with his Collegues put off their Caps. Whereat Loſeby ſaid, My Lord, ſeeing you put off your Cap, I will put on my Cap; and therewithal did put on his Cap. And after the Biſhop continuing in his accuſtomed Perſuaſions, Loſeby again ſaid unto him, My Lord, I truſt I have the Spirit of Truth, which you deteſt and abhor, for the Wiſdom of God is Fooliſhneſs unto you. Whereupon the Biſhop pronounced the Sentence of Condemnation againſt him.

And delivering him unto the Sheriff, called for Margaret Hide, with whom he uſed the like Order of Exhortations. To whom ſhe ſaid, I will not depart from my Sayings till I be burned: And my Lord, quoth ſhe, I would ſee you inſtruct me with ſome part of God's Word, and not to give me Inſtructions of the holy Bread and holy Water, for it is no part of the Scripture.

But he, being neither himſelf, nor any of his, able rightly to accompliſh her Requeſt, to make ſhort Work, uſed his final Reaſon of Convincement, which was the Sentence of Condemnation. And therefore leaving her off, called for another, viz. Agnes Stanley, who upon the Biſhop's like Perſuaſions made this Anſwer:

My Lord, where you ſay I am an Heretick, I am none; neither yet will I believe you, nor any Man that is wiſe will believe as you do. And as for theſe that ye ſay be burnt for Hereſy, I believe are true Martyrs before God: Therefore I will not go from my Opinion and Faith as long as I live.

Her Talk thus ended, ſhe received the like Reward that the others had. And the Biſhop then turning his Tale and manner of Enticement unto Thomas Thirtell, received of him likewiſe this final Anſwer, My Lord, I will not hold with your idolatrous Ways, as you do: For I ſay, the Maſs is Idolatry, and will ſtick to my Faith and Belief, ſo long as the Breath is in my Body. Upon which Words he was alſo condemned as an Heretick.

Laſt of all Henry Ramſey was demanded if he would, as the reſt, ſtand unto his Anſwers, or elſe recanting the ſame, come home again, and be a Member of their Church. Whereunto he answered, I will not go from my Religion and Belief as long as I live; and my Lord (quoth he) your Doctrine is naught, for it is not agreeable to God's Word.

After these Words, the Bishop (to conclude) pronouncing the Sentence of Condemnation against him and the rest (as ye have heard) charged the Sheriffs of London with them: Who being thereunto commanded, the twelfth Day of the same Month of April, brought them into Smithfield, where all together in one Fire most joyfully and constantly they ended their temporal Lives, receiving therefore the Life eternal.

Three burned in St. George's Fields in Southwark.

IN the Month of May following, William Morant, Stephen Gratwick, —— King, suffered in St. George's Fields in Southwark.

Among other Histories of the persecuted and condemned Saints of God, I find the Condemnation of none more strange nor unlawful than of this Stephen Gratwick: Who first was condemned by the Bishop of Winchester and the Bishop of Rochester, who were not his Ordinaries.

Secondly, When he did appeal from these incompetent Judges to his right Ordinary, his Appeal could not be admitted.

Thirdly, When they had no other Shift to colour their inordinate Proceedings withal, they suborned one of the Priests to come in for a Counterfeit and a false Ordinary, and sit upon him.

Fourthly, Being openly convinced and overturned in his own Arguments, yet Dr. White the said Bishop of Winchester, neither would yield to the Force of Truth, nor suffer any of the audience Assistant once to say, God strengthen him.

Fifthly, As they brought in a false Ordinary to sit upon him, so they pretended false Articles against him which were no part of his Examinations, but of their devising, to have his Blood.

Sixthly and lastly, Having no other Ground nor just Matters against him, but only for saying these Words, That which I said, I have said, they read the Sentence of Death upon him.

And this was the Dealing of these Men, who needs will be reputed for Catholick Fathers of the Spiritualty, Succeeders of the Apostles, Disciples of Christ, Pillars of the holy Church, and Leaders of the People. Of whose Proceedings, how agreeable they are to the Example of Christ and his Apostles, I leave to discuss, referring the Judgment hereof to them who know the Institution of Christ's Religion and Doctrine.

Now lest peradventure the disordered Misrule of these Christmas Lords, will not be credited upon the simple Narration of the Story, ye shall hear the whole Discourse of this Process register'd by the Hand of the Martyr himself, who, as he could best tell what was done, so I am sure he would not testify otherwise than the Truth was, according as you shall hear by his own Declaration here following.

The Declaration of Stephen Gratwick concerning his own Story and Condemnation.

ON the 25th of May, in the Year 1557, I Stephen Gratwick came before Dr. White Bishop of Winchester, in St. George's Church in Southwark at eight of the Clock in the Morning, and then he called me before him, and said unto me:

Winchester. Stephen Gratwick, how standeth the Matter with thee now? Art thou contented to revoke thy Heresies, which thou hast maintained and defended here within my Diocess, oftentimes before me; and also upon Sunday last ye stood up in the Face of the whole Church maintaining your Heresies, so that you have offended within the Liberty of my Diocess: And now I being your Ordinary you must answer to me directly, whether you will revoke them or not, which I have here in Writing; and if so be that you will not revoke them, then I will excommunicate you, and therefore note well what you do, for now I read here the Articles against you.

And so when he had ended, he bad me answer unto them.

Gratwick. My Lord, these Articles which you have here objected against me, are not mine, but of your own making; for I never had any of my Examinations written at any Time, and therefore these be the Objections that you lay against me as a Snare to get my Blood. Wherefore I desire your lawful Favour, to allow my lawful Appeal to mine Ordinary; for I have nothing to do with you. And whereas you do burden me, that I have offended within your Diocess, it is nothing so: for I have not enterprised either to preach or teach within your Diocess, but was apprehended by mine own Bishop, and sent Prisoner into your Diocess, by the Consent of the Council and mine own Ordinary; and therefore I so being in your Diocess, you have no Cause to refuse my lawful Appeal.

And with that came the Bishop of Rochester, (whom the Bishop of Winchester gladly receiv'd) according to their determinate Purpose before invented; and so followed the Archdeacon of Canterbury; and then the Bishop again started up, as a Man half ravished of his Wits for Joy, embracing him with many gentle Words, and said, that he was very glad of his coming, making ignorant thereof, as he thought it should appear to me. Then said Winchester;

Catholick Conveyance among these Bishops.

Winchester. Sir, I am very glad of your coming; for here I have one before me, who hath appealed unto you, being his Ordinary. Then said the Archdeacon of Canterbury;

Archdeacon. I know this Man very well. He hath been divers Times before me. And then I answered and said;

Gratwick. My Lord, I am not of his Diocess by five Miles: For his Diocess reacheth on that Part no farther than the Clifts of Lewes, and I dwelt at Brighthelmston, five Miles beyond, in the Diocess of the Bishop of Chichester; and therefore I am not of his Diocess.

Then the Bishop of Winchester, the Bishop of Rochester, and the Archdeacon of Canterbury cast their Heads together and laughed; And then they said my Ordinary would be here by

by and by, and ſo they ſent forth for a Counterfeit inſtead of mine Ordinary: And then I ſaw them laugh; and I ſpake to them, and ſaid:

Gratwick. Why do ye laugh? Are ye confederate together for my Blood, and therein triumph? You have more Cauſe to look weightily upon the Matter; for I ſtand here before you upon my Life and Death. But you declare yourſelves what you are: For ye are cloathed in Lamb's Apparel, but I would to God ye had Coats according to your Aſſembly here, which is ſcarlet Gowns, for I do here perceive you are bent to have my Blood.

And then came ruſhing in that counterfeited Biſhop, who was the hired Servant to deliver me into the Hands of the High-prieſt; and the Biſhop hearing him come, with Haſte enquired of his Man who was there: And he ſaid, My Lord of Chicheſter. Then the Biſhop with Haſte roſe up and ſaid:

Wincheſter. Ye are moſt heartily welcome, and required him to ſit down; and then ſaid the Biſhop of Wincheſter to me, Lo here is your Ordinary, What have you now to ſay to him?

Gratwick. I have nothing to ſay to him. If he have nothing to ſay to me, I pray you let me depart. Then anſwered my counterfeit Ordinary and ſaid:

Counterfeit. Here you ſtand before my Lords and me in Trial of your Faith, and if you bring the Truth we ſhall by Compulſion give Place unto you, as it is to be proved by the Word; and your Doctrine to be heard and embraced for a Truth.

Gratwick. Then I demanded of him whether he meant by Authority, or by the Judgment of the Spirit of God in his Members.

And he anſwer'd me, By Authority as well as by the Spirit.

Then, ſaid I, Now will I turn your own Argument upon you; for Chriſt came before the High-prieſts, Scribes and Phariſees, bringing the Truth with him, being the very Truth himſelf, which Truth cannot lie, yet both he and his Truth was condemned, and took no Place with them: And alſo the Apoſtles, and all the Martyrs that died ſince Chriſt: Therefore I turn your own Argument upon you; anſwer it if you can.

Then the ſaid counterfeit Ordinary with great Heat and Choler, ſaid to the Biſhop of Wincheſter, Object ſome Articles againſt him, for he is obſtinate, and would fain get out of our Hands, therefore hold him to ſome Particular: So that no other Anſwer could I have to this Argument.

Then the Biſhop of Wincheſter began to read Objections of his own making againſt me, and he bade me anſwer to them.

And I ſaid, No, except you will ſet the Law apart, becauſe I ſee you are mindful of my Blood.

Wincheſter. Now you may ſee he will not anſwer to theſe, but as he hath aforeſaid.

Then ſpake the counterfeit Ordinary again, and ſaid, My Lord, ask him what he ſaith to the Sacrament of the Altar. Then the Biſhop asked me, as my counterfeit Ordinary required him.

Gratwick. My Lord, I do believe that in the Sacrament of the Supper of the Lord, truly adminiſtred in both Kinds, according to the Inſtitution of Chriſt, unto the worthy Receiver, he eateth myſtically by Faith the Body and Blood of Chriſt. Then I asked him if it were not the Truth, and he ſaid Yes; then ſaid I, Bear witneſs of the Truth. Anno 1557.

Then the Biſhop of Wincheſter, whoſe Head being ſubtileſt to gather upon my Words, ſaid, My Lord, ſee you not how he creepeth away with his Hereſies, and covereth them privily? Note how he here ſeparateth the Sacrament of the Altar from the Supper of the Lord, meaning it not to be the true Sacrament, and alſo how he condemneth our Adminiſtration in one Kind, allowing that the unworthy Receiver doth not eat and drink the Body and Blood of Chriſt; which be ſore Matters truly weighed, being covered very craftily with his ſubtil Shifts and Sophiſtry, but he ſhall anſwer directly before he depart.

Gratwick. My Lord, that is but your gathering of my Words, for you before confeſſed the ſame Sayings to be the Truth, and this you catch at me, and fain would have an Advantage for my Blood? But ſeeing you judge me not to mean the Sacrament of the Altar, now come to the Probation of the ſame Sacrament, and prove it to be the true Sacrament, and I am with you; or elſe if you can prove your Church to be the true Church, I am alſo with you.

But then he called to Memory the laſt Probation of the Church and Sacraments, how he before was driven to forſake the Scriptures, and to ſhew me by good Reaſon how they might adminiſter the Sacrament in one Kind: And his Reaſon was this, Like as a Man or Woman dieth on a ſudden, and ſo when we have given him the Body of Chriſt, in the mean Time the Party dieth and ſo he eateth the Body of Chriſt, and not drinketh his Blood. And this was his ſimple Shift in the proving of their Sacraments: ſo that he was now half aſhamed to begin that Matter again.

But yet a little Shift he brought in, and ſaid:

Wincheſter. What ſayſt thou by the Adminiſtration of the Prieſts every Day for themſelves, and they miniſter in both Kinds?

To that I anſwered, You have two Adminiſtrations, for I am ſure at Eaſter you adminiſter but in one Kind, and therefore it is not according to the Inſtitution of Chriſt, but after your own Imaginations.

Wincheſter. Why then, What ſayſt thou to theſe Words, Take, eat, this is my Body. Theſe are the Words of Chriſt. Wilt thou deny them?

Gratwick. My Lord, they are the Words of Scripture, I affirm them, and not deny them.

Rocheſter. Why then thou doſt confeſs in the Sacrament of the Altar to be a real Preſence, the Self-ſame Body that was born of the Virgin Mary, and is aſcended up into Heaven.

Gratwick. My Lord, what do you now mean? do you not alſo mean a viſible Body? for it cannot be, but of Neceſſity, if it be a real Preſence, and a material Body, it muſt be a viſible Body alſo.

Wincheſter. Nay, I ſay unto thee, it is a real Preſence and a material Body, and an inviſible Body too.

Gratwick. My Lord, then it muſt needs be a fantaſtical Body, for if it ſhould be a material and inviſible, as you affirm, then it muſt needs be a fantaſtical Body: For it is apparent rent that Christ's human Body was visible and seen.

Then the Bishop brake out and said, When didst thou see him? I pray thee tell me.

To that I answered and said, a simple Argument it is; because our corporal Eyes cannot comprehend Christ, doth it prove or follow, that he is invisible, because we cannot see him?

And with that the Bishop began to grow weary of his Argument, and removed his Talk to Judas in eating the Sacrament, and said, He eat him wholly, as the Apostles did.

And then I asked him, If he meant Christ's Flesh and Blood, which he speaketh of in the Sixth of John, and saith, He that eateth my Flesh and drinketh my Blood, hath eternal Life in me.

To that he answered and said, Yea.

If the Wicked do eat the Body of Christ, they must needs be saved; and if Infants eat him not, they must be condemned, by the Pope's Doctrine.

Then said I, of Necessity Judas must needs be saved, because he did eat the Flesh and drink the Blood of Christ, as you have affirmed, and also all the ungodly that die without Repentance, because they have eaten your Sacrament, which you say is the Flesh and Blood of Christ: Therefore of Necessity they shall receive the Benefit thereof, that is, eternal Life. Which is a great Absurdity to grant; and then of Necessity it must follow, that all that eat not, and drink not of your Sacrament, shall finally perish and be damned; for Christ saith, Except ye eat my Flesh and drink my Blood, ye have no Life in you. And you have aforesaid that of your Sacrament, which you say is the same Flesh and Blood which Christ speaketh of: And here I prove, that all Children then that die under Age to receive the Sacrament, by your own Argument must be damned, which is horrible Blasphemy to speak. Now here I turn your own Argument upon you, answer it if you can.

Winchester. My Lord, do you not see what deceitful Arguments he bringeth in here against us, mingled with Sophistry, and keepeth himself so that we can get no hold of him? But I say unto thee, thou perverse Heretick, I see now thou art a perverse Fellow. I had a better Opinion of thee, but now I see we lose our Time about thee, yet I answer thee, St. Paul doth open the Sixth of John plainly, if thou wilt see: For he saith, They eat Christ's Body, and drink his Blood unworthily, and that was the Cause of their Damnation.

Gratwick. My Lord, take Heed ye do not add unto the Text, for he that addeth to the Text is accursed of God, and I am sure here you have brought more than Paul hath spoken: For he saith not, Because they have eaten his Body and drank his Blood unworthily; But St. Paul saith, Whosoever shall eat of this Bread and drink of the Cup unworthily, shall be guilty of the Body and Blood of Christ. Note, my Lord, he saith not as you have affirmed, but clean contrary. And with that they were all in a great Rage.

And the Bishop of Winchester said I belied the Text.

And then I called for the Text.

Winchester. I asked thee even now if thou didst understand Latin, and thy Answer was, Whether thou didst or no, the People shall bear Witness in English.

Gratwick. And so I called again for the Testament, whether it were Latin or English, for the Trial of the Text.

And then when the Bishop of Winchester saw that I cared not whether of the Translations I had, he stood up, thinking to beguile some simple Man that had a Book there, and bad him that had an English Testament to bring it in, that he might get some Hold at him that should bring a Testament: But God disappointed him thereof, and so he flew away from his Matter, and began to rail upon me, and said, my subtil Arguments should not serve: For if I would not answer directly, I should nevertheless be excommunicated. For (said he) I see a mad Toy in thine Head; thou glorieſt much in thy Talk, and thinkeſt now the People are come about thee, that thou shalt encourage them with thy constant heretical Opinion. For the last Day when thou wast before me upon Sunday in St. Mary Overy's Church, thou there reproved'st my Sermon, and hadst a thousand by thee at least, to bid God strengthen thee: But now let me see him here that dare open his Mouth to bid God strengthen thee; he shall die the Death that thou shalt die.

To that I answered, My Lord, I know your Cruelty doth extend more largely than your Pity. Good Experience so I have to say, for you keep Men in Prison a Year or two, taking their Books from them, permitting them not so much as a Testament to look upon for their Souls Comfort, which all Men ought to have: And so you treat them more like brute Beasts than Christian Men.

Winchester. No Sir, we will use you as we will use the Child: For if the Child will hurt himself with the Knife, we will keep the Knife from him. So because you will damn your Souls with the Word, therefore you shall not have it.

Gratwick. My Lord, a simple Argument you bring to maintain and cover your Fault. Are you not ashamed to make the Word the Cause of our Damnation? I never knew any Man but only you that did not affirm our Sins to be the Cause of our Damnation, and not the Word, as you say: And therefore if your Argument be good, then this is good also; Because that some Men do abuse Drink, therefore the Benefit of Drink should be taken from all Men, or any other such like good Gift.

Winchester overthrown in his own Similitude.

Winchester. My Lords, here we lose much Time, for this Fellow is perverse, speaking nothing but Sophistry and perverse Questions: so that we can get no Advantage of him.

Then spake my counterfeit Ordinary, as one half asleep all this while; yet somewhat with Haste when he was awaked he began to tell his Tale, and said:

Counterfeit. Read these Articles against him once more, and if he will not answer them, take him upon his first Words, That which I said, that I have said.

Then the Bishop of Winchester began to read them again.

But I said unto him I would not answer them, because they were none of mine Examinations, but Objections of their own making, because they would have my Blood. But yet I said, if they would set the Law apart, I would talk my Conscience freely to them.

Then my counterfeit Ordinary began to speak again, charging me with the Saying of St. Peter, that I should render Account of such Hope as was in me.

Grat. So can I do, yet I shall not please you, for here I now render my Hope as St. Peter willeth me: I believe only in Jesus Christ to have my Salvation in him, by him, and thro' him; but I perceive you would have me render my Faith in such sort, as you may have my Blood, and therefore you bring good Scriptures, and Evil apply them.

Winchester. Why, this Fellow is perverted, and we shall get no more at his Hands than we have already; therefore let us pronounce Sentence against him, for we do but lose our Time.

Grat. Nay good my Lord, seeing you will needs have my Blood, let me say a little more for myself.

Upon Sunday last, when I was before you, you preached this which was a Truth, and agreeable to the Doctrine of the Apostle St. James, and said, If any Man think himself a religious Man, and in the mean Time seduce his Tongue or his Heart, the same Man's Religion is a vain Religion; and so my Lord, you standing there in the Pulpit, in the mean Time seduced your Tongue to slander us poor Prisoners being there present in Iron Bands, burdening us with the Sect of Arians, and with the Sect of Herodians, and with the Sect of Anabaptists, and with the Sect of Sacramentaries, and with the Sect of Pelagians.

And when we stood up to purge ourselves thereof, you said you would cut out our Tongues, and cause us to be pulled out of the Church by Violence. But there you gave yourself a shrewd Blow, for your Tongue in the mean Time slandered your Neighbour. For I, my Lord, will give my Life against all these Heresies, which you there burdened us withal, even as I will give my Life against that wherein I now stand before you. And with that he was raging angry, and caught my Condemnation, and said, Winch. Thou wilt grant here no more but this Word, That I have said, I have said: And here I gather Matter enough to condemn thee, for this is a Confirmation of all that thou hast heretofore said.

Then I answered, If you can prove that ever any of mine Examinations were written, it were enough: But you have nothing against me but Objections of your own making.

Winch. Have at thee now, If thou wilt not yield, I will pronounce Sentence against thee; and so he proceeded forward, cursing and banning in Latin; so that I told him, If the People might hear it in English, they would think you an uncharitable Bishop.

And then I said, Stay my Lord, and note what you do: for you have neither temporal Law nor spiritual here against me in any Cause.

Then stepped forth a Gentleman, and said unto my Lord, Take heed what ye do: For he doth here say, that you have no Title or Cause why you should condemn him.

Then the Bishop looked about him again, and asked me if I would recant.

I asked him, whereof I should recant.

Then said the Bishop, Are you there? Nay then I know what I have to do: And so he proceeded forth in reading my Condemnation. And there was another Gentleman which began to snap and snatch at me: and then said I, I would God I had known this ere ever I had come from Home, I would surely have put on Breeches, and not had my Skin thus torn. And all this while the Bishop read on still.

At last his Chaplains cried, Stop, stop, my Lord: For now he will recant. And then the Bishop asked me again.

To which I answered, My Lord, my Faith is grounded more stedfastly, than to change in a Moment, it is no Process of Time can alter me, unless my Faith were as the Waves of the Sea: And so the Bishop made an End, and delivered me into the Hands of the Sheriff, to be again carried to the Marshalsea. And when I was condemned, I desired God with a loud Voice, that he would not lay my Blood to their Charge, if it were his good Will, and they refused my Prayer, and sent me away. Then I began to talk as I went, and they cried, Cut out his Tongue, or stop his Mouth: And so I was brought to the Marshalsea, and bound in Irons. And therefore I pray unto God that they unto whom this present Writing shall come, may take Example by my Death and Warfare. So be it. Anno 1557.

By me Stephen Gratwick, condemned for God's everlasting Truth.

Here for want of Time, I left out many Matters, because the Lord hath hastened the Time, so that I have written but the Bitterness of the Matter in Probation of Faith, and the Reward of Faith, which the Bishop of Rochester and I debated upon; which Matter I would have been very glad to have set down in writing. Stephen Gratwick to the Reader.

Also much more Talk there was, that the Bishop of Winchester and I had concerning my worldly Friends and personal Estate: For he plaid Satan with me, he carry'd me up to the Mountains, and there told me my Learning was good, and my Eloquence, and also my Knowledge, save that I did abuse it, said he; and then he fell to praising of my Person, that it was comely, and worthy to serve a Prince. Thus Satan flattered with me, to make me answer to such Objections as he would lay against me, that I might fall into his Dioceſs.

Thus this Christian Martyr Stephen Gratwick, being wrongfully condemned by the Bishop of Winchester, (as ye have heard) was burnt with W. Moraunt, and one named King, in St. George's Fields, about the latter End of May.

The History of five Women and two Men, who were burnt at Maidstone.

I Shewed a little before, how after the universal Proclamation was set forth by the King and Queen in the Month of February last, the Storm of Persecution began in all Places to rise (whereof some Part also is declared before) but yet in no Place more than in the Dioceſs of Canterbury, by reason of the aforesaid Inquisitors, being now armed with Authority, but especially by reason of Richard Thornton Suffragan of Dover, and the Archdeacon of Canterbury, who of their own Nature were so furious and fiery against the harmless Flock of Christ, that there was no need of any Proclamation to stir up the Coals of their burning Cruelty, by reason whereof many a godly Saint lieth slain under the Altar.

And now to return to the said Dioceſs of Anno 1557. Canterbury again, in the next Month following, being the 18*th* Day of June, were ſeven Chriſtian and true faithful Martyrs of Chriſt burned at Maidſtone, whoſe Names here follow:

Joan Bradbridge of Staplehurſt.
Walter Appleby of Maidſtone.
Petronil his Wife.
Edmund Allin of Frytenden.
Katherine his Wife.
John Manning's Wife of Maidſtone.
Elizabeth a blind Maiden.

As concerning the general Articles commonly objected to them in the publick Conſiſtory, and the Order of their Condemnation, it differeth not much from the uſual Manner expreſſed before, neither did their Anſwers in Effect much differ from the other that ſuffered under the ſame Ordinary in the aforeſaid Dioceſs of Canterbury.

Now as touching their Anſwers and Manner of Apprehenſion, and their private Conflicts with the Adverſaries, I find no great Matter coming to my Hands, ſave only of Edmund Allin ſome Intimation is given me, how his Troubles came, what was his Cauſe and Anſwers before the Juſtices, as here conſequently ye ſhall underſtand.

The Examination of Edmund Allin.

THIS Allin was a Miller of the Pariſh of Frytenden in Kent, and in a dear Year, when as many poor People were like to ſtarve, he fed them, and ſold his Corn cheaper by half than others did; and did not only that, but alſo fed them with the Food of Life, reading to them the Scriptures, and interpreting them. This being known to the popiſh Prieſts dwelling thereabouts, by the Procurement of them, namely, of John Taylor Parſon of Frytenden, and Thomas Hendon Parſon of Staplehurſt, he was ſoon complained of to the Juſtices, and brought before Sir John Baker Knight; who firſt ſending for them, committed both him and his Wife to ward, but not long after they were let out, I know not how, and ſo went over to Calais: Where, after he had continued ſome Time, he began to be troubled in Conſcience, and there meeting with one John Webb, from the ſame Pariſh of Frytenden (who was likewiſe fled from the Tyranny of Sir John Baker and Parſon Taylor) ſaid unto him, that he could not be in quiet there, whatſoever the Cauſe was; For God, ſaid he, had ſomething to do for him in England: And ſhortly after he returned to his Pariſh of Frytenden, where was the cruel Prieſt, Parſon Taylor.

This Parſon being informed by his Brother Sexton, that Edmund Allin the Miller and his Wife were returned, and were not at Maſs-time in the Church; as he was the ſame Time in the midſt of his Maſs, upon a Sunday, a little before the Elevation (as they term it) even almoſt at the lifting up of his Romiſh God, he turned him to the People in a great Rage, and commanded them with all Speed to go unto their Houſe, and apprehend them, and he would come unto them with as much Haſte as he might poſſible. Which Promiſe he well performed; for he had no ſooner made an End of Ite, miſſa eſt, and the Veſtments off his Back, but by and by he was at the Houſe, and there laying Hands on the ſaid Allin, cauſed him again to be brought to Sir John Baker, with a grievous Complaint of his exhort ng and reading the Scriptures to the People, and ſo he and his Wife were ſent to Maidſtone Priſon. Witneſſed by Richard Fletcher Vicar of Crambroke, and John Webb of Frytenden.

Mark what a holy Maſs-faying was here, and what a charitable Religion is this.

No ſooner were they in Priſon but Mr. Baker immediately ſent certain of his Men to their Houſe, namely, John Dove, Thomas Beſt, Thomas Linley, Percival Barber, with the aforeſaid John Taylor Parſon of Frytenden, and Thomas Henden Parſon of Staplehurſt, to take an Inventory of all the Goods that were in the Houſe. Where they found in the Bed-ſtraw a little Cheſt locked with a Padlock, wherein they found a Sackcloth Bag of Money, containing the Sum of 13 or 14*l.* partly in Gold and partly in Silver: Which Money after they had told, and put in the Bag again, like good Carvers for themſelves, they carried it away with them.

Beſides alſo they found there certain Books, as Pſalters, Bibles, and other Writings. All which Books, with the Money, were delivered to the aforeſaid Prieſt Thomas Henden, Parſon of Staplehurſt, and afterwards in the fifth Year of the Reign of Queen Elizabeth it was by right Law recovered from him again, as in Records remaineth to be ſeen.

Thus good Edmund Allin and his Wife, being maliciouſly accuſed, wrongfully impriſoned, and cruelly robbed and ſpoiled of all their Goods, were brought, as is aforeſaid, before Sir John Baker the Juſtice, to be examined; who taunting and reviling him without all Mercy and Pity, asking him if thoſe were the Fruits of his Goſpel, to have Conventicles to gather People together, to make Conſpiracies to ſow Sedition and Rebellion; and thus he began to reaſon with him.

A Conference between Sir John Baker, Collins his Chaplain, and Edmund Allin.

Baker. WHO gave thee Authority to preach and interpret? Art thou a Prieſt? Art thou admitted thereunto? Let me ſee thy Licenſe.

Mart. Collins, Sir John Baker's Schoolmaſter ſaid, Surely he is an arrant Heretick, and worthy to be burned.

Allin. And it may pleaſe your Honour to give me Leave to anſwer in the Cauſe of my Faith, I am perſuaded that God hath given me this Authority, as he hath given to all other Chriſtians. Why are we called Chriſtians, if we do not follow Chriſt, if we do not read his Law, if we do not interpret it to others that have not ſo much Underſtanding? Is not Chriſt our Father? Shall not the Son follow the Father's Steps? Is not Chriſt our Maſter? And ſhall the Scholar be inhibited to learn and preach his Precepts? Is not Chriſt our Redeemer, and ſhall not we praiſe his Name, and ſerve him that hath redeemed us from Sin and Damnation? Did not Chriſt being but twelve Years of Age diſpute with the Doctors, and interpret the Prophet Iſaiah? and yet notwithſtanding he was neither of the Tribe of Levi, which were Prieſts, but of the royal Tribe Tribe of Judah, neither had taken any outward Prieſthood; wherefore if we be Chriſtians we muſt do the ſame.

Collins. And it ſhall like your Honour, what a Knave is this, that compareth himſelf with Chriſt?

Baker. Let him alone, he will pump out anon an infinite Number of Hereſies. Haſt thou any more to ſay for thyſelf?

Allin. Yea that I have. Adam was licenſed of God, and Abraham was commanded to teach his Children and Poſterity, and ſo David teacheth in divers Pſalms: And Solomon alſo preached to the People, as the Book of the Preacher very well proveth, where he teacheth that there is no immortal Felicity in this Life, but in the next. And Noah taught them that were diſobedient in his Days, and therefore is called The eighth Preacher of Righteouſneſs, in the Second Epiſtle of Peter. Alſo in the 11th Chapter of Numbers, where Moſes had choſen ſeventy Elders to help him to teach and rule the reſt, Eldad and Medad preached in the Tents, wherefore Joſhua being offended, complained to Moſes, that Eldad and Medad did preach without Licenſe. To whom Moſes anſwered, and wiſhed that all the People could do the like. Why ſhould I be long? Moſt of the Prieſts were not of the Tribe of Levi and Aaron.

Collins. Theſe are Authorities of the Old Teſtament, and therefore abrogated; but thou art a Fool, and knoweſt no ſchool Points. Is not the Law divided into the Law ceremonial, moral, and judicial?

Allin. I grant that the Ceremonies ceaſed when Chriſt came, as St. Paul proveth to the Hebrews, and to the Coloſſians, where he ſaith,

Col. 1. Let no Man judge you in any part of the Sabbath-day, New Moon, or other Ceremonies, which are Figures of Things to come: For Chriſt is the Body.

Collins. And are not the Judicials abrogated by Chriſt?

Allin. They are confirmed both by Chriſt in the fifth Chapter of Matthew, and by Paul in the Firſt Epiſtle to Timothy. The Law, ſaith he, is not ſet forth for the Virtuous and Godly, but for Man-ſlayers, Perjured, Adulterers, and ſuch like.

Collins. * Thou art an Heretick. Wilt thou call the Judicials of Moſes again? Wilt thou have Adultery puniſhed with Death? Diſobedient Children to their Parents to be ſtoned? Wilt thou have Legem Talionis? But thou art an Aſs. Why ſhould I ſpeak Latin to thee thou erroneous Rebel? Shall we now ſmite out Eye for Eye, Tooth for Tooth? Thou art worthy to have thy Teeth and Tongue plucked out.

* Albeit the poſitive Law of Moſes's Judicials do not bind the Gentiles with the ſame Neceſſity abſolutely to every Condition, as it did the Jews, to whom it was peculiarly given: Yet may the Gentiles borrow out of the ſame Law ſuch Things that ſhall be expedient for their Rule or Government, neither can they borrow any Laws better than out of Moſes.

Allin. If we had that Law, we ſhould neither have diſobedient Children, neither Adulterers, neither falſe Witneſs-bearers, neither Ruffians.

Baker. Maſter Collins, let us return to our firſt Matter. Why didſt thou teach the People, whom thou ſaidſt thou didſt feed both bodily and ſpiritually, being no Prieſt?

Allin. Becauſe that we are all Kings to rule our Affections, Prieſts to preach out the Virtues and Word of God, as Peter writeth, and lively Stones to give Light to others. For as out of Flint-ſtones cometh forth that which is able to ſet all the World on Fire; ſo out of Chriſtians ſhould ſpring the Beams of the Goſpel, which ſhould inflame all the World. If we muſt give a Reckoning of our Faith to every Man, and now to you demanding it, then muſt we ſtudy the Scriptures, and practiſe them. What availeth it a Man to have Meat, and will eat none; and Apparel, and will wear none? Or to have an Occupation, and to teach none; or to be a Lawyer, and utter none? Shall every Artificer be ſuffered, yea and commanded to practiſe his Faculty and Science, and the Chriſtian forbidden to exerciſe his? Doth not every Lawyer practiſe his Law? Is not every Chriſtian a Follower of Chriſt? Shall Ignorance, which is condemned in all Sciences, be practiſed by Chriſtians? Doth not St. Paul forbid any Man's Spirit to be quenched? Doth he prohibit any Man that hath any of theſe Gifts, which he repeateth, 1 Cor. 14. to practiſe the ſame? Only he forbiddeth Women, but no Man. The Jews never forbad any. Read the Acts of the Apoples. And the Reſtraint was made by Gregory the ninth Pope of that Name, as I heard one, a learned Man, preach in King Edward's Days. Anno 1557.

Collins. This Villain (and it like your Honour) is mad. By my Prieſthood I believe that he will ſay, that a Prieſt hath no more Authority than another Man. Doth not a Prieſt bind and looſe?

Allin. No, my Sin bindeth me, and my Repentance looſeth. God forgiveth Sin only, and no Prieſt. For every Chriſtian, when he ſinneth, bindeth himſelf, and when he repenteth, looſeth himſelf. And if any other be looſed from his Sin by my Exhortation, I am ſaid to looſe him; and if he perſevere in Sin, notwithſtanding my Exhortation, I am ſaid to bind him, although it is God that bindeth and looſeth, and giveth the Increaſe. Therefore ſaith Chriſt, Matth. 18. Whereſoever two or three are gathered together in my Name, there am I in the midſt of them; and whoſe ſoever Sins they forgive they are forgiven, and they retain, they are retained. Neither hath the Pope any Keys ſave the Keys of Error; for the Key that openeth the Lock to God's Myſteries and to Salvation, is the Key of Faith and Repentance. And as I have heard learned Men reaſon, St. Auſtin, Origin, and others, are of this Opinion.

Then they reviled him, and laid him in the Stocks all the Night. Wherewith ſome that were better minded, being offended with ſuch Extremity, deſired Allin to keep his Conſcience to himſelf, and to follow Baruch's Counſel in the Sixth Chapter. Wherefore when ye ſee the Multitude of People worſhipping them, behind and before, ſay you in your Hearts, O Lord, it is thou that ought only to be worſhipped.

Wherewith he was perſuaded to go to hear Maſs the next Day, and ſuddenly before the Sacring went out, and conſidered in the Church-yard with himſelf, that ſuch a little Cake between the Prieſt's Fingers could not be Chriſt, nor a material Body, neither to have Soul, Life, Sinews, Bones, Fleſh, Legs, Head, Arms nor Breaſt, and lamented that he was ſeduced by the Place of Baruch, which his Conſcience gave him to be no Scripture, or elſe to have another Meaning: And after this he was brought again before Sir John Baker, who asked why he did refuſe to worſhip the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar.

Allin brought again before Sir J. Baker.

Allin.

Anno 1557.

Allin. It is an Idol.

Collins. It is God's Body.

Allin. It is not.

Collins. By the Mass it is.

Allin. It is Bread.

Collins. How provest thou that?

Allin. When Christ sate at his Supper, and gave them Bread to eat.

Collins. Bread, Knave?

Allin. Yea Bread, which you call Christ's Body. Sate he still at the Table, or was he both in their Mouths, and at the Table? If he were in their Mouths, and at the Table, then had he two Bodies, or else had a fantastical Body; which is an Absurdity to say it.

Baker. Christ's Body was glorified, and might be in more Places than one.

Allin. Then he had more Bodies than one, by your own placing of him.

Collins. Thou ignorant Ass, the Schoolmen say, that a glorified Body may be every where.

Allin. If his Body was not glorified till it rose again, then was it not glorified at his last Supper; and therefore was not at the Table, and in their Mouths by your own Reason.

Collins. A glorified Body occupieth no Place.

Allin. That which occupieth no Place, is neither God, nor any Thing else: But Christ's Body, say you, occupieth no Place; therefore it is neither God, nor any Thing else. If it be nothing, then is your Religion nothing. If it be God, then have we four in one Trinity, which is the Person of the Father, the Person of the Son, the Person of the Holy Ghost, the humane Nature of Christ. If Christ be nothing, which you must needs confess, if he occupieth no Place, then is our Study in vain, our Faith frustrate, and our Hope without Reward.

Collins. This Rebel will believe nothing but Scripture. How knowest thou that it is the Scripture but by the Church? And so saith St. Austin.

How the Scripture is known to be Scripture.

Allin. I cannot tell what St. Austin saith, but I am persuaded that it is Scripture by divers Arguments: First, that the Law worketh in me my Condemnation. The Law telleth me that of myself I am damned; and this Damnation, Mr. Collins, you must find in yourself, or else you shall never come to Repentance. For as this Grief and Sorrow of Conscience, without Faith, is Desperation; so is a glorious and Romish Faith, without the Lamentation of a Man's Sins, Presumption.

The second is the Gospel, which is the Power and Spirit of God. This Spirit (saith St. Paul) certifieth my Spirit that I am the Son of God, and that these are the Scriptures.

The third are the wonderful Works of God, which cause me to believe that there is a God, though we glorify him not as God, Rom. 1. The Sun, the Moon, the Stars, and other his Works (as David discourseth in Psal. 19.) declare that there is a God, and that these are the Scriptures, because that they teach nothing else but God and his Power, Majesty and Might; and because the Scripture teacheth nothing disagreeing from this Prescription of Nature. And fourthly, because that the Word of God gave Authority to the Church in Paradise, saying, that the Seed of the Woman should break down the Serpent's Head. This Seed is the Gospel; this is all the Scriptures, and by this we are assured of eternal Life; and these Words, The Seed of the Woman shall break the Serpent's Head, gave Authority to the Church, and not the Church to the Word.

Baker. I heard say that you spake against Priests and Bishops.

Allin. I spake for them; for now they have so much living, and especially Bishops, Archdeacons and Deans, that they neither can nor will teach God's Word. If they had a hundred Pounds a-piece, then would they apply their Study; now they cannot for their Affairs.

Collins. Who will then set his Children to School?

Allin. Where there is now one set to School for that End, there would be forty; because that one Bishop's Living divided into thirty or forty Parts, would find so many as well learned Men as the Bishops be now who have all this Living, neither had Peter or Paul any such Revenue.

Baker. Let us dispatch him; he will marr all.

Collins. If every Man had a hundred Pounds as he saith, it would make more learned Men.

Baker. But our Bishops would be angry, if that they knew it.

Allin. It were for a Common-wealth to have such Bishopricks divided, for the further Increase of Learning.

Baker. What saist thou to the Sacrament?

Allin. As I said before.

Baker. Away with him.

Then he was carried to Prison, and afterward burned. And thus much concerning the particular Story of Edmund Allin and his Wife: who with the five other Martyrs abovenamed, being seven, were altogether burned at Maidstone, the 18th of June 1557.

Another Story of like Cruelty, shewed upon Three Men and Four Women at Canterbury.

AMong such infinite Seas of Troubles in these dangerous Days, who can withhold from Tears to see the Rage of these pretended Catholicks, who being never satisfied with Blood to maintain their carnal Kingdom, presume so highly to violate the Law of God's Commandments, in slaying the simple poor Lambs of the glorious Congregation of Jesus Christ, and that for the true Testimony of a good Conscience, in confessing the immaculate Gospel of their Salvation? What Heart will not lament the murdering Mischief of these Men, who for want of Work do so wrack their Time on silly poor Women, whose Weakness the more Strength it lacketh by natural Imperfection, the more it ought to be helped, or at least pitied, and not oppressed of Men that be stronger, and especially of Priests that should be charitable.

Unmerciful Cruelty of the Papists against poor Women.

But blessed be the Lord Omnipotent, who supernaturally hath indued from above such weak Creatures with such manly Fortitude, so constantly to withstand the uttermost Extremity of these mercileſs Persecutors: As he did before strengthen the Mother of the seven Sons in the Macchabees, and as he hath done since with divers other godly Women in these our Days, partly before-mentioned, and partly ly to be mentioned hereafter, as may appear by the Martyrdom of the ſeven following, of which four were Women and three Men, burnt together at Canterbury the 30th Day of the ſaid Month of June 1557, whoſe Names are theſe:

John Fiſhcock, Bradbridge's Widow,
Nicholas White, Wilſon's Wife,
Nicholas Pardue, Benden's Wife.
Barbara Final, Widow.

As it were too tedious particularly to proſecute the ſeveral Stories of every one of theſe Martyrs; ſo I cannot paſs over untouched the cruel and unchriſtian Handling of Alice Benden during her Impriſonment, according as I have received by the faithful Relation of them who were beſt acquainted with her. The Story is thus:

Roger and Tho. Hall, two godly Brethren of Alice Benden.

Alice Benden, Wife of Edward Benden, of the Pariſh of Staplehurſt in the County of Kent, was firſt brought before Mr. Roberts of Crambroke in the ſaid County, the 14th of October 1556, of whom ſhe was demanded why ſhe would not go to the Church? To which ſhe anſwered, that ſhe could not do ſo with a good and clear Conſcience, becauſe there was much Idolatry committed againſt the Glory of God. For which with many Mocks and Taunts ſhe was ſent to Priſon, where ſhe lay fourteen Days: For on the 20th Day of October, her Husband required his Neighbours, the wealthy Men of Staplehurſt, to write to the Biſhop of Dover, who had the chief Government of the tyrannical Sword in Kent for thoſe Days, which they did, deſiring him to ſend her home.

Wherefore the Biſhop called her before him, and asked her if ſhe would go home, and go to the Church. Whereunto ſhe anſwered, If I would have ſo done, I need not to have come hither. Then wilt thou go home, and be confeſſed by thy Pariſh-prieſt? And ſhe ſaid No, that would ſhe not.

Well, ſaid he, go thy Ways home, and go to the Church when thou wilt. Whereunto ſhe anſwered nothing. But a Prieſt that ſtood by, ſaid, She ſaith ſhe will, my Lord. Wherefore he let her go, and ſhe came home forthwith.

On the Saturday following her Husband deſired her to go to the Church; which ſhe refuſed to do: Wherefore on the Sunday Fortnight after, he going to the Church, came into the Company of divers Inhabitants of the ſame Pariſh; among whom, through his fooliſh Talk and Behaviour, he procured her to be ſent to Sir John Gilford, who commanded her to Priſon again: Yea, and the more to utter his own Shame, they ſaid her Husband took Money of the Conſtable to carry her to Priſon, the Price of his Wife's Blood, meaning indeed to carry her to Priſon himſelf. But ſhe having much more Care of his honeſt and good Report, than he had Regard (as it is eaſy to ſee) of his own Infamy, and no leſs aſhamed of his unnatural Doings, choſe rather to commit herſelf willingly into the Hands of her Enemies, than that the World ſhould bear witneſs againſt her Husband of ſo wicked a Fact. Wherefore ſhe went to the Conſtable, deſiring him to go with her: But he anſwered that he could not; but he granted her his Boy to go with her, with whom ſhe went to Priſon, namely, the Caſtle of Canterbury, according to the Commandment given.

The Husband procureth the Trouble and Impriſonment of his Wife.

Where this one Thing is worthy to be noted, that while ſhe was in this Priſon, ſhe practiſed with a fellow Priſoner of hers, the Wife one Potkin, to live both of them on Two-pence Halfpenny a Day, to try thereby how well they could ſuſtain Penury and Hunger, before they were put to it. For they had heard, that when they ſhould be removed from thence to the Biſhop's Priſon, their Livings ſhould be but three Farthings a-piece a Day, and did indeed both ſo live for fourteen Days ere ſhe was from thence removed. Anno 1557.

The ſpare Diet of Alice Benden in Canterbury Caſtle.

The 22d Day of January following, her Husband went again to the Biſhop, deſiring him to deliver his Wife out of Priſon: But he ſaid ſhe was an obſtinate Heretick, and would not be reformed; and therefore ſaid that he could not deliver her.

Then ſaid he, My Lord, ſhe hath a Brother whoſe Name is Roger Hall, who reſorteth unto her. If your Lordſhip could keep him from her, ſhe would turn; for he comforteth her, giveth her Money, and perſuadeth her not to return or relent.

This Caution was no ſooner given, but it was as quickly taken, and as cruelly put in Execution. For the Biſhop commanding her upon the ſame to a Priſon called Monday's Hole, there alſo he gave a ſtrict Charge, that if at any Time her Brother came, he ſhould be taken and apprehended.

The Biſhop's Priſon deſcribed.

This Priſon was within a Court where the Prebend's Chambers were, being a Vault beneath the Ground, and being before the Window incloſed with a Pale about four Foot and an half high, and three Foot diſtant from the ſame, ſo that ſhe looking from beneath, might only ſee ſuch as ſtood at the Pale. After this, her Brother ſought often for her, with no leſs Danger of Life than Diligence. But for the unknown Situation of the Place, it being alſo but rarely uſed for a Priſon, and the Matter as cloſely kept as it was ſecretly done, he could never come to underſtand of her being there, until through God's merciful Will and unſearchable Providence, he coming thither very early in the Morning, her Keeper being then gone to the Church to ring (for he was a Bell-ringer) happened to hear her Voice, as ſhe was pouring out her ſorrowful Complaints unto God, ſaying the Pſalms of David: And there could he no otherwiſe relieve her, than by putting Money in a Loaf of Bread, and ſticking the ſame on a Pole, and ſo reach'd it to her; for neither with Meat nor Drink he could ſuſtain her. And this was five Weeks after her coming thither; all which Time no Creature was known to come at her more than her Keeper.

Her lying in that Priſon was only upon a little Straw between a Pair of Stocks and a Stone Wall; being allowed three Farthings a Day, that is, an Half-penny for Bread, and a Farthing for Drink, neither could ſhe get any more for her Money. Wherefore ſhe deſired to have her whole Allowance in Bread, and uſed Water for her Drink. Thus did ſhe live nine Weeks. During all which Time ſhe never changed her Apparel; whereby at laſt ſhe became a very piteous and loathſome Creature to behold.

Alice Benden kept in the Biſhop's Priſon nine Weeks with Bread and Water.

At her firſt coming into this Place ſhe did grievouſly bewail, with great Sorrow and Lamentation, and reaſoned with herſelf, why her Lord God did ſuffer her with ſo heavy Juſtice to be ſequeſtred from her loving Fellows into ſo extreme Miſery.

Anno 1557.

In theſe dolorous Mournings did ſhe continue, till on a Night as ſhe was in her ſorrowful Supplications, rehearſing this Verſe of the Pſalm? Why art thou ſo heavy, O my Soul? and again, The right Hand of the moſt High can change all: She received Comfort in the midſt of her Miſery, and after that continued very joyful till her Delivery from the ſame.

Alice Benden called before the Biſhop.

About the 25th Day of March, in the Year 1557, ſhe was called before the Biſhop, who demanded of her, whether ſhe would now go home, and to the Church or no, promiſing her great Favour, if ſhe would be reformed and do as they did.

To whom ſhe anſwered, I am thoroughly perſuaded by the great Extremity that you have already ſhew'd me, that you are not of God, neither can your Doings be godly; and I ſee that you ſeek my utter Deſtruction; ſhewing how lame ſhe was by Hunger and Cold while ſhe lay in the diſmal Priſon, whereby ſhe was not able to move herſelf without great Pain.

Then the Biſhop deliver'd her from that filthy Hole, and ſent her to Weſt-gate, where being kept clean, her Skin did pill and ſcale off as if ſhe had been poiſon'd by ſome mortal Venom. Here ſhe continu'd till the latter end of April, when ſhe was call'd before them, and with others condemned, and committed to a Priſon call'd the Caſtle, where ſhe lay till the 19th Day of June, and then ſhe reſign'd her Life in the Flames.

When ſhe was at the Stake ſhe threw her Handkerchief to one John Banks, requiring him to keep it in Memory of her, and from about her Middle ſhe took a white Lace, which ſhe gave to the Keeper, deſiring him to give the ſame to her Brother Roger Hall, and to tell him, that it was the laſt Band that ſhe was bound with, except the Chain. A Shilling alſo of Philip and Mary ſhe took forth, which her Father had bent and ſent her when ſhe was firſt ſent to Priſon, deſiring that her ſaid Brother ſhould with obedient Salutations render the ſame to her Father again, and ſhew him that it was the firſt Piece of Money that he ſent her after her Troubles began, which (as ſhe proteſted) ſhe had kept, and now ſent to let him underſtand, that ſhe never wanted Money while ſhe was in Priſon.

Alice Benden and the others before-mention'd were burnt at the ſame Time. Being brought to the Place of Martyrdom they all undreſſed themſelves joyfully to the Fire, and being ready, they all ſeven kneeled down, and made their humble Prayers to the Lord with ſuch Zeal and Affection, as even their Enemies could not but like it. When they had made Invocation together, they aroſe and went to the Stake, where being ſoon encompaſſed with horrible Flames of Fire, they yielded their Souls and Lives glorioufly into the Hands of the Lord.

The Biſhop careth not for Patience and Charity.

This Bradbridge's Wife had two Children, the one named Patience, the other Charity, and when ſhe was condemned by the Biſhop, ſhe deſired (if ſhe muſt needs be burnt) that he would take Patience and Charity (meaning her two Children) and keep them. Nay, quoth the Biſhop, by the Faith of my Body, I will meddle with neither of them.

The Troubles and Examinations of Matthew Plaiſe.

Matthew Plaiſe of the Pariſh of Stone, in the County of Kent, Weaver, and a faithful Chriſtian, being apprehended and impriſon'd in the Caſtle of Canterbury, was brought to Examination in the Year 1557, before Thornton Biſhop of Dover, Archdeacon Harpsfield, Commiſſary Collins, and other Inquiſitors, in the following Manner:

Biſhop. Art thou of the Dioceſs of Canterbury, and where dwelleſt thou?

Plaiſe. I am of the Pariſh of Stone in Kent, and Subject to the King and Queen of England.

Biſhop. Thou wert indicted by twelve Men at the Seſſions at Aſhford for Hereſy.

Plaiſe. That is ſooner ſaid than proved.

Biſhop. I have ſpoken the Truth, and I can prove it.

Plaiſe. I deſire to hear it, and then I'll anſwer to it.

Biſhop. No, no; you ſhall anſwer to the Article, Yea or Nay.

Plaiſe. You cannot prove it; for I was not at Aſhford, and therefore you have nothing to lay to my Charge: But now I perceive you go about to lay a Net to have my Blood.

Harpsfield. Peace, Peace, we do not deſire thy Blood, but we are glad to hear that thou art no Heretick, (with many other flattering Words) yet thou art ſuſpected of Hereſy; and if thou wilt be content to confeſs how thou doſt believe as concerning thoſe Articles, we ſhall gladly teach thee.

Plaiſe. I do not think ſo, for I talked with one of your Doctors, and after long Talk, he would needs know how I believed in the Sacrament, and I recited unto him the Text, and becauſe I would not make my Expoſition to him upon it he would teach me nothing: Yet I pray'd him for my Inſtruction, to write his Mind, and if it were the Truth I would believe him; and this I deſired him for the Love of God, but it would not be.

Harpsfield. I dare ſwear upon a Book, that it is not ſo.

Plaiſe. Nay, I can prove it to be true.

Harpsfield. I will tell thee the Truth (and he ſtood up with a long Proceſs) I am ſure that the ſame Doctor doth believe as I do.

Plaiſe. How do you know that? ſeeing St. Paul doth ſay, That no Man knoweth what is in Man, but the Spirit which dwelleth in him: But if you knew what Chriſt meant by theſe Words, I require Mercy and not Sacrifice, Matth. 12. you would not kill Innocents.

Biſhop. I charge thee in the Name of the King and Queen and the Lord Cardinal, to anſwer Yea or Nay to the Articles.

Plaiſe. I command you in the Name of Him who ſhall come in flaming Fire with his mighty Angels to render Vengeance to the Diſobedient, and to all thoſe that believe not the Goſpel of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who ſhall be puniſhed with everlaſting Damnation, that you ſhall ſpeak nothing but the Truth grounded upon Chriſt and his Apoſtles, and then I will anſwer you, or elſe not.

Biſhop. Unleſs thou wilt anſwer to every Article

Article I will immediately condemn thee. (For the Bishop was very angry.)

Plaise. Well, if you do, you shall be guilty of my Blood, and prove yourself a Murderer.

Then the Archdeacon took the Articles in his Hand, and read the second Article, which was, that I was a Christian Man, and did believe in their Mother the Catholick Church, and the Determination thereof.

Plaise. I am a Christian Man indeed, and therefore you have nothing against me.

Harpsfield. What say'st thou to the Catholick Church, which hath so long continued, except it were nine or ten Years, that this Heresy hath sprung up here in this Realm?

Plaise. No Man can accuse me of any thing spoken against the Catholick Church of Christ.

Bishop. Dost thou not believe the Creed?

Plaise. Yes verily, I believe my Creed, and all that is written in the Testament of Christ, with the rest of the Scriptures.

Bishop. Thou dost confess that there is a Catholick Church, I am glad of that; but tell me, is the King and Queen of that Church or no?

Plaise. Well, now I perceive you go about to be both mine Accuser, and also my Judge, contrary to all Right. I confess Christ hath a Church upon Earth, which is built upon the Apostles and Prophets, Christ being the Head thereof; and as touching the King and Queen, I answer, I have nothing to do with any Man's Faith but mine own: Neither came I hither to judge; for I judge not myself, but the Lord must judge me.

Bishop. Is there no part of that Church here in England?

Plaise. Well, I perceive you would fain have something to lay to my Charge. I will tell you where. Christ saith, Where two or three be gathered together in his Name, there is he in the midst among them.

Then the Archdeacon stood up with his Mocks to put me out of Countenance, and said to the People that I had no Wit, but that I thought all they were deceived so long Time, and that half a dozen of us should have the Truth in a Corner, and that all they should be deceived, with such like Taunts and Mocks; but would not suffer me to speak one Word. Then he read the Article of the Sacrament, and said, I did deny the real Presence to be in the Sacrament after it was once consecrated, and that I said, Christ's Body was in Heaven, and no where else, and that the Bread was nothing but a Sign, Token, or Remembrance.

Plaise. You have to shew where and what my Words were. (Hereof we talked a great while.)

At last the Bishop was so angry, that he charged me in the Names of the King, Queen, and Cardinal, before the Mayor and his Brethren, taking them to witness, if I did not say Yea, or Nay, he would condemn me.

Then said I, seeing you have nothing to accuse me of, wherefore should I so answer?

Then the Archdeacon said I was guilty, and that I was like a Thief at the Bar, who would not confess his Fault because his Accusers were not present; with a great many more Words, and would not let me open my Mouth against him.

Then I saw whereabouts they went, granting to answer them by the Word, or else I think they would have condemned me for holding of my Peace; and this was my Beginning, I believe that Christ took Bread, and when he had given Thanks, he brake it, and gave it to his Disciples, and said, Take, eat, this is my Body which is given for you, this do in Remembrance of me. Anno 1557.

Harpsfield. Dost thou believe that Christ meant even as he said?

Plaise. Christ was no Dissembler, but he spake the very Truth.

Harpsfield. Thou hast very well said, we will take no Advantage of thy Words.

Then he praised me with many Words, going about to prove it his Body real and substantial, and said, Christ called himself Bread: and this to prove, when Christ said, This is my Body, the Bread was his Body, said he, indeed, real and substantial, not so long and so big as it hung on the Cross, as the Capernaites did think; but we eat it, as Man's weak Nature can eat Christ. Therefore when he had said, This is my Body, the Bread was his Body in very deed.

Plaise. What did Christ mean by these Words, Which is given for you?

Harpsfield. Christ spake that by the Bread also.

Plaise. Is Christ's Body made of Bread? was Bread given for our Redemption? or was the Bread crucify'd for us, or not?

Harpsfield. No, by St. Mary, I say not so.

Plaise. You have said the Truth indeed, and even as I believe.

Then he stood up with a great many Words, and said, that I thought it but bare Bread still, as other Bread is; but he was sure Christ called it his Body, and then it was his Body indeed; for he would believe Christ. Christ called it his Body: Ergo, he made it his Body. It followeth not: For a Thing may be called, and yet no Nature changed.

When he had spoken his Pleasure by me, thinking to have condemned me by his Law, I said, he had not judged right of me, for I had not so spoken, but did believe the Words of Christ as well as he, and as much as he could prove by the Word.

Harpsfield. What dost thou say it is?

Plaise. I do believe it was that which he gave them.

Harpsfield. What was that?

Plaise. That which he brake.

Harpsfield. What did he break?

Plaise. That which he took.

Harpsfield. What did he take?

Plaise. The Text saith, He took Bread?

Harpsfield. Well then, thou say'st it was but Bread that his Disciples did eat, by thy Reason.

Plaise. Thus much I say, Look, what he gave them, they did eat it indeed.

Harpsfield. Why, then was not that his Body which they did eat?

Plaise. It was that which he brake.

Harpsfield. Well, I perceive thy Meaning well enough; for thou dost think it is but Bread still, and that he was not able to make it his Body.

Plaise. That is your Exposition upon my Mind.

Harpsfield. What didst thou receive when thou didst receive last?

Plaise. I do believe that I did eat Christ's Flesh and drink his Blood. For he saith, My Flesh is Meat indeed, and my Blood is drink indeed.

Then he said, I had answered well, thinking to have had some Advantage over me, and pray'd

Anno 1557. pray'd me to tell him how I did eat Christ's Flesh and drink his Blood.

Then I said, I must answer you by the Word which Christ saith, He that eateth my Flesh and drinketh my Blood, dwelleth in me and I in him.

Then he faced out the Matter with Sophistry, and said, I did eat Christ as that Church was in his Eye, with many such Mocks, but would not let me answer one Word.

Commissary Collins then asked me, if I did not remember St. Paul, who rebuked the Corinthians for their evil Behaviour, and because they made no Difference of the Lord's Body, and brought in to prove his Matter, how he called himself Bread in the Sixth of John. So Paul saith, So oft as ye eat of this Bread, (meaning Christ's Body) unworthily, ye eat and drink your own Damnation, because ye make no Difference of the Lord's Body. For thus saith Christ, The Bread that I will give you is my Flesh. Now it is no Bread, but it is his Flesh. And thus he alledged every Scripture false, to make up the Matter.

Plaise. I believe the Words of St. Paul very well, even as he hath spoken to them. For thus he saith, He that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh his own Damnation, because he maketh no Difference of the Lord's Body.

Collins. What is the Cause that he eateth his own Damnation?

Plaise. St. Paul declareth it plainly with these Words, If ye had judged yourselves ye should not have been judged of the Lord.

Harpsfield. I marvel that you will not say, that he called the Bread his Body, seeing Cranmer, Ridley, and Latimer, with many others, called it his Body.

Plaise. You have condemned them as Hereticks, and you would have me say with them, because you would kill me.

Harpsfield. In that they said it was his Body, they said the Truth.

Plaise. Wherefore were they killed, seeing they said the Truth.

Bishop. I had all their Answers, and they did not believe as they said. For they said Christ called it his Body, but it was not his natural Body: But thou shalt answer me by and by, whether it be his Body or not, or else I will anger thee.

Plaise. I have answered you by the Word already, and I believe it also; therefore if you condemn me for that, my Life is not dear unto me, and I am sure you shall not escape unpunished: For God will be revenged on such Murderers.

Then the Archdeacon intreated me to be ruled by him, and take Mercy while it was offered; for if I were condemned, I must needs be burned. Yet he would not say but my Soul might be saved; with many more Words, and desired me that I would believe him, for he would speak the Truth: Beginning how Christ fed five thousand People with four Loaves, and how he turned the Water into Wine, even so Christ took Bread and blest it, and when he had done, he brake it and said, This is my Body, and then he commanded them to eat it: And therefore it must needs be his Body.

Plaise. I desire you to speak the Text right, or else I will not believe you.

Then Archdeacon Harpsfield stood up, and put off his Cap, and thanked me for teaching of him, and said, I was a stubborn Fellow, and took scorn to be taught.

Plaise. I ought to hold you accursed, if you teach Doctrine contrary to Christ and his Apostles.

Harpsfield. Do you believe that Christ gave that he took or not?

Plaise. I do believe as much as can be proved by the Scripture, and more I will not believe.

Then he began with Moses's Rod, how God commanded him to lay it down, and it was turned into a Serpent. Seeing that this was by Moses being but a Man, how much more Christ being both God and Man, took one Thing and gave to his Disciples another?

Comparison between turning Moses's Rod and the Bread into Christ's Body, not alike.

Plaise. Your Comparison is nothing like, for Moses's Rod when it was laid down, he saw that it was turned into a very Serpent indeed; but in this Sacrament no Man can see either Quality or yet Quantity to be changed.

Bishop. Your Opinion and Faith is like unto the Capernaites.

Plaise. Yours is more like their Opinion than mine.

Then Harpsfield asked me, whether Christ took not one Thing and gave another?

Plaise. What he brake he gave unto them, and bade them eat; and no other Answer will I make, contrary to the Word.

Then the Archdeacon said, he marvelled why I would not believe them, seeing this Learning had continued this fifteen hundred Years; neither yet did say, as others had before, how Christ did call it his Body.

Plaise. When Cranmer, who was here Bishop, was in Authority, he said, that he held the Truth, and commanded us to believe him, and he hath given his Life for his Opinion, and would you have me to believe you, because you say that you hold the Truth? And that which makes me believe chiefly, is the Scripture, which I am sure is the Truth indeed.

Bishop. I have spoken the Truth and you will not believe.

Plaise. If you do not now speak the Truth, I am sure you have spoke the Truth; (for he had before preached Doctrine contrary to this.)

Then the rest of my Articles were read; which I answered, and in every Article he had up this breaden God. And they sent for a Candle-light, and I thought they would have condemned me, but God would not suffer their cruel Hearts to have their Pleasure that Time: Blessed be his Name for evermore, Amen.

Then the Archdeacon was angry, and began to chide with me, because I would not desire a Day of the Bishop, and said, I was a naughty stubborn Fellow, and that it had been my Duty to have desired him to have been good to me, that I might have a Day.

Plaise. I have spoke the Truth; and therefore I will not ask him for a Day, except he would give me a Day of his own Mind.

Then the Commissary said, Dost thou not think that thou mayst be deceived, seeing he may be deceived that hath gone to study all the Days of his Life?

Plaise. Yea, I might be deceived in that I was a Man; but I was sure God's Word could not be deceived.

Then the Commissary prayed me to be content, and confessed that I might learn, and said, they would be glad to teach me.

Plaiſe. I will be as glad to learn as any Man.

And thus they roſe up and went away, ſaying nothing.

What became of this Matthew Plaiſe afterwards, whether he died in Priſon, or was executed, or delivered, I have as yet no certain Knowledge.

The Hiſtory of Ten Martyrs, who were burnt in one Fire at Lewes.

IN the Town of Lewes, on the 22d of June, the ten following Perſons ſuffered in one Fire.

Richard Woodman. George Stephens. W. Mainard. Alexander Horſeman, his Servant. Thomaſin a Wood, Mainard's Maid. Margery Moris. James Moris her Son. Denis Burgis. Aſhdon's Wife. Grove's Wife.

Of which Number Richard Woodman was the firſt, who by his Occupation was an Iron-maker dwelling in the Pariſh of Warbleton in the County of Suſſex, and Dioceſs of Chicheſter, about the Age of 30 Years. The Occaſion of his firſt Apprehenſion was this:

There was one Fairebanke, who had ſome Time been a married Prieſt, and ſerved the Cure of Warbleton, where he had often perſuaded the People not to credit any other Doctrine but that which he then preached, taught and ſet forth in King Edward's Days. And afterward in the Beginning of Mary's Reign, the ſaid Fairebanke preached clean contrary to that which he had before taught.

Whereupon Richard Woodman hearing him preach ſo contrary to himſelf, admoniſhed him of his Inconſtancy, how before Time he had taught them one Thing, and now another, and deſired him to teach them the Truth. For which Words he was apprehended, and brought before Mr. John Aſhburnham, Mr. Tonſton, Mr. Culpepper and Mr. Roberts, Juſtices of Peace in the County of Suſſex, and by them committed to the King's-Bench, where he continued from June, the ſpace almoſt of a Year and half; and from thence was transferred by Dr. Story into Biſhop Bonner's Coal-houſe, where he remained a Month before he came to Examination.

At length, the ſame Day when Mr. Philpot was burned, which was the 18th of December, he with four other Priſoners was ſet at Liberty by Biſhop Bonner. Notwithſtanding ſhortly after he was ſought for again, and at laſt taken by Means of his Father, Brother, and other Friends, and was ſent up again to Biſhop Bonner, where he remained in the Coal-houſe eight Weeks. He was there ſix Times examined, and 26 Times before, ſo that his Examinations were in all 32, from his Apprehenſion to his Condemnation. And foraſmuch as the Matter is ſomething ſtrange, and will peradventure ſcarce find Credit upon my Narration, with them who deny all Things that do not pleaſe them, ye ſhall hear himſelf ſpeak and teſtify both of the Manner of his Troubles, and alſo his own Examinations, as recorded by himſelf in the following Manner:

Anno 1557.

A true Certificate written by Richard Woodman, of his Apprehenſion and Impriſonment, and how he was there uſed, till he was brought before the Biſhop of Chicheſter at Black-Friars in London, together with his Examinations.

GEntle Reader, you will here perceive how the Scriptures be partly fulfilled on me, being one of the leaſt of his poor Lambs. Firſt, you ſhall underſtand, that ſince I was delivered out of the Biſhop of London's Hands in the Year 1555, and the ſame Day that Mr. Philpot was burned, which was the 18th of December, I lay in his Coal-houſe eight Weeks lacking one Day: And before that I was a Year and a half almoſt in the King's-Bench after my firſt Apprehenſion, for reproving a Preacher in the Pulpit in the Pariſh of Warbleton where I dwelt. Wherefore I was at two Seſſions before I was ſent to Priſon, and carried to two more Seſſions while I was in Priſon, twice before the Biſhop of Chicheſter, and five Times before the Commiſſioners; and then ſent to Bonner's Coal-houſe, and many Times called before him, as it appeareth by my Examinations which I have wrote.

And it pleaſed God to deliver me with four more out of the Butcher's Hands, requiring nothing elſe of us but that we ſhould be honeſt Men, and Members of the true Catholick Church that was built upon the Prophets and Apoſtles, Chriſt being the Head of the true Church; to which we all affirmed, that we were Members of the true Church, and purpoſed by God's Help therein to die. And hereupon we were delivered; but he ordered us many Times to ſpeak good of him. And no doubt he was worthy to be praiſed, becauſe he had been ſo faithful an Aid in his Maſter the Devil's Buſineſs. For he had burnt good Mr. Philpot the ſame Morning, in whoſe Blood his Heart was ſo drunken (as I ſuppoſed) that he could not tell what he did, as it appeared to us both before and after. For but two Days before he promiſed us that we ſhould be condemned that ſame Day that we were delivered, yea, and the Morrow after that he had delivered us, he ſought for ſome of us again, yea, and that earneſtly. He waxed dry after his great Drunkenneſs, wherefore he is like to have Blood to drink in Hell as he is worthy, if he repent it not with Speed. The Lord turn all their Hearts, if it be his Will.

This have I written, chiefly to certify all People how we were delivered, becauſe many carnal Goſpellers and Papiſts have ſaid, that it was preſcribed that we ſhould be ſo delivered, becauſe they think that God is ſubject to Man, and not Man to God. For if they did they would not blaſpheme him as they do, or if they thought they ſhould give an Account for it. Have not many of them read how God delivered Iſrael out of Egypt, Daniel out of the Lion's Den? Shadrach, Meſhach, and Abednego, out of the burning Oven? with divers other ſuch like Examples; yea God is the ſame God that he was then. He is no older, nor leſs in Power, as ſome count him, in wondering at his Works. Now to the Matter.

After I was delivered, the Papiſts ſaid, that I had conſented to them, whereof they made themſelves glad; which was the leaſt Part of my Thought, (I praiſe God for it) as they Falſe Surmiſes againſt R. Woodman.

Anno 1557. well perceived, and knew the contrary in a ſhort Time. For I went from Pariſh to Pariſh, and talked with them, to the Number of 13 or 14, and that of the chiefeſt in all the Country; and I angered them ſo, that they with the Commiſſioners complained on me to the Lord Chamberlain that was then to the Queen, Sir John Gage ſhewing him that I baptized Children, and married People, with many ſuch Lies, to bring me into their Hands again. Then the Commiſſioners ſent out certain Citations to bring me to the Court. The Lord Chamberlain had directed out three or four Warrants for me, that if I had come there I ſhould have been attached, and immediately ſent to Priſon; which was not God's Will, for I had Warning of their lying in wait for me, and went not thither, but ſent my Deputy, and he brought me Word that the Bailiffs waited for me there, but they miſſed of their Prey for that Time, whereupon they were diſpleaſed.

Warrants ſent out to attach Woodman.

Then within three Days after, my Lord ſent three of his Men to take me, whoſe Names were Dean, Jeffrey, and Francis. I being at plough with my Folks, right in the Way as they were coming to my Houſe, leaſt miſtruſting them of all others, came and ſpake to them, asking them how they did. And they ſaid they arreſted me in the Name of the King and Queen, and that I muſt go with them to their Maſter the Lord Chamberlain. Which Words made my Fleſh to tremble and quake, being ſuddenly ſurprized. But I anſwered them that I would go with them. Yet I deſired them that they would go with me to my Houſe, that I might break my Faſt, and put on ſome other Apparel; and they ſaid I ſhould. Then I remember'd myſelf, ſaying in my Heart, Why am I thus afraid? they can lay no Evil to my Charge. If they kill me for well doing I may think myſelf happy. I remembred how I was willing gladly before to die in that Quarrel, and ſo had continued ever ſince; and ſhould I now fear to die? God forbid; for then were all my Labour in vain.

Lord Chamberlain ſendeth to take Woodman at his Plough.

So by and by I was perſuaded, I praiſe God, conſidering it was but the Frailty of my Fleſh, which was loth to forego my Wife and Children, and Goods: For I ſaw nothing but preſent Death before mine Eyes. And as ſoon as I was perſuaded in my Mind to die, I had regard to nothing in this World, but I was as merry and as joyful, I praiſe God, as ever I was. This Battle laſted not a quarter of an Hour; but it was ſharper than Death itſelf for the Time it laſted.

So when I had my Breakfaſt, I deſired them to ſhew me their Warrant, thinking thereby I ſhould have ſeen wherefore I was arreſted, to the Intent I might the better anſwer for myſelf, when I came before their Maſter. And one of them anſwered, they had not their Warrant there. Which Words made me aſtoniſhed, and it was put into my Mind by God, that I need not go with them, unleſs they had their Warrant. Then ſaid I to them, that is a Wonder that you will come to take a Man without a Warrant. It ſeemeth to me that you come of your own Mind to get Thanks of your Maſter; for indeed I heard ſay, (ſaid I) that there was 4 or 5 Warrants out for me, but they were all called in again, becauſe I had certify'd my Lord and the Commiſſary, by a Letter that I had ſent to the Commiſſary's Court, that I was not faulty in that they laid to my Charge, which was baptizing of Children, and marrying Folks; which I never did; for I was never a Miniſter appointed to do any ſuch Thing: Wherefore ſet your Hearts at reſt, I will not go with you, (ſaid I) unleſs you will carry me by Force, and if you will do ſo, be it at your Peril. And ſo I roſe from the Table, and ſtepped into my Chamber, meaning to go from them if I could poſſible, ſeeing God had made the Way ſo open for me. I meant to play Peter's Part with them, but God would not it ſhould be ſo, but ſent a Fear amongſt them, that as ſoon as I was gone into my Chamber, e're ever I could come out again, they were gone out of my Houſe.

When I ſaw that, I knew it was God's Doing to ſet me at Liberty once again. Yet I was compelled to ſpeak to them, and ſaid, If you have a Warrant, I deſire you for God's ſake to ſhew it me, and I will go with you with all my Heart: If not, I deſire you to depart in God's Peace and the King's: For ſurely I will not go along with you without the Order of the Law; for I have been too ſimple in ſuch Things already. For before I was ſent to Priſon firſt, I met the Juſtices at two Seſſions without any Warrant or Commandment, but had Word by one of their Men, and I went juſtly to them, and they ſent me to Priſon, and kept me there almoſt a Year and three Quarters, without all Right or Equity, as it is openly known, not hearing my Cauſe gently debated. And it ſeemeth ſtrange to me that I ſhould be thus evil handled; and therefore I will go to none of them all henceforth, without the Extremity of the Law.

Then one of them anſwered me, and ſaid, We have not the Warrant here, but it is at home at my Houſe; the worſt is, you can but make us fetch it. Then ſaid I, Fetch it if you will; but if you come in my Houſe before you have it, at your Venture be it. So I ſhut my Door, and went my Way out at the other Door. So they got Help to watch my Houſe, whilſt one of them fetch'd the Conſtable and many more, thinking to have found me in my Houſe, and carry'd me away with a Licenſe; but, as God would have it, I was gone before. Notwithſtanding they ſought every Corner of my Houſe, but to no Purpoſe. I miſtruſted they would ſearch it that Night again, and I kept myſelf abroad; and indeed there came ſeven of his Men and the Conſtable, and ſearched my Houſe.

And when they ſaw that they could not meet with me, they were ready to rend their Coats, that I had ſo eſcaped them, knowing that they ſhould have a Check from their Maſter. When I heard that they had ſo ſought for me again, I perceiving that they were greedy of their Prey, came home, and my Wife told me all Things.

Then I ſuppoſed that they would ſearch all the Country for me, and the Sea Coaſt, becauſe I ſhould not go over; and then I thought that they would not miſtruſt that I would dare be nigh Home. So I told my Wife, that I would take my Lodging in a Wood near my Houſe, as indeed I did, even under a Tree, and there had my Bible, my Pen and mine Ink, and other Neceſſaries, and there I continued ſix or ſeven Weeks, my Wife bringing me Meat daily as I had need. Yea, I thought myſelf bleſſed bleſſed of God, that I was counted worthy to lie in the Woods for the Name of Chriſt. Then there came Word into the Country, that I was ſeen and ſpoken with in Flanders; whereupon they left laying in Wait for me: For they had ſought all the Country for me, and the Sea Coaſt from Portſmouth to Dover, even as God put it in my Mind they would.

So when all was huſh'd, I went abroad among our Friends and Brethren, and at length I went beyond the Sea both into Flanders and in France? but I thought every Day ſeven Years whilſt I was there; ſo I came home again as ſoon as it was poſſible. I was there but three Weeks, before the Prieſts of Baal diſcover'd me, who procured out Warrants againſt me, cauſing my Houſe to be ſearched ſometimes twice in a Week. This continued from St. James-tide to the firſt Sunday in Lent. Otherwhile I went privily, otherwhile openly, otherwhile I went frome Home a Fortnight or three Weeks, otherwhiles I was at home a Month or five Weeks together, living there moſt commonly and openly, about my ordinary Buſineſs, and yet all mine Enemies could lay no Hands on me, till the Hour was full come: And then by the Voice of the Country, and by manifeſt Proofs, mine own Brother as concerning the Fleſh, delivered me into their Hands, by that he knew that I was at home.

He is delivered into the Hands of his Enemies by his Brother.

For my Father and he had as much of my Effects in their Hands, as I might have 56*l.* a Year for clear. It was a Lordſhip and an Honour, and half an Honour that I had delivered into their Hands to pay my Debts, and the reſt to remain with my Wife and Children. But they had reported that it would not pay my Debts; which grieved me ſore; for it was 200*l.* better than the Debts came to; which cauſed me to ſpeak to ſome of my Friends, that they would ſpeak to them to come to ſome Reckoning with me, and to take all ſuch Money again of me as they were charged with, and to deliver me ſuch Writings and Writs as they had of mine again, or to whom I ſhould appoint them.

So it was agreed betwixt my Father and me, that I ſhould have it again, and the Day was appointed that the Reckoning ſhould be made and ſent to me the ſame Day that I was taken; my Brother ſuppoſing that I ſhould have put him out of moſt of all his Occupying that he was in; for it was all mine, in a Manner, that he occupy'd, as all the Country can, and do well know. Whereupon (as it is reported) he told one Cardillar, my next Neighbour, and he told ſome of Mr. Gage's Men, or to Mr. Gage himſelf: And ſo he ſent to his Brother, and his Brother ſent twelve of his Men (he being Sheriff) in the Night before I was taken, and lay in the Buſhes near my Houſe, till about nine of the Clock, even the Hour that was appointed amongſt themſelves; for about the ſame Time they thought to have had me within my Houſe.

They had taken a Man of mine, and two of my Children that were abroad in the Land, and kept them with them till their Hour was appointed to come in; and then a little Girl, one of my Children, ſaw them come together, and came running in, and cried, Mother, Mother, yonder cometh twenty Men. I ſitting in my Bed, and making of Shoe-thongs, heard the Words, and ſuſpecting ſtraightway that I was betray'd, I put on my Hoſe, thinking to have gone out of the Doors before they had come. My Wife being amazed at the Child's Words, looked out at the Door, and they were hard by. Then ſhe clapped too the Door, and barred it faſt, even as I came out of my Chamber into the Hall, and ſo barred the other. They immediately beſet the Houſe, and commanded the Doors to be opened, or they would break them in Pieces. Then I had no Shift, but either I muſt ſhew myſelf openly, or make ſome other Remedy.

Woodman's Houſe beſet and ſearched.

So there was a Place in my Houſe which was never found out, which was at the leaſt, I dare ſay, ſearched twenty Times, and ſometimes almoſt of twenty Men at once: Into which Place I went. And then my Wife opened the Door, and they came in and asked for me: And ſhe ſaid I was not at home. Then they asked her why ſhe ſhut the Door, if I was not at home. She ſaid, becauſe ſhe had been made afraid divers Times with ſuch as came to ſearch us; and therefore ſhe ſhut the Door: For it is reported (ſaid ſhe) that whoſoever can take my Husband, ſhall hang him or burn him ſtraightway; and therefore I doubt they will ſerve me or my Children ſo; for I think they may do ſo unto us as well as to him, ſhe ſaid. Well, ſaid they, we know he is in the Houſe, and we muſt ſearch it, for we be the Sheriff's Men; let us have a Candle: It is told us there are many ſecret Places in your Houſe. So ſhe lighted a Candle, and they ſought up and down in every Corner that they could find, and had given over, and many of them were gone out of my Houſe into the Church-yard, and there talking with my Father and with ſome that he had brought with him.

A truſty Wife to her Husband.

Now when they could not find me, one of them went to him who informed them I was at home, and ſaid we cannot find him. Then he asked them whether they had ſought over a Window that was in the Hall (as it was known afterward) for that ſame Place I had told him of myſelf. For many Times when I came home, I would ſend for him to bear me Company; yet as it chanced, I had not told him the Way into it. Then they began to ſearch anew. One looked up over the Window, and ſpied a little Loft, with three or four Cheſts, and the Way went in betwixt two of the Cheſts, but no Man could perceive it. Then he asked my Wife which was the Way into it: Here is a Place that we have not ſought yet. When ſhe thought they would ſee it by one Means or other, ſhe ſaid, the Way into it was out of a Chamber they were in even now. So ſhe ſent them up, and cried, Away, away. Then I knew there was no Remedy, but made the beſt ſhift for myſelf that I could. The Place was boarded over, and faſt nailed, and if I had come out that Way that I went in, I muſt needs come out among them all in the Hall. Then I had no Shift, but ſet my Shoulders to the Boards that were nailed to the Rafters to keep out the Rain, and brake them in Pieces, which made a great Noiſe; and they that were in the other Chamber, ſeeking the Way into it, heard the Noiſe, and looked out of a Window, and ſpied me, and made an Out-cry. But yet I got out and leaped down, having no Shoes on.

This belike was his Brother.

Woodman after long ſeeking, found out.

So I took down a Lane that was full of ſharp Cinders, and they came running after with a great Cry, with their Swords drawn, crying, Strike him, ſtrike him. Which Anno 1557. Words made me look back, and there was never a one nigh me by an hundred Foot; and that was but one, for all the reſt were a great Way behind. And I turn'd about haſtily to go my Way, and ſtepped upon a ſharp Cinder with one Foot, and ſaving of it I ſtepped into a great miry Hole, and fell down withal, and before I could ariſe and get away, he was come in with me. His Name was Parker the Wild, as he is counted in all Suſſex. But if I had had on my Shoes, they had been like to have gone away errandleſs, if there had been five hundred more, if I had caught the plain Ground once, to which I had not a Stone's caſt: But it was not God's Will; for if it had, I ſhould have eſcaped from them all, if there had been ten thouſand of them.

Then they took me and led me home again to put on my Shoes, and ſuch Cloaths as I had need of. Then ſaid John Fauconer, Now your Maſter hath deceived you. You ſaid you were an Angel, and if you had been an Angel, why did you not flee away from us? Then ſaid I, Who be they that ever heard me ſay that I was an Angel? It is not the firſt Lye by a thouſand that they have made of me. Angels were never begotten of Men, nor born of Women: But if they had ſaid, they had heard me ſay, That I do truſt I am a Saint, they had not ſaid amiſs. What do you think to be a Saint? Yea that I do, and am already in God's Sight, I truſt in God; for he that is not a Saint in God's Sight already, is a Devil. Therefore he that thinketh ſcorn to be a Saint, let him be a Devil. And with that Word they had brought me to mine own Door, where I met with my Father, who deſired me to remember myſelf.

To whom I anſwered, I praiſe God, I am well remembered whereabout I go. This Way was appointed of God for me to be deliver'd into the Hands of mine Enemies, but woe unto him by whom I am betray'd. It had been good for that Man, that he had never been born, if he repent not with Speed. The Scriptures are now fulfilled on me, For the Father ſhall be againſt the Son, and the Brother ſhall deliver the Brother to Death, as it is this Day come to paſs. Then ſaid one, He doth accuſe his Father, a good Child indeed. I accuſe him not, but ſay my Mind; for there was no Man knew me at home, but my Father, my Brother, and one more, who I dare ſay would not hurt me for all the Good in this Town.

There was one George Beching that married one of my Siſters, and he thought that I had meant him, that he had betray'd me; and he ſaid, Brother, I would you ſhould not think that I was the Cauſe of your taking. To whom I anſwered, that I meant him not; I meant one that was nearer of my Blood than he was. Then one from Lauſe ſaid, that I had been a Goſpeller, and ſtood from them when I was brought to a Seſſions at Lauſe, and he ſaid, I thought you would have been an honeſt Man when you were at Lauſe, and I offered Huſſey the Sheriff to be bound for you, that you ſhould go home to your Wife, and come to him again. Then I remembered what he was, and ſaid, Be you the Pewterer? and he ſaid, Yea. Then, ſaid I, It has happened to you according to the true Proverb, as ſaith St. Peter, The Dog is turned to his Vomit again, and the Sow that is waſhed, to wallow in the Mire, and the End of all ſuch will be worſe than the Beginning. Then his Mouth was ſtopped, ſo that he had nothing to ſay.

A Pewterer of Lauſe a Turn coat.

All this Time I ſtood the outſide of my Door; for they would not let me go in. So I put on my Shoes and my Cloaths, then they put an Harneſs about my Arms made of a Dog's ſlip, which rejoiced my Heart that I was counted worthy to be bound for the Name of God. So I took my Leave of my Wife and Children, my Father and other of my Friends, never expecting to ſee them any more in this World. For it was ſo thought of all the Country, that I ſhould not live ſix Days after my Apprehenſion; for they had ſo reported. But yet I knew it was not as they would, unleſs God would grant it, I know what God can do; but what he will do I know not: But I am ſure he will work all Things for the beſt to them that love and fear him. So we drank and went our Way, and came to Firle about three of the Clock. And thus much touching the Cauſes and Effect of the Troubles of Richard Woodman. Now let us ſee his Examinations, which follow in this Order.

ON the 12th Day of April, in the Year of our Lord 1557, I was ſent from the Sheriffs to London, and afterwards on the 14th of the ſame Month I was brought before the Biſhop of Chicheſter, Dr. Story, and Dr. Cook. So the Sheriff's Men deliver'd my Warrant and me to the Biſhop. Then the Biſhop asked me what my Name was. My Name (quoth I) is Richard Woodman.

Chicheſter. I am ſorry for you, and ſo are all the worſhipful Men of your Country. For it hath been reported to me, that you have been a Man of good Eſtimation of all the Country, amongſt the Poor and Rich, till now of late. Wherefore look well upon yourſelf, your Wife and Children, your Father, and other of your Friends, and be ruled. Think not yourſelf wiſer than all the Realm. Be informed, and you ſhall have the Favour of them all, as much as ever you had.

Woodman. You have charged me with many Things wherein I have never offended: As if you will give me Leave, I will ſhew you.

Chich. Yes, I pray you ſay your Mind.

Woodman. May it pleaſe you, you have charged me as though I made myſelf wiſer than all the Realm; God doth know, I ſtand to learn of every Man that will or can teach me the Truth. And whereas you ſay, I have been well eſteemed both of the Poor and Rich, God doth know, I know not that I have given any juſt Offence, either to Rich or Poor. And as for my Wife and Children, God doth know how I love them in him, and my Life alſo. My Life, my Wife and my Children are all in God's Hands, and I have them all as I had them not, I truſt, according to St. Paul's Words. But if I had ten thouſand Pounds of Gold, I had rather forego it all, than them if I might be in Choice, and not diſpleaſe God.

Chich. The Sheriff took Pains to come to me out of Love, which he bare to you as to himſelf; bleſſed of God, that I was counted worthy to lie in the Woods for the Name of Chriſt. Then there came Word into the Country, that I was ſeen and ſpoken with in Flanders; whereupon they left laying in Wait for me: For they had ſought all the Country for me, and the Sea Coaſt from Portſmouth to Dover, even as God put it in my Mind they would.

So when all was huſh'd, I went abroad among our Friends and Brethren, and at length I went beyond the Sea both into Flanders and in France? but I thought every Day ſeven Years whilſt I was there; ſo I came home again as ſoon as it was poſſible. I was there but three Weeks, before the Prieſts of Baal diſcover'd me, who procured out Warrants againſt me, cauſing my Houſe to be ſearched ſometimes twice in a Week. This continued from St. James-tide to the firſt Sunday in Lent. Otherwhile I went privily, otherwhile openly, otherwhile I went frome Home a Fortnight or three Weeks, otherwhiles I was at home a Month or five Weeks together, living there moſt commonly and openly, about my ordinary Buſineſs, and yet all mine Enemies could lay no Hands on me, till the Hour was full come: And then by the Voice of the Country, and by manifeſt Proofs, mine own Brother as concerning the Fleſh, delivered me into their Hands, by that he knew that I was at home.

He is delivered into the Hands of his Enemies by his Brother.

For my Father and he had as much of my Effects in their Hands, as I might have 56*l.* a Year for clear. It was a Lordſhip and an Honour, and half an Honour that I had delivered into their Hands to pay my Debts, and the reſt to remain with my Wife and Children. But they had reported that it would not pay my Debts; which grieved me ſore; for it was 200*l.* better than the Debts came to; which cauſed me to ſpeak to ſome of my Friends, that they would ſpeak to them to come to ſome Reckoning with me, and to take all ſuch Money again of me as they were charged with, and to deliver me ſuch Writings and Writs as they had of mine again, or to whom I ſhould appoint them.

So it was agreed betwixt my Father and me, that I ſhould have it again, and the Day was appointed that the Reckoning ſhould be made and ſent to me the ſame Day that I was taken; my Brother ſuppoſing that I ſhould have put him out of moſt of all his Occupying that he was in; for it was all mine, in a Manner, that he occupy'd, as all the Country can, and do well know. Whereupon (as it is reported) he told one Cardillar, my next Neighbour, and he told ſome of Mr. Gage's Men, or to Mr. Gage himſelf: And ſo he ſent to his Brother, and his Brother ſent twelve of his Men (he being Sheriff) in the Night before I was taken, and lay in the Buſhes near my Houſe, till about nine of the Clock, even the Hour that was appointed amongſt themſelves; for about the ſame Time they thought to have had me within my Houſe.

They had taken a Man of mine, and two of my Children that were abroad in the Land, and kept them with them till their Hour was appointed to come in; and then a little Girl, one of my Children, ſaw them come together, and came running in, and cried, Mother, Mother, yonder cometh twenty Men. I ſitting in my Bed, and making of Shoe-thongs, heard the Words, and ſuſpecting ſtraightway that I was betray'd, I put on my Hoſe, thinking to have gone out of the Doors before they had come. My Wife being amazed at the Child's Words, looked out at the Door, and they were hard by. Then ſhe clapped too the Door, and barred it faſt, even as I came out of my Chamber into the Hall, and ſo barred the other. They immediately beſet the Houſe, and commanded the Doors to be opened, or they would break them in Pieces. Then I had no Shift, but either I muſt ſhew myſelf openly, or make ſome other Remedy.

Woodman's Houſe beſet and ſearched.

So there was a Place in my Houſe which was never found out, which was at the leaſt, I dare ſay, ſearched twenty Times, and ſometimes almoſt of twenty Men at once: Into which Place I went. And then my Wife opened the Door, and they came in and asked for me: And ſhe ſaid I was not at home. Then they asked her why ſhe ſhut the Door, if I was not at home. She ſaid, becauſe ſhe had been made afraid divers Times with ſuch as came to ſearch us; and therefore ſhe ſhut the Door: For it is reported (ſaid ſhe) that whoſoever can take my Husband, ſhall hang him or burn him ſtraightway; and therefore I doubt they will ſerve me or my Children ſo; for I think they may do ſo unto us as well as to him, ſhe ſaid. Well, ſaid they, we know he is in the Houſe, and we muſt ſearch it, for we be the Sheriff's Men; let us have a Candle: It is told us there are many ſecret Places in your Houſe. So ſhe lighted a Candle, and they ſought up and down in every Corner that they could find, and had given over, and many of them were gone out of my Houſe into the Church-yard, and there talking with my Father and with ſome that he had brought with him.

A truſty Wife to her Husband.

Now when they could not find me, one of them went to him who informed them I was at home, and ſaid we cannot find him. Then he asked them whether they had ſought over a Window that was in the Hall (as it was known afterward) for that ſame Place I had told him of myſelf. For many Times when I came home, I would ſend for him to bear me Company; yet as it chanced, I had not told him the Way into it. Then they began to ſearch anew. One looked up over the Window, and ſpied a little Loft, with three or four Cheſts, and the Way went in betwixt two of the Cheſts, but no Man could perceive it. Then he asked my Wife which was the Way into it: Here is a Place that we have not ſought yet. When ſhe thought they would ſee it by one Means or other, ſhe ſaid, the Way into it was out of a Chamber they were in even now. So ſhe ſent them up, and cried, Away, away. Then I knew there was no Remedy, but made the beſt ſhift for myſelf that I could. The Place was boarded over, and faſt nailed, and if I had come out that Way that I went in, I muſt needs come out among them all in the Hall. Then I had no Shift, but ſet my Shoulders to the Boards that were nailed to the Rafters to keep out the Rain, and brake them in Pieces, which made a great Noiſe; and they that were in the other Chamber, ſeeking the Way into it, heard the Noiſe, and looked out of a Window, and ſpied me, and made an Out-cry. But yet I got out and leaped down, having no Shoes on.

This belike was his Brother.

Woodman after long ſeeking, found out.

So I took down a Lane that was full of ſharp Cinders, and they came running after with a great Cry, with their Swords drawn, crying, Strike him, ſtrike him. Which Now let us ſee his Examinations, which follow in this Order.

ON the 12th Day of April, in the Year of our Lord 1557, I was ſent from the Sheriffs to London, and afterwards on the 14th of the ſame Month I was brought before the Biſhop of Chicheſter, Dr. Story, and Dr. Cook. So the Sheriff's Men deliver'd my Warrant and me to the Biſhop. Then the Biſhop asked me what my Name was. My Name (quoth I) is Richard Woodman.

Chicheſter. I am ſorry for you, and ſo are all the worſhipful Men of your Country. For it hath been reported to me, that you have been a Man of good Eſtimation of all the Country, amongſt the Poor and Rich, till now of late. Wherefore look well upon yourſelf, your Wife and Children, your Father, and other of your Friends, and be ruled. Think not yourſelf wiſer than all the Realm. Be informed, and you ſhall have the Favour of them all, as much as ever you had.

Woodman. You have charged me with many Things wherein I have never offended: As if you will give me Leave, I will ſhew you.

Chich. Yes, I pray you ſay your Mind.

Woodman. May it pleaſe you, you have charged me as though I made myſelf wiſer than all the Realm; God doth know, I ſtand to learn of every Man that will or can teach me the Truth. And whereas you ſay, I have been well eſteemed both of the Poor and Rich, God doth know, I know not that I have given any juſt Offence, either to Rich or Poor. And as for my Wife and Children, God doth know how I love them in him, and my Life alſo. My Life, my Wife and my Children are all in God's Hands, and I have them all as I had them not, I truſt, according to St. Paul's Words. But if I had ten thouſand Pounds of Gold, I had rather forego it all, than them if I might be in Choice, and not diſpleaſe God.

Chich. The Sheriff took Pains to come to me out of Love, which he bare to you as to himſelf; himself; and said you were desirous to speak with me.

Woodman. I thought it meet to appeal to mine Ordinary. For they go about to shed my Blood unrighteously. For they have laid many unjust Things to my Charge. Wherefore I thought it meet to appeal to you, that if you can find any Fault in me meet to be reformed by God's Word, I stand to be reformed; and likewise if my Blood shall be shed unrighteously, that it might be required at your Hands, because you have taken upon you to be the Physician of our Country.

Story. Is not this a perverse Fellow, to lay to your Charge, that his Blood shall be required at your Hands? Thinkest thou that thou shalt be put to Death unjustly, that thy Blood should be required? No, if he should condemn an hundred such Hereticks as thou art. I helped to rid a good many of you: And I promise thee, I will help to rid thee too the best that I can.

Then I would have answered him, but the Bishop desired us both to give him Place.

Chich. Well, Neighbour Woodman, I call you Neighbour, because ye be one of my Dioceses; and you are sent to me that I should give you spiritual Counsel: For I am your spiritual Pastor. Therefore hear what I shall say to you.

Wood. First, I desire you to hear me a few Words. You have said, you will give me spiritual Counsel: Be you sure that you have the Spirit of God?

Chich. No, I am not sure of that.

Wood. No! be you not sure of that?

Chich. No, by St. Mary, I dare not be so bold to say so; I doubt of that.

Wood. Then you be like the Waves of the Sea, as saith St. James, that be tossed about with the Wind, and be unstable in all your Ways, and can look for no good Thing at the Lord's Hand: Yea, ye are neither hot nor cold, and therefore God will spue you out of his Mouth, as saith St. John.

Then they were in a great Fury, especially Dr. Story, who said,

What a perverse Fellow is this? He hath the Devil within him, and is mad. He is worse than the Devil. Now I perceive that it is true that is reported by thee, and it is the Pride of all such Hereticks to boast themselves.

Chich. Yea surely, he is sent to me to learn, and taketh upon him to teach me.

Wood. The Jews said to Christ, he had the Devil, and was mad, as you have said here by me. But I know the Servant is not above his Master. And God forbid that I should learn of him, who confesseth that he hath not the Spirit of God.

Chich. Why, do you think that you have the Spirit of God?

Wood. I believe verily that I have the Spirit of God.

Chich. You boast more than ever Paul did, or any of the Apostles, which is great Presumption.

Wood. I boast not in myself, but in the Gift of God, as Paul did; for he said he believed verily that he had the Spirit of God, making thereof no Doubts, 1 Cor. 7.

Chich. It is not so, you bely the Text.

Wood. If it be not so, let me be burnt To-morrow.

Story. Thou shalt not be burned To-morrow, but thou shalt be burned within these six Days, I promise thee. Anno 1557.

Chich. If it be so, it is wrong translated, as it is in a thousand Places more.

Then one looked in a Latin Testament, and another in a Grcek Testament, and they said it was in them both, that Paul supposed that he had the Spirit of God, but he was not sure.

Chich. Even so I hope, and suppose that I have the Spirit of God, but am not sure.

Wood. If that Place be wrong translated, and so many Places of the Bible as you say, then I may say with Christ, it cannot be avoided but Offences must be given; but woe unto them by whom they come. I may say, Woe unto false Translators: For cursed are they that add or take away. But take you heed that you bely not the Translators. I believe they had the Fear of God more before their Eyes, than you report of them. And yet if that Place be wrong translated, I can prove by Places enough, that Paul had the Spirit of God, as I myself and all God's Elect have.

Chich. How prove you that?

Wood. No Man can believe that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost, 1 Cor. 7. I do believe that Jesus Christ is my Redeemer, and that I shall be saved from all my Sins by his Death and Blood-shedding, as Paul and all the Apostles did; and as all faithful People ought to do; which no Man can do without the Spirit of God. And as there is no Damnation to them that are in Christ Jesus; so is there no Salvation to them that are not in Christ Jesus. For he that hath not the Spirit of Christ, is none of his, but is a cast-away, as he saith in the same Text. And again, We have not received the Spirit of Bondage, to fear any more, but we have received the Spirit of Adoption, whereby we cry, Abba Father. The same Spirit certifieth our Spirits, that we are the Sons of God. Here are Proofs enough that Paul was sure that he had the Spirit of God. Also St. John saith, He that believeth not that Christ is come in the Flesh, is an Antichrist, and denieth both the Father and the Son: Which is Sin against the Holy Ghost, which shall never be forgiven in this World, nor in the World to come. Besides all this, He that believeth in God, dwelleth in God, and God in him. So it is impossible to believe in God, unless God dwell in us. O good God! what more Injury can be done unto thee, than to mistrust that we have received thy Holy Spirit by thy Gift? Thus may all Men see their Blindness, and whose Servants they be, as they do declare themselves both by their Words and Deeds. Rom. 8. Gal. 4. 2 Tim. 4. 8.

Story. O my Lord, what an Heretick is this same? Why hear you him? Send him to Prison to his Fellows in the Marshalsea, and they shall be dispatch'd within these twelve Days.

When I heard him say so I rejoyced greatly in my Heart, desiring God, if it were his Will, to keep him in that Mind: For I looked surely to have gone to the Bishop of London's Coalhouse, or Lollard's-Tower, yea, I thought myself happy if I might have gone to Lollard's-Tower: But it pleased God to put in their Hearts to send me to the Marshalsea amongst our Brethren and my old Fellow-prisoners. So merciful hath God dealt with me in easing of my Burden that I looked for.

And when they perceived that I feared not Imprison-

Anno 1557. Impriſonment, but rather rejoyced, as they well perceived, the Biſhop ſaid, Methinks he is not afraid of the Priſon.

Wood. No, I praiſe the living God.

The living God is a Point of Hereſy among the Papiſts.

Story. This is an Heretick indeed. He hath the right Terms of all Hereticks: The living God, I pray you be there dead Gods that you ſay the living God?

Wood. Be you angry with me, becauſe I ſpeak the Words that are written in the Bible?

Story. Bibble babble, bibble babble. What ſpeakeſt thou of the Bible, there is no ſuch Word written in all the Bible.

Wood. Then I am much to blame if it be not ſo written. Behold, for the Offences that you have done, you ſhall be carried away Captives by Nebuchodonoſor to Babylon, and there ye ſhall be ſeven Generations: And when you be there, you ſhall ſee Gods of Gold, of Silver, of Wood, and of Stone, borne before you and behind you upon Mens Shoulders, to caſt out a Fear among the Heathen. When you ſhall ſee all theſe Abominations, then ſay in your Heart; It is the living God that ought to be worſhipped. Here I prove my Saying true, both that there is a living God, and that there be dead Gods. Alſo David ſaith in the Pſalms, My Soul hath a Deſire and Longing to enter into the Courts of the Lord: My Heart and my Fleſh rejoice in the living God; with divers other Places that I could recite. Wherefore I marvel that you rebuke me for ſpeaking the Truth.

Baruch 6.

Chich. I do not deny but it is written, and is the Truth, and I know it as well as you; but ſuch is the Speech of all Hereticks.

Story. My Lord, I will tell you how you ſhall know an Heretick by his Words, becauſe I have been more uſed to them than you have been; that is, they will ſay (the Lord) and (we praiſe God) and (the living God.) By theſe Words you ſhall know an Heretick.

Wood. All theſe Words are written for our Learning, and we are commanded by the Prophets to uſe them daily, as this; The Lord's Name be praiſed from the riſing up of the Sun unto the going down of the ſame. Alſo, as many as fear the Lord, ſay always the Lord be praiſed.

Story. My Lord, ſend him to Priſon, you ſhall do no Good with him. I will go to Church, and leave you here. This is an old Heretick. Waſt thou never before me e're now?

Wood. Yes forſooth, that I have.

Story. Yea, I thought ſo; and I ſent thee to the Biſhop of London, and he releaſed thee, and thou promiſedſt him to be an honeſt Man, and that thou wouldſt be of the true Catholick Church, which thou haſt not fulfilled.

Wood. I promiſed him nothing but I have fulfilled it. No Man is able to prove the contrary.

Story. Well, it will be tried well enough. My Lord, I will take my Leave, I fear you will do this Man no Good.

Chich. I would not have you to uſe ſuch Speeches as you do, as the Lord be praiſed, and the living God, with ſuch like Words. Can you not ſay as well, Our Lord, or our God, as otherwiſe?

Wood. I marvel why you ſhould reprove me for it, ſeeing they be the Words of God. I do not refuſe to ſay, our God, or our Lord, when I talk of the Scripture where it is written. If I ſhould, it muſt follow, that I denied the Words of God, and muſt needs be an Heretick; but I do not. Wherefore I marvel what you mean to find fault therein. It ſeemeth to me, that you miſtruſt that I believe not as you do.

Chich. Yea, that is my Meaning indeed.

Wood. I believe in the living God, if you do not ſo, then our Beliefs be not alike indeed. But if it pleaſe you to examine me upon any particular Matter, now or at any other Time, I will make Anſwer thereto by God's Help.

Chich. Though you believe in God I can prove you believe not as you ought to do, as I can ſhew you by your Hand-writing. You have denied the Catholick Church. Wherefore he that erreth from the Church, it cannot be ſaid that his Faith is good. Wherefore be ruled by the Church, from which ye have erred.

Wood. I will not deny my Hand by God's Help. For I have written nothing at any Time but the Truth. There may be Things written againſt me, reporting it to be mine, and yet be not: But my Hand cannot well be counterfeited, there be enough that know my Hand.

Chich. Do you know it yourſelf if you ſee it?

Wood. Yea, that I do.

Then he aroſe and fetch'd a great Bundle of Writings, and opened them, and bade me come and ſee. I looked on them, and it was my Hand indeed.

Chich. How ſay you, is it not your own Writing.

Wood. Yes ſurely it is.

Chich. How ſay you to this, is not this your Hand alſo?

Wood. Yes verily is it.

Chich. Well, you know what it meaneth, I dare ſay.

Wood. Yea, I know it very well; here is a great deal, which I had thought had been in my Houſe, but I thank God that it is here: For in this you ſhall try whether it be true or not. For in this is contained all the Talk that was betwixt the Commiſſioners and me, when I was before them five Times, and alſo before the Biſhop of London divers Times: And I am ſure, neither you nor they ſhall find any Words falſe therein written: And I think the Sheriff's Men, when they ſearched my Houſe for me, when I was taken, found this, and carried it with them, but I never knew it before now. But I am not ſorry for it, but am rather glad: For herein you may ſee all the Wrong that I received at their Hands, and how long I was in Priſon, and how I was toſſed up and down, and how I was delivered at length, and by this you may try whether it be ſo or not. I dare ſay they that found it, and they that brought it to you, had thought it would have turned me to Diſpleaſure; but in very Deed all Things work for the beſt to them that fear God.

Chich. Indeed, I find no great Fault in this: but here is perillous Gear, here is Sedition. This was ſet up upon the Church-door, you know it well enough.

* Richard Woodman's Child being baptized by the Midwife, was brought out of the Houſe by the Papiſts and confirmed in the Church.

Wood. Indeed I wrote it to the Prieſt, and to others that took upon them to fetch my Child out of my * Houſe without my Leave, and uſed it at their Pleaſure, when they knew it was baptized already, as they were well certify'd before. Wherefore my Conſcience compelled me to ſhew them my Mind in Writing, wherein is contained nothing but the Scriptures of God, rebuking them for their Folly.

Chich. Yea, but it is terribly meant, and uncharitably. It is such Gear coupled together I promise you, as I never saw the like. But I promise you, I will make the best of it. And I protest before God, I would you should do as well as mine own Soul and Body. Be contented to be reformed. God hath done his Part on you. Cast not yourself away. Remember your Wife and Children, and the Poor that lack your Occupying. Mean to follow your Vocation. Remember you are not called to be a Teacher nor a Preacher. St. Paul saith, Let every Man walk wherein he is called, and therein abide. Remember you are called to another Vocation, for God's sake walk therein. It is not your Office to do as you have done. You might do as much Good by the Report of worshipful Men, as any Man might do in all the Country by your Example, and if you would follow the Laws of the Catholick Church, it would be an Occasion to bring a great many into the true Church, that are out, as you are.

Wood. I would not that you should say, that I am out of the Church of God, for I am not, but do allow the Church of God according to his Word. Yea, if I were abroad, if I could win any into the true Church, that be out, by any Means that I could use, I should be very glad. For God knoweth I love all People as myself. And where you say I have been a Preacher, it is not so. I never took any such Thing upon me, as it is well known. But as for Teaching I cannot deny; for it becometh every Man to teach and instruct his Household in the Fear of God, and all others (as far as he can) that desire it of him. And whereas you have blamed me for reading the Scripture, and leaving my Vocation (as you say) I left not my Vocation in reading the Scripture: For I trust I followed my Vocation the better for it. And the greatest Cause that I was compelled to read the Scriptures, was, because the Preachers and Teachers were so changeable.

Chich. No? Did you not preach at a Fair?

Wood. No surely, but it was so reported. I was at a Fair indeed. While I was in Prison, I had Leave of the Council to go home to pay my Debts, and then I went to a Fair to sell Cattle, and there I met with divers poor Men that I had set to work, who lovingly asked me how I did, and how I could away with Imprisonment. And I shewed them how God had dealt with me, and how he would deal with all them that put their Trust in him; and this they called Preaching. And since that it hath been reported that I have baptized Childten, and married Folks, which I never did; for I never was a Minister. Wherefore if I had so done, I had done contrary to the Order of the Apostles, as God forbid I should.

Chich. I am well paid if you be faultless in these Things: For I have heard the contrary.

Wood. I have shewed you the Truth, and that no Man living shall be able to prove the contrary.

Chich. You said you do not disallow the true Catholick Church.

Wood. No, that I do not.

Chich. Why do you not then go to the Church? You come not there, it is informed me.

Wood. I trust I am in the true Church every Day. But to tell you the Truth, I come not at the Church where the most do resort. For if I should, I should offend, and be offended: For the last Time that I was there, I offended many, and was offended myself. Wherefore for Conscience sake I would not come there. For I was sent to Prison for my coming there, and now I am sent to you for biding thence. So they will not be pleased any Way with me, for they seek my Life. Wherefore look you to it, for I am now in your Hands, and you ought to be an House of Defence against mine Enemies. For if you suffer them to kill me, my Blood shall be required at your Hands. If you can find any just Cause in me worthy of Death by God's Word, you may condemn me yourself, and not offend God: Wherefore look to it, the Matter is weighty, deliver me not into their Hands, and think so to be discharged. Anno 1557.

Chich. I tell you the Truth, I can do little in the Matter. For I have not full Authority as yet of mine Office: But I will send for you and talk with you, if I wist I should do you any Good.

Wood. I would be glad to talk with you, and to shew you my Mind in any Thing that you shall demand of me, now, or at any other Time.

Chich. So then he desired the Sheriff's Men to tarry and dine with him; that this Man (said he) may dine with me also: For it may be he may have no great Store of Meat whither he shall go.

So we tarried to Dinner with him, and had no further Talk, neither how to prove where the true Church of God is, nor of the Sacraments, nor of any other Thing pertaining to me-ward, not for the space of two Hours or more: But he entered in Talk with me, how I understood many Scriptures, and for Bishops and Priests Marriages, and whether Paul had a Wife or not. To whom I answered, It is a Thing that I have little to do with, as concerning Marriages: But I am very well content to talk with you in the Matter, as far as my poor Learning will serve. So when he had talked with me of divers Scriptures, he liked my Talk well. He asked me how I said by St. Paul, whether he were married or not? to whom I answered, I can prove by the Scriptures that he was never married.

Chich. How prove you that?

Wood. I will prove it well enough by God's Help. But yet I will prove that Paul might have had a Wife, as well as the other Apostles had.

Chich. Why, had the Apostles Wives?

Wood. Yes, all, saving Paul and Barnabas, as I understand it. For these are Paul's Words in the ninth Chapter of the first to the Corinthians; Am I not an Apostle? am I not free? have I not seen Jesus Christ? Are not ye my Work in the Lord? and if I be not an Apostle to others, to others, yet to you I am an Apostle: For you are the Seal of mine Apostleship in the Lord. Mine Answer to them that ask me, is this; Have we not Power to eat and to drink? either have we not Power to lead about a Sister to Wife, as well as the other Apostles have, and as the Brethren of the Lord? Either have not Barnabas and I Power thus to do? So this Text proveth, that Paul and Barnabas were unmarried. But Paul declareth that the rest had Wives, and that they had Power likewise so to have, but they found no need thereof. But Paul declareth in the seventh Chapter of the first Epiſtle to the Corinthians, that he that hath now Power over his own Fleſh, may marry: For it is better to marry than to burn. Wherefore to avoid Fornication (ſaith he) let every Man have his Wife. He ſaith, Let every Man have his Wife, and every Woman her Husband. By this Place of Scripture I underſtand, that Biſhops and Prieſts may have Wives, becauſe they are Men, rather than burn, or commit Fornication. But I think verily he that can abſtain, having Power of his own Will, doth beſt; but if he marrieth he ſinneth not.

So then he debated the Scriptures with me divers Ways, that a Biſhop or a Prieſt ought not to have a Wife: But I proved by divers Scriptures both in the Old Law and in the New, that Women were at firſt made for the Help of Men, which was ſpoken generally to all Men. Wherefore (ſaid I) every Man may have a Woman and ſin not, in honeſt Matrimony, as well Biſhops and Deacons, as other Men, which you call Prieſts, if they be true Miniſters of Jeſus Chriſt, and of that Order that Biſhops and Deacons were in Paul's Time. For Paul declareth to Timothy, firſt and third, That a Biſhop ſhould be the Husband of one Wife, and how they ſhould be honeſtly apparelled, and how they ſhould bring up their Children, and likewiſe the Deacons. This (ſaid I) proveth more plainly, that both Biſhops and Deacons had Wives in the Apoſtles Time, which he could not deny. But then he alledged, that no Biſhop nor Prieſt might take a Wife, after he had taken upon him that Office, but if he had a Wife before he took the Office, tried meet for the Purpoſe for his Life and for his Learning, he might keep his Wife and bring up his Children according to St. Paul's Meaning to Timothy, or elſe might they have no Wives.

Then ſaid I, I think Paul's Meaning in that Place, was, that a Man that hath had two Wives might not be made a Biſhop nor a Deacon, if he had never ſo much Learning. But that Place maketh not that a Biſhop or a Deacon may not marry after they be made Biſhops and Deacons. For I am ſure that Paul was in the State of a Biſhop, when he ſaid, He had Power to lead about a Siſter to Wife, as well as the other Apoſtles had. Here Paul declares, that it was in his Power to have a Wife, after he had the Office of a Biſhop, which was not in his Power, if he had been forbidden of God.

Thus have I ſhewed you my Mind in this Behalf, both of Paul, and alſo for the Marriages of Biſhops and Prieſts, as I underſtand the Scriptures. Howbeit, it is a Thing which I have little to do withal: But as you required me to ſay my Mind in that Matter, ſo I have done.

Chich. Marry, I am glad that you have ſaid as you have done. Many do affirm boldly, that Paul had a Wife, and yet cannot prove whether he had or had not, by the Scriptures: But you have ſaid very well. I am glad that ye are contented to be ruled by God's Word. And if you will be contented likewiſe in other Matters, no doubt you ſhall do well: Therefore gentle goodman Woodman be ruled. God hath given you a good Wit. I proteſt before God, I would you ſhould do as well as mine own Soul and Body, and ſo would (I dare ſay) all the worſhipful Men in the Country, as they have reported to me.

Wood. Why, my Lord, I take God to Record (whom I truſt to ſerve) that I would be as glad to live in Reſt and Peace, as any Man in all the World, if I might. And I ſtand to learn, and am contented to be reformed of any Thing that I hold, if it can be proved that it be not agreeable to God's Word. And the Truth is ſo, I have talked with a dozen Prieſts at the leaſt, ſince I was delivered out of Priſon, of certain Matters, and they have not been able to certify me in any Thing that I have asked them: And therefore they have complained on me to the Sheriff, and Juſtices, making Tales and Lies on me, to turn me to Diſpleaſure, as much as in them lieth. I promiſe you, there be as many unlearned Prieſts in your Dioceſs, as in any one Dioceſs in England I think; the more it is to be lamented.

Chich. I promiſe you, I do much lament it myſelf: For I hear ſay no leſs, but it is true that you ſay. I would I could remedy it, but I cannot: But I will do the beſt that I can, when I come into the Country, and I will be glad to talk with you ſome other Time, when I am ſomewhat better at Eaſe. You ſee I am very tender now, as I have been this half Year and more. Come to Dinner; our Dinner is ready. I cauſed you not to tarry for any great Chear that you ſhall have, nor would I you ſhould think that I go about to win you with my Meat: But you be welcome with all my Heart. Come ſit down.

Wood. I thanked him, and went to Dinner; and there dined with him, a Merchant Man, one of the Sheriffs Men, and I, and no more, and we had good Cheer, God be praiſed therefore. We had no talk of the Scriptures all the Dinner while: But when Dinner was done, the Biſhop ſaid, Chich. Now call Mr. Story's Man. For the Commiſſioners have committed you to Priſon: But I will ſend for you before it be long, and I pray God I may do you good. I would be very glad of it.

Wood. If it pleaſe you to ſend for me, I would be very glad to talk with you, for I like your Talk well. And then if it pleaſe your Lordſhip to examine me upon any particular Matter, I will ſhew you my Mind therein, by God's Grace, without Diſſimulation. But I pray you let me have nothing to do with Mr. Story, for I think he is a Man without Reaſon.

Chich. Well, before you go, how ſay you to the ſeven Sacraments? Let me hear what you ſay to them, that I may be the more willing to ſend for you again.

Wood. I know not ſeven Sacraments.

Chich. Then what ſhall I talk with you? How many do you know?

Wood. I know but two; one the Sacrament of Baptiſm, and the other the Supper of the Lord. But if you can juſtly prove by God's Word, that there be more than two, I ſtand to be reformed.

Chich. If I prove not ſeven by God's Word, then believe me not: And ſo he bade me farewell.

Then the Sheriffs two Men, and one of Dr. Story's Men, carried me to Dr. Cook's Houſe, which Dr. Cook commanded them to carry me to the Sheriffs Priſon in Southwark, ſaying, he ſhall be called before us again ſhortly and all his Fellows, and we ſhall diſpatch them from troubling the Country any more. Woodman carried to the Marſhalſea.

And ſo I was brought to the Marſhalſea, where where I now am merry (God be praiſed therefore) looking for Judgment of my Fleſh: For they intend to diſpatch me ſhortly, if God will give them Leave: But God had their Hearts in his Hands, and they can do nothing to me, but as God will give them Leave. Wherefore I commit my Cauſe to God only, and I am ſure there ſhall not one Hair of my Head periſh without my heavenly Father's Will, although I bide never ſo much Trouble. Job periſhed not for all his Trouble, although God gave the Devil leave to trouble and try him divers and many Ways, as God hath ſuffered his Members to trouble and try me divers and many Ways, I praiſe God. They ſhall as little prevail againſt my Faith (I have no Miſtruſt) as the Devil prevailed againſt Job, whatſoever they do with my Goods, Life, or Body. For he that kept Job in all his Trouble, neither ſlumbereth nor ſleepeth, but keepeth me, and all his Elect, that whether we live or die, it ſhall be to the Praiſe and Glory of God. For if we live, we live at the Lord's Will, and if we die, we die to the Lord's Will: So, whether we live or die, we are the Lord's, therefore bleſſed be his Name.

Wherefore, dear Brethren and Siſters, to whom this my Writing ſhall come, be of good Chear, and fear not what Man can do unto you. For they can but kill the Body; but fear him that hath Power to kill both Body and Soul. And yet once again I bid you be of good Chear. For the Sheriff, with divers other Gentlemen and Prieſts, whilſt I was at the Sheriffs Houſe, ſaid to me, that all the Hereticks in the Country hung on me, as the People did in Times paſt upon St. Auguſtine or St. Ambroſe, or ſuch like. Wherefore ſaid they, look well on it, you have a great Thing to anſwer for. To the which I anſwered; I pray God lay nothing more to my Charge, than he will do for Hereſy, as I am ſure he will not. For he hath ſet my Sins as far from me, as it is from the Eaſt to the Weſt: So that I am ſure they ſhall never come near to me any more. Yea, and that they call Hereſy, we ſerve God withal. And I am ſure there is no Man nor Woman that hangeth on me, but on God. But yet that is their Imaginations and Thoughts, that if they might win me to them, they ſhould win a great many likewiſe; and thinking to kill me, if they cannot win me, as I truſt in God, and am ſure they ſhall never by God's Grace, if it were poſſible for them to kill me ten Times. For I am ſo linked to Chriſt in a Chain by Faith, that it is impoſſible for Men to looſe us aſunder, neither for Life nor Death, I praiſe my Lord God therefore. And no doubt their full Intent and Purpoſe is to kill me, thinking thereby to make others afraid. Which Death of my Body were beſt of all for me, if God were ſo pleaſed. But if I may live for the Comfort of others, his Name be praiſed therefore: I know what he can do; but what he will do I know not. But if Death be offered me, ſo that I cannot refuſe it without diſpleaſing of God, I truſt in God I ſhall not offend my Brethren in receiving of Death, but ſhall be rather an Occaſion of the ſtrengthening of their Faith, by chooſing and receiving of it, and that with Joy. For as Chriſt hath given his Life for us, ſo ought we to give our Lives for the Defence of the Goſpel, and Comfort of our Brethren. And whereas the Biſhop ſaith, he will prove ſeven Sacraments, be you out of Doubt he ſhall never be able to do it, no more than he hath proved other Arguments with me already. Anno 1557.

Chriſtians ought to give their Lives for Defence of the Goſpel, if called thereto.

Thus fare ye well, from the Marſhalſea, where I now am, as a Sheep appointed to be ſlain, God be praiſed therefore.

The ſecond Examination of Richard Woodman before the Biſhop of Chicheſter, two of his Chaplains, and Dr. Story, on April 27.

FIRST, I was ſent for to the Marſhalſea by Dr. Story, and was carried to his Houſe near St. Nicholas Shambles; and when I had ſpoken to him, he ſent me to the Biſhop of Chicheſter, and ſaid he would come himſelf ſtraightway: And when we were in the Biſhop's Hall, we had not tarried long but the Biſhop ſent for me; and when I came before him I did my Duty to him.

Then ſaid the Biſhop, You are welcome; how do you now?

Woodman. Well, I praiſe God, thanking your Lordſhip for the gentle Talk that you had with me at my laſt departing from you.

Chich. Well, goodman Woodman, I have ſent for you of Love and good Will, to talk with you, and would have you to tell me your Mind in a few Words. For indeed the laſt Time that I talked with you, our Talk was ſo long, that I fell into a great Drought thereby, and have been the worſe in my Body ever ſince. Wherefore I pray you ſhew me your Mind briefly in thoſe particular Matters that I ſhall demand of you according to the Promiſe that you made the laſt Time you were with me. How ſay you, will you?

Wood. Yea forſooth, I will anſwer to any Thing that you ſhall demand of me (by God's Help) as well as I can.

Chich. How ſay you by the ſeven Sacraments? for there we left off, and there we will begin again. You ſaid then there were but two. How ſay you now to it? Will you deny all except two?

Wood. I ſay now as I ſaid then. You ſaid, there be ſeven Sacraments; and I ſaid I knew but two: But if you could prove ſeven by God's Word, when I came before you again I muſt needs grant them. And you ſaid, if you could not prove them by God's Word, I ſhould not believe them: And now I am come to ſee how well you can prove them.

At which Words the Biſhop and his Chaplains were moved.

Chich. By God and my Troth, I believe he thinketh I cannot prove them. How ſay you to the Sacrament of Matrimony?

Wood. Why, my Lord, St. Paul ſaith to Timothy, A Biſhop ſhould be faultleſs, and you uſe much Swearing, which is a great Fault in a Biſhop of all others, that ſhould be an Example to the Flock. The Biſhop of Chicheſter reproved for Swearing.

Then the Biſhop and his Prieſts were in a great Rage with me, becauſe I reproved him for his Swearing.

Chich. What, I perceive this Man is worſe than he was the laſt Day: What, he taketh upon him to teach me to ſpeak, as tho' I could not tell what I had to do.

Prieſt. So me thinketh, my Lord, he is a ſtout Fellow indeed as we have ſeen.

Wood.

Anno 1557.

Wood. Yea, I am ſtout, becauſe I do what I am commanded. I dare not for my Life hold my Peace; for I ſhould bear your Sin, which I will not do for any of you all, I tell you plainly.

Chich. Where find you that you are commanded to reprove me?

Wood. If thou ſee thy Brother ſin, reprove him; if he repent, thou haſt won thy Brother. But you repent it not, but rather go about to maintain the ſame. Chriſt ſaith, He that breaketh one of the leaſt of my Commandments, and teacheth Men ſo, ſhall be called leaſt in the Kingdom of Heaven; and you go about to teach Men ſo, ſo far as I ſee.

Prieſt. Why, my Lord, this Man is paſt Cure. I ſee no Hope in him.

Chich. No, ſo me thinketh. I will never talk with him more. Go call Mr. Story; let him do with him what he will. He hath been with his Fellows in the Marſhalſea, and now he is worſe than he was before. I had ſome Hope in him the other Day, but now I ſee none.

Wood. No, I praiſe God, my Faith hangeth upon no Men, but upon God.

Prieſt. Nay, my Lord, I think he is not the worſe for them: But I fear me they be the worſe for him, I know this Man of old, before mine old Lord.

Wood. Well, my Lord, look well to it: Will you deliver me to other Men to ſhed my Blood, and ſo think to waſh your Hands of me, as Pilate did by Chriſt? Nay you cannot be ſo diſcharged.

Chich. I have nothing to do with you: But of my Gentleneſs I have ſent for you, becauſe you ſaid, you would declare your Mind in any particular Matter I would demand of you.

Wood. Why, I do not deny but I will do ſo, if you do demand it of me. But you go about to deliver me to others to kill me: And I know there is none that hath to do with me but you.

Chich. I am not yet conſecrated: Wherefore my Lord Cardinal may examine you, and condemn you, or my Lord of London: For you are now in his Dioceſs.

Wood. Yea, my Lord, is the Matter even ſo? Then I perceive whereabout you go. Nay, I will talk no more with you then, if you be at that Point. Ask me what you will, but I will ſhew you nothing of my Mind. I promiſe you I will not anſwer in particular Matters, and ſo you to accuſe me to others, and they to kill me.

Chich. I go not about to kill you, but would be glad to hear your Mind in the Sacraments, and if you underſtand them not aright, I would be glad with all my Heart to ſhew you my Mind how I underſtand them. For I would you ſhould do as well as mine own ſelf.

Wood. If you would talk with me to do me good, I would be content to hear you, and ſhew you my Mind; otherwiſe I would be loth.

Chich. Nay, I will promiſe you, if I can do you no Good, I will do you no Harm: For if I meant to do you Harm, I would lay your own Hand-writing againſt you, but I will not: Wherefore be in no Doubt of me. How ſay you to the Sacrament of Matrimony? Is it a Sacrament or no? How think you by it?

Wood. I think it is an holy Inſtitution ordained of God in Paradiſe, and ſo to continue to the World's End.

Chich. Lo, now you ſhall ſee how you be deceived in that, as you be in all the reſt. Come hither. You can read Latin I am ſure.

Wood. Yea, I can read Latin, but I underſtand very little.

Chich. Come to me, you ſhall ſee that Paul calleth it an holy Sacrament. For theſe be the Words, For this Cauſe ſhall a Man leave Father and Mother, and ſhall be joined to his Wife: And two ſhall be made one Fleſh: This is a great Sacrament. Eph. 5.

Wood. I remember ſuch a Saying, but St. Paul calleth it not a Sacrament. But he ſaith, It is a great Myſtery.

Chich. Where ſaith he ſo?

Wood. I am not ſure in what Text it is, but I am ſure theſe be St. Paul's Words, and that he calleth it not a Sacrament in all his Writings.

Chich. What, the laſt Day ye were full of Scriptures; here it is written, and there it is written? What, we can rehearſe the Scriptures as well as you. Wherefore, if we be ſure it is written, it is no great Matter for the Place. Come hither, I will ſhew you the Place, I think, that you mean.

I looked, and it was written Sacramentum. I know it is a great Myſtery, in the Engliſh Tranſlation.

Chich. I permit it to be a Myſtery. What is a Myſtery?

Wood. A Myſtery is (as I take it) unſeen: For he ſaith, he ſpeaketh betwixt Chriſt and the Congregation: So the great Myſtery that he ſpeaketh of, I take to be the Faith of them that be married, which is hid in Chriſt, which we ſee not, but Chriſt. But the Deed which is in the Congregation, which is the outward Marriage we ſee, but the inward Marriage of the Heart we ſee not. Wherefore Paul calleth it a Myſtery. And therefore if it be a Sacrament, it is inviſible to us: It is not ſeen, as other Sacraments be.

Chich. Nay, I tell you it is a viſible Sacrament, ſeen as the others be: For is not the Marriage ſeen? is not the Man and Woman ſeen?

Wood. My Lord, I pray you, what is a Sacrament?

Chich. It is a Sign of an holy Thing.

Wood. Methinks you have certify'd me very well. There need not be a Sign of a holy Thing, where the holy Thing is itſelf.

Then his Chaplains would have interrupted me, but I deſired my Lord I might ſay out my Mind in the Matter. So with much ado he bade me ſay what I could.

There need not be a Sign of a Thing, where the Thing is itſelf. Matrimony is an holy Thing itſelf, and is ended outwardly, and need no more Signs but themſelves: Wherefore it cannot be a Sacrament as others be.

Argument.

A Thing ſignified and a Thing ſignifying cannot be at one Time, in reſpect of itſelf, in one Subject.

Matrimony is an holy Thing itſelf, ſignify'd:

Ergo, Matrimony cannot be a Sacrament ſignifying an holy Thing.

Chich. Lo, how much you ſpeak againſt yourſelf. And for Example, I come by an Hoſier, and there hangeth a Pair of Hoſe, which be Hoſe, and be a Sign of Hoſe that be to ſell within.

The Hoſe in an Hoſier's Stall may be a Sign, ſignifying more Hoſe to be within; but it is not a ſignifying Sign of itſelf. Neither again is every Sign of another Thing to be called a Sacrament.

Prieſt. How ſay you to this? Now my Lord hath hit you home indeed.

Wood. He hath hit me perilouſly, I tell you, with Sophiſtry to blind mine Eyes withal. I marvel you are not all aſhamed of it. I can anſwer that to all your Shames, if I might be juſtly heard, I tell you plainly.

Prieſt. What, you are angry methinks.

Wood. I am not angry, but I am in earneſt, I tell you, to ſee your Blindneſs and Folly. I talked of the Scriptures that be written, and it is God's Word, to prove my Matter true by, and you will prove your Matter true by a Pair of Hoſe. And you can as well prove it by that, as by God's Word.

Prieſt. Why, is there nothing true but that is written in the Bible?

Wood. St. Paul ſaith to the Galatians, Chap. 1. If an Angel come from Heaven, and preach any other Doctrine than may be proved by God's Word, hold him accurſed: And ſo do I, I tell you plainly.

Letters written in the Book, ſpeaking properly, be one Thing: The Teſtament and Word of God is another Thing. And yet by Uſe of Speech the Book of the Teſtament is called the Teſtament, as Bread and Wine be called the Body and Blood of the Lord.

Prieſt. Here is a Teſtament in mine Hand, if I hurl it in the Fire and burn it, have I burned God's Word, or not? I will buy a new one for ſixteen-pence.

Wood. I ſay you have burned God's Word, and I believe he that will burn a Teſtament willingly, would burn God himſelf, if he were here, if he could; for he and his Word are all one.

Then they made a great Laughing at it.

Wood. Laugh on. Your Laughing will be turned to Weeping, and all ſuch Joy will be turned to Mourning, if you repent it not with Speed.

Then the Biſhop began to cloak the Prieſts Folly, ſaying, Why, if my Counting-houſe were full of Books, and if my Houſe ſhall be on Fire by Chance, and ſo burned, were God's Word burned?

Wood. No, my Lord, becauſe they were burned againſt your Will: But yet if you ſhould burn them willingly, or think it well, and not be ſorry for it, you burn God's Word as well as he: For he that is not ſorry for a ſhrewd Turn, doth allow it to be good.

Chich. Follow your Vocation; you have a little Learning. We have an Altar whereof you may not eat. What meaneth St. Paul thereby?

Heb. 13.

Wood. There is no Man ſo fooliſh to eat Stones, I ſuppoſe.

Chich. What Mockers and Scorners be you, to ſay, no Man will be ſo fooliſh to eat Stones? it is a plain Mock.

Wood. Why my Lord, you ſaid I had no Learning, nor Knowledge, nor Underſtanding: Wherefore it becometh you to make Things more plain to me, and not to ask me ſuch dark Queſtions, and yet blame me too; methinks it is too much.

Chich. I dare ſay you know what it meaneth well enough. The greateſt Fool in my Houſe will underſtand my Meaning better than you do.

There ſtood ſome of his Men at a Diſtance talking together by a Window. He called one of them by his Name.

Chich. Come hither, I ſay to thee thou ſhalt not eat of this Table. What do I mean thereby?

Chicheſter's Man. Forſooth, my Lord, you would not have me eat of this Table, laying his Hand there.

With this Anſwer he made all them in the Houſe to fall on laughing, and I could not hold it in, but burſt out with Laughter, and ſaid, Anno 1557.

Wood. He hath expounded the Matter almoſt as well as I.

Chich. He meaneth well enough if you would underſtand him.

Anſwer me again to make it more plain. I ſay to thee thou ſhalt not eat of this Table. What mean I thereby?

Chicheſter's Man. Forſooth you would not have me eat this Table.

Theſe Words made them all laugh. Wherewith the Biſhop was almoſt angry, becauſe the Anſwer proved no better, and ſaid, Chich. He meaneth that I would not have him eat any of the Meat that is ſet upon this Table. How ſayſt thou, doſt thou not mean ſo?

Chicheſter's Man. Yes forſooth, my Lord, that was my Meaning indeed.

Wood. Yea, my Lord, now you have told him what you mean, he can ſay ſo too: And ſo could I have done (as little Wit as I have) if you had ſaid, Paul meant that no Man ſhould eat of that which was offered upon the Altar, but the Prieſts.

Chich. Yea, I perceive you underſtand the Meaning of St. Paul well enough, but that you liſt to cavil with me.

Wood. Why, my Lord, do you think I underſtand ſuch dark Places of the Scripture without Learning? You ſaid even now, I had no Knowledge nor Learning, wherefore I anſwered you as you judged of me.

Chich. Well, let this Matter paſs, and let us turn to the Principal again. How ſay you by the Sacrament of the Altar?

Wood. You mean the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt.

Chich. I mean the Sacrament of the Altar, and ſo I ſay.

Wood. You mean Chriſt to be the Altar, do you not?

Chich. I mean the Sacrament of the Altar in the Church. What is it ſo ſtrange to you?

Wood. It is ſtrange to me indeed, if you mean the Altar of Stone.

Chich. It is that Altar that I mean.

Wood. I underſtand not the Altar ſo.

Chich. No, I think ſo indeed: And that is the Cauſe that you be deceived. I pray you, how do you underſtand the Altar then?

Wood. If you will give me Leave till I have done, I will ſhew you how I underſtand the Altar, and where it is.

Chich. Yes, you ſhall have Leave to ſay your Mind, as much as you will.

Wood. It is written, Matth. 18. That whereſoever two or three be gathered together in Chriſt's Name, there is he in the midſt among them: And whatſoever they ask the Father upon Earth, it ſhall be granted them in Heaven. Agreeing to the fifth of Matthew, ſaying, When thou comeſt to offer thy Gift at the Altar, and there remembreſt that thy Brother hath ought againſt thee, leave there thy Offering, and go firſt and be reconciled to thy Brother, and then offer thy Gift. The Prieſts would have interrupted me, but the Biſhop bade them let me alone, for (ſaid he) you ſhall hear a pretty Concluſion anon.

I pray you let me make an End, quoth I, and then find fault with me if you can. Now to the Matter. In theſe two Places of Scripture, Anno 1557. ture, I prove that Chriſt is the true Altar, whereon every chriſtian Man and Woman ought to come and offer their Gifts. Firſt, whereſoever the People are gathered together in Chriſt's Name, there is he in the midſt; and where he is, there is the Altar, ſo that we may be bold to come and offer our Gift, if we be in Love and Charity: If we be not, we muſt leave there our Offering, and go firſt and be reconciled to our Brother, and agree with him quickly, and ſo forth, and then come and offer thy Gift. Some will ſay, How ſhall I agree with mine Adverſary, when he is not nigh by an hundred Miles? May I not pray till I have ſpoken with him? To all ſuch I anſwer; If thou doſt preſume to pray among the Faithful, wiſhing any Evil to any Man, Woman, or Child, thou askeſt Vengeance upon thyſelf. For no ſuch asketh any Thing elſe of the Lord in his Prayer. Wherefore agree with thine Adverſary, that is, make thy Life agreeable to God's Word. Say in thy Heart without Diſſimulation, that thou askeſt God and all the World Forgiveneſs from the Bottom of thy Heart, intending never to offend them any more. Then all ſuch may be bold to come and offer their Gift, their Prayer on the Altar, where the People of God are gathered together. Thus have I ſhewed you my Mind, both of the Altar, and of the Offering, as I underſtand it.

Chich. Do you underſtand the Offering and the Altar ſo? I never heard any Man underſtand it ſo, no not Luther the great Heretick, that was condemned by a general Council, and his Picture burned.

Wood. If he were an Heretick, I think he underſtood it not ſo indeed; but I am ſure all Chriſtians ought to underſtand it ſo?

Chich. O what Vain-glory is in you, as tho' you underſtood all Things, and other Men nothing? Hear me; I will ſhew you the true Underſtanding both of the Altar, and the Offering on the Altar. We have an Altar (ſaid Paul, Heb. 13.) that ye may not eat of. Meaning thereby, that no Man might eat of that which was offered on the Altar, but the Prieſt. For in Paul's Time all the Living that the Prieſt had, the People came and offered it on the Altar, Money or other Things: And when the People came to offer it, and then remembred that they had any Thing againſt their Brother, then they left their Offering upon the Altar, and went and were reconciled to their Brother; and they came again and offered their Gift, and the Prieſt had it. This is the true Underſtanding of the Place that you have rehearſed; wherefore you be deceived.

Wood. My Lord, that was the Uſe in the old Law. Chriſt was the End of that. But indeed I perceive by Paul's Words, the Sacrifice was offered in Paul's Time: Yet that maketh not that was well done, but he rebuked it. Wherefore it ſeemeth to me that you be deceived.

Chich. Who ſhall be Judges betwixt us in this Matter?

Wood. The 12th of John declareth who ſhall be Judge in the laſt Day.

Chich. You mean the Word ſhall judge the Word, how can that be?

Wood. St. Peter ſaith, The Scripture hath no private Interpretation; but one Scripture muſt be underſtood by another.

Chich. You will underſtand it one Way, and I will underſtand it another Way; and who ſhall be Judge betwixt us then?

Wood. The true Church of God is able to diſcuſs all Doubts: To whom I refer it.

Chich. I am glad you ſay ſo, if you will ſay ſo indeed.

Wood. My Lord, I never meant otherwiſe.

Chich. The Church of God doth allow the Sacrament of the Altar.

Wood. What do you now offer upon the Altar?

Chich. We offer up in the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar, the Body of Chriſt to pacify the Wrath of God the Father; and therewith they all put off their Caps to the abominable Idol.

Wood. St. Paul ſaith to the Hebrews, in the 10*th* Chapter, We are ſanctified by offering of the Body of Jeſus Chriſt upon the Croſs once for all: And every Prieſt is daily miniſtring, and oftentimes offereth one Manner of Offering, which can never take away Sins; and that is the Offering that you uſe to offer. As far as I can ſee, you be Prieſts after the Order of Aaron, that offered up Sacrifice for their own Sins, and the Sins of the People.

Chich. Nay, Aaron's Sacrifice was with Blood which ſignifieth the Death of Chriſt, the which was ended upon the Croſs by his Blood-ſhedding; but we are Prieſts after the Order of Melchiſedech, which offereth Bread to the King in Remembrance, and ſignifieth the giving of Chriſt's Body in Bread and Wine at the laſt Supper, which he gave to his Diſciples, and commanded it to be uſed to the End of the World. This is the Sacrifice that we offer, according to his Word.

Wood. I think you have made the Matter very plain to me, that as Chriſt was the End of all Sacrifices, ſo was he the Beginning of the Sacraments, willing them to be uſed in Remembrance of him, to the World's End.

Chich. What in Remembrance of him, and not himſelf, as his Word ſaith, Take, eat, this is my Body; it is not the Sign only, but the Thing itſelf. How ſay you? is it not his Body, after the Words are ſpoken by the Prieſt? how ſay you? go briefly to work, for I cannot long tarry with you.

Wood. My Lord, if you will anſwer me to one Sacrament, I will anſwer you to another.

Chich. Yes I am very well content with that.

Wood. If you ſay the Words of Baptiſm over the Water, and there be no Child there, is there true Baptiſm?

Chich. No, there muſt be the Water, the Word and the Child, and then it is Baptiſm.

Wood. Very well. Then if a Child be baptized in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, is it not trnly baptized?

Chich. No: the Child muſt be baptized in the Name of the Father and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt, or elſe it is not truly baptized.

Wood. Then there may be nothing added, nor taken away from the Sacraments; may there?

Chich. No, ſaid the Biſhop.

Wood. Now my Lord, I will anſwer to you, if it pleaſe you.

Chich. Well, how ſay you, Take, eat, this is my Body; is it not Chriſt's Body, as ſoon as the Words be ſaid?

Wood. My Lord, I will anſwer you by your

The Word, Water and Child make Baptiſm. So the Word, Bread, and the Receiver, make the Sacrament of the Lord's Body.

own Words, that you anſwered me, which is true; the Water, the Word, and the Child, all theſe together make Baptiſm; the Bread, Wine, and the Word make the Sacrament; and the Eater, eating in true Faith, maketh it his Body. Here I prove it is not Chriſt's Body, but to the faithful Receiver. For he ſaid, Take, eat, this is my Body.

He called it not his Body before eating, but after eating. And St. Auguſtine ſaith, Believe and thou haſt eaten. And St. John ſaith, He that believeth in God, dwelleth in God, and God in him: Wherefore it is impoſſible to dwell in God, and to eat his Body, without a true Faith.

Prieſt. Then the Faith of the Receiver maketh it his Body; and not his Word, by your Saying. I pray you what did Judas eat?

Wood. Judas did eat the Sacrament of Chriſt, and the Devil withal.

Prieſt. He eat the Body of Chriſt unworthily, as St. Paul ſaith.

Wood. Nay, St. Paul ſaith no ſuch Thing. He ſpeaketh not of eating of his Body unworthily, but of the Sacrament unworthily. For he ſaith, Whoſoever eateth of this Bread, and drinketh of this Cup unworthily, eateth and drinketh his own Damnation, becauſe he maketh no Difference of the Lord's Body; and not becauſe he eateth the Lord's Body. If Judas had eat Chriſt's Body, it muſt needs follow, that Judas is ſaved. For Chriſt ſaith in the 6th of John. Whoſoever eateth my Fleſh, and drinketh my Blood, hath eternal Life, and I will raiſe him up again at the laſt Day.

Prieſt. My Lord, this Man is an Interpreter after his own Mind.

Chich. I ſee it is but Folly to talk with you; it is but loſt Labour. How ſay you? do you not believe that after the Words be ſaid, there remaineth neither Bread nor Wine, but the very Body of Chriſt really? make me a plain Anſwer, for I will talk no more with you.

Wood. I will make you a direct Anſwer, how I believe of the true Sacrament. I do believe, that if I come to receive the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Chriſt truly miniſtred, believing that Chriſt was born for me, and that he ſuffered Death for me, and that I ſhall be ſaved from my Sins by his Blood-ſhedding, and ſo receive the Sacrament in that Remembrance, then I believe I do receive wholly Chriſt, God and Man, myſtically by Faith: This is my Belief.

Chich. Why, then it is no Body without Faith, God's Word is of no Force, as you count it?

Wood. My Lord, I have told you my Mind without Diſſimulation, and more you get not of me, without you will talk with me by the Scriptures: And if you will do ſo, I will begin anew with you, and prove it more plainly three or four manner of Ways, that you ſhall not ſay nay to that I have ſaid, your ſelf.

Then they made a great Laughing, and ſaid, this is an Heretick indeed, it is Time he was burned. Which Words moved my Spirit, and I ſaid to them, Judge not, leſt you be judged. For as you judge me, you ſhall be judged yourſelves. For that you call Hereſy, I ſerve God truly with, as you all ſhall well know, when you ſhall be in Hell, and have Blood to drink, and ſhall be compelled to ſay for Pain, This was the Man that we jeſted on, and whoſe Talk we thought Fooliſhneſs, and his End to be without Honour: But now we may ſee how he is counted among the Saints of God, and we are puniſhed. Theſe Words ſhall you ſay, being in Hell, if you repent not with Speed, if you conſent to the Shedding of my Blood: Wherefore look to it, I give you Counſel. Anno 1557.

Prieſt. What, you are angry, methinks. Now I will ſay more to you than I thought to have done. You were at Baxill a Twelvemonth ago, and ſent for the Parſon, and talked with him in the Church-yard, and would not go into the Church; for you ſaid it was the Idol's Temple. Yea, I was with mine old Lord, when he came to the King's-Bench to you, and you ſaid many ſtout Words to him.

Wood. That I ſaid, I ſaid: And where you ſaid I was angry, I take God to my Record, I am not, but am zealous in the Truth, and ſpeak out of the Spirit of God with Chearfulneſs.

Prieſt. The Spirit of God? hough, hough, hough: Think you that you have the Spirit of God?

Woodman. I believe ſurely that I have the Spirit of God, I praiſe God for it; and you be Deceivers, Mockers, and Scorners before God, and be the Children of Hell, all the Sort of you, as far as I can ſee. And therewith came in Dr. Story, pointing at me with his Finger, ſpeaking to the Biſhop in Latin, ſaying, at length, Story. I can ſay nothing to him, but he is an Heretick. I have heard you talk this Hour and a Half, and can hear no Reaſon in him.

Wood. Judge not leaſt you be judged: For as you judge, you ſhall be judged yourſelf.

Story. What, be you a Preaching? you ſhall preach at a Stake ſhortly with your Fellows. My Lord, trouble yourſelf no more with him.

With theſe Words, one brought Word that the Abbot of Weſtminſter was come to dine with the Biſhop, and many other Gentlemen and Women. Then there was ruſhing away with Speed to meet him.

Then ſaid Dr. Story to my Keeper, Carry him to the Marſhalſea again, keep him cloſe, and let no Body come to ſpeak with him.

And ſo they departed. Then one of the Prieſts began to flatter me, and ſaid, For God's Sake remember yourſelf. God hath given you a good Wit: You have read the Scriptures well, and have borne them well in Memory. It were great Pity you ſhould do amiſs.

Wood. What a Flatterer be you, to ſay my Wit is good, and that I have read the Scriptures well? and but even now you ſaid I was an Heretick and deſpiſed me. If I be an Heretick, I can have no good Wit, as you have confeſſed. But I think your own Conſcience doth accuſe you. God give you Grace to repent, if it be his Will.

Prieſt. I call it a good Wit, becauſe you are expert in all Queſtions.

Wood. You may call it a wicked Wit, if it agree not with God's Word. Then one cried, Away, away, here come Strangers. So we departed, and I came again to the Marſhalſea with my Keeper.

The

Anno 1557.

The third Examination of Mr. Woodman (copied with his own Hand) before Dr. Langdale, Chaplain to my Lord Montague, and Mr. James Gage, at my Lord Mountague's Houſe near St. Mary Overy's in Southwark, May 12. 1557.

THE 12*th* of May the Marſhal came to the Marſhalſea, and ſent for me to ſpeak with him. When I came before him and had done my Duty, he asked my Name, and what Countryman I was; I ſhewed him both. Then he asked me when I was Abroad in the City. To whom I anſwered, if it ſhall pleaſe your Maſterſhip I was Abroad in the City on Monday was ſevennight.

Marſhal. What made you Abroad?

Wood. The Biſhop of Chicheſter ſent for me to talk with me at his Houſe near St. Nicholas Shambles.

Marſhal. Were you abroad no otherwiſe than ſo?

Wood. No forſooth: I was never abroad ſince I was ſent hither, but then. For I have nothing to do abroad, unleſs they ſend for me.

Marſhal. This is a marvellous Matter. I promiſe you I was not ſo rebuked theſe ſeven Years, as I was for you within theſe three Days. It is reported that you were abroad in the City at certain Taverns, and ſpake ſeditious Words both in the Taverns and Streets as you went.

Wood. Sir, the Truth is, I was in never a Houſe or Tavern while I was abroad, but in the Biſhop's Houſe, as my Keeper can, and will (I am ſure) teſtify: Nor did I ever talk with any Man in the Streets as I came, but with my Keeper, except one Man indeed, of the Pariſh of Framfield in Suſſex, where Mr. James Gage dwelleth. His Name is Robert Smith, being one of my greateſt Enemies; who ſtood in a Wain as we came by, and was unlading of Cheeſe but a little Way from the Marſhalſea. Indeed I bade him God ſpeed, and asked him how he did: And he ſaid, well, he thanked me. And he asked me how I did: And I ſaid, well, I praiſe God; and that was all the Talk that we had. And theſe Words were ſpoken as I came by him: I promiſe you, Sir, I ſtood not ſtill while I ſpake them, as my Keeper can tell: And I think theſe Words were not ſeditious Words, but might be ſpoken well enough, I think, or elſe it were very ſtrait.

Marſh. Then is it to be thought, that that Man reported otherwiſe than it was. I am glad it is as you ſay. Well, make you ready: For you muſt go forth ſtraitway, where you ſhall be examined of that and of other Things, where you ſhall anſwer for yourſelf. Go make haſte, for I will tarry till you be ready.

So I departed, and went to my Fellow-priſoners, and took my Leave of them, deſiring them to pray for me, for I expected to ſee them no more. I did ſuppoſe I ſhould have gone before the Council, becauſe the Marſhal ſaid, he would tarry for me himſelf: And eſpecially becauſe he ſaid, it was reported that I had ſpoken ſeditious Words, it made me imagine they had contrived falſe Things againſt me to bring me to my End. I remembered what Chriſt ſaid, The Servant is not above his Lord. Seeing the Jews brought falſe Witneſs againſt Chriſt, I thought they would do much more, or at leaſt do ſo to me, if God would ſuffer them, which made me think the worſt. But I was ſure that all the World could not juſtly accuſe me of any ſuch Thing, the Conſideration of which made me merry and joyful, being confident withal, that they could do no more againſt me than God would permit. I took my Leave of my Fellow-priſoners, and went to the Marſhal in the Porter's Lodge, and he delivered me to one of his own Men, and one of my Lord Mountague's Men, and bade me go with them: And they carry'd me to my Lord Mountague's Place in Southwark, not far from St. Mary Overy's, and brought me into a Chamber in my Lord Mountague's Houſe; and there was one Dr. Langdale, Chaplain to my Lord. My Keepers ſaid to the Doctor, This is the Man that we went for.

Lang. Is your Name Woodman?

Wood. Yea, forſooth, that is my Name.

Then he began with a great Circumſtance, and ſaid, I am ſorry for you, that you will not be ruled, but ſtand ſo much in your own Conceit, diſpleaſing your Father and others, judging that all the Realm doth Evil, ſaving a few that doth as you do: What think you of them that died long ago, your Grandfather, with their Fathers before them? You judge them to be damned, and all others that uſe the ſame that they did throughout all Chriſtendom, unleſs it be in Germany, and here in England a few Years, and in Denmark; and yet they are returned again. Thus we are ſure this is the Truth, and I would you ſhould do well. Your Father is an honeſt Man, and one of my Pariſh, and hath wept to me divers Times becauſe you would not be ruled: And he loveth you well, and ſo doth all the Country, both Rich and Poor, if it were not for thoſe evil Opinions that you hold; (with many ſuch like Tales of Robin Hood.)

Wood. I pray you give me Leave to ſpeak a few Words to you.

Lang. Yes, ſay your Mind.

Wood. You have told a great long Tale, as it were againſt me (as you think) ſaying, I hold this and that; I judge my Father and my Grandfather, and almoſt all the World, without it be a few that be of our Sect. But I judge no Man. But the 12th of John declareth, who it is that judgeth, and ſhall judge in the laſt Day. The Father ſhall not bear the Son's Offences, nor the Son the Father's Offences: But that Soul that ſinneth ſhall die, as ſaith the Prophet. And again, We may not follow a Multitude to do Evil, as ſaith the Prophet: For the moſt go the wrong Way. And Chriſt ſaith in the 12th of Luke, that his Flock is a little Flock. Here be Places enow to diſcharge me, altho' I do not as the moſt do. But can any Man ſay that I do not as I ought to do: Where be my Accuſers?

To do as moſt Men do, and to do as a Man ought to do, are two Things.

Lang. What, you be full of Scriptures methinks, and call your Accuſers as though you were afraid to utter your Mind to me. But I would have you not be afraid to talk with me, for I mean no more Hurt to you than I do to myſelf, I take God to be my Record.

Wood. I cannot tell; it is hard truſting to fair Words. When a Man cannot truſt his Father nor Brother, nor others that have been his familiar Friends, but they deceive him, a Man may lawfully follow the Example of Chriſt towards them that he never ſaw before, ſaying, Be as wiſe as Serpents, and as innocent as Doves. Beware of Men, for they go about to betray you. And it maketh me much to ſuſpect you, becauſe you blame me for anſwering with the Scriptures. It maketh me to doubt that you would take Advantage of me, if I ſhould ſpeak mine own Words. Wherefore I will take as good Heed as I can, becauſe I have been deceived already by them I truſted moſt. Wherefore blame me not though I anſwer circumſpectly. It ſhall not be ſaid, by God's Help, that I will run wilfully into mine Enemies Hands, and yet I praiſe God my Life is not dear to myſelf, but it is dear with God: Wherefore I will do the uttermoſt that I can to keep it.

Lang. You be afraid where no Fear is, for I was deſired by Maſter Sheriff and his Brother, and other Friends, to talk with you, and they told me that you were deſirous to talk with me, and now you make the Matter as though you had nothing to do with me, and as though you were ſent to Priſon for nothing: For you call for your Accuſers, as though there were no Man to accuſe you. But if there were no Man to accuſe you, your own Hand-writing did accuſe you enough, that you ſet upon the Church-door (if you remember it) and other Letters that you let fall abroad, ſome at one Place and ſome at another. Wherefore you need not call for your Accuſers. Your own Hand will accuſe you, I warrant you; it is kept ſafe enough. I would not for two hundred Pounds there were ſo much againſt me.

Wood. I will not deny mine own Hand; for it cannot be eaſily counterfeited. I do not deny but I wrote a Letter to the Prieſt, and others of the Pariſh, declaring their Folly and Preſumption, to come into my Houſe without my Love or Leave, and brought out my Child, and uſed it at their Pleaſure: Which moved me to write my Mind unto them: And becauſe I could not tell how to convey it to them, I ſet it on the Church-door: Which Letter my Lord of Chicheſter hath; for he ſhewed it me when I was before him: Wherein is contained nothing but the very Scriptures, to their Reproach. Let it be laid before me when you or he will, I will anſwer to it by the Help of God, to all their Shames that I wrote it to. And as for any other Letters, I wrote none, as you ſaid I did, neither had I wrote that, if they had done like honeſt Neighbours. Wherefore if they be offended with me for that, I will anſwer them with Chriſt's Words, in the 18th of Matthew, Woe unto themſelves, becauſe they gave me the Occaſion.

And whereas you ſaid, I was deſired to ſpeak with you, and that Maſter Sheriff and his Brother, and other of my Friends willed you to talk with me, and that I fare now as though I had nothing to do with you, and as though I were ſent to Priſon for nothing: the Truth is, I know no more wherefore I am ſent to Priſon, than the leaſt Child in this Town knoweth. And as for me, I deſired not Maſter Sheriff to ſpeak with you; but indeed he deſired me that I would ſpeak with you, and utter my Faith to you. For he ſuppoſed that I did not believe well, and he reported you to be learned. But I refuſed to talk with you at the firſt. For I remembred not that you were the Parſon at Buxted; wherefore I ſaid to him, I would not utter my Faith to any but to the Biſhop. I ſaid, he is mine Ordinary: Wherefore I appeal unto him. I am commanded by St. Peter in the firſt Epiſtle, the third Chapter, to render Account of my Hope that I have in God, to him that hath Authority; wherefore I will talk with none in that Matter, but with him. Wherefore ſend me to him if you will, or elſe there ſhall no Man know my Faith I tell you plainly. Anno 1557.

Theſe Words then made the Sheriff angry, and he went his Way; and when he was gone from me, I remembred that it was you that he would have me to talk with, and then I remembred that I had made the Promiſe to my Father and goodman Day of Veſield, not paſt a fortnight before I was taken, that whenſoever you came into the Country, I would ſpeak with you by God's Help, becauſe they praiſed you ſo much, that you were learned, and they would fain hear us talk.

So all theſe Things called to Remembrance, I deſired my Keeper, which was the Sheriff's Man, to ſhew his Maſter, that I would fain ſpeak with him; for I had remembred Things that were not in my Mind before, when I ſpake to him. So he went to his Maſter, and ſhewed him the Matter, and he came to me; and then I told him my Mind, and what Promiſe I had made; and he ſaid, he would ſend for you on the Morrow, as he did, and the Meſſenger brought Word you could not come; you preached before the Queen, he ſaid. Whereupon the Sheriff came up himſelf, and ſpake to the Biſhop that he ſhould come down, but he was ſick. So when he came home again, he ſent me to the Biſhop, and I have talked with him twice already, and I am ſure he can find no Fault in me, if he ſay juſtly; and yet I know not wherefore I was ſent to Priſon; for I was not guilty of that which was laid to my Charge, that I had baptized Children, the which I never did, as God knoweth; wherefore I had wrong to be thus handled.

This Biſhop was Dr. Chriſtopherſon.

Lang. Indeed it hath been reported, that you have chriſtned Children; and that you chriſtned your own Child; but ſince I heard ſay, you would not have the Child chriſtned, which is a damnable Way, if you deny Baptiſm: And they ſaid, your Child was not chriſtned in a Fortnight or three Weeks after it was born, and the chiefeſt of the Pariſh were fain to fetch it out of your Houſe againſt your Will. Wherefore you wrote railing Words againſt the Prieſt and them for their good Will: The which declareth that you allow not baptizing of Children. And if the Child had died it had been damned, becauſe it was not chriſtned, and you ſhould have been damned, becauſe you were the Hindrance thereof.

Wood. What abominable Lies have you told? be you not aſhamed to ſpeak ſuch Words as you have done? Firſt you ſay, I chriſtned mine own Child, and by and by you ſaid, I denied baptizing of Children, and that my Child was a Fortnight or three Weeks old before it was baptized. What abominable Lies be theſe? I neither baptized my Child myſelf, neither held againſt the baptizing of it, but did moſt gladly allow it; for it was baptized as ſoon as it was born, and I was glad thereof; therefore you be to blame to report of me.

Lang.

Anno 1557.

Lang. I pray you, who baptized it? ſome Unthrift of your providing.

Wood. Nay, ſurely, the Midwife baptized it.

Lang. But it was your Mind that it ſhould be ſo.

Wood. Nay ſure, I was not nigh home by almoſt twenty Miles, nor heard that my Wife was brought to Bed four Days after the Child was chriſtned. But it was not like to live: and therefore the Midwife baptized it.

Lang. Would you have had it to Church to have been chriſtned, if it had not been chriſtned?

Wood. That is no Matter what I would have done. I am ſure you cannot deny but it is ſufficiently done, if the Midwife do it, and I hold not againſt the Doing of it, neither did I it myſelf, as you ſaid I did.

Lang. Wherefore were you diſpleaſed with them that carry'd it to Church?

Wood. Firſt tell me whether the Child were not truly baptized by the Midwife?

Lang. Yes, it was truly baptized, if ſhe baptized it in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt.

Wood. Yes, that I am ſure ſhe did, and you grant that was ſufficient: And the Cauſe that I blamed them for, was becauſe they did more to it than need was, by your own Saying. Yea, they fetch'd it out of my Houſe without my Leave: which was not well done.

Lang. They had it to Church to confirm what was done.

Wood. Yea, but that was more than needs. But God forgive them, if it be his Will. But let that Matter paſs. But I would you ſhould not ſay, that I hold againſt baptizing of Children; for I do not, I take God to record; but do allow it to be moſt neceſſary, if it be truly uſed. But methought you ſpake Words even now that were uncomely to be ſpoken; if a Child die, and be not baptized, it is damned. How think you? be all damned that receive not the outward Sign of Baptiſm?

Lang. Yea, that they be.

Wood. How prove you that?

Lang. Go, ſaith Chriſt, and baptize in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt, and he that believeth, and is baptized, ſhall be ſaved: and he that believeth not ſhall be damned. Theſe be the Words of Chriſt, which are my Warrant.

Woed. Then by your ſaying, Baptiſm bringeth Faith, and all that be baptized in Water ſhall be ſaved; ſhall they? how ſay you?

Lang. Yea, that they ſhall; if they die before they come to Diſcretion, they ſhall be ſaved every one of them; and all that be not baptized ſhall be damned every one of them.

Wood. Then my Spirit was moved with him to reprove him ſharply, becauſe I had manifeſt Scriptures freſh in my Mind againſt his Saying. Then ſaid I:

O Lord God! how dare you ſpeak ſuch Blaſphemy againſt God and his Word, as you do? How dare you for your Life take upon you to preach, and teach the People, and underſtand not what you ſay? For I proteſt before God you underſtand not the Scriptures, but as far as natural Reaſon can comprehend. For if you did, you would be aſhamed to ſpeak as you do.

Lang. Wherein have I ſpoken amiſs; take heed, you have a Toy in your Head will make you deſpair: I dare ſay you cannot tell what you ſay. Wherefore reprove you me as you do?

Wood. Becauſe you blaſpheme God; and as for deſpairing, take heed to yourſelf. For I cannot ſee but you be out of your Wits already; and as for me, I praiſe God, I can tell what I ſay, and what you have ſaid; which ſhall turn to your Shame, if you will talk by the Scriptures with me.

So when he perceived that I ſpake earneſtly and challenged him to talk by the Word, his Colour began to change, and his Fleſh began to tremble and quake. And I ſaid:

Prove your Sayings true, if you can; for I will prove them falſe by God's Help. You ſaid, All Children, or others, that be not baptized with Water, ſhall be damned. I dare not ſay ſo for all the Good in the World. And you brought in the Saying of Chriſt for your Warrant. In Mark 16, it is written, Whoſo believeth, and is baptized, ſhall be ſaved; which Words be very true: And whoſo believeth not, ſhall be damned. Which Words be very true alſo. He ſays, He that believeth not, ſhall be damned. Yea, St. John ſaith, He that believeth not, is condemned already, becauſe he believeth not. But neither of theſe two Scriptures, nor any other Scripture in all the New Teſtament ſaith, That he that is not baptized ſhall be damned, or is damned already. But if he believe not, he ſhall be damned, and is damned already, as is aforeſaid. Then he would have interrupted me, and would have laid to my Charge, that I was an Anabaptiſt. But I would give him no Place to ſpeak, but ſaid:

Let me make an End, and then ſay what you can. You ſhall have as much to do, by God's Help, with this Matter, as ever you had to anſwer Thing in your Life. You know (I am ſure) it is no Manners to pluck a Tale out of a Man's Mouth, nor is it the Order of reaſoning, as you know that better than I can tell you. Then Dr. Langdale bade me ſay on.

Woodman. My Saying was, that they that believe not ſhall be damned, and be damned alread. But I dare not ſay for all the Goods under Heaven, that all they that receive no material Baptiſm by Water ſhall be damned, as you have ſaid: Yet I would you ſhould not gather of theſe Words, that I deny Baptiſm, as you were about to lay to my Charge, before ever I had half told out my Tale. But I would not have you, nor any Man ſo raſh in Judgment, to condemn the Thing that they are not able to prove by the Word, and to make it ſeem to the Simple, that the outward Waſhing of Water were the Cauſe of Faith.

Faith, not Baptiſm ſaveth.

Not lack of Baptiſm, but lack of Faith condemneth.

Lang. Why, is it not ſo? will you deny it? How ſay you? will you deny it? I ſay, the Child hath no Faith before it is baptized; and therefore the baptizing bringeth Faith. How ſay you to it? make me a plain Anſwer to this Queſtion.

Wood. Now I perceive you go about nothing elſe, but to take Advantage of my Words. But by God's Help, I will anſwer you ſo, that you ſhall well ſee your Sayings untrue. And yet I will not ſpeak mine own Words, but the Words of the Holy Ghoſt, out of the Mouth of the Prophets and Apoſtles; and then ask them whether they will deny it.

You ſaid, that Faith cometh by Baptiſm, had by the Uſe of material Water. I muſt be ſo bold to ask you where Jacob was baptized before he had Faith. St. Paul ſaith in the ninth

Chapter to the Romans, Before ever the Children were born, before ever they had done either good or bad, that the Purpose of God, which is by Election, might stand, not by the Reason of Works, but by the Grace of the Caller, the elder shall serve the younger. Jacob have I loved, and Esau have I hated. How think you, had this Child Faith before he were born, or no? answer to this if you can.

Dr. Langdale's Argument. Children dying without Baptism may be saved.

Lang. What: you speak of the old Law. Jacob was not christened, but circumcised. I speak of Baptism, and you are gone from baptizing to the Time of Circumcision; answer me to the baptizing. And methink by your Talk, you deny original Sin, and free Will, by the Words that you brought in of St. Paul.

Ergo Children have no original Sin.

For if Children can be saved without Baptism, then it must needs follow, that Children have no original Sin, which is put away in baptizing. But I think you know not what original Sin is, nor free Will neither.

Wood. Yes, I praise God (I think) I can tell them all better than you can. First I pray you what free Will hath Man to do good of himself? tell me this first, and then I will answer to all other Questions that you have objected against me.

Absurd Doctrine.

Lang. I say, that all Men have as much free Will now, as Adam had before his Fall.

Answer.

Wood. I pray you how prove you that?

The Righteousness by Jesus Christ cometh upon all Men, not in taking away Imperfections of Nature, but in not imputing the Imperfections of Man to Damnation.

Lang. Thus I prove it, that as Sin entered into the World, and by the Means of one that sinned, all Men became Sinners, which was by Adam; so by the Obedience of one Man, Righteousness came upon all Men that had sinned, and set them as free as they were before their Fall, which was by Jesus Christ, Rom. 5.

Wood. O Lord, what an Overthrow have you given yourself here in original Sin, and yet cannot see it? For in proving that we have free Will, you have denied quite original Sin. For here you have declared that we be set as free by the Death of Christ, as Adam was before his Fall, and I am sure that Adam had no original Sin before his Fall. If we be as free now as he was then, I marvel wherefore Paul complained thrice to God, to take away the Sting of it, God making him answer, and saying, My Grace is sufficient for thee.

These Words with divers others, prove original Sin in us; but not that it shall hurt God's elect People, but that his Grace is sufficient for all his. But you say in one Place, it is not without Baptism; and in another Place, you put it away quite by the Death of Christ; and in very deed you have spoken truer in the Matter than you are aware of. For all that believe in Christ are baptized in the Blood of Christ that he shed on the Cross, and in the Water that he sweat for Pain, and putting away of our Sins at his Death. And yet I say with David in the 51st Psalm, In Sin was I born, and in Sin hath my Mother conceived me: But in no such Sin that shall be imputed, because I am born of God by Faith, as St. John saith, Chap. 3. Therefore I am blessed, as saith the Prophet, Psal. 23. Because the Lord imputeth not my Sin, and not because I have no Sin; but because God hath not imputed my Sins. Not of our own deserving, but of his free Mercy he hath saved us. Where is now your free Will become that you speak of? If we have free Will, then our Salvation cometh of our own selves, and not of God; which is great Blasphemy against God and his Word.

Perfect Doctrine.

Anno 1557.

For St. James saith, Chap. 1. Every good and perfect Gift cometh from above, from the Father of Light, with whom is no Variableness, neither is he changed into Darkness. Of his own Will he begat us. For the Wind bloweth where it listeth, and we hear the Sound thereof, (as saith St. John, Chap. 3.) but we cannot tell from whence it cometh, neither whither it goeth: Even so is it with every one that is born of God. For St. Paul saith, Phil. 2. It is God that worketh in us both to will and to do of his good Pleasure. Seeing then that every good and perfect Gift cometh from above and lighteneth upon whom it pleaseth God, and that he worketh in us both to will and to do, methinks all the rest of our own Will is little worth, or naught at all, unless it be Wickedness. So methinks here be Places enow to prove that a Man hath no free Will to do Good of himself; with an hundred Places more that I could recite, if Time did serve. And as for original Sin, I think I have declared my Mind therein, how it remaineth in Man; which you cannot deny, unless you deny the Word of God. Now, if you will suffer me, I will prove my Saying of Jacob and Esau, that I brought in to prove that Faith was before Baptism, and you refused it, because (you said) Jacob was not baptized. If you will give me Leave, you shall hear what I can say therein: For methinks you think my Talk long. This I said, because I saw he was sore offended at my Sayings.

Lang. Say what you can; for it availeth me to say nothing to you. For I was desired to send for you, to teach you, and there will no Words of mine take Place in you; but you go about to reprove me. Say what you will, for me.

Wood. I take not upon me to teach you, but to answer such Things as you lay to my Charge: And I spake not mine own Mind, but the Mind of the Holy Ghost, written by the Prophets and Apostles. Will you give me Leave to answer briefly in this Matter, that you may report to others what I hold? And he said he was contented. But I think it was for nothing but to have caught Advantage at my Words.

First, if you remember, you said, that if my Child had died without Baptism, if I had been the Cause that it had not been baptized, the Child should have been damned, and I too. How say you?

Children dying without Baptism are not therefore damned, speaking absolutely. Children bear not the Offences of their Fathers.

Lang. Yea that you should.

Wood. That is most untrue. For the Prophet saith, The Father shall not bear the Child's Offences, nor the Child the Father's: But the Soul that sinneth shall die. What could the Child have done withal, if it had died without Baptism? the Child could not do withal. How say you to this? And I am sure, that which I brought in, in the old Law, to prove that Faith is before Baptism, is not disagreeable to the Word. For Circumcision was a Figure of Baptism. And that I may bring to prove Baptism by, as well as St. Peter did: For he brought in Noah's Flood, which was a long Time before Jacob and Esau, to prove Baptism, saying, While the Ark was preparing, wherein few (that is to say) eight Souls were saved by Water, like as Baptism also now saveth us, not in the putting away of the Filth of the Flesh, but there is a good Conscience consenting to God.

Here

Anno 1557.

Here Peter proveth, that Water had not ſaved Noah and the other ſeven, no more than it ſaved all the reſt, if it had not been for their Faith, which Faith now ſaveth us; not in putting away the filthy Soil of the Fleſh, by the waſhing of the Water, but by a good Conſcience conſenting unto God.

But you ſaid, If they be baptized with the Water, if they die before they come to Years of Diſcretion, they be all ſaved; which St. Peter is clean againſt, unleſs you grant that Children have Faith before they be baptized.

Now I ask you what Conſent of Conſcience the Children have, being Infants. For you ſay, they believe not before they be baptized: Ergo, they conſent not to be baptized, becauſe they believe not. And by this it followeth, that none ſhall be ſaved, although they be baptized. I would fain ſee how you can anſwer this.

Lang. You are the moſt perverſe Man that ever I knew. You know not what you ſay. The Children are baptized in their * Godfathers and Godmothers Faith, and that is the good Conſcience that St. Peter ſpeaketh of: and the Chriſtening is the keeping of the Law that St. Paul ſpeaketh of, ſaying, Neither is Circumciſion any thing worth, nor Uncircumciſion any thing worth, but the keeping of the Law is all together. Like as the Circumciſion was the keeping of the old Law, ſo is Baptiſm the keeping of the new Law.

* Nay rather in the Faith of their Parents. Neither is it the Faith of the Godfathers and Godmothers that ſanctifieth the Child, but their Diligence may help him in ſeeing him catechiſed.

Wood. Ah, I thought if you would talk with me, you ſhould be fain to bring in the old Law to maintain your Sayings by (for all that you refuſed it) when I brought it in. But yet it ſerveth not for your Purpoſe, ſo much as you think for: For here you have confeſſed, that neither Circumciſion availeth, nor Uncircumciſion; which you yourſelf have coupled with Baptiſm, proving that neither of them prevaileth, but keeping of the Law is altogether: Which Law is kept (you ſay) by the outward Signs; which is nothing ſo: for Abraham believed God, and that was counted to him for Righteouſneſs, and this was before he was circumciſed. So the Children believe before they be either circumciſed or baptized, according to my firſt Saying of Jacob and Eſau, Jacob I loved, but Eſau I hated. Theſe Words declare, that Jacob had Faith in his Mother's Womb: And John Baptiſt was ſanctified in his Mother's Womb, and therefore it was counted to them for Righteouſneſs: And I am ſure, if they had died before they had either received Circumciſion or Baptiſm as concerning the outward Deed, they ſhould have been ſaved. For God's Gifts and Callings are ſuch, that he cannot repent of them. But by your ſaying he doth both repent and change. For you ſay, keeping of the outward Law is all together; but a bad Excuſe is as good as none at all. And where you ſaid, the Children be baptized in their Godfathers and Godmothers Faith, they being all Unbelievers, in what Faith is that Child baptized then? In none at all, by your own Saying. Which Words made him ſtamp and ſtare.

Lang. What? then you would count that there were very few Believers, if there be not one of three that believeth. You enter into Judgment againſt the People. Belike you think there be none that believe well, unleſs they be of your Mind. Then indeed Chriſt's Flock was a very little Flock.

Wood. Indeed theſe be Chriſt's Words in the 12th of Luke, which we may ſee to be very true. Yea, you ſaid, if there were not one amongſt three, that were very few. But there is not one among three hundred, for any thing that I can ſee. For if there were, there would not be ſo many that would ſeek their Neighbours Goods and Lives as there be.

Lang. Is the Flock of Chriſt ſuch a little Flock as you ſpeak of? You may call it a great Flock. How many be there of them, can you tell me?

Wood. A pretty Queſtion, I promiſe you, it is that you ask me: As though I did make myſelf equal with God.

No, no, you ſhall catch no ſuch Advantage of my Words, nor do I know how many there be. But I will tell you as nigh as I can. For therefore you look. I am ſure that I ſhould enter into Judgment.

Lang. Yea, I pray you tell me as much as you can, ſeeing you be ſo cunning.

Wood. You ſhall ſee my Judgment in it by and by. Firſt the Prophet ſaith, Follow not a Multitude to do Evil, for they muſt go the wrong Way. For the moſt go the wrong Way. There is one Point to know them.

Then Chriſt ſaith in the 7th of Matthew, Broad is the Way, and wide is the Gate that leadeth into Deſtruction, and many there be that go in thereat: and ſtraight is the Gate, and narrow is the Way that leadeth unto Life, and few there be that find it. And in the 12th of Luke, it is written (which Words were ſpoken of Chriſt) Come you little Flock, it is my Father's Will to give you a Kingdom. The third Point is this, in the 3d of Mark, and 2d of Matthew, You (ſaith Chriſt) ſhall know the Tree by the Fruits. A good Tree bringeth forth good Fruits, and a bad Tree bringeth forth bad Fruits; ſo by the Fruits I know them: For every Tree that bringeth not forth good Fruit, muſt be hewn down, and caſt into the Fire (into Hell I think Chriſt meant) and your Fruits declare that you be one of them. Thus have I proved four Ways, that the People who ſhall be ſaved is but a ſmall Company in compariſon of the reſt. But if that be not enough, for the Proof thereof, I have twenty Ways more to prove it by, and you were never the nearer of your Purpoſe.

Lang. What a naughty Man are you? you would make the moſt patient Man in the World angry with you. I think your Talk is nothing but Pride and Vain-glory, with Frumps and Mocks, and deſpiſing and judging of Men. It is Time ſuch a Fellow were taken indeed. Such a one is enough to trouble a whole Country. I think he is bleſt of God that took you: for you are not fit to be in a Common-wealth.

With divers other ſuch like Words that I cannot recite, they came out ſo thick, with ſtamping and chafing, as though he had been out of his Wits. I held my Peace until he had made an End of his Talk, and then I ſpake.

Wherein have I ſaid amiſs? or have I not anſwered you unto every Queſtion that you have demanded of me? What Fault can you find in one Word that I have ſaid? I dare ſay you can find none. I marvel why you take on thus againſt me, having no Cauſe ſo to do.

Lang. No, no, you have not anſwered me to Original Sin, you deny Original Sin.

With theſe Words Mr. James Gage came in at the Door; and I think he ſtood at the Door a good while before he came in, and that Dr. Langdale ſaw him: For his Face was toward the Door, and my Face was from it.

Gage. Ah Woodman, methink Mr. Doctor and you cannot agree.

Wood. Yes Sir, methink we agree very well.

Lang. Without doubt, Sir, he is the naughtieſt Man that ever I talk'd with in all my Life: for he will have his own Way in all Things.

Gage. Woodman leave that Pride. Do not truſt too much to your own Wit. Hearken to this Man, this is a learned Man, I tell you. He is known to be learned; for elſe he ſhould not be allowed to preach before the Queen's Majeſty; and I dare ſay, he will tell thee nothing, nor will thee to do any thing, but that he will not do himſelf: And I dare ſay, he will not go to the Devil to bring thee thither. How ſay you, Mr. Doctor? Thou mighteſt think us mad, if we would hurt ourſelves to hurt thee. No I promiſe thee, my Brother, neither I, nor any Gentleman in the Country, I think of my Conſcience, but would thou ſhouldſt do as well as their own Bodies and Souls, as a great many of them have ſaid to thy Face whilſt thou waſt at my Brother's, and which thou canſt not deny.

Wood. Sir, I can ſay no otherwiſe but I was gently treated at your Brother's, both with Meat and Drink, and gentle Words, both by you and him, and divers other Gentlemen: And I am ſure neither you nor they can ſay, that you found me unreaſonable at any Time. For I ſaid, I was contented to learn of them that were able to teach me, and ſo I am, as God knoweth: And here Mr. Doctor (I think) can ſay no otherwiſe; for I dare ſay he can find no Fault in the Talk that we have had.

Lang. No marry, I can find nothing elſe in you. I promiſe you, Mr. Gage, if you had been here, you would have ſaid ſo yourſelf. He took me up indeed, and ſaid, he marvelled how I durſt preach. For he ſaid, I underſtood not the Scripture, but as far as natural Reaſon comprehended; as though he underſtood all, and I nothing. With divers other ſuch like Words he made a great Complaint to him of me, and ſaid to Mr. James Gage, he would make you believe that I could find no Fault in him. Yes, I underſtand, he denies Original Sin.

Gage. Yea, doth he ſo? by St. Mary that is a great Matter: Woodman, leave your Pride. That Pride will come to Naught. Can ye live without Sin?

Wood. Sir, now I perceive he will ſoon lie on me behind my Back, when he will not ſtick to lie before my Face.

He ſaith, I denied Original Sin; and it was he himſelf, as I will let you be Judge in the Matter. For, as he went about to prove, that Man hath Free-will, he ſaid, we were ſet as free by the Death of Chriſt, as Adam was before his Fall: Which Words prove plainly, that we have no Original Sin. And I took him withal, and ſaid, Had Adam Original Sin before his Fall? And then he could not tell what to ſay, but cavilled with Words, and ſaid he meant not ſo: And therefore I marvel he is not aſhamed to make ſuch Lies to my Face. Theſe Words made them both aſtoniſhed.

Gage. Mr. Doctor, he ſaid even now you could find no Fault in all his Talk. I will bid you ask him a Queſtion, and I will warrant you, you will find Fault enough. I pray you ask him, how he believeth in the Sacrament of the Altar. I think he will make but a bad Account thereof. Anno 1557.

Wood. Yes, I will make Account good enough of that, by God's Help.

Lang. Well, how ſay you to the Sacrament of the Altar?

Wood. I ſay, I know no ſuch Sacrament, unleſs Chriſt be the Altar that you mean.

Gage. Lo! I told you, you ſhould ſoon find Fault in him, if you came to that Point with him. You ſhould have begun with that firſt, and never have talked with him about other Things. What? know you not the Sacrament of the Altar?

Wood. No ſure, I know no ſuch, unleſs Chriſt be the Altar that you mean; for Chriſt is the Altar of all Goodneſs. And if you mean Chriſt to be the Altar of the Sacrament you ſpeak of, you ſhall ſoon hear my Mind and Belief therein.

Lang. Well, we mean Chriſt to be the Altar. Say your Mind, and go briefly to work; for I think it almoſt Dinner-time.

Gage. I pray you go roundly to work, that you may make an end before Dinner.

Wood. Yes, you ſhall ſoon hear my Mind therein by God's Help. I do believe, that whenſoever I come to receive the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, being truly miniſtred according to Chriſt's Inſtitution, I believing that Chriſt was born of the Virgin Mary, and that he was crucified on the Croſs, and ſhed his Blood for the Remiſſion of my Sins, and ſo take and eat the Sacrament of Bread and Wine in that Remembrance, that then I do receive whole Chriſt, God and Man, myſtically by Faith. This is my Belief of the Sacrament, which no Man is able to diſprove.

Gage. By St. Mary, I can find no Fault in this. How ſay you, Mr. Doctor?

Lang. Sir, you ſee not ſo much as I do. For he goeth craftily to work, I tell you as I have heard. For though he hath granted, that the faithful Receiver receiveth the Body of Chriſt, God and Man, yet he hath not granted that it is the Body of Chriſt before it be received, as you ſhall ſee by and by, I warrant you, by his own Words. How ſay you? Is it the Body of Chriſt as ſoon as the Words be ſpoken by the Prieſt, or not? For theſe Words will try him more than all the reſt.

Wood. Doth the Word ſay that it is his Body before it is received? if it do, I will ſay ſo too.

Gage. Why? then we ſhall agree well enough, if you will be tried by the Word.

Wood. Yes indeed, that I will; God forbid elſe.

Gage. Why? the Word ſaith it is his Body before it is eaten.

Wood. Thoſe Words would I fain hear; but I am ſure they be not in the Bible.

Lang. No? that you ſhall ſee preſently (ſays he to Mr. Gage) and then turned to the 22d of Luke, and there he read, When Supper was done, Chriſt took Bread, gave Thanks, and brake it, and gave to his Diſciples, and ſaid; Take, eat, this is my Body: Then they ſpake both at once, Here he ſaith it is his Body.

Wood. Mr. Gage, I do not deny that he called it his Body, but not before eating, as I ſaid before; wherefore I pray you mark the Words. Chriſt ſaid, Take, eat; I pray you Anno 1557. Sir, mark these Words that he said, Take and eat, and then he said, it was his Body. So you see, eating goeth before. For he said, Eat, this is my Body. So according to the very Word, I do believe it is his Body. Which Words made them both astonished.

Lang. Why, then by your saying, Judas eat not the Body of Christ. How say you, did he not?

Wood. Nay, I ask you. Did he?

Lang. I ask you.

Wood. And I ask you.

Lang. And I ask you.

Wood. Marry I ask you: And I bid you answer if you dare for your Life; for whatsoever you answer, unless you say as I have said, you will damn your own Soul. For Mr. Gage, I protest before God, I would you should do as well as mine own Soul and Body; and it lamenteth my Heart to see how you be deceived with them; they be Deceivers all the sort of them. He cannot answer to this, but either he must prove Judas to be saved, or else he must prove that it is no Body before it be received in Faith, as you shall well perceive, by God's Help, if he dare answer the Question.

Gage. Yes, I dare say he dareth. What, you need not to threaten him so.

Wood. Then let him answer if he can.

Then he said he knew what I would say to him; therefore he was much in doubt to answer the Question.

Lang. Mr. Gage, I will tell you in your Ear what Words he will answer me, before I speak to him.

Then he told Mr. Gage a Tale in his Ear, and said; I have told Mr. Gage what you will say.

Gage. Yea, and I will speak the Truth for both Parties.

Wood. Well, how say you? Did Judas eat the Body of Christ, or not?

Lang. Yea, I say Judas did eat the Body of Christ.

The Papists hold that Judas did eat the Body of Christ.

Wood. Then it must needs follow, that Judas hath everlasting Life: For Christ saith in the 6th of John, Whoso eateth my Flesh, and drinketh my Blood, hath eternal Life, and I will raise him up at the last Day. If Judas did eat Christ's Body, I am sure you cannot deny but that he did both eat his Flesh, and drink his Blood, and then is Judas saved by Christ's own Words. Therefore now you are compelled to say that it was not Christ's Body, or else that Judas is saved.

Argument Whosoever eateth the Flesh of Christ, hath everlasting Life. John 6. Judas did eat the Flesh of Christ: Ergo, Judas hath everlasting Life.

Gage. Surely these be the very Words that Master Doctor told me in mine Ear that you would say to him.

Wood. Well, let us see how well he can avoid this Argument.

Lang. Judas is damned, and yet he eat the Body of Christ; but he eat it unworthily: And therefore he is damned.

Wood. Where find you that Judas did eat the Body of Christ unworthily?

Lang. They be St. Paul's Words, 1 Cor. 11.

Wood. Master Gage, I desire you for God's sake mark my Words well what I say. If St. Paul speak any such Words there, or in any other Place; if there be any such Words written in all the whole Bible, that ever any Man eat the Body of Christ unworthily, then say that I am the falsest Man that ever you heard speak with Tongue. But indeed, these be the Words of St. Paul, Whoso eateth of this Bread, and drinketh of this Cup unworthily, eateth and drinketh his own Damnation, because he maketh no Difference of the Lord's Body; that is, because he presumeth to eat the Sacrament of the Lord's Body without Faith, making no Difference betwixt the Sacrament and other Bread and Drink. And that is St. Paul's Meaning, and not that any Man doth or can eat the Body of Christ * unworthily. For whoso eateth the Body of Christ, hath everlasting Life, as is aforesaid in the Sixth of John; with these Words one came for them to Dinner in all haste.

* Christ speaketh of eating his Flesh simply, without any Determination of Unworthiness: that is, simply whosoever believeth in Christ, he shall be saved, neither is any Unworthiness in believing in Christ.

Gage. I am sorry, I would fain hear more of this Talk, but we shall have another Day well enough.

Lang. Nay, Master Gage, I will never talk with him more; for he is the most unreasonable Man that ever I talked with in all my Life.

Then Mr. Gage put off his Cap, and desired him that he would not refuse to talk with me, and that it might not be grievous to him. For he said, we will seek all the Means possible to make him an honest Man, and to keep him from burning, if we could: For if it had not been for me and my Brother, he had been burnt before this.

Lang. Sir, for your sake, and for my Master your Brother's sake, and for his Father's sake, and other of his Friends sakes, that have spoken to me many Times with weeping Tears, I will do the best to him that I can; but for no Love nor Favour that I bear to him, I tell you the Truth.

Note well the Working of this Man's Charity, to do for a Man more at Request, than for any Compassion of the Party.

Gage. Woodman, you hear what Master Doctor saith: When will you come again?

Wood. Even when you will send for me. For I am a Prisoner, and cannot come when I would. Or if I should desire to come, it will cost me Money, and I have none to give: But if you send for me, it will cost me none.

Gage. Well, I will send for you on Friday or Saturday at farthest; for To-morrow I must ride out of Town; and I would fain hear your Talk.

Wood. Sir, I would be very glad you should hear our Talk always, and I trust in God you shall hear me say nothing, but the Word of God shall be my Warrant.

So Mr. Gage took his Leave, and went away to his Lodging, which was right in my way to the Prison; and when he came without my Lord Mountague's Gates, there we met with one Hood of Bursted, a Smith.

Then said Mr. Gage: Woodman, I had forgot one Thing, that Hood hath brought me in Remembrance of as soon as I saw him; for he heard when the Tale was told me. Hood, did not you hear when Smith of Framfield told me that he saw Woodman abroad in the City at Liberty.

Hood. Yea forsooth, that I did.

Gage. Yea surely, and I was very glad, for I had well hoped you had been conformable. But I heard otherwise afterwards again, that you had Leave of the Keeper to go abroad and speak openly in the Streets, as you went up and down.

Wood. Indeed so the Marshal told me to-day. But indeed I was never abroad since I came to Prison, but when I was sent for; and indeed the same Time I was abroad with my Keeper, coming from the Bishop, and as I was coming, even not far from the Marshalsea I saw goodman Smith stand in a Wain unloading of Cheeſe, and I asked him how he did, even as I went by, and never ſtaid for the Matter, and thereupon it did ariſe. So I departed from them, with my Keeper to the Marſhalſea again, where now I am merry, I praiſe God, as a Sheep appointed to be ſlain.

The fourth Examination of Richard Woodman, before the Biſhop of Wincheſter, the Biſhop of Rocheſter, and a certain Doctor, with divers other Prieſts and Gentlemen, May 27, 1557.

Wood. I Was brought from the Marſhalſea to the ſaid Biſhops and Prieſts, ſitting in St. George's Church in Southwark, by one of the Marſhal's Men, and one of the Sheriff's Men. When I came before them, and had done my Duty to them as nigh as I could, then ſaid the Biſhop of Wincheſter,

What is your Name?

Wood. My Name is Richard Woodman, forſooth.

Winch. Ah! Woodman! you were taken and apprehended for Hereſy about three Years ago, and were ſent to Priſon in the King's-Bench, and there remained a long Time. Mine old Lord of Chicheſter, being a learned famous Man, well known in this Realm of England, and almoſt throughout all Chriſtendom, I think came to Priſon to you, and there, and at other Places, called you before him divers Times, travelling with you, and perſuading you many Times (becauſe he was your Ordinary) to pluck you from your Hereſies that you held, but he could by no Means advertiſe you.

The old Biſhop of Chicheſter was Dr. Day.

Whereupon you were delivered to the Commiſſioners, and they could do no Good with you neither. Then they ſent you unto my Lord of London. My Lord of London calling you before him divers Times, Means was made to him by your Friends, that you might be releaſed. My Lord having a good Hope in you, that you would become an honeſt Man, becauſe he had heard ſo of you in Times paſt, yea and of yourſelf promiſing him, that you would go home and recant the Hereſies which you held, deliver'd you; ſending alſo a Letter of your Recantation to the Commiſſary, that he ſhould ſee it done. But as ſoon as you were out of his Hands, you were as bad as ever, and would never fulfil your Promiſe, but have hid yourſelf in the Woods, Buſhes, Dens, and Caves, and thus have you continued ever ſince, till it was now of late. Then the Sheriff of that County (being a worſhipful Man) hearing thereof, ſent certain of his Men, and took you in a Wood, and ſo carry'd you to his Houſe. I cannot tell his Name. What is your Sheriff's Name?

Wood. Forſooth, his Name is Sir Edward Gage.

Biſhop. Well, you were apprehended for Hereſy, and being at Maſter Gage's three Weeks or more, ye were gently treated there, he and other Gentlemen perſuading you divers Times, little prevailed.

Then you appealed to the Biſhop of Chicheſter that now is. The Sheriff, like a worſhipful Man, ſent you to him, and he hath travelled with you, and others alſo, and can do no Good with you, whereupon we have ſent for you. Anon 1557.

Wood. Then I ſpake to him: For I thought he would be long before he would make an end. I thought he was a Year in telling of thoſe Lies againſt me there already. Yea, I kept Silence from good Words, but it was great Pain and Grief to me (as David ſaid.) At length the Fire was ſo kindled in my Heart, that I could not chuſe but ſpeak with my Tongue; for I feared leſt any of the Company ſhould have departed before I had anſwered to his Lies, and ſo the Goſpel ſlandered by my long Silence. So I ſaid, My Lord, I pray you let me now anſwer for myſelf, for it is Time.

Biſhop. I permit you to anſwer to theſe Things that I have ſaid.

Wood. I thank God for that, and I think myſelf happy (as Paul ſaid when he was brought before King Agrippa) that I may this Day anſwer for myſelf. My Lord, I promiſe you there is never a Word of your Sayings true that you have alledged againſt me.

Biſhop. I cannot tell, but thus it is reported of you. As for me, I never ſaw you before this Day; but I am ſure it is not all Lies that I have ſaid, as you report.

Wood. Yes, my Lord, there is never a true Word of that you have ſaid. And further, where you ſaid you never ſaw me before this Day, you have both heard me and ſeen me before this Day, I dare ſay.

Biſhop. I think I heard you indeed on Sunday, where you played the malapert Fellow; but I cannot tell that I ſaw you. But I pray you, were you not taken in the Woods by the Sheriff's Men?

Wood. No, I was taken near my Houſe, I being in my Houſe when they came, wherefore that is not true.

Biſhop. Were you not three Weeks at the Sheriff's?

Wood. Yes that I was, juſt a Month, and was gently treated by him; I can ſay no otherwiſe; for I had Meat and Drink enough, and fair Words.

Biſhop. It is not all Lies then, as it chanced. For I ſpake but of three Weeks, and you confeſs a Month yourſelf.

Wood. Yet your Tale is never the truer for that: For you ſaid, I was there three Weeks for Hereſy, which is not ſo; for I was not apprehended for Hereſy at the firſt, neither did mine old Lord of Chicheſter travel with me to pull me from Hereſy, as you ſaid; for I held none then, neither do I now, as God knoweth, neither was I ſent to the Commiſſioners, nor to the Biſhop of London for Hereſy, neither was I delivered to him for any ſuch Thing, nor promiſed him to recant, as you ſaid I did. Wherefore I marvel you be not aſhamed to tell ſo many Lies, being a Biſhop, that ſhould be an Example to others.

Biſhop. Lo, what an arrogant Heretick he is. He will deny God; for he that denieth his own Hand, denieth God.

Wood. My Lord, judge not leſt you be judged yourſelf: For as you have judged me, you ſhall be judged, if you repent not: And if I have ſet my Hand to any Recantation, let it be ſeen to my Shame before this Audience; for I will never deny mine own Hand, by God's Help.

Biſhop.

Anno 1557.

Biſhop. It is not here now, but I think it may be had well enough; but if it cannot be found, by whom will you be tried?

Wood. By my Lord of London; for he dealt like a good Man with me in that Matter for which I was ſent to Priſon. For it was upon the Breach of a Statute, as Maſter Sheriff here can tell. For he was Sheriff then, as he is now, and can tell how I was toſſed up and down from Seſſions to Seſſions; and becauſe I would not conſent that I had offended therein, they ſent me to Priſon again.

Then my Lord of Chicheſter being mine Ordinary, and I being his Tenant, came to me, to perſuade me to conſent to them, and to find myſelf in Fault, when I was in none: To which I would not agree; but I deſired that he would ſee me releaſed of my Wrong; but he ſaid he could not; but willed me or my Friends to ſpeak to the Commiſſioners for me, becauſe it was a temporal Matter: And when I came before them, they ſent me to my Lord of London, and my Lord of London was certify'd by the Hands of almoſt thirty Men, both Eſquires, Gentlemen, and Yeomen, the Chief in all the Country where I dwelt, that I had not offended in the Matter that I was ſent to Priſon for: Whereupon he delivered me, not requiring me to recant Hereſies, for I held none (as God knoweth) neither do I now: Nor do I know for what I was ſent to Priſon, no more than any Man here knoweth; for I was taken away from my Work.

Biſhop No? why then did you appeal to my Lord of Chicheſter, if it were not for Hereſy?

Wood. Becauſe there was laid to my Charge that I had baptized Children, and married Folks, which I never did, for I was no where Miniſter. Wherefore I appealed to mine Ordinary, to clear myſelf thereof, which I have done. Wherefore if any Man have any thing againſt me, let them ſpeak; for I came not hither to accuſe myſelf, neither will I.

Biſhop. Maſter Sheriff, can you tell upon what Breach of Statute he was ſent to Priſon firſt?

Sheriff. Yea forſooth, my Lord, that I can.

Wood. My Lord, if you will give me Leave, I will ſhew you the whole Matter.

Biſhop. Nay, Maſter Sheriff, I pray you tell the Matter, ſeeing you know it.

The Sheriff. My Lord, it was for ſpeaking to a Curate in the Pulpit, as I remember.

Biſhop. Ah, like enough, that he would not ſtick to reprove a Curate. For did you not ſee how he faſhioned himſelf to ſpeak to me in the Pulpit on Sunday? he played the impudent Fellow with me; and therefore it was no great Marvel though he played that Part with another.

Wood. Why, you will not blame me for that, I am ſure. For we ſpake for no other Cauſe, but to purge ourſelves of thoſe Hereſies that you laid to our Charge. For theſe were your Words; good People, theſe Men that be brought before us, being here, deny Chriſt to be God, and the Holy Ghoſt to be God (pointing to us with your left Hand) which might ſeem to the whole Audience, that you meant us all. Wherefore to clear ourſelves thereof, we ſpake, and ſaid we held no ſuch Thing. And you ſaid you would cut out our Tongues. But I am ſure you have no ſuch Law.

Biſhop. Yes that we have, if you blaſpheme, and as it chanced, I found ſuch amongſt you.

Wood. Indeed after we ſpake, you declared who they were, but not before; for you ſpake generally. Wherefore we blaſphemed not, but purged ourſelves.

Biſhop. But I pray you, how can you purge yourſelf for ſpeaking to the Curate, that it is not Hereſy?

Wood. Forſooth theſe be the Words of the Statute; whoſoever doth interrupt any Preacher or Preachers, lawfully authorized by the Queen's Majeſty, or by any other lawful Ordinary, that all ſuch ſhall ſuffer three Months Impriſonment, and furthermore be brought to the Quarter Seſſions, there (being ſorry for the ſame) to be releaſed upon his good Behaviour one whole Year. But I had not ſo offended as it was well proved; for he that I ſpake to was not lawfully authorized, nor had put away his Wife. Wherefore it is not lawful for him to preach by your own Law; and therefore I brake not the Statute, though I ſpake to him.

Biſhop. I am glad I perceive this Man ſpeaketh againſt Prieſts Marriages; he is not contented with Prieſts that have Wives. He is an honeſter Man than I took him for, Maſter Sheriff, have him away. I am glad he loveth not Prieſts Marriages.

Wood. Then I would have anſwered to his Saying, but he would in no wiſe hear me, but bade the Sheriff have me away. So the Sheriff took me by the Hand, and plucked me away, and would not let me ſpeak, but going out of the Chancel-door, I ſaid; I would ſhew him the whole Matter, if he would have given me Leave, but ſeeing he will not, if he will let me go ſo, they ſhall ſee whether I will not go home to my Wife and Children, and keep them, as my bounden Duty is, by the Help of God. So I was ſent to the Marſhalſea again, where I now am merry, I praiſe God therefore, as a Sheep appointed to be ſlain.

Moreover, I was credibly informed by one of our Brethren that heard our Talk, that the Biſhop ſaid when I was gone, that they would take me whilſt I was ſomewhat good. Which Words ſeemed to many of the People that were there, that I ſpake againſt Prieſts Marriages, but I did not, but did only anſwer to ſuch Queſtions as he asked me, as you ſhall perceive well by the Words, if you mark them, which Words were theſe:

How can you purge yourſelf from Hereſy, for talking to the Curate in the Pulpit, and not offend the Statute, ſaid the Biſhop? meaning thereby, I think, to have taken Advantage of my Words; but it was not God's Will that he ſhould at that Time. For I anſwered him by the Words of the Statute, which Words be as hereafter followeth, (that is) Whoſoever doth interrupt any Preacher or Preachers, lawfully authorized by the Queen's Majeſty, or by any other lawful Ordinary, that all ſuch ſhall ſuffer three Months Impriſonment. But I prove that this Man was not lawfully authorized to preach (by their own Law) becauſe he had not put away his Wife. For their Law is, that no Prieſt may ſay Maſs, nor preach with the Maſs, but he muſt firſt be ſeparated from his Wife. That is, becauſe honeſt Marriages be good and commendable, and theirs naught and abominable; therefore they cannot dwell together.

Now I give you all to underſtand, that I did did not reprove this Prieſt becauſe he had a Wife, but becauſe he taught falſe Doctrine, which grieved my Soul, becauſe he had been a fervent Preacher againſt the Maſs, and all the Idolatry thereof ſeven Years before, and then came and held with it again; for which Cauſe I reproved him in the Pulpit: And the Words that I ſpake to him are written in divers of my Examinations at my firſt Impriſonment. But in very deed, I knew not of the Statute when I reproved him. But becauſe I was ſent to Priſon upon the Breach of it, I bought a Statute Book, and when I had peruſed it, I perceived I had not offended by their own Law; and therefore ſtill when I was called to anſwer, I anſwered them with their own Law. But yet they kept me in Priſon a Year and almoſt three Quarters before I was releaſed. I was at mine Anſwer for that eighteen Times. If any think I do not allow Biſhops and Prieſts Marriages, let them look in my firſt Examination before the Biſhop of Chicheſter that now is during this my Impriſonment, and there they ſhall find what I have ſaid in the Matter. The Truth is, I looked to be condemned with my Brother that ſame Day: But we may all ſee that they can do nothing but as God will permit them to do. But when the Time is full come, I truſt in God I ſhall run that joyful Race that my Brethren have done. Thus I commit you all into the Hands of God, who is the Preſerver, Defender, and Keeper of all his Elect for evermore, Amen.

The fifth Examination of Richard Woodman before the Biſhop of Wincheſter, the Archdeacon of Canterbury, Dr. Langdale, a fat Prieſt, and others whoſe Names I know not, at St. Mary Overy's Church in Southwark, June 15. 1557.

Wincheſter. WOodman, you were before us the laſt Day, and would not be known in any wiſe that you were ſent to Priſon for Hereſy, and called for your Accuſers, and ſtood ſtoutly in defending of your ſelf, and in your departing I had thought you had ſpoke againſt Prieſts Marriages, thinking by your Words we ſhould have found you an honeſt Man, and conformable, when we had called you before us again. You told ſuch a fair Tale for yourſelf, as though you had been free from all that was laid to your Charge: For you ſaid it was all Lies that I told againſt you; but ſince I have proved the contrary, as here is your own Hand to ſhew. By which I have proved, that you reproved not the Prieſt for lacking of Authority, and becauſe he had not put away his Wife, but becauſe you liked not his Preaching. For indeed I took it, that you reproved him becauſe he was not lawfully authorized, but I have proved the contrary ſince.

Wood. I told you not that I did either reprove him for lack of Authority, or becauſe I liked not his Preaching, but I told you wherefore I was firſt ſent to Priſon. For you ſaid it was for Hereſy, and made a long Tale againſt me. And indeed I told you that there was never a Word of your Sayings true, but were all Lies, as they were indeed. For I never was ſent to Priſon for Hereſy, neither held I any then, nor do now, I take Heaven and Earth to witneſs; but I told you I was ſent to Priſon upon the Breach of a Statute, which was for ſpeaking to a Prieſt in the Pulpit, and for that Cauſe the Juſtices of that Country thought that I had offended the Statute, and called me before them, and would have had me bound to my good Behaviour, and becauſe I refuſed it they ſent me to Priſon. And theſe be the Words of the Statute, as I told you the laſt Day. If any Man do interrupt any Preacher or Preachers, lawfully authorized by the Queen's Majeſty, or by any other lawful Ordinary, that then every Party that ſo offendeth, ſhall ſuffer three Months Impriſonment, and furthermore be brought to the Quarter-ſeſſions, and there being ſorry for the ſame, and alſo bound for his good Behaviour one whole Year, to be releaſed, or elſe to remain to Priſon again. Anno 1557.

And when I was in Priſon I bought a Statute-book, which when I had peruſed over, I found by the Words thereof that I had not offended, becauſe he was not lawfully authorized, as the Biſhop of London was certify'd by the Hands of almoſt thirty of the chief Men in the Country. For he had not put away his Wife, and therefore the Statute took no Place on me, as I told you the other Day. Wherefore my Lord of London, ſeeing me have ſo much Wrong, did like a good Man to me in that Matter, and releaſed me. Now when I had told you this Matter, you bad the Sheriff take me away; you ſaid you were glad I held againſt Prieſts Marriages, becauſe I anſwered to the Queſtion you asked me.

Fat Prieſt. My Lord, do you not hear what he ſaith by my Lord of London? He ſaith he is a good Man in that he releaſed him, but he meaneth that he is good in nothing elſe.

Wood. What? can you tell what I mean? let every Man ſay as he findeth; he did juſtly to me in that Matter. I ſay, if he be not good in any Thing elſe, as you ſay, he ſhall anſwer for it, and not I; for I have nothing to do with other Matters.

Biſhop. Well, how ſay you? how liked you his Preaching? I pray you tell us.

Wood. That is no Matter how I liked it. Howſoever I liked it, I offended not the Statute. Wherefore you have nothing to ſay to me for that I am ſure.

Biſhop. Well, how like you this then? Here is your own Hand-writing. I am ſure you will not deny it. Will you look on it?

Wood. It is mine own handy Work indeed, which by God's Help I will never deny, nor ever yet did.

Biſhop. And here is good Gear I tell you. I pray you hearken well to it: Theſe be the Words before the Commiſſioners. How ſay you? do not you believe as ſoon as the Words be ſpoken by the Prieſt, that there remaineth neither Bread nor Wine, but only the very Body of Chriſt, both Fleſh and Blood, as he was born of the Virgin Mary? Theſe were the Words of the Commiſſioners.

And then thou ſaidſt, thou durſt not ſay otherwiſe than the Scripture ſaith. I cannot find (ſay you) that it is the Body of Chriſt before it is received by Faith, bringing in the 22d of Luke, ſaying, Chriſt ſaid, Take, eat, this is my Body. So I cannot prove it is his Body before it be eaten. Then ſaid the Commiſſioners, Did not Judas eat Chriſt's Body? And if you can prove that Judas is ſaved (ſaid you) I muſt grant that he eat his Body. For Chriſt ſaith in the Sixth of John, Whoſo eateth my Fleſh, and drinketh my Blood, hath eternal Life, and I will raiſe him up at the laſt Day; which Words prove, ſaid you, that if Judas eat the Body of Chriſt, he muſt needs be ſaved. How ſay you now? Did Judas eat the Body of Chriſt or not?

Anno 1557.

Wood. Then I perceived he went about nothing but to catch Words of me in his Dioceſs, to condemn me with. Though I ſhould confound him never ſo much, I perceived that he was fully bent thereto. To whom I anſwered and ſaid:

I will anſwer you to no ſuch Thing, for I am none of your Dioceſs; wherefore I will not anſwer to you.

Biſhop. Thou art within my Dioceſs, and thou haſt offended within my Dioceſs; and therefore I will have to do with thee.

Wood. Have to do with me if you will; but I will have nothing to do with you, I tell you plainly. For though I be now in your Dioceſs, I have not offended in your Dioceſs; if I have, ſhew me wherein.

Biſhop. Marry here is thine own Hand-writing, which thou affirmedſt in my Dioceſs.

Wood. I do not deny but it is mine own Hand-writing; but that does not prove that I have offended in your Dioceſs; for that doth but declare what Talk there was betwixt the Commiſſioners and me, which you have nothing to do withal.

Biſhop. No, hold him a Book, and thou ſhalt ſwear whether thou holdeſt now or not, and whether thou didſt not write it in my Dioceſs, as I think thou didſt; lay thy Hand on the Book.

Wood. I will not be ſworn for you; for I am not of your Dioceſs; and therefore you have nothing to do with me: And as for the writing of the ſame, I never wrote a Word of it in your Dioceſs.

Lang. No, did you not? my Lord, let me ſee; I will find where you wrote it.

Then he took it and looked on it, and anon he found that I was ſent for out of the King's-Bench to come before the Commiſſioners.

Lang. My Lord, here you may ſee it was in the King's-Bench, which is in your Dioceſs.

Wood. Although I was fetch'd out of the King's-Bench, that proveth not that I wrote it there; nor did I, I promiſe you truly.

The fat Prieſt. Where wrote you it then?

Wood. Nay, I owe you not ſo much Service as to tell you; find it out as well as you can: for I perceive you go about to ſhed my Blood.

Biſhop. It is no Matter where it was written, it is here, and he denieth not but he wrote it. You ſhall hear more of it. Here the Commiſſioners asked you, whether Judas did eat any more than bare Bread, and you anſwered that he eat more than bare Bread.

Whereupon they ſent you away back to the King's-Bench again, and asked you nothing more, for which Cauſe (as you have written here) you had a Hell burning in your Conſcience. For you had thought they would have ſent a Diſcharge to the King's-Bench, and ſolet me go (ſaid you) and regiſter my Name in their Books, that I had granted that Judas did eat the Body of Chriſt, and ſo the Goſpel ſhould have been ſlandered by me. For which Cauſe I was in ſuch Caſe, I could ſcarcely eat, drink, or ſleep for that Space, as all my Fellow-priſoners can teſtify. If all you, I ſay, that go to the Church of Satan, and there hear the deteſtable Doctrine that they ſpit and ſpue out in their Churches and Pulpits, to the great Diſhonour of God, if all you, I ſay, that come there, had ſuch a Hell burning in your Conſcience for the Time, as I had till I came before them again, and had uttered my Conſcience more plainly, I dare ſay you would come there no more. All this is your Writing; is it not? how ſay you?

Wood. I do not deny but it was mine own Deed.

Biſhop. And I pray you, where is there ſuch Spitting and Spuing out falſe Doctrine as you ſpeak of?

Wood. In the Synagogue of Satan, where God is diſhonoured with falſe Doctrine.

Biſhop. And I pray you, where is one of them?

Wood. Nay, that judge yourſelf; I came not hither to be a Judge.

Biſhop. Well, here you have affirmed, that Judas (your Maſter) eat more than Bread, but yet he eat not the Body of Chriſt, as you have declared by your Words. For you had a Hell burning in your Conſcience, becauſe you were in doubt, that the Commiſſioners underſtood by your Words, that Judas had eaten the Body of Chriſt, becauſe you ſaid, he eat more than bare Bread. Therefore thou hadſt a great ſort of Devils in thee; for in Hell be many Devils: And therefore the Devil and Judas is thy Maſter, by thine own Words.

Wood. Nay, I defy Judas and the Devil, and his Servants; for they be your Maſters, and you ſerve them, for any thing that I can ſee, I tell you Truth.

Biſhop. Nay, they be thy Maſters. For the Devil is Maſter where Hell is, and thou ſaidſt thou hadſt a burning Hell in thee. I pray thee tell me, how thou canſt avoid it, but that the Devil was in thee by thine own Saying?

The Biſhop's Argument:

The Devil is Maſter in Hell.
Woodman felt a burning Hell in his Conſcience: Ergo, the Devil was Woodman's Maſter.

Anſwer.

Hell is taken in Scripture two Ways; either for the Place where damned Spirits and Souls be tormented for ever out of this Life; or elſe for God's Correction and Anguiſh of the Soul in this Life, which ſometimes is felt ſo ſharp, that it is reſembled to Hell itſelf: As where we read, The Lord bringeth to Hell, and bringeth out again, &c. Tob. 13. The Paint of Hell have found me, &c. Pſal. 114.

Wood. The Hell that I had, was the loving Correction of God towards me, to call me to Repentance, that I ſhould not offend God and his People in leaving Things ſo dark, as I left that. For which Cauſe my Conſcience bear me Record, I had not done well, as at all Times I have felt the Sting of it, when I have broken the Commandments of God by any Means, as all God's People do, I dare ſay, and it is the Loving-kindneſs of God towards them, to drive them to Repentance. But it is to be thought, that your Conſcience is never troubled, how wickedly ſoever you do. For if it were, it ſhould not be ſo ſtrange to you as you make it, which declareth plainly whoſe Servant you be.

Biſhop. What a naughty Fellow is this? This is ſuch a perverſe Villain as I never talked with in all my Life. Hold him a Book, I will make him ſwear to anſwer directly to ſuch Things as I will demand of him; and if he will not anſwer, I will condemn him.

Wood. Call you me a Fellow? I am ſuch a Fellow, I tell you, that will drive you all to Hell, if you conſent to the ſhedding of my Blood, and you ſhall have Blood to drink, as ſaith St. John in his Revelation, Chap. 9. and being in Hell, you ſhall be compelled to ſay for Pain of Conſcience, This is the Man that we have had in Deriſion, and thought his Life Madneſs, and his End to be without Honour; but now we may ſee how he is counted among the Saints of God, and we are puniſhed. This ſhall you ſee in Hell, if you repent it not, if you do condemn me. This you ſhall find in the fifth Chapter of the Book of Wiſdom; and therefore take heed what you do, I give you Counſel.

Biſhop. Wiſdom! what ſpeakeſt thou of Wiſdom? thou never hadſt it; for thou art as very a Fool as ever I heard ſpeak.

Wood. Do you not know, that the fooliſh Things of this World muſt confound the wiſe Things? Wherefore it grieveth me not to be called a Fool at your Hands.

Biſhop. Nay, thou art none of thoſe Fools; thou art an obſtinate Fool, and an Heretick. Lay Hand on the Book, and anſwer to ſuch Things as I will lay againſt thee.

Wood. I will lay Hand on the Book for none of you all. You be not my Biſhop; and therefore I will have nothing to do with you.

Biſhop. I will have to do with you. This Man is without Law, he careth not for the King nor Queen, I dare ſay; for he will not obey their Laws. Let me ſee the King's Commiſſion. I will ſee whether he will obey that, or not.

Wood. I would you loved the King and Queen's Majeſty no worſe than I do, if it pleaſed God: You would not do as you do then.

Biſhop. Hold him a Book, he is a rank Heretick. Thou ſhalt anſwer to ſuch Things as I will demand of thee.

Wood. I take Heaven and Earth to record I am no Heretick, neither can I tell wherefore I am brought to Priſon, no more than any Man here can tell; and therewith I looked round about on the People, and ſaid to the Biſhop, If you have any juſt Cauſe againſt me worthy of Death, lay it againſt me, and let me have it; for I refuſe not to die (I praiſe God) for the Truths ſake, if I had ten Lives. If you have no Cauſe, let me go home, I pray you, to my Wife and Children to ſee them kept, and other poor People that I would ſet to work by the Help of God. I have ſet to work an hundred Perſons before this, all the Year together, and was unjuſtly taken from them; but God forgive them that did it, if it be his Will.

Biſhop. Do you not ſee how he looketh about for Help? but I would ſee any Man ſhew thee a chearful Countenance, and eſpecially you that be of my Dioceſs. If any Man of you bid God ſtrengthen him, or take him by the Hand, or embrace him, or ſhew him a chearful Countenance, you ſhall be excommunicated, and ſhall not be received in again, till you have done open Penance; and therefore beware of it.

Wood. I look for no Help of Men, for God is on my Side, I praiſe him for it; and therefore I need not to care who be againſt me, neither do I care.

Then they cried, Away with him, and bring us another. So I was carried again to the Marſhalſea, where I am now merry (I praiſe God therefore) as a Sheep appointed to be ſlain. But for want of Time, I have left out much of our Talk; but this is the chiefeſt of it. Anno 1557.

The ſixth and laſt Examination of Richard Woodman, written with his own Hand.

BE it known unto all Men by this preſent Writing, that I Richard Woodman, ſometime of the Pariſh of Warbleton, in the County of Suſſex, was condemned for God's everlaſting Truth, July 16, 1557, by the Biſhop of Wincheſter, in the Church of St. Mary Overy's in Southwark, there ſitting with him the ſame Time the Biſhop of Chicheſter, the Archdeacon of Canterbury, Dr. Langdale, Mr. Roper, with a fat-headed Prieſt, I cannot tell his Name. All theſe conſented to the ſhedding of my Blood, upon this Occaſion, as hereafter followeth.

I affirmed, that Judas received the Sacrament with a Sop and the Devil withal; and becauſe I would not be ſworn upon a Book, to anſwer directly to ſuch Articles as he would declare to me; and becauſe I would not believe that there remained neither Bread nor Wine after the Words of Conſecration, and that the Body of Chriſt could not be received of any but of the Faithful: For theſe Articles I was condemned, as hereafter ſhall follow more at large, by the Help of God.

Firſt, the Biſhop ſaid when I came before him.

Biſhop. You were before us on Monday laſt, and there you affirmed certain Hereſies. How ſay you now? Do you hold them ſtill, or will you revoke them?

Wood. I held no Hereſies then, neither do I now, as the Lord knoweth.

Biſhop. No? did you not affirm, that Judas received Bread? which is an Hereſy, unleſs you tell what more than Bread.

Wood. Is it Hereſy to ſay, Judas received no more than Bread? I ſaid he received more than bare Bread, for he received the ſame Sacrament that was prepared to ſhew forth the Lord's Death, and becauſe he preſumed to eat without Faith, he eat the Devil withal, as the Words of Chriſt declare; after he eat the Sop, the Devil entered into him, as you cannot deny.

Biſhop. Hold him a Book. I would have you anſwer directly, whether Judas did eat the Body of Chriſt or no.

Wood. I will anſwer no more, for I am not of your Dioceſs; wherefore I will have nothing to do with you.

Biſhop. No? you be in my Dioceſs, and you be of my Dioceſs, becauſe you have offended in my Dioceſs.

Wood. I am not of your Dioceſs, although I am in your Dioceſs; and I was brought into your Dioceſs againſt my Will: And I have not offended in your Dioceſs, if I have, tell me wherein.

Biſhop. Here is your own Hand-writing, which is Hereſy. Theſe be the Words, I cannot find (ſay you) that it is the Body of Chriſt to any before it is received in Faith. How ſay you? is not this your own Hand-writing?

Wood. Yea, I do not deny but it is my own Hand-writing; but when, or where was it written, or where were the Words ſpoken?

Anno 1557.

Biſhop. Before the Commiſſioners, and here is one of them; Maſter Roper, the Words were ſpoken before you; were they not?

Roper. Yes indeed they were, Woodman, I am ſure you will not deny them; for you have written the Words even as you ſpake them.

Woodman. No, Sir, indeed I will not deny but that I ſpake them, and am glad that you have ſeen it. For you may ſee by that whether I lie, or not.

Roper. Indeed the Words be written Word for Word as you ſpake them.

Biſhop. Well, here you affirm that it is your own Deed. How ſay you now? will you be ſorry for it, and become an honeſt Man?

Wood. My Lord, I truſt no Man can ſay, but that I am an honeſt Man; and as for that, I marvel that you will lay it to my Charge, knowing that my Lord of London diſcharged me of all Matters that were laid againſt me, when I was releaſed of him.

Biſhop. You were releaſed, and it might happen, it was not laid to your Charge then; therefore we lay it to your Charge now, becauſe you be ſuſpected to be an Heretick: And we may call you before us, and examine you upon your Faith upon Suſpicion.

Wood. Indeed St. Peter willeth me to render an Account of my Hope that I have in God, and I am contented ſo to do, if it pleaſe my Biſhop to hear me.

Chich. Yes I pray you let us hear it.

Wood. I do believe in God the Father Almighty, Maker of Heaven and Earth, and of all Things viſible and inviſible, and in one Lord Jeſus Chriſt my Saviour, very God and very Man. I believe in God the Holy Ghoſt, the Comforter of all God's elect People, and that he is equal with the Father and the Son. I believe the true Catholick Church, and all the Sacraments that belong thereto. Thus have I rendred an Account of my Hope that I have of my Salvation.

Biſhop. And how believe you in the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar? And with that they all put off their Caps.

Wood. I pray you be contented, for I will not anſwer to any more Queſtions; for I perceive you go about to ſhed my Blood.

Biſhop. No? hold him a Book. If he refuſe to ſwear; he is an Anabaptiſt, and ſhall be excommunicated.

Woodman. I will not ſwear for you, excommunicate me if you will. For you be not meet to take an Oath; for you laid Hereſies to my Charge in yonder Pulpit, which you are not able to prove; wherefore you be not meet to take an Oath of any Man. And as for me, I am not of your Dioceſs, nor will have any Thing to do with you.

Biſhop. I will have to do with thee, and I ſay that thou art a ſtrong Heretick.

Wood. Yea, all Truth is Hereſy with you; but I am content to ſhew you my Mind, how I believe on the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, without flattering. For that you look for, I am ſure. But I will meddle no further, but what I hold myſelf of it. I will not meddle with any other Man's Belief on it.

Harpsfield. Why? I am ſure all Men's Faith ought to be alike.

Wood. Yea, I grant you ſo, that all true Chriſtians Faith ought to be alike. But I will anſwer for myſelf.

Harpsfield. Well, let us hear what you ſay to it.

Wood. I do believe, that when I come to receive the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, if it be truly miniſtred according to Chriſt's Inſtitution, I coming in Faith, as I truſt in God I will, whenſoever I come to receive it, I believing that Chriſt was born for me, and that he ſuffered Death for the Remiſſion of my Sins, and that I ſhall be ſaved by his Death and Blood-ſhedding, and to receive the Sacrament of Bread and Wine in that Remembrance, that then I do receive whole Chriſt, God and Man, myſtically by Faith, this is my Belief on the Sacrament.

Then they ſpake all at once, ſaying, Myſtically by Faith!

Fat Prieſt. What a Fool thou art, Myſtically by Faith! thou canſt not tell what myſtical is.

Wood. If I be a Fool, ſo take me: But God hath choſen ſuch Fools of this World to confound ſuch wiſe Things as you are.

Fat Prieſt. I pray thee, what is myſtically?

Wood. I take myſtically to be the Faith that is in us, that the World ſeeth not, but God only.

Biſhop. He cannot tell what he ſaith. Anſwer to the Sacrament of the Altar, whether it be not the Body of Chriſt before it be received, and whether it be not the Body of Chriſt to whomſoever receiveth it? Tell me, or elſe I will excommunicate thee.

Wood. I have ſaid as much as I will ſay; excommunicate me if you will. I am none of your Dioceſs. The Biſhop of Chicheſter is mine Ordinary. Let him do it if you will needs have my Blood, that it may be required at his Hands.

Chich. I am not conſecrated yet, I told you when you were with me.

Wood. No indeed, your Kine bring forth nothing but Cow-calves, as it now happeneth; meaning thereby he had not his Bulls from Rome.

Then they were all in a great Rage with me, and called me all to nought, and ſaid I was out of my Wits, becauſe I ſpake fervently to every Man's Queſtion; all which I cannot remember, but I ſaid;

So Feſtus ſaid to Paul, when he ſpake the Words of Soberneſs and Truth out of the Spirit of God, as I do. But as you have judged me, you be yourſelves. You will go to Hell all the ſort of you, if you condemn me, if you repent it not with Speed.

Wood. Then my Keeper, and the Sheriff's Deputy Fuller, rebuked me, becauſe I ſpake ſo ſharply to them. And I ſaid, I pray you let me alone; I muſt anſwer for my Life.

Then there was much ado that I ſhould keep Silence, and ſo I held my Peace. Then ſpake the Biſhop of Wincheſter and the Archdeacon of Canterbury, ſaying; We go not about to condemn thee, but go about to ſave thy Soul, if thou wilt be ruled, and do as we would have thee.

Wood. To ſave my Soul? nay, you cannot ſave my Soul. My Soul is ſaved already, I praiſe God. There can no Man ſave my Soul, but Jeſus Chriſt; and he it is that hath ſaved my Soul before the Foundation of the World was laid.

Fat Prieſt. What an Hereſy is that, my Lord! here is an Hereſy. He ſaith his Soul was ſaved before the Foundation of the World were were laid. Thou canſt not tell what thou ſayſt. Was thy Soul ſaved before it was?

Wood. Yes, I praiſe God, I can tell what I ſay, and I ſay the Truth. Look in the firſt of the Epheſians, and there you ſhall find it, where Paul ſaith, Chap. 1. Bleſſed be God the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who hath bleſſed us with all manner of ſpiritual Bleſſings in heavenly Things, by Chriſt, according as he hath choſen us in himſelf before the Foundation of the World was laid, that we ſhould be holy and without Blame before him thro' Love, and thereto were we predeſtinated. Theſe be the Words of Paul, and I believe they be moſt true. And therefore it is my Faith, in and by Jeſus Chriſt, that ſaveth, and not you or any Man elſe.

Fat Prieſt. What! Faith without Works! St. James ſaith, Faith without Works is dead, and we have free Will to do good Works.

Wood. I would not have you think, that I diſallow good Works. For a good Faith cannot be without good Works. Yet not of our ſelves, but it is the Gift of God, as ſaith St. Paul to the Philippians, Chap. 2. It is God that worketh in us both to will and to do, even of his good Pleaſure.

Biſhop. Make an end; anſwer to me. Here is your Ordinary, the Archdeacon of Canterbury; he is made your Ordinary by my Lord Cardinal, and he hath Authority to examine you of your Faith upon a Book, to anſwer to ſuch Articles as he will lay to you: And I pray you refuſe it not; for the Danger is great if you do. Wherefore we deſire you to ſhew yourſelf a Subject in this Matter.

Then they ſpake all, and ſaid; Lo, my Lord deſireth you gently to anſwer to him, and ſo we do all. For if you refuſe to take an Oath, he may excommunicate you. For my Lord Cardinal may put whom he will in the Biſhop's Office, until he is conſecrated.

Wood. I know not ſo much. If you will give me Time to learn the Truth of it (if I can prove it to be as you ſay) I will tell you my Mind in any Thing that he ſhall demand of me without any flattering.

Prieſt. My Lord and all we tell thee it is true; and therefore anſwer to him.

Wood. I will believe none of you all, for you be Turn-coats and Changelings, and be wavering minded, as St. James ſaith; you be neither hot nor cold, as St. John ſaith, therefore God will ſpue you out of his Mouth. Wherefore I can believe none of you all, I tell you truth.

Woodman challengeth his Judges to be all Turncoats and Changlings.

Biſhop. What? be we Turn-coats and Changelings, what meaneſt thou by that?

Wood. I mean, that in King Edward's Time you taught the Doctrine that was ſet forth then, every one of you, and now you teach the contrary; and therefore I call you Turn-coats and Changelings, as I may well enough. Which Words made the moſt part of them to quake.

Biſhop. Nay, not all as it chanced.

Wood. No? I pray where were you then?

Biſhop. I was in the Tower, as the Lieutenant will bear me Record.

Wood. If you were in the Tower, it was not therefore, I dare ſay, it was for ſome other Matter.

Then they all took Heart of Grace, and ſaid; My Lord, he comes to examine you, we think; if he will not anſwer to the Articles, you had beſt excommunicate him.

Biſhop. He is the naughtieſt varlet Heretick that ever I knew, I will read the Sentence againſt him. Anno 1557.

Then they ſpake all at once, and I anſwered them as faſt as I could. But I cannot remember all, the Words came out ſo thick, I ſpared them not, I praiſe God therefore; for I ſpake freely.

Then they that ſtood by rebuked me, and ſaid; You cannot tell to whom you ſpeak I think.

Wood. No? think you ſo? they be but Men. I am ſure I have ſpoken to as good as they be. And better than they will ever be, for any Thing that I can ſee, if they repent not with Speed.

Biſhop. Give Ear; for I will read Sentence againſt you.

Wood. Will you ſo? wherefore will you? you have no juſt Cauſe to excommunicate me; and therefore if you do condemn me, you will be condemned in Hell, if you repent not: And I praiſe God, I am not afraid to die for God's Sake, if I had a hundred Lives.

Biſhop. For God's Sake? nay, for the Devil's ſake. Thou ſay'ſt thou art not afraid to die; no more was Judas that hanged himſelf, as thou wilt kill thyſelf wilfully, becauſe thou wilt not be ruled.

Wood. Nay, I defy the Devil, Judas and all their Members. And Judas Fleſh was not afraid, but his Spirit and Conſcience was afraid, and there deſpaired and hung himſelf. But I praiſe God, I feel no Lothſomeneſs in my Fleſh to die, but a joyful Conſcience, and a willing Mind thereto. Wherefore my Fleſh is ſubdued to it, I praiſe God; and therefore I am not afraid of Death.

Chich. Woodman, for God's Sake be ruled. You know what you ſaid to me at my Houſe. I could ſay more, if I would.

Wood. Say what you can; the moſt Fault that you found in me was, becauſe I praiſed the living God, and becauſe I ſaid, I praiſe God, and the Lord; which you ought to be aſhamed of, if you have any Grace; for I told you where the Words were written.

Biſhop. Well, how ſay you? will you confeſs that Judas received the Body of Chriſt unworthily? tell me plainly.

Wood. My Lord, if you, or any of you all can prove before all this Audience, in all the Bible, that any Man ever eat the Body of Chriſt unworthily, then I will be with you in all Things that you will demand of me; of which Matter I deſire all this People to be witneſs. No Man can receive the Body of Chriſt unworthily.

Prieſt. Will you ſo? then we ſhall agree well enough. St. Paul ſaith ſo.

Wood. I pray you where ſaith he ſo? rehearſe the Words.

Prieſt. In the eleventh Chapter of the firſt to the Corinthians he ſaith; Whoſo eateth of this Bread, and drinketh of this Cup unworthily, eateth and drinketh his own Damnation, becauſe he makes no Difference of the Lord's Body.

Wood. Do theſe Words prove that Judas eat the Body of Chriſt unworthily? I pray you let me ſee them. They were contented. Then ſaid I, theſe be the Words even that you ſaid: Good People hearken well to them, Whoſo eateth of this Bread, and drinketh of this Cup unworthily: He ſaith not, Whoſo eateth of this Body unworthily, or drinketh of this Blood unworthily: but he ſaith; Whoſo eateth of this Bread, and drinketh of this Cup unworthily (which is the Sacrament) eateth and drinketh his own Damnation, becauſe he maketh no Difference between the Sacrament which repreſenteth the Lord's Body, and other Bread and Drink. Here (good People) you may all ſee they are not able to prove their Sayings true. Therefore I cannot believe them in any thing that they do.

Biſhop. Thou art a rank Heretick indeed. Art thou an Expounder? Now I will read Sentence againſt thee.

Wood. Judge not leſt you be judged. For as you have judged me, you be yourſelf. Then he read the Sentence. Why, ſaid I, will you read the Sentence againſt me, and cannot tell wherefore:

Biſhop. Thou art an Heretick, and therefore thou ſhalt be excommunicated.

Wood. I am no Heretick, I take Heaven and Earth to witneſs, I defy all Hereticks, and if you condemn me, you will be damned, if you repent not. But God give you Grace to repent all, if it be his Will; and ſo he read forth the Sentence in Latin, but what he ſaid, God knoweth, and not I. God be Judge between them and me. When he had done, I would have talked my Mind to them, but they cried, Away, away with him. So I was carried to the Marſhalſea again, where I am, and ſhall be as long as it ſhall pleaſe God; and I praiſe God moſt heartily, that ever he hath elected, and predeſtinated me to come to ſo high Dignity, as to bear Rebuke for his Name's Sake; his Name be praiſed therefore, for ever and ever. Amen.

After theſe Examinations between Richard Woodman and the Biſhops, he was judged by Sentence of Condemnation, and deprived of his Life; with whom alſo was burned nine others, five Men and four Women; namely, George Stevens, William Maynard, Alexander Hoſman his Servant, Thomaſine a Wood his Maid, Margery Moris, James Moris her Son, Denis Burgis, Aſhdowne's Wife, Grove's Wife.

Theſe Perſons above-named were put to death at Lewes the 22d of June.

The Condemnation of Mr. Richard Luſh.

IN the Regiſters of Gilbert, Biſhop of Bath and Wells, I find a Certificate made to King Philip and Queen Mary, of one Richard Luſh, there condemned and given to the ſecular Power, to be burned for the Cauſe of Hereſy, whoſe Affirmations in the ſaid Certificate be expreſſed in Tenour and Effect, as follows:

1. For denying the Verity of the Body and Blood of Chriſt in the Sacrament of the Altar.

2. Item, For denying auricular Confeſſion to be made to the Prieſt.

3. Item, For affirming only to be three Sacraments; to wit, of Baptiſm, of the Supper, and of Matrimony.

4. Item, For refuſing to call the Lord's Supper by the Name of the Sacrament of the Altar.

5. Item, For denying Purgatory, and that Prayer and Alms profit not the dead Body.

6. Item, That Images are not to be ſuffered in the Church, and that all that kneel to Images at the Church, be Idolaters.

7. Item, That they which were burnt of late for Religion, died God's Servants and good Martyrs.

8. Item, For condemning the ſingle Life of Prieſts, and other Votaries.

9. Item, For denying the univerſal and catholick Church, meaning belike the Church of Rome.

For theſe Aſſertions, as there are expreſſed, he was condemned and committed to the Sheriffs, and alſo a Certificate directed by the Biſhops aforeſaid, to the King and Queen.

A Note of John Hullier, Miniſter and Martyr, burned at Cambridge.

CONcerning the Story of John Hullier, Martyr, partly mentioned before, for the more full Declaration of the Death and Martyrdom of that good Man, becauſe the Story is before but imperfectly touched; for the more perfecting thereof, I thought thereunto to add that which ſince hath come to my Hand, as followeth.

Firſt, John Hullier was brought up at Eaton College, and after, according to the Foundation of that Houſe, he was elected Scholar in King's College, where alſo not tarrying full three Years of Probation, before he was Fellow of the College, he after ſome Time was one of the ten Conducts in the King's College, which was Anno 1539. Then at length, in Proceſs of Time, he came to be Curate of Babram, three Miles from Cambridge, and went afterwards to Lynn; where he, having divers Conflicts with the Papiſts, was from thence carried to Ely, to Dr. Thurlby, then Biſhop there; who after divers Examinations, ſent him to Cambridge Caſtle, where he remained but awhile.

From thence he was conveyed to the Town Priſon, commonly called the Tolbooth, lying there almoſt a Quarter of a Year, while at length he was cited to appear at Great St. Mary's on Palm-Sunday Eve, before divers Doctors, both Divines and Lawyers, amongſt whom was chiefeſt Dr. Shaxton, Dr. Young, Dr. Sedgewike, Dr. Scot, and others. Where after Examination, becauſe he would not recant, he was firſt condemned, the Sentence being read by Dr. Fuller.

Then conſequently he was degraded after their Popiſh Manner, with ſcraping Crown and Hands. When they had degraded him, he ſaid chearfully, This is the joyfulleſt Day that ever I ſaw, and I thank you all, that ye have delivered and lightened me of all this Paltry.

In the mean time, whilſt it was doing, one ſtanding by, asked Hullier, what Book he had in his Hand. Who anſwered, a Teſtament. Whereat this Man in a Rage took it and threw it violently from him. Then was he given over to the ſecular Powers, Braſey being Mayor, who carrying him to Priſon again, took from him all his Books, Writings, and Papers.

On Maundy Thurſday coming to the Stake, he exhorted the People to pray for him, and after holding his Peace, and praying to himſelf, one ſpake to him, ſaying, The Lord ſtrengthen thee. Whereat a Serjeant, named Briefly, ſtayed and bade him hold his Tongue, or elſe he ſhould repent it.

Nevertheleſs Hullier anſwered and ſaid, Friend, I truſt that as God hath hitherto begun, ſo alſo he will ſtrengthen me, and finiſh his Work upon me. I am bidden to a Maundy, whither I truſt to go, and there to be ſhortly. God hath laid the Foundation, as I by his Aid will end it.

Then going to a Stool (prepared for him to ſit on) to have his Hoſe plucked off, he deſired the People to pray for him again, and alſo to bear witneſs that he died in the right Faith, and that he would ſeal it with his Blood, certifying them, that he died in a juſt Cauſe, and for the Teſtimony of the Verity and Truth, and that there was no other Rock but Jeſus Chriſt to build upon, under whoſe Banner he fought, and whoſe Soldier he was; and yet ſpeaking, he turned himſelf toward the Eaſt, and exhorted the People there likewiſe.

George Boys, Henry Barley, and one Gray, all three Arch-prieſts of Trinity-College Cambridge, ſtood on a Bank hard by. This Boyes was one of the Proctors of the Univerſity that Year. To whom Mr. Gray ſpake, ſaying, Hear ye not Maſter Proctor, what Blaſphemy this Fellow uttereth? ſurely it is ill done to ſuffer him.

At whoſe Words, this Boyes ſpake with a loud Voice, Mr. Mayor, what mean ye? if ye ſuffer him thus to take Liberty, I tell ye, the Council ſhall hear of it, and we take you not to be the Queen's Friend. He is a pernicious Perſon, and may do more Harm than you are aware of. Whereat ſimple Hullier, as meek as a Lamb, taking the Matter very patiently, made no Anſwer, but made himſelf ready, uttering his Prayer. Which done, he went meekly himſelf to the Stake, and with Chains being bound, was beſet with Reed and Wood, ſtanding in a Pitch Barrel, and the Fire being ſet to, not marking the Wind, it blew the Flame to his Back. Then he feeling it, began earneſtly to call upon God. Nevertheleſs his Friends perceiving the Fire to be ill kindled, cauſed the Serjeants to turn it, and fire it to that Place where the Wind might blow it to his Face.

That done, there was a Parcel of Books which were caſt into the Fire, and by Chance a Communion-book fell between his Hands, who receiving it joyfully, opened it, and read ſo long till the Force of the Flame and Smoak cauſed him that he could ſee no more; and then he fell again to Prayer, holding his Hands up to Heaven, and the Book betwixt his Arms next his Heart thanking God for ſending him it: And at that Time the Day being very fair and hot, yet the Wind was ſomewhat up, and it cauſed the Fire to be the fiercer, and when all the People thought he had been dead, he ſuddenly uttered theſe Words; Lord Jeſus receive my Spirit, dying very meekly.

The Place where he was burned, is called Jeſus Green, not far from Jeſus-College. Seagar gave him certain Gunpowder, but little to the Purpoſe; for he was dead before it took fire. All the People prayed for him, and many a Tear was ſhed for him. Which the Papiſts ſeeing, cried, he was not to be prayed for, and being but a damned Man, it could profit him nothing: Nevertheleſs they continued praying; whereat the Papiſts fell into ſuch a Rage that they menaced them with terrible Threatnings to ward. His Fleſh being conſumed, his Bones ſtood upright even as if they had been alive. Of the People, ſome took what they could get of him, as Pieces of Bones. One had his Heart, which was diſtributed ſo far as it would go; one took the Scalp and looked for the Tongue, but it was conſumed except the very Root. Anno 1557.

Simon Miller and Elizabeth Cooper burnt at Norwich.

IN the Month of July next followed the Martyrdom of Simon Miller and Elizabeth Cooper. This Simon dwelling in the Town of Lynn, a pious and zealous Man in the Knowledge of the Lord and his Truth, deteſting and abhorring the contrary enforced Religion then ſet forth, came from Lynn to Norwich, where he ſtanding in the Preſs and hearing of the People, began to ask them, as they came out of the Church from their Popiſh Service, where he might go to have the Communion. At which, divers marvelled to hear and ſee his Boldneſs, one that was an evil diſpoſed Papiſt, hearing the ſame, ſaid, that if he would needs go to a Communion, he would go bring him thither where he ſhould be ſped of his Purpoſe. Whereupon he was brought to the Chancellor of Norwich (whoſe Name was Dunning) who after a few Words, and ſmall Talk paſſed with this Examinate, committed him to ward.

In the mean while as he was in Examination, he had in his Shoe, his Confeſſion, written in a certain Paper, whereof a Piece appearing above his Shoe, was ſpied and taken out. The Chancellor asking if he would ſtand to the Confeſſion of the ſame Faith therein contained, he conſtantly affirmed the ſame. Whereupon, as is ſaid, he was committed. Thus the ſaid Simon being in the Biſhop's Houſe, under Cuſtody of the Keeper there called Maſter Felow, how it happened is not certain, whether by Gentleneſs of the Keeper (who was ſomewhat gentle that ways) or by Leave given of the Biſhop, or elſe whether he had condeſcended on Purpoſe to their Articles, he was diſmiſſed, and went home to his Houſe at Lynn, where he continued a certain Space, while he had diſpoſed and ſet all Things in order.

That done, he returned again to the Biſhop's Houſe to his Priſon and Keeper, till the Time at length, he conſtantly abiding in his profeſſed Purpoſe, and Defence of God's Truth, was by the ſaid Biſhop and his Chancellor, condemned and committed to the Fire about the thirteenth Day of July.

With this Simon Miller alſo was burnt one Elizabeth Cooper (as is aforeſaid) a Pewterer's Wife, dwelling in St. Andrew's Pariſh in Norwich, where ſhe had before recanted, and being unquiet for the ſame, and greatly troubled inwardly, at the laſt ſhe came into the ſaid St. Andrew's Church, the People being at their Popiſh Service, and there ſtanding in the ſame, ſaid ſhe revoked her Recantation before made in that Place, and was heartily ſorry that ever ſhe did it, willing the People not to be deceived, Anno 1557. deceived, neither to take her Doings before for an Example, &c. Theſe or ſuch like Words ſhe ſpake in the Church.

Then cried one Bacon of the ſaid Pariſh, laying his Arms abroad, ſaying, Mr. Sheriff, will you ſuffer this? and repeating the ſame, urged him to go from the Church to her Houſe, at whoſe Knocking ſhe came down, and was taken and ſent to Priſon.

The Sheriff (named Mr. Thomas Sutton) and ſhe had before been Servants together in one Houſe: And for the Friendſhip he bare unto her, and more for the Goſpel's Sake, he was very loth to do it, but that he was enforced by thoſe other Perſons before-mentioned, much againſt his own Conſcience, which he now earneſtly repenteth.

This good Woman being condemned with Simon Miller to be burnt at the Stake, when the Fire came to her, ſhe a little ſhrunk thereat, with a Voice crying, ah! When the ſaid Simon Miller heard the ſame, he put his Hand behind him towards her, and deſired her to be ſtrong and of good Chear: For good Siſter (ſaid he) we ſhall have a joyful and ſweet Supper. At which ſhe being, as it ſeemed, thereby ſtrengthened, ſtood as ſtill and quiet, as one moſt glad to finiſh that good Work, which ſhe before had ſo happily begun. And thus ſhe and her Companion joyfully ended their Lives, committing their Souls into the Hands of Almighty God.

The Martyrdom of five Men and five Women at Colcheſter, five in the Forenoon, and five in the Afternoon.

AS it is no new Thing in thoſe whom we call Prelates and Prieſts of the Church, to be Raiſers up of Perſecution againſt Chriſt and his poor Flock: So it is much to be lamented, that noble Perſons, and Men of Honour and Worſhip, ſhould be made ſuch Miniſters, to ſerve the Deſires of theſe Tyrants, as is now common, as well in the ſorrowful Reign of the late Queen Mary, as namely in this preſent Story is to be remarked.

And firſt thou remembreſt, gentle Reader, how mention was made a little before of twenty-two, which were ſent up Priſoners together from Colcheſter to London, by the Earl of Oxford, the Lord Darcy, Mr. Tyrrel of St. Oſithes, and other Commiſſioners and Juſtices, &c. which twenty-two, as aforeſaid, through a gentle Submiſſion put to them, were afterwards releaſed and ſet at Liberty.

In the Number of theſe aforeſaid twenty-two, was one William Munt of Muchbentley in Eſſex, Husbandman, with Alice his Wife, and Roſe Allin, Maid, Daughter to the ſaid Alice Munt; who coming home again to their Houſe at Muchbentley aforeſaid, refrained themſelves from the unſavoury Service of the Popiſh Church, and frequented the Company of good Men and Women, who gave themſelves diligently to Reading and calling upon the Name of God through Chriſt: Whereby they ſo fretted the wicked Prieſt of the Town, called Sir Thomas Tye, and others like unto him, that laying their Heads together, they made a Supplication to the Lord Darcy, in the Name of the whole Pariſh: The Subſtance whereof is as followeth:

A Supplication to the Lord Darcy, and by him delivered to Sir John Kingſton Prieſt and Commiſſary.

PLeaſeth your honourable Lordſhip to be advertiſed, that we confeſs whilſt your good Lordſhip lay here in the Country, the People were ſtayed in good Order, to our great Comfort: But ſince your Lordſhip's Departure, they have made Digreſſion from good Order in ſome Places, and namely in the Pariſh of Muchbentley, by reaſon of three ſeditious Perſons, William Munt and his Wife, and Roſe her Daughter, who by their colourable Submiſſion (as it doth appear) were diſmiſs'd and ſent down from the Biſhop of London; and ſince their coming home they have not only in their own Perſons ſhewed manifeſt Signs and Tokens of Diſobedience, in not coming to the Church, nor yet obſerving other good Orders, but alſo moſt maliciouſly and ſeditiouſly have ſeduced many from coming to the Church, and from obeying all other good Orders; mocking alſo thoſe that frequent the Church, and calling them Church-owls, and blaſphemouſly calling the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar a blind God, with divers ſuch like Blaſphemies. In Conſideration whereof, may it pleaſe your Honour, (for the Love of God, and for the tender Zeal your good Lordſhip beareth to Juſtice, and the common Peace and Quietneſs of the King and Queen's Majeſty's loving Subjects) to award out your Warrant for the ſaid William Munt, his Wife, and Roſe her Daughter, that they being attached and brought before your good Lordſhip, we truſt the reſt will fear to offend (their Ringleaders of Sedition being apprehended) to the Quietneſs of their obedient Subjects.

Your daily Orators, the Pariſhioners of Muchbently, Thomas Tye Prieſt, John Carter, Thomas Candler, John Barker, Richard Mere, J. Painter, Will. Harris, John Richard, with others.

This being done, the ſaid Sir Thomas Tye bethought with himſelf where the perſecuted did reſort: For in the Beginning of Queen Mary's Reign, for a Twelve-month and more he came not to the Church, but frequented the Company of godly Men and Women, who abſtained from the ſame, and as they thought, he laboured to keep a good Conſcience, but the Sequel ſhewed him to be a falſe Brother.

Now (as I ſaid) he partly knowing the Places of Refuge for honeſt Men, did further enquire of other Men about the ſame: And being thereof ſufficiently (as he thought) inſtructed to his Purpoſe, immediately about the Time the Supplication above ſpecified was exhibited to the ſaid Lord Darcy, wrote a Letter ſecretly to Biſhop Bonner, wherein he maketh his Account how he had beſtowed his Time, and complained of divers honeſt Men, among which was the ſaid William Munt and his Company: The Tenor of which Letter here followeth.

A Letter from Sir Thomas Tye, Prieſt, to Biſhop Bonner.

RIght Honourable Lord, after my bounden Duty done in moſt humble wiſe, theſe ſhall be to ſignify nify unto your Lordſhip the State of our Parts concerning Religion. And firſt ſince the coming down of the twenty-two rank Hereticks diſmiſſed from you, the deteſtable ſort of Schiſmaticks were never ſo bold ſince the King and Queen's Majeſty's Reign, as they are now at this preſent. In Muchbentley where your Lordſhip is Patron of the Church, ſince William Munt, and Alice his Wife, with Roſe Allin her Daughter came home, they do not only abſent themſelves from the Church and Service of God, but do daily allure many others away from the ſame, which before did outwardly ſhew Signs and Tokens of Obedience.

They aſſemble together upon the Sabbath-day in the Time of divine Service, ſometimes in one Houſe, ſometimes in another, and there keep their private Conventicles and Schools of Hereſy. The Jurates ſay, the Lord's Commiſſion is out, and they are diſcharged of their Oath. The Queſt-men in your Archdeacon's Viſitation alledged, that foraſmuch as they were once preſented and now ſent home, they have no more to do with them nor any other. Your Officers ſay, namely Mr. Boſwel, that the Council ſent them not home without a great Conſideration. I pray God ſome of your Officers prove not Favourers of Hereticks. The Rebels are ſtout in the Town of Colcheſter.

The Miniſters of the Church are hem'd at in the open Streets, and called Knaves. The bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar is blaſphemed and railed upon in every Houſe and Tavern. Prayer and faſting is not regarded. Seditious Talks and News are rife both in Town and Country, in as ample and large Manner, as though no honourable Lords and Commiſſioners had been ſent for Reformation thereof. The Occaſion riſeth partly by reaſon of John Love of Colcheſter Heath (a perverſe Place) which John Love was twice indicted of Hereſy, and thereupon fled with his Wife and Houſhold, and his Goods ſeized within the Town of Colcheſter, to the King and Queen's Majeſty's Uſe. Nevertheleſs the ſaid John is come home again, and nothing ſaid or done to him. Whereupon the Hereticks are wonderfully encouraged, to the great Diſcomfort of good and Catholick People, which daily pray to God for the Profit, Unity, and Reſtoration of his Church again: Which Thing ſhall come the ſooner to paſs, through the Travel and Pains of ſuch honourable Lords and reverend Fathers as your Lordſhip is, unto whom I wiſh long Life and Continuance, with Increaſe of much Honour. From Colcheſter, December 18.

Your humble Bedeſman, Tho. Tye, Prieſt.

When this wicked Prieſt had thus wrought his Malice againſt the People of God, within a while after the Storm began to ariſe againſt thoſe poor perſecuted William Munt and his Company, whereby they were enforced to hide themſelves from the Heat thereof. And continuing ſo a little Space, at laſt, the ſeventh Day of March 1557, being the firſt Sunday in Lent, and by two of the Clock in the Morning one Mr. Edmund Tyrrel (who came of the Houſe of thoſe Tyrrels which murdered King Edward V, and his Brother) took with him the Bailiff of the Hundred called William Samuel, dwelling in Colcheſter, and the two Conſtables of Muchbentley aforeſaid, named John Baker and William Harris, with many others; and beſetting the Houſe of the ſaid William Munt round about, called to them at length to open the Door: which being done, Mr. Tyrrel with ſome of his Company went into the Chamber where the ſaid Father Munt and his Wife lay, willing them to riſe: For, ſaid he, you muſt go with us to Colcheſter-caſtle. Mother Munt hearing that, being very ſick, Anno 1557. deſired that her Daughter might fetch her ſome Drink; for ſhe was (ſhe ſaid) very ill at eaſe.

Then he gave her Leave and bade her go. So her Daughter the aforenamed Roſe Allin, Maid, took a ſtone Pot in one Hand, and a Candle in the other, and went to draw Drink for her Mother: And as ſhe came back again thorough the Houſe, Tyrrel met her, and willed her to give her Father and Mother good Counſel, and adviſe them to be better Catholick People.

Diſcourſe between E. Tyrrel and Roſe Allin.

Roſe. Sir, they have a better Inſtructer than me. For the Holy Ghoſt doth teach them, I hope, which I truſt will not ſuffer them to err.

Tyrr. Why, ſaid Mr. Tyrrel, art thou ſtill in that Mind, thou naughty Houſewife? marry it is Time to look upon ſuch Hereticks indeed.

Roſe. Sir, with which you call Hereſy, do I worſhip my Lord God, I tell you truth.

Tyrr. Then I perceive you will burn, Goſſip, with the reſt, for Companies Sake.

Roſe. No, Sir, not for Companies ſake, but for Chriſt's Sake, if ſo I be compelled, and I hope in his Mercy, if he call me to it, he will enable me to bear it.

Tyrr. So he turning to his Company, ſaid, Sirs, this Goſſip will burn: What do you think of her? why truly, Sir, ſaith one, prove her, and you ſhall ſee what ſhe will do by and by.

Tyrrel burneth Roſe Allin's Hand.

Then that cruel Tyrrel, taking the Candle from her, held her Wriſt, and the burning Candle under her Hand, burning Croſs-ways over the Back thereof, ſo long, till the very Sinews crack'd aſunder. Witneſs hereof, William Chandler, then dwelling at Muchbentley, who was there preſent and ſaw it. Alſo Mrs. Bright of Rumford, with Ann Starkey her Maid, to whom Roſe Allin alſo declared the ſame; and the ſaid Mrs. Bright alſo miniſtred Salve for the curing thereof, as ſhe lay in her Houſe at Rumford, going up towards London with other Priſoners.

In which Time of his Tyranny, he ſaid often to her, Why Whore, wilt thou not cry? Thou young Whore, wilt thou not cry? To which ſhe always anſwered, that ſhe thanked God ſhe had no Cauſe, but rather to rejoyce. But ſhe ſaid, he had more Cauſe to weep than ſhe, if he conſidered the Matter well. In the End, when the Sinews (as I ſaid) brake, that all the Houſe heard them, he then thruſt her violently from him, ſaying, A ſtrong Whore, thou ſhameleſs Beaſt, thou beaſtly Whore, &c. with ſuch like vile Words. But ſhe quietly ſuffering his Rage for the Time, at laſt ſaid, Sir, have ye done what ye will do? He ſaid, yea, and if thou think not well of it, then mend it.

The Patience of the Faithful.

Roſe. Mend it? nay, the Lord mend you, and give you Repentance, if it be his Will. And now, if you think it good, begin at the Feet, and burn the Head alſo: For he that ſet you on work, ſhall pay you your Wages one Day, I warrant you: And ſo went and carried her Mother Drink as ſhe was commanded. Likewiſe, after ſearching of the Houſe for more Company, at laſt they found one John Thurſton and Margaret his Wife, whom they alſo carried with the reſt to Colcheſter Caſtle immediately.

The Burning of Woodman, Stevens, Mainard, Hosman, Wood M. & L: Morris. Burges Ashdon & Groves at Lewes

The Burning of Rose Allins Hand by Edmund Tyrill

Anno 1557. And this ſaid Roſe Allin, being Priſoner, told a Friend of hers this cruel Act of the ſaid Tyrrel; and ſhewing him the Manner thereof, ſhe ſaid, while my own Hand was a burning, I having a Pot in my other Hand, might have ſtruck him on the Face with it, if I had a Mind, for no Man held my Hand to hinder me therefrom. But I thank God, ſaid ſhe, with all my Heart, I did it not.

Alſo being asked of another; how ſhe could abide the painful burning of her Hand, ſhe ſaid, at firſt it was ſome Grief to her; but afterwards, the longer ſhe burned, the leſs ſhe felt, or well near none at all.

And becauſe Mr. Tyrrel ſhall not go alone in this kind of Cruelty, you ſhall hear another like Example of a blind Harper's Hand, burnt by Biſhop Bonner, as is teſtified by the Relation of Valentine Dingley, ſometime Gentleman to the ſaid Biſhop, who declared before credible Witneſs, as followeth: How the ſaid Biſhop Bonner, having this blind Harper before him, ſpake thus unto him, That ſuch blind Abjects, which follow a ſort of heretical Preachers, when they come to the feeling of the Fire, will be the firſt that will fly from it.

To whom the blind Man anſwered, that if every Joint of him were to be burnt, yet he truſted in the Lord he ſhould not fly. Then Bonner ſignifying privily to certain of his Men about him what they ſhould do, they brought to him a burning Coal; which Coal being put into the poor Man's Hand, they cloſed it faſt again, which burned his Hand moſt pitiouſly. Amongſt the Doers thereof was the ſaid Mr. Valentine Dingley, Witneſs and Reporter hereof, as is declared.

We read in Titus Livius, of the Story of King Porſenna, who after the burning of the right Hand of Marcus Scevola, who came purpoſely to kill him, being only contented therewith, ſent him home to Rome again. But thus to burn the Hands of poor Men and Women, who never meant any Harm to them, and not contented with that, but alſo to conſume their whole Bodies without any juſt Cauſe, we find no Example of ſuch barbarous Tyranny, neither in Titus Livius, nor in any other Story among the Heathen.

But to return to our Colcheſter Martyrs again. With the ſaid William Munt and his Family, was joyned alſo in the ſame Priſon at Colcheſter, another faithful Brother, named John Johnſon, alias Aliker, of Thorpe in the County of Eſſex Labourer, 34 Years of Age, having no Wife alive, but three young Children, who was alſo indicted with them of Hereſy, and ſo all theſe four lay together in Colcheſter Caſtle.

The other ſix Priſoners lay in Mote-hall in the ſaid Town of Colcheſter, whoſe Names were,

1. William Bongeor, of the Pariſh of St. Nicholas in Colcheſter, Glaſier, of the Age of 60 Years.

2. Thomas Benold of Colcheſter, Tallow-chandler.

3. W. Purcas of Bocking in Eſſex, Fuller, of the Age of 20 Years.

4. Agnes Silverſide, alias Smith, dwelling in Colcheſter, Widow, of the Age of 40 Years.

5. Helen Ewring, the Wife of John Ewring, Miller, dwelling in Colcheſter, of the Age of 45 Years or thereabouts, who was one of the twenty-two Priſoners mentioned before, ſent up in Bands from Colcheſter to London, and after being delivered with the reſt, repaired home to Colcheſter again to her Husband, where notwithſtanding ſhe enjoy'd her Liberty not very long: For ſhortly after her Return, one Robert Maynard then Bayliff of Colcheſter, met with her, who eſpying her, came to her, and kiſſed her, and bade her welcome home from London. Unto whom ſhe conſiderately anſwered again, and ſaid, That it was but a Judas Kiſs: For in the End, quoth ſhe, I know you will betray me, as indeed it came to paſs: For immediately after that Diſcourſe ſhe was apprehended by him, and was lodg'd with the reſt in the Town-priſon (as is aforeſaid) called the Mote-hall.

6. The ſixth of this Company was Elizabeth Folks, a young Maid, and Servant in Colcheſter, of the Age of twenty Years. Theſe ſix were impriſoned in the Town Priſon of Colcheſter, called Mote-Hall, as the other four beforementioned were in the Caſtle.

Divers Examinations theſe good Men had at ſundry Times before divers Juſtices, Prieſts, and Officers, as Mr. Roper, John Kingſton, Commiſſary, John Boſwell, Prieſt, and Bonner's Scribe, and ſeveral others, in the Preſence of the two Bailiffs of Colcheſter, Robert Brown and Robert Maynard, with divers other Juſtices both of the Town and Country, and a great many other Gentlemen: At which Time and Place, and before the ſaid Perſons, they had Sentence of Condemnation read againſt them, chiefly for not affirming the real Preſence of the Sacrament in their Altar. The Effect of their Words therein, was as follows:

Firſt, The Priſoners in Mote-Hall.

WILLIAM Bongeor, of the Pariſh of St. Nicholas in Colcheſter, Glazier, ſaid, that the Sacrament of the Altar was Bread, is Bread, and ſo remaineth Bread; and that the Conſecration made it not more holy, but rather the worſe. To this he did ſtand, as alſo againſt all the reſt of their Popiſh Doctrine: And ſo had Sentence read againſt him.

Thomas Benold, of Colcheſter, Tallow-chandler, affirmed to the like Effect as William Bongeor did: And ſo had Sentence alſo read againſt him.

W. Purcas of Bocking ſaid, that when he received the Sacrament, he received Bread in an holy Uſe, that preacheth the Remembrance of Chriſt dying for him. To this he ſtood, and againſt other their Popiſh Matters: And ſo alſo had Sentence read againſt him.

Agnes Silverſide, alias Smith, ſaid, that ſhe loved no Conſecration; for the Bread and Wine ſhe ſaid, was made rather worſe thereby than better. This good old Woman anſwered them with ſuch ſound Judgment and Boldneſs, to every Thing they asked her, that it rejoyced the Hearts of many, and eſpecially to ſee the Patience of ſuch a reverend old Age, againſt the Taunts and Checks of her Enemies. To this ſhe alſo ſtood, and had Sentence read againſt her in like Manner.

Helen Ewring anſwered to the like Effect, as the others did, utterly denying all the Laws ſet forth by the Pope, with her whole Heart. Againſt her alſo was Sentence read.

Elizabeth Folks, the young Maiden, being examined whether ſhe believed the Preſence of Chriſt's Body to be in the Sacrament ſubſtantially ſtantially and really, or no; anſwered, that ſhe believed that it was a ſubſtantial Lye, and a real Lye. At which Words, the Prieſts and others were very angry, and asked her again, whether after the Conſecration there remained not the Body of Chriſt in the Sacrament. To which ſhe anſwered, that before Conſecration and after, it is but Bread; and the Man that bleſſeth without God's Word, is curſed and abominable by the Word, &c. Then they examined her about Confeſſion to the Prieſt, of going to Church to hear Maſs, of the Authority of the Biſhop of Rome, &c. To all which ſhe anſwered, that, by the Grace of God, ſhe would neither uſe nor frequent any of them all, but utterly deteſt and abhor them from the Bottom of her Heart, and all ſuch Trumpery.

Then they read the Sentence of Condemnation againſt her; at which, Dr. Chadſey wept, that the Tears trickled down his Cheeks. So the Sentence being read, ſhe kneeled down on her Knees, lifting up her Hands and Eyes unto Heaven, with fervent Prayer and audible Voice praiſing God, that ever ſhe was born to ſee that moſt bleſſed Day, that the Lord would count her worthy to ſuffer for the Teſtimony of Chriſt: And Lord, ſaid ſhe, if it be thy Will, forgive them that have done this againſt me, for they know not what they do. Then riſing up, ſhe exhorted all thoſe on the Bench to Repentance, eſpecially thoſe who brought her to Priſon, as Robert Maynard the Bailiff, and ſuch like; which Maynard commonly, when he ſate in Judgment upon Life and Death, would ſit ſleeping on the Bench oftentimes, ſo careful was his Mind on his Office.

The Priſoners in Colcheſter Caſtle.

William Munt of Muchbentley in Eſſex, of the Age of 61 Years, ſaid, that the Sacrament of the Altar was an abominable Idol, and that if he ſhould obſerve any part of their Popiſh Proceedings, he ſhould diſpleaſe God, and bring his Curſe upon him, and therefore for fear of his Vengeance he durſt not do it. This good Father was examined of many Things, but God be thanked he ſtood to the Truth, and in the End thereof had Sentence of Condemnation read againſt him.

John Johnſon of Thorp in Eſſex, Widower, 34 Years of Age, was examined as the reſt, and made Anſwer in ſuch ſort, as the Papiſts counted him none of theirs, and therefore condemned him with their bloody Sentence, as they had done the reſt before. This J. Johnſon affirmed, that in the receiving of the Sacrament according to Chriſt's Inſtitution, he receiveth the Body of Chriſt ſpiritually, &c.

Alice Munt, the Wife of the ſaid William Munt, 41 Years of Age, being alſo examined as the reſt, ſaid and confirmed the ſame in Effect as her Husband did, and was therefore alſo condemned.

Roſe Allin, Maid, Daughter of the ſaid Alice Munt, of the Age of 20 Years, being examined of auricular Confeſſion, going to the Church to hear Maſs, of the Popiſh ſeven Sacraments, &c. anſwered ſtoutly, that they ſtank in the Face of God, and ſhe durſt not have to do with them for her Life, neither was ſhe (ſhe ſaid) any Member of theirs; for they were the Members of Antichriſt, and ſo ſhould have, if they repented not, the Reward of Antichriſt. Being asked further what ſhe could ſay of the See of the Biſhop of Rome, whether ſhe would obey his Authority or no: She anſwered boldly that ſhe was none of his. As for his See (ſaid ſhe) it is for Crows, Kites, Owls and Ravens to ſwim in, ſuch as you be: For by the Grace of God I ſhall not ſwim in that See while I live, neither will I have any Thing to do therewith. Then they read the Sentence of Condemnation againſt her, and ſent her to Priſon again unto the reſt, where ſhe ſung with great Joy, to the Wonder of many. Anno 1557.

Thus theſe poor condemned Lambs, being delivered into the Hands of the ſecular Power, were all ſent to the Priſon from whence they came, where they remained with much Joy and great Comfort, ever looking and expecting the happy Day of their Diſſolution. In which Time the cruel Papiſts left not their miſchievous Attempts againſt them, although they would ſeem now to have no more to do with them. For bloody Bonner, whoſe Throat never cried ho, ſhortly after got a Writ for the burning of the aforeſaid Perſons; and to ſhew the more Diligence in his Cauſe, he ſent a truſty Man of his, named Edward Coſin, down with it, and with him alſo his Letter, for the Furtherance of the Matter, the next Month after the Condemnation.

The Writ being thus received by the ſaid Bailiffs, and they having then no Leiſure thereabouts, appointed the Day of the Execution thereof, to be the ſecond Day of Auguſt next following. And becauſe the faithful Souls were in two ſeveral Priſons, as the Caſtle was for the Country, and Mote-hall for the Town: Therefore it was agreed among them, that they in Mote-hall ſhould be burnt in the Forenoon, and thoſe at the Caſtle, by the Sheriff of the Shire, in the Afternoon.

The ſecond Day of Auguſt 1557, betwixt ſix and ſeven of the Clock in the Morning, was brought from Mote-hall unto a Plat of Ground, hard by the Town-wall of Colcheſter on the out-ſide, William Bongeor, William Purcas, Thomas Benold, Agnes Silverſide alias Smith, Helen Ewring and Elizabeth Folks before-mentioned, who being there, and all Things prepared for their Martyrdom, they kneeled down, and made their humble Prayers to God, but not in ſuch Manner as they would, for the cruel Tyrants would not ſuffer them: eſpecially one Mr. Clere ſhewed himſelf very extream unto them. When they made their Prayers, they aroſe, and made themſelves ready for the Fire: And Elizabeth Folks, when ſhe had plucked off her Petticoat, would have given it to her Mother (who came and kiſs'd her at the Stake, and exhorted her to be ſtrong in the Lord) but the Wicked there attending, would not ſuffer her to give it. Therefore taking the ſaid Petticoat in her Hand, ſhe threw it away from her, ſaying, Farewel all the World, farewel Faith, farewel Hope; and ſo taking the Stake in her Hand, ſaid, Welcome Love, &c. Now ſhe being at the Stake, and one of the Officers nailing the Chain about her, in the ſtriking of the Staple, he miſs'd the Place, and gave her a great Stroke with the Hammer on the Shoulder-bone: At which, ſhe turning her Head, lifted up her Eyes to the Lord, and ſmilingly praying, gave her ſelf to exhorting the People again.

When they were all nailed to the Stakes, and the Fire about them, they clapped their Anno 1557. Hands for Joy in the Fire, that the Standers-by, (which were by Eſtimation thouſands) almoſt all cried, The Lord ſtrengthen them, the Lord comfort them, the Lord pour his Mercies upon them, with ſuch like Words, as was wonderful to hear.

Thus yielded they up their Souls and Bodies into the Lord's Hand, for the Teſtimony of his Truth. The Lord grant we may imitate the ſame in the like Quarrel, for his Mercies Sake, Amen.

In like Manner, the ſaid Day in the Afternoon, was brought forth into the Caſtle-yard, to a Place appointed for the ſame, William Munt, John Johnſon, Alice Munt and Roſe Allin aforeſaid: Who after they had made their Prayers, were joyfully tied to the Stakes, calling upon the Name of God, and earneſtly exhorting the People to flee from Idolatry, ſuffered Martyrdom with ſuch Triumph and Joy, that the People did no leſs ſhout thereat to ſee it, than at the others that were burnt the ſame Day in the Morning.

Thus theſe ten Perſons happily ended their Lives for the Teſtimony of the Goſpel. God grant we may well ſpend our Years and Days likewiſe to his Glory. Amen.

The Hiſtory of George Eagles, otherwiſe called Trudge-over.

AMong other Martyrs of ſingular Virtue and Conſtancy, one George Eagles deſerveth much to be commended, for that he having little or no Learning, moſt manfully ſerved and fought under the Banner of Chriſt's Church. For oftentimes the Will and Pleaſure of God is, to beautify and adorn his Kingdom with the weak and ſimple Inſtruments of this World; ſuch as Amos was in the Old Teſtament, who with many others of obſcure and unknown Names, were called from the Herds and Folds to the Honour of Prophets; as likewiſe we read of the Apoſtles, who were called from the Fiſherman's Craft, and put into Churches. Wherefore this George Eagles is not to be deſpiſed for his mean Occupation, whom Chriſt hath called thence to ſet forth his Goſpel. We ought rather to glorify God the more, who by his Grace, inſpired him with the Gift of Preaching, and Conſtancy of ſuffering: Who, after he had uſed the Occupation of a Taylor, for ſome Time, being eloquent and of good Utterance, gave and applied himſelf to the Service of Chriſt's Church.

Which Man, as before in thoſe moſt clear Days of King Edward VI. he had not unfruitfully ſhewed and preached the Power and Force of the Lord, ſo afterwards in the tempeſtuous Time and Fall of the Church he expreſſed and uttered his Mind with Courage. For he, wandring abroad into far Countries, where he could find any of his Brethren, did there moſt earneſtly encourage and comfort them, now tarrying in this Town, and ſometime abiding in that certain Months together, as Occaſion ſerved, lodging ſometimes in the Country, and ſometimes for Fear living in Fields and Woods, who, for his immoderate and unreaſonable going abroad, was called Trudge-over.

His Diet was ſo ſpare and ſlender, that he uſed, almoſt for the Space of three Years, to drink nothing but Water, whereunto he was compelled through Neceſſity in the Time of Perſecution: But when he perceived that by God's Providence his Body proved well enough with this Diet, he thought beſt to inure himſelf to it againſt all Neceſſities.

Now when he had profited Chriſt's Church in this Sort, by going about and preaching the Goſpel a Year or two, eſpecially in Colcheſter and the Places thereabout, that privy Enemy which envieth always the Salvation and bleſſed Eſtate of the Good, laid wait by all Means poſſible for him, ſo that there were divers Spies ſent out, who had in Commandment, whereſoever they found him, to bring him either alive or dead.

But when this their Attempt could not prevail, but all was in vain (the ſaid Eagles with his Brethren keeping in cloſe, and hiding themſelves in ſecret Places, as in Barns, Thickets, Holes, &c.) his Adverſaries went about another Way to compaſs this their Enterpriſe of taking him.

For in the Queen's Name a grievous Edict was proclaimed throughout four Shires, Eſſex, Suffolk, Kent and Norfolk, promiſing the Perſon that took him twenty Pounds for his Pains; doubtleſs a worthy Hire to entice any Jew to Treachery. For being inflamed with greedy Deſire of the Money, they deviſed and invented all Ways poſſible to be enriched with the Hurt and Deſtruction of this poor Man.

At length it came to paſs, that he being ſeen at Colcheſter upon Mary Magdalen's Day, at which Time they kept a Fair in the Town, would have been taken by his Adverſaries, if he had not ſpeedily conveyed himſelf away, a great Multitude purſuing after, and ſeeking diligently for him. Who firſt hid himſelf in a Grove, and afterwards in a Corn-field hard by, and ſo lay ſecretly couched from the Violence of his Enemies, inſomuch as they were all, except one, paſt hope of taking him, and therefore ready to depart their Way.

This one, having more Subtilty in his Head than the reſt, would not depart thence with his Fellows, but climbed up into a high Tree, and there to view and eſpy if he might ſee Eagles any where ſtir or move. The poor Man thinking all ſure enough, by reaſon that he heard no Noiſe abroad, roſe up on his Knees, and lifting up his Hand, prayed unto God. And whether it were for that his Head was above the Corn, or becauſe his Voice was heard, the Lurker perceiving his deſired Prey that he hunted after, forthwith came down, and ſuddenly laying Hands on him, brought him as a Priſoner to Colcheſter. Notwithſtanding the greedy and Judas Knave, which had ſo much promiſed him, was fain to be contented with a very ſmall Reward, and glad to take that too, leſt he ſhould have had nothing at all.

George Eagles being thus taken, was committed to Priſon at Colcheſter, and from thence within four Days after conveyed to Chelmsford, where he abode all that Night in devout Prayer. The next Day he was carried to London to the Biſhop or the Council, and there remained a certain Time, and then was brought down to Chelmsford to the Seſſions, and there was indicted and accuſed of Treaſon, becauſe he had aſſembled Companies together, contrary to the Laws and Statutes of the Realm Realm in that Caſe provided. For it was ordained a little before, to avoid Sedition, that if Men ſhould flock ſecretly together, above the Number of ſix, they ſhould be attached of Treaſon.

And albeit it was well known, that George Eagles did never any Thing ſeditiouſly againſt the Queen, yet to cloak an honeſt Matter withal, and to cauſe him to be the more hated of the People, they turned Religion into a civil Offence and Crime, and though he defended his Cauſe ſtoutly and boldly, making a full Declaration of his Religion, or Faith before the Judges; yet could he not bring it to paſs by any Means, but that he muſt needs be indicted (as is ſaid) of Treaſon; whoſe Indictment did run much after this Faſhion.

George Eagles Indictment.

George Eagles, thou art indicted by the Name of George Eagles, otherwiſe Trudge-over the Word, for that thou didſt ſuch a Day make thy Prayer that God ſhould turn Queen Mary's Heart, or elſe take her away.

He denied that he prayed that God ſhould take her away, but he confeſſed, he prayed that God would turn her Heart in his Prayer. Well, notwithſtanding he was condemned for a Traitor, although the Meaning thereof was for Religion.

This being done, he was carried to the Sign of the Crown in Chelmsford, and being there, one Richard Potto the elder, an Innholder, dwelling at the Sign of the Cock in the ſame Town, did much trouble him, in perſuading him to confeſs he had offended the Queen in his Prayer, which he was condemned for, and to ask her Forgiveneſs.

To whom he ſaid, he had not offended her Grace in that Behalf. So in proceſs of Time, he was laid upon a Sledge, with an Hurdle on it, and drawn to the Place of Execution, being faſt bound, having in his Hand a Pſalm-book, of which he read very devoutly all the Way with a loud Voice, till he came there: And being on the Ladder the aforeſaid Potto did much trouble him with the Matter aforeſaid, but the Sheriff commanded Potto to hold his Peace, and trouble him no more.

So he made his Confeſſion, and ſtood very conſtant ſtill; then he was turned off the Ladder. But after he had hanged a ſmall Space, having a great Check with the Halter, immediately one of the Bailiffs cut the Halter aſunder, and he fell to the Ground being ſtill alive, although much amazed with the Check he had off the Ladder.

Then one William Swallow of Chelmsford, a Bailiff, cut him open, and pluck'd his Heart out of his Body. The Body being divided into four Parts, and his Bowels burnt, was brought to the aforeſaid Swallow's Door, and there laid upon the Fiſh-ſtalls before his Door, till they had made ready a Horſe to carry his Quarters, one to Colcheſter, and the reſt to Harwich, Chelmsford and St. Rouſes. His Head was ſet up at Chelmsford on the Market-croſs on a long Pole, and there ſtood till the Wind blew it down, and lying certain Days in the Street tumbled about, one cauſed it to be buried in the Churchyard in the Night.

Anno 1557.

The Examination of Richard Craſhfield of Wymundham.

ABout this Time ſuffered at Norwich, a godly Man, named Richard Craſhfield, whoſe Examinations before the Chancellor, named Dunning, as he penned them with his own Hand, ſo have we faithfully recorded the ſame.

How ſay you Sirrah, ſaid the Chancellor, to the Ceremonies of the Church?

Then ſaid I, what Ceremonies?

He ſaid unto me, Do you not believe that all the Ceremonies of the Church were good and godly?

My Anſwer was, I do believe ſo many as are grounded in the Teſtimony of Jeſus Chriſt.

Tuſh, ſaid he, do you believe in the Sacrament of the Altar?

I ſaid, I knew not what it was.

Then, ſaid he, Do you not believe that Chriſt took Bread, gave Thanks, brake it, and ſaid, Take, eat, this is my Body?

Yes verily, ſaid I, and even as Chriſt did ſpeak, ſo did he perform the Work.

Tuſh, ſaid he, Do you not believe this, that after the Words ſpoken by the Prieſt, there is the Subſtance of Chriſt's Body, Fleſh, and Blood? How ſay you, do you not believe this? ſpeak Man.

I do believe that Chriſt's Body was broken for me upon the Croſs, and his Blood ſhed for my Redemption, whereof the Bread and Wine is a perpetual Memory, the Pledge of his Mercy, the Ring and Seal of his Promiſe, and a perpetual Memory for the Faithful unto the End of the World. So then I was commanded into Priſon until the next Day.

Another Examination of Richard Craſhfield.

THE Day following I was brought forth. Then the Chancellor ſaid unto me, Richard, how ſay you? Are you otherwiſe minded than you were yeſterday? He rehearſing all the Words that we had before, ſaid, Are not theſe your Words? Whereunto I anſwered, Yes.

Then ſaid he, How ſay you, can you not find in your Heart, when you come to the Church, to kneel down before the Rood, and make your Prayer?

I anſwered and ſaid, No; rehearſing the Commandment of God forbidding the ſame.

He ſaid, Have you not read or heard, that God commanded an Image to be made?

I anſwered what Image?

He ſaid, the brazen Serpent.

I ſaid, yes, I have heard it read, how that God did command it to be made, and likewiſe to be broken down.

Then Doctor Bridges ſaid, wherefore did God command the Seraphins and Cherubims to be made?

I ſaid, I could not tell; I would fain learn.

Then ſaid the Chancellor, but how ſay you to this; can you find in your Heart to fall down before the Picture of Chriſt, which is the Rood?

I ſaid, no, I fear the Curſe of God: for it is written, that God curſed his Hands that make them, yea and the Hands that make the Tools wherewith they are carved.

Anno 1557.

Then Doctor Bridges raged and ſaid, liſt now what a Piece of Scripture he hath here gotten to ſerve his Purpoſe, for he will not allow but where he liſteth.

Then ſaid the Chancellor, how ſay you to Confeſſion to the Prieſt? When were you confeſſed?

I ſaid, I confeſs myſelf daily unto the eternal God, whom I moſt grievouſly offend.

Then the Chancellor ſaid, Do you not then take Confeſſion to the Prieſt to be good?

I anſwered, no; but rather wicked.

Then the Chancellor, ſaid, how ſay you by yonder Gear, yonder Singing and yonder Playing on the Organs? is it not good and godly?

I ſaid, I could perceive no Godlineſs in it.

Then he ſaid, why is it not written in the Pſalms, that we ſhould praiſe God with Hymns and ſpiritual Songs?

I ſaid, yes, ſpiritual Songs muſt be had: But yonder is of the Fleſh, and of the Spirit of Error. For to you it is pleaſant and glorious, but to the Lord it is bitter and odious.

Then ſaid the Chancellor, why, is it not written my Houſe is an Houſe of Prayer?

Iſaiah 56. Luke 10.

I ſaid, yes. It is written alſo, that you have made my Houſe of Prayer a Den of Thieves.

With that the Chancellor looked and ſaid, have we?

I anſwered and ſaid, Chriſt ſaid ſo. Then was I commanded to ward.

Another Examination of Richard Craſhfield.

The Thurſday next following, was Doctor Bridges ſent to me to examine me of my Faith. And he ſaid, Country-man, my Lord Biſhop (for Love he would have you ſaved) hath ſent me unto you, becauſe To-morrow is your Day appointed: Therefore my Lord hath thought it meet, that you ſhould declare unto me your Faith. For To-morrow my Lord will not have much ado with you.

I anſwered and ſaid, hath my Lord ſent you?

It is not you, to whom I am diſpoſed to ſhew my Mind.

Then he ſaid to me, I pray you ſhew me your Mind concerning the Sacrament of the Altar.

I anſwered, Are you ignorant what I have ſaid?

He ſaid, no; for it was well written, except you believe, ſaith he, as the Church hath taught, you are damned both Body and Soul.

I anſwered and ſaid, judge not, leſt you be judged; condemn not, leſt you be condemned.

And he ſaid, lo, we ſhall have a Traytor as well as an Heretick; for he will diſallow the King's Judgment.

I ſaid, no; I do not diſallow the King's Judgment, but yours I do diſallow. For I pray you tell me, how came you by this Judgment?

He anſwered and ſaid, by the Church; for the Church hath Power to ſave and condemn: For if you be condemned by the Church, be ye ſure that you be damned both Body and Soul.

Then I anſwered, if you have this Power, I am ſore deceived. For I believe that Chriſt ſhall be our Judge. But now I perceive that you will do much for him, that you will not put him to the Pain.

Then he ſaid, ſtand nearer Country-Man: Why ſtand ye ſo far off?

I ſaid, I am near enough, and a little too near.

Then he ſaid, did not Chriſt ſay, is not my Fleſh Meat, and my Blood Drink indeed?

I ſaid, to whom ſpake Chriſt thoſe Words?

He ſaid, to his Diſciples.

I (intending to rehearſe the Text) ſaid, whereat did Chriſt's Diſciples murmur inwardly?

He ſaid, no; they did not murmur, but they were the Infidels (ſaith he) for the Diſciples were ſatisfied with theſe Words.

I ſaid, did not Chriſt ſay thus, as he taught at Capernaum, whereas his Diſciples murmured, ſaying, this is an hard Saying, who can abide the Hearing of it? Jeſus perceiving their Thoughts, ſaid, doth this offend you?

Then he raged and ſaid, oh, thou wreſteſt the Text for thine own Purpoſe: For the Diſciples did never murmur, but the Unbelievers as thou art.

I ſaid, Yes; but I perceive you know not the Text.

Then he ſaid with much Rage, I will lay my Head thereon it is not ſo.

Then I ſaid, I have done with you.

To which he ſaid, What ſhall I tell my Lord of you?

If you have nothing to tell him, your Errand ſhall be ſooner done, ſaid I. And ſo he departed.

Another Examination of R. Craſhfield.

Then on Friday I was brought forth to receive Judgment, when the Chancellor ſaid unto me, Are you a new Man, or are you not?

I anſwered, I truſt I am a new Man born of God.

God give Grace you be ſo, ſaid he. So he rehearſed all my Examination and ſaid, How ſay you, are not theſe your Words?

I ſaid, Yes; I will not deny them.

Then he ſaid to Dr. Pere, ſtanding by, I pray you talk with him. Then he alledging to me many fair flattering Words, ſaid, Take, eat, this is my Body. How ſay you to this? Do you not believe that it is Chriſt's Body? Speak.

I ſaid, Have you not my Mind, why do you trouble me?

He ſaid, What did Chriſt give you? was it Bread, or was it not?

I ſaid, Chriſt took Bread, and gave Thanks, and gave it, and they took Bread, and did eat. And St. Paul maketh it more manifeſt, where he ſaith, So oft as ye ſhall eat of this Bread, and drink of this Cup, ye ſhall ſhew forth the Lord's Death until he come. St. Paul ſaith not here as you ſay; for he ſaith, So oft as ye ſhall eat of this Bread: He doth not ſay Body. 1 Cor. 10.

So they intending that I ſhould go no further in the Text, ſaid, Tuſh, you go about the Buſh. Anſwer me to the firſt Queſtion: Let us make an End of that.

What ſay you to the Bread that Chriſt gave? Let me have your Mind in it.

I anſwered, I have ſaid my Mind in it.

Then the Chancellor ſaid, No; we will have your Mind in that.

I anſwered, I have ſaid my Mind in it.

Then ſaid the Chancellor, No; we will have your Mind more plainly: For we intend not to have many Words with you.

I ſaid, My Faith is fully grounded and eſtabliſhed, that Chriſt Jeſus, the Eaſter Lamb, hath offered his bleſſed Body a Sacrifice to God the Father, the Price of my Redemption. For by that only Sacrifice are all the Faithful ſanctified, and he is our only Advocate and Mediator, and he hath made perfect our Redemption. This hath he done alone, without any of your daily Oblations.

Then Dr. Bridges ſtarted up and ſaid, Truth, your Words are true indeed: You take well the literal Senſe: But this you muſt underſtand, that like as you ſaid that Chriſt offered his Body upon the Croſs, which was a bloody Sacrifice and a viſible Sacrifice: So likewiſe we daily offer the ſelf-ſame Body that was offered upon the Croſs, but not bloody and viſible, but inviſible, unto God the Father.

Do you offer Chriſt's Body, I ſaid? Why then Chriſt's Sacrifice was not perfect. But Chriſt is true, when all Men ſhall be Liars.

Then he ſaid, Thou ſhalt not fear him that hath Power to kill the Body: But thou ſhalt fear him that hath Power to kill both Body and Soul.

I anſwered and ſaid, It is not ſo. But the Text is thus, Thou ſhalt not fear them that have Power to kill the Body, and then have done what they can. But thou ſhalt fear him that hath Power to kill both Body and Soul, and caſt them both into Hell-fire, and not them.

He anſwered and ſaid, Yes: For it is the Church.

I anſwered, Why, Chriſt ſaith, I give my Life for the Redemption of the World. No Man taketh my Life from me (ſaith he) but I give it of my own Power, and ſo I have Power to take it again. Therefore Chriſt the Son of God did offer his Body once for all. And if you will preſume to offer his Body daily, then your Power is above Chriſt's Power. With that he was angry, and ſaid, What, ſhall we have Doctrine? ye are not hereto appointed.

Then the Chancellor ſtood up and ſaid, Will ye turn from this wicked Error, and be an Example of Goodneſs, as you have been an Example of Evil (for by your wicked reading you have perſuaded ſimple Women to be in this Error) and ye ſhall have Mercy.

And I ſaid, it is of God that I do crave Mercy, whom I have offended, and not you.

Then the Chancellor ſaid, when were you at your Pariſh-church? you have ſtood excommunicate theſe two Years and more: Wherefore you are condemned. And ſo I was condemned.

The Martyrdom of R. Craſhfield.

Thus haſt thou (gentle Reader) the Examination of this pious young Man, ſet forth and written with his own Hand, who, ſoon after his Condemnation, was brought to the Stake by the Sheriffs and Officers, where with much Patience and Conſtancy he entred his Martyrdom. At whoſe burning, one Thomas Carman was apprehended, whoſe Story hereafter followeth in its Order and Place.

Mr. Frier and George Eagles Siſter burned at Colcheſter.

About the ſame Time one named Fryer, with a Woman accompanying him, who was the Siſter of George Eagles, ſuffered the like Martyrdom by the unrighteous Papiſts, whoſe Tyranny the Lord of his Mercy abate and cut ſhort, turning that Generation, if it be his Will, to a better Mind.

Anno 1557.

The Apprehenſion and Death of Mrs. Joyce Lewes, the Wife of Thomas Lewes, of Manceter.

MIſtreſs Joyce Lewes, a Gentlewoman born, was firſt married to one Appleby, and afterwards to Thomas Lewes of Manceter. In the Beginning of Queen Mary's Time ſhe went to Church and heard Maſs as others did, but when ſhe heard of the burning of that moſt godly and learned Martyr Laurence Saunders, who ſuffered in Coventry, ſhe began to take more Heed to the Matter, and enquired earneſtly of ſuch as ſhe knew feared God, the Cauſe of his Death: And when ſhe perceived it was becauſe he refuſed to receive the Maſs, ſhe began to be troubled in Conſcience, and waxed very unquiet. And becauſe her Houſe was even hard by Mr. John Glover's Houſe, of whom Mention was made before, a Man of bleſſed Memory, and a ſingular Example of his unfeigned Godlineſs and manifold Troubles which he ſuffered for the Goſpel, ſhe did oftentimes reſort to him, and deſired him to tell her the Faults that were in the Maſs, and other Things that at that Time were urged as neceſſary to Salvation.

Now he perceiving both her unquiet Mind, and alſo the Deſire ſhe had to know the Truth, did moſt diligently inſtruct her in the Way of the Lord, proving unto her out of God's holy Word, that the Maſs, with all other popiſh Inventions, were odious in God's Sight; and beſides this, reproved her, for that ſhe delighted in the Vanities of this World ſo much. By which godly Counſel, ſhe began to grow weary of the World, and thoroughly ſorrowful for her Sins, being inflamed with the Love of God, and deſirous to ſerve him according to his Word, purpoſing alſo to flee from thoſe Things which diſpleaſed him. And becauſe ſhe had learned the Maſs to be evil and abominable, ſhe began to hate it. And when at a Time ſhe was compelled by the Furiouſneſs of her Husband to come to the Church, at the ſame Time when the holy Water was caſt, ſhe turned her Back towards it. Whereupon ſhe was accuſed before the Biſhop for deſpiſing of their Sacramentals.

Immediately, a Citation was ſent for her to her Husband's Houſe, to appear before the Biſhop. The Sumner that brought the Citation delivered it to her Husband, who looking upon it, and perceiving that it was moved with Anger, willed the Sumner to take the Citation with him again, or elſe he would make him to eat it. The Sumner refuſed to take it again, for he thought no Man durſt have been ſo bold to trouble him. But in the End Lewes compelled the ſaid Sumner to eat the Citation indeed, by ſetting a Dagger to his Heart; and when he had eaten it, he cauſed him to drink it, and ſo ſent him away. But immediately after, the ſaid Lewes with his Wife were commanded to appear before the Biſhop, where the ſaid Lewes by and by ſubmitted himſelf, and deſiring the Biſhop to be good to him, excuſing himſelf after the beſt Faſhion he could. Whereupon the Biſhop was content to receive his Submiſſion, with Condition that his Wife ſhould ſubmit herſelf alſo. But ſhe ſtoutly told the Biſhop, that by Anno 1557. by refuſing of the holy Water ſhe had neither offended God, nor any part of his Laws. At which Words the Biſhop being grievouſly offended, yet becauſe ſhe was a Gentlewoman, he would not take her at the worſt (as he ſaid) he gave her one Month's Reſpite, binding her Husband in an hundred Pound to bring her again unto him at the Month's end, and ſo they were both let go.

When they came to their own Houſe, the ſaid Mrs. Joyce Lewes gave herſelf to moſt diligent Prayer, and invocating of the Name of God, reſorting continually to the abovenamed Man of God, Maſter John Glover, who did moſt diligently inſtruct her with God's Word, willing her in any Caſe not to meddle with that Matter in reſpect of Vain-glory, or to get herſelf a Name, ſhewing her the great Dangers ſhe was like to caſt herſelf in, if ſhe ſhould meddle in God's Matter otherwiſe than Chriſt doth teach.

When the Month was now almoſt expired, and the Time at hand that ſhe ſhould be brought before the ſaid Biſhop, her Husband being adviſed by the ſaid Mr. John Glover and others, not to carry her to the Biſhop, but to ſeek ſome Ways to ſave her, or if the worſt ſhould come, to be content to forfeit ſo much Money, rather than to caſt his own Wife into the Fire: He anſwered, he would not looſe or forfeit any Thing for her Sake; and ſo, like a Murderer of his own Wife, he carried her to the bloody Biſhop where ſhe was examined, and found more ſtout, than ſhe was before Death was threatned. And to begin withal, ſhe was ſent to ſuch a ſtinking Priſon, that a certain Maid, who was appointed to keep her Company, did ſwoon in the ſame Priſon.

Being thus kept in Priſon, and oftentimes examined, at length ſhe was brought in Judgment, and pronounced an Heretick worthy to be burned. When the Biſhop reaſoned with her, why ſhe would not come to the Maſs, and receive the Sacraments and Sacramentals of the Holy Ghoſt: ſhe anſwered, Becauſe I find not theſe Things in God's Word which you ſo urge and magnify, as Things moſt needful for Men's Salvation. If theſe Things were in the Word of God commanded, I would with all my Heart, receive, eſteem, and believe them. The Biſhop anſwered, If thou wilt believe no more than is in the Scripture, concerning Matters of Religion, thou art in a damnable Caſe. At which Words ſhe was wonderfully amazed, and being moved by the Spirit of God, told the Biſhop, that his Words were ungodly and wicked.

After her Condemnation, ſhe continued a whole Twelvemonth in Priſon, becauſe ſhe was committed to the Sheriff, that was of late choſen, who could not be compelled to put her to Death in his Time, as he affirmed; for which Things, after her Death, he was ſore troubled and in Danger of his Life. All that Time ſhe was in Priſon, her Behaviour was ſuch both in Words and Deeds, that all they, that had any Spark of Godlineſs and Honeſty, did greatly lament her Caſe, that ſhe ſhould be put to Death.

Now when the Time drew near which God had appointed for her Deliverance, the Writ De comburendo (as they term it) being brought down from London, ſhe deſired ſome of her Friends to come to her, with whom when they came, ſhe conſulted how ſhe might behave herſelf, that her Death might be more glorious to the Name of God, comfortable to his People, and alſo moſt diſcomfortable to the Enemies of God. As for Death (ſaid ſhe) I do not greatly paſs: When I behold the amiable Countenance of Chriſt my dear Saviour, the ugly Face of Death doth not greatly trouble me. In which Time alſo ſhe reaſoned moſt comfortably out of God's Word, of God's Election and Reprobation.

In the Evening before her Suffering, two of the Prieſts of the Cloſe of Litchfield, came to the Under-ſheriff's Houſe where ſhe lay, and ſent Word to her by the Sheriff, that they were come to her Confeſſion; for they would be ſorry ſhe ſhould die without. She ſent them Word again, ſhe had made her Confeſſion to Chriſt her Saviour, at whoſe Hands ſhe was ſure to have Forgiveneſs of her Sins. As concerning the Cauſe for which ſhe ſhould die, ſhe had no Cauſe to confeſs that, but rather to give moſt humble Praiſe to God, that he did make her worthy to ſuffer Death for his Word: And as concerning that Abſolution that they were able to give unto her, being authorized by the Pope, ſhe did defy the ſame, even from the Bottom of her Heart.

Which when the Prieſts heard, they ſaid to the Sheriff, Well, To-morrow her Stoutneſs will be proved and tried: For although perhaps ſhe hath now ſome Friends that whiſper her in her Ears, To-morrow we will ſee who dare be ſo hardy as to come near her: And ſo they went their Ways with Anger, that their Confeſſion and Abſolution was nought ſet by.

All that Night ſhe was wonderfully cheerful and merry, with a certain Gravity, inſomuch that the Majeſty of the Spirit of God did manifeſtly appear in her, who did expel the Fear of Death out of her Heart, ſpending the Time in Prayer, reading and talking with them that were purpoſely come unto her, to comfort her with the Word of God.

About three of the Clock in the Morning, Satan (who never ſleepeth, eſpecially when Death is at hand) began to ſtir himſelf buſily, ſhooting at her that fiery Dart, which he is wont to do againſt all that are at Defiance with him, by queſtioning her, how ſhe could tell that ſhe was choſen to eternal Life, and that Chriſt died for her. I grant that he died, but that he died for thee, how canſt thou tell: Whilſt ſhe was troubled with this Suggeſtion, they that were about her counſelled her to follow the Example of Paul, Gal. 2. where he ſaith, Which hath loved me, and given himſelf for me. Alſo, that her Vocation and calling to the Knowledge of God's Word, was a manifeſt Token of God's Love towards her, eſpecially that ſame holy Spirit of God working in her Heart, that Love and Deſire towards God to pleaſe him, and to be juſtified by him through Chriſt, &c. By theſe and like Perſuaſions, and eſpecially by the comfortable Promiſes of Chriſt, brought out of the Scripture, Satan was put to flight, and ſhe comforted in Chriſt.

About eight of the Clock, Mr. Sheriff came into her Chamber, ſaying theſe Words, Mrs. Lewes, I am come to bring you Tidings of the Queen's Pleaſure, which is, that you ſhall live but one Hour longer in this World: Therefore it behoveth you to prepare yourſelf for it. At which Words, being ſo ſuddenly uttered, by ſuch an Officer as he was, made her ſomewhat caſt down. Wherefore one of her Friends and Acquaintance ſtanding by, ſaid theſe Words: Mrs. Lewes, you have great Cauſe to praiſe God, who has vouchſafed ſo ſoon to take you out of this World, and made you worthy to be a Witneſs of his Truth, and to bear Record unto Chriſt that he is the only Saviour.

After which Words, ſhe ſaid, Mr. Sheriff, your Meſſage is welcome to me, and I thank my God that he has made me worthy to offer my Life for his Service. At which Words the Sheriff departed; but in the Space of an Hour he came again, with Swords and Clubs; and when he came up in her Chamber, one of her Friends deſired him to give him Leave to go with her to the Stake, and to comfort her, which the Sheriff granted at that Time; but afterwards, when ſhe was dead, he was ſore troubled for the ſame.

Now when ſhe was brought thro' the Town by a Number of Bill-men, a great Multitude of People being preſent, ſhe was led by two of her Friends, (namely, Mr. Michael Reniger, and Mr. Auguſtine Bernher) and ſo brought to the Place of Execution; and becauſe the Place was far off, and the Throng of the People great, and ſhe not acquainted with the freſh Air, (being ſo long in Priſon) one of her Friends ſent a Meſſenger to the Sheriff's Houſe for ſome Drink: And after ſhe had prayed three ſeveral Times, in which Prayers ſhe deſired God moſt inſtantly to aboliſh the idolatrous Maſs, and to deliver this Realm from Popery (at the End of which Prayers moſt part of the People cry'd Amen; yea, even the Sheriff that ſtood hard by her, ready to caſt her into the Fire for not allowing the Maſs, at this her Prayer ſaid with the reſt of the People, Amen;) when ſhe had thus prayed, ſhe took the Cup into her Hands, ſaying, I drink to all them that unfeignedly love the Goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt, and wiſh for the Aboliſhment of Popery. When ſhe had drank, they that were her Friends drank alſo. After that a great Number, eſpecially the Women of that Town, drank with her; who afterwards were put to open Pennance in the Church by the cruel Papiſts, for drinking with her.

When ſhe was chained to the Stake, ſhe ſhewed ſuch a Chearfulneſs, that it paſſed Man's Reaſon, being ſo well coloured in her Face, and being ſo patient, that moſt part of them that had honeſt Hearts were moved, and even with Tears bewailed the Tyranny of the Papiſts. When the Fire was ſet to her, ſhe made no other Reſiſtance than by lifting up her Hands towards Heaven, being dead very ſoon: For the Under-Sheriff, at the Requeſt of her Friends, had provided ſuch Stuff, that ſhe was ſuddenly diſpatched out of this miſerable World.

The Martyrdom of Ralph Allerton, James Auſtoo, Margery Auſtoo, and Richard Roth, at Iſlington.

ABOUT the ſeventeenth Day of September, were burned at Iſlington, near London, theſe four Profeſſors of Chriſt, Ralph Allerton, James Auſtoo, Margery Auſtoo his Wife, and Richard Roth. Among which, it firſt appeareth, that this Ralph Allerton was, more than a Year before his Condemnation, apprehended and brought before the Lord Darcy of Chicheſter, and was there accuſed, as well for that he would not conſent to come unto the Idolatry and Superſtition which then was uſed, as alſo that he had by preaching enticed others to do the like. Anno 1557.

Being examined thereupon, he confeſſed that he coming into his Pariſh of Bentley, and ſeeing the People ſitting there, either gazing about, or elſe talking together, he exhorted them that they would fall unto Prayer, and Meditation of God's moſt holy Word, and not ſit ſo idly: To which they willingly conſented. Then after Prayer ended, he read to them a Chapter out of the New Teſtament, and ſo departed.

In which Exerciſe he continued until Candlemas, and then being informed that he might not ſo do by the Law (for that he was no Prieſt or Miniſter) he left off, and kept himſelf cloſe in his Houſe till after Eaſter. At which Time, certain ſworn Men for the Enquiry of ſuch Matters came unto his Houſe, and attached him for reading in the Pariſh of Welley.

But when they underſtood that he had read but once, and that it was of Obedience (whereunto he earneſtly moved the People) they let him for that Time depart. Notwithſtanding for Fear of their Cruelty, he was not long after conſtrained to forſake his own Houſe, and keep himſelf in Woods, Barns, and other ſolitary Places, until the Time of his Apprehenſion.

After his Examination, the Lord Darcy ſent him up to the Council; but they (not minding to trouble themſelves with him) ſent him unto Bonner, who by Threatnings and other ſubtle Means, ſo abuſed the ſimple and fearful Heart of this Man, that within a ſhort Time he won his moſt wicked Will, and made him revoke and recant his former Profeſſion, and thereupon ſet him at Liberty of Body: which yet brought ſuch a Bondage and Terror of Soul and Conſcience, and ſo caſt him down, that except God (whoſe Mercies are immeaſurable) had ſupported and lifted him up again, he had periſhed for ever.

But God, who never ſuffereth his Children utterly to fall, caſting his pitiful Eyes on his loſt Sheep, with his merciful and fatherly Chaſtiſements, did, with Peter, raiſe him up again, giving unto him not only hearty and unfeigned Repentance, but alſo a moſt conſtant Boldneſs to profeſs again, even unto Death, his moſt holy Name and glorious Goſpel. Wherefore at the Procurement of Thomas Tye, Prieſt, ſometime an earneſt Profeſſor of Chriſt, but now a fierce Perſecutor of the ſame (as appeareth more at large before in the Hiſtory of William Munt and his Wife) he was again apprehended, and ſent to Biſhop Bonner, before whom he was the 8th Day of April, and ſundry other Times elſe examined. The Report of which Examination, written with his own Hand, here followeth.

The Examination of Ralph Allerton before the Biſhop of London at Fulham, April 8, 1557.

Bonner. AH Sirrah, how chanceth it that you are come hither again on this Faſhion? I dare ſay thou art accuſed wrongfully.

Ralph. Yea, my Lord, ſo I am. For if I were guilty of ſuch Things as I am accuſed of, then I would be very ſorry.

Bonner. By St. Mary that is not well done. But let me hear, art thou an honeſt Man? For if I can prove no Hereſy by thee, then ſhall thine Accuſers do thee no Harm at all. Go to, let me hear thee; for I did not believe the Tale to be true.

Ralph. My Lord, who did accuſe me? I pray you let me know, and what is mine Accuſation, that I may anſwer thereunto.

Bonner. Ah, wilt thou ſo? Before God if thou haſt not diſſembled, then thou needeſt not be afraid, nor aſhamed to anſwer for thyſelf. But tell me in Faith, haſt thou not diſſembled.

Ralph. If I cannot have mine Accuſers to accuſe me before you, my Conſcience doth conſtrain me to accuſe myſelf before you: For I confeſs that I have grievouſly offended God in my Diſſimulation at my laſt being before your Lordſhip, for which I am very ſorry, as God knoweth.

Bonner. Wherein I pray thee, didſt thou diſſemble, when thou waſt before me?

Ralph. Forſooth, my Lord, if your Lordſhip remember, I did ſet my Hand to a certain Writing, the Contents whereof (as I remember) were, That I believe in all Things as the Catholick Church teacheth, &c. In which I did not diſcloſe my Mind, but ſhamefully diſſembled, becauſe I made no Difference between the true Church and the untrue Church.

Bonner. Nay, but I pray thee let me hear more of this Gear. For I fear me thou wilt ſmell of an Heretick anon. Which is the true Church, as thou ſayeſt? Doſt thou not call the Hereticks Church the true Church, or the Catholick Church of Chriſt? Now which of theſe two are the true Church, ſayſt thou? Go to, for in Faith I will know of thee before I leave thee.

Ralph. As concerning the Church of Hereticks, I utterly abhor the ſame, as deteſtable and abominable before God, with all their Enormities and Hereſies: And the Church Catholick is it that I only embrace, whoſe Doctrine is ſincere, pure, and true.

Bonner. By St. Auguſtine, but that is well ſaid of thee. For by God Almighty, if thou hadſt allowed the Church of Hereticks, I would have burned thee with Fire for thy Labour.

Then ſaid one Morton a Prieſt, my Lord, you know not yet what Church it is that he calleth Catholick. I warrant you he meaneth naughtily enough.

Bonner. Think you ſo? Now by our bleſſed Lady, if it be ſo, he might have deceived me. How ſay you, Sirrah, which is the Catholick Church?

Ralph. Even that which hath received the wholſome Sound, ſpoken of by Iſaiah, David, Malachi, and Paul, with many other more. Which Sound, as it is written, hath gone throughout all the Earth in every Place, and unto the Ends of the World.

Bonner. Yea thou ſaiſt true before God. For this is the Sound that hath gone throughout all Chriſtendom, and he that believeth not the Sound of the holy Church, as St. Cyprian ſaith, doth err. For he ſaith, that whoſoever is out of the Church, is like unto them that were out of Noah's Ship when the Flood came upon all the whole World; ſo the Ark of Noah is likened unto the Church: And therefore thou haſt well ſaid in thy Confeſſion. For the Church is not alone in Germany, nor was here in England in the Time of the late Schiſms, as the Hereticks do affirm. For if the Church ſhould be there alone, then were Chriſt a Liar: for he promiſed that the Holy Ghoſt ſhould come to us, lead us unto all Truth, yea, and remain with us unto the End of the World. So now if we will take Chriſt for a true Sayer, then muſt we needs affirm, that the Way which is taught in France, Spain, Italy, Flanders, Denmark, Scotland, and all Chriſtendom over, muſt needs be the true Catholick Church.

Ralph. My Lord, if you remember, I ſpake of all the World, as it is written, and not of all Chriſtendom only, as methinks your Lordſhip takes it, which Kind of ſpeaking you do not find in all the Bible. For I am ſure, that the Goſpel hath been both preached and perſecuted in all Lands: Firſt, in Jewry by the Scribes and Phariſees, and ſince that Time by Nero, Diocleſian, and ſuch like, and now here in theſe our Days by your Lordſhip knoweth whom. For true it is that the Church which you call Catholick, is none otherwiſe Catholick than was figured in Cain, obſerved of by Jeroboam, Ahab, Jezebel, Nabuchodonoſor, Antiochus, Herod, with innumerable more of the like: And as both Daniel and Eſdras make mention of theſe laſt Days by a plain Prophecy, and now fulfilled, as appeareth, and affirmed by our Saviour Chriſt and his Apoſtles, ſaying; There ſhall come grievous Wolves to devour the Flock.

Bonner. Now, by the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar, Mr. Morton, he is the rankeſt Heretick that ever came before me. How ſay you? have you heard the like?

Morton. I thought what he was my Lord at the firſt.

Bonner. Now by all Hallows thou ſhalt be burnt with Fire for thy lying, thou whoreſon Varlet and Prick-louſe thou. Doſt thou find a Prophecy in Daniel of us? Nay, you Knave, it is of you that he ſpeaketh, and of your falſe pretended Holineſs. Go to, let me hear what is the Sayings of Eſdras, and take Heed ye make not a Lie, I adviſe you.

Ralph. The Saying of Eſdras is this; The Heat of great Multitudes is kindled over you, and they ſhall take away certain of you, and feed the Idols with you, and he that conſenteth unto them, ſhall be had in Deriſion, laughed to Scorn, and troden under Foot: Yea they ſhall be like mad Men, for they ſpare no Man; they ſhall ſpoil and waſte ſuch as fear the Lord, &c.

Bonner. And have you taken this Thing to make your Market good? Ah Sirrah, wilt thou ſo? By my Faith a pretty Inſtruction, and a neceſſary Thing to be taught among the People. By my Troth I think there be more of this Opinion. I pray thee tell me: Is there any that underſtandeth this Scripture on this Faſhion? Before God, I think there be none in all England, but thou.

Ralph. Yes, my Lord, there are in England three Religions.

Bonner. Sayeſt thou ſo? which be thoſe three?

Ralph. The firſt is that which you hold, the ſecond is clean contrary to the ſame; and the third is a neuter, being indifferent: That is to ſay, obſerving all Things that are commanded outwardly, as tho' he were of your Part, his Heart being ſet wholly againſt the ſame.

Bonner. And of theſe three which art thou? for now thou muſt needs be one of them.

Ralph. Yea, my Lord, I am one of them; and that which I am of, is even that which is contrary to that which you teach to be believed under Pain of Death.

Bonner. Ah, Sir, you were here with me at Fulham, and had good Cheer, yea and Money in your Purſe when you went away, and by my Faith I had a Favour unto thee, but now I ſee thou wilt be a naughty Knave. Why wilt thou take upon thee to read the Scripture, and canſt underſtand never a Word? for thou haſt brought a Text of Scripture, which maketh clean againſt thee. For Eſdras ſpeaketh of the Multitude of you Hereticks, declaring your Hate againſt the Catholick Church, making the ſimple or idle People believe, that all is Idolatry that we do, and ſo entice them away until you have overcome them.

Ralph. Nay, not ſo my Lord. For he maketh it more plain, and ſaith on this wiſe; They ſhall take away their Goods, and put them out of their Houſes, and then ſhall it be known who are my Choſen (ſaid the Lord) for they ſhall be tried, as the Silver or Gold in the Fire. And we ſee it ſo come to paſs, even as he hath ſaid. For who is not now driven from Houſe and Home, yea, and his Goods taken up for other Men that never ſweat for them, if he do not obſerve as you command and ſet forth? Or elſe, if he be taken, then muſt he either deny the Truth, as I did, in diſſembling, or elſe he ſhall be ſure to be tried, as Eſdras ſaith, even as the Gold is tried in the Fire. Whereby all the World may know, that you are the bloody Churh, figured in Cain the Tyrant, neither yet are ye able to avoid it.

Morton. I promiſe you my Lord, I like him better now than ever I did, when he was here before you the other Time. For then he did but diſſemble, as I perceived well enough; but now methinks he ſpeaketh plainly.

Bonner. Marry, Sir, as you ſay indeed, he is plain. For he is a plain Heretick, and ſhall be burned. Have the Knave away. Let him be carried to Little-eaſe, at London, until I come.

And ſo was I carried to London unto Little-eaſe, and there remained that Night, and on the next Morrow I appeared before him again, the Dean of St. Paul's and the Chancellor of London being preſent. Then were brought forth certain Writings that I had ſet my Hand unto.

Bonner. Come on your Ways, Sirrah. Is not this your Hand, and this, and this?

Ralph. Yea, they are my Hand all of them; I confeſs the ſame, neither yet will I deny any Thing that I have ſet my Hand unto. But if I have ſet my Hand to any Thing that is not unlawful, therefore am I ſorry. Nevertheleſs, my Hand I will not deny to be my Doing.

Bonner. Well ſaid, now ye muſt tell me; were you never at the Church ſince you went from me, at Maſs, Mattens, &c.

Ralph. No; my Lord, not at Maſs, Mattens, nor any other ſtrange worſhipping of God.

Bonner. Yea, ſayeſt thou ſo? Waſt thou neither at thine own Pariſh-church, nor at any other? And doſt thou alſo ſay, that it is a ſtrange worſhipping? Why, I pray thee, wilt thou not believe the Scripture to be true?

Ralph. Yea, my Lord, I believe the Scripture to be true, and in Defence of the ſame I intend to give my Life, rather than I will deny any part thereof, God willing.

Dean. My Lord, this Fellow will be an honeſt Man, I hear by him. He will not ſtand in his Opinion; for he ſheweth himſelf gentle and patient in his Talk.

Bonner. Oh, he is a glorious Knave. His painted Terms ſhall no more deceive me. Ah whoreſon Prick-louſe, doth not Chriſt ſay, This is my Body? And how dareſt thou deny theſe Words, for to ſay, as I have a Writing to ſhew, and thine own Hand at the ſame? Let me ſee, wilt thou deny this? Is not this thine own Hand?

Ralph. Yes, my Lord, it is mine own Hand, neither am I aſhamed thereof, becauſe my Confeſſion thereof is agreeable to God's Word. And whereas you do lay unto my Charge, that I ſhould deny the Words of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt; Oh good Lord, from whence cometh this raſh, haſty, and untrue Judgment? Forſooth not from the Spirit of Truth; for he leadeth Men into all Truth, and is not the Father of Liars. Whereupon ſhould your Lordſhip gather or ſay of me ſo diffamouſly; wherefore, I beſeech you, if I deny the Scriptures canonical, or any Part thereof, then let me die.

Tye the Prieſt. My Lord, he is a very ſeditious Fellow, and perſuadeth other Men to do as he himſelf doth, contrary to the Order appointed by the Queen's Highneſs and the Clergy of this Realm. For a great many of the Pariſh will be gathered one Day to one Place, and another Day to another Place to hear him; ſo that very few come to Church to hear divine Service: And this was not only before that he was taken and brought unto the Council, but alſo ſince his Return home again, he hath done much Harm. For where both Men and Women were honeſtly diſpoſed before, by St. Anne now are they as ill as he almoſt. And furthermore, he was not aſhamed to withſtand me before all the Pariſh, ſaying, that we were of the malignant Church of Antichriſt, and not of the true Church of Chriſt, alledging a great many Scriptures to ſerve his Purpoſe, ſaying; Good People, take Heed, and beware of theſe Blood-thirſty Dogs, &c. And then I commanded the Conſtable to apprehend him, and ſo he did. Nevertheleſs, after this Apprehenſion, the Conſtable let him go about his Buſineſs all the next Day, ſo that without putting in of Sureties, he let him go into Suffolk and other Places, for no Goodneſs, I warrant you my Lord: It were Alms to teach ſuch Officers their Duty, how they ſhould let ſuch Rebels go at their own Liberty, after that they be apprehended and taken, but to keep them faſt in the Stocks until they bring them before a Juſtice.

Ralph. As I ſaid before, ſo ſay I now again; thou art not of the Church of Chriſt, and that I will prove, if I may be ſuffered. And where you ſaid, that you commanded the Conſtable to apprehend me, you did ſo indeed, contrary to the Laws of this Realm, having neither Treaſon, Felony, nor Murder to lay to my Charge: No, neither had you Precept, Proceſs, nor Warrant to ſerve on me; and therefore I ſay without a Law was I apprehended. And whereas you ſeek to trouble the Conſtable, becauſe he kept me not in the Stocks three Days and three Nights, it doth ſhew in part what you are. And my going into Suffolk was not for any Evil, but only to buy half a Buſhel of Corn for Bread for my poor Wife and Children, knowing that I had no long Time to tarry with them. But if I had run away, then you would ſurely have laid ſomewhat to his Charge.

Bonner. Go to, thou art a Merchant indeed. Ah Sirrah, before God thou ſhalt be burnt with Fire. Thou knoweſt Richard Roth, doeſt thou not? Is he of the ſame Mind that thou art of, or no? Canſt thou tell?

Ralph. He is of Age to anſwer, let him ſpeak for himſelf; for I hear ſay that he is in your Houſe.

Bonner. Lo what a Knave here is. Go Cluny, fetch me Roth hither. By my Troth he is a falſe Knave; but yet thou art worſe than he. Ah Sirrah, did you not ſet your Hand to a Writing, the Tenor whereof was, that if you ſhould at any Time ſay or do heretically, then it ſhould be lawful for me to take thee with a Relapſe, and to proceed in Sentence againſt thee?

Ralph. Yea, that is ſo. But here is to be asked, whether it is ſufficient, that my Hand or Name in Writing be able to give Authority to you or to any other to kill me? For if I by writing can do ſo much, then muſt my Authority be greater than yours. Nevertheleſs, I have neither ſaid nor done heretically, but like a true Chriſtian Man have I behaved myſelf. And ſo I was committed unto Priſon again, and the 24th Day of the ſame Month, I was brought before the Biſhop, the Lord North, Doctor Story, and others, and after a long Talk in Latin amongſt themſelves (unto which I gave no Anſwer, becauſe they ſpake not to me, although they ſpake of me) at the laſt the Biſhop ſaid:

Bonner. How ſay you Sirrah? tell me briefly at one Word, wilt thou be contented to go to Fulham with me, and there to kneel thee down at Maſs, ſhewing thyſelf outwardly as tho' thou didſt it with a good Will? Go to, ſpeak.

Ralph.

Ralph. I will not ſay ſo.

Bonner. Away with him, away with him.

The ſecond Day of May I was brought before the Biſhop, and three Noblemen of the Council, whoſe Names I do not remember.

Bonner. Lo my Lords, this ſame is the Fellow that was ſent unto me from the Council, and did ſubmit himſelf, ſo that I had half a Hope of him: But by St. Anne I was always in doubt of him. Nevertheleſs, he was with me, and fared well, and when I delivered him, I gave him Money in his Purſe. How ſayſt thou? was it not ſo as I tell my Lords here?

Ralph. Indeed my Lord I had Meat and Drink enough; but I never came in Bed all the while. And at my departing you gave me twelve-pence, howbeit I asked none, nor would have none.

A Lord. Be good to him my Lord. He will be an honeſt Man.

Bonner. Before God, how ſhould I truſt him? He hath once deceived me already. But ye ſhall hear what he will ſay to the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar. How ſay you Sirrah? after the Words of Conſecration be ſpoke by the Prieſt, there remaineth no Bread, but the very Body of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, God and Man, and none other Subſtance, under the Form of Bread.

Ralph. Where find you that, my Lord written?

Bonner. Lo, Sir. Why? Doth not Chriſt ſay, This is my Body? How ſayſt thou? Wilt thou deny theſe Words of our Saviour Chriſt? Or elſe was he a Diſſembler, ſpeaking one Thing, and meaning another? Go to, now I have taken you.

Ralph. Yea, my Lord, you have taken me indeed, and will keep me until you kill me. Howbeit, my Lord, I marvel why you leave out the Beginning of the Inſtitution of the Supper of our Lord? For Chriſt ſaid; Take ye, and eat ye, this is my Body. And if it will pleaſe you to join the former Words to the latter, then ſhall I make you an Anſwer. For ſure I am, that Chriſt was no Diſſembler, neither did he ſay one Thing, and mean another.

Bonner. Why? then muſt thou needs ſay, that it is his Body; for he ſaith it himſelf, and thou confeſſeth that he will not lie.

Ralph. No, my Lord; he is true, and all Men are Lyars. Notwithſtanding, I utterly refuſe to take the Words of our Saviour ſo fantaſtically as you teach us to take them: For then ſhould we conſpire with certain Hereticks called the Neſtorians; for they deny that Chriſt had a true natural Body, and ſo methinks you do, my Lord. If you will affirm his Body to be there, as you ſay he is, then muſt you needs alſo affirm, that it is a fantaſtical Body; and therefore look to it for God's Sake, and let theſe Words go before; Take ye, and eat ye, without which Words the reſt are not ſufficient; but when the worthy Receivers do take and eat, even then are fulfilled the Words of our Saviour unto him, or every of them that ſo receiveth.

Bonner. Ah, I feel well thou canſt not underſtand theſe Words; I will ſhew thee a Parable. If I ſhould ſet a Piece of Beef before thee, and ſay; eat, it is Beef: And then take part of it away, and ſend it to my Cook, and he ſhall change the Faſhion thereof, and make it look like Bread: What, wouldſt thou ſay that it were not Beef, becauſe it hath not the Faſhion of Beef?

Ralph. Let me underſtand a little further, my Lord; ſhall the Cook add nothing thereunto, nor take any Thing therefrom?

Bonner. What is that to the Matter, whether he do or no, ſo long as the Shape is changed into another Likeneſs?

Ralph. Ah, will you ſo my Lord? your Sophiſtry will not ſerve; the Truth will have the Victory nevertheleſs, as Eſay ſaith, Chap. 59. He that reſtraineth himſelf from Evil, muſt be ſpoiled. And Amos hath ſuch like Words alſo, Chap. 5. For the Wiſe muſt be fain to hold their Peace; ſo wicked a Time it is, ſaith he: Nevertheleſs, he that can ſpeak the Truth, and will not, ſhall give a ſtrait Account for the ſame.

A Doctor. By my Lord's Leave, here methinks thou ſpeakeſt like a Fool. Wilt thou be a Judge of the Scripture? Nay, thou muſt ſtand to learn, and not to teach; for the whole Congregation hath determined the Matter long ago.

A Prieſt. No, by your Leave, we have a Church, and not a Congregation. You miſtake that Word, Mr. Doctor.

Ralph. Then ſaid I to my Fellow-priſoners ſtanding by; my Brethren, do you not hear how theſe Men help one another? Let us do ſo alſo. But we never came all in together. Then was I carried away for that Time. The 19th Day of May I was brought before the Biſhop of Rocheſter, and Chicheſter, with others.

B. Rocheſt. Were you a Companion of George Eagles, otherwiſe called Trudge-over? My Lord of London telleth me that you were his Fellow-companion.

Ralph. I know him very well, my Lord.

Rocheſt. By my Faith, I had him once, and then he was as drunk as an Ape, for he ſtank ſo of Drink, that I could not abide him; and ſo ſent him away.

Ralph. My Lord, I dare ſay you took your Mark amiſs. It was either yourſelf, or ſome of your own Company, for he did neither drink Wine, Ale, nor Beer, in a quarter of a Year before that Time; and therefore it was not he forſooth.

The reſt of mine Examinations you ſhall have when I am condemned, if I can have any Time after my coming into Newgate, which I truſt ſhall touch the Matter a great deal more plainly; for the pithy Matters are yet unwritten. Thus fare you well good Friends all. Yea, I ſay, farewel for ever in this preſent World. Greet ye one another, and be joyful in the Lord. Salute the good Widows among you, with all the reſt of the Congregation in Barfold, and Dedham, and Colcheſter.

This Promiſe of his, being either not performed, for that he might not thereto be permitted, or elſe if he did write, the ſame not coming to my Hands: I am fain in the reſt of his Examinations to follow the only Report of the Regiſter; who witneſſeth, that the 15th Day of May, Anno 1557, in the Biſhop's Palace at London, he was examined upon certain Interrogatories, the Contents whereof be theſe.

FIrſt, that he was of the Pariſh of Muchbentley, and ſo of the Dioceſs of London.

Secondly, that the 10th Day of January then laſt paſt, Mr. John Morant preaching at Paul's, the ſaid Ralph Allerton did there openly ſubmit himſelf unto the Church of Rome, with the Rites and Ceremonies thereof.

Thirdly, that he did conſent and ſubſcribe as well unto the ſame Submiſſion, as alſo to one other Bill, in which he granted, that if he ſhould at any Time turn again unto his former Opinions, it ſhould be then lawful for the Biſhop immediately to denounce and adjudge him as an Heretick.

Fourthly, that he had ſubſcribed to a Bill, wherein he affirmed, that in the Sacrament, after the Words of Conſecration be ſpoken by the Prieſt, there remaineth ſtill material Bread and material Wine; and that he believeth that the Bread is the Bread of Thankſgiving, and the Memorial of Chriſt's Death; and that when he receiveth it, he receiveth the Body of Chriſt ſpiritually in his Soul, but material Bread in Subſtance.

Fifthly, that he had openly affirmed, and alſo adviſedly ſpoken that which is contained in the ſaid former fourth Article laſt before ſpecified.

Sixthly, that he had ſpoken againſt the Biſhop of Rome,

Rome, with the Church and See of the ſame, and alſo againſt the ſeven Sacraments and other Ceremonies and Ordinances of the ſame Church, uſed then within this Realm.

Seventhly, that he had allowed and commended the Opinion and Faith of Mr. Cranmer, Ridley, and Latimer, and others of late burned within this Realm, and believed that their Opinions were good and godly.

Eighthly, that he had divers Times affirmed, that the Religion uſed within this Realm, at the Time of his Apprehenſion, was neither good, nor agreeable to God's Word, and that he could not conform himſelf thereunto.

Ninthly, that he had affirmed, that the Book of Common-prayer ſet forth in the Reign of King Edward VI, was in all Parts good and godly; and that the ſaid Ralph and his Company-priſoners, did daily uſe amongſt themſelves in Priſon ſome part of the Book.

Tenthly, that he had affirmed, that if he were out of Priſon, he would not come to Maſs, Mattens, nor Evenſong, nor bear Taper, Candle, or Palm, nor go in Proceſſion, nor would receive holy Water, holy Bread, Aſhes, or Pax, or any other Ceremony of the Church then uſed within this Realm.

Eleventhly, that he had affirmed, that if he were at Liberty he would not confeſs his Sins to any Prieſt, nor receive Abſolution of him; nor yet would receive the Sacrament of the Altar, as it was then uſed.

Twelfthly, that he had affirmed, that praying to Saints, and Prayers for the Dead, were neither good nor profitable, and that a Man is not bound to faſt and pray, but at his own Will and Pleaſure; neither that it is lawful to reſerve the Sacrament, or to worſhip it.

Thirteenthly, that the ſaid Allerton had according to theſe his Affirmations, abſtained and refuſed to come unto his Pariſh-church ever ſince the 10th Day of January laſt, or to uſe, receive, or allow any Ceremonies, Sacraments, or other Rites then uſed in the Church.

To all theſe Articles he anſwered affirmatively, denying preciſely none of them; ſaving to this Clauſe contained in the twelfth Article, that a Man is not bound to faſt and pray but at his own Will and Pleaſure, he ſaid that he had affirmed no ſuch Thing, but he confeſſed that he had not faſted nor prayed ſo oft as he was bound to do. And unto this Anſwer he alſo ſubſcribed in this Sort.

> Except it be proved otherwiſe by the holy Scripture, I do affirm theſe Articles to be true. By me Ralph Allerton.

The next Examination was the fourth Day of July; the Acts whereof, becauſe they are to the ſame Effect, as the Articles exhibited to other Martyrs already mention'd, I here omit, giving you farther to underſtand, that on the ſeventh of July, he was brought before Dr. Darbyſhire in the Biſhop's Palace, who examined him again on the former Articles, and after perſuaded him to recant, threatning him that otherwiſe he ſhould be burned. To whom he boldly anſwered, I would I might be condemned even To-morrow; for I perceive my Lord (meaning Bonner) doth nothing but ſeek Men's Blood. Upon which Saying Dr. Darbyſhire committed him again to Priſon; and the 10th of September the Biſhop cauſed him to be brought unto Fulham, and there in his private Chapel within his Houſe, he judiciouſly propounded unto him certain other new Articles; to which, becauſe they were for the moſt part full of Lies, he would in a manner make no Anſwer, ſaving he granted, that he miſliked their Maſs and other Ceremonies, becauſe they were wicked and naught. And moreover, he told the Biſhop, that he and his Accomplices did nothing but ſeek how to kill Innocents.

The Biſhop then asked him, whether he would believe in all Points touching the Sacrament of the Altar, as is contained in the general Council holden and kept under Innocent the third, and therewithal he did read the Decree of the ſaid Council concerning the Sacrament.

Whereunto Allerton again made Anſwer and ſaid; I believe nothing contained in the ſame Council, neither have I any Thing to do therewith; and it were alſo very neceſſary, that no Man elſe ſhould have to do therewith.

Then (quoth Bonner) thou art of the Opinion that the Hereticks lately burnt at Colcheſter were of.

Yea, ſaid he, I am of their Opinion, and I believe that they be Saints in Heaven.

This done, the Biſhop perceiving that he would not recant, demanded what he had to ſay, why he ſhould not pronounce the Sentence of Condemnation againſt him. To whom he anſwered, ye ought not to condemn me as an Heretick, for I am a good Chriſtian. But now go to, do as you have already determined: For I ſee right well, that Right and Truth is ſuppreſſed and cannot appear upon the Earth.

Theſe Words ended, the Biſhop pronounced the Sentence of Condemnation, and ſo delivered him unto the temporal Officers: Who kept him in their Cuſtody till the 17th of September, at which Time, both he and the other three before mentioned, were all burned, as ye have already heard. Of which other three, becauſe as yet little is ſaid, I will therefore now proceed to declare ſuch Cauſe of their cruel Deaths, as in the Regiſter is recorded.

James Auſtoo, and Margery his Wife.

I Cannot find why theſe two Perſons were firſt apprehended, howbeit, as the Days then ſerved, it was no ſtrange Matter to fall into the Hands of ſuch, as with Cruelty perſecuted the true Profeſſors of God's Goſpel, eſpecially having ſo many Promoters, and unkind Neighbours to help them forwards. By which kind of People, it is not unlike theſe two godly Yoke-fellows were accuſed and taken: And being once delivered into the mercileſs Hands of Biſhop Bonner, their Examinations (ye may be ſure) were not long deferred. For the 16th of July 1557, they were brought before him at London: Where firſt he demanded of the ſaid James Auſtoo (amongſt other Queſtions) where he had been confeſſed in Lent, and whether he received the Sacrament of the Altar at Eaſter, or not?

To whom he anſwered, that indeed he had been confeſſed of the Curate of Alhallows Barking, nigh to the Tower of London, but that he had not received the Sacrament of the Altar; for he defied it from the Bottom of his Heart.

Why (quoth the Biſhop) doſt thou not believe, that in the Sacrament of the Altar there is the true Body and Blood of Chriſt?

No, ſaid Auſtoo, not in the Sacrament of the Altar, but in the Supper of the Lord, to the faithful Receiver is the very Body and Blood of Chriſt by Faith.

Bonner not well pleaſed with this Talk, asked then the Wife, how ſhe lik'd the Religion then uſed in this Church of England?

She anſwered, that ſhe believed that the ſame was not according to God's Word, but falſe and corrupted, and that they which did go thereunto, did it more for Fear of the Law, than otherwiſe.

Then he again ask'd her, if ſhe would go to the Church and hear Maſs, and pray for the proſperous Eſtate of the King, being then abroad in his Affairs.

Whereunto ſhe ſaid, that ſhe defied the Maſs with all her Heart, and that ſhe would not come into any Church wherein were Idols.

After this the Biſhop objected unto them certain Articles, to the Number of 18. The Tenor whereof I do here for Brevity ſake paſs over; giving you yet thus much to underſtand, that in the Matters of Faith they were as ſound, and anſwered as truly as ever any did, eſpecially the Woman, to whom the Lord had given the greater Knowledge, and more Fervency of Spirit. Notwithſtanding according to the Meaſure of Grace that God gave them, they both ſtood moſt firmly unto the Truth. And therefore to conclude, the 10th Day of September they were, (with Ralph Allerton) brought again before the Biſhop within his Chappel at Fulham, where he ſpeaking unto them, ſaid firſt on this wiſe; Auſtoo, doſt thou know where thou art now, and in what Place, and before whom, and what thou haſt to do?

Yea; quoth Auſtoo; I know where I am: For I am in an Idol's Temple.

After which Words, their Articles being again read, and their Conſtancy in Faith perceived, Bonner pronounced againſt either of them ſeverally the Sentence of Condemnation, and delivering them unto the Sheriff there preſent, did rid his Hands of them.

Richard Roth.

IN the Fellowſhip of the aforenamed three Martyrs, was alſo this Richard Roth; who being apprehended, and brought up unto the Biſhop of London, was by him examined the fourth Day of July, at which Time the Biſhop earneſtly perſuaded him to believe that there were ſeven Sacraments in Chriſt's Church, and that in the Sacrament of the Altar (after the Words of Conſecration duly ſpoken) there remain'd the very Subſtance of Chriſt's Body and Blood, and none other. Whereunto (at that preſent) he made only this Anſwer; that if the Scripture did ſo teach him, and that he might be by the ſame ſo perſuaded, he would ſo believe, otherwiſe not. But at another Examination (which was the 9th of September) he declared plainly, that in the ſaid Sacrament of the Altar, as it was then uſed, there was not the very Body and Blood of Chriſt, but that it was a dead God, and that the Maſs was deteſtable, and contrary to God's holy Word and Will, from which Faith and Opinion he would not go or decline.

The next Day, being the tenth of the ſame Month, the Biſhop at his Houſe at Fulham (by way of an Article) laid and objected againſt him; That he was a Comforter and Supporter of Hereticks: And therefore had written a Letter to that Effect unto ſeveral that were burn'd at Colcheſter.

This Letter he confeſſed indeed that he had written, and that he had meant to have ſent the ſame unto ſuch as were condemned at Colcheſter for the Goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt, and were afterwards burned there.

The Biſhop then farther asked him, what he thought his Fellow-priſoner Ralph Allerton to be.

He anſwered, that he thought him to be one of the elect Children of God; and that if at any Time hereafter he happened to be put to Death for his Faith and Religion, he thought he ſhould die a true Martyr. And moreover, finding himſelf grieved with the Biſhop's privy and ſecret condemning of God's People, he ſaid unto him in this ſort; my Lord, becauſe the People ſhould not ſee and behold your Doings, ye cauſe me and others to be brought to our Examinations by Night, being afraid (belike) to do it by Day.

The Biſhop not greatly caring for his Talk, proceeded to examine him of other Matters, amongſt which this high and weighty Thing was one, videlicet, how he did like the Order and Rites of the Church then uſed here in England.

To whom he ſaid, that he ever had, and yet then did abhor the ſame with all his Heart.

Then divers of the Biſhop's Accomplices intreated and perſuaded him to recant, and ask Mercy of the Biſhop.

No (quoth Roth) I will not ask Mercy of him that cannot give it. Whereupon he was (as the reſt before mentioned) condemned and delivered unto the Sheriff, and the 17th Day of September they all moſt joyfully ended their Lives in one Fire at Iſlington, for the Teſtimony of Chriſt, as before is declared.

Agnes Bongeor, and Margaret Thurſton, burnt at Colcheſter.

A Little before (gentle Reader) mention was made of ten that ſuffered Martyrdom at Colcheſter; at which Time, there were alſo two other Women, one called Margaret Thurſton, and the other Agnes Bongeor, that ſhould have ſuffered with them, and were likewiſe condemned at the ſame Time and Place, for the like Cauſe with the other ten beforementioned, and anſwered alſo in their Examinations to the ſame Effect as the others did. But the one, namely, Margaret Thurſton, the Morning ſhe ſhould ſuffer with thoſe that went from the Caſtle, was for that Time deferred. What the Cauſe was, the Teſtimony of Joan Cook ſhall declare unto us. Which Joan Cook, now the Wife of John Spark, being then in the Caſtle of Colcheſter for Religion, did demand of this Widow Thurſton, whoſe Husband died in the Priſon, being impriſoned for Religion, wherefore the ſaid Margaret, being a condemned Woman, ſhould be reſerved, when the others ſuffered in the Caſtle Baily? She anſwered, that it was not for any Fear of Death; but being prepared, as the reſt were that ſuffered the ſame Day, ſhe was taken with a great Shivering and Trembling of the Fleſh; whereupon, forſaking the Company, ſhe went aſide to pray; and whilſt ſhe was praying, ſhe thought that ſhe was lifted up by a mighty Wind that came round about her. Even at that Inſtant came in the Gaoler and Company with him, and whilſt ſhe turned herſelf to fetch her Pſalter, they took the other Priſoners and left her alone. Shortly after ſhe was removed out of the Caſtle, and put into the Town-priſon, where ſhe continued until Friday ſevennight after her Company were burnt. That Day, not two Hours before her Death, ſhe was brought to the Caſtle again, where ſhe declared thus much to the aforeſaid Joan Cook.

The other, named Agnes Bongeor, who ſhould have ſuffered in like Manner with the ſix that went out of Motehall, was alſo kept back at that Time, but not in like ſort, becauſe her Name was wrong written within the Writ.

The ſame Morning, the ſecond of Auguſt, that the ſaid ſix in Motehall were called out to go to their Martyrdom, Agnes Bongeor was alſo called with them, by the Name of Agnes Bower. Wherefore the Bayliffs, underſtanding her to be wrong named within the Writ, commanded the ſaid Agnes Bongeor to Priſon again, and ſo that Day ſent her from Motehall to the Caſtle, where ſhe remained till her Death.

But when ſhe ſaw herſelf ſeparated from her Fellow Priſoners in ſuch Manner, oh! what piteous Complaint that good Woman made; how bitterly ſhe wept; what ſtrange Thoughts came into her Mind, how naked and deſolate ſhe eſteemed herſelf, and to what Plunge of Deſpair and Care her poor Soul was brought, was both ſad and moving to behold; and all came becauſe ſhe went not with them to give up her Life for the Cauſe of Chriſt; for of all Things in the World, Life was the leaſt Thing that ſhe expected. For the Morning, on which ſhe was kept back from burning, ſhe had put on a Smock that ſhe had prepared only for that Purpoſe. And alſo having a Child, a little young Infant ſucking on her, whom ſhe kept with her tenderly all the Time ſhe was in Priſon, that Day likewiſe did ſhe ſend away to another Nurſe, and prepared herſelf preſently to give herſelf for the Teſtimony of the glorious Goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt. So little did ſhe look for Life, and ſo greatly did God's Gifts work in her above Nature, that Death ſeemed much better welcome than Life. But this took not effect at that Time as ſhe thought it would, and therefore (as I ſaid) ſhe was greatly troubled.

Being in this great Perplexity of Mind, a Friend of hers came to her, and required to know whether Abraham's Obedience was accepted before God, for that he did ſacrifice his Son Iſaac, or in that he would have offered him? Unto which ſhe anſwered thus:

I know ſaid ſhe, that Abraham's Will before God was allowed for the Deed, in that he would have done it, if the Angel of the Lord had not ſtay'd him; but I (ſaid ſhe) am unhappy, the Lord thinketh me not worthy of this Dignity, and therefore Abraham's Caſe and mine is not alike.

Why ſaid her Friend, would ye not willingly have gone with your Company, if God ſhould ſo have ſuffered it?

Yes, ſaid ſhe, with all my Heart, and becauſe I did not, it is now my chief and greateſt Grief.

Then ſaid her Friend; my dear Siſter, I pray thee conſider Abraham and thyſelf well, and thou ſhalt ſee thou doeſt nothing differ with him in Will at all.

Alas, ſaid ſhe, there is a far greater Matter in Abraham than in me; for Abraham was try'd with the Offering of his own Child, but ſo am not I; and therefore our Caſes are not alike.

Good Siſter, ſaid her Friend, weigh the Matter but indifferently. Abraham I grant would have offered his Son; and have not you done the like in your little ſucking Babe? But conſider further than this, my good Siſter (ſaid he) where Abraham was commanded but to offer his Son, you are heavy and grieved becauſe you offer not yourſelf, which goeth ſomewhat more near you than Abraham's Obedience did; and therefore before God, aſſuredly, is no leſs accepted and allowed in his holy Preſence; which further the preparing of your Shroud alſo doth argue full well, &c. After which Talk between them, ſhe began a little to ſtay herſelf, and gave her whole Exerciſe to Reading and Prayer, wherein ſhe found a great deal of Comfort.

In the Time that theſe foreſaid two good Women were Priſoners, one in the Caſtle, and the other in Motehall, God by a ſecret Means called the ſaid Margaret Thurſton unto his Truth again; who having her Eyes opened by the working of his Spirit, did greatly ſorrow and lament her Backſliding before, and promiſed faithfully to the Lord in Hope of his Mercies, never more while ſhe lived to do the like again, but that ſhe would conſtantly ſtand to the Confeſſion of the ſame, againſt all the Adverſaries of the Croſs of Chriſt. After which Promiſe made, came, in a ſhort Time a Writ from London for the burning of them, which was accordingly executed the 17th Day of September, in the Year aforeſaid.

Now when theſe aforeſaid Women were brought to the Place at Colcheſter where they ſhould ſuffer, they fell down upon their Knees, and made their humble Prayers to God, which being done, they roſe and went to the Stake joyfully, and were immediately chained thereto; and, after the Fire had compaſſed them about, they with great Joy and glorious Triumph gave up their Souls, Spirits and Lives into the Hands of the Lord. *

John Kurde, Martyr.

IN the Story before, ſome Things was mentioned of a certain Shoemaker ſuffering at Northampton, being unnamed, whom becauſe we underſtand by a Letter ſent from the ſaid Parties, that he ſuffered in this Year, 1557, and in the Month of September, therefore we thought there to place him. His Name was John Kurde, a Shoemaker, late of the Pariſh of Syrſam in Northamptonſhire, who was impriſoned in Northampton Caſtle for denying the Popiſh Tranſubſtantiation, for which Cauſe William Binſley, Batchellor of Law, and Chancellor unto the Biſhop of Peterborough, and afterwards Archdeacon of Northampton, did pronounce Sentence of Death againſt the ſaid Kurde, in the Church of All Saints in Northampton, in Auguſt 1557. and in September following, at the Commandment of Sir Thomas Treſham, Sheriff then of the Shire, he was led by his Officers without the Northgate of Northampton, and in the Stone Pits was burned. A Popiſh Prieſt ſtanding by, whoſe Name was John Roſe, Vicar of St. Giles's in Northampton, did declare unto him, that if he would recant, he was authoriſed to give him his Pardon. His Anſwer was, that he had his Pardon by Jeſus Chriſt, &c.

A true Certificate of the apprehending of John Noyes of Laxefield in Suffolk, Shoemaker, April 19, 1557.

IN the Month of September this preſent Year, or (as ſome report) in the Year paſt, ſuffered the bleſſed Martyr John Noyes, whoſe Story here followeth:

Firſt, Mr. Thomas Lovel being then chief Conſtable of Hoxton Hundred, in the County aforeſaid, and one John Jacob and William Stannard then being Under-Conſtables of the aforeſaid Town of Laxefield, and Wolfren Dowſing and Nicholas Stannard of the ſame Town, being then accounted faithful and catholick Chriſtians, though undoubtedly they proved moſt cruel Hinderers of the true Profeſſors of Chriſt and his Goſpel, with others, were commanded to be that preſent Day before the Juſtices, whoſe Names were Mr. Thurſton, Sir John Tyrrel, and Mr. Kene, and Sir Jo. Sillard being High-ſheriff.

Theſe ſitting at Hoxton in the County of Suffolk aforeſaid, and there the ſaid Townſmen aforeſaid having Commandment of the ſaid Juſtices to enquire in their Town, if there were any that would neglect to come to their Service and Maſs, further to examine the Cauſe why they would not come, and thereupon to bring the true Certificate to the ſaid Juſtices within fourteen Days then next enſuing; they then coming homeward, being full of Hatred againſt the Truth, and deſirous to get Promotion, without any ſuch Commandment of the Juſtices (as far as we can learn) took Counſel one with another how to attach the ſaid John Noyes without any more Delay.

This deviliſh Enterpriſe agreed upon, chiefly thro' the Counſel of Mr. Thomas Lovel, Wolfren Dowſing, and Nicholas Stannard aforeſaid, with Expedition his Houſe was beſet on both Sides. This done, they found the ſaid John Noyes, on the Backſide of the ſaid Houſe going out, and Nicholas Stannard called to the ſaid John, and ſaid, whither goeſt thou? and he ſaid, to my Neighbours. And the ſaid Nicholas Stannard ſaid, your Maſter hath deceived you; you muſt go with us now. But the ſaid John Noyes anſwered, no, but take you Heed your Maſter deceive not you. And ſo they took him and carried him to the Juſtices the next Day. After his Appearance and ſundry Cauſes alledging, the Juſtices and the Sheriff together caſt him into Eye Dungeon, and there he lay a certain Time. And then was carried from thence to Norwich, and ſo came before the Biſhop, where were miniſtred unto him theſe Poſitions following:

Firſt, Whether he believed that the Ceremonies uſed in the Church were good and godly, to ſtir up Mens Minds to Devotion.

2. Item, Whether he believed the Pope to be ſupreme Head of the Church here in Earth.

3. Item, Whether he believed the Body of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt to be in the Sacrament of the Altar under the Forms of Bread and Wine, after the Words of Conſecration.

Whereunto he anſwered, that he thought the natural Body of Chriſt to be only in Heaven, and not in the Sacrament, &c.

For which, Sentence at laſt was read by the Biſhop againſt him, in the Preſence of theſe there ſitting the ſame Time, Dr. Dunning, Chancellor, Sir W. Woodhouſe, Sir Thomas Woodhouſe, Mr. George Heyden, Mr. Spenſer, W. Farrar Alderman of Norwich, Mr. Thurſton, Wineſden, with divers others.

More of his Examination than this came not to our Hands.

In the mean Time his Brother-in-law, Nicholas Fisk of Dinnington, going to comfort him at ſuch Time as he remained Priſoner in the Guildhall of Norwich, after Chriſtian Exhortation, asked him if he did fear Death when the Biſhop gave Judgment againſt him, conſidering the Terror of the ſame; and the ſaid Noyes anſwered, he thanked God he feared Death no more at that Time, than he or any other did, being at Liberty. Then the ſaid Nicholas required him to ſhew the Cauſe of his Condemnation. Upon which Requeſt the ſaid John Noyes writ with his own Hand as followeth:

I ſaid, that I could not believe, that in the Sacrament of the Altar there is the natural Body of Chriſt, that ſame Body that was born of the Virgin Mary. But I ſaid, that the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Chriſt is received of Chriſtian People in the Remembrance of Chriſt's Death, as a ſpiritual Food, if it be miniſtred according to Chriſt's Inſtitution.

But they ſaid, I could not tell what ſpiritual meant.

The Biſhop ſaid, that the Sacrament was God, and muſt be worſhipped as God. So ſaid the Chancellor alſo.

Then anſwered I, my Lord, I cannot ſo believe.

Then (ſaid the Biſhop) why? then ſay thou doſt believe. Notwithſtanding theſe Colluſions could not prevail.

Now being condemned, he was ſent again from Norwich to Eye-priſon, and upon the 21ſt Day of September about Midnight, he was brought from Eye to Laxefield to be burned, and on the next Morning was brought to the Stake, where was ready againſt his coming, the aforeſaid Juſtice Mr. Thurſton, one Mr. Waller then being Under-ſheriff, and Mr. Thomas Lovel being High-conſtable, as is before expreſſed, who commanded Men to make ready all Things meet for that ſinful Purpoſe. Now the Fire in moſt Places of the Street was put out, ſaving a Smoak was eſpied by the ſaid Thomas Lovel proceeding out from the Top of a Chimney, to which Houſe the Sheriff and Grannow his Man went, and brake open the Door, and thereby got Fire, and brought the ſame to the Place of Execution. When John Noyes came to the Place where he ſhould be burned, he kneeled down and ſaid the 50th Pſalm, with other Prayers, and then they making haſte bound him to the Stake, and being bound, the ſaid John Noyes ſaid, Fear not them that can kill the Body, but fear him that can kill both Body and Soul, and caſt into everlaſting Fire.

When he ſaw his Siſter weeping and making moan for him, he bade her that ſhe ſhould not weep for him, but weep for her Sins.

Then one Nicholas Cadman brought a Fagot and ſet againſt him; and the ſaid John Noyes took up the Fagot and kiſſed it and ſaid; bleſſed be the Time that ever I was born to come to this.

Then he delivered his Pſalter to the Under-ſheriff, deſiring him to be good to his Wife and Children, and to deliver to her that ſame Book; and the Sheriff promiſed him that he would, notwithſtanding he never as yet performed his Promiſe. Then the ſaid John Noyes ſaid to the People, they ſay they can make God of a Piece of Bread, believe them not.

Then ſaid he; good People, bear Witneſs that I do believe to be ſaved by the Merits and Paſſion of Jeſus Chriſt, and not by mine own Deeds; and ſo the Fire was kindled, and burned about him, then he ſaid; Lord have Mercy upon me. Chriſt have Mercy upon me. Son of David have Mercy upon me..

And ſo he yielded up his Life, and when his Body was burned, they made a Pit to bury the Coals and Aſhes, and amongſt the ſame they found one of his Feet that was unburned, whole up to the Ancle with the Hoſe on, and that they buried with the reſt.

Now while he was a burning, there ſtood one John Jarvis by, a Servant in the ſame Town, a plain Fellow, which ſaid; good Lord, how the Sinews of his Arms ſhrink up. And there ſtood behind him Grannow and Bennet, the Sheriff's Men, and they told their Maſter, that John Jarvis ſaid, what villain Wretches are theſe? And their Maſter ordered them to apprehend him, and they took him and pinioned him, and carried him before the Juſtice that ſame Day, and the Juſtice did examine him of the Words aforeſaid, but he denied them, and anſwered that he ſaid nothing but this, Good Lord, how the Sinews of his Arms ſhrink up. But for all this the Juſtice did bind his Father and his Maſter in 5 l. a-piece, that he ſhould be forth coming at all Times. And on the Wedneſday next he was brought again before the Juſtices, Mr. Thurſton and Mr. Kene, they ſitting at Freſingfield in Hoxton Hundred, and there they did appoint and command, that the ſaid John Jarvis ſhould be ſet in the Stocks the next Market-day, and whipt about the Market naked. But his Maſter, one William Jarvis did after crave Friendſhip of the Conſtables, and they did not ſet him in the Stocks till Sunday Morning, and in the Afternoon they did whip him about the Market with a Dog-whip, having three Cords, and ſo they let him go.

The Martyrdom of Cicely Ormes, at Norwich.

ABout the 23d Day of the ſaid Month of September, next after the others above-mention'd, ſuffered at Norwich, Cicely Ormes Wife of Edmund Ormes Worſted-weaver, dwelling in St. Lawrence Pariſh in Norwich; ſhe being of the Age of thirty-two or more, was taken at the Death of Simon Miller and Elizabeth Cooper above-mentioned, in a Place called Lollards-pit without Biſhopſgate, at the ſaid Norwich, for that ſhe ſaid ſhe would pledge them of the ſame Cup that they drank of. For ſo ſaying, one Mr. Corbet of Sprowſon by Norwich, took her and ſent her to the Chancellor. When ſhe came before him, he asked her what ſhe ſaid unto the Sacrament of Chriſt's Body. And ſhe ſaid, ſhe did believe that it was the Sacrament of the Body of Chriſt. Yea, ſaid the Chancellor, but what is that that the Prieſt holdeth over his Head? ſhe anſwered him and ſaid, it is Bread: And if you make it any better, it is worſe. At which Words the Chancellor ſent her to the Biſhop's Priſon to the Keeper called Fellow, with many Threatnings and hot Words, as a Man being in great Rage.

The 23d of July ſhe was called before the Chancellor again, who ſat in Judgment with Mr. Bridges and others. The Chancellor offered her, if ſhe would go to the Church and keep her Tongue, ſhe ſhould be at Liberty, and believe as ſhe would. But ſhe told him ſhe would not conſent to his wicked Deſire therein, do with her what he would; for if ſhe ſhould, ſhe ſaid, God would ſurely plague her. Then the Chancellor told her, he had ſhewed more Favour to her, than ever he did to any, and that he was loth to condemn her, conſidering that ſhe was an ignorant, unlearned, and fooliſh Woman. But ſhe, not weighing his Words, told him, if he did, he ſhould not be ſo deſirous of her ſinful Fleſh, as ſhe would (by God's Grace) be content to give it in ſo good a Quarrel. Then he aroſe and read the bloody Sentence of Condemnation againſt her, and ſo delivered her to the ſecular Power of the Sheriffs of the City, Mr. Thomas Sutherton, and Mr. Leonard Sutherton Brethren, who immediately carried her to Guild-hall in Norwich, where ſhe remained until her Death.

This Cicely Ormes was a very ſimple Woman, but yet zealous in the Lord's Cauſe, being born in Eaſt Deram, and was the Daughter of one Thomas Haund, Taylor. She was taken the fifth Day of July, and did for a Twelvemonth before ſhe was taken recant, but never after was ſhe quiet in Conſcience, until ſhe was utterly driven from all their Popery. Between the Time that ſhe recanted, and that ſhe was taken, ſhe had gotten a Letter made to give to the Chancellor, to let him know that ſhe repented her Recantation from the Bottom of her Heart, and would never do the like again while ſhe lived. But before ſhe exhibited her Bill, ſhe was taken and ſent to Priſon as is before ſaid. She was burnt the 23d of September, between ſeven and eight in the Morning, the ſaid two Sheriffs being there, and to the Number of two hundred People. When ſhe came to the Stake, ſhe kneeled down, and made her Prayers to God: That being done, ſhe roſe up and ſaid, Good People, I believe in God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghoſt, three Perſons and one God. This do I not, nor will I recant; but I recant utterly from the Bottom of my Heart the Doings of the Pope of Rome, and all his popiſh Prieſts I utterly refuſe, and never will have to do with them again by God's Grace. And good People, I would you ſhould not think of me, that I believe to be ſaved in that I offer myſelf here unto the Death for the Lord's Cauſe, but I believe to be ſaved by the Death and Paſſion of Chriſt; and this my Death is and ſhall be a Witneſs of my Faith unto you all here preſent. Good People, as many of you as believe as I believe, pray for me.

Then ſhe came to the Stake, and laid her Hand on it, and ſaid, Welcome the Croſs of Chriſt. Which being done, ſhe looking on her Hand, and ſeeing it blacked with the Stake, ſhe wiped it upon her Smock, for ſhe was burnt at the ſame Stake that Simon Miller and Elizabeth Cooper was. Then after ſhe had touched it with her Hand, ſhe came and kiſſed it, and ſaid, Welcome the ſweet Croſs of Chriſt, and ſo gave herſelf to be bound thereto. After the Tormentors had kindled the Fire to her, ſhe ſaid, My Soul doth magnify the Lord, and my Spirit rejoiceth in God my Saviour: And in ſaying ſo ſhe ſet her Hands together right againſt her Breaſt, caſting her Eyes and Head upward, and ſo ſtood, heaving up her Hands by little and little, till the very Sinews of her Arms did break aſunder, and then they fell; but ſhe yielded her Life unto God, as quietly as if ſhe had been in a Slumber, or as one feeling no Pain; ſo wonderfully did the Lord work with her; his Name therefore be praiſed for evermore, Amen.

After the Death and Martyrdom of Mrs. Joyce Lewes, a little above ſpecified, diverſe good Men and Women in the ſame Town of Lichfield were had up before the Biſhop and his Chancellor, for kiſſing the ſaid Joyce Lewes, and drinking with her about the Time of her Death; the Names of which Perſons were theſe; Joan Love, Elizabeth Smith, Margaret Biddel, Helene Bouring, Margaret Cootesfote, Nicholas Bird, John Hariſtone and his Wife, Agnes Glyn, Agnes Glover, Agnes Penifather, &c. Theſe with others were produced to their Examination before the Biſhop and his Chancellor for the Cauſe abovenamed, and therefore adjudged for Hereticks, becauſe they did pray and drink with the ſaid Mrs. Lewes, but eſpecially Agnes Penifather ſuſtained the moſt Trouble, for that ſhe accompanied the ſaid Joyce Lewes going to her Death. Which Agnes being examined further of the ſaid Biſhop, what Words ſhe had ſpoken to two Prieſts of the Church of Lichfield, called John Ady, and James Fox, concerning the ſaid Joyce Lewes after her burning, ſaid, as followeth, That ſhe being asked by the ſaid two Prieſts being at her Father's Houſe in the City of Lichfield, at ſuch Time as ſhe came from the burning of the ſaid Joyce Lewes, why ſhe the ſaid Agnes did weep for ſuch an Heretick, meaning Joyce Lewes, whoſe Soul they ſaid was in Hell; the ſaid Agnes Penifather to their Demand made this Anſwer, That ſhe thought the ſaid bleſſed Martyr to be in better Caſe than the ſaid two Prieſts were.

With which Words being charged, and deſired to ſubmit herſelf as the others had done above rehearſed to ſuch Penance as they ſhould enjoyn unto her, ſhe refuſed ſo to do, and therefore was commanded to cloſe Priſon, the Sheriffs being charged with her under Pain of a hundred Pounds, that none ſhould have any Acceſs unto her. At length, at the Perſuaſion of her Friends ſhe was compelled to do as the others had done before. And thus much concerning Things done at Lichfield.

And now from Lichfield to come to Chicheſter, altho' we have but little to report thereof, for want of certain Relation and Records of that Country, yet it ſeemeth no little Trouble and Perſecution to have there raged alſo, as in other Countries. For what Place was there almoſt in all the Realm, where the Pope's Miniſters did not beſtir them, murdering ſome or other, as in the Acts of this eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory may ſufficiently appear? Wherefore as this Plague of the Pope's Tyranny was general to all other People and Countries of England, ſo likewiſe in the Dioceſs of Chicheſter, divers and many there were condemned and martyred for the true Teſtimony of Righteouſneſs within the Compaſs of Queen Mary's Reign. In the Number of whom were theſe: John Foreman of Eſtgreneſted. John Warner of Berne. Chriſtian Grover of the Archdeaconry of Lewes. Thomas Athoth, Prieſt. Tho. Avington of Erdingly. Dennis Burgis of Buxſted. Thomas Ravenſdale of Rie. John Milles of Hellinglegh. Nicholas Holden of Withiam. John Hart of Withiam. Margery Morice of Hethfield. Anne Try of Eſtgreneſted. John Oſeward of Woodmancote. Thomas Harland of Woodmancote. James Morice of Hethfield. Thomas Dougate of Eſtgreneſted. John Aſhedon of Katherfield.

The greateſt Actor againſt theſe faithful Martyrs, were theſe: Chriſtopherſon the Biſhop of Chicheſter, Richard Briefly, Doctor of Law, and Chancellor of Chicheſter, Robert Taylor Batchelor of the Law, his Deputy, Thomas Paccard Civilian, Anth. Clarke, Albane Longdale Batchellor of Divinity, &c.

The Examination of Thomas Spurdance, before the Chancellor of Norwich.

THE Biſhop's Chancellor asked me if I had been with the Prieſt, and confeſſed my Sins unto him.

And I ſaid, No, I had confeſſed my Sins to God, and God ſaith, In what Hour ſoever a Sinner repenteth and is ſorry for his Sins, and asketh Forgiveneſs, willing no more ſo to do, he will no more reckon his Sin unto him, and that is ſufficient for me.

Then ſaid the Chancellor, thou denieſt the Sacrament of Penance.

I ſaid, I deny not Penance, but I deny that I ſhould ſhew my Sins unto the Prieſt.

Then ſaid the Chancellor, that is a denying of the Sacrament of the Penance.

Write this Article.

Have you received the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar (ſaid he) at this Time of Eaſter?

And I ſaid, No.

And why have you not, ſaith he?

I ſaid, I dare not meddle with you in it, as you uſe it.

Why, do we not uſe it truly, ſaid he?

I ſaid, No: For the holy Supper of the Lord ſerveth for the Chriſtian Congregation, and you are none of Chriſt's Members: And therefore I dare not meddle with you, leſt I be like unto you.

Why are we none of Chriſt's Members, ſaid the Chancellor?

I ſaid, Becauſe you teach Laws contrary to God's Laws.

What Laws are thoſe, ſaid he?

I ſaid, Theſe three Articles that you ſwear the People unto here, be falſe and untrue, and you do evil to ſwear the People unto them.

Then, ſaid he, good People take no Heed unto his Words; for he is an Heretick, and teacheth you Diſobedience: And ſo he would no more ſpeak of that Matter.

Then ſaid he, How believeſt thou in the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar: Doſt thou not believe that after it is conſecrated, it is the very ſame Body that was born of the Virgin Mary?

I ſaid, No, not the ſame Body in Subſtance; for the ſame Body hath a Subſtance in Fleſh, Blood, and Bones, and was a bloody Sacrifice, and this is a dry Sacrifice.

And I ſaid, Is the Maſs a Sacrifice?

Unto which a Doctor anſwered that ſate by him, It is a Sacrifice both for the Quick and the Dead.

Then ſaid I, No, it is no Sacrifice; for St. Paul ſaith, that Chriſt made one Sacrifice once for all: And I do believe in none other Sacrifice, but only in that one Sacrifice that our Lord Jeſus Chriſt made once for all.

Then ſaid the Doctor, That Sacrifice that Chriſt made, was a wet Sacrifice, and the Maſs is a dry Sacrifice.

Then ſaid I, that ſame dry Sacrifice is a Sacrifice of your own making, and it is your Sacrifice, it is none of mine.

Then ſaid the Chancellor, He is an Heretick, he denieth the Sacrament of the Altar.

Then ſaid I, Will ye know how I believe in the holy Supper of our Lord?

And he ſaid, Yea.

Then ſaid I, I believe that if I come rightly and worthily as God hath commanded me, to the holy Supper of the Lord, I receive him by Faith, by believing in him. But the Bread being received is not God, nor the Bread that is yonder in the Pyx is not God. God dwelleth not in Temples made with Hands, neither will be worſhipped with the Works of Men's Hands. And therefore you do very evil to cauſe the People to kneel down and worſhip the Bread; for God did never bid you hold it above your Heads, neither had the Apoſtles ſuch Uſe.

Then ſaid the Chancellor, He denieth the Preſence in the Sacrament. Write this Article alſo. He is a very Heretick.

Then ſaid I, The Servant is not greater than his Maſter. For your Predeceſſors killed my Maſter Chriſt, the Prophets and Apoſtles, and holy virtuous Men, and now you alſo kill the Servant of Chriſt, ſo that all the righteous Blood that hath been ſhed, even from righteous Abel, until this Day, ſhall be required at your Hands.

Well, ſaid the Chancellor, have him away.

Another Examination of Spurdance, before the Biſhop in his Houſe.

Biſhop. SIrrah, doſt thou not believe in the Catholick Faith of the holy Church?

Spurd. I believe Chriſt's Catholick Church.

Biſhop. Yea in Chriſt's Church, of which the Pope is the Head? Doſt thou not believe that the Pope is ſupream Head of the Catholick Church?

Spurd. No. I believe not he ſhould be above the Apoſtles, if he take them to be his Predeceſſors. For when there came a Thought among the Apoſtles, who ſhould be the greateſt when their Maſter was gone, Chriſt anſwered them unto their Thoughts, Luke 22. The Kings of the Earth bear Dominion above other, but ye ſhall not ſo do, for he that will be greateſt among you ſhall become Servant unto you all. How is it then (ſaid I) that he will climb ſo high above his Fellows? And alſo we were ſworn in my Maſter King Henry's Time, that we ſhould to the utmoſt of our Power, never conſent to him again. And therefore as he hath nothing to do here in England, ſo neither in his own Country more, then a Biſhop hath in his Dioceſs.

Biſh. Yea, what of that? we were then in Error and Sin, now we are in the right Way again, and therefore thou muſt come home again with us, and acknowledge thy Fault, and become a Chriſtian Man, and be ſworn unto the Pope as our ſupreme Head. Wilt thou be ſworn unto the Pope? How ſayeſt thou?

Spurd. No, I watrant you, by the Grace of God not as long as I live. For you cannot prove by the Scripture that the Pope is Head of the Church, and may do therein what he liſteth.

Biſh. No, yes I trow: For as the Belweather which weareth the Bell, is Head of the Flock of Sheep, even ſo is the Pope the Head of the Church of Chriſt. And as the Bees in the Hive have a Maſter-bee, when they are gone out, to bring them home again to the Hive: even ſo the Pope when we be gone aſtray and wandred from the Fold, from the Hive, &c. then is ordained our Head by Succeſſion of Peter, to bring us home again to the true Church; as thou now, my good Fellow, haſt wandred long out of the Way like a ſcattered Sheep, &c. hear therefore that Belweather, the Maſter-bell, &c. and come home with us to thy Mother the Church again.

Spurd. My Lord, all this is but natural Reaſon, and no Scripture: But ſince ye cannot prove the Pope to be authoriz'd by Scripture, ye anſwer not me as I thought ye would.

Biſh. Ha, I ſee well ye be ſtout, and will not be anſwered: therefore ye ſhall be compelled by Law whether ye will or no.

Spurd. My Lord, ſo did your Forefathers intreat Chriſt and his Apoſtles. They had a Law, and by their Law they put him to death; and ſo likewiſe, you have a Law which is Tyranny, and by that would you enforce me to believe as you do: But the Lord I truſt will aſſiſt me againſt all your beggarly Ceremonies, and make your Fooliſhneſs known to all the World one Day.

Biſh. When were ye at Church and went in Proceſſion, and did the Ceremonies of the Church?

Spurd. Never ſince I was born.

Biſh. No! how old are you?

Spurd. I think about forty.

Biſh. Why, how did you uſe yourſelf at Church twenty Years ago?

Spur. As you do now.

Biſh. And even now, you ſaid you did not uſe the Ceremonies ſince you were born.

Spurd. No more I did, ſince I was born anew; as Chriſt ſaid unto Nicodemus, Except ye be born anew, ye cannot enter into the Kingdom of Heaven.

Then ſaid a Doctor that ſate by, he is a very Anabaptiſt; for that is their Opinion plain.

No, Sir, you ſay falſly, ſaid I; for I am no Anabaptiſt: For they deny Children to be baptiſed, and ſo do not I.

Biſh. Well, why doſt thou not go to the Church, and do the Ceremonies?

Spurd. Becauſe they be contrary to God's Word and Laws, as you yourſelf have taught: But now you ſay it is good again: And I think if there were a Return To-morrow, you would ſay that falſe again which you hold now. Therefore, I may well ſay, there is no Truth in you.

Biſh. Then thou art a ſtubborn Fellow, and an Heretick, and a Traytor.

Spurd. No, I am no Traytor, for I have done I think, better Service in the Crown Imperial of England, than you.

Biſh. If you have done ſo good Service, you would be obedient to the Laws of the Realm.

Spurd. So I am. There is no Man alive, I thank God, that can accuſe me juſtly that ever I was diſobedient to any civil Laws. But you muſt conſider my Lord, that I have a Soul and a Body, and my Soul is none of the Queen's, but my Body and my Goods are the Queen's. And I muſt give God my Soul, and all that belongeth unto it, that is, I muſt do the Laws and Commandments of God; and whoſoever commandeth Laws contrary to God's Laws, I may not do them for loſing of my Soul, but muſt rather obey God than Man.

Biſh. Why doſt thou not theſe Laws then? Are they not agreeable to God's Law?

Spurd. No you cannot prove them to be God's Laws.

Biſh. Yes, that I can.

Spurd. Then if you can prove by the Word of God that you ſhould have any graven Images made to ſet in your Church for Laymens Books, or to worſhip God by them, or that you ſhould have any Ceremonies in your Church as you have, prove them by the Word of God, and I will do them.

Biſh. Then it is a good and decent Order to furniſh the Church: As when you ſhall go to Dinner, you have a Cloth upon the Table to furniſh the Table before the Meat ſhall come upon it; ſo are theſe Ceremonies a comely, decent Order to be in the Church among Chriſtian People.

Spurd. Theſe are Inventions and Imaginations out of your own Brain, without any Word of God to prove them. For God ſaith, Look what you think good in your own Eyes, if I command the contrary, it is abominable in my Sight. And theſe Ceremonies are againſt God's Laws. For St. Paul ſaith, they be weak and beggarly, and rebuketh the Galatians for doing them.

Biſh. Well, if you will not do them, ſeeing they be the Laws of the Realm, you are an Heretick and Diſobedient: And therefore come home again and confeſs your Faults with us, that you have been in Error, &c. Will you do ſo?

Spurd. No, I have been in no Error: For the ſpiritual Laws were never more truly ſet forth than in my Maſter King Edward's Time, and I truſt unto God I ſhall never leave them while I live.

Then came a Gentleman to me and ſaid, are ye wiſer than all Men? and have ye more Knowledge than all Men, will ye caſt away your Soul willingly? My Lord and other Men alſo, would fain you would ſave yourſelf: Therefore chuſe ſome Man where you will, either ſpiritual or temporal, and take a Day, my Lord will give it you.

Spurd. If I ſave my Life, I ſhall loſe it; and if I loſe my Life for Chriſt's Sake, I ſhall find it in Life everlaſting. And if I take a Day, when the Day cometh, I muſt ſay then even as I do now, except I will lie, and therefore that needeth not.

Well, then have him away, ſaid the Biſhop.

This above-named Thomas Spurdance, was one of Queen Mary's Servants, and was taken by two of his Fellows, the ſaid Queen's Servants, named John Haman, otherwiſe called Barker, and Geerge Looſon, both dwelling in Codman in the County of Suffolk, who carried him to one Mr. Goſnal dwelling in the ſaid Codman, and by him he was ſent to Bury, where he remained in Priſon, and afterwards burned in the Month of November.

The Martyrdom of John Hallingdale, William Sparrow, and Richard Gibſon.

SOON after the Martyrdom of the two good Women at Colcheſter, the three above-mentioned Perſons were put to Death in Smithfield at London, the 18th of November.

They were brought before Bonner, Biſhop of London, Nov. 5. 1557. who objected to them ſundry Articles; but as they contain only ſuch common Matters as are already in divers Places mention'd before, I do here omit them.

The laſt Day that John Hallingdale was before Biſhop Bonner, he would have perſuaded him to recant with ſome wreſted Sentences of the Scripture; to whom Hallingdale anſwered, Becauſe I will not come to your Babylonical Church, therefore you go about to condemn me. And being further demanded by Biſhop Bonner, whether he would perſevere and ſtand in his Opinions or no: He made Anſwer, that he would continue and perſiſt in them unto the Death. Then Bonner read the Sentence of Condemnation.

Upon the ſame Day, William Sparrow was brought before the Biſhop, and being asked by him, whether he ſtill perſiſted and continued in his Opinions: He made Anſwer, that he would not go from them; and adding thereunto, he ſaid, That which you call Hereſy, ſpeaking to the Biſhop, is good and godly, and if every Hair of my Head were a Man, ſaid he, I would burn them all, rather than go from the Truth.

Then being demanded what Ground of Learning he had to cleave to his Opinions: He made Anſwer and ſaid, That all the Laws now uſed (meaning the eccleſiaſtical Laws) are naught and abominable. Which Words being ſpoken, the Biſhop immediately read the Sentence of Condemnation upon him, and ſo delivered him to the ſecular Power, by whom he was ſent to Priſon again.

Richard Gibſon ſuffered alſo with the two already mentioned, who being finally brought to the Biſhop's Conſiſtory Court, the Biſhop, after other Matter of Communication, asked him, if he knew any Cauſe why the Sentence ſhould not be read againſt him. To whom Mr. Gibſon anſwered, that the Biſhop had nothing whereof juſtly to condemn him. The Biſhop's Reaſon was again objected to him, that Men ſaid he was an evil Man. To whom Gibſon replying again; Yea, ſaith he, and ſo may I ſay of you alſo. To be ſhort, after this and ſuch other Talk, the Biſhop haſted unto the Sentence. Which being read, Gibſon yet again admoniſhed him to remember himſelf, and to ſave his Soul, ſaid, That he would not hear the Biſhop's Babling; and ſaid moreover, boldly proteſting and affirming that he was contrary, and an Enemy to them all in his Mind and Opinion, although he had before kept it ſecret in Mind, for Fear of the Law. And ſpeaking to the Biſhop, Bleſſed, ſaid he, am I, that am curſed at your Hands. We have nothing now, but thus will I: For as the Biſhop ſaith ſo muſt it be. And no Hereſy it is to turn the Truth of God's Word into Lies, and that do you, meaning the Biſhop and his Fellows.

Thus this valiant Soldier, fighting for the Goſpel and ſincere Doctrine of Chriſt's Truth and Religion, againſt Falſhood and Error, was committed, with his Fellows, to the ſecular Power.

And ſo theſe three pious Men, John Hallingdale, William Sparrow, and Mr. Gibſon, being thus appointed to the Slaughter, were the twelfth Day after their Condemnation (which was the eighteenth Day of November) burnt in Smithfield. And being brought thither to the Stake, after their Prayer made, they were bound thereunto with Chains, and Wood ſet unto them, and after Wood, Fire, in which being compaſſed about, and the fiery Flames conſuming their Fleſh, at laſt they yielded glorioufly and joyfully their Souls and Lives into the holy Hands of the Lord.

The Death of John Rough, Miniſter, and Margaret Mearing, burned at London, December 22.

John Rough was born in Scotland, who becauſe ſome of his Kinſfolk would have kept him from his Right of Inheritance which he had to certain Lands, did at the Age of ſeventeen Years, in deſpight (and rather to diſpleaſe his Friends) profeſs himſelf into the Order of the black Frier at Sterling in Scotland; where he remained the Space of ſixteen Years, until ſuch Time as the Lord Hamilton, Earl of Arran, and Governour of the Realm of Scotland (caſting a Favour unto him) did uſe unto the Archbiſhop of St. Andrews, to have him out of his profeſſed Order, that as a ſecular Prieſt he might ſerve him for his Chaplain. At which Requeſt the Archbiſhop cauſed the Provincial of that Houſe, having thereto Authority, to diſpenſe with him for his Habit and Order.

This Suit being thus obtained by the Earl, the ſaid Rough remained in his Service, one whole Year: During which Time it pleaſed God to open his Eyes, and to give him ſome Knowledge of his Truth, and thereupon was by the ſaid Governor ſent to preach in the Freedom of Ayre, where he continued four Years, and then after the Death of the Cardinal of Scotland, he was appointed to abide at St. Andrews, and there had aſſigned unto him a yearly Penſion of 20*l.* from Henry VIII, King of England. Howbeit, at laſt weighing with himſelf his own Danger, and alſo abhorring the Superſtition of the Country, and hearing of the Freedom of the Goſpel within this Realm of England, he determined with himſelf not to tarry any longer there: And therefore, ſoon after the Battle of Muſcleborough, he came firſt unto Carliſle, and from thence unto the Duke of Somerſet, then Lord Protector of England, and by his Aſſignment had appointed unto him out of the King's Treaſury 20*l.* of yearly Stipend, and was ſent (as a Preacher) to ſerve at Carliſle, Barwick, and Newcaſtle, where he married. From whence he was called by the Archbiſhop of York that then was, unto a Benefice in the Town of Hull, where he continued till the Death of good King Edward VI.

But in the Beginning of the Reign of Queen Mary (perceiving the Alteration of Religion, and the Perſecution that would thereupon ariſe, and feeling his own Weakneſs) he fled with his Wife into Frizeland, and dwelt there at a Place called Norden, labouring truly for his Living, in knitting of Caps, Hoſe, and ſuch like Things, till about the End of the Month of October, before his Death. At which Time, lacking Yarn, and other ſuch neceſſary Proviſion for the Maintenance of his Occupation, he came over again into England, here to provide for the ſame, and the tenth Day of November arrived at London. Where, hearing of the ſecret Society, and holy Congregation of God's Children there aſſembled, he joined himſelf unto them, and afterwards being elected their Miniſter and Preacher, did continue moſt virtuouſly exerciſed in that godly Fellowſhip, teaching and confirming them in the Truth of the Goſpel of Chriſt. But in the End the twelfth Day of December, he with Cuthbert Symſon and others, through the Suggeſtion of a diſſembling Brother, named Roger Sergeant, a Taylor, were apprehended by the Vice-chamberlain of the Queen's Houſe, at the Saracen's-Head in Iſlington; where the Congregation had then purpoſed to aſſemble themſelves to their accuſtomed Exerciſes of Prayer, and hearing the Word of God: Which Pretence, for the Safeguard of all the reſt, they yet at their Examinations covered and excuſed, by hearing of a Play that was then appointed to be at that Place. The Vice-chamberlain, after he had apprehended them, carried Rough and Simſon unto the Council, who charged them to have aſſembled together to celebrate the Communion or Supper of the Lord, and therefore after ſundry Examinations they ſent them unto the Biſhop of London.

Bonner minding to make quick Diſpatch with them, within three Days after their Arrival, ſent for Rough out of Newgate, to be examined before him and others; when they perceived his Conſtancy, determined the next Day after to bring him openly into the Conſiſtory, there to adjudge and condemn him as an Heretick. Which Purpoſe they accompliſhed: For the twentieth Day in the Afternoon, in the Preſence of the Biſhop of London, and St. David's, with Feckenam, Abbot of Weſtminſter, and others, he was there produced. Where, after many Perſuaſions Bonner read unto him the Articles and Anſwers, in which they charged him to have received the Orders of the Church, and therefore might not marry; and that he had refuſed to conſent to the Latin Service then uſed in the Church. Whereunto he then anſwered and ſaid, That their Orders were nothing at all, and that he being a Prieſt, might lawfully marry, and that the Children which he had by his Wife were lawful. And concerning the Service then uſed, he utterly deteſted it, ſaying, That if he ſhould live as long as did Methuſelah, yet he would never come to the Church to hear the abominable Maſs and other Service being as it was then. Upon which Words the Biſhop proceeded to the Degradation of the ſaid Rough, and after condemning him as an Heretick, committed his Body to the ſecular Power, who taking him into their Cuſtody, carried him unto Newgate.

Moreover, as touching the ſaid Mr. Rough, this is further to be noted, that he being in the North Country in the Days of King Edward VI, was the Cauſe of ſaving Dr. Watſon's Life (who in Queen Mary's ry's Days was Biſhop of Lincoln) for a Sermon that he had preached there. The ſaid Watſon after that, being with Bonner at the Examination of the ſaid Mr. Rough, to requite him in ſaving his Life, detected him there to be a pernicious Heretick, who did more Hurt in the North Parts than an hundred beſides of his Opinion. Unto whom Mr. Rough ſaid, Why, Sir, is this the Reward I have for ſaving your Life, when you preached erroneous Doctrine in the Days of Edward VI? This Mr. Rough ſaid, he had lived thirty Years, and yet had never bowed his Knee to Baal; and being before Bonner, among other Talk, he affirmed, that he had been twice at Rome, and there had ſeen plainly with his Eyes, which he had many Times heard of before, namely, that the Pope was the very Antichriſt; for there he ſaw him carried on Mens Shoulders, and the falſe-named Sacrament born before him. Yet there was more Reverence given to him, than to that which they counted to be their God. When Bonner heard this, riſing up, and making as tho' he would have torn his Garment, Haſt thou, ſaid he, been at Rome, and ſeen our holy Father the Pope, and doſt thou blaſpheme him after this ſort; and with flying upon him, he plucked off a Piece of his Beard, and after making ſpeedy Haſte to his Death, he burnt him half an Hour before ſix of the Clock in the Morning, becauſe the Day belike ſhould not be far ſpent, before he had done a miſchievous Deed.

Margaret Mearing, Martyr.

IT is before declared, that in the Company of John Rough, was burned one Margaret Mearing, who, as the Regiſter maketh mention, was at one Time and Day brought with the ſaid Rough forth to Examination: Where the Biſhop having no private Matters to charge her withal, did the 18th Day of December object againſt her thoſe common and accuſtomed Articles mentioned before. To which ſhe anſwered as follows.

1. That there is here in Earth a Catholick Church, and that there is the true Faith of Chriſt obſerved and kept in the ſame Church.

2. Item, That there were only two Sacraments in the Church, namely, the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Chriſt, and the Sacrament of Baptiſm.

3. Item, That ſhe was baptized in the Faith, and Belief of the ſaid Church, renouncing there, by her Godfathers and Godmothers, the Devil and all his Works, &c.

4. Item, That when ſhe came to the Age of 14 Years, ſhe did not know what her true Belief was, becauſe ſhe was not then of Diſcretion to underſtand the ſame, neither yet was taught it.

5. Item, That ſhe had not gone from the catholick Faith at any Time; but ſhe ſaid that the Maſs was abominable before the Sight of God, and before the Sight of all true Chriſtian People, and that it is the plain Cup of Fornication, and the Whore of Babylon. And as concerning the Sacrament of the Altar, ſhe ſaid, ſhe believed there was no ſuch Sacrament in the catholick Church. Alſo ſhe ſaid, that ſhe utterly abhorred the Authority of the Biſhop of Rome, with all the Religion obſerved in the ſame Antichriſts Church.

6. Item, She anſwered to the ſixth Article, as to the firſt, before ſpecified.

7. Item, That ſhe hath refuſed to come to her Pariſh-church, becauſe the true Religion of Chriſt was not then uſed in the ſame: And further ſaid, That ſhe had not come unto the Church by the Space of one Year and three quarters then laſt paſt, neither yet did mean any more to come unto the ſame in theſe idolatrous Days.

8. Item, As touching the Manner of her Apprehenſion, ſhe ſaid, That Cluney, the Biſhop's Sumner, did fetch her to the Biſhop.

Theſe Anſwers being then regiſtred, they were again (with the ſaid Articles) propounded againſt her the twentieth Day of December, and there being demanded if ſhe would ſtand unto thoſe her Anſwers, ſhe ſaid, I will ſtand to them unto Death; for the very Angels of Heaven do laugh you to Scorn, to ſee your Abomination that you uſe in the Church. After which Words, the Biſhop pronounced the Sentence of Condemnation againſt her; and then delivering her unto the Sheriffs, ſhe was with the before-named John Rough carried unto Newgate. From whence they were both together led unto Smithfield, the 22d of December, and there moſt joyfully gave their Lives for the Profeſſion of Chriſt's Goſpel.

The Sufferings and cruel Torments of Cutbert Simſon.

Cutbert Simſon was a Man of a zealous Heart to Chriſt and his true Flock, inſomuch that he never ceaſed labouring, and ſtudying moſt earneſtly, not only how to preſerve them without Corruption of the popiſh Religion, but alſo his Care was very vigilant, how to keep them together without Peril or Danger of Perſecution. The Zeal, Patience, and Fidelity of this Man, in caring and providing for this Congregation, as it is not eaſily to be expreſſed; ſo it is wonderful to behold the Providence of the Lord, concerning the Troubles of this faithful Miniſter after his Apprehenſion, as here followeth wrote with his own Hand.

A true Report how he was uſed in the Tower of London, being ſent thither by the Council, the 13*th Day of* December.

ON the Thurſday after, I was called into the Warehouſe, before the Conſtable of the Tower, and the Recorder of London Mr. Cholmley; they commanded me to tell, whom I did will to come to the Engliſh Service. I anſwered, I would declare nothing. Whereupon I was ſet in a Rack of Iron, the Space of three Hours as I judged.

Then they asked me if I would tell them. I anſwered as before. Then was I looſed, and carried to my Lodging again. On the Sunday after I was brought into the ſame Place again before the Lieutenant and the Recorder of London, and they examined me. As before I had ſaid, I anſwered. Then the Lieutenant did ſwear by God I ſhould tell. Then did they bind my two Fore-fingers together, and put a ſmall Arrow betwixt them, and drew it thro' ſo faſt that the Blood followed, and the Arrow brake.

Then they racked me twice. Then was I carried to my Lodging again, and ten Days after the Lieutenant asked me if I would not confeſs that which they had before asked me. I ſaid, I had ſaid as much as I would. Then five Weeks after he ſent me unto the High-prieſt, where I was greatly aſſaulted, and at whoſe Hand I received the Pope's Curſe, for bearing Witneſs of the Reſurrection of Jeſus Chriſt. And thus I commend you unto God, and to the Word of his Grace, with all them that unfeignedly call upon the Name of Jeſus, deſiring God of his endleſs Mercy, through the Merits of his dear Son Jeſus Chriſt, to bring us all to his everlaſting Kingdom, Amen. I praiſe God for his great Mercy ſhewed upon us. Sing Hoſanna unto the Higheſt with me Cutbert Simſon. God forgive me my Sins. I ask all the World Forgiveneſs, and I do forgive all the World, and thus I leave this World, in hope of a joyful Reſurrection.

Hugh Foxe and John Deveniſh.

WITH Cutbert Simſon likewiſe was apprehended and alſo ſuffered Hugh Foxe and John Deveniſh; who being brought unto their Examinations with the ſaid Cutbert before Bonner Biſhop of London, March 19, had Articles and Interrogatories miniſtred to them by the ſaid Officer, the ſame in Subſtance as had been propounded to Bartlet Green, and other Martyrs already treated of.

The general Anſwers of Cutbert Simſon, Hugh Foxe, and John Deveniſh, to the Articles propoſed to them by the Biſhop.

TO the firſt Article they all anſwered affirmatively; but John Deveniſh added, That that Church is grounded upon the Prophets and Apoſtles, Chriſt being the head Corner-ſtone, and how in that Church there is the true Faith and Religion of Chriſt

To the ſecond Article they all confeſſed and believed, That in Chriſt's catholick Church there are but two Sacraments, namely, Baptiſm and the Supper of the Lord; otherwiſe they do not believe the Contents of this Article to be true in any Part thereof.

To the third, fourth and fifth Article they all anſwered affirmatively.

To the ſixth Article they all anſwered, and denied to acknowledge the Authority of the See of Rome to be lawful and good, either yet his Religion.

To the ſeventh Article they all anſwered affirmatively, that they have and will do ſtill while they live; and John Deveniſh adding thereto, ſaid that the Sacrament of the Altar, as it is now uſed, is no Sacrament at all.

To the eighth Article they all confeſſed, and believed all Things above by them acknowledged and declared to be true, and that they be of the Dioceſs of London, and Juriſdiction of the ſame.

Theſe three abovetnamed Perſons, Cutbert, Foxe and Deveniſh, as they were altogether apprehended at Iſlington, ſo they all three ſuffered together in Smithfield about the 28th Day of March in whoſe perfect Conſtancy the ſame Lord (in whoſe Cauſe and Quarrel they ſuffered) Giver of all Grace, and Governour of all Things, be exalted for ever, Amen.

The Martyrdom of William Nichol at Haverford-Weſt in Wales.

WE find in all Ages from the Beginning, that Satan hath not ceaſed at all Times to moleſt the Church of Chriſt with one Affliction or other, to the Trial of their Faith, but yet never ſo apparently at any Time to all the World, as when the Lord hath permitted him Power over the Bodies of his Saints to the ſhedding of their Blood, and perverting of their Religion; for then ſleepeth he not, I warrant you, from the murdering of the ſame, unleſs they will fall down with Ahab and Jezebel to worſhip him, and ſo kill and poiſon their own Souls eternally; as in theſe miſerable latter Days of Queen Mary we have felt, heard, and ſeen practiſed upon God's People. Among whom we find recorded an honeſt poor Man, named William Nichol, who was apprehended by the Champions of the Pope, for ſpeaking certain Words againſt the cruel Kingdom of Antichriſt, and the 9th Day of April, 1558, was burnt in Wales, ending his Life in a moſt happy and bleſſed State, glorioufly giving his Soul into the Hands of that God, whoſe Goodneſs be praiſed for ever, Amen.

This William Nichol (as we are informed) was ſo ſimple a good Soul, that many eſteemed him half fooliſh. But what he was in that reſpect we know not, but this we are ſure, that he died a good Man, and in a good Cauſe, whatſoever they judge of him. And the more Simplicity and Feebleneſs of Wit appeared in him, the more beaſtly and wretched doth it declare their cruel tyrannical Act therein. The Lord give them Repentance, if it be his bleſſed Will, Amen, Amen.

The Martyrdom of William Seaman, Thomas Carman, and Thomas Hudſon, at Norwich.

IMmediately after William Nichol, ſucceeded in that honourable Vocation of Martyrdom three Men at Norwich in Norfolk, who were cruelly put to Death for the true Teſtimony of Jeſus Chriſt, the 19th of May, 1558, whoſe Names be theſe; William Seaman, Thomas Carman, and Thomas Hudſon.

William Seaman was an Husbandman, of the Age of 26 Years, dwelling in Mendleſham, in the County of Suffolk, who was divers Times ſought for at the Command of Sir John Tyrrel, Knight, and at laſt he himſelf ſearched his Houſe and other Places for him; notwithſtanding he ſomewhat miſs'd of his Purpoſe, God be thanked. Then he gave Charge to his Servants, Robert Baulding and James Clarke, with others, to ſeek for him. Who, having no Officer, went in the Evening to his Houſe, he being at home, they took him and carry'd him to their Maſter Sir John Tyrrel. Who, when he came, asked him why he would not go to Maſs, and receive the Sacrament, and ſo to worſhip it: To which William Seaman anſwer'd (denying it to be a Sacrament) and ſaid it was an Idol, and therefore would not receive it. After which Words Sir John Tyrrel ſent him to Norwich to Hopton then Biſhop, and there after Conference had with him, the Biſhop read his Sentence of Condemnation againſt him; and afterward delivered him to the ſecular Power, who kept him to the Day of Martyrdom.

The ſaid William Seaman left behind him when he died, a Wife and three Children very young: And with the ſaid young Children his Wife was perſecuted out of the ſaid Town of Mendleſham, becauſe ſhe would not go to hear Maſs, and all her Corn and Goods ſeized and taken away by Mr. Chriſtopher Cole's Officers, he being Lord of the ſaid Town.

Thomas Carman being Priſoner in Norwich, was about one Time with the reſt examined and brought before the ſaid Biſhop, who anſwered no leſs in his Maſter's Cauſe than the others; and therefore had the like Reward that the others had, which was the Biſhop's bloody Bleſſing of Condemnation, and delivered alſo to the ſecular Power, who kept him with the others until the Day of Slaughter, which was not long after.

Thomas Hudſon was of Aileſham in Norfolk, by his Occupation a Glover, a very honeſt poor Man, having a Wife and three Children, labouring always diligently in his Vocation, being of 30 Years of Age, and bearing ſo good a Will to the Goſpel, that he in the Days of King Edward VI, learned to read Engliſh of Anthony and Thomas Norgate of the ſame Town, wherein he greatly profited about the Time of Alteration of Religion: For when Queen Mary came to reign, and had changed the Service in the Church, he then avoiding all their Ceremonies of Superſtition, abſented himſelf from his Houſe, and went into Suffolk a long Time, and there remained travelling from one Place to another, as Occaſion was offered. At laſt he returned back again to his Houſe at Aileſham, to comfort his Wife and Children, being grieved at his Abſence.

Now when he came home, and perceived his Continuance there would be dangerous, he and his Wife deviſed to make him a Place to hide himſelf in, where he remained for the Space of half a Year, and his Wife like an honeſt Woman being careful for him, uſed herſelf faithfully towards him.

In the mean Time came the Vicar of the Town and enquired of Thomas Hudſon's Wife for her Husband. Unto whom ſhe anſwered, as not knowing where he was. Then the ſaid Berry waxed angry, and threatned to burn her, becauſe ſhe would not tell where her Husband was. After that when Hudſon underſtood it, he grew every Day more zealous than other, and continually read and ſang Pſalms, the People openly reſorting to him, to hear his Exhortations and Prayers.

At laſt he walked abroad for certain Days openly in the Town, crying out continually againſt the Maſs and all their Trumpery, and in the end coming home in his Houſe, he ſate him down, having his Book by him, reading and ſinging Pſalms continually.

Then one John Crouch his next Neighbour went to the Conſtables, Robert Marſham and Robert Lawes in the Night, to certify them thereof: For Berry commanded openly to watch for him, and the Conſtables underſtanding the ſame, went to catch him at Break of Day, the 22d of April, 1558.

And when Hudſon ſaw them come in, he ſaid, Now mine Hour is come: Welcome Friends, welcome. You be they that ſhall lead me to Life in Chriſt. I thank God for it, and the Lord enable me thereto for his Mercies ſake. Then they took him and led him to Berry the Commiſſary, who was Vicar of the Town, and the ſaid Berry asked him firſt where he kept his Church for four Years before. To which the ſaid Hudſon anſwered thus, whereſoever he was, there was the Church.

Doſt thou not believe, ſaid Berry, in the Sacrament of the Altar? What is it?

Hudſon. It is Worms Meat: My Belief is in Chriſt crucified.

Berry. Doſt thou not believe the Maſs to put away Sins?

Hudſon. No, God forbid; it is a patched Monſter, and a diſguiſed Puppet, more tedious a piecing than ever was Solomon's Temple.

At which Words Berry ſtamped, fumed, and ſhewed himſelf as a Madman, and ſaid, Well, thou Villain; I will write to the Biſhop, my good Lord, and truſt unto it, thou ſhalt be handled according to thy Deſerts. O Sir, ſaid Hudſon, there is no Lord but God, though there be many Lords and many Gods. With that Berry thruſt him back with his Hand. And one Richard Cliffar ſtanding by, ſaid, I pray you, Sir, be good to the poor Man. At which Words Berry was more mad than before, and would have had Cliffar bound in a Recognizance of forty Pounds for his good Behaviour both in Word and Deed; but his Deſire took no Effect. Then he asked Hudſon whether he would recant, or not: To which Hudſon anſwer'd, The Lord forbid? I had rather die many Deaths than do ſo.

Then after long Talk, the ſaid Berry, ſeeing it to no Purpoſe to perſuade him, took his Pen and Ink, and wrote Letters to the Biſhop thereof, and ſent this Hudſon to Norwich bound like a Thief to him, which was eight Miles from thence, who went thither ſinging with Joy, as merry as ever he was in his Life before. He was a Month in Priſon, where he ſpent his Time in reading and invocating the Name of God.

Theſe three Chriſtians and conſtant Martyrs, William Seaman, Thomas Carman, and Thomas Hudſon, after they were condemned the 19th Day of May, 1558, were carried out of Priſon to the Place where they ſhould ſuffer, which was without Biſhopſgate at Norwich, called Lollard's Pit. And being all there, they made their humble Petitions to the Lord. That being done, they aroſe and went to the Stake, and ſtanding all there with their Chains about them, immediately Thomas Hudſon came forth from them under the Chain, to the great Surpriſe of all the Spectators; many doubted his Conſtancy, fearing he ſhould recant; others thought he wanted a Reprieve for further Conference; and ſome imagin'd he came forth to ask his Parents Bleſſing. In the midſt of this Confuſion his two Companions at the Stake did all they could to comfort and encourage him, exhorting him in the Bowels of Chriſt to be of good Chear, &c. But alas! he felt more in his Conſcience than they could conceive, for he was encompaſſed with intolerable Grief of Mind, not for Fear of Death, but for lack of an inward ſenſible Feeling of the Love of his Saviour: And therefore, being very careful, he humbly fell upon his Knees, and vehemently pray'd to God, who at laſt ſent him Comfort; and then he aroſe in Extaſy of Joy, as a new Man changed even from Death to Life, and ſaid; Now I thank God I am ſtrong, and care not what Man can do unto me. So going again to his Companions at the Stake, they all ſuffered Death moſt joyfully and manfully together.

About this Time Joan Seaman, Mother to the aforeſaid William Seaman, being of the Age of 66 Years, was perſecuted by the ſaid Sir John Tyrrel alſo, becauſe ſhe would not go to Maſs and receive againſt her Conſcience: Which good old Woman being from her Houſe, was glad ſome Time to lie in Buſhes, Groves, and Fields, and ſometimes in her Neighbour's Houſe when ſhe could. And her Husband being at home about the Age of 80 Years, fell ſick; and ſhe hearing thereof, with Speed returned home to her Houſe again, not regarding her Life, but conſidering her Duty, and ſhewed her Diligence to her Husband moſt faithfully till God took him away by Death. Then by God's Providence ſhe fell ſick alſo, and died in her own Houſe ſoon after. When one Mr. Symonds the Commiſſary heard of it, he (dwelling in a Town hard by called Thorndon) commanded that ſhe ſhould not have chriſtian Burial, and her Friends were compelled to lay her in a Pit under a Mote's-ſide.

A Woman called Mother Bennet, a Widow, who lived in the Town of Wetherſet near Mendleſham, was perſecuted out of the Town for not going to Maſs, but at laſt ſhe returned home again ſecretly to her Houſe, and there departed this Life joyfully. But Sir John Tyrrel and Maſter Symonds the Commiſſary would not let her be bury'd in the Church-yard. So was ſhe laid in a Grave by the Highway ſide.

This good old Woman met one of Mother Seaman's Neighbours, and asked her how Mother Seaman did; and the Neighbour anſwered, that ſhe did very well, God be thanked. O, ſaid Mother Bennet, Mother Seaman hath ſtepped a great Step before me; for ſhe was never covetous that I could perceive.

Her Husband in his Mirth would ſay unto her; O Woman, if thou wert ſparing, thou mighteſt have ſaved me an hundred Marks more than thou haſt. To which ſhe would gently anſwer; O Man, be content, and let us be thankful, for God hath given us enough, if we can ſee it. Alas, good Husband, would ſhe ſay, I tell you Truth, I cannot firken up my Butter, and keep my Cheeſe in the Chamber, waiting for a great Price, and let the Poor want, and ſo diſpleaſe God. But, Husband, let us be rich in good Works, and ſo ſhall we pleaſe the Lord, and have all good Things given us, &c.

In the Month of May likewiſe, William Harris, Richard Day, and Chriſtian George ſuffered at Colcheſter, and there joyfully and fervently made their Prayers to God.

And being ſettled at the Stake, and chained to the Poſts, with the Fire flaming fiercely round about them, they like conſtant Chriſtians triumphantly praiſed God within the ſame, and offered up their Bodies a lively Sacrifice unto his holy Majeſty.

The ſaid Chriſtian George's Husband had another Wife burnt before this Chriſtian, whoſe Name was Agnes George, who ſuffered as you have heard, at Stratford the Bow. And after the Death of the ſaid Chriſtian, he married an honeſt godly Woman again, and ſo they both (I mean the ſaid Richard George and his laſt Wife) in the End were taken alſo, and laid in Priſon, where they remained till the Death of Queen Mary, and at laſt were delivered by our moſt gracious ſovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth.

The Apprehenſion of certain godly Men and Women praying together in the Fields about Iſlington.

SEcretly in a back Cloſe in the Field by Iſlington, were gathered together a Company of innocent Perſons, to the Number of forty Men and Women; who there being virtuouſly occupied in the Meditation of God's holy Word, firſt cometh a certain Man to them unknown, who looking over unto them, ſtayed and ſaluted them, ſaying, that they looked like Men that meant no Hurt. Then one of the ſaid Company asked the Man, if he could tell whoſe Cloſe that was, and whether they might be ſo bold to ſit there. Yea, ſaid he, becauſe ye ſeem unto me ſuch Perſons as intend no Harm, and ſo departed. Within a Quarter of an Hour after, came the Conſtable of Iſlington, named King, with ſix or ſeven more, one with a Bow, another with a Bill, and the reſt with Weapons. Six or ſeven of this Company were left behind in a private Place, to be ready in Caſe they were wanted, while the Conſtable and one with him went before to view them; they both went amongſt them, looking and viewing what they were doing, and what Books they had; and ſo going a little forward, and returning back again, order'd them to deliver their Books. They underſtanding that he was a Conſtable, refuſed not ſo to do. Then came up the reſt of their Fellows beforementioned, who bade them ſtand and not depart. They anſwered again, they would be obedient and ready to go whitherſoever they would have them; and they were firſt carried to a Brew-houſe at a ſmall Diſtance, while ſome of the Company went to the neareſt Juſtice, but he being not at home, they were carry'd before Sir Roger Cholmley. In the mean Time ſome of the Women eſcaped away from them, ſome in the Cloſe where they ſat, and others before they came to the Brewhouſe. For ſo they were carried, ten with one Man, eight with another, with ſome more, with others leſs, in ſuch a Manner as it was not hard for them to eſcape that would. In fine, they that were carried to Sir Roger Cholmley were twenty-ſeven, and Sir Roger and the Recorder taking their Names in a Bill, and calling them one by one, ſo many as anſwered to their Names, he ſent to Newgate, which were twenty-two out of the twenty-ſeven. They continued in Priſon ſeven Weeks; and before they were examined, Word was ſent by Alexander the Keeper, that if they would hear a Maſs, they ſhould all be delivered, but thirteen of them were burnt, ſeven in Smithfield, and ſix at Branford; two died in Priſon, and the other ſeven, with much Trouble (through God's Providence) eſcaped Death. Their Names were theſe:

John Willes,
Thomas Hinſhaw,
R. Baily, Woolpacker,
Robert Willes,
Hudleys,
T. Coaſt, Haberdaſher,
Roger Sandy.

The Names of the ſeven Martyrs that were apprehended amongſt others, in the Cloſe at Iſlington, and afterwards burnt in Smithfield were as follow:

Henry Pond,
Rainol Eaſtland,
Robert Southam,
Matthew Ricarby,
John Floyd,
John Holiday,
Roger Holland,

Theſe ſeven godly Men had ſeveral Articles adminiſtred to them by Biſhop Bonner, in the uſual Form; to which they returned their Anſwers, and abſolutely refuſing to acknowledge the Doctrine of the Romiſh Church, were altogether condemned, the Sentence being read againſt them; and ſo all ſeven by ſecular Magiſtrates being ſent all to Newgate the 17th of June; not long after, about the 27th of the ſaid Month were brought to Smithfield, and there ended their Lives in the glorious Cauſe of Chriſt's Goſpel.

The Martyrdom of ſix, who ſuffered at Branford, for the true Teſtimony of Jeſus Chriſt.

THESE ſix Martyrs were of the Company of thoſe who were apprehended in a Cloſe near Iſlington (as is abovementioned) and ſent to Priſon. Whoſe Names here follow:

Robert Mills,
Stephen Cotton,
Robert Dynes,
Stephen Wight,
John Slade,
William Pikes, or Pikes a Tanner.

Theſe ſix Martyrs were burnt at Branford ſeven Miles from London on the 14th of July 1558. They had their Articles miniſtred unto them by T. Darbyſhire, Bonner's Chancellor, at ſundry Times, to which they made their Anſwers much after the ſame Manner as others have done before.

When theſe good Men came before Bonner's Chancellor, Thomas Darbyſhire, and had the Articles miniſtred unto them, and they anſwered unto the ſame; in the End the Chancellor commanded them to appear before him again the 11th Day of July at St. Paul's: Where when they came, he required of them whether they would turn from their Opinions to the Mother holy Church; and if not, that then, whether there were any Cauſe to the contrary, but that he might proceed with the Sentence of Condemnation. Whereunto they all anſwered, That they would not go from the Truth, nor relent from any Part of the ſame while they lived. Then he charged them to appear before him again the next Day in the Afternoon, between one and two of the Clock to hear the definitive Sentence read againſt them, according to the eccleſiaſtical Laws then in Force. At which Time he ſitting in Judgment talking with theſe good Men, at laſt came into the ſaid Place Sir Edward Haſtings and Sir Thomas Cornwallis, Knights, two of Queen Mary's Officers of her Houſe, and being there, they ſat them down over-againſt the Chancellor, in whoſe Preſence the Chancellor condemned thoſe poor innocent Lambs, and delivered them over to the ſecular Power, who received, and carry'd them to Priſon immediately; and the next Day after a Writ was ſent to burn them at Branford, which accordingly was accompliſhed. Whereunto being brought, they made their humble Prayers to the Lord Jeſus, undreſſed themſelves, went joyfully to the Stake, whereunto they were bound, and the Fire flaming about them, they yielded their Souls, Bodies, and Lives into the Hands of the omnipotent God, for whoſe Cauſe they did ſuffer.

MUſe not ſo much that Nature's Work
Is thus deformed now:
With Belly blown, and Head ſo ſwoln,
For I ſhall tell you how:
This Cannibal in three Years Space
Two hundred Martyrs ſlew:
They were his Food, he ſo lov'd Blood,
He ſpared none he knew.
It ſhould appear that Blood feeds Fat,
If Men lie well and ſoft:
For Bonner's Belly waxt with Blood,

O bloody Beaſt, bewail the Death
Of thoſe that thou haſt ſlain:
In Time repent, ſince thou canſt not

The ſcourging of Thomas Hinſhaw, by Biſhop Bonner.

WHEN Biſhop Bonner found that his Examinations, Perſuaſions, Threats, and Impriſonments, were to no purpoſe with Thomas Hinſhaw, he (the ſaid Biſhop) took him with him to Fulham, where immediately after his coming, he was ſet in the Stocks, remaining there all the firſt Night with Bread and Water.

The next Morning the Biſhop came and examined him himſelf, and perceiving no yielding to his Mind, he ſent Mr. Harpsfield to talk with him; who, after long Talk, in the end fell to raging Words, calling the ſaid Thomas Hinſhaw peeviſh Boy, and asked him whether he thought he went about to damn his Soul or no, &c. Unto which the ſaid Thomas anſwered, that he was perſuaded that they laboured to maintain their dark and deviliſh Kingdom, and not for any Love to Truth. Then Harpsfield, being in a mighty Rage, told the Biſhop thereof. Whereat the Biſhop fumed and fretted, that for Anger being ſcarce able to ſpeak, he ſaid, Doſt thou anſwer my Archdeacon ſo, thou naughty Boy? I ſhall handle thee well enough, be aſſured; ſo he ſent for a couple of Rods, and cauſed him to kneel againſt a long Bench in an Arbour in his Garden, where the ſaid Thomas, without any Inforcement of his Part, offered himſelf to the Beating, and did abide the Fury of the ſaid Bonner, ſo long as the fat paunched Biſhop could endure with Breath, and till for Wearineſs he was fain to ceaſe, and give place to his ſhameful Act. He had two Willow Rods, but he waſted but one, and ſo left off.

Now after this ſcourging, the ſaid Thomas Hinſhaw notwithſtanding did ſuſtain divers Conflicts, and Examinations ſundry Times. At laſt being brought before the ſaid Biſhop in his Chapel at Fulham, there he had procured Witneſſes, and gathered Articles againſt him, which the young Man denied, and would not affirm, or conſent to any Interrogatory there and then miniſtred, do what they could.

About a Fortnight after he fell ſick of a burning Ague, whereby he was delivered upon Entreaty unto his Maſter Martin Pugſon in Paul's Church-yard; for then the Biſhop thought verily he was more like to die than to live. Which his Sickneſs endured a Twelvemonth or more, ſo that in the mean Time Queen Mary died. Then he ſhortly after recovered Health, and eſcaped Death, being at the writing of this, both Witneſs and Reporter of the ſame.

The ſcourging of John Willes, by Biſhop Bonner.

BEſides the above-named, was ſcourged alſo by the Hands of the ſaid Biſhop, one John Willes a Capper, a true honeſt Man in all his Dealings and Conditions, who was Brother to the aforeſaid Rich. Willes burned at Branford, as is before-ſaid. Who alſo was apprehended in the ſame Number with them at Iſlington, as alſo is mention'd before: And being brought before Bonner, and there examined, was commanded to the Coalhouſe, with the aforeſaid Tho. Hinſhaw, where they remained one Night in the Stocks. From thence he was ſent to Fulham, where he, with the ſaid Hinſhaw, remained eight or ten Days in the Stocks; during which Time he ſuſtained divers Conflicts with the ſaid Bonner, who had him often in Examination, urging him, and with a Stick which he had in his Hand, oftentimes rapping him on the Head, and flirting him under the Chin, and on the Ears, ſaying he looked down like a Thief. Moreover, after he had aſſayed all manner of Ways to cauſe him to recant, and could not, at length having him to his Orchard, there within a little Arbour, with his own Hands beat him firſt with a Willow Rod, and that being worn well nigh to the Stumps, he called for a Birch Rod, which a Lad brought out of his Chamber. The Cauſe why he ſo beat him was this; Bonner asked him when he had crept to the Croſs. He anſwered, Not ſince he came to the Years of Diſcretion, neither would, though he ſhould be torn with wild Horſes. Then Bonner bade him make a Croſs in his Forehead, which he refuſed to do. Whereupon he had him immediately to his Orchard, and there calling for Rods, ſhewed his Cruelty upon him, as he had done upon Thomas Hinſhaw.

This done, he had him immediately to the Pariſh-church of Fulham with the ſaid Tho. Hinſhaw, and Robert Willes, to whom there being ſeverally called before him, he miniſtred certain Articles, asking if he would ſubſcribe to the ſame. To which he made his Anſwer according to his Conſcience, denying them all except one Article which was concerning King Edward's Service in Engliſh. Shortly after this Beating, Bonner ſent a certain old Prieſt lately come from Rome, to him in Priſon, to conjure out the evil Spirit from him, who laying his Hand upon his Head, began with certain Words pronounced over him, to conjure as he had been wont before to do. Willes marvelling what the old Man was about, ſaid, I truſt no evil Spirit is in me, and laughed him to Scorn.

As this John Willes was divers Times called before Bonner, ſo much Communication paſſed between them as is too tedious to recite. It is enough to make the Reader laugh to ſee the blind and unſavoury Reaſons with which that Biſhop endeavour'd to delude the Ignorant, ſome of which were in the following Manner: Bonner going about to perſuade Willes not to meddle with Matters of Scripture, but rather to believe other Mens Teaching, who had more Skill in the ſame, asked him firſt, if he did believe the Scripture: Yea, ſaid he, that I do. Then (quoth the Biſhop) St. Paul ſaith, If the Man ſleep, the Woman is at Liberty to go to another Man. If thou wert aſleep having a Wife, wouldſt thou be content thy Wife to take to another Man? And yet this is the Scripture. Alſo, if thou wilt believe Luther, Zuinglius, and ſuch, then thou canſt not go right; but if thou wilt believe me, &c. thou canſt not err: And if thou ſhould'ſt err, yet thou art in no Danger, thy Blood ſhould be required at our Hands. As if thou ſhould'ſt go to a far Country, and meet with a fatherly Man, as I am (theſe were were his Words) and ask the Way to the City, and he ſhould ſay, this Way, and thou wilt not believe him, but follow Luther, and other Hereticks of late Days, and go a contrary Way; how wilt thou come to the Place thou askeſt for? So if thou wilt not believe me, but follow the leading of other Hereticks, ſo ſhalt thou be brought to Deſtruction, and burn both Body and Soul. As truly as thou ſeeſt the Bodies of them in Smithfield burnt, ſo truly their Souls do burn in Hell, becauſe they err from the true Church.

Oft-times ſpeaking to the ſaid John Willes, he would ſay, They call me Bloody Bonner. A Vengeance on you all: I would fain be rid of you, but you have a Delight in Burning. But if I might have my Will, I would ſew up your Mouths, and put you in Sacks and drown you.

The ſame Day that he was delivered, Bonner came to the Stocks where he lay, and asked him how he liked his Lodging, and his Fare. Well (ſaid Willes) if it would pleaſe God I might have a little Straw to lie or ſit upon. Then (ſaid Bonner) thou wilt ſhew no Token of a Chriſtian Man. And upon this his Wife came in unknown to him, being very great with Child, every Hour expecting her Labour, and intreated the Biſhop for her Husband, ſaying, that ſhe would not go from thence, but that ſhe would there ſtay, and be deliver'd in the Biſhop's Houſe, unleſs ſhe had her Husband with her. How ſayeſt thou (quoth Bonner to Willes) If thy Wife miſcarry, or thy Child, or Children, if ſhe be with one or two, ſhould periſh, the Blood of them would he require at thy Hands. Then to this Agreement he came, that he ſhould hire a Bed in the Town of Fulham, and her Husband ſhould go home with her the Morrow after, upon this Condition, that his Kinſman there preſent (one Robert Rouſe) ſhould bring the ſaid Willes to his Houſe at St. Paul's the next Day.

To which Willes would not agree, but inſiſted upon going then. At length, his Wife being importunate for her Husband, and Bonner ſeeing ſhe would not ſtir without him, fearing belike the Rumour that might come upon his Houſe thereby, and alſo probably fearing to be troubled with a Lying-in Woman, bad Willes make a Croſs, and ſay, In nomine Patris, & Filii, & Spiritus Sancti, Amen.

Then Willes began to ſay, In the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt, Amen. No, no (ſaith Bonner) ſay it me in Latin; Willes underſtanding the Matter of that Latin to be good, ſaid the ſame, and ſo went home with his Wife, his aforeſaid Kinſman being charged to bring him the next Day to St. Paul's; elſe, ſaid Bonner, if thou doſt not bring him, thou art an Heretick as well as he. Notwithſtanding, the Charge being no greater, his Kinſman did not bring him, but he of his own Accord came to the Biſhop within a few Days after, where he put to him a certain Writing in Latin, to ſubſcribe unto, containing, as it ſeemed to him, no great Matter, that he needed greatly to ſtick at, albeit, what the Bill was, he could not certainly tell: So he ſubſcribed to the Bill, and returned home. And thus much concerning the twenty-two taken at Iſlington.

The Hiſtory of Richard Yeoman, Dr. Taylor's Curate at Hadley.

Richard Yeoman, a devout old Man, was Dr. Taylor's Curate in Hadley; with him Dr. Taylor left his Cure at his Departure. But as ſoon as Mr. Newall had gotten the Benefice, he put out Mr. Yeoman, and ſet in a Popiſh Curate to continue their Romiſh Religion, which now they thought fully eſtabliſhed. Then he wandred from Place to Place, exhorting all Men to ſtand faithfully to God's Word, earneſtly to give themſelves unto Prayer, with Patience to bear the Croſs now laid upon them for their Trial, with Boldneſs to confeſs the Truth before the Adverſaries, and with an undoubted Hope to wait for the Crown and Reward of eternal Felicity. But when he perceived his Adverſaries to lie in wait for him, he went into Kent, and with a little Packet of Laces, Pins and Points, and ſuch like Things, he travelled from Village to Village, ſelling ſuch Things, and by that Shift ſubſiſted himſelf, his Wife and Children.

At laſt Juſtice Moyle of Kent took Mr. Yeoman and ſet him in the Stocks a Day and a Night, but having no evident Matter to charge him with, he let him go again. So he came ſecretly again to Hadley, and tarried with his poor Wife, who kept him ſecretly in a Chamber of the Town-houſe, commonly called the Guildhall, more than a Year. All which Time the good old Father abode in a Chamber locked up all the Day, and ſpent his Time in devout Prayer, and reading the Scriptures, and in carding of Wool which his Wife did ſpin. His Wife alſo did go and beg Bread and Meat for herſelf and her Children, and by ſuch poor Means they ſuſtained themſelves.

At laſt Parſon Newall (I know not by what Means) perceived that Richard Yeoman was ſo kept by his poor Wife, and taking with him the Bayliff's Deputies and Servants, came in the Night-time and brake up five Doors upon Yeoman, whom he found in Bed with his Wife and Children; whom when he had ſo found, he angrily cried, I thought I ſhould find an Harlot and an Whore together. And he would have plucked the Cloaths off from them; but Yeoman held faſt the Cloaths, and ſaid unto his Wife, Wife, ariſe, and put on thy Cloaths. And unto the Parſon he ſaid, Nay, Parſon, no Harlot, nor Whore, but a married Man and his Wife, according to God's Ordinance, and bleſſed be God for lawful Matrimony. I thank God for this great Grace, and I defy the Pope and all his Popery. Then they led Richard Yeoman unto the Cage, and ſet him in the Stocks until it was Day.

There was then alſo in the Cage an old Man named John Dale, who had ſet there three or four Days, becauſe when the ſaid Parſon Newall with his Curate uſed the Romiſh Service in the Church, he ſpake openly unto him, and ſaid, O miſerable and blind Guides, will ye ever be blind Leaders of the Blind? Will ye never amend? Will ye never ſee the Truth of God's Word? Will neither God's Threats nor Promiſes enter into your Hearts? Will the Blood of Martyrs nothing mollify your ſtony Stomach? O indurate, hardhearted, perverſe and crooked Generation. O damnable ſort, whom nothing can do Good unto.

Theſe, or the like Words he ſpake in Fervency of Spirit againſt the ſuperſtitious Religion of Rome. Wherefore Parſon Newall cauſed him forthwith to be attached, and ſet in the Stocks in a Cage. So was he kept there till Sir Henry Doile a Juſtice came to Hadley.

When poor Yeoman was taken, the Parſon called earneſtly upon Sir Henry Doile to ſend them both to Priſon. Sir Henry Doile earneſtly intreated the Parſon, to conſider the Age of the Men and their mean Condition; they were neither Perſons of Note nor Preachers; wherefore he would deſire him to let them be puniſhed a Day or two, and ſo to let them go, at leaſt John Dale, who was no Prieſt: And therefore ſeeing he had ſo long ſate in the Cage, he thought it Puniſhment enough for this Time. When the Parſon heard this, he was exceeding mad, and in a great Rage called them peſtilent Hereticks, unfit to live in the Commonwealth of Chriſtians. Wherefore I beſeech you, Sir, (quoth he) according to your Office, defend the holy Church, and help to ſuppreſs theſe Hereſies, &c. which are falſe to God, and thus boldly ſet themſelves to the evil Example of others, againſt the Queen's gracious Proceedings. Sir Henry Doile ſeeing he could do no Good in the Matter, and fearing alſo the Danger of meddling too much in it, made out the Writ, and cauſed the Conſtables to carry them to Bury Goal. So they took Richard Yeoman and John Dale pinioned, and bound them like Thieves, ſet them on Horſeback, and bound their Legs under the Horſes Bellies, and ſo carried them to Bury Goal, where they were laid in Irons; and becauſe they continually rebuked Popery, they were thrown into the loweſt Dungeon, where John Dale, through Sickneſs of the Priſon, and evil Keeping, died in Priſon, whoſe Body, when he was dead, was thrown out and buried in the Fields. He was a Man of 46 Years of Age, a Weaver by his Occupation, well learned in the holy Scriptures, and faithful and honeſt in all his Converſation.

After that John Dale was dead, Richard Yeoman was removed to Norwich Priſon, where after ſtrait and evil Keeping, he was examined of his Faith and Religion. Then he boldly and conſtantly confeſſed himſelf to be of the Faith that was ſet forth by King Edward VI, and from that he would in no wiſe vary. Being required to ſubmit himſelf to the holy Father the Pope: I defy him (quoth he) and all his deteſtable Abominations: I will in no wiſe have to do with him, nor any Thing that appertaineth to him. The chief Articles objected to him, were his Marriage and the Maſs Sacrifice. Wherefore when he continued ſtedfaſt in Confeſſion of the Truth, he was condemned, degraded, and not only burnt, but moſt cruelly tormented in the Fire. So he ended his poor and miſerable Life, and ſo he entered into the bleſſed Boſom of Abraham, enjoying with Lazarus the comfortable Quietneſs that God hath prepared for his elect Saints.

The Story of John Alcock.

THIS young Man was by Occupation a Shearman, and came to Hadley to ſeek Work; he being in Church one Sunday, and Parſon Newal coming by with the Proceſſion, would not once move his Cap, nor ſhew any Sign of Reverence, but ſtood behind the Font. The Parſon perceiving this, when he was almoſt out of the Church-door, ran back again, and caught him, and called for the Conſtable.

Then came Robert Rolfe, with whom this young Man had wrought, and ſaid, What hath he done, Mr. Parſon, that ye are in ſuch a Rage with him?

He is an Heretick and Traitor (quoth the Parſon) and deſpiſeth the Queen's Proceedings. Wherefore I command you in the Queen's Name, have him to the Stocks, and ſee he be forthcoming.

Well (quoth Rolfe) he ſhall be forthcoming, proceed in your Buſineſs, and be quiet.

Have him to the Stocks, quoth the Parſon.

I am Conſtable, quoth Rolfe, and I may bail him, and will bail him; he ſhall not be put in the Stocks, but he ſhall be forthcoming: So the good Parſon went forth with his holy Proceſſion, and ſo to Maſs.

In the Afternoon Rolfe ſaid to this young Man, I am ſorry for thee, for truly the Parſon will ſeek thy Deſtruction, if thou take not good Heed what thou anſwereſt him.

The young Man ſaid, Sir, I am ſorry that it is my hap to be a Trouble to you. As for myſelf, I am not ſorry, but I commit myſelf into God's Hands, and I truſt he will give me Mouth and Wiſdom to anſwer according to Right.

Well, quoth Rolfe, yet beware of him, for he is malicious and a Blood-ſucker, and beareth an old Hatred againſt me, and he will handle you the more cruelly, becauſe of Diſpleaſure againſt me.

I fear not, quoth the young Man: He ſhall do no more to me, than God will give him Leave; and happy ſhall I be if God will call me to die for his Truth's Sake.

Then they went to the Parſon, who at the firſt asked him, Fellow, what ſaiſt thou to the Sacrament of the Altar?

I ſay, quoth he, as ye uſe the Matter, ye make a ſhameful Idol of it, and ye are falſe idolatrous Prieſts, all the ſort of you.

I told you (quoth the Parſon) he was a ſtout Heretick.

So after long Talk, the Parſon committed him to Priſon, and the next Day he rode up to London, and carried the young Man with him, and ſo the young Man came no more to Hadley, but after long Impriſonment in Newgate, where after many Examinations and Troubles, for that he would not ſubmit himſelf to ask Forgiveneſs of the Pope, and to be reconciled to the Romiſh Religion, he was caſt into the lower Dungeon, where with ill Keeping and Sickneſs of the Houſe, he died in Priſon. His Body was caſt out and bury'd in a Dunghil; for the Papiſts would in all Things be like themſelves; therefore they would not ſo much as ſuffer the dead Bodies to have convenient Burial.

The Hiſtory of Thomas Benbridge, Gentleman and Martyr.

THomas Benbridge a Gentleman, (unmarried) in the Dioceſs of Wincheſter, although he might have lived a Gentleman's Life, in the wealthy Poſſeſſions of this World; yet to follow Chriſt had rather enter into the ſtrait Gate of Perſecution, than here to enjoy preſent Pleaſures with Unquietneſs of Conſcience. Wherefore manfully ſtanding againſt the Papiſts for the Defence of the ſincere Doctrine of Chriſt's Goſpel, he ſpared not himſelf to confirm the Truth of the ſame. For which Cauſe he being apprehended for an Adverſary to the Romiſh Religion, was forthwith had to Examination before the Biſhop of Wincheſter, where he ſuſtained ſundry Conflicts for the Truth againſt the ſaid Biſhop and his Collegue; for which he was condemned, and ſome Time after brought to the Place of Martyrdom by Sir Richard Peckſal the Sheriff.

Where ſtanding at the Stake, he began to untie his Points, and to prepare himſelf; then he gave his Gown to the Keeper, being belike his Fee. His Jerkin was laid on with Gold Lace fair and brave, which he gave to Sir Rich. Peckſal the High-ſheriff. His Cap of Velvet he took off from his Head and threw it away. Then lifting his Mind to the Lord, he made his Prayers.

That done, being now faſtened to the Stake, Dr. Seaton willed him to recant, and he ſhould have his Pardon; but when he ſaw it prevailed not to ſpeak, the ſaid dreaming Doctor willed the People not to pray for him unleſs he would recant, no more than they would pray for a Dog.

Mr. Benbridge ſtanding at the Stake with his Hands together in ſuch Manner as the Prieſt holdeth his Hands in his Memento, the ſaid Dr. Seaton came to him again, and exhorted him to recant: Unto whom he ſaid, Away Babylonian, away.

Then ſaid one that ſtood by, Sir, cut out his Tongue, and another being a temporal Man, railed on him worſe than Dr. Seaton did, who (as is thought) was ſet on by ſome other.

Thus when they ſaw he would not yield, they bade bade the Tormentors to ſet fire, and yet he was nothing like covered with Faggots. Firſt, the Fire took away a Piece of his Beard, whereat he did not ſhrink at all. Then it came on the other Side and took his Legs, and the nether Stockings of his Hoſe being Leather, made the Fire to pierce the ſharper, ſo that the intolerable Heat thereof made him to cry, I recant: And ſuddenly he thruſt the Fire from him. And having two or three of his Friends by that wiſhed his Life, they ſtept to the Fire, and helped to take it from him alſo, who for their Labour were ſent to Priſon. The Sheriff alſo of his own Authority took him from the Stake, and ſent him to Priſon again, for which he was ſent unto the Fleet, and lay there ſome Time. But before he was taken from the Stake, the ſaid Dr. Seaton wrote Articles to have him ſubſcribe unto them, as touching the Pope, the Sacrament, and ſuch other Traſh. But the ſaid Mr. Benbridge made much ado ere he would ſubſcribe them, inſomuch that Dr. Seaton ordered them to ſet to fire again. Then with much Pain and Grief of Heart he ſubſcribed to them upon a Man's Back.

That being done, he had his Gown given him again, and ſo was led to Priſon. Being in Priſon, he wrote a Letter to Dr. Seaton, and recanted thoſe Words he ſpake at the Stake, unto which he had ſubſcribed: For he was grieved that ever he ſubſcribed unto them. Whereupon expreſſing his Conſcience, he was the ſame Day Seven-night after burnt indeed, where the vile Tormentors did rather broil than burn him.

The Martyrdom of John Cooke, a Sawyer, Robert Miles, alias Plummer, Sheerman, Alexander Lane, a Wheelright, James Aſhley, Batchelor.

THE Examination of theſe forenamed Perſons, being ſeverally called before the Biſhop of Norwich, and Sir Edward Walgrave, with others, was partly upon theſe Articles following.

Firſt, Sir Edward Walgrave called John Cooke to him, and ſaid, How doth it happen that you go not to your Church?

Cooke. I have been there.

Sir Edw. What is the Cauſe that you go not thither now in theſe Days?

Cooke. Becauſe the Sacrament of the Altar is an abominable Idol, and the Vengeance of God will come upon all them that do maintain it.

Sir Edw. O thou rank Traytor, if I had as good Commiſſion to cut out thy Tongue, as I have to ſit here this Day, thou ſhould'ſt be ſure to have it done.

Then he commanded the Conſtable to take him away, ſaying, he was both a Traytor and a Rebel.

Then he called Robert Miles, and ſaid, How fortuneth it, that you will not go to Church?

Miles. Becauſe I will follow no falſe Gods.

Then ſaid the Biſhop, Who told thee that it is a God?

Even you, quoth Miles, and ſuch as you are.

Then the Biſhop commanded him aſide, and to appear before him the next Day.

Then he called Alexander Lane before him, and asked him how it chanced, that he would not go to the Church.

He ſaid, that his Conſcience would not ſerve him ſo to do.

Sir Edward ſaid, How doſt thou believe?

Lane anſwer'd, Even as it is written in God's Book.

Then Sir Edward commanded him to ſay his Belief.

Then Lane, being ſomewhat abaſhed, ſaid his Belief to theſe Words, which he miſſed unawares, Born of the Virgin Mary.

Then ſaid Sir Edward, What? was he not born of the Virgin Mary?

Yes, ſaid Lane, I would have ſaid ſo.

Nay, ſaid Sir Edward, you are one of Cooke's Scholars, and ſo commanded him away, and to come before him the next Day.

After the like Manner they paſſed alſo with James Aſhley, whom they warned the next Day likewiſe to appear before them again. So in fine they appearing again, had their Condemnation. And thus theſe four bleſſed Martyrs innocently ſuffered together at St. Edmund's-Bury, as is aforeſaid, about the Beginning of Auguſt, not long before the Sickneſs of Queen Mary.

The Martyrdom of Alexander Gouch, and Alice Driver, at Ipſwich.

MR. Noone, a Juſtice in Suffolk, dwelling in Martleſham, hunting after good Men to apprehend them, at length had Intelligence of one Alexander Gouch of Woodbridge, and Driver's Wife of Grosborough to be at Grosborough together, a little from his Houſe, and immediately took his Men with him, and went thither, and made diligent Search for them, where the poor Man and Woman were compelled to get into an Hay-loft to hide themſelves from their Cruelty. At length they came to ſearch the Hay for them, and by gaging thereof with Pitchforks, at laſt found them: So they took them and led them to Melton Goal, where they remaining a Time, at laſt were carry'd to Bury againſt the Aſſize at St. James-tide, and being there examined of Matters of Faith, did boldly ſtand to confeſs Chriſt crucify'd, defying the Pope and his papiſtical Traſh. And among other Things, Driver's Wife likened Queen Mary in her Perſecution, to Jezebel; and ſo in that Senſe calling her Jezebel, for that Sir Clement Higham, being chief Judge there, ordered her Ears immediately to be cut off, which was accompliſhed accordingly, and ſhe joyfully yielded herſelf to the Puniſhment, and thought herſelf happy that ſhe was counted worthy to ſuffer any thing for the Name of Chriſt.

After the Aſſize at Bury, they were carried to Melton Goal again, where they remained a Time. This Alexander Gouch was a Man of the Age of 36 Years, or thereabouts, and by his Occupation a Weaver of ſhredding Coverlets, dwelling at Woodbridge in Suffolk, and born at Uxford in the ſame County. Driver's Wife was a Woman about the Age of 30 Years, and dwelt at Grosborough where they were taken, in Suffolk: her Husband did uſe Husbandry. Theſe two were carried from Melton Goal to Ipſwich, where they remained, and were examined. Which Examination, here followeth.

The Examination of Alice Driver, before Dr. Spenſer, Chancellor of Norwich.

FIRST, ſhe coming into the Place where ſhe ſhould be examined with a ſmiling Countenance; Dr. Spenſer ſaid, Why Woman, doſt thou laugh us to Scorn?

Driver's Wife. Whether I do or no, I might well enough, to ſee what Fools ye be.

Then the Chancellor asked her wherefore ſhe was brought brought before him, and why ſhe was laid in Priſon.

Dri. Wherefore? I think I need not tell you; for ye know it better than I.

Spenſ. No, by my Troth, Woman, I know not why.

Dri. Then have ye done me much Wrong thus to impriſon me, and know no Cauſe why; for I know no Evil that I have done, I thank God, and I hope there is no Man that can accuſe me of any notorious Fact that I have done, juſtly.

Spenſ. Woman, Woman, what ſayſt thou to the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar? Doſt thou not believe that it is very Fleſh and Blood, after the Words be ſpoken of Conſecration?

Driver's Wife at thoſe Words held her Peace, and made no Anſwer. Then a great Chuff-headed Prieſt that ſtood by, ſpake, and asked her why ſhe made not the Chancellor Anſwer. With that the ſaid Driver's Wife looked upon him auſterely, and ſaid, Why Prieſt, I come not to talk with thee, but I come to talk with thy Maſter: But if thou wilt I ſhall talk with thee, command thy Maſter to hold his Peace. And with that the Prieſt put his Noſe in his Cap, and ſpake never a Word more. Then the Chancellor bid her make Anſwer to that he demanded of her.

Dri. Sir, pardon me though I make no Anſwer, for I cannot tell what you mean thereby; for in all my Life I never heard nor read of any ſuch Sacrament in all the Scripture.

Spenſ. Why, what Scriptures have you read, I pray you?

Dri. I have (I thank God) read God's Book.

Spenſ. Why, what manner of Book is that you call God's Book.

Dri. It is the Old and New Teſtament. What call you it?

Spenſ. That is God's Book indeed, I cannot deny.

Dri. That ſame Book have I read throughout, but yet never could find any ſuch Sacrament there; and for that Cauſe I cannot make you Anſwer to that Thing I know not. Notwithſtanding, for all that, I will grant you a Sacrament, called the Lord's Supper: And therefore ſeeing I have granted you a Sacrament, I pray you ſhew me what a Sacrament is.

Spenſ. It is a Sign. And one Dr. Gaſcoine being by, confirmed the ſame, that it was the Sign of an holy Thing.

Dri. You have ſaid the Truth, Sir. It is a Sign indeed, I muſt needs grant it: And therefore ſeeing it is a Sign, it cannot be the Thing ſignify'd alſo. Thus far we do agree; for I have granted your own Saying.

Then ſtood up the ſaid Gaſcoine, and made an Oration with many fair Words, but little to the Purpoſe, both offenſive and odious to the Minds of the Godly. In the End of which long Tale, he asked her if ſhe did not believe the Omnipotency of God, and that he was Almighty, and able to perform that he ſpake. She anſwered, Yes, and ſaid, I do believe that God is Almighty, and able to perform that he ſpake and promiſed.

Gaſcoine. Very well. Then he ſaid to his Diſciples, Take, eat, this is my Body: Ergo, it was his Body. For he was able to perform that he ſpake, and God uſeth not to lie.

Dri. I pray you did he ever make any ſuch Promiſe to his Diſciples, that he would make the Bread his Body?

Gaſc. Thoſe be the Words. Can you deny it.

Dri. No, they be the very Words indeed, I cannot deny it, but I pray you, was it not Bread that he gave unto them?

Gaſc. No, it was his Body.

Dri. Then was it his Body that they did eat Overnight?

Gaſc. It was his Body.

Dri. What Body was it then that was crucified the next Day?

Gaſc. It was Chriſt's Body.

Dri. How could that be, when the Diſciples had eaten him Over-night? except he had two Bodies, as by your Argument he had; one they did eat Overnight, and he was crucified the next Day. Such a Doctor, ſuch Doctrine. Be you not aſhamed to teach the People, that Chriſt had two Bodies? In the 22d of Luke, He took Bread and brake it to his Diſciples, ſaying, Take, &c. and do this in Remembrance of me. St. Paul ſaith, 1 Cor. 11. Do this in Remembrance of me: For as often as ye ſhall eat this Bread, and drink this Cup, ye ſhall ſhew the Lord's Death till he come: And therefore I marvel you bluſh not before all this People, to lie ſo manifeſtly as ye do.

With that Gaſcoine held his Peace, and made her no Anſwer; for, as it ſeemed, he was aſhamed of his Doings. Then the Chancellor liſt up his Head off from his Cuſhion, and commanded the Goaler to take her away.

Dri. Now ye be not able to reſiſt the Truth, ye command me to Priſon again. Well, the Lord in the End ſhall judge our Cauſe, and to him I leave it. So away ſhe went with the Goaler.

The ſecond Examination of Alice Driver.

THE next Day ſhe came before them again, and the Chancellor then asked her, what ſhe ſaid to the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar?

Dri. I will ſay nothing to it; for you will neither believe me nor yourſelves: For yeſterday I asked you what a Sacrament was, and you ſaid, it was a Sign; and I agreed thereto, and ſaid it was the Truth, confirming it by the Scriptures, ſo that I went not from your own Words; and now ye come and ask me again of ſuch a Sacrament as I told you I never read of in the Scriptures.

Spenſ. Thou lieſt, naughty Woman, we did not ſay that it was a Sign.

Dri. Why, Maſters, be ye not the Men that you were yeſterday? Will ye eat your own Words? Are ye not aſhamed to lie before all this Multitude here preſent, who heard you ſpeak the ſame?

Then ſtood up Dr. Gaſcoine, and ſaid, ſhe was deceived; for there are three Churches, The malignant Church, the Church militant, and the Church triumphant. So he would fain have made Matter, but he could not tell which Way.

Dri. Sir, is there Mention made of ſo many Churches in the Scripture?

Gaſc. Yea.

Dri. I pray you where find you this Word (Church) written in the Scripture?

Gaſc. It is written in the New Teſtament.

Dri. I pray you, Sir, ſhew the Place where it is written.

Gaſc. I cannot tell the Place, but there it is. With that ſhe deſired him to look in his Teſtament: Then he fumbled and ſought about him for one; but at that Time he had none, and that he knew well enough, though he ſeemed to ſearch for it. At laſt ſhe ſaid, Have ye none here, Sir?

Gaſc. No.

Dri. I thought ſo much indeed, that ye were little acquainted withal. Surely you be a good Doctor. You ſay you ſit here to judge according to the Law, and how can you give Judgment, and have not the Book of the Law with you? At which Words Gaſcoine was out of Countenance, and asked her if ſhe had one.

No, ſaid ſhe.

Then, ſaid he, I am as good a Doctor as you.

Dri. Well, Sir, I had one, but you took it from me (as you would take me from Chriſt, if you could) and ſince would ye not ſuffer me to have any Book at all; ſo burning is your Charity. But you may well know that I have exerciſed the ſame; elſe could I not have anſwered you as I have. Thus ſhe put them all to Silence, that one looked on another, and had not a Word to ſpeak.

Dri. Have you no more to ſay? God be honoured. You be not able to reſiſt the Spirit of God in me poor Woman. I was an honeſt poor Man's Daughter, never brought up in the Univerſity as you have been, but I have driven the Plough before my Father many a Time; yet notwithſtanding in the Defence of God's Truth, and in the Cauſe of my Maſter Chriſt, by his Grace I will ſet my Foot againſt the Foot of any of you all, in the Maintenance and Defence of the ſame; and if I had a thouſand Lives, they ſhould go for Payment thereof. So the Chancellor roſe up, and read the Sentence of Condemnation in Latin, and committed her to the ſecular Power, and ſo ſhe went to Priſon again as joyful as the Bird of Day, praiſing and glorifying the Name of God.

Alexander Gouch, Martyr.

THIS Alexander Gouch was examined chiefly of the Sacrament and other Ceremonies of the popiſh Church. And for that his Belief was, that Chriſt was aſcended into Heaven, and there remaineth, and that the Sacrament was the Remembrance of his Death and Paſſion, and for refuſing the Maſs, and the Pope to be ſupreme Head of Chriſt's Church, for theſe Cauſes was he condemned, and died with Alice Driver at Ipſwich, the 4th of November, which was the Monday after All-ſaints, 1558. Dr. Miles Spenſer being Chancellor, they both ended their Lives with earneſt Zeal, nothing fearing to ſpeak their Conſcience when they were commanded to the contrary.

Theſe two Perſons being come to the Place where the Stake was ſet by ſeven of the Clock in the Morning, notwithſtanding they came the ſame Morning from Melton Goal, which is ſix Miles from Ipſwich, being in their Prayers, and ſinging of Pſalms both of them together, Sir Henry Dowell then being Sheriff, was very much offended with them, and willed the Bayliffs of Ipſwich to bid them make an end of Prayers, they kneeling upon a Broom-faggot, one of the Bayliffs, whoſe Name was Richard Smart, commanded them to make an end, ſaying, On, on, have done; make an end, nail them to the Stake; yet they continued in Prayer.

Then Sir Henry ſent one of his Men, whoſe Name was Richard Cove, that they ſhould make an end.

Then Gouch ſtood up and ſaid unto the Sheriff, I pray you Mr. Sheriff, let us pray a little while, for we have but a little Time to live here.

Then ſaid the Bayliff, Come off, have them to the Fire.

Then the ſaid Gouch and Alice Driver ſaid, Why Maſter Sheriff, and Maſter Bayliff, will you not ſuffer us to pray?

Away, ſaid Sir Henry, to the Stake with them.

Gouch anſwered, Take Heed Mr. Sheriff, if you forbid Prayer, the Vengeance of God hangeth over your Heads. Then they being tied to the Stake, and the Iron Chain being put about Alice Driver's Neck, O (ſaid ſhe) here is a goodly Neckerchief, bleſſed be God for it.

Then divers came and took them by the Hands as they were bound ſtanding at the Stake. The Sheriff cried, Lay Hands on them, lay Hands on them. With that a great Number ran to the Stake. The Sheriff ſeeing that, let them all alone, ſo that there was not one taken.

The Perſecution and Martyrdom of Richard Sharpe, Thomas Banion, and Thomas Hale.

Richard Sharp, Weaver of Briſtow, was brought the ninth Day of March 1556, before Mr. Dalby, Chancellor of the Town or City of Briſtow, and after Examination concerning the Sacrament of the Altar, was perſuaded by the ſaid Dalby and others to recant; and the 29th of the ſame Month was enjoyned to make his Recantation before the Pariſhioners in his Pariſh-church. Which when he had done, he felt in his Conſcience ſuch a tormenting Hell, that he was not able quietly to work in his Occupation, but decayed and changed both in Colour and liking of his Body; who ſhortly after upon Sunday came into his Pariſh-church, called Temple, and after high Maſs came to the Quire-door, and ſaid with a loud Voice, Neighbours, bear me Record that yonder Idol (and pointed to the Altar) is the greateſt and moſt abominable that ever was; and I am ſorry that ever I denied my Lord God. Then the Conſtables were commanded to apprehend him, but none ſtepped forth, but ſuffered him to go out of the Church. After, by Night he was apprehended and carried to Newgate, and ſhortly after he was brought before the Lord Chancellor, denying the Sacrament of the Altar to be the Body and Blood of Chriſt, and ſaid, it was an Idol, and therefore was condemned to be burned by the ſaid Dalby. He was burnt the 7th of May, 1557, and died godly, patiently, and conſtantly, confeſſing the Articles of our Faith.

Thomas Hale, Martyr.

THE Thurſday Night before Eaſter, in the Year 1557, came one Mr. David Harris, Alderman, and John Stone, to the Houſe of one Thomas Hale a Shoemaker of Briſtow, and cauſed him to riſe out of his Bed, and brought him forth from his Door. To whom the ſaid Thomas Hale ſaid, You have ſought my Blood theſe two Years, and now much Good may it do you. He being committed to the Watchmen, was carry'd to Newgate the 24th of April in the Year aforeſaid, was brought before Mr. Dalby the Chancellor, committed by him to Priſon, and after by him condemned to be burnt for ſaying, The Sacrament of the Altar was an Idol. He was burnt the 7th Day of May with the aforeſaid Richard Sharp, patiently embracing the Fire with his Arms. They were both bound Back to Back.

Thomas Banion.

Thomas Banion a Weaver, at the Commandment of the Commiſſioners, was brought by a Conſtable, the 13th Day of Auguſt, 1557, before Mr. Dalby Chancellor of Briſtow, who committed him to Priſon for ſaying there was nothing but Bread in the Sacrament, as they uſed it. Wherefore, the 20th Day of Auguſt he was condemned by the ſaid Dalby to be burnt for denying five of their Sacraments, and affirming two, that is, the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Chriſt, and the Sacrament of Baptiſm. He was burnt the 27th of the ſaid Month in the ſame Year, and died godly, conſtantly, and patiently, with confeſſing the Articles of our chriſtian Faith.

The Martyrdom of John Corneford of Wortham, Chriſtopher Brown of Maidſtone, John Herſt of Aſhford, Alice Snoth, Katherine Knight, alias Tynley, an aged Woman.

THeſe five were the laſt that ſuffered in Queen Mary's Reign; who although they then might have either well ſpared them, or elſe deferred their Death, knowing of the Sickneſs of Queen Mary; yet ſuch was the implacable Spite of that Generation, that there be ſome that ſay, the Archdeacon of Canterbury the ſame Time being at London, and underſtanding the Danger of the Queen, immediately made Poſt-haſte home to diſpatch theſe, whom he had before then in his cruel Cuſtody.

The Matter why they were adjudged to the Fire, was for believing the Body not to be in the Sacrament of the Altar, unleſs it be received; ſaying moreover, that we receive another Thing alſo beſides Chriſt's Body, which we ſee, and is a temporal Thing, according to St. Paul, The Things that be ſeen, be temporal, &c.

Item, For confeſſing that an evil Man doth not receive Chriſt's Body, Becauſe no Man hath the Son, except it be given him of the Father.

Item, That it is Idolatry to creep to the Croſs, and St. John forbidding it, ſaith, Beware of Images.

Item, For confeſſing that we ſhould not pray to our Lady, and other Saints, becauſe they be not omnipotent.

For theſe and other ſuch like Articles of chriſtian Doctrine, were theſe committed to the Fire. Againſt whom when the Sentence ſhould be read, and they excommunicate, after the Manner of the Papiſts, one of them, John Corneford by Name, ſtirred with a vehement Spirit of the Zeal of God, proceeding in a more true Excommunication againſt the Papiſts, in the Name of them all, pronounced Sentence againſt them in theſe Words as follow:

In the Name of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, the Son of the moſt mighty God, and by the Power of his Holy Spirit, and the Authority of his holy catholick and apoſtolick Church, we do here give into the Hands of Satan to be deſtroyed, the Bodies of all thoſe Blaſphemers and Hereticks, that do maintain any Error againſt his moſt holy Word, or do condemn his moſt holy Truth for Hereſy, to the Maintenance of any falſe Church or feigned Religion, ſo that by this thy juſt Judgment, O moſt mighty God, againſt thy Adverſaries, thy true Religion may be known to thy great Glory and our Comfort, and to the edifying of all our Nation. Good Lord ſo be it, Amen.

This Sentence of Excommunication being the ſame Time openly pronounced and regiſtred, proceeding ſo, as it ſeemeth, from an inward Faith and hearty Zeal to God's Truth and Religion, took ſuch Effect againſt the Enemy, that within ſix Days after Queen Mary died, and the Tyranny of all Engliſh Papiſts with her. Albeit, notwithſtanding the Sickneſs and Death of that Queen, whereof they were not ignorant, yet the Archdeacon, with others of Canterbury, thought to diſpatch the Martyrdom of theſe Men before.

In which Fact, the Tyranny of this Archdeacon ſeemeth to exceed the Cruelty of Bonner, who notwithſtanding he had ſome the ſame Time under his Cuſtody, yet he was not ſo importune in haling them to the Fire, as appeareth by Father Lining and his Wife, and divers others, who being the ſame Time under the Cuſtody of Biſhop Bonner, were delivered by the Death of Queen Mary.

Theſe godly Martyrs in their Prayer which they made before their Martyrdom, deſired God that their Blood might be the laſt that ſhould be ſhed, and ſo it was.

This Katherine Tynley was the Mother of one Robert Tynley, dwelling in Maidſtone, which Robert was in Trouble all Queen Mary's Time. To whom his Mother coming to viſit him, asked him how he took this Place of Scripture which ſhe had ſeen, not by reading of the Scripture (for ſhe had yet in Manner no Taſte of Religion) but had found it by Chance in a Book of Prayers, I will pour out my Spirit upon all Fleſh, and your Sons and your Daughters ſhall propheſy; your old Men ſhall dream Dreams, and your young Men ſhall ſee Viſions. And alſo upon the Servants and upon the Maids in thoſe Days will I pour my Spirit, &c. Which Place, after that he had expounded to her, ſhe began to take hold on the Goſpel, growing more and more in Zeal and Love thereof, and ſo continued unto her Martyrdom.

The Hiſtory and Condemnation of John Hunt and Richard White, who eſcaped the Fire by the Death of Queen Mary.

BEſides theſe Martyrs above-named, there were ſeveral others impriſoned in divers Parts of the Realm; in the Number of whom was one John Hunt and Richard White, impriſoned at Salisbury. Touching which Hiſtory ſomething here is to be ſhewed.

Theſe two good Men, remained a long Time in Priſon at Salisbury, and other Places thereabouts, the Space of two Years and more. During which Time, oftentimes they were called to Examination, and manifold Ways was impugned by the Biſhops and Prieſts. All whoſe Examinations, as I thought not much needful here to inſert for the Length of the Volume; ſo neither again did I think it good to take no Notice at all of the ſame, but ſome part to expreſs, namely of the Examination of Richard White before the Biſhop of Salisbury, the Biſhop of Glouceſter, with the Chancellor and other Prieſts.

The Biſhop of Salisbury at that Time was Dr. Capon. The Biſhop of Glouceſter was Dr. Brookes. Theſe with Dr. Geffery the Chancellor of Salisbury, and a great Number of Prieſts ſitting in Judgment, Richard White was brought before them. With whom firſt the Biſhop of Glouceſter, who had the Examination of him began thus.

Brookes. Is this the Priſoner?

Chancellor. Yea, my Lord.

Brookes. Friend, wherefore cameſt thou hither?

White. My Lord, I truſt to know the Cauſe: For the Law ſaith, In the Mouth of two or three Witneſſes Things muſt ſtand.

Capon. Did not I examine thee of thy Faith when thou cameſt hither?

White. No, my Lord, you did not examine me, but commanded me to the Lollard's Tower, and that no Man ſhould ſpeak with me. And now I do require mine Accuſer.

Then the Regiſter ſaid, The Mayor of Marlborough apprehended you for Words that you ſpake there; and for that I commanded you to be convey'd hither to Priſon.

White. You had the Examination of me in Marlborough. Say what I have ſaid. And I will anſwer you.

Chancellor. Thou ſhalt confeſs thy Faith e're thou depart; and therefore ſay thy Mind freely, and be not aſhamed ſo to do.

White. I am not aſhamed of the Goſpel of Chriſt, becauſe it is the Power of God to Salvation unto all that believe: And St. Peter ſaith, If any Man do ask thee a Reaſon of the Hope that is in thee, make him a direct Anſwer and that with Meekneſs. Who ſhall have the Examination of me?

Chancellor. My Lord of Glouceſter ſhall have the Examination of thee.

White. My Lord, will you take the Pains to wet your Coat in my Blood? Be not guilty thereof; I warn you before-hand.

Brookes. I will do nothing contrary to our Law.

White. My Lord, what is it that you do requeſt at my Hands?

Brookes. I will poſe thee upon certain Articles, and principally upon the Sacrament of the Altar: How doſt thou believe of the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar? Believeſt thou not the real, carnal, and corporal Preſence of Chriſt in the ſame, even the very ſame Chriſt that was born of the Virgin Mary, that was hanged on the Croſs, that ſuffered for our Sins? (and at theſe Words they all put off their Caps, and bowed their Bodies.)

White. My Lord, what is a Sacrament?

Brookes. It is the Thing itſelf the which it repreſenteth.

White. That cannot be; for he that repreſenteth a Prince cannot be the Prince himſelf.

Brookes. How many Sacraments findeſt thou in the Scriptures called by the Name of Sacraments?

White. I find two Sacraments in the Scriptures; but not called by the Names of Sacraments. But I think St. Auguſtin gave them the firſt Name of Sacraments.

Brookes. Then thou findeſt not that Word Sacrament in the Scriptures.

White. No, my Lord.

Brookes. Did not Chriſt ſay, This is my Body, and are not his Words true?

White. I am ſure the Words are true; but you play by me as the Devil did by Chriſt: For he ſaid, If thou be, &c. Matt. 4. For it is, &c. Pſal. 91. But the Words that followed after be clean left out, which are theſe: Thou ſhalt walk on the Lion and the Aſp, &c. Theſe Words the Devil left out, becauſe they were ſpoke againſt himſelf; and even ſo do you recite the Scriptures.

Brookes. Declare thy Faith upon the Sacrament.

White. Chriſt and his Sacraments are alike, becauſe of the Natures; for in Chriſt are two Natures, a divine and an human Nature; ſo likewiſe in the Sacraments of Chriſt's Body and Blood there be two Natures, which I divide into two Parts, that is, external and internal. The external Part is the Element of Bread and Wine, according to the Saying of St. Auguſtine. The internal Part is the inviſible Grace, which by the ſame is repreſented. So is there an external receiving of the ſame Sacrament, and an internal. The external is with the Hand, the Eye, the Mouth, and the Ear. The internal is by the Holy Ghoſt in the Heart, which worketh in me Faith; whereby I apprehend all the Merits of Chriſt, applying the ſame wholly unto my Salvation. If this be the Truth, believe it; and if it be not, reprove it.

Dr. Hoskins. This is Oecolampadius's Doctrine, and Hooper taught it the People.

Brookes. Doſt thou not believe, that after the Words of Conſecration there is the natural Preſence of Chriſt's Body?

White. My Lord, I will anſwer you if you will anſwer me to one Queſtion. Is not this Article of our Belief true; He ſitteth at the right Hand of God the Father Almighty: If he be come from thence to Judgment, ſay ſo.

Brookes. No. But if thou wilt believe the Scriptures, I will prove to thee that Chriſt was both in Heaven and in Earth at one Time.

White. As he is God he is in all Places; but as for his Manhood, he is but in one Place.

Brookes. St. Paul ſaith, 1 Cor. 15. Laſt of all he was ſeen of me, &c. Here St. Paul ſaith he ſaw Chriſt, and St. Paul was not in Heaven.

White. St. Paul's chief Purpoſe was by this Place to prove the Reſurrection. But how do you prove that Chriſt, when he appeared to St. Paul, was not ſtill in Heaven; like as he was ſeen of Stephen, ſitting at the right Hand of God? St. Auguſtine ſaith, the Head that was in Heaven, did cry for the Body and Members which were on the Earth, and ſaid, Saul, Saul, why perſecuteſt thou me? And was not Paul taken up into the third Heaven, where he might ſee Chriſt? as he witneſſeth, 1 Cor. 15. For there he doth but only ſay he ſaw Chriſt, but concerning the Place he ſpeaketh nothing. Wherefore this Place of Scripture proveth not that Chriſt was both in Heaven and Earth at one Time.

Brookes. I told you before he would not believe. Here be three Opinions, the Lutherans, the Œcolampadians, and we the Catholicks. If you the Œcolampadians have the Truth, then the Lutherans and we the Catholicks be out of the Way. If the Lutherans have the Truth, then you the Œcolampadians and we the Catholicks be out of the Way. But if we the Catholicks have the Truth, as we have indeed, then the Lutherans and you the Œcolampadians are out of the Way, as you are indeed, for the Lutherans do call you Hereticks.

White. My Lord, ye have troubled me greatly with the Scriptures.

Brookes. Did I not tell you it was not poſſible to remove him from his Error? Away with him to the Lollard's Tower, and diſpatch him as ſoon as ye can.

This was the Effect of my firſt Examination. More Examinations I had after this, which I have no Time now to recite.

Amongſt many other Examinations of the aforeſaid Richard White, it happen'd one Time, that Dr. Blackſtone Chancellor of Exeter ſate upon him, with divers others, who alledging certain Doctors, as Chryſoſtom, Cyprian, Tertullian, againſt the ſaid Richard White, and being reproved by him for his falſe patching of the Doctors, fell into ſuch a Trembling and Shaking, (his Conſcience belike accuſing him) that he was fain, ſtooping down, to lay both his Hands upon his Knees to ſtay his Body from Trembling.

Then the ſaid John Hunt and Richard White, after many Examinations and long Captivity, at length were called for, and brought before Dr. Geffery the Biſhop's Chancellor, there to be condemned, and ſo they were. The High-Sheriff at that preſent was Sir Anthony Hungerford, who being then at the Seſſions, was there charged with theſe two condemned Perſons, with other Malefactors there condemned likewiſe the ſame Time, to ſee them put to Death.

In the mean Time Mr. Clifford of Boſco in Wiltſhire, Son-in-law to the ſaid Sir Anthony Hungerford the Sheriff, came to his Father, exhorting and counſelling him in no Caſe to meddle with the Death of theſe two innocent Perſons; and if the Chancellor and Prieſts would needs be inſtant upon him, yet he ſhould firſt require the Writ to be ſent down De comburendo for his Diſcharge.

Sir Anthony Hungerford hearing this, and underſtanding Juſtice Brown to be in the Town the ſame Time, went to him to ask his Advice and Counſel in the Matter, who told him that without the Writ ſent down from the ſuperior Powers, he could not be diſcharged, and if the Writ were ſent, then he muſt by the Law do his Charge.

The Sheriff underſtanding by Juſtice Brown how far he might go by Law, and having at that Time no Writ for his Warrant, let them alone, and the next Day after taking his Horſe departed.

The

The Chancellor all this while marvelling what the Sheriff meant, and yet disdaining to go unto him, but looking rather the other should have come first to him, at last hearing that he was rid away, took his Horse and rid after him; who at length overtaking the Sheriff, declared unto him how he had committed certain condemned Prisoners to his Hand, whose Duty had been to have seen Execution done, the Matter, he said, was great, and therefore willed him to look well unto it how he would answer the Matter.

The Sheriff hearing the Chancellor's Words, and seeing him so urging upon him, told him again that he was no Babe, which now was to be taught of him. If he had any Writ to warrant and discharge him in burning those Men, then he knew what he had to do. Why, saith the Chancellor, did not I give you a Writ, with my Hand and eight more of the Close set unto the same? Well, quoth the Sheriff, that is no sufficient Discharge for me; and therefore as I told you, if ye have a sufficient Writ and Warrant from the superior Powers, I know then what I have to do in my Office; otherwise, if you have no other Writ but that, I tell you, I will neither burn them for you, nor any of you all, &c. After which Words, Dr. Geffrey the Chancellor went home, and soon after fell sick.

The Under-Sheriff to this Sir Anthony Hungerford above-named, was one Mr. Michell, a good Man. So that not long after this came down the Writ to burn the above-named Richard White, and John Hunt, but the Under-Sheriff receiving the said Writ, said, I will not be guilty of these Mens Blood, and immediately burnt the Writing, and departed his Way. Within four Days after the Chancellor died.

Richard White and John Hunt, after the Death of the Chancellor, the Bishop also being dead a little before, continued still in Prison till the happy coming in of Queen Elizabeth: and so were at Liberty.

The Martyrdom of a young Lad of eight Years old, scourged to Death in Bishop Bonner's House in London.

AMongst those that were persecuted and miserably imprisoned for the Profession of Christ's Gospel, and yet mercifully delivered by the Providence of God, there was one John Fetty, a godly poor Man, dwelling in the Parish of Clarkenwel, and was by Vocation a Taylor, of the Age of twenty four Years or thereabouts, who was accused and complained of unto one Brokenbury a Parson of the same Parish, by his own Wife, because he would not come unto the Church, and be Partaker of their Superstition; and therefore, through the said Priest's Procurement, he was apprehended by Richard Tanner and his fellow Constables there, and one Martin the Headborough. Howbeit, immediately upon his Apprehension, his Wife (by the just Judgment of God) was stricken Mad, and distract of her Wits, which declared a marvellous Example of the Justice of God against such unnatural Treachery. And although this Example perhaps for lack of Knowledge and Instruction in such Cases little moved the Consciences of those simple poor Men to cease their Persecution; yet natural Pity towards that ungrateful Woman wrought so in their Hearts, that for the Preservation and Support of her and her two Children (like otherwise to perish) they for that present let her Husband alone, and would not carry him to Prison, but yet suffered him to remain quietly in his own House. During which Time, he as it were forgetting the unkind Fact of his Wife, did yet so cherish and provide for her, that within the Space of three Weeks (through God's merciful Providence) she was well amended, and had recovered again some Stay of her Senses.

But such was the Power of Satan in the malicious Heart of that wicked Woman, that notwithstanding his gentle Dealing with her, yet so soon as she had recovered some Health she did again accuse her Husband; whereupon he was a second Time apprehended, and carried unto Sir John Mordant, Knight, one of the Queen's Commissioners, and he upon Examination sent him by Cluny, the Bishop's Sumner, unto the Lollard's Tower: Where he was put into the painful Stocks, and had a Dish of Water set him, with a Stone put into it. To what Purpose God knoweth, except it were to shew that he should look for little other Sustenance.

After the aforesaid John Fetty had thus lain in Prison by the Space of fifteen Days, hanging in the Stocks, sometimes by one Leg and one Arm, sometimes by the other, and sometimes by both, it happened that one of his Children (a Boy of the Age of eight or nine Years) came unto the Bishop's House to see if he could get Leave to speak with his Father. At his coming thither, one of the Bishop's Chaplains met with him, and asked him what he lacked, and whom he would have. The Child answered, that he came to see his Father. The Chaplain asked again who was his Father. The Boy then told him, and pointing towards Lollard's Tower, shewed him that his Father was there in Prison. Why, said the Priest, thy Father is an Heretick: The Child being of a bold and quick Spirit, and also godly brought up, and instructed by his Father in the Knowledge of God, answered and said; my Father is no Heretick; for you have Balaam's Mark.

With that the Priest took the Child by the Hand, and carried him into the Bishop's House, and there amongst them they did most shamefully and without all Pity so whip and scourge, being naked, this tender Child, that he was all in a gore Blood, and then in jolly Bragg of their catholick Tyranny, they caused Cluny, having his Coat upon his Arm, to carry the Child in his Shirt unto his Father being in Prison, the Blood running down his Heels.

At his coming unto his Father, the Child fell down upon his Knees, and asked his Blessing. The poor Man then beholding his Child, and seeing him so cruelly arayed, cried out for Sorrow, and said; alas Will, who hath done this to thee? the Boy answered, that as he was seeking how to come to see his Father, a Priest with Balaam's Mark took him into the Bishop's House, and there was he so handled. Cluny therewith violently plucked the Child away out of his Father's Hands, and carried him back again into the Bishop's House, where they kept him three Days after.

And at three Days end, Bonner (minding to make the Matter whole, and somewhat to appease the poor Man, for this their horrible Fact) determined to release him; and therefore caused him early in the Morning to be brought out of Lollard's Tower into his Bed-chamber, where he found the Bishop bathing of himself against a great Fire; and at his first entring into the Chamber, Fetty said, God be here, and Peace. God be here and Peace, said Bonner; that is neither God speed, nor good Morrow. If ye kick against this Peace (said Fetty) then this is not the Place that I seek for.

A Chaplain of the Bishop's standing by, turn'd the poor Man about, and thinking to deface him, said in mocking wise: What have we here, a Player? whilst Fetty was thus standing in the Bishop's Chamber, he espied hanging about the Bishop's Bed a great pair of black Beads; whereupon he said, my Lord, I think the Hangman is not far off; for the Halter, pointing to the Beads, is here already. At which Words the Biſhop was in a marvellous Rage.

Then he immediately after eſpied alſo ſtanding in the ſaid Biſhop's Chamber in the Window a little Crucifix. Then he asked the Biſhop what it was; and he anſwered that it was Chriſt. Was he handled ſo cruelly as he is here pictured, ſaid Fetty?

Yea, that he was, ſaid the Biſhop.

And even ſo cruelly will you handle ſuch as come before you: For you are unto God's People as Caiaphas was unto Chriſt.

The Biſhop being in a great Fury, ſaid, Thou art a vile Heretick, and I will burn thee, or elſe I will ſpend all that I have unto my Gown.

Nay, my Lord, ſaid Fetty, ye were better to give it to ſome poor Body, that he may pray for you. But yet Bonner bethinking himſelf of the Danger that the Child was in by their whipping, and what Peril might enſue thereupon, thought better to diſcharge him; which Thing was accompliſhed.

Whereupon, after this and ſuch like Talk, the Biſhop at laſt diſcharged him, willing him to go home, and carry his Child with him; which he did, and that with a heavy Heart to ſee his poor Boy in ſuch extream Pain and Grief. But within fourteen Days after the Child died, whether through his cruel Scourging, or any other Infirmity, I know not; and therefore I refer the Truth thereof unto the Lord, who knoweth all Secrets.

The cruel handling of Nicholas Burton, an Engliſh Merchant in Spain.

I Think it not amiſs in this Place to mention the Story of Nicholas Burton, being ſuch as is not unworthy to be known, as well for the Example of his ſingular Conſtancy, as alſo for the noting of the extream Dealing and cruel Revenge of thoſe catholick Inquiſitors of Spain, who under the pretenſed Viſor of Religion, do nothing but ſeek their own private Gain and Advantage, with crafty rifling and ſpoiling of other Mens Goods, as by this Story may appear.

The fifth Day of November, about the Year of our Lord 1560, this Nicholas Burton, Citizen ſometime of London, and Merchant, dwelling in the Pariſh of Little Saint Bartholomew, peaceably and quietly following his Traffick in the Trade of Merchandiſe, and being in the City of Cadiz in Spain, there came into his Lodging a Judas (or, as they term them) a Familiar of the Fathers of the Inquiſition. Who asking for the ſaid Nicholas Burton, feigned that he had a Letter to deliver to his own Hands; by which Means he ſpake with him immediately. And having no Letter to deliver to him, then the ſaid Promoter or Familiar, at the Motion of the Devil his Maſter, whoſe Meſſenger he was, invented another Lie, and ſaid, that he would take Lading for London in ſuch Ships as the ſaid Nicholas Burton had freighted to lade, if he would let any; which was partly to know where he laded his Goods, that they might attach them, and chiefly to protract the Time until the Serjeant of the Inquiſition might come and apprehend the Body of the ſaid Nicholas Burton; which they did incontinently.

Who then well perceiving that they were not able to burden nor charge him that he had written, ſpoke, or done any Thing there in that Country againſt the eccleſiaſtical or temporal Laws of the ſame Realm, boldly asked them what they had to lay to his Charge that they did ſo arreſt him, and bade them to declare the Cauſe, and he would anſwer them. Notwithſtanding they anſwered nothing, but commanded him with cruel threatning Words to hold his Peace, and not to ſpeak one Word to them. And ſo they carried him to the filthy common Priſon of the Town of Cadiz, where he remained in Irons fourteen Days amongſt Thieves.

All which Time he ſo inſtructed the poor Priſoners in the Word of God, according to the good Talent which God had given him in that Behalf, and alſo in the Spaniſh Tongue to utter the ſame, that in ſhort Space he had well reclaimed ſeveral of thoſe ſuperſtitious Spaniards to embrace the Word of God, and to reject their popiſh Traditions.

Which being known unto the Officers of the Inquiſition, they conveyed him laden with Irons from thence to a City called Sevil, into a more cruel and ſtraiter Priſon, where the ſaid Fathers of the Inquiſition proceeded againſt him ſecretly according to their cruel Tyranny, that never after he could be ſuffered to write or to ſpeak to any of his Nation; ſo that to this Day it is unknown who was his Accuſer.

Afterward, the 20th of December, they brought the ſaid Nicholas Burton, with a great Number of other Priſoners, for profeſſing the true Chriſtian Religion, into the City of Sevil, to a Place where the ſaid Inquiſitors ſate in Judgment, which they call'd Auto, with a Canvas Coat, whereupon in divers Parts was painted the Figure of a huge Devil, tormenting a Soul in a Flame of Fire, and on his Head a copping Tank of the ſame Work.

His Tongue was forced out of his Mouth with a cloven Stick faſtened upon it, that he ſhould not utter his Conſcience and Faith to the People, and ſo he was ſet with another Engliſhman of Southampton, and divers other condemned Men for Religion, as well Frenchmen, as Spaniards, upon a Scaffold over-againſt the ſaid Inquiſition, where their Sentences and Judgments were read and pronounced againſt them.

And immediately after the ſaid Sentences given, they were carried from thence to the Place of Execution without the City, where they moſt cruelly burned him, for whoſe conſtant Faith, God be praiſed.

This Nicholas Burton by the way, and in the Flames of Fire had ſo chearful a Countenance, embracing Death with all Patience and Gladneſs, that the Tormentors and Enemies which ſtood by, ſaid, that the Devil had his Soul before he came to the Fire; and therefore they ſaid his Senſes of feeling were paſt him.

A Treatiſe concerning thoſe that were ſcourged by the Papiſts for the Cauſe of the Goſpel.

AFter this bloody Slaughter of God's Servants thus diſcuſſed, let us now proceed to treat of ſuch as for the ſame Cauſe of Religion have been, though not put to Death, yet whipped and ſcourged by the Enemies of God's Word, firſt beginning with Richard Wilmot and Thomas Fairfax, who about the Time of Anne Askew, were miſerably rent and tormented with Scourges and Stripes, for their faithful ſtanding to Chriſt and his Truth.

The Scourging of Richard Wilmot and Thomas Fairfax.

AFter the firſt Recantation of Dr. Crome for his Sermon which he made the fifth Sunday in Lent at St. Thomas Acres, being the Mercer's Chapel, his Sermon was on the Epiſtle of the ſame Day, written in the tenth Chapter to the Hebrews; wherein he very learnedly proved by the ſame Place of Scripture and others, that Chriſt was the only and ſufficient Sacrifice unto God the Father for the Sins of the whole World, and that there was no more Sacrifice to be offered for Sin by the Prieſts, foraſmuch as Chriſt had offered his Body on the Croſs, and ſhed his Blood for the Sins of the People, and that once for all. For which Sermon he was apprehended by Bonner, and brought before Stephen Gardner and others of the Council, where he promiſed to recant his Doctrine at Paul's Croſs, the ſecond Sunday after Eaſter. And accordingly he was there and preached, Bonner with all his Doctors ſitting before him: But he ſo preached and handled his Matter, that he rather verify'd his former Saying, than deny'd any part of that which he before had preached. For which the Proteſtants praiſed God, and heartily rejoiced.

Biſhop Bonner and his Champions were not at all pleaſed therewith, but yet notwithſtanding they took him home with them, and was ſo handled among the wolfiſh Generation, that they made him come to the Croſs again the next Sunday.

And becauſe the Magiſtrates ſhould now hear him, and be witneſs of this Recantation which was moſt blaſphemous, to deny Chriſt's Sacrifice to be ſufficient for penitent Sinners, and to ſay that the Sacrifice of the Maſs was good, godly, and an holy Sacrifice, propitiatory and available both for the Quick and the Dead: Becauſe (I ſay) that they would have the Nobles to hear this blaſphemous Doctrine, the viperous Generation procured all the Chief of the Council to be there preſent.

Now to come to our Matter; at this Time, the ſame Week, between his firſt Sermon and the laſt, and while Dr. Crome was in Durance, one Richard Wilmot being Apprentice in Bow-lane, of the Age of 18 Years, and ſitting at work in his Maſter's Shop, in the Month of July, one Lewis a Welchman, being one of the Guard, came into the Shop, having Things to do for himſelf.

One asked him what News at the Court, and he anſwered, that the old Heretick Dr. Crome had recanted now indeed before the Council, and that he ſhould on Sunday next be at Paul's Croſs again, and there declare it.

Then Wilmot ſitting at his Maſter's Work, and hearing him ſpeak theſe Words, and rejoycing in the ſame, began to ſpeak unto him, ſaying, that he was ſorry to hear this News: For (ſaid he) if Crome ſhould ſay otherwiſe than he hath ſaid, then it is contrary to the Truth of God's Word, and contrary to his own Conſcience, which ſhall before God accuſe him.

Lewis anſwered and ſaid, that he had preached and taught Hereſy; and therefore it was meet that he ſhould in ſuch a Place revoke it.

Wilmot told him that he would not ſo ſay, neither did he hear him preach any Doctrine contrary to God's written Word, but that he proved his Doctrine, and that ſufficiently, by the Scriptures.

Lewis then asked him how he knew that.

Wilmot anſwered, By the Scriptures of God, wherein he ſhall find God's Will and Pleaſure, what he willeth all Men to do, and what not to do; and alſo by them he ſhould prove and try all Doctrines, and the falſe Doctrine from the true.

Lewis ſaid, it was never well ſince the Bible was tranſlated into Engliſh: And that he was both an Heretick and a Traitor that cauſed it to be tranſlated into Engliſh (meaning Cromwel) and therefore was rewarded according to his Deſerts.

Wilmot anſwered again, What his Deſerts and Offences were to his Prince a great many do not know, neither is it of any Force whether they do or no; once, he was ſure that he loſt his Life for offending his Prince, and the Law did put it in Execution; adding moreover, concerning that Man, that he thought it pleaſed God to raiſe him from a low Eſtate, and to place him in high Authority, partly unto this, that he ſhould do that which all the Biſhops in the Realm yet never did, in reſtoring again God's holy Word, which being hid long before from the People in a ſtrange Tongue, and now coming abroad amongſt us, will bring our Biſhops and Prieſts, ſaid he, in leſs Eſtimation among the People.

Lewis asked why ſo?

Wilmot ſaid, Becauſe their Doctrine and Living is not agreeable to his Word.

Then ſaid Lewis, I never heard but that all Men ſhould learn of the Biſhops and Prieſts, becauſe they are learned Men, and have been brought up in Learning all the Days of their Lives. Wherefore they muſt needs know the Truth, and our Fathers did believe their Doctrine and Learning, and I think they did well, for the World was far better then than it is now.

Wilmot anſwered, I will not ſay ſo: For we muſt not believe them becauſe they are Biſhops, neither becauſe they be learned, neither becauſe our Forefathers did follow their Doctrine. For I have read in God's Book, how that Biſhops and learned Men have taught the People falſe Doctrine, and likewiſe the Prieſts from time to time, and indeed thoſe People our Forefathers believed as they taught, and as they thought, ſo thought the People. But for all this Chriſt calleth them falſe Prophets, Thieves, and Murderers, blind Leaders of the Blind, willing the People to take Heed of them, leſt they ſhould both fall into the Ditch.

Moreover we read, that Biſhops, Prieſts, and learned Men have been commonly Reſiſters of the Truth from time to time, and have always perſecuted the Prophets in the old Law, as their Succeſſors did perſecute our Saviour Chriſt and his Diſciples in the new Law. We muſt take heed therefore that we credit them no further than God will have us, neither follow them nor our Forefathers otherwiſe than he commandeth us. For Almighty God hath given to all People, as well to Kings and Princes, as Biſhops, Prieſts, learned and unlearned Men, a Commandment and Law, unto which he willeth all Men to be obedient. Therefore if any Biſhop or Prieſt preach or teach, or Prince or Magiſtrate command any Thing contrary to his Commandment, we muſt take heed how we obey them. For it is better for us to obey God than Man.

Marry, Sir, quoth Lewis, you are an holy Doctor indeed. By God's Blood, if you were my Man, I would ſet you about your Buſineſs a little better, and not ſuffer you to look upon Books, and ſo would your Maſter if he were wiſe. And with that in came his Maſter, and a young Man with him, who was a Servant to Mr. Daubney in Watling-ſtreet.

His Maſter asked him what the Matter was.

Lewis ſaid, that he had a knaviſh Boy here to his Servant, and how that if he were his, he would rather hang him than keep him in his Houſe.

Then his Maſter being ſomewhat moved, asked his Fellows what the Matter was.

They ſaid, they began to talk about Dr. Crome.

Then his Maſter asked what he had ſaid, ſwearing a great Oath, that he would make him to tell him.

He ſaid, that he truſted he had ſaid nothing, wherewith either he or Mr. Lewis might juſtly be offended. I pray (quoth Wilmot) ask him what I ſaid.

Marry (ſaid Lewis) this he ſaid, That Dr. Crome did preach and teach nothing but the Truth, and how that if he recanted on Sunday next, he ſhould be ſorry to hear it, and that if he do, he is made to do it againſt his Conſcience. And more he ſaith, that we muſt not follow our Biſhops Doctrine and Preaching: For, ſaith he, they be Hinderers of God's Word, and Perſecutors of that; and how Cromwel (that Traytor) did more Good in ſetting forth the Bible, than all all our Biſhops have done theſe hundred Years: Thus reporting the Matter worſe than it really was.

His Maſter hearing this, was in a great Fury, and rated him, ſaying, that either he would be hanged or burned, ſwearing that he would take away all his Books and burn them.

The young Man (Mr. Daubney's Servant) ſtanding by hearing this, began to ſpeak on his Part unto Lewis; and his Talk confirmed all the Sayings of the other to be true.

This young Man was learned, his Name was Thomas Fairfax. Lewis hearing this Man's Talk as well as the other's, went his Way in a Rage to the Court.

On the Morrow they heard News, that the ſaid Wilmot and Fairfax were ſent for to come to the Lord Mayor. The Meſſenger was Mr. Smart the Sword-Bearer of London. They came before Dinner to the Mayor's Houſe, and were commanded to ſit down at Dinner in the Hall; and when Dinner was done, they were both called into a Parlour, where the Mayor and Sir Roger Cholmley was, who examined them ſeverally, the one not hearing the other.

The Effect of their Talk was this; Sir Roger Cholmley ſaid to Wilmot, that my Lord Mayor and he had received a Commandment from the Council, to ſend for him and his Company, and to examine them of certain Things which were laid to their Charge.

Then ſaid Mr. Cholmley to him, Sirrah, what Countryman art thou? He anſwered, that he was born in Cambridgeſhire, and in ſuch a Town. Then he asked him, how long he had been in the City. He told him. Then he asked what Learning he had. He ſaid, little Learning and ſmall Knowledge. Then (deridingly) he asked how long he had known Dr. Crome. He ſaid, about two Years. Then he call'd him a lying Boy, and ſaid that he (the ſaid Wilmot) was his Son.

The other ſaid unto him, that was unlike, for that he never ſaw his Mother, nor ſhe him. Cholmley ſaid he lied. Wilmot ſaid he could prove it to be true. Then he asked him how he liked his Sermon that he made at St. Thomas Acres Chappel in Lent. He ſaid that indeed he heard him not. He ſaid yes, and the other nay. Then ſaid he, what ſay you to his Sermon made at the Croſs the laſt Day, heard you not that?

Wilmot. Yes, and in that Sermon he deceived a great Number of People.

Cholmley. How ſo?

Wilmot. For that they looked that he ſhould have recanted his Doctrine that he taught before, and did not, but rather confirmed it.

Cholmley. Yea, Sir, but how ſay you now to him? for he hath recanted before the Council; and hath promiſed on Sunday next to be at the Croſs again: How think ye in that?

Wilmot. If he ſo did, I am the more ſorry to hear it; and ſaid, he thought he did it for Fear and Safeguard of his Life.

Cholmley. But what ſay you? Was his firſt Sermon Hereſy or not?

Wilmot. No, I ſuppoſe it was no Hereſy. For if it were, St. Paul's Epiſtle to the Hebrews was Hereſy, and Paul an Heretick that preached ſuch Doctrine, but God forbid that any Chriſtian Man ſhould ſo think of the holy Apoſtle; neither do I ſo think.

Cholmley. Why, how knoweſt thou that St. Paul wrote thoſe Things that are in Engliſh now, to be true, whereas Paul never wrote Engliſh or Latin?

Wilmot. I am certified that learned Men of God, that did ſeek to advance his Word, did tranſlate the ſame out of the Greek and Hebrew into Latin and Engliſh, and that they durſt not preſume to alter the Senſe of the Scripture of God, and laſt Will and Teſtament of Chriſt Jeſus.

Then the Lord Mayor, being in a great Fury, asked him what he had to do to read ſuch Books, and ſaid, that it was Pity that his Maſter did ſuffer him ſo to do, and that he was not ſet better to Work; and in fine ſaid unto him, that he had ſpoken Evil of my Lord of Wincheſter and Biſhop Bonner, thoſe reverend and learned Fathers and Counſellors of this Realm, for which his Fact he ſaw no other but he muſt ſuffer, as was due to the ſame. And Mr. Cholmley ſaid, yea, my Lord, there are ſuch a Sort of Hereticks and traitorly Knaves taken now in Eſſex by my Lord Rich, that it is too wonderful to hear. They ſhall be ſent to the Biſhop ſhortly, and ſhall be hanged and burned all.

Wilmot. I am ſorry to hear that of my Lord Rich, for that he was my Godfather, and gave me my Name at my Baptiſm.

Cholmley asked him when he ſpake with him. He ſaid not theſe twelve Years.

Cholmley. If he knew that you were ſuch a one, he would do the like by you, and in ſo doing he ſhould do God great Service.

Wilmot. I have read the ſame Saying in the Goſpel, that Chriſt ſaid to his Diſciples, The Time ſhall come, ſaith he, that whoſoever killeth you, ſhall think that he ſhall do God good Service.

Well Sir, ſaid Cholmley, becauſe you are ſo full of your Scripture, and ſo well learned, we conſider you lack a quiet Place to ſtudy in. Therefore you ſhall go to a Place where you ſhall be moſt quiet, and I would wiſh you to ſtudy how you will anſwer to the Council of thoſe Things which they have to charge you with, for elſe it is like to coſt you your beſt Joynt. I know my Lord of Wincheſter will handle you well enough, when he heareth thus much. Then was the Officer called in to have him to the Compter in the Poultry, and the other to the other Compter, not one of them to ſee another; and thus they remained eight Days. In which Time their Maſters made great Suit to the Lord-Mayor, and to Sir Roger Chomley, to know their Offences, and that they might be delivered.

At length they procured the Wardens of the Company of Drapers to labour with them in their Suit to the Mayor. The Mayor went with them to the Council: But at that Time they could find no Grace at Wincheſter's Hand, and Sir Anthony Browne's, but that they had deſerved Death, and that they ſhould have the Law.

At length, through much Intreaty, he granted them this Favour, that they ſhould not die as they had deſerved, but ſhould be tied to a Cart's Tail, and be whipped three Market-Days through the City. Thus they came Home that Day, and went another Day, and the Maſter and Wardens of the Company petition'd on their Knees to have this open Puniſhment releaſed, forſomuch as they were Servants of ſo worſhipful a Company, and that they might be puniſhed in their own Hall before the Wardens and certain of the Company, which at length was granted.

The next Day they appear'd before the Maſters in the Hall, their own Maſters being preſent, where they were charged with Hereſy and Treaſon, for which, they were told, they deſerved Death, and this was declared with a long Proceſs by Mr. Brookes the Maſter of the Company, declaring what great Labour and Suit the Mayor and Wardens had made for them, to ſave them from Death, which they (as he ſaid) had deſerved, and from open Shame, which they ſhould have had, being judged by the Council to have been whipped three Days through the City at a Cart's Tail, and from theſe two Dangers had they laboured to deliver them, but not without great Trouble and Charge. For (ſaid he) the Company hath promiſed to the Council for this their Mercy towards them, an hundred Pounds, notwithſtanding we muſt ſee them puniſhed in our Hall within ourſelves for thoſe their Offences. After theſe and many other Words, Words, he commanded them to prepare themſelves to receive their Puniſhment.

Then they were put aſunder, and ſtripped from the Waſte upward one after another, and had into the midſt of the Hall, where they were wont to make their Fire, there was a great Ring of Iron, to which there was a Rope tied faſt, and one of their Feet ty'd faſt to that.

Then came down two Men diſguiſed in Mummer's Apparel, with Viſors on their Faces, and they beat them with great Rods till the Blood flow'd out of their Bodies. As for Wilmot, he could not lie in his Bed for ſix Nights after, for Brookes play'd the Tyrant with them; ſo that with the Pain and Fear, they were never in Health afterwards, as the ſaid Wilmot with his own Mouth hath credibly informed us, and we can do no leſs than teſtify the ſame.

The Scourging of Thomas Green, Printer, written by his own Hand.

IN the Reign of Queen Mary, I Thomas Green being brought before Dr. Story by my Maſter, whoſe Name is John Wayland a Printer, for a Book called Antichriſt, which had been diſtributed to certain honeſt Men; he asked me where I had the Book, and ſaid I was a Traytor. I told him I had the Book of a Frenchman. Then he asked me more Queſtions, but I told him I could tell him no more. Then he ſaid, it was no Hereſy, but Treaſon, and that I ſhould be hanged, drawn, and quartered, and ſo he called for Cluny, the Keeper of the Lollard's-Tower, and bade him ſet me faſt in the Stocks.

I was not in the Lollard's-Tower two Hours, but Cluny came and took me out, and carried me to the Coal-houſe, and there I found a Frenchman lying in the Stocks, and he took him out, and put a Bolt and a Fetter on my right Leg, and another on my left Hand, and ſo he ſet me croſs fettered in the Stocks, and took the Frenchman away with him, and there I lay a Day and a Night. On the Morrow after, he came and ſaid, let us ſhift your Hand and your Leg, becauſe you ſhall not be lame; and he made as tho' he pitied me, and ſaid, tell me the Truth and I will be your Friend.

And I ſaid, I had told the Truth, and could tell no otherwiſe. Then he put only my Leg in the Stocks, and ſo went his Way, and there I remained ſix Days, and could come to no Anſwer.

Then Dr. Story ſent for me, and asked whether I would tell him the Truth, where I had the Book. I ſaid I had told him, of a Frenchman. He asked me where I came acquainted with the Frenchman, where he dwelt, and where he delivered me the Book. I ſaid, I came acquainted with him in Newgate, I coming to my Friends which were put in for God's Word and Truth's Sake, and the Frenchman coming to his Friends alſo, there we talked together, and became acquainted one with another, and did eat and drink together there with our Friends in the Fear of God.

Then Story ſcoffed at me and ſaid, then there was, Brother in Chriſt, and Brother in Chriſt, and reviled me, and called me an Heretick, and asked me if I had the Book of him in Newgate. I ſaid no, and I told him, as I went on my Buſineſs in the Street I met him, and he asked me how I did, and I him alſo; ſo falling into Diſcourſe, he ſhewed me that Book, and I deſired him that he would let me have it.

In this Examination Story ſaid, it was a great Book, and asked me whether I bought it, or had it given me. I told him I bought it. Then he ſaid, I was a Thief, and had ſtolen my Maſter's Money. And I ſaid, a little Money ſerved, for I gave him but four-pence, but I promiſed him, that at our next Meeting I would give twelve-pence more. And he ſaid, that was boldly done, for ſuch a Book as ſpake both Treaſon and Hereſy.

Then Story required me to bring him two Sureties, and watch for him that I had the Book of, and I ſhould have no Harm. I made him Anſwer, I would bring no Sureties, nor could I tell where to find them. Then ſaid he, this is but a Lie, and ſo called for Cluny, and bade him lay me faſt in the Cole-houſe, ſaying, he would make me tell another Tale at my next coming: And ſo I lay in the Stocks Day and Night, but only when I eat my Meat, and there remained ten Days before I was called for again.

Then Dr. Story ſent for me again, and asked if I would yet tell him the Truth. I ſaid, I neither could nor would tell him any other Truth than I had done already. And while I was there ſtanding, there were two brought which I took to be Priſoners.

Then Mrs. Story fell in a Rage, and ſware a great Oath, that it were a good Deed to put a hundred or two of theſe heretick Knaves in an Houſe, and I myſelf (ſaid ſhe) would ſet it on Fire. So I was committed to Priſon again, where I remained fourteen Days, and came to no Anſwer.

Then Story ſent for me again, and called me into the Garden, where I found with him my Lord of Windſor's Chaplain, and two Gentlemen more, and he told them all what they had ſaid and done. They ſaid, the Book was a wondrous evil Book, and had both Treaſon and Hereſy in it. Then they asked me what I ſaid of the Book. And I ſaid, I knew no Evil by it.

At which Words Story chafed, and ſaid he would hang me up by the Hands with a Rope, and ſaid alſo he would cut out my Tongue, and mine Ears alſo from my Head. After this they alledged two or three Things unto me out of the Book. And I anſwered, I had not read the Book throughout, and therefore I could give no Judgment of it.

Then my Lord of Windſor's Chaplain and the other two Gentlemen took me aſide, and intreated me very gently, ſaying, Tell us where you had the Book, and of whom, and I will ſave you harmleſs. I made them Anſwer, that I had told all I could to Doctor Story, and began to tell it them again: But they ſaid, they knew that already; ſo they left that Talk, and went again with me to Story.

Then Story burdened me with my Faith, and ſaid I was an Heretick. Whereupon the Chaplain asked me how I did believe. Then I began to rehearſe the Articles of my Belief, but he bade me let that alone. Then he asked me how I believed in Chriſt. I made him Anſwer, that I believed in Chriſt who died and roſe again the third Day, and ſitteth on the right Hand of God the Father.

Whereupon Story asked me mockingly, what is the right Hand of God? I made him Anſwer, I thought it was his Glory. Then ſaid he, So they ſay all. And he asked me when he would be weary of ſitting there. Then inferred my Lord of Windſor's Chaplain, asking me what I ſaid of the Maſs. I ſaid, I never knew what it was, nor what it meant, for I underſtood it not, becauſe I never learned any Latin, and ſince the Time I had any Knowledge, I had been brought up in nothing but in reading of Engliſh, and with ſuch Men as have taught the ſame; with many more Queſtions, which I cannot rehearſe.

Moreover he asked me if there were not the very Body of Chriſt, Fleſh, Blood and Bone in the Maſs, after the Prieſt had conſecrated it. And I made him Anſwer; as for the Maſs I cannot underſtand it; but in the New Teſtament I read, that as the Apoſtles ſtood looking after the Lord when he aſcended up into Heaven, an Angel ſaid to them, Even as you ſee him aſcend up, ſo ſhall he come again. And I told them another Sentence, where Chriſt ſaith, The Poor ſhall you have always with you, but me ye ſhall not have always.

Then Mr. Chaplain put many more Queſtions to me, to which I made no Anſwer. Among others, he brought Chryſoſtome and St. Hierome for his Purpoſe. To whom I anſwered, that I neither minded nor was able to anſwer their Doctors, neither knew whether they alledged them right, or no, but to that which is written in the New Teſtament I would anſwer. Here they laughed me to Scorn, and called me Fool, and ſaid, they would reaſon no more with me.

Then Dr. Story called for Cluny, and bade him take me away, and ſet me faſt, and let no Man ſpeak with me. So I was ſent to the Cole-houſe; where I had not been a Week, but there came in fourteen Priſoners: But I was kept ſtill alone without Company, in a Priſon call'd Salt-houſe, having upon my Leg a Bolt and a Fetter, and my Hands manacled together with Irons, and there continued ten Days, having nothing to lye on, but bare Stones or a Board.

On a Time whilſt I lay there in Priſon, the Biſhop of London coming down a Pair of Stairs on the Back-ſide untruſt, in his Hoſe and Doublet, looked thro' the Grate, and asked wherefore I was put in, and who put me in.

I made him Anſwer, that I was put in for a Book call'd Antichriſt, by Dr. Story. And he ſaid, you are not aſhamed to declare wherefore you were put in, and ſaid it was a very wicked Book, and bade me confeſs the Truth to Story. I ſaid, I had told the Truth to him already, and deſired him to be good unto me, and help me out of Priſon, for they had kept me there a long Time. And he ſaid, he could not meddle with it; Story hath begun it, and he muſt end it.

Then I was removed out of the Salt-houſe to give Place to two Women, and carried to the Lollards Tower, and put in the Stocks; and there I found two Priſoners, one called Lyon a Frenchman, and another with him: And ſo I was kept in the Stocks more than a Month, both Day and Night, and no Man ſuffer'd to come to me, or to ſpeak with me, but only my Keeper who brought me Meat.

Thus we three being together, Lyon the Frenchman ſung a Pſalm in the French Tongue, and we ſang with him, ſo that we were heard down in the Street, and the Keeper coming up in a great Rage, ſware that he would put us all in the Stocks, and ſo took the Frenchman and commanded him to kneel down upon his Knees, and put both his Hands in the Stocks, where he remained all that Night till the next Day.

After this, I being in Lollard's Tower ſeven Days, at my laſt being with Story, he ſwore a great Oath, that he would rack me, and make me tell the Truth. Then Story ſending for me, commanded me to be brought to Walbrook, where he and the Commiſſioners dined; and by the Way my Keeper told me that I ſhould go to the Tower and be racked. So when they had dined, Story called for me in, and there I ſtood before them, and ſome ſaid I was worthy to be hanged for having ſuch Heretical Books. After I had ſtaid a little while before them, Story called for the Keeper, and commanded him to carry me to the Lollard's Tower again, and ſaid, he had other Matters of the Queen's to do with the Commiſſioners, but he would find another Time for me. Whilſt I lay yet in the Lollard's Tower, the Woman which brought the Books over, being taken, and her Books was put in the Clink in Southwark by Huſſey, one of the Arches; and I Thomas Green do teſtify before God, now, that I neither diſcovered the Man nor the Woman, of whom I had the Books.

Then I lying in the Lollard's Tower, being ſent for before Mr. Huſſey, he required of me, wherefore I was put into the Lollard's Tower, and by whom. To whom I made Anſwer, that I was put there by Dr. Story for a Book called Antichriſt. Then he made as though he would be my Friend, and ſaid he knew my Friends, and my Father and Mother, and bid me tell him of whom I had the Book, and ſaid, Come on, tell me the Truth. I told him as I had told Dr. Story before.

Then he was very angry, and ſaid, I love thee well, and therefore I ſent for thee, and looked for a further Truth; but I could tell him no other; whereupon he ſent me again to the Lollard's Tower. At my going away he called me back again, and ſaid, that Dixon gave me the Books being an old Man, dwelling in Birchin-lane; and I ſaid he knew the Matter better than I. So he ſent me away to the Lollard's Tower, where I remained ſeven Days and more.

Then Mr. Huſſey ſent for me again, and required of me to tell him the Truth. I told him I could tell him no other Truth than I had told Dr. Story before.

Then he began to tell me of Dixon, of whom, he ſaid, I had the Books, who had made the Matter manifeſt before; and he told me of all Things touching Dixon and the Books, more then I could myſelf, inſomuch that he told me how many I had, and that he had a Sack full of the Books in his Houſe, and knew where the Woman lay, better than myſelf. Then I ſaw the Matter ſo open and manifeſt before my Face, that it ſignified nothing for me to ſtand in it. He asked me where I had done the Books, and I told him I had but one, and that Dr. Story had. He ſaid I lied, for I had three at one Time, and he required me to tell him of one.

Then I told him of one that John Beane had of me, being Prentice with Mr. Tootle. So he promiſed me before and after, and as he ſhould be ſaved before God, that he ſhould have no Harm. And I kneeling down upon my Knees, deſired him to take my Blood, and not to hurt the young Man. Then he ſaid, becauſe you have been ſo ſtubborn, the Matter being made manifeſt by others and not by you, being ſo long in Priſon, tell me if you will ſtand to my Judgment. I ſaid, yea, take my Blood, and hurt not the young Man.

Then he told me I ſhould be whipped like a Thief and a Vagabond; and ſo I thanked him, and went my Way with my Keeper to the Lollard's Tower, where I remained two or three Days, and ſo was brought by the Keeper Cluny, by the Commandment of the Commiſſioners, to Chriſt's Hoſpital, ſometime the Grey Friars, and accordingly had there for that Time the Correction of Thieves and Vagabonds, and ſo was delivered to Trinian the Porter, and put into a ſtinking Dungeon.

And after a few Days, I finding Friendſhip, was let out of the Dungeon, and lay in a Bed in the Night, and walked in a Yard by the Dungeon in the Day-time, and ſo remained Priſoner a Month and more.

At length Dr. Story came, and two Gentlemen with him, and called for me, and I was brought before them. Then he ſaid to the Gentlemen, here cometh this Heretick, of whom I had the Book called Antichriſt, and began to tell them how many Times I had been before him, and ſaid, I have entreated him very gently, and he would never tell me the Truth till it was found out by others. Then ſaid he, it were a good Deed to cut out thy Tongue, and thy Ears off thy Head, to make thee an Example to all other Heretick Knaves. And the Gentlemen ſaid, nay, that were Pity. Then he asked if I would not become an honeſt Man: And I ſaid, yes; for I have offended God many Ways. Whereupon he burdened me with my Faith, I told him that I had made him Anſwer of my Faith before my Lord Windſor's Chaplain as much as I could.

So in the end he commanded me to be ſtripped, he ſtanding by me, and called for two of the Beadles and the Whips to whip me; and the two Beadles came with a Cord, and bound my Hands together, and the one end of the Cord to a Stone-pillar. Then one of my Friends, called Nicholas Prieſtman, hearing them call for Whips, hurled in a Bundle of Rods, which ſeemed ſomething to pacify the Mind of his Cruelty; and they ſcourged me with Rods. But as they were whipping of me, Story asked me if I would go unto my Maſter again, and I ſaid nay. And he ſaid, I perceive now he will be worſe than ever he was before: But let me alone (quoth he) I will find him out if he be in England. And ſo with many other Things which I cannot rehearſe, when they had done whipping of me, they bade me pay my Fees, and go my Ways.

The Scourging of James Harris.

IN this Society of the ſcourged Profeſſors of Chriſt, was alſo one James Harris of Billerica in Eſſex, a Stripling of the Age of ſeventeen Years; who being apprehended and ſent up to Bonner in the Company of Margaret Ellis, by Sir John Mordant, Knight, and Edmund Tyrrel, Juſtices of Peace, was by Bonner divers Times ſtrictly examined. In which Examinations he was charged not to have come to his Pariſh-church for the Space of one Year or more. Whereunto he granted, confeſſing therewithal, that once, for Fear, he had been at the Church, and there had received the popiſh Sacrament of the Altar, for which he was heartily ſorry, deteſting the ſame with all his Heart.

After this and ſuch like Anſwers, Bonner (the better to try him) perſuaded him to go to Confeſſion. The Lad, ſomewhat to fulfil his Requeſt, conſented to go, and did. But when he came to the Prieſt, he ſtood ſtill, and ſaid nothing. Why, quoth the Prieſt, ſayeſt thou nothing? What ſhall I ſay, ſaid Harris? Thou muſt confeſs thy Sins, ſaid the Prieſt. My Sins, ſaid he, be ſo many, that they cannot be numbered. With that the Prieſt told Bonner what he had ſaid, and he of his accuſtomed Devotion, took the poor Lad into his Garden, and there, with a Rod gathered out of a Cherry-tree, did moſt cruelly whip him.

The Scourging of Robert Williams, a Smith.

Robert Williams, who being apprehended in the ſame Company, was ſo tormented after the like Manner with Rods in his Arbour, who there ſubſcribing and yielding himſelf by Promiſe to obey the Laws, after being let go, refuſed ſo to do: Whereupon he was earneſtly ſought for, but could not be found, for that he kept himſelf cloſe, and went not abroad but by Stealth: And now in the mean Time of this Perſecution, this Robert Williams departed this Life, and ſo eſcaped the Hands of his Enemies.

Beſides theſe abovenamed, divers others alſo ſuffered the like Scourgings and Whippings in their Bodies for their faithful ſtanding in the Truth. Of whom it may be ſaid, as it is written of the Apoſtles in the Acts: Which departed from the Council, rejoycing that they were counted worthy to ſuffer for the Name of Jeſus.

The Perſecution and Deliverance of William Living with his Wife, and of John Lithal, Miniſters.

ABout the latter end of Queen Mary's Reign, ſhe then being ſick, came one Cox a Promoter, to the Houſe of William Living, about ſix of the Clock, accompanied with one John Launce of the Greyhound. They being not ready, they demanded for Buttons, ſaying, they ſhould be as well paid for them as any; and he would come about three Hours after for them again.

In the mean Time he procured one Mr. Dean the Conſtable, and George Hancock the Beadle of that Ward, and ſearching his Books, found a Book of Aſtronomy, called the Work of Joannes de Sacro Boſco de Sphæra, with Figures, ſome round, ſome triangle, ſome quadrangle, &c. which Book, becauſe it was gilt, ſeemed to him the chief Book there, and that he carried open in the Street, ſaying, I have found him at length. It is no Wonder the Queen be ſick, ſeeing there be ſuch Conjurors in privy Corners; but now I truſt he ſhall conjure no more, and ſo brought him and his Wife from Shoe-lane through Fleet-ſtreet into Paul's Church-yard, with the Conſtable, the Beadle, and two others following them, till they entered into Darbyſhire's Houſe, who was Biſhop Bonner's Chancellor: And after the Conſtable and they had talked with Darbyſhire, he came forth, and walked in his Yard, and ſaid to him,

What is your Name?

Liv. William Living.

Darb. What are you? a Prieſt?

Liv. Yea.

Darb. Is this your Wife that is come with you?

Liv. That ſhe is.

Darb. Where were you made Prieſt?

Liv. At Obourne.

Darb. In what Biſhop's Days?

Liv. By the Biſhop of Lincoln, that was King Henry's ghoſtly Father in Cardinal Wolſey's Time.

Darb. You are a Schiſmatick and a Traytor.

Liv. I would be ſorry that were true. I am certain I was never a Traitor, but always have taught Obedience according to the Tenor of God's Word; and when Tumults and Schiſms have been ſtirred, I have preached God's Word, and aſſuaged them as in the Time of King Edward.

Darb. What, you are a Schiſmatick. You be not in the Unity of the catholick Church: For you pray not as the Church of Rome doth: You pray in Engliſh.

Liv. We are certain we be in the true Church.

Darb. There be that doubt thereof, forſomuch as there is but one true Church. Well, you will learn againſt I talk with you again, to know the Church of Rome, and to be a Member thereof.

Liv. If the Church of Rome be of that Church whereof Chriſt is the Head, then I am Member thereof: For I know no other Church but that.

Darb. Well, Cluny, take him with thee to the Colehouſe.

Then he called Cluny again, and ſpake ſecretly to him, but what he ſaid I know not.

Then ſaid Cluny, Wilt thou not come? And ſo plucked me away violently, and brought me to his own Houſe in Pater-noſter-row, where he robbed me of my Purſe, my Girdle, and my Pſalter, and a New Teſtament of Geneva, and then brought me to the Colehouſe to put me in the Stocks, ſaying, put in both your Legs and your Hands, and except you fine with me, I will put a Collar about your Neck. What is the the Fine, quoth I? Forty Shillings, quoth he; I am never able to pay it, ſaid I.

Then, ſaid he, you have Friends that be able. I denied it; and ſo he put both my Legs into the Stocks till Supper-time, which was ſix of the Clock, and then a Couſin of my Wife's brought me Meat, who ſeeing me to ſit there, ſaid, I will give you forty-pence, and let him go at Liberty; and he took her Money, and preſently let me forth in her Sight, to eat my Supper. And at ſeven of the Clock, he put me in the Stocks again, and ſo I remained till two of the Clock the next Day, and ſo he let me forth till Night. This Woman above-mentioned, was Griffin's firſt Wife, a Brother dwelling then in Aldermanbury, and yet alive in Cheapſide.

The Thurſday following in the Afternoon was I called to the Lollard's-Tower, and there put into the Stocks, having the Honour to put my Leg in that Hole that Mr. John Philpot's Leg was in, and ſo lay all that Night, no Body coming to me either with Meat or Drink.

At eleven of the Clock on the Friday, Cluny came to me with Meat, and let me forth, and about one of the Clock he brought me to Darbyſhire's Houſe, who drew forth a Scroll of Names, and asked me if I knew none of them: I ſaid, I knew none of them but Foſter. And ſo I kneeled down upon my Knees, and prayed him that he would not enquire thereof any farther. And with that came forth two godly Women, who ſaid, Mr. Darbyſhire, it is enough, and ſo became Sureties for me, and paid to Cluny fifteen Shillings for my Fees, and bade me go with them.

And thus much concerning William Living. After this came his Wife to Examination, whoſe Anſwers to Darbyſhire the Chancellor, here likewiſe follow.

The Examination of Julian Living, Wife to William Living.

Darbyſhire. AH Sirrah; I ſee by your going you be one of the Siſters.

Julian. I wear not my Gown for Siſterhood, neither for Nunnery, but to keep me warm.

Darb. Nun? No, I dare ſay you be none: Is that Man your Husband?

Julian. Yea.

Darb. He is a Prieſt.

Julian. No, he ſaith no Maſs.

Darb. What then? he is a Prieſt. How dareſt thou marry him?

Then he ſhewed me a Roll of certain Names of Citizens.

To whom I anſwered, I knew none of them.

Then ſaid he, you ſhall be made to know them.

Then ſaid I, do no other but Juſtice and Right, for the Day will come, that thou ſhalt anſwer for it.

Darb. Why Woman, thinkeſt thou not that I have a Soul?

Julian. Yes, I know you have a Soul; but whether it be to Salvation or Damnation, I cannot tell.

Darb. Ho Cluny, have her to the Lollard's-Tower. And ſo he took me, and carried me to his Houſe, where was one Dale a Promoter, which ſaid to me, Alas good Woman, wherefore be you here?

What is that to you, ſaid I.

You be not aſhamed, quoth Dale, to tell wherefore you come hither.

No, quoth I, that I am not; for it is for Chriſt's Teſtament.

Chriſt's Teſtament, quoth he? It is the Devil's Teſtament.

O Lord, quoth I, God forbid that any Man ſhould ſpeak any ſuch Word.

Well well, quoth he, you ſhall be ordered well enough. You care not for burning, quoth he. God's Blood, there muſt be ſome other Means found for you.

What, quoth I, will you find any worſe than you have found?

Well, quoth he, you hope, and you hope; but your Hope ſhall be ſlope. For though the Queen fail, ſhe that you hope for ſhall never come at it; for there is my Lord Cardinal's Grace, and many more between her and it.

Then, quoth I, my Hope is in none but God.

Then ſaid Cluny, Come with me; and ſo I went to the Lollard's Tower. On the next Day Darbiſhire ſent for me again, and enquired of thoſe Citizens that he enquired of before.

I anſwered, I knew them not.

Where were you, quoth he, at the Communion on Sunday was Fortnight?

And I ſaid, in no Place.

Then the Conſtable of St. Brides being there, made Suit for me.

And Darbiſhire demanded of him, if he would be bound for me.

He anſwered, Yea. And ſo he was bound for my Appearance betwixt that and Chriſtmas.

Then Darbiſhire ſaid, You be Conſtable, and ſhould give her good Counſel.

So I do, quoth he. For I bid her go to Maſs, and to ſay as you ſay. For by the Maſs, if you ſay the Crow is white, I will ſay ſo too.

And thus much concerning the Examination of William Living and his Wife, whom altho' thou ſeeſt here delivered, through the Requeſt of Women, his Sureties, yet it was no Doubt, but that the deadly Sickneſs of Queen Mary bridled then the Cruelty of thoſe Papiſts, which otherwiſe would never have let them go.

The Trouble and Deliverance of John Lithall.

AT the taking of William Living, it happened that ſome of his Books were in the Cuſtody of one John Lithall; which known, the Conſtable of the Ward of Southwark, with others of the Queen's Servants, were ſent to his Houſe, who breaking up his Doors and Cheſts, took away not only the Books of the ſaid William Living, but alſo all his own Books, Writings, and Bills of Debts, which he never had again. All this while Lithall was not at home.

The next Saturday after, as he was returned, and known to be at home, John Avales and ſome of the Queen's Servants beſet his Houſe all the Night, with ſuch careful Watch, that as he in the Morning iſſued out of Doors, thinking to eſcape their Hands, John Avales burſting out upon him, cried, Stop the Traitor, Stop the Traitor. Whereat Lithall being amazed, looked back.

And ſo John Avales came running to him, with others that were with him, ſaying, Ah Sirrah, you are a pretty traitorly Fellow indeed, we have had ſomewhat to do to get you. To whom he anſwered, that he was a truer Man to the Queen's Majeſty than he. For you, ſaid he, are commanded by God to keep holy the Sabbath-day, and you ſeek to ſhed your Neighbours Blood on the Sabbath-day. Remember that you muſt anſwer it to God. But he ſaid, Come on you Villain, you muſt go before the Council. So was Lithall brought into St. Paul's Church-yard to the Biſhop's Chancellor, by John Avales, ſaying, that he had there caught the Captain of theſe Fellows, and ſo cauſed him to be called to Examination before Dr. Darbiſhire, who begun with him in this wiſe:

Chan. What Countryman are you?

Lith.

Lith. I am an Engliſhman, born in Staffordſhire.

Chan. Where were you brought up?

Lith. In this our Country of England.

Chan. In what Univerſity?

Lith. In no Univerſity, but in a Free-ſchool.

Chan. We had certain Books from your Houſe, and Writing, wherein is both Treaſon and Hereſy.

Lith. Sir, there is neither Treaſon nor Hereſy in them.

Then the Chancellor asked for certain other Men that I knew.

Lith. If you have ought to lay to my Charge, I will anſwer it; but I will have no other Man's Blood upon my Head.

Chan. Why come you not to the Church? Of what Church be you that you come not to your own Pariſh Church?

Lith. I am of the Church of Chriſt, the Fountain of all Goodneſs.

Chan. Have you no Miniſters of your Church but Chriſt?

Lith. We have others.

Chan. Where be they?

Lith. In the whole World, diſperſed, preaching and profeſſing the Goſpel and Faith only in our Saviour Jeſus, as he commanded them.

Chan. You boaſt much every one of you of your Faith and Belief: Let me hear therefore the Effect how you believe.

Lith. I believe to be juſtified really by Chriſt Jeſus, according to the Saying of St. Paul to the Epheſians, without either Deeds or Works, or any thing that may be invented by Man.

Chan. Faith cannot ſave without Works.

Lith. That is contrary to the Doctrine of the Apoſtles.

Chan. John Avales, you and the Keeper have this Fellow to Priſon.

Then John Avales and Cluney the Keeper had me into St. Paul's, and would have had me ſeen the Apoſtles Maſs.

Lith. I know none the Apoſtles had, and therefore I will ſee none.

Cluny and John Avales. Come and kneel down before the Rood, and ſay a Pater-noſter, and an Ave in the Worſhip of the five Wounds.

Lith. I am forbidden by God's own Mouth to kneel to any Idol or Image: Therefore I will not.

Then they pulled me with great Extremity, one having me by one Arm, and the other by the other; but God gave me at that preſent Time more Strength than both theſe, his Name be praiſed for it.

Then when they could not make me to kneel before the Rood, neither to ſee the Maſs, there gathered a great Company about us, and all againſt me. Some ſpit on me, and ſaid, Fie on thee Heretick; and others ſaid, it was Pity I was not burned already.

Then they carried me to Lollard's Tower, and hanged me in a great Pair of Stocks, in which I lay three Days and three Nights, till I was ſo lame that I could neither ſtir or move.

Then I offered the Keeper ſome Money and Gold that I had about me, to releaſe me out of the Stocks: And he ſaid, I would not be ruled by him, either to ſee Maſs, or to kneel before the Rood, and therefore I ſhould lie there ſtill. But I ſaid, I would never do the Thing that ſhould be againſt my Conſcience: And though you have lamed my Body, yet my Conſcience is whole, I praiſe God for it. So ſhortly after he let me out of the Stocks, more for the Love of my Money (as it may be thought) than for any other Affection, and within four or five Days my Wife got Leave of Mr. Chancellor to come to me, to bring me ſuch Things as were needful for me; and there I lay five Weeks and odd Days. In which Time divers of my Neighbours and Friends made Suit to the Chancellor for my Deliverance: The Biſhop, as they ſaid, at that Time being ſick at Fulham. So my Neighbours being there, about twenty of them, the Chancellor ſent for me out of the Lollard's Tower to his own Houſe, and ſaid as follows:

Chan. Lithal, here are ſome of thy Neighbours who have been with me to intreat for thee; and they have informed me, that thou haſt been a very honeſt and quiet Neighbour among them, and I think it be God's Will that I ſhould deliver thee before my Lord come home. For if he come, and thou go home again, I will be burned for thee; for I know his Mind already in that Matter.

Lith. I give you hearty Thanks for your Gentleneſs, and my Neighbours for their good Report.

Chan. Lithal, if thy Neighbours will be bound for thy forth-coming whenſoever thou ſhalt be called for; and alſo if thou wilt be an obedient Subject, I ſhall be content to deliver thee.

Neigh. If it pleaſe your Worſhip, we will be bound for him in Body and Goods.

Chan. I will require no ſuch Bonds of you, but that two of you will be bound in twenty Pounds a-piece, that he ſhall come to anſwer when he ſhall be called.

Lith. Where find you, Mr. Chancellor, in all the Scriptures, that the Church of God did bind any Man for the Profeſſion of his Faith? which Profeſſion you have heard of me, that all our Juſtification, Righteouſneſs, and Salvation cometh only and freely by the Merits of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, and all the Inventions and Works of Men, be they never ſo glorious, be altogether vain, as the wiſe Man ſaith.

Chan. Lo, where he is now. I put no ſuch Matter to you; for in that I believe as you do: But yet St. James ſaith, That a Man is juſtified by Works.

Lith. St. James ſpake to them that boaſted themſelves of Faith, and ſhewed no Works of Faith: But O, Mr. Chancellor, remember I pray you, how all the Promiſes and Propheſies of the holy Scripture, even from the firſt Promiſe that God made to Adam, and ſo even to the latter end of the Revelation of St. John, do teſtify that in the Name of Jeſus, and only by his Merits, all that believe ſhall be ſaved from all their Sins and Offences. Iſaiah ſaith, Chap. 65. I am found of them that ſought me not, and am manifeſt to them that ask not after me: But againſt Iſrael he ſaith, All Day long have I ſtretched out my Hand to a People that believe not. And when the Jailer asked St. Paul, what he ſhould do to be ſaved, the Apoſtle ſaid, Acts 16. Believe on the Lord Jeſus, and thou ſhalt be ſaved, and all thy Houſhold.

Again, St. John ſaith in the Revelation, that there was none, neither in Heaven nor in Earth, neither under the Earth, that was able to open the Book nor the Seals thereof, but only the Lamb Jeſus our only Saviour. And St. Paul ſaith, Heb. 9. With one Offering hath he made perfect for ever them that are ſanctified.

Chan. With Vain-glory you rehearſe much Scripture, as all the reſt of you do: But you have no more Underſtanding than many Sheep. But to the Purpoſe. Will you that your Neighbours ſhall enter into Bonds for you, or not?

Lith. By my Mind they ſhall not. Wherefore I deſire you that you would not bind me, but let me ſerve God with my Conſcience freely. For it is written, Rev. 13. They that lead into Captivity, ſhall go into Captivity, and they that ſtrike with the Sword, ſhall periſh with the Sword.

Alſo it is written in the Goſpel of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, Matth. 18. That whoſo doth offend one of theſe little Ones which believe in me, it were better for him that a Mill-ſtone were hanged about his Neck, and that he were caſt into the Depth of the Sea. Of which I am aſſured by his holy holy Spirit that I am one. Wherefore be you well aſſured that ſuch Mercy as you ſhew, unto you ſhall be ſhewed the like.

Chan. You are a Madman. I would not bind you, but that I muſt needs have ſomewhat to ſhew for your Deliverance. Then he called two of my Neighbours, Thomas Daniel and Saunders Maybe, who offered themſelves to be bound, and called me before them, and ſaid, I have a Letter of his own Hand-writing, with his Name and Seal at it, with a Book alſo againſt the Regiment of Women, for which I could make him to be hanged, drawn, and quartered; but on my Faith I will him no more Hurt than I mean to my own Soul.

Lith. I deſire you that be my Neighbours and Friends, that you will not enter into Bonds for me: For you know not the Danger thereof, neither I myſelf: It goeth againſt my Conſcience that ye ſhould ſo do.

Chan. Why, I will not bind you to do any Thing againſt your Conſcience.

Then they made the Bond and ſealed to it, and willed me that I ſhould ſeal to it alſo; and I ſaid that I would not, neither could I obſerve the Bond, and therefore I would not ſet to my Hand.

Chan. It is pity that thou haſt ſo much Favour ſhewed thee: Yet for theſe honeſt Men Sakes I will diſcharge thee.

Notwithſtanding all theſe diſſembling Words of Mr. Darbyſhire, pretending for Favour of his Sureties to ſet him at Liberty, it was no ſuch Thing, nor any Zeal of Charity that moved him ſo to do; but only Fear of the Time, underſtanding the dangerous and irrecoverable Sickneſs of Queen Mary, which then began ſomewhat to aſſuage the cruel Proceeding of theſe Perſecutors, whereby they durſt not do that they would: For elſe Lithall was not like to have eſcaped ſo eaſily.

Moreover, there was one Edward Grew, Prieſt, and Appline, his Wife, compelled to fly from their Dwelling at a Town called Broke; and the Man being very aged, travelled abroad to keep a good Conſcience.

At laſt he was taken and laid in Colcheſter Caſtle, where he remained till Queen Elizabeth came to her regal Seat, and by the Alteration of Religion he was delivered.

William Brown, Parſon of Little Stanham, in the County of Suffolk, made a Sermon in the ſaid Town, ſoon after the Burial of our good King Edward, and in his Sermon he ſaid, There goeth a Report that our good King is buried with a Maſs by the Biſhop of Wincheſter, he having a Mitre upon his Head. But if it were ſo, ſaid he, they are all Traytors that ſo do, becauſe it is both againſt the Truth, and the Laws of this Realm, and it is great Idolatry and Blaſphemy, and againſt the Glory of God; and they are no Friends either to God, the King, or yet unto the Realm, that ſo do. For this his preaching, one Robert Blomefield, an Adverſary to the Truth, being then Conſtable of the Town, and Bailiff unto Sir John Jerningham, Knight (the chief Lord of the Town) immediately rode forth, and brought home with him one Edward Golding, who was then Under-ſheriff, Sir Thomas Cornwallis, being then High-ſheriff.

So the ſaid Golding and Blomefield ſent for certain Men of the ſame Town, and examined them for the Sermon; Whereupon they made but a ſmall Anſwer. Then the Sheriff made a Bill, and ſo terrify'd the Men, that two or three of them ſet to their Hands, and one of them never enjoy'd himſelf after, but it was a Grief to him till he died.

Then they took Men with them to the Parſon's Houſe, and in the Night they took him, and with Watchmen kept him till it was Day. Then ſhould he have been carry'd the next Day to the Council; but the ſaid Robert Blomefield was taken ſo ſick, that he was like to die: So that he could not carry him for his Life.

Then the ſaid Sheriff ſent him to Ipſwich again, and there he was for a Time. Then he was ſent to Bury Priſon, and from thence to the Council, and then into the Fleet: And ſo he lay in Priſon from the Beginning of Harveſt till near Chriſtmas, and ſaid, God gave him ſuch Anſwers to make when he was examined, that he was delivered with Quietneſs of Conſcience. And having his Liberty, he came again to the aforeſaid Town; and becauſe he would not go to Maſs, his Living was taken away, and he and his Wife were conſtrained to fly here and there for his Life and Conſcience. In the laſt Year of Queen Mary's Reign God took him out of this Life in Peace.

The Perſecution of Elizabeth Young.

YE heard before of the Scourging of Thomas Green, how he was troubled and beaten by Dr. Story, for a certain Book called Antichriſt, which he received of a Woman, becauſe he would in no Caſe detect her.

This Woman was one Elizabeth Young, who coming from Emden to England, brought with her divers Books, and diſperſed them abroad in London; for which ſhe being at length apprehended and laid faſt, was brought to Examination thirteen Times before the catholick Inquiſitors of heretical Pravity. Some of which Examinations have come to our Hands, and are as follow:

The firſt Examination of Elizabeth Young before Mr. Huſſy.

Huſſy. WHere was you born, and who was your Father and Mother?

Eliz. Young. Sir, all this is but vain Talk, and very ſuperfluous. It is to fill my Head with Fantaſies, that I ſhould not be able to anſwer unto ſuch Things as I came for. You have not, I think, put me in Priſon to know who is my Father and Mother. But I pray you go to the Matter that I came hither for.

Huſſy. Wherefore wenteſt thou out of the Realm?

Young. To keep my Conſcience clean.

Huſſy. When waſt thou at Maſs?

Young. Not theſe three Years.

Huſſy. Then waſt thou not there three Years before that?

Young. No, Sir, nor yet three Years before that: For if I were I had evil Luck.

Huſſy. How old art thou?

Young. Forty and upwards.

Huſſy. Twenty of thoſe Years you went to Maſs.

Young. Yea and twenty more I may, and yet come home as wiſe as I went thither firſt, for I underſtand it not.

Huſſy. Why wilt thou not go to the Maſs?

Young. Sir, my Conſcience will not ſuffer me: For I had rather all the World ſhould accuſe me than mine own Conſcience.

Huſſy. What if a Louſe or a Flea ſtick upon thy Skin, and bite thy Fleſh? thou muſt make a Conſcience in taking her off, is there not a Conſcience in it?

Young. That is but an eaſy Argument to diſplace the Scriptures, and eſpecially in ſuch a Part as my Salvation dependeth upon: For it is but an eaſy Conſcience that a Man can make.

Huſſy. But why wilt thou not ſwear upon the Evangeliſts before a Judge?

Young. Becauſe I know not what a Book-oath is.

Then he began to teach her the Book-oath.

Young. Sir, I do not underſtand it, and therefore I will not learn it.

Huſſy. Then ſaid he, thou wilt not underſtand it, and with that roſe up and went his Way.

The ſecond Examination of Elizabeth Young, by Dr. Martin.

Martin. THou art come from beyond the Sea, and haſt brought with thee Books of Hereſy and Treaſon, and thou muſt confeſs to us who tranſlated them, printed them, and who ſent them over (for once I knew thee to be but a Meſſenger) and in ſo doing the Queen's Highneſs will be good to thee (for ſhe hath forgiven greater Things than this) and thou ſhalt find as much Favour as is poſſible. But if thou be ſtubborn, and wilt not confeſs, thou wilt be very ill handled: For we know the Truth already, but this we do, only to ſee whether thou wilt be true of thy Word or no.

Young. Sir, ye have my Confeſſion, and more than that I cannot ſay.

Martin. Thou muſt ſay more, and ſhalt ſay more. Doſt thou think that we will be fully anſwered by this Confeſſion that thou haſt made? Thou rebel Whore, and traitor Heretick, thou doſt refuſe to ſwear upon the Evangeliſts before a Judge, I hear ſay. Thou ſhalt be racked Inch-meal, thou traitorly Whore and Heretick, but thou ſhalt ſwear before a Judge before thou go: yea, and thou ſhalt be made to confeſs how many Books thou haſt ſold, and to whom.

Young. Sir, I underſtand not what an Oath is, and therefore I will take no ſuch Thing upon me. And no Man hath bought any Books of me as yet, for thoſe Books that I had, your Commiſſioners have them all.

Martin. Thou traitorly Whore, we know that thou haſt ſold a Number of Books, yea, and to whom: And how many Times thou haſt been here, and where thou layeſt, and every Place thou haſt been in: Doſt thou think that thou haſt Fools in hand?

Young. No Sir, ye be too wiſe for me; for I cannot tell how many Places I have been in myſelf, but if it were in Turkey I ſhould have Meat and Drink and Lodging for my Money.

Martin. Thou rebel Whore, thou haſt ſpoken evil Words of the Queen, and thou dwelleſt amongſt a ſort of Traitors and Rebels that cannot give the Queen a good Word.

Young. I am not able to accuſe any Man thereof, neither is there any Man that can prove any ſuch Things of me as you lay to my Charge. For God's Word hath taught me my Duty to my Queen, and therefore I am ſure you accuſe me wrongfully.

Martin. Thou Rebel and traitorly Whore, thou ſhalt be ſo racked and tormented, that thou ſhalt be an Example to all ſuch traitorly Whores and Hereticks; and thou ſhalt be made to ſwear by the holy Evangeliſts, and confeſs to whom thou haſt ſold all and every of theſe heretical Books that thou haſt ſold: For we know what Number thou haſt ſold, and to whom; but thou ſhalt be made to confeſs it in ſpite of thy Blood.

Young. Here is my Carcaſs; do with it what you will, and more than that you cannot have. Mr. Martin, ye can have no more than my Blood.

Then he raved as tho' he had been ſtark mad, and ſaid, Martin? Why calleſt thou me Martin?

Young. Sir, I know you well enough, for I have been before you ere now. Ye delivered me once at Weſtminſter.

Martin. Where didſt thou dwell then?

Young. I dwelt in the Minories.

Martin. I delivered thee and thy Husband both; and I thought then that thou wouldeſt have done otherwiſe than thou doſt now. For if thou haſt been before any Biſhop in England, and ſaid the Words that thou didſt before me, thou hadſt fry'd a Fagot: And though thou didſt not burn then, thou art like to burn or hang now.

Young. Sir, I promiſed you then, that I would never be fed with an unknown Tongue, and no more will I yet.

Martin. I ſhall feed thee well enough. Thou ſhalt be fed with that (I warrant thee) which will be little to thine Eaſe.

Young. Do what God ſhall ſuffer you to do: For more ye ſhall not. And then he aroſe, and ſo departed, and went to the Keeper's Houſe, and asked his Wife, whom ſhe had ſuffer'd to come to this traitorly Whore (as he called her). Then ſaid the Keeper's Wife, As God receive my Soul, here came neither Man, Woman, nor Child to ask for her.

Martin. If any Man, Woman, or Child, come to ask for her, I charge thee on pain of Death, that they be laid faſt; and give her one Day Bread, and another Day Water.

Young. If ye take away my Meat, I truſt that God will take away my Hunger: And ſo he departed, ſaying, that was too good for her: And then ſhe was ſhut up under two Locks in the Clink, where ſhe was before.

The third Examination, before Dr. Martin.

Martin. ELizabeth, wilt thou confeſs theſe Things that thou haſt been examined upon; for thou knoweſt that I have been thy Friend, and in ſo doing I will be thy Friend again; giving her many fair Words, and then demanding of her how many Gentlemen were beyond the Seas.

Young. It is too much for me to tell you how many are on the other Side.

Martin. No, I mean but in Frankfort and Emden, where thou haſt been.

Young. Sir, I did never take Account of them, it is a Thing that I look not for.

Martin. When ſhall I have a true Word come out of thy Mouth?

Young. I have told you the Truth, but becauſe that it ſoundeth not to your Mind, therefore ye will not credit it.

Martin. Wilt thou yet confeſs? and if thou wilt, that which I have promiſed I will do: And if thou wilt not, I promiſe thee thou muſt go even hence to the Rack, and therefore confeſs.

Young. I can ſay no more than I have ſaid.

Martin. Well, forſomuch as ſhe will confeſs no more, have her away to the Rack, and then ſhe will be marred.

Then anſwered a Prieſt that ſate there, and ſaid, Woman, take an Oath, and confeſs: Wilt thou be hurt for other Men?

Young. I can confeſs no more than I have. Do with my Carcaſs what ye will.

Martin. Did ye ever hear the like of this Heretick? What a ſtout Heretick is this? We have the Truth, and we know the Truth, and yet look whether ſhe will confeſs. There is no Remedy but ſhe muſt needs to the Rack, and therefore away with her, and ſo commanded her out of the Door, and called her Keeper unto him, and ſaid to him, There is no Remedy but this Heretick muſt be racked; and talked with him more, but what it was ſhe did not hear.

Then

Then he called her in again, and ſaid, Wilt thou not confeſs, and keep thee from the Rack? I adviſe thee ſo to do; for if thou wilt not, thou knoweſt not the Pain yet, but thou ſhalt do.

Young. I can confeſs no more; do with my Carcaſe what ye will.

Martin. Keeper, away with her. Thou knoweſt what I ſaid. Let her know the Pain of the Rack. And ſo ſhe departed, thinking no leſs, but that ſhe ſhould have gone to the Rack, till ſhe ſaw the Keeper turn toward the Clink again. And thus did God alienate their Hearts, and diminiſh their tyrannous Power, unto the Time of further Examinations; for ſhe was brought before the Biſhop, the Dean, and the Chancellor, and other Commiſſioners, firſt and laſt thirteen Times.

The fourth Examination before the Biſhop of London, Sir Roger Cholmley, Dr. Cook, the Recorder of London, Dr. Roper and Dr. Martin.

FIrſt ſhe being preſented by Dr. Martin before the Biſhop of London, Dr. Martin began to declare againſt her, ſaying, The Lord Chancellor hath ſent you here a Woman, who hath brought Books over from Emden, where all theſe Books of Hereſy and Treaſon are printed, and hath therewith filled all the Land with Treaſon and Hereſy; neither yet will ſhe confeſs who tranſlated them, nor who printed them, nor yet who ſent them over. Wherefore my Lord Chancellor committeth her unto my Lord of London, to do with her as he ſhall think good. For ſhe will confeſs nothing but that ſhe bought theſe ſaid Books in Amſterdam, and ſo brought them over to ſell for Gain.

Dr. Cook. Let her Head be truſſed in a ſmall Line, and make her to confeſs.

Martin. The Book is called Antichriſt, and ſo may well be called, for it ſpeaketh againſt Jeſus Chriſt and the Queen. Beſides that, ſhe hath a certain Spark of the Anabaptiſts, for ſhe refuſeth to ſwear upon the four Evangeliſts before a Judge: For I myſelf and Mr. Huſſy have had her before us four Times, but we cannot bring her to ſwear. Wherefore my Lord Chancellor would that ſhe ſhould abſtain and faſt, for ſhe hath not faſted a great while: For ſhe hath lain in the Clink a good while, where ſhe had too much her Liberty.

Then, ſaid the Biſhop, why wilt thou not ſwear before a Judge; that is the right Trade of the Anabaptiſts.

Young. My Lord, I will not ſwear that this Hand is mine.

No, ſaid the Biſhop, and why?

Young. My Lord, Chriſt ſaith, That whatſoever is more than yea, yea, or nay, nay, it cometh of Evil. And moreover, I know not what an Oath is: And therefore I will take no ſuch Thing upon me.

Then, ſaid Cholmley, twenty Pounds it is a Man in a Woman's Cloaths, twenty Pounds it is a Man.

Bonner. Think you ſo, my Lord.

Cholmley. Yea, my Lord.

Young. My Lord, I am a Woman.

Biſhop. Swear her upon a Book, ſeeing it is but a Queſtion asked.

Then, ſaid Cholmley, I will lay twenty Pounds, it is a Man.

Then Dr. Cook brought her a Book, commanding her to lay her Hand thereon.

Young. No, my Lord, I will not ſwear, for I know not what an Oath is. But I ſay that I am a Woman, and have Children.

Biſhop. That we know not; wherefore ſwear.

Cholmley. Thou ill-favoured Whore, lay thy Hand upon the Book; I will lay on mine: And ſo he laid his Hand on the Book.

Young. So will not I.

Then the Biſhop ſpake a Word in Latin out of St. Paul, as concerning ſwearing.

Young. My Lord, if you ſpeak to me of St. Paul, then ſpeak Engliſh, for I underſtand you not.

Biſhop. I dare ſwear that thou doſt not.

Young. My Lord, St. Paul ſaith, that five Words ſpoken in a Language that may be underſtood, are better than many in a ſtrange Tongue.

Cook. Swear before us, whether thou be a Man or a Woman.

Young. If ye will not believe me, then ſend for Women into a ſecret Place, and I will be ſearched.

Cholmley. Thou art an ill-favoured Whore.

Biſhop. How believeſt thou in the Sacrament of the Altar?

Young. If it will pleaſe you that I ſhall declare my Faith, I will, and if it be not good, teach me a better, and I will believe it.

Cook. That is well ſaid, declare thy Faith.

Young. I believe in God the Father Almighty, the Son, and the Holy Ghoſt, three Perſons and one God. I believe all the Articles of my Creed: I believe all Things written in the Scripture, and all Things agreeable to the Scripture, given by the Holy Ghoſt to the Church of Chriſt, ſet forth and taught by the Church of Chriſt. I believe that Jeſus Chriſt, the only Son of God, that immaculate Lamb, came into the World to ſave Sinners; and that in him, by him, and through him I am made clean from my Sins, and without him I could not. I believe that in the holy Sacrament of Chriſt's Body and Blood, which he did inſtitute and ordain, and left among his Diſciples that Night before he was betrayed; when I do receive this Sacrament in Faith and Spirit, I do receive Chriſt.

Biſhop. No more, I warrant you, but the Sacrament of Chriſt's Body and Blood, received but in Spirit and Faith, with thoſe Hereticks.

Cholmley. Ah Whore, Spirit and Faith, Whore?

Young. This Sacrament never Man could or did make, but only he, that did what no Man could do.

Martin. Then thou muſt allow that Graſs is a Sacrament; for who could make Graſs but he only?

Young. Sir, he hath ſuffered, and made a ſufficient Sacrifice once for all, and ſo hath he made his Sacrament ſufficient once for all: For there was never Man that could ſay, Take, eat, this is my Body that is broken for you, but only Jeſus Chriſt, who had his Body broken for the Sins of the World; which Sacrament he hath left here amongſt us for a Teſtimony of his Death, even to the World's End.

Martin. Who taught thee this Doctrine? Did Scory?

Young. Yea, Biſhop Scory, and others that I have heard.

Biſhop. Why is Scory Biſhop now?

Young. If that offend you, call him Dr. Scory if ye will.

Roper. I knew when he was but a poor Doctor.

Martin. What do ye call Scory?

Young. Our Superintendent.

Biſhop. Lo! their Superintendent.

Martin. And what are ye called?

Young. Chriſt's Congregation.

Biſhop. Lo! Chriſt's Congregation I warrant You.

Dr. Cook. What Living hath Scory?

Young. As far as I do know, he liveth by his own, for I know no Man that giveth him ought.

Recorder. Yes, I warrant you, he hath enough ſent him out of England.

Young. Sir, I know no ſuch Thing.

Cholmley. Hark, Whore, hark; hark, how I do believe.

Young. My Lord, I have told you my Belief.

Cholmley. Hark, thou ill-favoured Whore, how I do believe. When the Prieſt hath ſpoken the Words of Conſecration, I do believe that there remaineth the very Body that was born of the Virgin Mary, was hanged on the Croſs, was dead and buried, and deſcended into Hell, and roſe again on the third Day, and aſcended into Heaven, and ſitteth at the right Hand of God. The ſame Body when the Prieſt hath ſpoken the Words, cometh down, and when the Prieſt lifteth up his Body on this wiſe (he lifting up his Hands, ſaid) there it is.

Young. I have told you alſo how I do believe.

Martin. Away with her.

Cholmley. Ah ill-favoured Whore! nothing but Spirit and Faith, Whore?

Martin. Away with her, we have more to talk withal.

Then ſhe was carried into the Coal-houſe, and ſearched for Books, and then put into the Stock-houſe, and her Knife, Girdle, and Apron taken from her.

The fifth Examination before the Biſhop of London's Chancellor.

Chan. WHAT Age are you of?

Young. Forty Years and upwards.

Chan. Why, thou art a Woman of fair Years; why ſhouldſt thou meddle with the Scriptures? It is neceſſary for thee to believe, and that is enough. It is more fit for thee to meddle with thy Diſtaff, than to meddle with the Scriptures. What is thy Belief? I would hear it; for it cannot be good, in that thou art brought into Priſon.

Young. Sir, if it will pleaſe you to hear, I will declare it unto you. But I pray you that you will take your Pen and write it, and then examine it; and if ye find any Thing therein that is not fit for a Chriſtian Woman, then teach me better, and I will learn it.

Chan. Well ſaid. But who ſhall judge between thee and me?

Young. The Scripture.

Chan. Wilt thou ſtand by that?

Young. Yea, Sir.

Chan. Well go thy Way out at the Door a little while, for I am buſy, and I will call for thee anon again.

Then he called me again and ſaid, Now Woman, the Time is too long to write. Say thy Mind, and I will bear it in my Head.

Then Elizabeth began, and declared her Faith to him as ſhe had done before to the Biſhop.

Chan. Woman, Spirit and Faith I do allow, but doſt not thou believe that thou doſt receive the Body of Chriſt, really, corporally, and ſubſtantially.

Young. Theſe Words, really and corporally, I underſtand not; as for ſubſtantially, I take it, you mean I ſhould believe that I ſhould receive his human Body (which is upon the right Hand of God, and can occupy no more Places at once) and that I believe not.

Chan. Thou muſt believe this, or elſe thou art damned.

Young. Sir, can you give me Belief.

Chan. No, God muſt give it thee.

Young. God hath given me no ſuch Faith or Belief.

The Chancellor then declared a Text of St. Paul in Latin, and then in Engliſh, ſaying, I could make thee believe, but that thou haſt a cankered Heart, and wilt not believe. Who then can make thee to believe?

Young. You ſaid even now, that Faith or Belief cometh of God, and ſo I believe, and then may not I believe an Untruth to be true.

Chan. Doſt thou not believe that Chriſt's Fleſh is Fleſh in thy Fleſh?

Young. No Sir, I believe not that; for my Fleſh ſhall putrify and rot.

Chan. Chriſt ſaid, my Fleſh is Fleſh in Fleſh.

Young. Whoſo receiveth him fleſhly, ſhall have a fleſhly Reſurrection.

Chan. Chriſt ſaith in St. John, Chap. 6. My Fleſh is Meat indeed, and my Blood is Drink indeed.

Young. Chriſt preached to the Capernaites, ſaying; Except ye eat the Fleſh of the Son of Man, and drink his Blood, ye ſhall not have Life in you: And the Capernaites murmured at it. And his Diſciples alſo murmured, ſaying among themſelves, This is an hard Saying, and who can abide it? Chriſt underſtood their Meaning, and ſaid, Are ye alſo offended? will ye alſo go away? What and if ye ſhall ſee the Son of Man aſcend up to Heaven, from whence he came? will that offend you? It is the Spirit that quickneth, the Fleſh profiteth nothing. I pray you Sir, what meaneth Chriſt by that?

Chan. O God forbid. Would ye have me to interpret the Scriptures? We muſt leave that for our old ancient Fathers, which have ſtudied Scriptures a long Time, and have the Holy Ghoſt given unto them.

Young. Why Sir, have you not the Holy Ghoſt given and revealed unto you?

Chan. No, God forbid that I ſhould ſo believe; but I hope, I hope: But ye ſay, ye are of the Spirit. Will you ſay that you have no Profit in Chriſt's Fleſh?

Young. Sir, we have our Profit in Chriſt's Fleſh, but not as the Capernaites did underſtand it: For they underſtood that they muſt eat his Fleſh as they did eat Ox Fleſh and others, and drink his Blood, as we drink Wine or Beer out of a Bowl. But ſo we muſt not receive it. But our Profit that we have by Chriſt, is to believe that his Body was broken upon the Croſs, and his Blood ſhed for our Sins; that is the very Meaning of Chriſt, that ſo we ſhould eat his Fleſh, and drink his Blood, when he ſaid; My Fleſh is Meat indeed, and my Blood is Drink indeed.

Chan. How doth thy Body live, if Chriſt's Fleſh is not Fleſh in thy Fleſh?

Young. Sir, I was a Body before I had a Soul; which Body God had created, and yet it could not live, till God had breathed Life into me, and by that Life doth my Body live. And when it ſhall pleaſe God to diſſolve my Life, my Fleſh will offer itſelf unto the Place from whence it came, and thro' the Merits of Chriſt my Soul will offer itſelf to the Place from whence it came.

Chan. Yea, but if thou do not believe that Chriſt's Fleſh is Fleſh in thy Fleſh, thou canſt not be ſaved.

Young. Sir, I do not believe that.

Chan. Why, doth not Chriſt ſay, My Fleſh is Meat indeed, and my Blood is Drink indeed? Canſt thou deny that?

Young. I deny not that; for Chriſt's Fleſh and Blood is Meat and Drink for my Soul, the Food of my Soul. For whoſoever believeth that Jeſus Chriſt the Son of God hath died and ſhed his Blood for his Sins, his Soul feedeth thereon for ever.

Chan. When thou receiveſt the Sacrament of the Altar, doſt thou not believe that thou doſt receive Chriſt's Body?

Young. Sir, as often as I receive the Sacrament, I believe, that ſpiritually and by Faith I receive Chriſt. And of this Sacrament, I know Chriſt himſelf to be the Author, and none but he. And this ſame Sacrament is an Eſtabliſhment to my Conſcience, and an Augmentation to my Faith.

Chan. Why, did not Chriſt take Bread, and gave Thanks, and brake it, and gave it to his Diſciples, ſaying, Take, eat, this is my Body that is given for you? Did he give them his Body, or no?

Young. He alſo took the Cup, and gave Thanks to his Father, and gave it to his Diſciples, ſaying, Drink ye all hereof: For this is the Cup of the New Teſtament in my Blood, which ſhall be ſhed for many. Now, I pray you, Sir, let me ask you one Queſtion: Did he give the Cup the Name of his Blood, or the Wine that was in the Cup?

Then he was very angry, and ſaid, Doſt thou think that thou haſt an Hedge-prieſt in hand?

Young. No Sir, I take you not to be an Hedge-prieſt; I take you for a Doctor.

Chan. So me thinketh. Thou wilt take upon thee to teach me.

Young. No Sir, but I let you know what I know; and by Argument one ſhall know more. Chriſt ſaid, As oft as you do this, do it in Remembrance of me; but a Remembrance is not of a Thing preſent, but abſent. Likewiſe St. Paul ſaith, So oft as ye ſhall eat of this Bread, and drink of this Cup, ye ſhall ſhew forth the Lord's Death till he come: Then we muſt not look for him here, until his coming again at the latter Day. Again, is not this Article of our Belief true, He ſitteth at the right Hand of God the Father Almighty; from thence he ſhall come to judge both the Quick and the Dead? But if he come not before he come to Judgment, how then is he preſent in your Sacrament of the Altar? Wherefore I believe that the human Body of Chriſt occupieth no more than one Place at once; for when he was here he was not there.

The ſixth Examination of Mrs. Young before the Chancellor.

Chancellor. WOman, the laſt Time that thou waſt before me, our Talk was concerning the Sacrament.

Young. Sir, true it is, and I truſt that I ſaid nothing that ye can deny by the Scriptures.

Chan. Yes, thou wilt not believe that Chriſt's Fleſh is Fleſh in thy Fleſh.

Young. No Sir, God hath given me no ſuch Belief; for it cannot be found by the Scriptures.

Chan. Wilt thou believe nothing but what is in the Scripture? Why, how many Sacraments doſt thou find in the Scripture?

Young. The Church of Chriſt doth ſet down two.

Chan. I will as well find ſeven by the Scripture, as thou ſhalt find two.

Young. Sir, I talk not to you thereof, but I ſay that the Church of Chriſt ſetteth out two, and I have been taught no more.

Chan. What are thoſe two?

Young. The Sacrament of Chriſt's Body and Blood, and the Sacrament of Baptiſm?

Chan. What ſayſt thou by the Sacrament of Wedlock?

Young. I have not heard it called a Sacrament, but the holy Eſtate of Matrimony, which ought to be kept of all Men that take it upon them.

Chan. How ſayſt thou by Prieſts? Is it good that they ſhould marry? Is it to be kept of them?

Young. I come not hither to reaſon any ſuch Matter, for I am no Divine, and alſo it is no part of my Faith.

Chan. Can ye not tell? ye ſhall tell or ever you go.

Young. Sir, then muſt ye keep me a good while; for I have not ſtudied the Scriptures for it.

Chan. No? why, ye will not be aſhamed to flee unto the higheſt Myſtery, even to the Sacrament at the firſt Daſh, and ye are not afraid to argue with the beſt Doctor in the Land.

Young. God's Myſteries I will not meddle with, but all Things that are written, are written for our Edification.

Chan. What ſay you by Prayers for the Dead? Is it not meet that if a Man's Friend be dead, his Friend commend his Soul unto God?

Young. There is no Chriſtan Man that will commend his Friend nor his Foe unto the Devil. And whether it be good for him when he is dead or no, ſure I am, that it is good when he is alive.

Chan. Then thou alloweſt not Prayer to be good for them when they be dead, and lying in Purgatory. Is it not meet that Prayer be made unto God for them?

Young. Sir, I never heard in the Scriptures of Purgatory, but in the Scripture I have heard of Heaven and Hell.

Chan. Why, ye have nothing but the Skimming of the Scriptures. Our ancient Fathers could find out in the Bottom of the Scriptures that there is a Purgatory. Yea, they could find it in the New Teſtament, that a Prieſt ſhall take the Sacrament, and go to the Altar, and make an Oblation, and offer it up every Day.

Young. Sir, that could never be found in the Bible nor Teſtament as far as ever I could hear.

Chan. Whom doſt thou hear read either the Bible or Teſtament, but a ſort of Schiſmaticks, bawdy Biſhops, and Hedge-prieſts (which have brought into the Church a ſtinking Communion, which was never heard of in any Place in the World, but here in England) which have deceived the King and all the Nobility, and all the whole Realm?

Young. Sir, it is a vile Name that ye give them all.

Chan. Where are all the Hedge-knaves become now, that they come not to their Anſwer?

Young. Anſwer Sir? why, they have anſwered both with the Scriptures, and alſo with their Blood; and then where were you that ye came not forth to anſwer in their Times! I never knew any of you that were troubled, but two, and that was not for God's Word, it was for their Diſobedience.

Chan. No, I pray you? did ye not know that we were killed, hanged, burned, and headed.

Young. Sir, I never knew that any of you ever was either hanged, killed, burned, or headed.

Chan. No? did ye never hear that the Biſhop of Rocheſter loſt his Head for the Supremacy of the Biſhop of Rome?

Young. Then he died not for God's Word.

Chan. Well, thou wilt believe nothing but that which is written in God's Word. Where canſt thou find the Sabbath written in the Scripture, by the Name of the Sabbath? For the right Sabbath-day will I prove to be Saturday. Or where canſt thou find the Articles of the Creed in the Scripture by the Name of the Articles? Or where canſt thou find in the Scripture, that Chriſt went down into Hell?

Young. What Place or Part in the Scripture can ye find to diſprove any of theſe Things.

Chan. What Prieſt haſt thou lain withal that thou haſt ſo much Scripture? Thou art ſome Prieſt's Woman, I think, for thou wilt take upon thee to reaſon, and teach the beſt Doctor in all the Land.

Young. I was never yet a Prieſt's Wife, nor yet a Prieſt's Woman.

Chan. Have I touched your Conſcience?

Young. No Sir, ye have not touched my Conſcience, but beware ye hurt not your own.

Chan. Thou haſt read a little in the Bible or Teſtament, and thou thinkeſt that thou art able to reaſon with a Doctor, that hath gone to School thirty Years; and before God I think if I had talked thus much with a Jew as I have done with thee, he would have turned ere this Time. But I may ſay by you as Chriſt ſaid by Jeruſalem: ſaying, O Jeruſalem, Jeruſalem, how oft would I have gathered thee together, even as a Hen gathereth her Chickens, but thou wouldeſt not. And ſo would we gather you together in one Faith, and ye will not: And therefore your own Blood be upon your own Heads; for I can do no more but teach you. Thou art one of the rankeſt Hereticks that ever I heard; for thou believeſt nothing but what is in the Scripture: And therefore thou art damned.

Young. I do believe all Things written in the Scripture, and all Things agreeable to the Scripture, given by the Holy Ghoſt to the Church of Chriſt, ſet forth and taught by the Church of Chriſt, and ſhall I be damned becauſe I will not believe an Untruth?

Then the Chancellor called the Keeper, ſaying, Cluny, Take her away, thou knoweſt what thou haſt to do with her. And ſo ſhe departed, and was brought again to the Stock-houſe, and there ſhe lay certain Days, and both her Hands manacled in one Iron; and afterward ſhe was removed into the Lollard's Tower, and there ſhe remained with both her Feet in the Stocks and Irons till the next Time of Examination.

The ſeventh Examination of Mrs. Young before the Chancellor and the Biſhop's Scribe.

Chancellor. WOman, thou haſt been twice before me, but we could not agree, and here be certain Articles that my Lord the Biſhop of London would that thou ſhouldſt make Anſwer unto, which are theſe: Firſt, how many Sacraments thou doſt allow?

Young. Sir, as many as Chriſt's Church doth allow, and that is two.

Then ſaid the Scribe, Thou waſt taught ſeven before King Edward's Days.

Chan. Which two Sacraments be thoſe that thou doſt allow?

Young. The Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, and the Sacrament of Baptiſm.

Chan. Doſt thou not believe that the Pope of Rome is the ſupream Head of the Church, immediately under God in Earth?

Young. No Sir, no Man can be the Head of Chriſt's Church; for Chriſt himſelf is the Head, and his Word is the Governour of all that be of that Church, whereſoever they be ſcattered abroad.

Chan. Doſt thou not believe that the Biſhop of Rome can forgive thee all thy Sins heretical, deteſtable and damnable, that thou haſt done from thine Infancy unto this Day?

Young. Sir, the Biſhop of Rome is a Sinner as I am, and no Man can forgive me my Sins, but he only that is without Sin, and that is Jeſus Chriſt who died for my Sins.

Chan. Doſt thou not know that the Pope ſent over his Jubilees, that all that ever would faſt and pray, and go to the Church, ſhould have their Sins forgiven them?

The Scribe. Sir, I think that ſhe was not in the Realm then.

Chan. Haſt thou not deſired God to defend thee from the Tyranny of the Biſhop of Rome, and all his deteſtable Enormities?

Young. Yes that I have.

Chan. And art thou not ſorry for it?

Young. No Sir, not a whit.

Chan. Haſt thou not ſaid, that the Maſs was wicked, and the Sacrament of the Altar moſt abominable?

Young. Yes that I have.

Chan. And art thou not ſorry for it?

Young. No Sir, not a whit.

Chan. Art thou not content to go to the Church, and hear Maſs?

Young. I will not go to the Church, either to Maſs or Mattens, till I may hear it in a Tongue that I can underſtand: For I will be fed no longer in a ſtrange Language. And always the Scribe did write every one of theſe Articles, as they were demanded and anſwered unto.

Then the Scribe asked her from whence ſhe came.

The Chancellor ſaid, this is ſhe that brought over all theſe Books of Hereſy and Treaſon.

Then the Scribe ſaid to her, Woman, where hadſt thou all theſe Books?

Young. I bought them in Amſterdam, and brought them over to ſell, thinking to gain thereby.

The Scribe. What is the Name of the Book?

Young. I cannot tell.

Scribe. Why wouldſt thou buy Books and know not their Names?

Then ſaid Cluny the Keeper; Sir, my Lord Biſhop did ſend for her by Name that ſhe ſhould come to Maſs, but ſhe would not.

Chan. Yea, did my Lord ſend for her by Name, and would ſhe not go to Maſs?

Young. No Sir, I will never go to Maſs, till I do underſtand it, by the Leave of God.

Chan. Underſtand it! why who the Devil can make thee underſtand Latin, thou being ſo old?

Then the Scribe commanded her to ſet her Hand to all theſe Things.

Then ſaid ſhe, Let me hear them read firſt.

Scribe. Maſter Chancellor, ſhall ſhe hear it read?

Chan. Ay, ay, let the Heretick hear it read.

Then ſhe heard it read, and ſo ſign'd it.

The eighth Examination of Mrs. Young before the Biſhop.

Biſhop. IS this the Woman that hath three Children?

Keeper. Yea, my Lord.

Biſhop. Woman, here is a Supplication put into my Hands for thee. In like Caſe there was another Supplication put up to me for thee before this, in which thou madeſt as tho' I ſhould keep thy Children.

Young. My Lord, I did not know of this Supplication, nor yet of the other.

Biſhop. Mr. Dean, is this the Woman you have ſued ſo earneſtly for?

Dean. Yea, my Lord.

Dean. Woman, what remaineth in the Sacrament of the Altar, when and after that the Prieſt hath ſpoken the Words of Conſecration?

Young. A piece of Bread. But the Sacrament of Chriſt's Body and Blood, which he did inſtitute and leave among his Diſciples the Night before he was betray'd, miniſtred according to his Word, that Sacrament I do believe.

Dean. How doſt thou believe concerning the Body of Chriſt? where is his Body, and how many Bodies hath he?

Young. Sir, in Heaven, he ſitteth on the right Hand of God.

Dean. From whence came his human Body?

Young. He took it of the Virgin Mary.

Dean. That is Fleſh, Blood, and Bones, as mine is. But what Shape hath his ſpiritual Body? Hath it Face, Hands, and Feet?

Young. I know no other Body that he hath, but that Body whereof he meant when he ſaid, This is my Body, which is given for you; and this is my Blood which ſhall be ſhed for you. Whereby he plainly meaneth that Body and no other, which he took of the Virgin Mary, having the perfect Shape and Proportion of a human Body.

Story. Thou haſt a wiſe Body: For thou muſt go to the Stake.

Dean. Art thou content to believe in the Faith of Chriſt's Church? But to ask of thee what Chriſt's Church is, or where it is, I let it paſs.

Young. Sir, to that Church I have joined my Faith,

Faith, and from it I purpoſe never to turn by God's Help.

Dean. Wouldſt thou not be at home with thy Children with a good Will?

Young. Sir, if it pleaſe God to give me Leave.

Dean. Art thou willing to confeſs thyſelf to be an ignorant and fooliſh Woman, and to believe as our holy Father the Pope of Rome doth, and as the Lord Cardinal doth, and as my Lord the Biſhop of London thine Ordinary doth, and as the King and Queen, and all the Nobility of England do; yea, and the Emperor, and all the noble Perſons of Chriſtendom?

Young. Sir, I was never wiſe, but in few Words I ſhall make you a brief Anſwer how I do believe all Things that are written in the Scriptures given by the Holy Ghoſt unto the Church of Chriſt, ſet forth and taught by the Church of Chriſt. Hereon I ground my Faith, and not on Man.

Then ſaid Story, And who ſhall be Judge?

Young. Sir, the Scripture.

Story. And who ſhall read it?

Young. He unto whom God hath given the Underſtanding.

Biſhop. Woman, be reformable; for I would thou wert gone, and Maſter Dean here hath earneſtly ſued for thee.

Dean. Woman, I have ſued for thee indeed, and I promiſe thee, if thou wilt be reformable, my Lord will be good unto thee.

Young. I have been before my Lord Biſhop, and before Maſter Chancellor three Times, and have declared my Faith.

Dean. And yet I know that Maſter Chancellor will ſay, that thou art a rank Heretick.

Story. Away with her.

Biſhop. Maſter Dean, ye know that I may not tarry, nor you neither. Let her Keeper bring her home to your own Chamber ſoon at four o'Clock at Afternoon, and if that ye find her reaſonable, then let her go, for I would that ſhe were gone.

Then ſaid the Dean, with a good Will my Lord; and ſo ſhe was ſent unto the Place from whence ſhe came, until it was four of the Clock in the Afternoon.

The ninth Examination before the Dean, before whom ſhe was delivered.

Dean. ART thou a Fool now, as thou waſt To-day.

Young. Sir, I've learnt but ſmall Wiſdom ſince.

Dean. Doſt thou think that I am better learned than thou?

Young. Yes Sir, that I do.

Dean. Thinkeſt thou that I can do thee good?

Young. Yea Sir, and if it pleaſe God that ye will.

Dean. Then I will do thee Good indeed. What doſt thou receive when thou receiveſt the Sacrament which Chriſt left among his Diſciples the Night before he was betrayed?

Young. Sir, that that his Diſciples did receive.

Dean. What did they receive?

Young. Sir, that that Chriſt gave them, they received.

Dean. What Anſwer is this? Was Chriſt there preſent?

Young. Sir, he was there preſent; for he inſtituted his own Sacrament.

Dean. He took Bread, and he brake it, and he gave it to his Diſciples, and ſaid, Take, eat, this is my Body which ſhall be broken for you. When thou receiveſt it, doſt thou believe that thou receiveſt his Body.

Young. Sir, when I receive, I believe that through Faith I do receive Chriſt.

Dean. Doſt thou believe that Chriſt is there?

Young. Sir, I believe that he is there to me, and by Faith I do receive him.

Dean. He alſo took the Cup and gave Thanks, and gave it to his Diſciples, and ſaid; Drink ye all thereof, this is the Cup of the New Teſtament in my Blood, which is ſhed for many for the Remiſſion of Sins. When thou doſt receive it after the Inſtitution that Chriſt ordained among his Diſciples, the Night before he was betrayed, doſt thou believe that Chriſt is there?

Young. Sir, by Faith I believe that he is there, and by Faith I do believe that I do receive him.

Dean. Now thou haſt anſwered me, Remember that thou ſayeſt, that when thou doſt receive according to the Inſtitution of Chriſt, thou doſt receive Chriſt.

Young. Sir, I believe Chriſt not to be abſent from his own Sacrament.

Dean. How long wilt thou continue in that Belief?

Young. Sir, as long as I do live, by the Help of God, for it is, and hath been my Belief.

Dean. Wilt thou ſay this before my Lord?

Young. Yea, Sir.

Dean. Then I dare deliver thee. Why, thou Calf, why wouldſt thou not ſay ſo To-day?

Young. Sir, ye asked me no ſuch Queſtion.

Dean. Then ye would ſtand in Diſputation how many Bodies Chriſt had.

Young. Sir, indeed that Queſtion ye did ask me.

Dean. Who ſhall be the Sureties that thou wilt appear before my Lord of London and me upon Friday next?

Young. Sir, I have no Sureties, nor know I where to have any.

Then ſpake the Dean unto two Women that ſtood there, who had earneſtly ſued for her, ſaying: Women, will ye be her Sureties, that ſhe ſhall appear before my Lord of London and me upon Friday next?

Women. Yea Sir, and it pleaſe you.

Dean. Take heed that I find you no more a Brabler in the Scripture.

Young. Sir, I am no Brabler in the Scripture, nor yet any Man can burthen me therewith.

Dean. Yes, I have heard of you well enough what ye are.

Then ſaid he to the two Women, What if a Man ſhould touch your Conſcience, do ye not ſmell a little of Hereſy alſo?

Women. No, Sir.

Dean. Yes, a little of the Frying-pan, or elſe wherefore have ye two ſo earneſtly ſued for her?

The one Woman anſwered, becauſe that her Children were like to periſh, and therefore God put me in Mind to ſue for her.

Then ſaid the other Woman; And I provided her Child a Nurſe, and I am threatned to ſtand to the Keeping of her Child: And therefore it ſtandeth me in hand to ſue to have her out.

Dean. Woman, give Thanks unto theſe honeſt Women, who have ſo earneſtly ſued for thee, and I promiſe thee ſo have I. Theſe great Hereticks will receive nothing but in Spirit and Faith, and ſo he aroſe and departed.

Young. Sir, God be praiſed, and I thank you for your Goodneſs and theirs alſo, and ſo he went away; and upon the Friday next, becauſe ſhe was accuſed, her two Sureties went thither, and were diſcharged.

The Perſecution of Elizabeth Lawſon.

IN the Town of Bedfield in the County of Suffolk, dwelt an ancient godly Matron, named Elizabeth Lawſon, about the Age of ſixty Years, who was apprehended as an Heretick by the Conſtables of the ſame Town, named Robert Kitrich, and Thomas Elas, in in the Year 1556, becauſe ſhe would not go to Church to hear Maſs, and receive the Sacrament, and believe in it.

Firſt, they laid her in a Dungeon, and after that ſhe was carried unto Norwich, and from thence to Bury Goal, where at laſt ſhe was condemned to be burnt. In the mean Time Sir John Sylliard had her home unto his Houſe, he being High-ſheriff that Year, where ſhe was hardly kept, and wrapped in Irons, till at length, when they could by no Means move her to recant, ſhe was ſent to Priſon again with ſhameful Revilings.

Thus ſhe continued in Priſon the Space of two Years and three Quarters. In the mean Time there was burnt her Son and many more, whereby ſhe would often ſay; Good Lord, what is the Cauſe that I may not yet come to thee with thy Children? Well, good Lord, thy bleſſed Will be done, and not mine.

Not long after this (moſt happily) followed the Death of Queen Mary, after whom ſucceeded Queen Elizabeth. At which Time this Elizabeth Lawſon remained yet ſtill in Bury Priſon, till at length ſhe was bailed upon Sureties.

The ſaid Elizabeth Lawſon alſo had a Siſter, Wife to one Robert Hollon in Mickfield in the ſame County of Suffolk, who likewiſe was perſecuted and driven out from Houſe to Houſe, and a young Man her Son with her, becauſe they would not go to the Church to hear Maſs, and receive the Sacrament of the Altar.

The Perſecution of Thomas Chriſtenmaſs and William Wats.

IN this perilous Rage of Queen Mary's Reign were two Men perſecuted, one called Thomas Chriſtenmaſs, and the other William Wats of Tunbridge in Kent. As theſe two Men travelled from Place to Place, not reſting two Nights together in one Place, they happened to go to Rocheſter in Kent, where they at the Town's End met with a Damſel of eight Years of Age, but whither ſhe went they knew not. It was then Night, and they being weary, were willing to lie in the ſame Town; but could not tell where, they feared ſo the bloody Catholicks. At laſt they deviſed to ask the Damſel whether there were any Hereticks in the Town, or no? and ſhe ſaid, Yea. They asked her where. She anſwered them, At ſuch an Inn, telling them the Name, and where the Inn was. Shortly after, as they were gone from her, they bethought themſelves better, and God ſo moving their Hearts, they went to the Child again, and asked her how ſhe knew that the Innkeeper (of whom ſhe ſpake before) was an Heretick. Marry, quoth ſhe, well enough, and his Wife alſo. How knoweſt thou, pretty Maiden, ſaid they? I pray they tell us. How know I? ſaid ſhe. Marry becauſe they go to the Church; and thoſe that will not hold up their Hands there, they will preſent them, and he himſelf goes from Houſe to Houſe, to compel them to come to Church. When theſe two Men heard this, they gave God Praiſe, and avoided that Houſe, taking the Warning of that Maid (of good bringing up as it ſhould ſeem) to be God's marvellous Providence towards them.

In the laſt Year but one of Queen Mary's Reign William Wats lived at Seale in Kent, where being apprehended, and brought by the Conſtables before the Biſhop and Juſtices at Tunbridge, who endeavour'd to perſuade him to turn from the Truth, but all in vain, though they ſpent much Time, and uſed many flattering Words.

At Dinner-Time the Conſtable took Wats to a Victualling-houſe, where after they had well filled themſelves, they fell aſleep, ſuppoſing their Priſoner had been ſure enough under their Hands. Wats's Wife being in the Houſe with her Husband, and very careful for his Well-doing, ſeeing them all faſt aſleep, deſired her Husband to go away, as God had given him an Opportunity, but he refuſing ſo long, that at laſt a Stranger hearing ſomething of the Diſpute, asked what the Matter was, and why ſhe was ſo earneſt with her Husband: The Wife told him. Then ſaid the Stranger to Wats, Father, go thy Ways in God's Name, and tarry no longer; the Lord hath opened the Way unto thee. Upon which Words he went his Way, and his Wife departed from him, and went home to her Houſe at Seale, thinking her Husband had gone another Way. Now as ſhe was going in at her Door, telling her Friends of his Deliverance, immediately came the ſaid Wats in alſo, and they all being amazed thereat, willed him in all Haſte to get him away; for they thought there would be Search for him immediately.

Then Wats ſaid, he would eat Meat firſt, and alſo pray; which he did, and afterwards departed thence. So ſoon as he was out of the Doors, and had hid himſelf in an Holly-buſh, immediately came the ſaid Conſtables with thirty Perſons into the ſaid Houſe to ſearch for him, where they pierced the Featherbeds, broke open his Cheſts, and made great Havock; and as they were ſearching, the Conſtable cried, I will have Wats, I will have Wats, I tell thee, I will have Wats; but God be thanked Wats could not be found. And when they ſaw it needleſs to ſearch for him, in the End they took his Wife, and ſet her in a Pair of Stocks where ſhe remained two Days, and ſhe was very bold in the Truth, and at laſt delivered thro' the Providence of God; whoſe Name be glorified in all his Works, Amen.

There was at London a certain honeſt godly Perſon, a Painter, named Dabney, whom John Avales in the Time of Queen Mary had brought before Bonner to be examined for his Faith. It happened the ſame Time, when the ſaid Dabney was there, that the Biſhop was occupied with the Examination of others, ſo that he was bid to ſtand by, and to wait the Biſhop's Leiſure. Upon the ſame, or not long after, ſuddenly came Word to the Biſhop to prepare him in all Speed, the general Proceſſion tarried for him. The Biſhop hearing that, ſetting all Buſineſs apart, buſtleth himſelf with all Speed poſſible to the Church, there to furniſh Proceſſion. By reaſon whereof Dabney, who newly came to the Houſe, was there left alone, while every Man elſe was buſied in preparing and ſetting themſelves forward according as the Caſe required.

To be ſhort, as the Time called on, Bonner with his Houſhold makes all poſſible Haſte to the Proceſſion. Dabney being left alone, came down to the outward Court next the Gate, there walking heavily by himſelf, looking for nothing leſs than to eſcape that Danger. The Porter, who was only left at home, ſeeing the Man walk alone, ſuppoſing he had been ſome Citizen there left behind, and waiting for opening the Gate, went and opened the Wicket, asking if he would go out. Yea, ſaid he, with a good Will, if ye will let me out. With all my Heart, quoth the Porter, and I pray you ſo do.

And thus the ſaid Dabney taking the Occaſion offered of God, being let out by the Porter, eſcaped out of the Wolf's Mouth. The Proceſſion being done, when the Biſhop returned home, Dabney was gone, and could not be found. Whereupon Search was was made, but eſpecially John Avales laid wait for him: Who after long ſearching, when he could not get him, at length received fifteen Crowns of his Wife to let him alone when he ſhould ſee him, and ſo that good Man eſcaped.

A like Example of God Almighty's Goodneſs towards his afflicted Servants in that dangerous Time of Perſecution, may alſo appear evidently in one Alexander Wimſhurſt, a Prieſt, ſome Time of Magdalen College in Oxford, and then a Papiſt, but ſince an earneſt Enemy to Antichriſt, and a Man better inſtructed in the true Fear of God. It happened that one had promoted him to Biſhop Bonner for Religion, upon what Occaſion I do not underſtand. According to the old Manner in ſuch Caſes provided, he ſent forth Robin Caly, otherwiſe called Robin Papiſt, one of his Whelps to bring in the Game, and to cauſe this ſilly poor Man to appear before him. Little Robin, like a proper Man, beſtirreth himſelf in his Buſineſs, and ſmelleth him out, and when he had taken him, bringeth him along by Cheapſide, not ſuffering him to talk with any of his Acquaintance by the Way, tho' they were of his old Friends of Oxford that offered to ſpeak unto him.

When they came into St. Paul's, he eſpied Dr. Chadſey there walking up and down, and to whom, becauſe he was able in ſuch a Caſe to do Pleaſure, and for that he had been of his old Acquaintance in Oxford, he was very deſirous to ſpeak to him ere he went through. Chadſey perceiving that Robin Caly did attend upon him, ſaid that he durſt not meddle in the Matter. Yes (ſaith little Robin) you may talk with him if it pleaſe you Maſter Doctor. To be ſhort, Alexander openeth his Caſe, and in the End deſireth, for old Acqaintance Sake, that he would find Means he might be rather brought before Dr. Martin to be examined, than any other. Nay, ſaith he (alledging the Words of Chriſt unto Peter in the laſt Chapter of St. John,) You remember, Brother, what is written in the Goſpel; When thou waſt young, thou didſt gird thyſelf, and wenteſt whither thou wouldeſt: But being aged, other Men ſhall gird thee, and lead thee whither thou would'ſt not. Thus abuſing the Scripture to his private Meaning, whereas notwithſtanding he might eaſily have accompliſhed ſo ſmall a Requeſt, if it had liked him.

Thence was he carried to Story and Cook Commiſſioners, there to learn what ſhould become of him. Before them he did uſe himſelf boldly and ſtoutly, as they on the other Side did urge him, with captious Queſtions very cruelly. When they had baited the poor Man their fill, they asked him where his Whore was. She is not my Whore (ſaid he) but my lawful Wife. She is thy Whore, ſaid they. She is not my Whore (ſaid he again) but my Wife, I tell you. So when they perceived that he would not give place unto them, nor attributed to them ſo much as they looked for at his Hand, according to the ordinary Manner, they commanded him to Priſon. And now mark well the Providence of God in his Preſervation.

He was brought into Cluny's Houſe at Pater-noſter-row, thence to be carried to Lollard's-Tower out of hand, but that Cluny (as it happened) his Wife and his Maid were ſo earneſtly occupied about preſent Buſineſs, that as then they had not Leiſure to lock up their Priſoner. In the Hall where Alexander ſate was a ſtrange Woman, whoſe Husband was then preſently in Trouble for Religion, which perceived by ſome one Occaſion or other, that this Man was brought in for the like Cauſe. Alack, good Man, ſaith ſhe, if you will you may eſcape the cruel Hands of your Enemies, foraſmuch as they be all away that ſhould look unto. God hath opened the Way unto you for a Deliverance, and therefore loſe not the Opportunity thereof if you be wiſe. Being perſuaded with theſe and ſuch like Words, he went out of the Doors, and eſcaped their Hands.

John Davis, under twelve Years of Age.

IN the Year 1546, and the laſt Year of King Henry VIII, John Davis, a Child of twelve Years and under, who dwelling in the Houſe of Mr. Johnſon Apothecary, in the Town of Worceſter, his Uncle, uſing ſometimes to read in the Teſtament and other Engliſh Books, was complained of by his Miſtreſs; who was an obſtinate Perſon, and conſulted with one Thomas Parton, and Alice Brook, Wife to Nicholas Brook, Organ-maker, with certain of the Canons, and Mr. Johnſon, Chancellor to Dr. Heath their Biſhop. The Means whereby he was intrapped was wrought by the aforeſaid Alice Brooks, who procured her Son Oliver, School-fellow with the ſaid John Davis, to feign Friendſhip with him, and under Pretence to be inſtructed, to ſee his Engliſh Books, and eſpecially to get ſomething of his Writing againſt the ſix Articles: Which being had, was ſoon brought to the Canons of the Church and the Chancellor. Whereupon Thomas Parton came to apprehend him, and his Uncle was forced againſt his Will to bind the poor Boy's Arms behind him; and ſo he was brought to the Officers of the Town, where he lay from the 14th of Aug. till the laſt of September. Then was he commanded to the Freemans Priſon, where one Richard Howborough, coming to perſuade him from burning, willed him to prove firſt with a Candle: Who then holding his Finger, and the other a Candle under it a good Space, yet (as the Party himſelf aſſured him) felt no burning thereof, neither would the other that held the Candle believe him a great while, till he had looked, and ſaw no Scorching of the Candle at all appeared.

The Child was removed from thence to an inner Priſon, called Peephole, where the low Bayliff, named Robert Yould, laid upon him a pair of Bolts, ſo that he could not lift up his little Legs, but leaning on a Staff, ſtipt them forward upon the Ground: With theſe Bolts his lying was upon the cold Ground, having not one Lock of Straw nor Cloth to cover him, ſave only two Sheep-skins, neither durſt Father or Mother, or any of his Friends come to him. Beſides this, and many great Threats of the Papiſts, there was a Madman put to him in the Priſon, with a Knife about him, wherewith he oft-times in his frantick Rage proffered to thruſt him in.

After this come to him one Joyliff and Yewer, two Canons, who had his Writings againſt the ſix Articles, and his Ballad, called, Come down for all your ſhaven Crown: to ſee whether he would ſtand to that he had written. Which done, with many great raging Words, not long after ſate Mr. Johnſon the Chancellor in the Guildhall upon the poor Lad. Where firſt were brought in his Accuſers and ſworn, then were ſworn alſo twenty-four Men which went on his Queſt, and found him guilty, but he never came before the Chancellor. Upon this he was ſent to the common Goal among Thieves and Murderers, there to tarry the coming of the Judges, and ſo to be had ſtrait to Execution. But the mighty Mercy of the Lord, who helpeth the Deſolate and Miſerable when all other Help is paſt, ſo provided for this innocent Lad, that the Purpoſe of all his hard-hearted Enemies was diſappointed: For before the Judges came, God took away Henry VIII out of this Life. By reaſon whereof the Force of the Law was then ſtayed, howbeit he was nevertheleſs arraigned, being held up in a Man's Arms at the Bar before the Judges, who were Portman and Marven: who when they perceived that they could not burn him, would have him preſently whipped. But Mr. Bourne declared to the Judges, how he had whipping enough. After that he had lain a Week more in Priſon, he had him home to his Houſe, his Wife anointed his Legs herſelf with Ointment, which then were ſtiff and numb'd with Irons, till at length when Mr. Bourne and his Wife ſaw they could not win him to the Belief of their Sacrament, they put him away, leſt he ſhould infect their Son Anthony, as they thought, with Hereſy.

Thus John Davis was mercifully preſerved, after he had ſuffered Impriſonment from the 14th Day of Auguſt till within ſeven Days of Eaſter, who is yet alive, and a profitable Miniſter this Day in the Church of England: Bleſſed be the Lord.

Mrs. Roberts.

MIſtreſs Roberts, a Gentlewoman, in the Town of Hawkhurſt in Suſſex, being earneſtly addicted to the Truth of the Goſpel, and no leſs conſtant in that which ſhe had learned therein, ſo kept herſelf during all the Brunt of Queen Mary's Time, that ſhe never came to their popiſh Service, nor polluted her Conſcience with their idolatrous Maſs. There dwelt at the ſame Time not far off a Juſtice called Sir John Gilford, who being as fervent on the contrary Side to ſet forward the Proceedings of Queen Mary, thought to prove Maſteries with this Gentlewoman, in forcing her into the Church. And firſt ſending his Wife, he attempted her by fair Words and gentle Perſuaſions to conform herſelf to the Prince's Laws, and to come, as other chriſtian People did, to the Church. Notwithſtanding, ſhe conſtantly perſiſting in the Sincerity of the Truth, would by no Perſuaſions be won to do therein againſt her Conſcience; and ſo kept at home a certain Time till again Mr. Gilford thinking not to give her over ſo, ſent his Officers and Servants to her, by Force and Power to hale her out of her Houſe to the Church, and ſo did. Where, by the way, ſhe for Grief of Conſcience ſwooned, and ſo of Neceſſity was brought home again, and falling into an Ague, was for that Time diſpenſed with. When ſhe had recovered her Health again, he came in Perſon to compel her to come to Church whether ſhe would or no. But (as the Proverb goeth) Who can prevent that which God would have done? For when Mr. Gilford had purpoſed as pleaſed him, the Lord ſo diſpoſed for this good Woman, that as he was coming up Stairs toward her Chamber, ſuddenly his old Diſeaſe the Gout ſeized him, and ſo terribly tormented him, that he could go no farther: And ſo he, that purpoſed to carry her to the Church againſt her Will, was forced himſelf to be carried home to his Houſe to his Pain, proteſting and ſwearing that he would never from henceforth trouble that Gentlewoman more, and no more he did.

Mrs. Anne Lacy.

MIſtreſs Anne Lacy Widow, in Nottinghamſhire, was in great Danger in Queen Mary's Time, inſomuch that the Proceſs was out againſt her, and ſhe ready to have been apprehended, being ſo nearly purſued, that ſhe was driven to hide her Bible and other Books in a Dunghil. Mr. Lacy her Brother was then Juſtice of Peace: But to whom (as I have heard) ſhe was but very little beholden. Nevertheleſs, where Kindred faileth, yet God's Grace never faileth ſuch as ſtick to him; for in this mean Time, as the Proceſs came out againſt her, Queen Mary died, and ſo ſhe eſcaped.

Croſsman's Wife.

SHE lived at Tibnam Longrow in Norfolk, and for not going to Church, was ſought for at her Houſe by the Conſtable of the Hundred, who when he came to her Houſe, ſhe being at home with a Child ſucking in her Arms, ſtept into a Corner on the one ſide of the Chimney, and they ſeeking about the Chambers the Child never cried (altho' before they came, it did) as long as they were there, and ſo by this Means the Lord preſerved her.

The Congregation at Stoke in Suffolk.

THere were ſome likewiſe that avoided the violent Rage of the Adverſaries by Means only of their Number, and mutual according in Godlineſs, wherein they did ſo hold together, that without much ado none well could be troubled: Whereof we have an Example in a certain Town in Suffolk called Stoke. After the three ſharp Years of Queen Mary's Perſecution being paſt, yet notwithſtanding the Inhabitants of the Town aforeſaid, eſpecially the Women, came not to their Church to receive, after the popiſh Manner, the Sacrament. Who, if they had been but few, they could by no Means have eſcaped Impriſonment. But becauſe there were ſo many, the Papiſts thought it not beſt to lay Hands upon them. Only they appointed them ſixteen Days Reſpite after Eaſter, wherein as many as would, ſhould receive the Sacrament; thoſe that would not, ſhould ſtand to the Peril that would follow. Of this Company, which were many, giving their Hands together, the Chief were theſe:

Eve, an old Woman of ſixty Years. Alice Coker, her Daughter. Elizabeth Foxe. Agnes Cutting. Alice Spenſer. Henry Canker. Joan Fouke. Agnes Spaulding. John Steyre and his Brother. John Foxe.

Theſe, after the Order was taken for their not coming to the Church, took Counſel among themſelves what was beſt to be done, and at length concluded by Promiſe one to another, that they would not receive at all. Yet ſome of them afterward, being perſuaded with fair Promiſes that the Communion ſhould be miniſtred unto them according to King Edward's Book, went to the Pariſh-prieſt (whoſe Name was Cotes) and asked him after which ſort he would adminiſter the Sacrament. He anſwered to ſuch as he ſavoured, that he would give it after the right ſort; the reſt ſhould have it after the popiſh Manner.

To be ſhort, none did communicate ſo, but only John Steyre and John Foxe; of which the one gave his Wife Leave to do as ſhe thought beſt. The other went about with Threats to compel his Wife, ſaying, that otherwiſe he would divorce himſelf from her. As for the reſt, they withdrew themſelves from Church, reſorting to their wonted Company, only Foxe's Wife tarried ſtill at home, in Heavineſs, whoſe Husband practiſed with the Curate in the mean Time, the next Day after he ſhould give her the Sacrament, which was the ſeventeenth Day after Eaſter. But the very ſame Day, unknowing to her Husband, ſhe went ſecretly to her Company, and with Tears declared how violently her Husband had dealt with her. The other Women bade her notwithſtanding to be of good Cheer, and ſaid that they would make their earneſt Prayers to God both for her and her Husband; and indeed when they had ſo done, the Matter took very good Succeſs. For the next Day after goodman Foxe came of his own Accord unto them, a far other Man than he was before, and bewailed his own Raſhneſs, praying them that they would forgive him, promiſing ever after to be more ſtrong in Faith, to the great rejoycing both of them and his Wife.

About half a Year after this, the Biſhop of Norwich ſendeth forth certain of his Officers or Apparators thither, which gave them Warning every one to come to the Church the next Sunday following. If they would not come, they ſhould appear before the Commiſſary out of hand, to render Account of their Abſence. But the Women having ſecret Knowledge of this before, kept themſelves out of the Way on purpoſe, to avoid the Summons or Warning. Therefore when they were not at the Church at the Day appointed, the Commiſſary did firſt ſuſpend them, according to the Biſhop of Rome's Law, and within three Weeks after did excommunicate them. Therefore when they perceived than an Officer of the Town was ſet to take ſome of them, they conveying themſelves privily out of the Town, eſcaped all Danger.

The Congregation in London.

NO leſs wonderful was the Preſervation of the Congregation in London, which from the firſt Beginning of Queen Mary, to the latter End thereof, continued, notwithſtanding whatſoever the Malice, Device, ſearching and Inquiſition of Men, or Strictneſs of Laws could work to the contrary. Such was the merciful Hand of the Lord, according to his accuſtomed Goodneſs, ever working with his People. Of this bountiful Goodneſs of the Lord, many and great Examples appeared in the Congregation which now I ſpeak of. How oft, and in what great Danger did he deliver them?

Firſt, In Black-friers, when they ſhould have reſorted to Sir Thomas Carden's Houſe, privy Watch was laid for them, but yet through God's Providence the Miſchief was prevented, and they delivered.

Again, they narrowly eſcaped about Aldgate, where Spies were laid for them: and had not Thom. Simſon the Deacon eſpied them, and bid them diſperſe themſelves away, they had been taken. For within two Hours the Conſtables coming to the Houſe after they were gone, demanded of the Wife what Company had been there. To whom ſhe, to excuſe the Matter, made Anſwer again, ſaying, that half a dozen good Fellows had been there at Breakfaſt as they went a Maying.

Another Time alſo about the great Conduit, they paſſing there thro' a very narrow Alley, into a Clothworker's Loft, were eſpied, and the Sheriffs ſent for: But before they came, they having privy Knowledge thereof, immediately ſhifted away out of the Alley, John Avales ſtanding alone in the Mercer's Chapel ſtaring at them.

Another like Eſcape they made in a Ship at Billingſgate, belonging to a certain good Man of Leigh, where in the open Sight of the People they were aſſembled together, and yet through God's mighty Power eſcaped.

Betwixt Ratcliff and Redriff, in a Ship called Jeſus Ship, twice or thrice they aſſembled, having there cloſely, after their accuſtomed Manner, both Sermon, Prayer, and Communion, and yet through the Protection of the Lord they returned, altho' not uneſpied, yet untaken.

Moreover, in a Cooper's Houſe in Pudding-Lane, ſo near they were to Perils and Dangers, that John Avales coming into the Houſe where they were, talked with the Man of the Houſe, and after he had asked a Queſtion or two, departed; God ſo working that either he had no Knowledge of them, or no Power to take them.

But they never eſcaped more hardly, than once in Thames-ſtreet in the Night-time, where the Houſe being beſet with Enemies, they were delivered by the Means of a Mariner, who being at that preſent in the ſame Company, and ſeeing no other Way to avoid, pluckt off his Slops and ſwam to the next Boat, and ſo rowed the Company over, uſing his Shoes inſtead of Oars, and ſo the Jeopardy was diſpatched.

Edward Bennet.

ABout the ſecond Year of Queen Mary, Edward Bennet, then dwelling at Queenhith, was deſired by Mr. Tingle Priſoner then in Newgate, to bring him a New Teſtament. He procuring one of Mr. Coverdale's Tranſlation, wrapt it in a Handkerchief, ſaying to George the Keeper, who asked him what he had, that it was a piece of powdred Beef. Let me ſee it, ſaid he. Perceiving what it was, he brought him to Sir Roger Cholmley, who examined him why he did ſo, ſaying that Book was not lawful, and ſo committed him to Woodſtreet-Compter, where he continued 25 Weeks.

Dr. Story coming to the Priſon to examine other Priſoners, this Bennet looking out at the Grate, ſpake to him, deſiring him to be good unto him, and to help him out, for he had lain long in Priſon. To whom Dr. Story anſwered, Waſt thou not before me in Chriſt's-church? Yes forſooth, ſaid Bennet. Ah, ſaid Story, thou doſt not believe in the Sacrament of the Altar? Marry I will help thee out; come, ſaid he to the Keeper, turn him out, I will help him; and ſo took Bennet with him, and brought him to Cluny in Pater-noſter-row, and bade him bring him to the Coal-houſe, and there he was in the Stocks a Week.

Then the Biſhop ſent for him to talk with him, and firſt asked him if he were confeſſed? No, ſaid Bennet. He asked him if he would be confeſſed? No, ſaid he. Then he asked him if the Prieſt could take away his Sins. No, ſaid Bennet, I do not ſo believe.

Then he and Harpsfield laughed at him, and mocked him, asking him if he did not believe that whatſoever the Prieſt here bound in Earth, ſhould be bound in Heaven, and whatſoever he looſeth in Earth ſhould be looſed in Heaven. No, ſaid Bennet; but I believe that the Miniſter of God preaching God's Word truly, and adminiſtring the Sacraments according to the ſame, whatſoever he bindeth in Earth, ſhould be bound in Heaven, and whatſoever he looſeth, &c. Then the Biſhop putting him aſide, ſaid he ſhould go to Fulham and be whipped.

Mr. Buſwell a Prieſt then came to him lying in the Coalhouſe in the Stocks, and brought Cranmer's Recantation, ſaying, that he had recanted. My Faith, ſaid the other, lieth in no Man's Book, but in him which hath redeemed me. The next Saturday, Bennet with five others were called for to come to Maſs in the Chappel. The Maſs being done, and they coming out, five of them went to Priſon, and were afterwards burned. Bennet being behind, and coming toward the Gate, the Porter, opening to a Company going out, asked if there were no Priſoners there. No, ſaid they. Bennet ſtanding in open Sight before him, with other ſerving Men who were there by reaſon that Bonner made many Prieſts that Day, when the Gates were opened, went out amongſt them and ſo eſcaped.

Again, in the laſt Year of Queen Mary, the ſame Bennet being taken again with the twenty-four beyond Iſlington, and brought to Sir Roger Cholmley's, the People coming very thick did cut off ſome of them, to the Number of eight, which were behind, among whom was Bennet. Then he knocked at the Gate to come in, the Porter ſaid, that he was none of the Company. He ſaid, yes, and knocked again. Then there ſtood by one of the Congregation, named Johnſon, who ſaid, Edward, thou haſt done well, do not tempt God: go thy Way. And ſo he taking the Warning as ſent of God, with a quiet Conſcience eſchewed burning.

Jeffrey Hurſt, Brother-in-law to George Marſh, Martyr.

IN the Town of Shakerley in Lancaſhire dwelt one Jeffery Hurſt, the Son of an honeſt Yeoman, who had beſides him eleven Children, the ſaid Jeffery being the twelfth and eldeſt: And their Father being willing to bring them up, ſo that they ſhould be able another Day to help themſelves, he did bind this Jeffery Prentice unto the Craft of Nailing, to make make all kind of Nails, which Occupation he learned, and ſerved out the Time of ſeven Years, which being expired, he gave himſelf at Times to learn of his other Brethren which went to School: And as he was very willing to the ſame, ſo God ſent him Knowledge; wherein he perſevered and went forwards in ſuch Sort, that he could write and read indifferently, and in longer Continuance came by more Knowledge, and ſo having the Bible and divers other Books in his Houſe, did come to Knowledge in the Scripture. After this he took to Wife the Siſter of Mr. George Marſh, of whoſe Martyrdom mention is made before, and being very familiar with him, did greatly mend his Knowledge. Now when Queen Mary was entred the firſt Year of her Reign, he kept himſelf away from their Doings, and came not to the Church; whereupon he was laid in wait for and called Heretick, and Lollard; and ſo for fear of further Danger he was compelled to leave his Wife and Child, and flie into Yorkſhire, and there being not known did lead his Life, returning ſometimes by Night to his Houſe to comfort his Wife, and bringing with him ſome Preacher or other, who uſed to preach unto them ſo long as the Time would ſerve, and ſo departed by Night again. The Names of the Preachers were Mr. Reneſes, Mr. Beſt, Mr. Brodbanke, Mr. Ruſſel, and every time they came thither they were about twenty, or twenty-four ſometimes, but ſixteen at leaſt, who had there alſo ſometimes a Communion. And thus in much Fear did he with others lead his Life, till the laſt Year of the Reign of Queen Mary. Then it chanced that the ſaid Jeffery Hurſt, after the Death of his Father, came home and kept cloſe for ſeven or eight Weeks.

There dwelt not far off, at Morleſs, a certain Juſtice of Peace, and of the Quorum, named Thomas Lelond, who hearing of him, appointed a Time to come to his Father's Houſe where he then dwelt, to rifle the Houſe for Books, and to ſearch for him alſo, and ſo did. Jeffery and his Company having Knowledge of his coming, took the Books which were in the Houſe, as the Bible, the Communion Book, and the New Teſtament of Tindal's Tranſlation, and divers others, and threw them all underneath a Tub or Fat, conveying alſo the ſaid Jeffery under the ſame, with a great deal of Straw underneath him: For as it chanced they had the more Time, becauſe when the Juſtice came almoſt to the Door, he ſtay'd and would not enter the Houſe till he had ſent for Hurſt's Mother's Landlady, Mrs. Shakerley; and then with her Conſent intended to go forwards. In the mean Time, Jeffery by ſuch as were with him, was willed to lay in his Window the Teſtament of Tindal's Tranſlation, and a little Book containing the third Part of the Bible, with the Book of Eccleſiaſticus, to try what they would ſay unto them.

This done, Miſtreſs Shakerley came. Unto whom the Juſtice immediately declared the Cauſe of his coming, and how he was ſorry to attempt any ſuch thing againſt any of her Tenants for her Sake, but notwithſtanding he muſt needs execute his Office. And again you muſt, (ſaid he) note this, that a ſcabbed Sheep is able to infect a great Number; and eſpecially having, as he hath, ſo many Brethren and Siſters, he is able to marr them all, if he be not looked unto in Time. And thus concluding, Mr. Lelond entered into the Houſe, and being come in, ſet himſelf in a Chair in the middle of the Houſe; and ſending Sir Ralph Parkinſon his Prieſt, and one of his Men, and one of Mrs. Shakerley's Men about the Houſe, to ſearch and rifle the Cheſts (who did ſo) in the mean Time he talked with Hurſt's Mother, almoſt 60 Years of Age; and chiding with her that ſhe would ſuffer her Son ſo to order and behave himſelf like an Heretick, ſaid, Thou old Fool, I know myſelf that this new Learning ſhall come again; but for how long? Even for three Months or four Months, and no longer. But I will lay thee, old Fool, in Lancaſter Dungeon for this, and well worthy.

Now as concerning the Searchers, they found nothing but Latin Books, as Grammar, and ſuch like. Theſe be not what we look for (ſaid they) we muſt ſee farther, and ſo looked into Hurſt's Chamber, where they found the foreſaid Books. Then Sir Ralph taking up the Teſtament, look'd on it, and ſmiled. His Maſter ſeeing that, ſaid, Now Sir Ralph, what have we here? Forſooth, ſaith he, a Teſtament of Tindal's Tranſlation, plain Hereſy, and none worſe than it. Then ſaid he, all their Goods are loſt to the Queen, and their Bodies to Priſon, and was wonderfully haſty; notwithſtanding through the Means of Mrs. Shakerley he was content to ſtay a little.

Then the Prieſt looked on the other Book. What ſay ye to that Sir Ralph? Is that as bad as the other? No, ſaid he, but it is not good that they ſhould have ſuch Engliſh Books to look on; for this and ſuch others may do much Harm. Then he asked his Mother where her eldeſt Son was, and her Daughter Alice? She anſwer'd ſhe could not tell; they had not been with her a long Time. And he ſwore by God's Body, he would make her tell where they were, or he'd lay her in Lancaſter Dungeon; and yet he would have them notwithſtanding too. To be ſhort, for Fear, he had his Brother J. Hurſt and his Mother bound in an hundred Pound to bring the Parties before him in fourteen Days Time, and ſo he departed, and the Prieſt put both the Books in his Boſom, and carried them away with him. Then John Hurſt went after them, deſiring that he might have the Book which the Prieſt found no Fault with; but he ſaid, they ſhould anſwer to them both, and which ſoever was the better, neither was good.

As this paſt on, when the Time was come that Jeffery Hurſt and his Siſter ſhould be examined, the Juſtice ſent for them betimes in the Morning, and had prepared a Maſs to begin withal, asking Jeffery Hurſt if he would firſt go and ſee his Maker, and then he would talk further with him. To whom Jeffery anſwer'd and ſaid, Sir, my Maker is in Heaven, and I am ſure in going to your Maſs I ſhall find no Edification thereby; and therefore I pray you hold me excuſed.

Well, well, ſaid he, I perceive I ſhall find you an Heretick, by God; but I will go to Maſs, and I will not loſe it for all your Prattling. Then he went into his Chapel, and when Maſs was done he ſent for them, and cauſed his Prieſt to read a Scroll unto them as concerning the ſeven Sacraments; and ever as he ſpake of the Body and Blood of Chriſt, he put off his Cap, and ſaid; Lo ye may ſee, you will deny theſe Things, and care not for your Prince; but you ſhall feel it ere I have done with you, and all the Faculty of you, with other Talk more between them, I know not what; but in the End they were licenſed to depart under Sureties to appear again before him within three Weeks, and then to go to Lancaſter. Howbeit, in the mean Time it ſo pleaſed God, that within four Days of the Day appointed, it was noiſed that the Queen was dead, and within fourteen Days after the ſaid Jeffery Hurſt had ſent home his two Books, and nothing was ſaid unto him.

It followed after this, that God's Word began to take Place, and the Queen's Viſitor came down into that Country, who choſe four Men in the Pariſh, to wit, Simon Smith, Jeffery Hurſt, Henry Brown, George Eccerſly, which four were Proteſtants, to ſee the Queen's Proceedings take Place; who according to their Power did ſo, notwithſtanding it little prevailed; and therefore the ſaid Jeffery being ſore grieved with the Office, fell ſick, and died.

William Wood of Kent.

William Wood, Baker, dwelling in the County of Kent, was examined before Dr. Kenall, Chancellor of the Dioceſe of Rocheſter, Dr. Chedſey, the Mayor of Rocheſter, and Mr. Robinſon the Scribe on the 19th Day of October, and in the ſecond Year of Queen Mary, in St. Nicholas's Church in Rocheſter.

Scribe. William Wood, you are preſented becauſe you will not come to the Church, nor receive the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar, How ſay you, have you received or have you not?

Wood. I have not received it, nor dare I receive it, as you now miniſter it.

Kenal. Thou Heretick, what is the Cauſe that thou haſt not received the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar? And at this Word they all put off their Caps and made low Obeiſance.

Wood. There be three Cauſes that make my Conſcience afraid that I dare not receive it. The firſt, Chriſt did deliver it to his twelve Apoſtles and ſaid, Take, eat, and drink ye all of this, &c. and ye eat and drink up all alone. The ſecond Cauſe is; you hold it to be worſhipped, contrary to God's Commandment, thou ſhalt not bow down nor worſhip. The third Cauſe is; you miniſter it in a ſtrange Tongue, contrary to St. Paul's Doctrine, I had rather have five Words with Underſtanding, than ten thouſand with Tongues: By reaſon whereof the People be ignorant of the Death of Chriſt.

Kenall. Thou Heretick, wilt thou have any plainer Words than theſe, Take, eat, this is my Body? Wilt thou deny the Scripture?

Wood. I will not deny the holy Scriptures, God forbid, but with my Heart I do faithfully believe them. St. Paul ſaith, God calleth thoſe Things that are not, as tho' they were: and Chriſt ſaith, I am a Vine: I am a Door. St. Paul ſaith, The Rock is Chriſt: All which are figurative Speeches, wherein one Thing is ſpoken, and another Thing is underſtood.

Robinſon. You make a very long Talk of this Matter: learn, Wood, learn.

Kenall. Nay, theſe Hereticks will not learn: look how this Heretick glorieth in himſelf: Thou Fool, art thou wiſer than the Queen and her Council, and all the learned Men of this Realm?

Wood. And pleaſe you, Mr. Chancellor, I think you would be loth to have ſuch Glory, to have your Life and Goods taken away, and to be thus called upon, as you rail upon me. But the Servant is not greater than his Maſter. And where you do mock me, and ſay that I am wiſer than the Queen and her Council, St. Paul ſaith, The Wiſdom of the Wiſe of this World is Fooliſhneſs before God, and he that will be wiſe in this World, ſhall be accounted but a Fool.

Kenall. Doſt thou not believe that after theſe Words ſpoken by a Prieſt, Hoc eſt corpus meum, this is my Body, there remaineth no more Bread and Wine, but the very Fleſh and Blood of Chriſt, as he was born of the Virgin Mary, really and ſubſtantially, in Quantity and Quality, as he did hang upon the Croſs?

Wood. I pray you, Mr. Chancellor, give me Leave, for my Learning, to ask you one Queſtion, and I will anſwer you after.

Kenall. It is ſome wiſe Queſtion, I warrant you.

Wood. God ſpake to the Prophet Ezekiel, ſaying, Thou Son of Man, take a Raſor, and ſhave off the Hair of thy Head and of thy Beard, and take one part and caſt it into the Air, take the ſecond part and put it into thy Coat-lap; and take the third part, and caſt it into the Fire: and this is Jeruſalem. I pray you, Mr. Chancellor, was this Hair that the Prophet did caſt into the Fire, or was it Jeruſalem?

Kenall. It did ſignify Jeruſalem.

Wood. Even ſo this Word of Chriſt, This is my Body, is not to be underſtood, that Chriſt's carnal, natural, and real Body is in the ſame, in Quantity and Quality as it was born of the Virgin Mary, and as he was crucify'd on the Croſs, is preſent or incloſed in the Sacrament: But it doth ſignify Chriſt's Body, as St. Paul ſaith, So oft as ye eat of this Bread and drink of this Cup, you ſhall ſhew forth the Lord's Death till he come. What ſhould the Apoſtle mean by this Word, Till he come, if he were here carnally, naturally, corporally, and really in the ſame Quantity and Quality as he was born of the Virgin Mary, and as he did hang on the Croſs, as you ſay? But St. Paul ſaith, You ſhall ſhew the Lord's Death till he come. This doth argue that he is not here as you would have us to believe.

Chadſey. I will prove that Chriſt is here preſent under the Form of Bread, but not in Quantity and Quality.

Kenall. Yes, he is here preſent in Quantity and Quality.

Chadſey. He is here preſent under a Form, and not in Quantity and Quality.

Yes, ſaid Kenall.

No, ſaid Chadſey.

I will prove him here in Quantity and Quality, ſaid Kenall.

I will prove the contrary, ſaid Chadſey.

And theſe two Doctors were ſo earneſt in this Matter, the one to affirm, the other to deny, contending ſo fiercely one with the other, that they foamed at the Mouth, and one was ready to ſpit in another's Face, ſo that in great Fury and Rage the two Doctors roſe up from the Judgment-ſeat, and Dr. Kenall departed out of the Church in great Rage and Fury immediately.

Wood. Behold good People, they would have us to believe, that Chriſt is naturally, really, in Quantity and Quality, preſent in the Sacrament, and yet they cannot tell themſelves, nor agree within themſelves how he is there.

At theſe Words the People made a great Shout, and the Mayor ſtood up and commanded the People to be quiet, and to keep Silence. And the God that did deliver St. Paul out of the Hands of the High-prieſts, by the Contention that was between the Phariſees and Sadducees, did even ſo deliver me at that Time out of the Mouths of the bloody Papiſts, by means of the Contention of theſe two Doctors. Bleſſed be the Name of the Lord, who hath promiſed to lay no more upon his People, than he will enable them to bear, and in the midſt of Temptation can make a Way for them (how, and when it pleaſeth him) to eſcape out of all Dangers.

Many other like Examples of God's helping Hand have been declared upon his elect Saints and Children, a remarkable Inſtance of which may be ſeen in Simon Grinæus, mentioned in the Commentary of Melanchthon, in his own Words as followeth.

The Hiſtory of Simon Grinæus, collected out of Melanchthon's Commentaries upon the tenth Chapter of Daniel.

WHen I was (ſaith he) at the Aſſembly holden at Spire, in the Year of our Lord 1539, by Chance Simon Grinæus came thither unto me from the Univerſity of Heidelberg, where he heard Faber the Biſhop of Vienna, in a Sermon defend and maintain many deteſtable Errors. When the Sermon was done, he followed Faber out of the Church, and ſaluted him reverently, telling him that he had ſomewhat to ſay to him: The Biſhop was willing to talk with him.

Then Grinæus ſaid unto him, that he was very ſorry that a Man of ſuch Learning and Authority ſhould openly maintain ſuch Errors as were both contumelious againſt God, and alſo might be refuted by the manifeſt Teſtimonies of the Scriptures. Ireneus writeth (ſaith he) that Polycarpus was wont to ſtop his Ears whenſoever he heard any erroneous and wicked Doctrine. With what Mind then (think you) would Polycarpus have heard you argue and reaſon what it is that the Mouſe eateth, when he gnaweth the conſecrated Hoſt? Who would not bewail ſuch Ignorance and Blindneſs of the Church? With this the Biſhop break off his Talk, and asked his Name. This Man diſſembling nothing, gently told him, that his Name was Grinæus.

This Biſhop (as many well know) was alſo timorous and fearful in the Company of learned Men. Wherefore he fearing the Learning, Eloquence, and fervent Zeal of Grinæus, eſpecially in ſuch a Matter as this was, fained as though he had been ſent for by the King, and that he had no Leiſure now to reaſon upon this Matter. He pretended that he was very deſirous of Acquaintance and longer Talk with Grinæus, intreating him, that both for his own private Cauſe, and alſo for the Commonwealth, he would come again the next Day unto him, and ſo ſhewed him his Lodging, and appointed him an Hour when he ſhould come: Grinæus, thinking that he had ſpoken unfainedly, promiſed ſo to do.

When he was departed from the Biſhop, he immediately came to us, and was ſcarcely ſat at the Table (for it was Supper-time) reciting part of the Talk he had with the Biſhop unto me and others there preſent, when as I ſitting with my Company, was ſuddenly called out of the Parlour by a certain ancient fatherly Man, who ſhewing a ſingular Gravity in his Countenance, Words, and Behaviour, ſpake unto me, and ſaid, that the Serjeants would by and by come unto our Lodging, being ſent by the King's Command, to carry Grinæus to Priſon, whom the Biſhop had accuſed to the King; commanding that Grinæus ſhould immediately depart out of the Town; and exhorted me, that we ſhould in no caſe delay the Time: And ſo bidding me farewel, departed. But what old Man this was, I neither knew then, nor ever after could underſtand. I returning again to my Company, bade them riſe, and told them what the old Man had ſaid unto me.

By and by, we taking Grinæus in the midſt of us, carried him through the Street to the River of Rhene, whereas after we had ſtayed upon the hither Bank awhile, until Grinæus with his Companion were carried over in a ſmall Boat, returning again to our Lodging, we underſtood that the Serjeants had been there, when we were but a little Way gone out of the Houſe. Now in what great Danger Grinæus ſhould have been, if he had been carried to Priſon by this Cruelty of the Biſhop every Man eaſily may conjecture: Wherefore we judged, that that moſt cruel Intent and Purpoſe of him, was diſappointed by God's merciful Providence. And as I cannot ſay, what old Man it was that gave me that Warning, even ſo likewiſe the Serjeants made ſuch quick Speed, that except Grinæus had been covered and defended by the Angels thro' the marvellous Providence of God, he could never have eſcaped.

With ſuch like Examples of God's mighty and merciful Cuſtody, the Church of Chriſt in all Ages doth abound, as by manifold Experiences may appear as well among the Germans, as alſo in other Places and Ages: But in no Place more, nor in any Time more plentiful, than in this perſecuting Time of Queen Mary, in this our Realm of England, as partly hath been already ſhewn, and part yet remaineth (God willing) moreover hereunto to be added.

The Lady Katherine Dutcheſs of Suffolk.

Stephen Gardiner Biſhop of Wincheſter, ſurmiſing the Lady Katherine, Baroneſs of Willoughby and Eresby, and Dutcheſs Dowager of Suffolk, to be one of his ancient Enemies, becauſe he knew he had deſerved no better of her, deviſed, in the holy Time of the firſt Lent in Queen Mary's Reign, a holy Practice of Revenge, firſt by touching her in the Perſon of her Husband, Richard Berty, Eſquire, for whom he ſent an Attachment (having the great Seal at his Devotion) to the Sheriff of Lincolnſhire, with a ſpecial Letter, commanding moſt ſtraitly the ſame Sheriff to attach the ſaid Richard immediately, and without Bail to bring him up to London to his Lordſhip. Mr. Berty being clear in Conſcience, and free from Offence toward the Queen, could not conjecture any Cauſe of this ſtrange Proceſs, unleſs it were ſome Quarrel for Religion, which he thought could not be ſo ſore as the Proceſs pretended.

The Sheriff, notwithſtanding the Commandment, adventured only to take a Bond of Mr. Berty with two Sureties in a thouſand Pounds, for his Appearance to be made before the Biſhop on Good Friday following, at which Day Mr. Berty appeared, the Biſhop then lying at his Houſe by St. Mary Overy's. Of whoſe Preſence when the Biſhop underſtood by a Gentleman of his Chamber, he came out of his Gallery into his Dining-chamber in a great Rage, where he found a Croud of Suitors, ſaying he would not that Day hear any, but came forth only to know of Mr. Berty, how he being a Subject, durſt ſo arrogantly ſet at light two former Proceſſes of the Queen.

Mr. Berty anſwered, that albeit my Lord's Words might ſeem to the reſt ſomewhat ſharp toward him, yet he conceived great Comfort of them. For whereas he before thought it Extremity to be attached, having uſed no Obſtinacy or Contumacy, now he gathered of thoſe Words, that my Lord meant not otherwiſe but to have uſed ſome ordinary Proceſs; albeit indeed none came to his Hands.

Yea marry, ſaid the Biſhop, I have ſent you two Subpœna's to appear immediately, and I am ſure you received them, for I committed the Truſt of them to no worſe Man than Mr. Sollicitor, and I ſhall make you an Example to all Lincolnſhire for your Obſtinacy.

Mr. Berty denying the Receipt of any, humbly prayed his Lordſhip to ſuſpend his Diſpleaſure and the Puniſhment till he had good Trial thereof, and then, if it pleaſe him, to double the Pain for the Fault, if any were.

Well, ſaid the Biſhop, I have appointed myſelf this Day (according to the Holineſs of the ſame) for Devotion, and I will not further trouble myſelf with you: But I enjoyn you in a thouſand Pounds not to depart without Leave, and to be here again To-morrow at ſeven of the Clock. Mr. Berty came at the Time appointed, at which Time the Biſhop had with him Mr. Serjeant Stampford, to whom he moved certain Queſtions of the ſaid Mr. Berty, becauſe Mr. Serjeant was towards the Lord Wriotheſley, late Earl of Southampton, and Chancellor of England, with whom the ſaid Mr. Berty was brought up. Mr. Serjeant made very friendly Report of Mr. Berty, of his own Knowledge for the Time of their Converſation together. Whereupon the Biſhop cauſed Mr. Berty to be brought in, and firſt making a falſe Train (as God would without Fire) before he would deſcend to the Quarrel of Religion, he aſſaulted him in this Manner.

Biſhop of Wincheſter. The Queen's Pleaſure is, that you ſhall make preſent Payment of 4000 l. due to her Father Father by Duke Charles, late Husband to the Dutcheſs your Wife, whoſe Executor ſhe was.

Berty. Pleaſeth it your Lordſhip, that Debt is eſtalled, and is according to that Eſtallment truly anſwered.

Biſhop. Tuſh, the Queen will not be bound to Eſtallments in the Time of Kett's Government: For ſo I eſteem the late Government.

Berty. The Eſtallment was appointed by King Henry the eighth: Beſides, the ſame was by ſpecial Commiſſioners confirmed in King Edward's Time; and the Lord Treaſurer being an Executor alſo to the Duke Charles ſolely and wholy, took upon him before the ſaid Commiſſioners, to diſcharge the ſame.

Biſhop. If it be true that you ſay, I will ſhew you Favour. But of another Thing Mr. Berty I will admoniſh you, as meaning you well. I hear Evil of your Religion, yet I can hardly think Evil of you, whoſe Mother I know to be as godly and catholick, as any within this Land; yourſelf brought up with a Maſter, whoſe Education if I ſhould diſallow, I might be charged as Author of his Error. Beſides, partly I know you myſelf, and underſtand of my Friends enough to make me your Friend: Wherefore I will not doubt of you; but I pray you, if I may ask the Queſtion of my Lady your Wife, is ſhe now as ready to ſet up the Maſs, as ſhe was lately to pull it down, when ſhe cauſed in her Progreſs, a Dog in a Rochet to be carried, and called by my Name? Or doth ſhe think her Lambs now ſafe enough, who ſaid to me, when I vailed my Bonnet to her out of my Chamber-window in the Tower, That it was merry with the Lambs, now the Wolf was ſhut up? Another Time my Lord her Husband, having invited me and divers Ladies to Dinner, deſired every Lady to chuſe him whom ſhe loved beſt, and ſo place themſelves: My Lady your Wife, taking me by the Hand, for my Lord would not have her to take himſelf, ſaid, That foraſmuch as ſhe could not ſit down with my Lord, whom ſhe loved beſt, ſhe had choſen him whom ſhe loved worſt.

Of the Device of the Dog, quoth Mr. Berty, ſhe was neither the Author nor the Allower. The Words, though in that Seaſon they ſounded bitter to your Lordſhip, yet if it would pleaſe you without Offence to know the Cauſe, I am ſure the one will clear the other. As touching ſetting up of Maſs, which ſhe learned, not only by ſtrong Perſuaſions of divers excellent learned Men, but by univerſal Conſent and Order whole ſix Years paſt, inwardly to abhor, if ſhe ſhould outwardly allow, ſhe ſhould both to Chriſt ſhew herſelf a falſe Chriſtian, and to her Prince a maſquing Subject. You know, my Lord, one by Judgment reformed, is more worth than a thouſand transformed Temporiſers. To force a Confeſſion of Religion by Mouth, contrary to that in the Heart, worketh Damnation where Salvation is pretended.

Yea marry (quoth the Biſhop) that Deliberation would do well if ſhe were required to come from an old Religion to a new: But now ſhe is to return from a new to an ancient Religion; wherein when ſhe made me her Goſſip, ſhe was as earneſt as any.

For that, my Lord (ſaid Mr. Berty) not long ſince, ſhe anſwered a Friend of hers uſing your Lordſhip's Speech; That Religion went not by Age, but by Truth *: And therefore ſhe was to be turned by Perſuaſion, and not by Commandment.

I pray you (quoth the Biſhop) think you it poſſible to perſuade her?

Yea verily (ſaid Mr. Berty) with the Truth: for ſhe is reaſonable enough.

The Biſhop thereunto replying, ſaid, It will be a marvellous Grief to the Prince of Spain, and to all the Nobility that ſhall come with him, when they ſhall find but two noble Perſonages of the Spaniſh Race within this Land, the Queen, and my Lady your Wife, and one of them gone from the Faith.

Mr. Berty anſwered that he truſted they ſhould find no Fruits of Infidelity in her.

So the Biſhop perſuaded Mr. Berty to labour earneſtly for the Reformation of her Opinion, and offering large Friendſhip, releaſed him of his Bond from further Appearance.

The Dutcheſs and her Husband, daily more and more underſtanding by their Friends that the Biſhop meant to call her to an Account of her Faith, whereby Extremity might follow, deviſed Ways how they might paſs the Seas by the Queen's Licenſe. Mr. Berty had a ready Means; for there remained great Sums of Money due to the old Duke of Suffolk (one of whoſe Executors the Dutcheſs was) beyond the Seas, the Emperor himſelf being one of thoſe Debtors.

Mr. Berty communicated this his purpoſed Suit for Licenſe to paſs the Seas, and the Cauſe to the Biſhop, adding, that he took this Time moſt fit to deal with the Emperor, by reaſon of Likelihood of Marriage between the Queen and his Son.

I like your Device well, ſaid the Biſhop, but I think it better that you tarry the Prince's coming, and I will procure you his Letters alſo to his Father.

Nay, ſaid Mr. Berty, under your Lordſhip's Correction, and Pardon for ſo liberal Speech, I ſuppoſe the Time will then be leſs convenient: For when the Marriage is conſummated, the Emperor hath his Deſire, but till then he will refuſe nothing to win Credit with us.

By St. Mary, ſaid the Biſhop, ſmiling, you gueſs ſhrewdly. Well, proceed in your Suit to the Queen, and it ſhall not lack my helping Hand.

Mr. Berty found ſo good Succeſs, that he obtained the Queen's Licence, not only to paſs the Seas, but to paſs and repaſs them as often as ſeemed good unto him, till he had finiſhed all his Buſineſs and Cauſes beyond the Seas. So he paſſed the Seas at Dover about the Beginning of June, in the firſt Year of her Reign, leaving the Dutcheſs behind, who by Agreement and Conſent betwixt her and her Husband, followed, taking Barge at Lion-key very early in the Morning, on the firſt Day of January next enſuing, not without ſome Peril.

There was none of thoſe that went with her made privy to her going till the Inſtant, but an old Gentleman, called Mr. Robert Cranwell, whom Mr. Berty had eſpecially provided for that Purpoſe. She took her Daughter with her, an Infant of one Year old, and the meaneſt of her Servants, for ſhe doubted the beſt would not adventure that Fortune with her. They were in Number four Men, one a Greek born, who was a Rider of Horſes, another a Joyner, the third a Brewer, the fourth a Fool, one of the Kitchen, one Gentlewoman and a Laundreſs.

As ſhe departed her Houſe called the Barbican, betwixt four and five of the Clock in the Morning, with her Company and Baggage, one Atkinſon a Herald, Keeper of her Houſe, hearing a Noiſe, roſe and came out with a Torch in his Hands as ſhe was yet iſſuing out of the Gate; wherewith being amazed, ſhe was forced to leave a Mail with Neceſſaries for her young Daughter, and a Milk-pot with Milk in the ſame Gate-houſe, commanding all her Servants to haſte away before to Lion-key: And taking with her only the two Women and her Child, ſo ſoon as ſhe was forth of her own Houſe perceiving the Herald to follow, ſhe ſtept in at the Charter-houſe hard by. The Herald coming out of the Dutcheſs's Houſe, and ſeeing no body ſtirring, nor aſſured (tho' by the Mail ſuſpecting) that ſhe was departed, returned in; and while he ſtayed ranſacking Parcels left in the Mail, the Dutcheſs iſſued into the Streets, and proceeded in her Journey, ſhe knowing the Place only by Name where ſhe ſhould take

* With GOD there's neither Age nor Youth:
He only doth regard the TRUTH.

take her Boat, but not the Way thither, nor any with her. Likewiſe her Servants having divided themſelves, none but one knew the Way to the ſaid Lion-key.

So ſhe appeared like a mean Merchant's Wife, and the reſt like mean Servants, walking in the Streets unknown, ſhe took the Way that led to Finsbury Fields, and the other walked the City Streets as they lay open before them, till by Chance more than Diſcretion, they met all ſuddenly together a little within Moregate, from whence they paſſed directly to Lion-key, and there took a Barge in a Morning ſo miſty, that the Steer-man was loth to launch out, but that they urged him. So ſoon as the Day permitted, the Council was informed of her Departure, and ſome of them came forthwith to her Houſe to enquire of the Manner thereof, and took an Inventory of her Goods, beſides further Order deviſed for Search and Watch to apprehend and ſtay her.

The Fame of her Departure reached Leigh, a Town at the Land's End, before her approaching thither. By Leigh dwelt one Goſling a Merchant of London, an old Acquaintance of Cranwell's, whither the ſaid Cranwell brought the Dutcheſs, naming her Mrs. White, the Daughter of Mr. Goſling, for ſuch a Daughter he had who never was in that Country. She there repoſed herſelf, and made no Garments for her Daughter, having loſt her own in the Mail at Barbican.

When the Time came that ſhe ſhould take ſhip, being conſtrained that Night to lie at an Inn in Leigh (where ſhe was again almoſt betrayed) yet notwithſtanding by God's good Working ſhe eſcaped that Hazard; at length, as the Tide and Wind ſerved, they went aboard, and being carried twice into the Seas, almoſt into the Coaſt of Zeland, by contrary Wind were driven to the Place from whence they came; and at the laſt Recoil, certain Perſons came to the Shore, ſuſpecting ſhe was within that Ship; yet having examined one of her Company that was on ſhore for freſh Proviſion, and finding by the Simplicity of his Tale only the Appearance of a mean Merchant's Wife to be on Ship-board, he ceaſed to ſearch any further.

To be ſhort, ſo ſoon as the Dutcheſs had landed in Brabant, ſhe and her Women were apparelled like the Women of Netherland with Hooks; and ſo ſhe and her Husband took their Journey towards Cleveland, and being arrived at a Town therein called Santon, took a Houſe there, until they might further deviſe of ſome ſure Place where to ſettle themſelves.

About five Miles from Santon is a free Town called Weſell, under the ſaid Duke of Cleve's Dominion, and one of the Hans Towns, privileged with the Company of the Steel-yard in London, whither divers Walloons were fled for Religion, and had for their Miniſter one Francis Peruſell, then called Francis de Rivers, who had received ſome Courteſy in England at the Dutcheſs's Hands. Mr. Berty being yet at Santon, practiſed with him to obtain a Protection from the Magiſtrates for his Abode and his Wives at Weſell; which was the ſooner procured, becauſe the State of the Dutcheſs was not diſcovered, but only to the chief Magiſtrate, earneſtly bent to ſhew them Pleaſure, while this Protection was in ſeeking.

In the mean while at the Town of Santon was a muttering, that the Dutcheſs and her Husband were greater Perſonages than they gave themſelves forth; and the Magiſtrates not very well inclined to Religion, the Biſhop of Arras alſo being Dean of the great Minſter, Order was taken that the Dutcheſs and her Husband ſhould be examined of their Condition and Religion upon the ſudden. Which was diſcovered by a Gentleman of that Country to Mr. Berty, he without Delay taking no more than the Dutcheſs, her Daughter, and two others with them, as though he meant no more than to take the Air, about Three of the Clock in the Afternoon in February, on foot, without hiring of Horſe or Waggon, for fear of diſcloſing his Purpoſe, meant privily that Night to get to Weſell, leaving the reſt of his Family at Santon.

After they had travelled one Engliſh Mile from the Town, there fell a mighty Rain of Continuance, whereby a long Froſt and Ice before congealed, was thawed, which doubled more the Wearineſs of thoſe new Lacquies. But being now on the Way, and overtaken with the Night, they ſent their two Servants (which only went with them) to Villages as they paſs'd, to hire ſome Carr for their Eaſe, but none could be hired. In the mean Time Mr. Berry was forced to carry the Child, and the Dutcheſs his Cloak and Rapier. At laſt, betwixt Six and Seven of the Clock in the dark Night, they came to Weſell, and repairing to the Inns for Lodging, and ſome Repoſe, after ſuch painful Journey, found hard Entertainment, for going from Inn to Inn, offering large Money for ſmall Lodging, they were refuſed by all the Innholders, ſuſpecting Mr. Berry to be a Launce-Knight, and the Dutcheſs to be his Woman. The Child for Cold and Suſtenance cried pitifully, the Mother wept as faſt, the Heavens rained as faſt as the Clouds could pour.

Mr. Berry, deſtitute of all other Succour of Hoſpitality, reſolved to bring the Dutcheſs to the Porch of the great Church in the Town, and ſo to buy Coals, Victuals, and Straw for their miſerable Repoſe there that Night, or at leaſt till by God's Help he might provide her better Lodging. Mr. Berry at that Time underſtood not much Dutch, and by reaſon of bad Weather and late Seaſon of the Night, he could not happen upon any that could ſpeak Engliſh, French, Italian, or Latin, till at laſt going towards the Church-porch, he heard two Striplings talking Latin, to whom he approached, and offered them two Stivers to bring him to ſome Walloon's Houſe.

By theſe Boys, and God's good Conduct, he chanced at the firſt upon the Houſe where Mr. Peruſell ſupped that Night, who had procured them the Protection of the Magiſtrates of that Town. At the firſt Knock, the good Man of the Houſe himſelf came to the Door, and opening it, asked Mr. Berty what he was? Mr. Berty ſaid an Engliſhman, that ſought for one Mr. Peruſell's Houſe. The Walloon deſired Mr. Berty to ſtay awhile, who went back, and told Mr. Peruſell, that the ſame Engliſh Gentleman, of whom they had talked at Supper-time, had ſent by likelihood his Servant to ſpeak with him. Whereupon Mr. Peruſell came to the Door, and beholding Mr. Berry, the Dutcheſs, and their Child, their Faces, Apparel, and Bodies ſo far from their old Form, deformed with Dirt, Weather, and Heavineſs, could not ſpeak to them, nor they to him for Tears. At length recovering themſelves, they ſaluted one another, and ſo joyfully entred the Houſe, God knoweth full joyfully; Mr. Berty changing his Apparel with the good Man, the Dutcheſs with the good Wife, and their Child with the Child of the Houſe.

Within few Days after, by Mr. Peruſell's Means, they hired a very fair Houſe in the Town, and did not delay to ſhew themſelves what they were, in ſuch good Sort as their preſent Condition permitted. It was by this Time through the whole Town, what Diſcourteſy the Innholders had ſhewed unto them at their Entry, inſomuch as on the Sunday following, a Preacher in the Pulpit openly in ſharp Terms rebuked that great Incivility toward Strangers, by Allegation of ſundry Places out of the Holy Scriptures, diſcourſing how not only Princes ſometime are received in the Image of private Perſons, but Angels in the Shape of Men, and that God of his Juſtice would make them Strangers one Day in another Land, to have more Senſe of the afflicted Heart of a Stranger.

The

The Time thus paſſing forth, as they thought themſelves thus happily ſettled, ſuddenly a Watch-Word came from Sir John Maſon, then Queen Mary's Embaſſador in the Netherlands, that my Lord Paget had fained an Errand to the Baths that Way: And whereas the Duke of Brunſwick was ſhortly with ten Enſigns to paſs by Weſell for the Service of the Houſe of Auſtria againſt the French King, the ſaid Dutcheſs and her Husband ſhould be with the ſame Company intercepted.

Wherefore to prevent the Cruelty of theſe Enemies, Mr. Berty with his Wife and Child departed to a Place called Wineheim, under the Palſgrave's Dominion; where under his Protection they continued till their Neceſſaries began to fail them, and they, almoſt fainting under ſo heavy a Burden, began to fail of Hope.

At which Time, in the midſt of their Deſpair, there came ſuddenly Letter to them from the Palatine of Vilva, and the King of Poland being inſtructed of their hard Eſtate by a Baron, named Joannes Alaſco, that was ſome Time in England, offering them large Courteſy. This Proviſion unlooked for, greatly revived their heavy Spirits. Yet conſidering they ſhould remove from many their Countrymen and Acquaintance, to a Place ſo far diſtant, a Country not haunted with the Engliſh, and perhaps upon their Arrival not finding as they looked for, the End of their Journey ſhould be worſe than the Beginning; they deviſed thereupon with one Mr. Carlœ, late Biſhop of Chicheſter, that if he would vouchſafe to take ſome Pains therein, they would make him a Fellow of that Journey. So finding him prone, they ſent with him Letters of great Thanks to the King and Palatine, and alſo with a few principal Jewels (which only they had left of many) to ſollicit for them, that the King would vouchſafe under his Seal, to aſſure them of the Thing which he ſo honourably by Letters offered.

That Suit, by the Forwardneſs of the Palatine, was as ſoon granted as uttered. Upon which Aſſurance the ſaid Dutcheſs and her Husband, with their Family, entered the Journey in April 1557. from the Caſtle of Wineheim, where they before lay, towards Frankfort. In which their Journey, it were long here to deſcribe what Dangers fell by the Way upon them and their whole Company, by reaſon of the Landgrave's Captain, who, under a Quarrel pretended for a Spaniel of Mr. Berty's, ſet upon them in the Highway with his Horſemen, thruſting their Bore-ſpears thorough the Waggon were the Children and Women were, Maſter Berty having but four Horſemen with him. In which Scuffle it happened that the Captain's Horſe was ſlain under him.

Whereupon a Rumour was ſpread immediately through the Towns and Villages about, that the Landgrave's Captain ſhould be ſlain by certain Walloons, which exaſperated the Countrymen the more fiercely againſt Mr. Berty, as afterward it proved. For as he was motioned by his Wife to ſave himſelf by the Swiftneſs of his Horſe, and to recover ſome Town thereby for his Reſcue, he ſo doing, was in worſe Caſe than before: For the Townſmen and the Captain's Brother, ſuppoſing no leſs but that the Captain had been ſlain, preſſed ſo eagerly upon him, that he had been there taken and murder'd among them, had not he (as God would have it) 'ſpying a Ladder leaning to a Window, by which he got into the Houſe, and went up into the Garret, where, with his Dagger and Rapier he defended himſelf for a Time: But at length the Burgh-maſter coming thither with another Magiſtrate, who could ſpeak Latin, he was adviſed to ſubmit himſelf to the Order of the Law. Mr. Berty knowing himſelf to be clear, and the Captain to be alive, was the more bold to ſubmit himſelf to the Judgment of the Law, upon Condition that the Magiſtrate would receive him under ſafe Conduct, and defend him from the Rage of the Multitude. Which being promiſed, he willingly deliver'd up his Weapons, and peaceably ſurrender'd himſelf into the Hands of the Magiſtrates, and ſo was committed to ſafe Cuſtody till the Truth of his Cauſe could be try'd.

Then Mr. Berty wrote a Letter to the Landgrave, and another to the Earl of Erbagh, dwelling about eight Miles off, who came early in the Morning to the Town where the Dutcheſs was brought with her Waggon, Mr. Berty alſo being in the ſame Town under Cuſtody.

The Earl, who had ſome Intelligence before of the Dutcheſs, after he was come and had ſhewed her ſuch Courteſy as he thought belonged to her Eſtate and Dignity, the Townſmen perceiving the Earl behave himſelf ſo humbly to her, began to conſider more of the Matter, and further underſtanding the Captain to be alive, both they, and eſpecially the Authors of this Stir, drew in their Horns, ſhrunk away, and made all the Friends they could to Mr. Berty and his Lady, beſeeching them not to report their Doings after the worſt Manner.

And thus Mr. Berty and his Wife, eſcaping that Danger, proceeded in their Journey toward Poland, where in Concluſion they were quietly entertained by the King, and placed honourably in the Earldom of the ſaid King of Poles in Sanogelia, called Crozan, where Mr. Berty with the Dutcheſs, having the King's abſolute Power of Government over the ſaid Earldom, continu'd in Honour, Peace and Plenty, till the Death of Queen Mary.

Thomas Horton, Miniſter.

THomas Horton uſed oftentimes to travel between Germany and England, for the Benefit and Suſtenance of the poor Engliſh Exiles there: So he journeying on a Time between Maeſtricht and Cologn, chanced to be taken by certain Rovers, and ſo being led by them away, was in no little Danger: And yet this Danger of his was not ſo great, but the preſent Help of the Lord was greater to aid and deliver him out of the ſame

Thomas Sprat of Kent, Tanner.

HE had been ſome Time a Servant to one Juſtice Brent a heavy Perſecutor, and therefore forſaking his Maſter for Religion Sake, he went to Calice (accompany'd by one William Porrege, who was afterwards a Miniſter) from whence they uſed often for their neceſſary Affairs, to have Recourſe into England.

In the fourth Year of Queen Mary they landed at Dover, and taking their Journey together toward Sandwich, ſuddenly upon the Way, three Miles from Dover, they happened to meet Juſtice Brent, the two Blachendens, and other Gentlemen with their Servants, to the Number of ten or twelve Horſes. One of the Blachendens happened to know William Porrege, the other had only heard of his Name.

Sprat firſt eſpying his Maſter Brent, was much ſurpriſed, ſaying to his Companion, Yonder is Mr. Brent, God have Mercy upon us. Well, quoth Porrege, ſeeing now there is no Remedy, let us go on our Way. And ſo thinking to paſs by them, they kept themſelves at a Diſtance, Sprat alſo ſhadowing his Face with his Cloak.

One of Mr. Brent's Servants knowing Sprat, called out to his Maſter, ſaying, Yonder is Thomas Sprat; at which Words they all ſtopt their Horſes, and called for Thomas Sprat to come to them. They call you, ſaid William Porrege; now there is no Remedy but we are taken: And ſo would have perſuaded him to go to them, being called, for that there was no eſcaping from ſo many Horſemen in thoſe Plains and Downs, where was no Wood near them by a Mile, and but one Hedge about a Stone's-throw off. All this notwithſtanding, Sprat ſtaid, and would not go. Then they called again, ſitting ſtill on Horſeback. Ah Sirrah, quoth the Juſtice, why come ye not hither? And ſtill his Companion moved him to go, ſeeing there was no Hope of getting away. Nay, ſaid Sprat, I will not go to them; and therewith took to his Legs, running to the Hedge that was next him. They ſeeing that, ſet Spurs to their Horſes, thinking it impoſſible for him to eſcape their Hands. When he got to the Hedge, ſcrambling through the Buſhes, they were at his Heels, and ſtruck at him with their Swords, one of the Blachendens (both of them Haters of God's Word) cruelly crying, Cut one of his Legs off.

He had no ſooner got through the Hedge, but one of Juſtice Brent's Servants (a Fellow that had ſome Time been his Fellow-ſervant) followed him on Foot; the reſt rode up the other ſide of the Hedge to meet him at the End.

While they were following Sprat, only one remained with William Porrege (which was one of the Blachendens, but not he that knew him) who began to queſtion him, not asking what was his Name (as God would have it) for then he had been known and taken: But from whence he came, and how he got into Sprat's Company, and whither he was going? He anſwer'd, that he came from Calice, and Sprat came over with him in the Paſſage-boat, and they were both going to Sandwich: And ſo without any more Queſtions he let him depart. But to return.

As Sprat was purſued on the one ſide of the Hedge by his old Fellow-ſervant in his Boots, and on the other ſide by Horſemen, his Fellow-ſervant cry'd out, You had as good tarry, for we will have you, we will have you: Yet notwithſtanding he ſtill kept his Courſe till he came to a ſteep down-hill at the end of the Hedge, down which he ran from them, for the Horſemen could not follow him without fetching a great Compaſs about. After he had ran almoſt a Mile he got to a Wood, but by that Time they were juſt behind him; but Night coming on, and it began to rain, they purſu'd him no further. And thus by the Providence of God they both got clear.

Not long after this, one of the two cruel Blachendens was cruelly murder'd by his own Servant.

John Cornet.

THIS young Man was Apprentice to a Muſician at Colcheſter, and being ſent by his Maſter to a Wedding (in the ſecond Year of Queen Mary) in a Town hard by called Rough-hedge, was requeſted by a Company there of good Men, the Conſtables being preſent, to ſing ſome Songs of the Scripture, he happened to ſing a Song called, News out of London, which tended againſt the Maſs, and againſt the Queen's Miſproceedings.

Whereupon the next Day he was accuſed by the Parſon of Rough-hedge, called Yackſley, and ſo committed, firſt to the Conſtable, where his Maſter gave him over, and his Mother forſook and curſed him. From thence was ſent to Juſtice Cannall, and then to the Earl of Oxford, where he was firſt put in Irons and Chains, and after that ſo manacled, that the Blood ſpirted out of his Fingers ends, becauſe he would not confeſs the Names of thoſe who allured him to ſing. After that, he was ſent again to Rough-hedge, and there whipped till the Blood followed, and baniſh'd the Town for ever.

Thomas Bryce.

HE being in the Houſe of John Seal, in the Pariſh of Horting, the Bailiff and other Neighbours were ſent by Sir John Baker to ſearch for, and apprehend him, and though they perfectly knew his Stature and the Colour of his Garments, yet then they had no Power to know him, though he ſtood before their Faces. So miraculouſly did the Almighty dazzle their Eyes, that they asked for him, and looked on him, yet notwithſtanding he quietly took his Bag of Books, and departed out of the Houſe without any Hand laid upon him.

Alſo another Time, about the ſecond Year of Queen Mary, the ſaid Thomas Bryce, with John Bryce his elder Brother, coming then from Weſell, meeting together at their Father's Houſe, as they travel'd towards London, to give Warning there to one Springfield, which elſe was like to be taken unawares by his Enemies waiting for him upon Gad's-hill, fell in Company with a Promoter, who dogged them and followed them again to Graveſend, into the Town, and laid the Houſe for them where they were, all the Ways as they ſhould go to the Waters ſide, ſo that it had not been poſſible for them to have avoided the preſent Danger of thoſe Perſecutors, had not God's provident Care otherwiſe diſpoſed for his Servants, through the Hoſtler, of the Inn, covertly to convey them by a ſecret Paſſage; whereby they took Barge a Mile out of Town, and ſo in the End both the Lives of them, and alſo of Springfield were preſerved, thro' God's gracious Protection.

Gertrude Crockhay.

GErtrude Crockhay dwelling at St. Katherines by the Tower of London, and being then in her Husband's Houſe, it happened in the Year 1556, that the Pope's childiſh Saint Nicholas went about the Pariſh. Which ſhe underſtanding, ſhut her Door againſt him, not ſuffering him to enter into her Houſe.

Then Doctor Mallet hearing thereof, and being then Maſter of the ſaid St. Katherines, the next Day came to her with twenty at his Tail, thinking belike to affright her, and asked why ſhe would not the Night before let in St. Nicholas, and receive his Bleſſing, &c. To whom ſhe anſwered thus: Sir, I know not St. Nicholas that came hither. Yes, quoth Mallet, here was one that repreſented St. Nicholas.

Indeed Sir (ſaid ſhe) here was one that was my Neighbour's Child, but not St. Nicholas: For St. Nicholas is in Heaven. I was afraid of them that came with him, to have had my Purſe cut by them: For I have heard of Men robbed by St. Nicholas's Clarks, &c. So Mallet perceiving that nothing could be gotten at her Hands, went his Way as he came, and ſhe for that Time ſo eſcaped.

Then in the Year 1557, a little before Whitſuntide, it happened that the ſaid Gertrude anſwered for a Child that was baptized of one Thomas Saunders, which Child was chriſtened ſecretly in a Houſe after the Order of the Service-book in King Edward's Time; and that being ſoon known to her Enemies, ſhe was ſought for. Who underſtanding nothing thereof, went beyond the Sea into Guelderland, to ſee certain Lands that ſhould come to her Children in the Right of her firſt Husband, who was a Stranger born: And being there about a quarter of a Year, at length coming homeward by Antwerp, ſhe chanced to meet with one John Johnſon, a Dutchman, alias John de Villa of Antwerp, Shipper, who ſeeing her there, went out of Malice to the Margrave, and accuſed her to be an Anabaptiſt, whereby ſhe was taken and carried to Priſon. The Cauſe why he did thus, was, becauſe he claimed of Mr. Crockhay her Husband, a Piece of Money which was not his Due, for a Ship that Mr. Crockhay bought of him, and becauſe he could not get it, he wrought this Diſpleaſure. Well, ſhe being in Priſon, lay there a Fortnight. In which Time ſhe ſaw ſome that were Priſoners there, who privily were drowned in Rheniſh Wine-fats, and after ſecretly put in Sacks and caſt into the River. Now ſhe, good Woman, expecting to be ſo ſerved, took thereby ſuch Fear, that it brought the Beginning of her Sickneſs, of which at length ſhe died.

Then at laſt was ſhe called before the Margrave, and charged with Anabaptiſtry: Which ſhe there utterly denied, and deteſted the Error, declaring before him in Dutch her Faith boldly, without any Fear. So the Margrave hearing the ſame, in the End being well pleaſed with the Profeſſion, at the Suit of ſome of ſome of her Friends delivered her out of Priſon, but took away her Book, and ſo ſhe came over into England again.

Thomas Roſe, a Preacher.

HE was a Devonſhire Man, born in Ermouth, and being made Prieſt in that Country, was brought out of it by one Mr. Fabian, to Polſted in Suffolk, where the ſaid Mr. Fabian was Parſon, and in a ſhort Time after by his Means was placed in the Town of Hadley, where he, firſt coming to ſome Knowledge of the Goſpel, began there to treat upon the Creed, and thereupon took Occaſion to inveigh againſt Purgatory, praying to Saints and Images, about the Time that Mr. Latimer began to preach at Cambridge, in the Time of Bilney and Arthur; inſomuch that many embracing the Truth of Chriſt's Goſpel, againſt the ſaid Purgatory and other Points, and the Number of them daily increaſing, the Adverſaries began to ſtir againſt him, inſomuch that Mr. Bate (who afterwards became a godly zealous Man) was then brought to preach againſt the ſaid Thomas Roſe; notwithſtanding this, he continued ſtill very vehemently againſt Images, and the Lord ſo bleſſed his Labours, that many began to contrive how they might deface and deſtroy them, and eſpecially four Men, whoſe Names were, Ring, Debnam, Marſh, and Gard, who uſually reſorted to his Sermons, by which they were ſo inflamed, that ſoon after they ventured to deſtroy the Rood of the Court of Dover, which coſt three of them their Lives, and were hanged in Chains, becauſe they would not accuſe Thomas Roſe as their Counſellor. The ſaid Roſe had the Coat of the Rood brought to him afterwards, who burnt it. The Rood was ſaid to have done many and great Miracles, yet being in the Fire, could not help himielf, but burned like a Block, as indeed it was.

At this Time there were two ſore Enemies in Hadley, Walter Clerk and John Clerk, two Brethren: Theſe complained to the Council, that an hundred Men were not able to fetch Thomas Roſe out of Hadley, who then was upon Examination of his Doctrine committed to the Commiſſary's Keeping. And indeed ſuch was the Zeal of a Number towards the Truth then in that Town, that they were much offended that their Miniſter was ſo taken from them, and had therefore by Force brought him from the Commiſſary, if certain wiſe Men had not otherwiſe perſuaded them, who at length alſo with more Quiet placed him in his Office again: which ſo enraged the two Brethren, Walter Clerk and John Clerk, that they complained to the Council, as aforeſaid; whereupon a Serjeant at Arms was ſent from the Council to arreſt Thomas Roſe and bring him before them. Then his Adverſaries laid to his Charge, that he was privy to the burning the Rood at Dover Court, upon this he was committed to Priſon in the Biſhop of Lincoln's Houſe, in Holbourn, where he remained from Shrovetide to Whitſuntide, and great part of the Time in the Stocks.

The Stocks was very high and large, ſo that Day and Night he lay with his Back on the Ground, upon a little Straw, with his Heels ſo high, that the Blood was fallen from his Feet, which were ſo benumb'd that he could hardly feel them for a long Time. By this Treatment he fell ſick, and the Keeper often hearing him cry and groan through Extremity of Pain, was moved with Pity, and went to the Biſhop and told him, that he would not keep him to die under his Hand, and upon this he had ſome more Eaſe and Liberty. Now at this Time his Mother was come from Hadley to ſee him, but ſhe was not ſuffer'd to ſpeak with him (ſuch was their Cruelty) but the Biſhop flattered her, and gave her a Pair of Pardon-beads, and bade her go home and pray, for ſhe might not ſee him; which Thing pierced the Hearts both of the Mother and the Son. At this Time alſo certain Men of Hadley, very deſirous to ſee him, endeavoured to ſpeak with him, but might not be ſuffered, till at length they gave the Keeper four Shillings, and yet then might not ſpeak to him, or ſee him, otherwiſe than through a Grate. And thus continued he till Midſummer in Priſon. Then he was removed to Lambeth, in the firſt Year of Dr. Cranmer's Conſecration, who uſed him much more courteouſly than ever the Biſhop of Lincoln did, and at length wrought his Deliverance, and ſet him at Liberty: But yet ſo, that he was bound not to come within twenty Miles of Hadley. After this he came to London, and there preached the Goſpel half a Year, till Hadley Men hearing thereof, laboured to have him to Hadley again, and indeed by Means of Sir John Rainford, Knight, obtained at the Archbiſhop's Houſe to have him thither: Howbeit, by means one was placed in the Cure at Hadley, he could not enjoy his Office again there, but went to Stratford three Miles off, and there continued in preaching the Word three Years, till at length the Adverſaries procured an Inhibition from the Biſhop of Norwich, to put him to Silence. But a great Number laboured to have him continue in preaching, and ſubſcribed a Supplication to the Archbiſhop, with one hundred and twenty Hands, who under their Seals alſo teſtified of his honeſt Demeanor, ſo that the Adverſaries this Way not prevailing, they indicted him at Bury in Suffolk, ſo that he was conſtrained to flee to London, and to uſe the Aid of the Lord Audly, then Lord Chancellor, who removed the Matter from them, and called it before him, and after Examination of the Matter, ſet him free, and ſent him by a Token to the Lord Cromwell, then Lord Privy Seal, for a Licence from the King to preach: Which Thing obtained by the Lord Cromwell his Means (who hereupon alſo had admitted the ſaid Thomas Roſe his Chaplain) forthwith he was ſent into Lincolnſhire and to York. In the mean Time ſuch Complaint was made to the Duke of Norfolk, for that he preached againſt auricular Confeſſion, Tranſubſtantiation, and ſuch other Points contained in the ſix Articles (which then to have done, by Law was Death) that the Duke in his own Perſon not only ſought him at Norwich, but alſo beſet all the Ports for him, from Yarmouth to London, and being Lieutenant, commanded, that whoſoever could take the ſaid Thomas Roſe, ſhould hang him on the next Tree. Howbeit, the ſaid Thomas Roſe at his coming home, having Warning hereof by certain godly Perſons, was convey'd away, and paſſed over into Flanders, and ſo to Zurick in Switzerland, where a Time he remained with Mr. Bullinger, and afterwards went to Baſil, and there hoſted with Maſter Grinæus, till Letters came that Maſter Dr. Barnes ſhould be Biſhop of Norwich, and Things ſhould be reformed and he reſtored. But when he came into England again, it was not ſo, and therefore forthwith fled again beyond the Seas, being ſo beſet, as if the mighty Providence of God had not ſent him in a Readineſs to receive him the ſelf-ſame

Man,

Man, Boat, and Boy that before carried him over, it had not been poſſible for him to have eſcaped. But ſuch was the Goodneſs of God towards him, that he ſafely was convey'd, and lived at Barow the Space of three Years, till at length purpoſing to come over into England, about Buſineſs that he had, he, his Wife, and their Child, being but a Year and three Quarters old, upon the Sea, the Ship being in great Danger, wherein they ſailed (for the Maſt being hewn down in that Peril, they were carried whitherſoever the Waves toſſed them,) they with divers others expected nothing but Death. Howbeit, at length they were taken Priſoners, and carried into Diepe in France, having all their Stuff taken from them, and forty Pounds in Money. There they remained Priſoners from Michaelmas till Allhallontide, in great Heavineſs, not knowing what would become of them, but depending only upon God's Providence. It pleaſed God at the ſame Time, that one Mr. Young of the Town of Rye (who had heard him preach before) came thither for the redeeming of certain Engliſhmen there taken Priſoners. This Mr. Young moved to ſee them in this Caſe, much pitied them, and comforted them, and told them he would pay their Ranſom, and ſo he did, had them away, and brought them to Rye, and from thence by Stealth came they to London. At length the honourable Earl of Suſſex, hearing of the ſaid Thomas Roſe, ſent for him, his Wife, and his Child, and had them to his Houſe at Attleborough, where they continued; till at length it was blazed abroad, that the Earl was a Maintainer of ſuch a Man to read in his Houſe, as had preached againſt the catholick Faith (as they term it) the Earl being at the Parliament, and hearing thereof, wrote a Letter to warn him to make Shift for himſelf, and to avoid. So that from thence he paſſed to London, making hard Shift for a Year there and ſomewhat more, till the Death of King Henry. After the King's Death, he and others, who in the King's general Pardon were excepted (and therefore dead Men, if they had been taken whilſt King Henry lived) by certain of the Council were ſet at Liberty, and at length, after King Edward was crowned, were licenſed to preach again by the King; who gave unto the ſaid Thomas Roſe, the Benefice of Weſt-Ham by London. But at the Death of that vertuous and noble Prince, he was deprived of all, and ſo ſhould alſo have been of his Life, had not God appointed him Friends, who received him in London ſecretly, as their Teacher in the Congregation, among whom for the poor Priſoners at their Aſſemblies forty-one in a Night oftentimes were gathered. And thus he continued amongſt them, and with the Lady Vane almoſt a Year in the Reign of Queen Mary. But although he oftentimes eſcaped ſecretly whilſt he read to the Godly in ſundry Places of London, yet at length through a Judas that betrayed them, he with 35 more were taken Bow-church-yard at a Shereman's Houſe on New-years-day at Night. The reſt being committed to Priſon, the ſaid Thomas Roſe was had to Stephen Gardiner the Biſhop of Wincheſter who would not ſpeak with him that Night, but committed him to the Clink till the Tueſday after.

The firſt Examination of Thomas Roſe at St. Mary Overy's, before the Biſhop of Wincheſter.

Roſe. I Wonder, my Lord, that I ſhould be thus troubled for that which by the Word of God hath been eſtabliſhed, and by the Laws of this Realm hath been allowed, and by your own Writing ſo notably in your Book, De vera obedientia, confirmed.

Biſhop. Ah Sirrah, haſt thou gotten that?

Roſe. Yea, my Lord, I thank God, and do confeſs myſelf much thereby confirmed. For as touching the Doctrine of Supremacy, againſt the Biſhop of Rome's uſurped Authority, no Man hath ſaid further. And as I remember, you confeſs it, that when this Truth was revealed unto you, you thought the Scales to fall from your Eyes.

Biſhop. Thou lieſt like a Varlet, there is no ſuch Thing in my Book: But I ſhall handle thee, and ſuch as thou art, well enough. I have long looked for thee, and at length have caught thee. I will know who be thy Maintainers, or elſe I will make thee a Foot longer.

Roſe. My Lord, you ſhall do as much as pleaſeth God, and no more, yet the Law is in your Hand; but I have God for my Maintainer, and none other. At theſe Words one of his Servants ſtepped forth, and ſaid, My Lord, I heard this Man preach by Norwich in Sir John Robſter's Houſe, and in his Prayer he deſired God to turn Queen Mary's Heart, or elſe to take her out of the World: And this was in King Edward's Time.

Roſe. My Lord, I made no ſuch Prayer, but next after the King, I mention'd her in this Manner, ſaying, Ye ſhall pray for my Lady Mary's Grace, that God will vouchſafe to endue her with his Spirit, that ſhe graciouſly may perceive the Myſteries contained within his holy Laws, and ſo render unto him her Heart purified with true Faith, and true and loyal Obedience to her Sovereign Lord and King, to the good Example of the inferior Subjects. And this, my Lord, is already anſwered in mine own Handwriting to the Council.

Unto this he ſaid little, but turning his Face to ſome that were by him, This is he, ſaid the Biſhop, that my Lord of Norwich told me had gotten his Maid with Child.

Roſe. This is no Hereſy, my Lord, although it be a Lye. Indeed certain wicked Perſons raiſed this Report of me, for the Hatred they bare to the Doctrine which I preached: But for Purgation of myſelf herein I had no leſs than ſix of the Councils Hands, that there might be due and diligent Examination for this Matter in the Country by Men of Worſhip appointed for that Purpoſe, who can all teſtify, I thank God, that I am moſt clear from ſuch Wickedneſs, and indeed they have cleared me from it; and therefore I doubt not but all good Men will eſpy the miſchievous Device of mine Adverſaries, which (when other Ways failed) by ſuch ſiniſter Means went about to draw me into Diſcredit and Hatred: But God, who is the Helper of the Innocent, and Searcher of Mens Hearts, hath and doth defend me, and hath laid open Things that were hid, to their Shame. One of the chief Reporters of this, that I ſhould ſo abuſe myſelf, was one Mr. Clark, Servant and in ſome Eſtimation with the old Lord Treaſurer of England, reputed and taken for a Conjurer, who afterward hanged himſelf in the Tower. Then the Biſhop commanded that I ſhould be carried to the Tower, and kept ſafely, where I lay till the Week before Whitſuntide. After which Time I was twice called, when the Biſhop came to the Tower about other Priſoners. Notwithſtanding the Biſhop had no great Talk with me, but ſpake friendly. Howbeit one Sir Richard Southwell, Knight, ſtill accuſed me for my Prayer, and ſaid I did put a Difference betwixt Lady Mary and Lady Elizabeth, for that I prayed in King Edward's Faith, and prayed that he would confirm Lady Elizabeth in that which was well begun in her. Unto this the Biſhop ſaid little. But in the Week befoae Pentecoſt, I was conveyed from the Tower to Norwich, there to be examined by the Biſhop and his Clergy, as concerning my Faith, the Manner whereof here followeth.

The ſecond Examination of Thomas Roſe before Dr. Hopkins, Biſhop of Norwich, in the Preſence of Sir W. Woodhouſe, Mr. Steward the Chancellor, Dr. Barrett, with divers others, Anno 1553.

AFTER I was preſented by my Keeper, the Biſhop immediately asked me what I was. I told him I had been a Miniſter.

Biſhop. What is this to the Purpoſe, were ye a Friar or a Prieſt?

Roſe. Friar was I never, but a Prieſt have I been, and beneficed by the King's Majeſty.

Biſhop. Where were ye made Prieſt?

Roſe. In Exeter, in the County where I was born. Then the Biſhop required of me my Letters of Orders. I told him I knew not where they were become, for they were Things of me not greatly regarded.

Biſhop. Well, you are ſent to me to be examined; what ſay you, will you ſubmit yourſelf to the Order of the Church of England?

Roſe. My Lord, I truſt I am not out of the Order of Chriſt's Church in England, neither do I know my ſelf an Offender thereagainſt.

Biſhop. What? Yes, ye have here preached moſt damnable and deviliſh Doctrine.

Roſe. Not ſo, my Lord. The Doctrine by me here preached was both true, ſincere and holy. But indeed the Doctrine that is now ſet forth, is moſt wicked and damnable, yea, and that both againſt God's Laws and Man's. But as for the Doctrine by me preached, it is grounded upon the Word of God, ſet out alſo by the Authority of two moſt mighty Kings, with the Conſent of all the Nobility and Clergy of the ſame; ſo that I preached nothing but their lawful Proceedings, having their lawful Authority under their Broad-Seal for Confirmation of the ſame, for which my Doing ye cannot juſtly charge me. For why, ſince the Law ceaſed, I have kept Silence, ſo that the Council which ſent me unto you have not charged me therewith. Wherefore ye do me open Wrong to burden me with that wherein I am free.

Chan. What Sir? Ye are very captious; anſwereſt thou my Lord after ſuch a Sort?

Roſe. Sir, I anſwer for myſelf, and according to the Truth: Wherewith ye ought not to be offended, if ye be of God.

Chan. Thou art an evil Man. Waſt thou not abjured before now?

Roſe. No, ye untruly report me, and are in no wiſe able to prove that which ye have ſpoken: So that your Words appear to proceed altogether of Malice, which I have not deſerved at your Hands. But in this I well perceive ye are made an Inſtrument to utter other Men's Malice conceived of old.

Chan. What ſayeſt thou to the real Preſence in the Sacrament.

Roſe. I know right well ye were made an Inſtrument to ſeek innocent Blood; well ye may have it, if God permit, it is preſent at Hand, for I am not come hither to lye, but to dye (if God ſee it good) in Defence of that which I have ſaid. Wherefore ye may begin when ye ſhall think good, for I have ſaid nothing but the Truth, and that which in thoſe Days was by all Men allowed for Truth, and againſt which ye at that Time durſt not once whiſper, although ye now brag never ſo much.

Biſhop. Well Father Roſe, whatſoever hath been done in Times paſt, ſhall not now be called in Queſtion, ſo that ye now ſubmit yourſelf. For not only you, but all the whole Realm hath been out of the right Way, both high and low, ſpiritual and temporal, but all notwithſtanding have ſubmitted themſelves and acknowledged their Faith. Wherefore if ye will be accounted for an Engliſhman, ye muſt likewiſe ſubmit yourſelf.

Roſe. My Lord, I am an Engliſhman born, and do moſt humbly require of the Chriſtian Congregation of England, to be counted as a particular Member of the ſame, and with all due Reverence ſubmit myſelf as in the Form and Manner following: That whatſoever Law or Laws ſhall be ſet forth in the ſame for the Eſtabliſhment of Chriſt's true Religion, and that according to the Faith and Doctrine of the holy Patriarchs and Prophets, Jeſus Chriſt and his holy Apoſtles, with the faithful Fathers of Chriſt's primitive Church, I do not only hold it and believe it, but alſo moſt reverently obey it. At which my Aſſertion, the Biſhop ſeemed to be greatly rejoiced, and ſaid, Well, then we ſhall ſoon be at a Point; but you ſhall take this for no Day of Examination, but rather of Communication, ſo that ye ſhall now depart, and conſider with yourſelf until we call for you again: And ſo ended our firſt Meeting.

The third Examination of Thomas Roſe.

ON Friday following, I was called again into Chriſt-Church within their Lady's Chappel (as they termed it) where was gathered a great Part of the whole City of Norwich, and after I was by my Keeper preſented, the Biſhop began with a great Proteſtation, and after many Words demanded of me, Whether according to my former Promiſe I would ſubmit myſelf or no. I anſwered as before I had done, That according to my former Proteſtation, I would moſt gladly obey. Then ſaid the Chancellor (to utter his Gentleneſs) I think you do but fain.

Roſe. The Fault then (ſaid I) ſhall be in yourſelf, and not in me. For if ye burden me with nothing but Scriptures, and the Fathers of Chriſt's primitive Church, then as I ſaid before, ſo I ſay again, I ſhall moſt gladly obey.

Chancellor. Well then, ſeeing you challenge to be Member of the Church of England, your Mother here for a Trial of Obedience provoketh you, as Mothers are wont to allure you, to receive this little Gift at her Hand.

Roſe. Forſooth, ſaid I, if ſhe offer it me, as received of God my Father, I ſhall gladly receive it, as from the Hand of my very true and ghoſtly Mother.

Chancellor. What ſay you to Ear-confeſſion? Is it not a Law eccleſiaſtical, and neceſſary for the Church of England.

Roſe. Some Ways it might be permitted, and ſome Ways not, and that becauſe it had not its Original of God, and his bleſſed Word; and yet I deny not, but that a Man being troubled in his Conſcience, and reſorting to a diſcreet, ſober and chriſtian learned Man for the quieting of his Mind, might well be permitted; but to bind a Man under Pain of Damnation once every Year, to number his Sins into the Ears of a filthy lecherous Prieſt, is not of God, neither can be proved by his Word.

Biſhop. Ah, Sirrah, ye will admit nothing but Scripture, I ſee well.

Roſe. No truly, my Lord, I admit nothing but Scripture for the Regimen of the Soul: For why, Faith cometh by Hearing, and Hearing by the Word of God; and where the Word of God is not, there ought no Belief to be given. For whatſoever is not of Faith is Sin. And here they left off ſpeaking any more of that Matter.

But then, Mr. Chancellor began to whet his Teeth at me, ſaying, Yea, but you have preached, that the real, natural, and ſubſtantial Preſence of Chriſt is not in the Sacrament of the Altar: What ſay you to that?

Roſe. Verily, I ſay that you are a bloody Man, and ſeek to quench your Thirſt with the Blood of an Innocent, and therefore to ſatisfy you in that Behalf,

I ſay verily unto you, that ſo I have here preached: And although, contrary to Law, you charge me with the ſame, yet will I in no wiſe deny it, tho' juſtly I might do it, but ſtand thereunto, even to ſeal it with my Blood, deſiring all that be here preſent, to teſtify the ſame, and believe it as the only Truth.

Biſhop. I charge you all to believe it not.

Roſe. Yea, but my Lord, if ye will needs have Credence given you, you muſt bring God's Word to maintain your Sayings.

Biſhop. Why, doth not Chriſt ſay, This is my Body? And can there be any plainer Words ſpoken?

Roſe. It is true, my Lords, the Words be as plain as can be; and even ſo be theſe, where it is ſaid, I am a Door, a Vine, and Chriſt called a Stone, a Lion, and yet is he naturally none of theſe: For they be all figurative Speeches, as both the Scriptures and Fathers do ſufficiently prove.

At which Saying the Biſhop would have had me ſtay, ſaying, I ſhould have another Day, wherein I might take better Advice.

Roſe. Not ſo, my Lord, for I am at a full Point with myſelf in that Matter, and am right well able to prove both your Tranſubſtantiation, with the real Preſence, to be againſt the Scriptures and the ancient Fathers of the Primitive Church. For Juſtin, which is one of the moſt antient Writers that ever wrote upon the Sacrament, writeth, in his Second Apology, that the Bread, Water and Wine, in the Sacrament, are not to be taken as other Meats and Drinks, but are Meats purpoſely ordained to give Thanks unto God, and therefore are called EUCHARISTIA, and alſo have the Names of the Body and Blood of Chriſt; and that it is not lawful for any Man to eat and drink of them, but ſuch as profeſs the Religion of Chriſt, and live alſo according to their Profeſſion: And yet, ſaith he, the ſame Bread and Drink is changed into our Fleſh and Blood, nouriſheth our Bodies. By which Saying it is evident, that Juſtin meant, that the Bread and Wine remain ſtill, or elſe they could not have turned into our Fleſh and Blood, and nouriſh our Bodies.

At which my Saying they were greatly troubled, but enforced themſelves to have denied the Doctor, and would ſuffer me to ſpeak no more, but ſtraightway was I carried away unto my Lodging: And ſo ended the ſecond Day of my Appearance, which was the Friday in Whitſun Week, and then was I appointed to appear again on the Monday following. Howbeit, upon what Occaſion I know not, it was deferred unto the Wedneſday, which was Corpus Chriſti Eve.

In the mean Time the Biſhop ſent two of his Chaplains to me, with whom I had Communication about the real Preſence: And after long Reaſoning to and fro concerning this Point, at length I drave them to this Iſſue, whether they did confeſs that Chriſt in the ſelf-ſame Body which was conceived of the Virgin Mary, and wherein he ſuffered and roſe again, do in the ſelf-ſame Body naturally, ſubſtantially, and really ſit at the right Hand of God the Father, without Return from thence, until the Day of the general Judgment or not? Whereunto they anſwered, Yes truly, we confeſs it, hold it, and believe it. Then I again demanded of them, Whether they did affirm, after the Words pronounced by the Miniſter, there to remain Fleſh, Blood, Bones, Hairs, Nails, as is wont moſt groſly to be preached or not? And they with great Deliberation anſwered, that they did not only abhor the teaching of ſuch groſs Doctrine, but alſo would deteſt themſelves, if they ſhould ſo think.

At which two principal Points, wherein they fully condemned my Doctrine which I ever taught, I was not a little comforted and rejoiced, but marvellouſly encouraged. Whereupon I demanded of them again, what manner of Body they then affirmed to be in the Sacrament? Forſooth (ſaid they) not a viſible, palpable, or circumſcriptable Body, for that is always at the Father's right Hand: But in the Sacrament it is inviſible, and can neither be felt, ſeen, nor occupy any Place, but is there by the Omnipotency of God's holy Word, they know not how.

And for this they brought in St. Auguſtine, altho' by them not truly underſtood; yet would they admit no other Senſe than their own, but would take upon them to confirm it with Martin Luther, Melanchon, Bucer, and Calvin: So that I perceiving their Obſtinacy in that Behalf, gave them over for that Time, and afterwards talked with Dr. Barret, whom I alſo found of the ſame Opinion. For (ſaid he) if ye would diſſent from the Fathers of the primitive Church, of which St. Auguſtine is one, ye ſhall be contented to die out of the Favour of God. Well, I gave them all over, being obſtinate in their Errors; however, to bring them to confeſs that openly which they had granted privately, I granted them according to the Scriptures, and my former Proteſtation, a Preſence, altho' not as they ſuppoſed.

After all this, the honourable Earl of Suſſex came to me, and that gentle Knight Sir William Woodhouſe, with great Perſuaſions: To whom I ſaid, after long Talk, That I would do all that I might, ſaving my Conſcience, which I would in no wiſe pollute, and neither have I, as knoweth God, by whom all Men muſt be judged.

The laſt Examination of Thomas Roſe before the Biſhop.

NOW to come to my laſt Appearance, he forthwith demanded of me, whether I were reſolved, as he had heard ſay. To whom I anſwered, that even as always I had ſaid before, even ſo I was now. Unto whom, by low bowing my Knee, I gave my due Reverence, and the rather for that the honourable Earl of Suſſex was there. Wherewith ſome who would be counted great Goſpellers, were (contrary to all Chriſtianity) ſore offended. Then I ſaid, that whatſoever Laws were ſet forth for the Eſtabliſhment of Chriſt's true Religion, and that according to the Doctrine of Chriſt's holy Apoſtles, and the faithful Fathers of the primitive Church, I did not only obey them, but moſt earneſtly embrace and believe them. Yea, and yet to the further blinding of their Eyes, I ſaid, that if any Thing could juſtly be proved by God's holy Word, by me heretofore preached, or taught untruly, either for lack of Learning, unwarily, or Ignorance; yet by better Knowledge when it ſhall juſtly be tried and examined by the ſame, I ſhall not refuſe (the Thing perfectly proved) to revoke the ſame: Provided always, the Word of God herein be my Judge.

All this ſpake I (as God knoweth) to keep them from ſuſpecting that which I went about, and that they ſhould have no Occaſion to judge me of Obſtinacy. Then ſaid I moreover, all you muſt of Force confeſs, that the Doctrine by me heretofore preached, had, beſides the Authority of God's eternal Verity, the Authority of two moſt noble and mighty Princes, with the Advice and Counſel of all the Nobility and Clergy of the Land, and that with great Deliberation from Time to Time, with open Diſputations in both the Univerſities, enacted alſo by Parliament, with the Conſent of the whole Body and Commons of the ſame, and that without any Reſiſtance or Gainſaying eſtabliſhed, as a Religion moſt pure and perfect, moſt earneſtly and ſincerely preached by the principal Biſhops and Doctors, and that before the King's Majeſty's Perſons; and I, as one being called to that Office, did the like with all the reſt,

reſt, and in the Zeal of God, and with a pure Conſcience did ſet forth the ſame as the only and abſolute Truth of God, and the juſt and moſt true Proceedings of my ſovereign Lord and King: And I had then my Head at that preſent even where it now ſtandeth, betwixt mine Ears, altogether applying the ſame, to apprehend with all Diligence that which then was eſtabliſhed and taught, as the only and abſolute Truth, and a Thing unto me moſt deſirable, and well willing, without any Deſire to hear the contrary, till now through this my Captivity I am compelled to hear the contrary Part ſpeak, who are even here preſent, and which my Lord ſent unto me.

Of whom, after long Diſputations privately to and fro before this Time had betwixt us, at length I have heard of them a contrary Doctrine, which I never before had heard; and therefore muſt confeſs mine own Ignorance in the ſame. For (quoth I) after I had inforced theſe Men here preſent (meaning the Biſhop's two Chaplains) to confeſs Jeſus Chriſt's natural Body with his full compleat Members in due Order and Proportion of a perfect Man's Body to be preſent at the right Hand of God the Father, and that without Return from thence, until the laſt Judgment, and alſo that after the Words pronounced by the Prieſt, there remaineth no ſuch groſs Preſence of Fleſh, Blood, Bones, Hair, and Nails, as was wont to be preached; but that after I had demanded of them what manner of Body they affirmed to be preſent, they ſaid, a Body inviſible by the Omnipotency of God's Word, which neither can be felt or ſeen, nor that hath any Diſtinction of Members, but ſuch a Body as occupieth no Place, but is there they know not how; Neceſſity compell'd me to confeſs mine Ignorance in that Behalf, although in very Deed they perceived not my Meaning therein, neither was it in my Thought they ſhould ſo do. For by this their Confeſſion, and my Silence, afterward I perceived their horrid Blaſphemies.

And methought in this I had well diſcharged at that Time my Conſcience, in cauſing them in open Audience to confeſs the ſame, and ſo I granted a Preſence, but not as they ſuppoſed.

For I only ſaid, that Chriſt, after the Words pronounced, is preſent in the lawful Uſe and right Diſtribution of his holy Supper; which Thing I never denied, or any godly Man that ever I heard of. For (ſaid I) Euſebius Emiſſenus, a Man of ſingular Fame and Learning, about three hundred Years after Chriſt's Aſcenſion, ſaith, that the Converſion of the viſible Creatures of Bread and Wine into the Body and Blood of Chriſt, is like unto our Converſion in Baptiſm. Where nothing is outwardly changed, but all the Change is inwardly by the mighty Working of the Holy Ghoſt, which faſhioneth and frameth Chriſt in the Heart and Mind of Man, as by the Example of Peter preaching to the People, Acts 2. by which he ſo pierced their Conſcience, that they openly with moſt earneſt Repentance confeſſed their Sins, ſaying, Men and Brethren, what ſhall we do? repent, and be baptized every one of you, ſaid Peter, in the Name of Jeſus Chriſt; ſo that at this Sermon there were turned unto Chriſt three thouſand Perſons; in whom Chriſt was ſo faſhioned and framed, as that he did dwell in every one of them, and they in him; and after the like Manner ſaid I, is Chriſt preſent in the lawful Uſe and right Diſtribution of his holy Supper, and not otherwiſe. For although I ſaid, according to the Truth, that Chriſt dwelt in every one of theſe Perſons rehearſed, yet meant I nothing leſs than that he in them ſhould have a groſs, carnal, or fleſhly Dwelling.

And no more meant I (as God knoweth) him carnally or ſpiritually to be in the Sacrament, but according to the Scriptures, and my former Proteſtation, that is, to the ſpiritual Nouriſhment of all ſuch as worthily come unto that holy Supper, receiving it according to his holy Inſtitution.

And thus I ended; which the Papiſts moſt malicioufly and ſlanderouſly named a Recantation: Which I never meant, nor thought (as God knoweth).

Now after I had thus concluded my Speech, the Biſhop taking me by the Hand, ſaid, Father Roſe, you may be a worthy Inſtrument in God's Church, and we will ſee to you at our coming home (for he was about to take his Journey in Viſitation of his Dioceſs) and they feared much at this very Time, leſt Queen Mary ſhould have miſcarried in her Child-travel, which was looked for, being then accounted very great with Child, ſo that they were not ſo fierce as they had been, and doubted very much of ſome Stir, if I ſhould have ſuffered; and therefore were glad to be rid of me, ſo that by any colourable Means for their own Diſcharge it might be; ſo the Night following was I only committed to mine own Lodging.

On the Morrow, when the Biſhop was ready to ride forth in Viſitation, he called me before him, and perceiving that Sir W. Woodhouſe did bear me great Favour, ſaid, he was ſorry for me and my Expences; and therefore wiſhed that I were ſomewhere, where I might ſpend no more Money till his Return Why, my Lord, ſaid Sir William Woodhouſe, he ſhall have Meat and Drink, and Lodging with me, till you return again, ſeeing you now break up Houſe; and hereupon I went home with Sir William that good Knight, who moſt gently entertained me, and I had great Liberty. Upon this the popiſh Prieſts of the College of Chriſt's Church in Norwich, for that they ſaw me at Liberty in Sir William's Abſence (who had been from Home a Fortnight) blazed it abroad, that Sir William was bounden for me in Body and Lands. At his coming home therefore I asked Sir William if he were ſo bounden for me; and he denied it. Then ſaid I; Sir, but for Reverence I bear to you, I might have been an hundred Miles from you ere this. But I truſt now, Sir, ſeeing you be not bound for me, I may go viſit my Friends. Go where you will, ſaid Sir William, for, ſaid he, I told the Biſhop I would not be his Jaylor, but promiſed only Meat, Drink, and Lodging for you. Shortly after, upon the Device of ſome Friends, I was cloſely conveyed to a Friend's Houſe, where almoſt a Month I was ſecretly kept, till Rumours were over. For at the Biſhop's Return Search was made for me, inſomuch as all Houſes, where it was known I had been acquainted, were ſearched, and the Ships at Yarmouth.

At the length the Biſhop ſent to a Conjurer, to know of him which Way I was gone, and he anſwered, that I was gone over a Water, and in the Keeping of a Woman. And in very deed I was paſſed over a ſmall Water, and was hid by a bleſſed Woman, who lived in a ſmall Cottage, the Space of three Weeks, till all the great Heat was over.

Then was I conveyed to London, and from thence paſſed over the Seas, where I lived till the Death of Queen Mary, and till that it pleaſed God for the Comfort of his Church, and reſtoring of all poor Exiles and Priſoners for his Name's Sake, to bleſs this Realm with the Government of our noble Queen, whom God to the Glory of his own Name, and the Defence of his Church according to his good Will and Pleaſure, long preſerve and continue over us.

A brief Diſcourſe concerning the Troubles and happy Deliverance of Dr. Sands, firſt Biſhop of Worceſter, next of London, afterwards Archbiſhop of York.

AT King Edward's Death, the Duke of Northumberland came down to Cambridge with an Army of of Men, having Commiſſion to proclaim Lady Jane Queen, and by Power to ſuppreſs Lady Mary, who took upon her that Dignity, and was proclaimed Queen in Norfolk. The Duke ſent for Dr. Sands, being Vicechancellor, Dr. Parker, Dr. Bill, and Mr. Leaver to ſup with him. Amongſt other Speeches, he ſaid, Maſters, pray for us, that we may ſpeed well: If not, you ſhall be made Biſhops, and we Deacons. And even ſo it came to paſs: Dr. Parker and Dr. Sands were made Biſhops, and he and Sir John Gates, who was then at the Table, were made Deacons, ere it was long after on Tower-hill. Dr. Sands being Vicechancellor, was required to preach on the Morrow. The Warning was ſhort for ſuch an Auditory, and to ſpeak of ſuch a Matter; yet he refuſed not the Thing, but went into his Chamber, and ſo to Bed. He roſe at three of the Clock in the Morning, took his Bible in his Hand, and after he had pray'd a conſiderable Time, he ſhut his Eyes, and holding his Bible before him, earneſtly pray'd to God, that it might fall open, where a moſt fit Text ſhould be for him to treat of. The Bible, as God would have it, fell open upon the firſt Chapter of Joſhua, the three laſt Verſes, where he found ſo convenient a Place of Scripture for that Time, that the like he could not find in the whole Bible. His Text was thus; And they anſwered Joſhua, ſaying, All that thou commandeſt us, we will do, and whither ſoever thou ſendeſt us, we will go. According as we hearkened unto Moſes in all Things, ſo will we hearken unto thee: Only the Lord thy God be with thee, as he was with Moſes. Whoſoever he be that doth rebel againſt thy Commandment, and will not hearken unto thy Words, in all that thou commandeſt him, he ſhall be put to Death: Only be ſtrong and of a good Courage.

Whoever ſhall conſider what was concluded by ſuch as called themſelves the State, and withal, the Auditory, the Time, and other Circumſtances, he may eaſily ſee that this Text moſt fitly ſerved for the Purpoſe. And as God gave the Text, ſo gave he ſuch Order and Utterance, as drew many Tears out of the Eyes of the biggeſt of them.

In the Time of his Sermon one of the Guard lifted up to him into the Pulpit a Maſs-book and a Grail, which Sir George Haward with certain of the Guard had taken that Night in Mr. Hurleſtone's Houſe, where Lady Mary had been a little before, and there had Maſs. The Duke, with the reſt of the Nobility, required Dr. Sands to put his Sermon in Writing, and appointed Mr. Leaver to go to London with it, and to put it in Print. Doctor Sands required one Day and a half for writing of it. At the Time appointed he had made it ready, and Mr. Leaver was ready booted to receive it at his Hands, and carry it to London. As he was delivering of it, one of the Beadles, named Adams, came weeping to him, and prayed him to ſhift for himſelf, for the Duke was retired, and Queen Mary proclaimed.

Dr. Sands was not troubled thereat. But gave the Sermon written to Mr. Layfield. Mr. Leaver departed home, and he went to Dinner to one Mr. More's a Beadle, his great Friend. At the Dinner Mrs. More ſeeing him merry and pleaſant (for he had ever a Man's Courage, and could not be terrified) drank unto him, ſaying; Maſter Vicechancellor, I drink unto you, for this is the laſt Time that I ſhall ſee you. And ſo it was; for ſhe was dead before Dr. Sands returned out of Germany. The Duke that Night retired to Cambridge, and ſent for Dr. Sands to go with him to the Market-place to proclaim Queen Mary. The Duke caſt up his Cap with others, and ſo laughed, that the Tears ran down his Cheeks for Grief. He told Doctor Sands that Queen Mary was a merciful Woman, and that he doubted not thereof; declaring that he had ſent unto her to know her Pleaſure, and looked for a general Pardon. Dr. Sands anſwered; my Life is not dear unto me, neither have I done or ſaid any Thing that urgeth my Conſcience. For that which I ſpake of the State, I have Inſtructions warranted by the Subſcription of ſixteen Counſellors, neither can Speech be Treaſon, neither yet have I ſpoken further than the Word of God, and the Laws of the Realm do warrant me, come of me what God will. But be you aſſured, you ſhall never eſcape Death, for if ſhe would ſave you, thoſe that now ſhall rule will kill you.

That Night the Guard apprehended the Duke, and certain Grooms of the Stable were as buſy with Dr. Sands, as if they would take a Priſoner. But Sir John Gates, who lay then in Dr. Sands's Houſe, ſharply rebuked them, and drave them away. Dr. Sands, by the Advice of Sir John Gates, walked in the Fields. In the mean Time the Univerſity, contrary to all Order, had met together in Conſultation, and ordered that Dr. Mouſe and Dr. Hatcher ſhould repair to Dr. Sands's Lodging, and bring away the Statute Book of the Univerſity; the Keys, and ſuch other Things that were in his Keeping, and ſo they did: for Dr. Mouſe being an earneſt Proteſtant the Day before, and whom Dr. Sands had done much for, was now become a Papiſt, and his great Enemy. Certain of the Univerſity had appointed a Congregation at Afternoon. As the Bell rang to it, Dr. Sands came out of the Fields, and ſending for the Beadles, asketh what the Matter meant, and required them to wait upon him to the Schools, according to their Duty. So they did. And ſo ſoon as Dr. Sands, the Beadles going before him, came into the Regent-houſe and took his Chair, one Mr. Mitch, with a Rabble of unlearned Papiſts, went into a By-ſchool, and conſpired together to pull him out of his Chair, and to uſe Violence unto him. Dr. Sands began his Oration, expoſtulating with the Univerſity, charging them with great Ingratitude, declaring, that he had ſaid nothing in his Sermon, but that he was ready to juſtify, and their Caſe was all one with his: For they had not only concealed, but conſented to that which he had ſpoken.

And thus while he remembred them how beneficial he had been to the Univerſity, and their Unthankfulneſs to him again, in came Mr. Mitch with his Conſpirators, about twenty in Number. One laid Hands on the Chair to pull it from him; another told him, that that was not his Place, and another call'd him Traitor. Whereat he perceiving how they uſed Violence, and being of great Courage, groped to his Dagger, and had diſpatched ſome of them as God's Enemies, if Dr. Bill and Dr. Blith had not fallen upon him, and prayed him for God's Sake to hold his Hands and be quiet, and patiently to bear that great offered Wrong. He was perſuaded by them, and after that Tumult was ceaſed, he ended his Oration, and having ſome Money of the Univerſity's in his Hands, he there delivered the ſame every Farthing. He gave up the Books, Reckonings, and Keys pertaining to the Univerſity, and withal yielded up his Office, praying God to give the Univerſity a better Officer, and to give them better and more thankful Hearts, and ſo repaired home to his own College.

On the Morrow after there came unto him one Mr. Gerningham, and Mr. Thomas Mildmay. Gerningham told him, that it was the Queen's Pleaſure, that two of the Guard ſhould attend upon him, and that he muſt be carried Priſoner to the Tower of London with the Duke. Mr. Mildmay ſaid, he marvelled that a learned Man would ſpeak ſo unadviſedly againſt ſo good a Prince, and wilfully run into ſuch a Danger. Dr. Sands anſwered, I ſhall not be aſhamed of Bonds, but if I could do as Mr. Mildmay can, I needed not to fear Bonds: For he came down in Payment againſt Queen Mary, and armed in the Field, and now he returneth in Payment for Queen Mary; before a Traitor, and now a great Friend, I cannot with one Mouth blow hot and cold after this Manner.

Upon

Upon this his Stable was robbed of four very good Geldings, the beſt of them Mr. Huddleſtone took for his own Saddle, and rode on him to London in his Sight. An Inventory was taken of all his Goods by Mr. More, Beadle for the Univerſity. He was ſet upon a lame Horſe that halted to the Ground; which Thing a Friend of his perceiving, prayed that he might lend him a Nag. The Yeomen of the Guard were contented. As he departed forth at the Town's End, ſome Papiſts reſorted thither to jeer at him; ſome of his Friends to mourn for him. He came in the Rank to London, the People being full of Out-cries. And as he came in at Biſhopſgate, one like a Milk-woman hurled a Stone at him, and hit him on the Breaſt, with ſuch a Blow, that he was like to fall off his Horſe. To whom he mildly ſaid; Woman, God forgive it thee. Truth is, that Journey and evil Intreating ſo mortified him, that he was more ready to die than to live.

As he came through Tower-hill-ſtreet, one Woman ſtanding in her Door, cried; Fie on thee thou Knave, thou Traitor, thou Heretick. Whereat he ſmiled. Look, the deſperate Heretick, ſaid ſhe, laughed at this Jeer. A Woman on the other ſide of the Street anſwered, ſaying; Fie on thee Neighbour, thou art not worthy to be called a Woman, railing upon this Gentleman whom thou knoweſt not, nor the Cauſe why he is thus treated. Then ſhe ſaid, Good Gentleman, God be thy Comfort, and give thee Strength to ſtand in God's Cauſe, even to the End. And thus he paſſed through rough and ſmooth to the Tower, the firſt Priſoner that enter'd in that Day, which was St. James's Day. The Yeomen of the Guard took from him his borrowed Nag, and what elſe ſoever he had. His Man, one Quinting Suainton, brought after him a Bible, and ſome Shirts, and ſuch like Things. The Bible was ſent into him, but the Shirts and ſuch like ſerved the Yeomen of the Guard.

After he had been in the Tower three Weeks in a bad Priſon: He was brought up into Nuns-Bower a better Priſon, where was put to him Mr. John Bradford.

At the Day of Queen Mary's Coronation their Priſon-door was ſet open, ever ſhut before. One Mr. Mitchell his old Acquaintance, who had been Priſoner before in the ſame Place, came in to him, and ſaid; Maſter Sands, there is ſuch a Stir in the Tower, that neither Gates, Doors, nor Priſoners are looked to this Day. Take my Cloak, my Hat, and my Rapier, and get you gone, you may go out of the Gates without queſtioning, ſave yourſelf, and let me do as well as I can. A rare Friendſhip; but he refuſed the Offer, ſaying; I know no juſt Cauſe why I ſhould be in Priſon. And thus to do were to make myſelf guilty. I will expect God's good Will, yet muſt I think myſelf much obliged to you: And ſo Mr. Mitchell departed.

While Dr. Sands and Mr. Bradford were thus in cloſe Priſon twenty-nine Weeks, one John Bowler was their Keeper, a very perverſe Papiſt, yet by often perſuading of him, for he would give Ear, and by gentle uſing of him, at length he began to miſlike Popery, and to favour the Goſpel, and was ſo perſuaded in true Religion, that on a Sunday when they had Maſs in the Chappel, he brought up a Service-book, a Manchet, and a Glaſs of Wine, and there Dr. Sands miniſtred the Communion to Bradford and to Bowler. Thus Bowler was their Son begotten in Bonds. When Wyat was in Arms, and the old Duke of Norfolk ſent forth with a Power of Men to apprehend him; that Room might be made in the Tower for him and other his Accomplices, Dr. Cranmer, Dr. Ridley, and Mr. Bradford were caſt into one Priſon, and Dr. Sands with nine other Preachers were ſent unto the Marſhalſea.

The Keeper of the Marſhalſea appointed to every Preacher a Man to lead him in the Street, he cauſed them to go far before, and he and Dr. Sands came behind, whom he would not lead, but walked familiarly with him. Yet Dr. Sands was known, and the People every where prayed to God to comfort him, and to ſtrengthen him in the Truth. By that Time the Peoples Minds were altered, Popery began to be unſavory. After they paſſed the Bridge, the Keeper ſaid to Dr. Sands, I perceive the vain People would ſet you forward to the Fire. Ye are as vain as they, if you, being a young Man, will ſtand in your own Conceit, and prefer your own Judgment before that of ſo many worthy Prelates, ancient, learned, and grave Men as be in this Realm. If you ſo do, you ſhall find me a ſevere Keeper, as one that utterly diſliketh your Religion. Dr. Sands anſwered, I know my Years to be young, and my Learning but ſmall, it is enough to know Chriſt crucified, and he hath learned nothing who ſeeth not the great Blaſphemy that is in Popery. I will yield unto God, and not unto Man: I have read in the Scriptures of many godly and courteous Keeper: God may make you one; if not, I truſt he will give me Strength and Patience to bear your hard Uſage. Then ſaid the Keeper, Are you reſolv'd to ſtand to your Religion? Yes, quoth the Doctor, by God's Grace. Truly, ſaid the Keeper, I love you the better for it; I did but tempt you: What Favour I can ſhew you ye ſhall be ſure of, and I ſhall think myſelf happy if I might die at the Stake with you. He was as good as his Word, for he truſted the Doctor to walk in the Fields alone, where he met with Mr. Bradford, who was alſo a Priſoner in the King's-Bench, and had found the ſame Favour from his Keeper: He laid him in the beſt Chamber in the Houſe; he would not ſuffer the Knight-marſhal's Man to lay Fetters on him, as others had. And, at his Requeſt, he put Mr. Sanders in to him, to be his Bedfellow, and ſundry Times after he ſuffered his Wife, who was Mr. Sands Daughter of Eſſex, a Gentlewoman beautiful both in Body and Soul, to reſort to him. There was great Reſort to Dr. Sands and Mr. Saunders; they had much Money offered them, but they would receive none. They had the Communion there three or four Times, and a great Number of Communicants. Dr. Sands gave ſuch Exhortation to the People (for at that Time being young, he was thought very eloquent) that he moved many Tears, and made the People abhor the Maſs, and defy all Popery.

When Wyat with his Army came into Southwark, he ſent two Gentlemen into the Marſhalſea to Dr. Sands, ſaying, that Mr. Wyat would be glad of his Company and Advice, and that the Gates ſhould be ſet open for all the Priſoners. He anſwered, Tell Mr. Wyat, if this his riſing be of God, it will take place; if not, it will fall. For my Part, I was committed hither by Order, I will be diſcharged by like Order, or I will never depart hence. So anſwered Mr. Saunders, and the reſt of the Preachers, being there Priſoners.

After that Dr. Sands had been nine Weeks Priſoner in the Marſhalſea by the Mediation of Sir Thomas Holcroft, Knight-marſhal, was ſet at Liberty, Sir Thomas ſued earneſtly to the Biſhop of Wincheſter, Dr. Gardiner, for his Deliverence after many Repulſes: But he could not prevail, except Dr. Sands would be one of their Sect, and then he could want nothing. He wrung out of him at laſt, that if the Queen could like of his Deliverance, he would not be againſt it; for that was Sir Thomas his laſt Requeſt. In the mean Time he had procured two Ladies of the privy Chamber to move the Queen in it; who was contented if the Biſhop of Wincheſter would like of it. The next Time that the Biſhop went into the Privy-chamber to ſpeak with the Queen, Mr. Holcroft followed, and had his Warrant for Dr. Sands's Remiſſion ready, and prayed the two Ladies, when the Biſhop ſhould take his Leave, to put the Queen in mind of Dr. Sands. So they did, and the Queen ſaid; Wincheſter, what think you by Dr. Sands, is he not ſufficiently puniſhed? As it pleaſe your Majeſty, ſaith Wincheſter. That he ſpake, remembering his former Promiſe to Mr. Holcroft, that he would not be againſt Dr. Sands, if the Queen ſhould like to diſcharge him. Saith the Queen; then truly, we would that he were ſet at Liberty. Immediately Mr. Holcroft offered the Queen the Warrant. Who ſubſcribed the ſame, and called Wincheſter to put to his Hand, and ſo he did. The Warrant was given to the Knight-marſhal again, Sir Thomas Holcroft. As the Biſhop went forth of the Privy-chamber Door; he called Mr. Holcroft to him, commanding him not to ſet Dr. Sands at Liberty, until he had taken Sureties of two Gentlemen of this Country with him, every one bound in 500 Pounds, that Dr. Sands ſhould not depart out of the Realm without Licenſe. Mr. Holcroft immediately after met with two Gentlemen of the North, Friends and Couſins to Dr. Sands, who offered to be bound in Body, Goods, and Lands for him. After Dinner, the ſame Day, Mr. Holcroft ſent for Dr. Sands to his Lodging at Weſtminſter, requiring the Keeper to accompany him. He came accordingly, finding Mr. Holcroft alone walking in his Garden. Mr. Holcroft imparted his long Sute, with the whole Proceeding, and what Effect it had taken, to Dr. Sands: Much rejoycing that it was his good Hap to do him good, and to procure his Liberty, and that nothing remained, but that he would enter into Bonds with his two Sureties, for not departing out of the Realm. Dr. Sands anſwered; I give God Thanks, who hath moved your Heart to mind me ſo well, and I think myſelf moſt bound unto you. God ſhall requite, and I ſhall never be found unthankful. But as you have dealt friendly with me, I will alſo deal plainly with you. I came a Freeman into Priſon; I will not go forth a Bondman. As I cannot benefit my Friends, ſo will I not hurt them. And if I be ſet at Liberty, I will not tarry ſix Days in this Realm, if I may get out. If therefore I may not get free forth, ſend me to the Marſhalſea again, and there ye ſhall be ſure of me.

This Anſwer Mr. Holcroft much miſliked: He told Sands that the Time would not long continue, a Change would ſhortly come, the State was but a Cloud, and would ſoon ſhake away. And that his Couſin Sir Edward Bray would gladly receive him and his Wife into his Houſe, where he ſhould never need to come at Church, and the Lady Bray was a zealous Gentlewoman, who hated Popery. Adding, that he would not ſo deal with him to loſe all his Labour. When Dr. Sands could not be removed from his former Saying, Mr. Holcroft ſaid; ſeeing you cannot be altered, I will change my Purpoſe and yield unto you. Come of it what will, I will ſet you at Liberty: And ſeeing you mind to go over Sea, get you gone as quick as you can. One Thing I require of you, that while you are there, you write nothing to come hither, for ſo you may undo me. He friendly kiſſed Dr Sands, bade him farewel, and commanded the Keeper to take no Fees of him, ſaying, Let me anſwer Wincheſter as I may. Dr. Sands returning with the Keeper to the Marſhalſea, tarried all Night, and on the Morrow he gave a Dinner to all the Priſoners, to which he invited his Bedfellow, and ſworn Stakefellow, if it had ſo pleaſed God. When he took his Leave, he ſaid, Mr. Saunders, farewel, with many Tears and Kiſſings, the one falling on the other's Neck, and ſo departed, clearly delivered without Examination or Bond. From thence he went to the King's-Bench, and there talked with Mr. Bradford and Dr. Farrer Biſhop of St. David's, then Priſoners. Then he comforted them, and they praiſed God for his happy Deliverance. He went by Wincheſter's Houſe, and there took Boat, and came to a Friend's Houſe in London, called William Banks, and tarried there one Night. On the Morrow at Night he ſhifted to another Friend's Houſe, and there he heard that Search was made for him.

Dr. Watſon and Mr. Chriſtopherſon coming to the Biſhop of Wincheſter, told him, that he had ſet the greateſt Heretick in England at Liberty, and one that had of all others, moſt corrupted the Univerſity of Cambridge, namely, Dr. Sands. Whereupon the Biſhop, being Chancellor of England, ſent for all the Conſtables of London, commanding them to watch for Dr. Sands, who was then within the City, and to apprehend him, and whoſoever of them ſhould take him and bring him to him, he ſhould have five Pounds for his Labour. Dr. Sands ſuſpecting the Matter, conveyed himſelf by Night to one Mr. Berty's Houſe a Stranger, who was in the Marſhalſea Priſon with him awhile, he was a good Proteſtant, and dwelt in Mark-lane. There he was ſix Days, and had one or two of his Friends that repaired to him. Then he removed to one of his Acquaintance in Cornhil; he cauſed his Man Quinting to provide two Geldings for him, minding on the Morrow to ride into Eſſex, to Mr. Sands his Father-in-law, where his Wife was.

At going to Bed he found that a Pair of Hoſe which he had newly bought were too long for him: He deſired the good Woman of the Houſe to ſend for ſomebody that could cut them two Inches ſhorter. The Wife required the Boy of the Houſe to carry them to the next Taylor; which he accordingly did: And he chanced (or rather God ſo provided) to go to the very Perſon that firſt made them (whoſe Name was Benjamin, a good Proteſtant in Birchin-lane) and the Boy deſired him to cut the Hoſe. Said he, I am not thy Maſter's Taylor. Said the Boy, Becauſe you are our next Neighbour, and my Maſter's Taylor dwelleth afar off, I came to you, being late in the Night, for he muſt put them on betimes in the Morning. Benjamin took the Hoſe, and looking upon them, knew his handy Work, and ſaid, Theſe are not thy Maſter's Hoſe, they belong to Dr. Sands, I made them for him in the Tower. The Boy confeſſed it to be ſo. Said he, go to thy Miſtreſs, pray her to ſit up till twelve of the Clock, and then I will bring the Hoſe and ſpeak with the Doctor for his Good.

At Midnight the good Wife of the Houſe, and Benjamin came to Dr. Sands's Chamber: The good Woman deſired him not to be ſurpriſed at their coming. He anſwered, nothing can be amiſs; what God will that ſhall be done. Then Benjamin told him that he was the Man that made his Hoſe, and by good Chance they now came to his Hands. God uſed the Means, that he might admoniſh him of his Danger, and adviſe him how to eſcape, telling him, that all the Conſtables of London, whereof he was one, watched for him, and ſome were ſo greedily ſet, that they prayed him, if he took him, to let them have the Carriage of him to the Biſhop of Wincheſter, and he ſhould have the five Pounds. It is well known (quoth Benjamin) that your Man hath provided two Geldings, and that you intend to ride out at Aldgate To-morrow Morning, and there then you are ſure to be taken. Follow mine Advice, and by God's Grace ye ſhall eſcape their Hands. Let your Man walk all the Day To-morrow in the Street where your Horſes ſtand, booted and ready to ride. The good Man's Servant of the Houſe ſhall take the Horſes, and carry them to Bednal-green. The good Man ſhall be booted, and follow after, as if he would ride. I will be here with you To-morrow about eight of the Clock, it is both Term and Parliament Time, here we will break our Faſt, and when the Streets is full, we will go forth. Look wildly, and if you meet your Brother in the Streets, ſhun him not, but out-face him, and know him not. Accordingly Dr. Sands did, cloathed like a Gentleman in all Reſpects, and looked wildly, as one that had been long kept in Priſon out of the Light, Benjamin carried him through Birchin-lane, and from one Lane to another till he came to Moregate. There they went forth until they came to Bednal Green, where the Horſes were ready, and Mr. Hurleſtone to ride with him as his Man. Dr. Sands pulled on his Boots, and taking Leave of his Friend Benjamin, with Tears they kiſſed each other: He put his Hand in his Purſe, and would have given Benjamin a great part of that little he had, but Benjamin would take none. Yet ſince Dr. Sands hath remembred him thankfully. He rode that Night to his Father-in-law Mr. Sands, where his Wife was: He had not been there two Hours, but it was told Mr. Sands, that there were two of the Guard which would that Night apprehend Dr. Sands, and ſo they were appointed.

That Night Dr. Sands was guided to an honeſt Farmer near the Sea, where he tarried two Days and two Nights in a Chamber without Company. After that he had ſhifted to one James Mower a Shipmaſter, who dwelt at Milton-Shore, where he expected Wind for the Engliſh Fleet ready into Flanders. While he was there, James Mower brought to him forty or fifty Mariners, to whom he gave an Exhortation; they liked him ſo well, that they promiſed to die for it, ere that he ſhould be apprehended.

The ſixth of May, being Sunday, the Wind ſerved. He took his Leave of his Hoſt and Hoſteſs, and went towards the Ship. In taking his Leave of his Hoſteſs who was barren, and had been married eight Years, he gave her a fine Handkerchief and an old Royal of Gold in it, thanking her much, and ſaid, be of good Comfort, ere that one whole Year be paſt, God ſhall give you a Child; a Boy. And it came to paſs, for that Day Twelvemonth lacking one Day, God gave her a fair Son.

At the Shore Dr. Sands met with Mr. Iſaac of Kent, who had his eldeſt Son there, who, upon the liking he had to Dr. Sands, ſent his Son with him, who afterward died in his Father's Houſe in Frankfort. Dr. Sands and Dr. Coxe were both in one Ship, being one Cockrel's Ship, they were within the Kenning, when two of the Guard came thither to apprehend Dr. Sands. They arrived at Antwerp, being bid to Dinner to Mr. Locke. And at Dinner-time one George Gilpin being Secretary to the Engliſh Houſe, and Kinſman to Dr. Sands, came to him, and rounded him in his Ear, and ſaid, King Philip hath ſent to make Search for you, and to apprehend you. Hereupon they roſe from their Dinner in a marvellous great Shower, and went out at the Gate toward the Land of Cleve. They found a Waggon, and haſted away, and came ſafe to Ausburge in Cleveland, where Dr. Sands tarried fourteen Days, and then travelled towards Strasbourgh, where after he had lived one Year, his Wife came to him. He fell ſore ſick of a Flux, which kept him nine Months, and brought him to Death's Door. He had a Child which fell ſick of the Plague, and died. His Wife at length fell ſick of a Conſumption, and died in his Arms; no Man had a more godly Woman to his Wife.

After this, Mr. Sampſon went away to Emanuel, a Man skilful in Hebrew. Mr. Grindall went into the Country to learn the Dutch Tongue. Dr. Sands ſtill remained in Strasbourgh, whoſe Suſtentation was chiefly from one Mr. Iſaac, who loved him moſt dearly, and was ever more ready to give than to receive. He gave him in that Space above an hundred Marks, which Sum the ſaid Dr. Sands paid him again, and by his other Gifts and Friendlineſs ſhewed himſelf to be a thankful Man. When his Wife was dead, he went to Zurik, and there was in Peter Martyr's Houſe for the Space of five Weeks. Being there, as they ſate at Dinner, Word ſuddenly came that Queen Mary was dead, and Dr. Sands was ſent for by his Friends at Strasbourgh. That News made Mr. Martyr, and Mr. Jarret then there, very joyful; but Dr. Sands could not rejoyce, it ſmote into his Heart that he ſhould be called to Miſery.

Mr. Bullinger and the Miniſters feaſted him, and he took his Leave and returned to Strasbourgh where he preached; and ſo Mr. Grindall and he came towards England, and came to London the ſame Day that Queen Elizabeth was crowned.

The miraculous Preſervation of the Lady ELIZABETH, afterwards Queen of England, in the Time of Queen MARY, her Siſter.

BUT when all hath been ſaid and told, whatſoever can be recited touching the admirable Working of God's preſent Hand in defending and delivering any one Perſon out of Thraldom, never was there, ſince the Memory of our Fathers, any Example to be ſhewed, wherein the Lord's mighty Power hath more admirably ſhewed itſelf, to the Glory of his own Name, to the Comfort of all good Hearts, and to the publick Felicity of this whole Realm, than in the miraculous Eſcape of the Lady Elizabeth, in the Time of Queen Mary her Siſter.

In which Story we firſt have to conſider in what extream Miſery, Sickneſs, Fear, and Peril her Highneſs was; into what Care, what Trouble of Mind, and what Danger of Death ſhe was brought: Firſt, with great Bands of armed Men (and happy was he that might have the carrying of her) being fetched up as the greateſt Traitor in the World, clapped in the Tower, and again toſſed from thence, and from Houſe to Houſe, from Priſon to Priſon, from Poſt to Pillar, at length alſo Priſoner in her own Houſe, and guarded with a ſort of Cut-throats, who ever gaped for the Spoil, whereby they might be fingering of ſomewhat.

Secondly, we have to conſider again, all this notwithſtanding, how ſtrangely, or rather miraculouſly, ſhe was delivered from Danger, what Favour and Grace ſhe found with the Almighty; who, when all the Help of Man and Hope of Recovery was paſt, ſtretched out his mighty Protection, and preſerved her Highneſs, and placed her in her princely Seat of Reſt and Quietneſs.

In which Story, if I ſhould ſet forth at large all the Particulars and Circumſtances thereunto belonging, and as juſt Occaſion of the Hiſtory requireth; beſide the importunate Length of the Story diſcourſed, peradventure it might move Offence to ſome and Truth might get me Hatred. Yet notwithſtanding I intend (by the Grace of Chriſt) therein to uſe ſuch Brevity and Moderation, as both may be to the Glory of God, the Diſcharge of the Story, the Profit of the Reader, and Hurt to none, ſuppreſſing the Names of ſome, whom here altho' I could recite, yet I thought not to be more cruel in hurting their Names, than the Queen hath been merciful in pardoning their Lives.

Therefore now to enter into the Diſcourſe of this tragical Matter, firſt here is to be noted, that Queen Mary when ſhe was firſt Queen, before ſhe was crowned, would go no whither, but would have her by the Hand, and ſend for her to Dinner and Supper; but after ſhe was crowned ſhe never dined nor ſupped with her, but kept her apart from her, &c. After this it happened immediately upon the riſing of Sir Thomas Wyat (as before was mentioned) that the Lady Elizabeth and Lord Courtney were charged with falſe Suſpicion of Sir Thomas Wyat's riſing. Whereupon Queen

Queen Mary, whether for that Surmiſe, or for what other Cauſe I know not, being offended with the ſaid Lady Elizabeth her Siſter, at that Time lying in her Houſe at Aſhbridge, the next Day after the riſing of Wyat, ſent to her three of her Counſellors, to wit, Sir Richard Southwell, Sir Edward Haſtings, then Maſter of the Horſe, and Sir Thomas Cornwallis, with their Retinue and Troop of Horſemen, to the Number of two hundred and fifty, who at their ſudden and unprovided coming, found her at the ſame Time ſick in her Bed, and very feeble and weak of Body. Whither when they came, aſcending up to her Grace's Chamber, they deſired one of her Ladies, whom they met, to declare to her Grace, that there were divers come from the Court, who had a Meſſage from the Queen.

Her Grace having Knowledge thereof, was right glad of their coming; howbeit being then very ſick, and the Night far ſpent (which was at ten of the Clock) ſhe requeſted them by the Meſſenger, that they would reſort thither in the Morning. To this they anſwered, that they muſt needs ſee her, and would ſo do, in what Caſe ſoever ſhe were. Whereat the Lady being ſurprized, went to ſhew her Grace their Words; but they, haſtily following her, came ruſhing as ſoon as ſhe into her Grace's Chamber unbidden.

At whoſe ſudden coming into her Bed-chamber, her Grace, being greatly amazed, ſaid unto them, Is the Haſte ſuch that it might not have pleaſed you to come To-morrow in the Morning.

They made Anſwer, that they were right ſorry to ſee her in that Caſe, and I (ſaid ſhe) am not glad to ſee you here at this Time of Night. Whereunto they anſwered, that they came from the Queen to do their Meſſage and Duty, which was to this Effect, that the Queen's Pleaſure was, that ſhe ſhould be at London the ſeventh Day of that preſent Month. Whereunto ſhe ſaid, certainly, no Creature more glad than I to come to her Majeſty, being right ſorry that I am not in a Caſe at this Time to wait on her, as you yourſelves do ſee, and can well teſtify.

Indeed we ſee it true, ſaid they, that you do ſay; for which we are very ſorry. Albeit, we let you to underſtand, that our Commiſſion is ſuch, and ſo ſtraitneth us, that we muſt needs bring you with us, either alive or dead. Whereat ſhe being amazed, ſorrowfully ſaid, that their Commiſſion was very ſore; but yet notwithſtanding ſhe hoped it to be otherwiſe, and not ſo ſtrait. Yes verily, ſaid they. Whereupon they calling for two Phyſicians, Dr. Owen and Dr. Wendy, demanded of them whether ſhe might be removed from thence with Life, or no. Whoſe Anſwer and Judgment was, that there was no Impediment in their Judgment to the contrary, but that ſhe might travel without Danger of Life.

In Concluſion, they deſired her to prepare againſt the next Morning at nine of the Clock to go with them, declaring that they had brought with them the Queen's Letter for her. After much Talk, the Meſſengers declaring how there was no prolonging of Times and Days, ſo departed to their Chamber, being entertained and cheared, as appertained to their Worſhips.

On the next Morrow, at the Time preſcribed, they had her forth as ſhe was, very faint and feeble, and in ſuch Caſe that ſhe was ready to ſwoon three or four Times between them. What ſhould I ſpeak here, that cannot well be expreſſed, what an heavy Houſe there was to behold the unreverend and doleful dealing of theſe Men, but eſpecially the Fear and Captivity of their innocent Lady and Miſtreſs.

Now to proceed in her Journey from Aſhbridge, ſick in the Litter, ſhe came to Redborne, where ſhe was guarded all Night. From thence to St. Alban's to Sir Ralph Rowlet's Houſe, where ſhe tarried that Night, both feeble in Body, and comfortleſs in Mind. From that Place they paſſed to Mr. Dod's Houſe at Myms, where alſo they remained that Night; and ſo from thence ſhe came to Highgate, where ſhe being very ſick, tarried that Night and the next Day. During which Time of her Abode, there came many Purſuivants and Meſſengers from the Court, but for what Purpoſe I cannot tell.

From that Place ſhe was conveyed to the Court, where by the Way came to meet her many Gentlemen to accompany her Highneſs, who were very ſorry to ſee her in that Caſe. But eſpecially a great Multitude of People were ſtanding by the Way, who then flocking about her Litter, lamented and bewailed greatly her Eſtate. Now when ſhe came to the Court, her Grace was there ſtraightways ſhut up, and kept as cloſe Priſoner a Fortnight, which was till Palm-Sunday, ſeeing neither King, nor Queen, nor Lord, nor Friend, all that Time, but only the then Lord-Chamberlain, Sir John Gage, and the Vice-Chamberlain, which were attendant unto the Doors. About which time Sir William Sentlowe was called before the Council. To whoſe Charge was laid, that he knew of Wyat's Rebellion: Which he ſtoutly denied, proteſting that he was a true Man both to God and his Prince, defying all Traytors and Rebels, but being ſtraitly examined, he was in Concluſion committed to the Tower.

The Friday before Palm-Sunday, the Biſhop of Wincheſter, with nineteen others of the Council, (who ſhall be here nameleſs) came unto her Grace from the Queen's Majeſty, and burdened her with Wyat's Conſpiracy; which ſhe utterly deny'd, affirming that ſhe was altogether guiltleſs therein. They being not contented with this, charged her Grace with Buſineſs made by Sir Peter Carew, and the reſt of the Gentlemen of the Weſt Country: Which alſo ſhe utterly denying, cleared her Innocency therein.

In Concluſion, after long debating of Matters, they declared unto her, that it was the Queen's Will and Pleaſure that ſhe ſhould go unto the Tower, while the Matter were further tried and examined.

Whereat ſhe being amazed, ſaid, that ſhe truſted the Queen's Majeſty would be a more gracious Lady unto her, and that her Highneſs would not otherwiſe conceive of her but that ſhe was a true Woman; declaring furthermore to the Lords, that ſhe was innocent in all thoſe Matters wherein they had burdened her, and deſired them therefore to be a further Mean to the Queen her Siſter, that ſhe being a true Woman in Thought, Word, and Deed, towards her Majeſty, might not be committed to ſo notorious and doleful a Place; proteſting that ſhe would requeſt no Favour at her Hand, if ſhe ſhould be proved to have conſented unto any ſuch kind of Matter as they laid unto her Charge; and therefore in fine, deſired their Lordſhips to think of her what ſhe was, and that ſhe might not be ſo extremely dealt withal for her Truth.

Whereunto the Lords anſwered again, that there was no Remedy, for that the Queen's Majeſty was fully determined that ſhe ſhould go unto the Tower. Wherewith the Lords departed, with their Caps hanging over their Eyes. But not long after, within the Space of an Hour or little more, came four of the aforeſaid Lords of the Council, which were the Lord-Treaſurer, the Biſhop of Wincheſter, the Lord-Steward, the Earl of Suſſex, with the Guard; who warding the next Chamber to her, ſecluded all her Gentlemen and Yeomen, Ladies and Gentlewomen; except that for one Gentleman Uſher, three Gentlewomen, and two Grooms of her Chamber, were appointed in their Rooms, three other Men of the Queen's, and three waiting Women to give Attendance upon her, that none ſhould have Acceſs to her Grace.

At which Time there were an hundred of Northern Soldiers in white Coats, watching and warding about the Gardens all that Night, and a great Fire being made in the midſt of the Hall, and two certain Lords watching there alſo with their Band and Company.

Upon Saturday following, two Lords of the Council, (the one was the Earl of Suſſex, the other ſhall be nameleſs) came and certified her Grace, that ſhe muſt forthwith unto the Tower, the Barge being prepared for her, and the Tide now ready, which tarrieth for no body. In heavy Mood her Grace requeſted the Lords that ſhe might tarry another Tide, truſting that the next would be better and more comfortable. But one of the Lords replied, that neither Time nor Tide was to be delayed.

And when her Grace requeſted him that ſhe might be ſuffered to write to the Queen's Majeſty, he anſwered, that he durſt not permit that: Adding, that in his Judgment it would rather hurt, than profit her Grace in ſo doing.

But the other Lord, more courteous and favourable (who was the Earl of Suſſex) kneeling down, told her Grace that ſhe ſhould have Liberty to write, and as he was a true Man, he would deliver it to the Queen's Highneſs, and bring an Anſwer of the ſame, whatſoever came thereof. Whereupon ſhe wrote, albeit ſhe could in no caſe be ſuffered to ſpeak with the Queen, to her great Diſcomfort, being no Offender againſt the Queen's Majeſty.

And thus the Time and Tide paſſed away for that Seaſon, they privily appointing all Things ready that ſhe ſhould go the next Tide, which fell about Midnight; but for Fear ſhe ſhould be taken by the Way, they durſt not. So they ſtayed till the next Day, being Palm-Sunday, when about nine of the Clock theſe two returned again, declaring that it was Time for her Grace to depart. She anſwered, if there be no Remedy, I muſt be contented, willing the Lords to go on before. Being come forth into the Garden, ſhe did caſt her Eyes towards the Window, thinking to ſee the Queen, which ſhe could not. Whereat ſhe ſaid, ſhe marvelled much what the Nobility of the Realm meant, which in that ſort would ſuffer her to be led into Captivity, the Lord knew whither, for ſhe did not. In the mean Time Commandment was given in all London, that every one ſhould keep the Church, and carry their Palms, while in the mean Seaſon ſhe might be conveyed without all recourſe of People in the Tower.

After this, ſhe took her Barge with the two foreſaid Lords, three of the Queen's Gentlewomen, and three of her own, her Gentleman-uſher, and two of her Grooms, lying and hovering upon the Water a certain Space, for that they could not ſhoot the Bridge, the Bargemen being very unwilling to ſhoot the ſame, ſo ſoon as they did, becauſe of the Danger thereof: For the Stern of the Boat ſtruck upon the Ground, the Fall was ſo big, and the Water was ſo ſhallow, that the Boat being under the Bridge, there ſtay'd again awhile. At landing ſhe firſt ſtay'd and denied to land at thoſe Stairs where all Traytors and Offenders cuſtomably uſed to land, neither could ſhe well, unleſs ſhe ſhould go over her Shoes. The Lords were gone out of the Boat before, and asked why ſhe came not. One of the Lords went back again to her, and brought Word ſhe would not come.

Then ſaid one of the Lords, who ſhall be nameleſs, that ſhe ſhould not chuſe; and becauſe it did then rain, he offered to her his Cloak, which ſhe, putting it back with her Hand with a good Daſh, refuſed. So ſhe coming not, having one Foot upon the Stairs, ſaid, here landeth as true a Subject, being Priſoner, as ever landed at theſe Stairs: And before thee, O God, I ſpeak it, having no other Friends but thee alone.

To whom the ſame Lord anſwered again, that if it were ſo, it was the better for her. At her landing there was a great Multitude of their Servants and Warders ſtanding in their Order. What needed all this, ſaid ſhe? It is the Uſe ſaid ſome ſo to be when any Priſoner came thither. And if it be, quoth ſhe, for my Cauſe, I beſeech you that they may be diſmiſſed. Whereat the poor Men kneeled down, and with one Voice deſired God to preſerve her Grace, who the next Day were releaſed of their cold Coats.

After this, paſſing a little further, ſhe ſat down upon a cold Stone, and there reſted herſelf. To whom the Lieutenant then being, ſaid, Madam, you were beſt to come out of the Rain, for you ſit unwholſomely. She then replying, anſwered again, It is better ſitting here, than in a worſe Place; for God knoweth, I know not whither you will bring me. With that her Gentleman-uſher wept; ſhe demanding of him what he meant ſo uncomfortably to uſe her, ſeeing ſhe took him to be her Comfort, and not to diſmay her, eſpecially for that ſhe knew her Truth to be ſuch that no Man ſhould have Cauſe to weep for her. But forth ſhe went into Priſon.

The Doors were locked and bolted upon her, which greatly diſcomforted and diſmayed her Grace. At which Time ſhe called to her Gentlewoman for her Book, deſiring God not to ſuffer her to build her Foundation upon the Sands, but upon the Rock, whereby all Blaſts of bluſtring Weather ſhould have no Power againſt her. The Doors being thus locked, and ſhe cloſe ſhut up, the Lords had great Conference how to keep Ward and Watch, every Man declaring his own Opinion in that Behalf, agreeing ſtraitly and circumſpectly to keep her.

Then one of them, which was the Lord of Suſſex, ſwearing, ſaid: My Lords, let us take heed, and do no more than our Commiſſion will bear us out in, whatſoever ſhall happen hereafter. And further, let us conſider that ſhe was the King our Maſter's Daughter; and therefore let us uſe ſuch Dealing, that we may anſwer it hereafter, if it ſhall ſo happen: For juſt dealing (quoth he) is always anſwerable; whereunto the other Lords agreed that it was well ſaid of him, and thereupon departed. Being in the Tower, within two Days Commandment was that ſhe ſhould have Maſs within her Houſe. One Mr. Young was then her Chaplain, and becauſe there were none of her Men ſo well learned to help the Prieſt to ſay Maſs, the Maſs ſtay'd for that Day.

The next Day two of her Yeomen, who had gone long to School before, and were learned, had two Abcies provided, and delivered them, ſo that upon the Abcies they ſhould help the Prieſt. One of the ſaid Yeomen, holding the Abcie in his Hand, pretending Ignorance at Kyrie Eleyſon, ſet the Prieſt, making as tho' he could anſwer no farther.

It would make a pitiful and a ſtrange Story, here by the way to touch and recite what Examination and Rackings of poor Men there were to find out that Knife that ſhould cut her Throat; what gaping among my Lords of the Clergy, to ſee the Day wherein they might waſh their goodly white Rochets in her innocent Blood; but eſpecially the Biſhop of Wincheſter, Stephen Gardiner, then Lord Chancellor, who then within five Days after came unto her, with divers others of the Council, and examined her of the Talk that was at Aſhbridge, betwixt her and Sir James Acroft, concerning her removing from thence to Dunnington Caſtle, requiring her to declare what ſhe meant thereby.

At the firſt ſhe being ſo ſuddenly asked, did not well remember any ſuch Houſe; but within awhile, well adviſing herſelf, ſhe ſaid; indeed I do now remember that I have ſuch a Place, but I never lay in it in all my Life. And as for any that hath moved me thereunto, I do not remember.

Then to enforce the Matter they brought forth Sir

James Acroft. The Biſhop of Wincheſter demanded of her what ſhe ſaid to that Man. She anſwered, that ſhe had little to ſay to him, or to the reſt that were then Priſoners in the Tower. But my Lords, ſaid ſhe, you do examine every mean Priſoner of me, wherein methinks you do me great Injury. If they have done Evil, and offended the Queen's Majeſty, let them anſwer to it accordingly. I beſeech you, my Lords, joyn not me in this Sort with any of theſe Offenders. And as concerning my going unto Dunnington Caſtle, I do remember that Mr. Hobby and mine Officers, and you Sir James Acroft had ſuch Talk, but what is that to the purpoſe, my Lords, but that I may go to mine own Houſes at all Times?

The Lord of Arundel kneeling down, ſaid, your Grace ſaith true, and certainly we are very ſorry that we have ſo troubled you about ſo vain Matters. She then ſaid; my Lords, you do ſift me very narrowly. But well I am aſſured, you ſhall not do more to me than God hath appointed, and ſo God forgive you all.

At their Departure Sir James Acroft kneeled down, declaring that he was ſorry to ſee the Day in which he ſhould be brought as a Witneſs againſt her Grace. But I aſſure your Grace, ſaid he, I have been marvelouſly toſſed and examined touching your Highneſs, which the Lord knoweth is very ſtrange to me. For I take God to record before all your Honours, I do not know any thing of that Crime that you have laid to my Charge, and will thereupon take my Death, if I ſhould be driven to ſo ſtrict a Trial.

That Day, or thereabouts, divers of her own Officers, who had made Proviſion for her Diet, brought the ſame to the outer Gate of the Tower, the common raſcal Soldiers receiving it; which was no ſmall Grief unto the Gentlemen, the Bringers thereof. Wherefore they required to ſpeak with the Lord Chamberlain, being then Conſtable of the Tower. Who, coming before his Preſence, declared unto his Lordſhip, that they were much afraid to bring her Grace's Diet, and to deliver it unto ſuch common and deſperate Perſons as they were which did receive it, beſeeching his Honour to conſider her Grace, and to give ſuch Order, that her Viands might at all Times be brought in by them which were appointed thereunto. Yea, Sirs, ſaid he? who appointed you this Office? They anſwered, her Grace's Council. Council, quoth he? there is none of them which hath to do either in that Caſe, or any thing elſe within this Place; and I aſſure you, for that ſhe is a Priſoner, ſhe ſhall be ſerved with the Lieutenant's Men, as other the Priſoners are. Whereat the Gentleman ſaid, that they truſted for more Favour from his Hands, conſidering her Perſonage, ſaying, That they miſtruſted not, but the Queen and her Council would be better to her Grace than ſo, and therewith ſhewed themſelves to be offended at the ungrateful Words of the Lord Chamberlain towards their Lady and Miſtreſs.

At this he ſware by God, ſtriking himſelf upon the Breaſt, that if they did either frown or ſhrug at him, he would ſet them where they ſhould ſee neither Sun nor Moon. Thus taking their Leave, they deſired God to bring him into a better Mind toward her Grace, and departed from him.

Upon the Occaſion whereof, her Grace's Officers made great Sute unto the Queen's Council, that ſome might be appointed to bring her Diet unto her, and that it might no more be delivered unto her by the common Soldiers of the Tower. Which being reaſonably conſidered, was by them granted. And thereupon were appointed one of her Gentlemen, her Clerk of her Kitchin, and her two Purveyors to bring in her Proviſion once a Day. All which was done, the Warders ever waiting upon the Bringers thereof.

The Lord Chamberlain himſelf being always with them, circumſpectly and narrowly watched and ſearched what they brought, and gave heed that they ſhould have no Talk with any of her Grace's waiting Servants, and ſo warded them both in and out. At the ſaid Sute of her Officers were ſent by the Commandment of the Council, to wait upon her Grace, two Yeomen of her Chamber, one of her Robes, two of her Pantry and Ewry, one of her Buttry, another of her Cellar, two of her Kitchin, and one of her Larder, all which continued with her the Time of her Trouble.

Here the Conſtable, being at the firſt not very well pleaſed with the coming in of ſuch a Company againſt his Will, would have had his Men ſtill to have ſerved with her Grace's Men. Which her Servants by no Means would ſuffer, deſiring his Lordſhip to be contented, for that Order was taken, that no Stranger ſhould come within their Offices. At which Anſwer being ſore diſpleaſed, he break out into theſe threatning Words: Well I will handle you well enough. Then went he into the Kitchen, and there would needs have his Meat roaſted with her Grace's Meat, and ſaid, that his Cook ſhould come thither and dreſs it. To that her Grace's Cook anſwered; my Lord, I will never ſuffer any Stranger to come about her Diet, but her own ſworn Men, ſo long as I live. He ſaid they ſhould. But the Cook ſaid, his Lordſhip ſhould pardon him for that Matter. Thus did he trouble her poor Servants very ſtoutly; though afterward he were otherwiſe adviſed, and they more courteouſly uſed at his Hands. And good Cauſe why. For he had good Chear, and fared of the beſt, and her Grace payed well for it. Wherefore he uſed himſelf afterward more reverently toward her Grace.

Having been a whole Month there in cloſe Priſon, and being uneaſy there, ſhe ſent for the Lord Chamberlain, and the Lord Chandois to come and ſpeak with her. Who coming, ſhe requeſted them that ſhe might have Liberty to walk in ſome Place, for that ſhe felt herſelf not well. To which they anſwered, That they were right ſorry that they could not ſatisfy her Grace's Requeſt, for that they had Commandment to the contrary, which they durſt not in any wiſe break. Furthermore, ſhe deſired of them, if that could not be granted, that ſhe might walk but into the Queen's Lodging. No, nor yet that (they anſwered) could by any Means be obtained without a further Sute to the Queen and her Council. Well, ſaid ſhe, my Lords, if the Matter be ſo hard that they muſt be ſued unto for ſo ſmall a Thing, and that Friendſhip be ſo ſtrict, God comfort me, and ſo they departed, ſhe remaining in her old Dungeon ſtill, without any kind of Comfort but only God.

The next Day after the Lord Chandois came again unto her Grace, declaring unto her that he had uſed unto the Council for further Liberty. Some of them conſented thereunto, divers other diſſented, for that there were ſo many Priſoners in the Tower. But in Concluſion, they did all agree that her Grace might walk into thoſe Lodgings, ſo that he and the Lord Chamberlain, and three of the Queen's Gentlewomen did accompany her, the Windows being ſhut, and ſhe not ſuffered to look out at any of them: Wherewith ſhe contented herſelf, and gave him Thanks for his good Will in that behalf.

Afterwards there was Liberty granted to her Grace to walk in a little Garden, the Doors and Gates being ſhut up, which notwithſtanding was as much Diſcomfort unto her, as the Walk in the Garden was pleaſant and acceptable. At which Times of her walking there, the Priſoners on that Side ſtraitly were commanded not to ſpeak or look out at the Windows into the Garden, till her Grace was gone out again, having in Conſideration thereof their Keepers waiting upon them for that Time. Thus her Grace with this ſmall Liberty contented herſelf in God, to whom be Praiſe therefore.

During this Time, there uſed a little Boy, a Man's

Child

Child in the Tower, to reſort to their Chambers, and many times to bring her Grace Flowers, which likewiſe he did to the other Priſoners that were there. Whereupon naughty and ſuſpicious Heads, thinking to make and wring out ſome Matter thereof, called on a Time the Child unto them, promiſing him Figs and Apples, and asked of him when he had been with the Earl of Devonſhire, not ignorant of the Child's wonted frequenting unto him. The Boy anſwered, that he would go by and by thither. Further, they demanded of him, when he was with the Lady Elizabeth's Grace. He anſwered every Day. Furthermore, they examined him, what the Lord of Devonſhire ſent by him to her Grace. The Child ſaid, I will go know what he will give to carry to her. Such was the Diſcretion of the Child, being yet but four Years of Age. This ſame is a crafty Boy, quoth the Lord Chamberlain. How ſay you my Lord Chandois? I pray you my Lord, quoth the Boy, give me the Figs you promiſed me. No marry, quoth he, thou ſhalt be whipped if thou come any more to the Lady Elizabeth, or the Lord Courtney. The Boy anſwered, I will bring my Lady my Miſtreſs more Flowers. Whereupon the Child's Father was commanded to permit the Boy no more to come up into their Chambers.

The next Day, as her Grace was walking in the Garden, the Child peeping in at a Hole in the Door, cried unto her, ſaying, Miſtreſs, I can bring you no more Flowers. Whereat ſhe ſmiled, but ſaid nothing, underſtanding thereby what they had done. Wherefore afterwards the Chamberlain rebuked highly his Father, commanding him to put him out of the Houſe. Alas poor Infant! quoth the Father. It is a crafty Knave, quoth the Lord Chamberlain; let me ſee him here no more.

The fifth Day of May, the Conſtable of the Tower was diſcharged of his Office, and one Sir Henry Benifield placed in his Room, a Man unknown to her Grace, and therefore the more feared; which ſo ſudden Mutation was unto her no little Surprize. He brought with him an hundred Soldiers in blue Coats, wherewith ſhe was marvellouſly diſcomfited, and demanded of ſuch as were about her, whether the Lady Jane's Scaffold was taken away or no, fearing by reaſon of their Coming, leſt ſhe ſhould have play'd her Part. To whom Anſwer was made, that the Scaffold was taken away, and that her Grace needed not to doubt of any ſuch Tyranny, for God would not ſuffer any ſuch Treaſon againſt her Perſon. Wherewith being contented, but not altogether ſatisfied, ſhe asked what Sir Henry Benifield was, and whether he was of that Conſcience, or no, that if her murdering were ſecretly committed to his Charge, he would ſee the Execution thereof.

She was anſwered, that they were ignorant what manner of Man he was. Howbeit they perſuaded her that God would not ſuffer ſuch Wickedneſs to proceed. Well, quoth ſhe, God grant it be ſo. For thou, O God, canſt mollify all ſuch tyrannous Hearts, and diſappoint all ſuch cruel Purpoſes; and I beſeech thee to hear me thy Creature, who am thy Servant, and at thy Commandment, truſting by thy Grace ever ſo to remain.

About which Time it was ſpread abroad, that her Grace ſhould be carried from thence by this new jolly Captain and his Soldiers; but whither, it could not be learned. Which was unto her a great Grief, eſpecially for that ſuch a Company was appointed to her Guard, requeſting rather to continue there ſtill, than to be led thence with ſuch a ſort of Raſcals. At laſt, plain Anſwer was made by the Lord Chandois, that there was no Remedy, but from thence ſhe muſt needs depart to the Manor of Woodſtock, as he thought. Being demanded of her, for what Cauſe; for that, quoth he, the Tower is like further to be furniſhed. She being deſirous to know what he meant thereby, demanded wherewith. He anſwered, with ſuch Matter as the Queen and Council were determined in that Behalf, whereof he had no Knowledge; and ſo departed.

In Concluſion, on Trinity-Sunday, being the nineteenth Day of May, ſhe was removed from the Tower, the Lord-Treaſurer being there for the lading of her Carts, and diſcharging the Place of the ſame, where Sir Henry Benifield (being appointed her Gaoler) receiv'd her with a Company of Rake-hells to guard her, beſides the Lord of Darby's Band, waiting in the Country about for the Moon-ſhine in the Water. Unto whom at length came my Lord of Tame, joyn'd in Commiſſion with the ſaid Sir Henry, for the ſafe guiding of her to Priſon; and they together convey'd her Grace to Woodſtock, as hereafter followeth.

The firſt Day they conducted her to Richmond, where ſhe continued all Night, being reſtrained of her own Men, which were lodged in Out-chambers, and Sir Henry Benifield's Soldiers appointed in their Rooms to give Attendance on her Perſon. Whereat ſhe being marvellouſly diſmay'd, thinking verily ſome ſecret Miſchief to be working towards her, called her Gentleman-Uſher, and deſired him with the reſt of his Company to pray for her. For this Night, quoth ſhe, I think to die. Wherewith he being ſtruck to the Heart, ſaying, God forbid that any ſuch Wickedneſs ſhould be pretended againſt your Grace. So comforting her as well as he could, at laſt he burſt out into Tears, and went from her down into the Court, where were walking the Lord of Tame, and Sir Henry Benifield.

Then he coming to the Lord of Tame (who had proffered to him much Friendſhip) deſired to ſpeak with him a Word or two. Unto whom he familiarly ſaid, he would with all his Heart. Which when Sir Henry, ſtanding by, heard, he asked what the Matter was. To whom the Gentleman-Uſher anſwered, No great Matter, Sir, but to ſpeak with my Lord a Word or two.

Then when the Lord of Tame came to him, he ſpake on this wiſe, My Lord, quoth he, you have been always my good Lord, and ſo I beſeech you to remain. The Cauſe why I come to you at this Time, is to deſire your Honour unfeignedly to declare unto me whether any Danger is meant towards my Miſtreſs this Night, or not, that I and my poor Fellows may take ſuch Part as ſhall pleaſe God to appoint: For certainly we will rather die, than ſhe ſhould ſecretly and innocently miſcarry. Marry, ſaid the Lord of Tame, God forbid that any ſuch wicked Purpoſe ſhould be wrought; and rather than it ſhould be ſo, I with my Men are ready to die at her Feet alſo: And ſo (praiſed be God) they paſſed that doleful Night with no little Heavineſs of Heart.

Afterwards paſſing over the Water at Richmond, going towards Windſor, her Grace eſpied certain of her poor Servants ſtanding on the other ſide, which were very deſirous to ſee her. Whom when ſhe beheld, turning to one of her Men ſtanding by, ſhe ſaid, ſaid, Yonder I ſee certain of my Men; go to them, and ſay theſe Words from me, Tanquam Ovis; that is, Like a Sheep to the Slaughter.

So ſhe paſſing forward to Windſor, was lodged there that Night in the Dean of Windſor's Houſe, a Place more meet indeed for a Prieſt than a Princeſs.

And from thence her Grace was guarded and brought the next Night to Mr. Dormer's Houſe, where much People ſtanding by the Way, ſome preſented to her one Gift, and ſome another, ſo that Sir Henry was greatly moved therewith, and troubled the poor People very ſore, for ſhewing their loving Hearts in ſuch a Manner, calling them Rebels and Traitors, with ſuch vile Words.

Beſides, as ſhe paſſed through the Villages, the Townſmen

Townſmen rang the Bells, as being joyful of her Coming, thinking that it had been otherwiſe than it was indeed, as the Sequel proved after to the ſaid poor Men. For immediately the ſaid Sir Henry hearing the ſame, ſent his Soldiers thither, who apprehended ſome of the Ringers, ſetting them in the Stocks, and otherwiſe uncourteouſly miſuſing otherſome for their good Wills.

On the Morrow her Grace paſſing from Mr. Dormer's (where was for the Time of her abode there, a ſtrait Watch kept) came to the Lord of Tame's Houſe, where ſhe lay all Night, being very princely entertained both by Knights and Ladies, Gentlemen and Gentlewomen. Whereat Sir Henry Benifield grumbled, and was highly offended, ſaying unto them, that they could not tell what they did, and were not able to anſwer their Doings in that behalf, letting them to underſtand, that ſhe was the Queen's Priſoner, and no otherwiſe; adviſing them therefore to take heed and beware of After-claps. Whereunto the Lord of Tame anſwered in this wiſe; That he was well adviſed of his Doings, being joyned in Commiſſion as well as he, adding with warrant, that her Grace might and ſhould in his Houſe be merry.

The next Day, as ſhe ſhould take her Journey from Richmond towards Woodſtock, the Lord of Tame with another Gentleman being at Tables, playing, and dropping vie Crowns, the Lady Elizabeth paſſing by, ſtay'd, and ſaid ſhe would ſee the Game play'd out, which Sir Henry Bonifield would ſcarce permit. The Game running long about, and the playing, drop vie Crowns, Come on, ſaith he; I will tarry, ſaith ſhe, and will ſee this Game out.

After this, Sir Henry Benifield went up into a Chamber, where was appointed for her Grace a Chair, two Cuſhions, and a Foot-carpet very fair and Prince like, wherein preſumptuouſly he ſate, and called one Barwick his Man to pull off his Boots. Which as ſoon as it was known among the Ladies and Gentlemen, every one muſed thereat, and laughed him to ſcorn, obſerving his undiſcreet Manners in that behalf, as they might very well.

When Supper was done, he called my Lord, and willed him that all the Gentlemen and Ladies ſhould withdraw themſelves every one to his Lodging, marvelling much that he would permit there ſuch a Company, conſidering ſo great a Charge committed to him.

Sir Henry, quoth my Lord, content yourſelf, all ſhall be voided, your Men and all. Nay, my Soldiers, quoth Sir Henry, ſhall watch all Night. The Lord of Tame anſwered, There is no need. Well, ſaid he, Need or need not, they ſhall ſo do, miſtruſting belike the Company, which God knoweth was without Cauſe.

The next Day her Grace took her Journey from thence to Woodſtock, where ſhe was incloſed, as before in the Tower of London, the Soldiers guarding both within and without the Walls, every Day to the Number of ſixty; and in the Night without the Walls forty, during the Time of her Impriſonment there.

At length ſhe had Gardens appointed for her to walk in, which was very comfortable to her Grace. But always when ſhe recreated herſelf therein, the Doors were faſt locked up, in as ſtrict Manner as they were in the Tower, being at leaſt five or ſix Locks between her Lodging and her Walks; Sir Henry himſelf keeping the Keys, and truſting no Man therewith. Whereupon ſhe called him her Jaylor; and he kneeling down, deſired her Grace not to call him ſo, for he was appointed there to be one of her Officers. From ſuch Officers (quoth ſhe) good Lord deliver me.

And now by the way, as digreſſing, or rather refreſhing the Reader, if it be lawful in ſo ſerious a Story to recite a Matter incident, and yet not impertinent to the ſame; Occaſion here moveth, or rather inforceth me to touch briefly what happened in the ſame Place and Time by a certain merry conceited Man, being then about her Grace: Who noting the ſtrict and ſtrange Keeping of his Lady and Miſtreſs by the ſaid Sir Thomas Benifield, with ſo many Locks and Doors, with ſuch Watch and Ward about her, as was ſtrange and wonderful, ſpied a Goat in the Ward where her Grace was; and whether to refreſh her oppreſſed Mind, or to notify her ſtrait handling by Sir Henry; or elſe both, he took it upon his Neck, and followed her Grace therewith as ſhe was going into her Lodging.

Which when ſhe ſaw, ſhe asked him what he would do with it, deſiring him to let it alone. The Man anſwer'd, No, by St. Mary (if it pleaſe your Grace) will I not; for I cannot tell, whether he be one of the Queen's Friends or not. I will carry him to Sir Henry Benifield (God willing) to know what he is: So leaving her Grace, he went with the Goat on his Neck, and carry'd it to Sir Henry; who when he ſaw him coming with it, ask'd him, half angerly, what he had there.

Unto whom the Party anſwered, ſaying; Sir, I cannot tell what he is. I pray you examine him, for I found him in the Place where my Lady's Grace was walking, and what Talk they have had I cannot tell. For I underſtand him not, but he ſhould ſeem to me to be ſome Stranger, and I think verily a Welchman, for he hath a white frize Coat on his Back. And forſomuch as I being the Queen's Subject, and perceiving the ſtrait Charge committed to you, that no Stranger ſhould have Acceſs to her without ſufficient Licenſe, I have here found a Stranger (what he is I cannot tell) in the Place where her Grace was walking; and therefore for the neceſſary Diſcharge of my Duty, I thought it good to bring the ſaid Stranger to you, to examine as you ſee Cauſe, and ſo he ſet him down. At this Sir Henry ſeem'd much diſpleaſed, and ſaid, Well, well, you will never leave this Gear, I ſee: And ſo they departed.

Now to return to the Matter from whence we have digreſſed, after her Grace had been there a Time, ſhe made Sute to the Council that ſhe might be ſuffered to write to the Queen. Which at laſt was permitted: So Sir Henry Benifield brought her Pen, Ink, and Paper; and ſtanding by her while ſhe wrote (which he ſtrictly obſerved) always ſhe being weary, he would carry away her Letters, and bring them again when ſhe called for them. In the finiſhing thereof, he would have been Meſſenger to the Queen of the ſame. Whoſe Requeſt her Grace denied, ſaying, one of her own Men ſhould carry them, and that ſhe would neither truſt him, nor any of his there.

Then he anſwered again, ſaying, None of them durſt be ſo bold (he thought) to carry her Letters being in that Caſe. Yes, quoth ſhe, I am aſſured I have none ſo diſhoneſt that would deny my Requeſt in that behalf, but will be as willing to ſerve me now as before. Well, ſaid he, my Commiſſion is to the contrary, and I may not ſo ſuffer it. Her Grace replying again, ſaid, You charge me very often with your Commiſſion. I pray God you may juſtly anſwer the cruel Dealing you uſe towards me.

Then he kneeling down, deſired her Grace to think and conſider how he was a Servant, and put in Truſt there by the Queen to ſerve her Majeſty; proteſting that if the Caſe were hers, he would as willingly ſerve her Grace, as now he did the Queen's Highneſs. For which Anſwer her Grace thanked him, deſiring God that ſhe might never have need of ſuch Servants as he was; declaring further to him, that his Doings towards her were not good nor anſwerable, but more than all the Friends he had would ſtand by.

To whom Sir Henry replied, and ſaid, that there was no Remedy but his Doings muſt be anſwered, and ſo they ſhould, truſting to make good Account thereof. The Cauſe which moved her Grace ſo to ſay, was, for that he would not permit her Letters to be carried four or five Days after the writing thereof. But in fine he was content to ſend for her Gentleman from the Town of Woodſtock, demanding of him whether he durſt enterpriſe the Carriage of her Grace's Letters to the Queen, or no: And he anſwered, Yea Sir, that I dare, and will with all my Heart. Whereupon Sir Henry, half againſt his Stomach, took them unto him.

Then about the eighth of June came down Dr. Owen and Dr. Wendy, ſent by the Queen to her Grace, for that ſhe was ſickly; who miniſtring to her, and letting her Blood, tarried there and attended on her Grace five or ſix Days. Then ſhe being well amended, they returned again to the Court, making their good Report to the Queen and the Council of her Grace's Behaviour and Humility towards the Queen's Highneſs. Which her Majeſty hearing, took very thankfully; but the Biſhops repined thereat, looked black in the Mouth, and told the Queen, they marvelled that ſhe ſubmitted not herſelf to her Majeſty's Mercy, conſidering that ſhe had offended her Highneſs.

About this Time, her Grace was requeſted by a ſecret Friend, to ſubmit herſelf to the Queen's Majeſty, which would be well taken, and to her great Quiet and Advantage. Unto whom ſhe anſwered, that ſhe would never ſubmit herſelf to them whom ſhe never offended. For (quoth ſhe) if I have offended and am guilty, I then crave no Mercy, but the Law, which I am certain (quoth ſhe) I ſhould have had ere this, if it could be proved by me. For I know myſelf (I thank God) to be out of the Danger thereof, wiſhing that I were as clear out of the Peril of my Enemies, and then I am aſſured I ſhould not ſo be locked and bolted up within Walls and Doors as I am. God give them a better Mind when it pleaſeth him.

About this Time there was a great Conſultation among the Biſhops and Gentlemen, touching a Marriage for her Grace, which ſome of the Spaniards wiſhed to be with ſome Stranger, that ſhe might go out of the Realm with her Portion; ſome ſaying one Thing, and ſome another.

A Lord (who ſhall be here nameleſs) being there, at laſt ſaid, that the King ſhould never have any quiet Common-wealth in England, unleſs her Head were ſtricken from her Shoulders. Whereunto the Spaniards anſwered, ſaying, God forbid that their King and Maſter ſhould have that Mind to conſent to ſuch a Miſchief.

This was the courteous Anſwer of the Spaniards to the Engliſhmen, ſpeaking after that ſort againſt their own Country. From that Day the Spaniards never left off their good Perſuaſions to the King, that the like Honour he ſhould never obtain, as he ſhould in delivering the Lady Elizabeth's Grace out of Priſon; whereby at length ſhe was happily releaſed from the ſame. Here is a plain and evident Example of the good Clemency and Nature of the King and his Counſellors toward her Grace (praiſed be God therefore) who moved their Hearts therein. Then hereupon ſhe was ſent for ſhortly after to come to Hampton-court.

But before her removing away from Woodſtock, we will a little ſtay to declare in what Dangers her Life was, during this Time ſhe there remained: Firſt thro' Fire, which began to kindle between the Boards and Cieling under the Chamber where ſhe lay, whether by a Spark of Fire got into a Cranny, or whether of purpoſe by ſome that meant her no Good, the Lord doth know. Nevertheleſs a worſhipful Knight of Oxfordſhire, which was there joyned the ſame Time with Sir Henry Benifield in keeping that Lady (who then took up the Boards and quenched the Fire) verily ſuppoſed it to be done of purpoſe.

Furthermore it is thought, and alſo affirmed (if it be true) of one Paul Penny, a Keeper of Woodſtock, a notorious Ruffian and a butcherly Wretch, that he was appointed to kill the ſaid Lady Elizabeth: Who both ſaw the Man being often in her Sight, and alſo knew thereof.

Another Time one of the Privy-chamber, a great Man about the Queen, and chief Darling of Stephen Gardiner, named James Baſſet, came to Blandenbridge a Mile from Woodſtock, with twenty or thirty Privy-coats, and ſent for Sir Henry Benifield to come and ſpeak with him. But as God would, who diſpoſeth all Things according to his own Will, ſo it happened, that a little before, the ſaid Sir Henry Benifield was ſent for by Poſt to the Council, leaving ſtrict Word behind him with his Brother, that no Man, whoſoever he were, though coming with a Note of the Queen's Hand, or any other Warrant, ſhould have Acceſs to her before his Return again. By reaſon whereof it ſo fell out, that Mr. Benifield's Brother, coming to him at the Bridge, would ſuffer him in no caſe to approach in, who otherwiſe (as is ſuppoſed) was appointed violently to murder the innocent Lady.

In the Life of Stephen Gardiner we declared before, how that the Lady Elizabeth being in the Tower, a Writ came down, ſubſcribed with certain Hands of the Council for her Execution: Which if it were certain, as it is reported, Wincheſter (no doubt) was Deviſer of that miſchievous Drift: And doubtleſs the ſame Achitophel had brought his impious Purpoſe that Day to paſs, had not the fatherly Purpoſe of Almighty God ſtirred up Mr. Bridges, Lieutenant the ſame Time of the Tower, to come in haſte to the Queen to give Certificate thereof, and to know further her Conſent touching her Siſter's Death. Whereupon it followed, that all that Device was diſappointed, and Wincheſter's deviliſh Platform, which he ſaid he had caſt, through the Lord's great Goodneſs came to no Effect.

Where moreover is to be noted, that during the Impriſonment of this Lady and Princeſs, one Mr. Edmund Tremaine was on the Rack, and Mr. Smithwike, and divers others in the Tower were examined, and divers Offers made to them to accuſe the guiltleſs Lady, being in her Captivity. Howbeit, all that notwithſtanding, no Matter could be proved by all Examinations, as ſhe the ſame Time lying at Woodſtock had certain Intelligence by the Means of one John Gayer; who under a colourable Pretence of a Letter to Mrs. Cleve from her Father, was let in, and ſo gave them ſecretly to underſtand of all this Matter. Whereupon the Lady Elizabeth, at her departing out from Woodſtock, wrote theſe Verſes with her Diamond in a glaſs Window,

Much ſuſpected by me:
Nothing proved can be.

Quoth Elizabeth, Priſoner.

And thus much touching the Troubles of Lady Elizabeth, at Woodſtock. Whereunto this is more to be added, that during the ſame Time, the Lord of Tame had laboured to the Queen, and became Surety for her, to have her from Woodſtock to his Houſe, and had obtained grant thereof. Whereupon Preparation was made accordingly, and all Things ready in Expectation of her coming. But through the Procurement either of Mr. Benifield, or by the Advice of Wincheſter her mortal Enemy, Letters came over-night to the contrary; whereby her Journey was ſtopped.

Thus this worthy Lady, oppreſſed with continual Sorrow, could not be permitted to have Recourſe to any Friends ſhe had, but ſtill in the Hands of her Enemies was left deſolate, and utterly deſtitute of all that might refreſh a doleful Heart, fraught full of Terror and Thraldom. Whereupon no marvel if ſhe hearing upon a Time, out of her Garden at Woodſtock, a certain Milkmaid ſinging pleaſantly, wiſhed herſelf to be a Milkmaid as ſhe was, ſaying that her Caſe was better, and Life more merry than was hers, in that State as ſhe was.

Now after theſe Things thus declared, to proceed further there where we left before, Sir Henry Benifield and his Soldiers, with the Lord of Tame, and Sir Ralph Chamberline, guarding and waiting upon her, the firſt Night from Woodſtock ſhe came to Ricot. In which Journey ſuch a mighty Wind did blow, that her Servants were fain to hold down her Cloaths about her: Inſomuch that her Hood was twice or thrice blown from her Head. Whereupon ſhe deſiring to return to a certain Gentleman's Houſe there near, could not be ſuffered by Sir Henry Benifield ſo to do, but was conſtrained under an Hedge to trim her Head as well as ſhe could.

After this, the next Night they journeyed to Mr. Dormer's, and ſo to Colbroke, where ſhe lay all that Night at the George, and by the Way coming to Colbroke, certain of her Grace's Gentlemen and Yeomen met her, to the Number of threeſcore, much to all their Comforts, who had not ſeen her Grace of long Seaſon before: Notwithſtanding they were commanded in the Queen's Name immediately to depart the Town, to both their, and her Grace's no little Heavineſs, who could not be ſuffered once to ſpeak with them. So that Night all her Men were taken from her, ſaving her Gentleman-uſher, three Gentlewomen, two Grooms, and one of her Wardrobe, the Soldiers watching and warding about the Houſe, and ſhe cloſe ſhut up within her Priſon.

The next Day following, her Grace enter'd Hampton-court on the Back-ſide into the Prince's Lodging, the Doors being ſhut to her, and ſhe guarded with Soldiers, as before, lay there a Fortnight at leaſt, ere any had Recourſe unto her: At length came the Lord William Haward, who marvellous honourably uſed her Grace. Whereat ſhe took much Comfort, and requeſted him to be a Means that ſhe might ſpeak with ſome of the Council. To whom (not long after) came the Biſhop of Wincheſter, and the Lord of Arundel, the Lord of Shrewsbury, Secretary Peter, who with great Humility humbled themſelves to her Grace. She again likewiſe ſaluting them, ſaid, My Lords, I am glad to ſee you: For methinks I have been kept a great while from you deſolately alone. Wherefore I would deſire you to be a Means to the King and Queen, that I may be delivered from Priſon, wherein I have been kept a long Time, as to you my Lords is well known.

When ſhe had ſpoken, Stephen Gardiner the Biſhop of Wincheſter kneeled down, and requeſted that ſhe would ſubmit herſelf to the Queen's Grace, and in ſo doing he had no doubt, but that her Majeſty would be good to her: She made Anſwer, that rather than ſhe would ſo do, ſhe would lie in Priſon all the Days of her Life; adding, that ſhe craved no Mercy at her Majeſty's Hand, but rather deſired the Law, if ever ſhe did offend her Majeſty in Thought, Word or Deed: And beſides this, in yielding (quoth ſhe) I ſhould ſpeak againſt myſelf, and confeſs myſelf to be an Offender, which I never was towards her Majeſty, by occaſion whereof the King and the Queen might ever hereafter conceive of me an evil Opinion: And therefore I ſay, my Lords, it were better for me to lie in Priſon for the Truth, than to be abroad and ſuſpected of my Prince. And ſo they departed, promiſing to declare her Meſſage to the Queen.

On the next Day the Biſhop of Wincheſter came again to her Grace, and kneeling down declared that the Queen marvelled that ſhe would ſo ſtoutly uſe herſelf, not confeſſing that ſhe had offended: So that it ſhould ſeem that the Queen's Majeſty had wrongfully impriſoned her Grace.

Nay, quoth the Lady Elizabeth, it may pleaſe her to puniſh me as ſhe thinketh good.

Well, quoth Gardiner, her Majeſty willeth me to tell you, that you muſt tell her another Tale ere that you be ſet at Liberty.

Her Grace anſwered, that ſhe had as lief be in Priſon with Honeſty and Truth, as to be abroad, ſuſpected of her Majeſty; and this that I have ſaid, I will (ſaid ſhe) ſtand unto, for I will never bely myſelf.

Wincheſter again kneeled down, and ſaid, then your Grace hath the Advantage of me and other the Lords for your wrong and long Impriſonment.

What Advantage I have (quoth ſhe) you know, taking God to record, I ſeek no Advantage at your Hands for your ſo dealing with me, but God forgive you and me alſo. With that the reſt kneeled, deſiring her Grace that all might be forgotten, and ſo departed, ſhe being faſt locked up again.

A ſeven-night after the Queen ſent for her Grace at ten of the Clock in the Night to ſpeak with her: For ſhe had not ſeen her for two Years before. Yet for all that, ſhe amazed at the Suddenneſs of the Meſſage, thinking it had been worſe than afterwards it proved, deſired her Gentlemen and Gentlewomen to pray for her, for that ſhe could not tell whether ever ſhe ſhould ſee them again or no.

At which Time Sir Henry Benifield with Mrs. Clarencius coming in, her Grace was brought into the Garden unto a Stairs-foot that went into the Queen's Lodging, her Grace's Gentlewoman waiting upon her, her Gentleman-uſher and her Grooms going before with Torches; where her Gentlemen and Gentlewomen being commanded to ſtay, all ſaving one Woman, Mrs. Clarencius conducted her to the Queen's Bed-chamber where her Majeſty was.

At the Sight of whom her Grace kneeled down, and deſired God to preſerve her Majeſty, not miſtruſting but that ſhe ſhould try herſelf as true a Subject towards her Majeſty as ever did any, and deſired her Majeſty even ſo to judge of her; and ſaid, that ſhe ſhould not find her to the contrary, whatſoever Report otherwiſe had gone of her.

To whom the Queen anſwered, you will not confeſs your Offence, but ſtand ſtoutly to your Truth; I pray God it may ſo fall out.

If it doth not (quoth the Lady Elizabeth) I requeſt neither Favour nor Pardon at your Majeſty's Hands. Well (ſaid the Queen) you ſtiffly ſtill perſevere in your Truth. Belike you will not confeſs but that you have been wrongfully puniſhed.

I muſt not ſay ſo (if it pleaſe your Majeſty) to you.

Why then (ſaid the Queen) belike you will to others.

No, if it pleaſe your Majeſty (quoth ſhe) I have born the Burden and muſt bear it. I humbly beſeech your Majeſty to have a good Opinion of me, and to think me to be your true Subject, not only from the Beginning hitherto, but for ever, as long as Life laſteth: And ſo they departed with very few comfortable Words of the Queen, in Engliſh: But what ſhe ſaid in Spaniſh, God knoweth. It is thought that King Philip was there behind a Cloth, and not ſeen, and that he ſhewed himſelf a very Friend in that Matter, &c.

Thus her Grace departing, went to her Lodging again, and that Day ſeven-night was releaſed of Sir Henry Benifield her Gaoler (as ſhe termed him) and his Soldiers, and ſo her Grace being ſet at Liberty from Impriſonment went into the Country, and had appointed to go with her Sir Thomas Pope, one of Queen Mary's Counſellors, and one of her Gentlemen-uſhers, Mr. Gage, and thus ſtrictly was ſhe looked to all Queen Mary's Time. And this is the Diſcourſe of her Highneſs's Impriſonment.

Then there came to Lambeyre, Mr. Jerningham, and Mr. Noris Gentleman-uſher, Queen Mary's Men, who took away from her Grace, Mrs. Aſhly to the Fleet, and three other of her Gentlewomen to the Tower; which Thing was no little Trouble to her Grace, ſaying, that ſhe thought they would fetch all away at the End. But God be praiſed, ſhortly after was fetched away Gardiner through the merciful Providence of the Lord's Goodneſs, by occaſion of whoſe opportune Deceaſe (as is partly touched in this Story before) the Life of this excellent Princeſs, the Wealth of all England was preſerved. For this is credibly to be ſuppoſed, that the ſaid wicked Gardiner of Wincheſter had long laboured his Wits, and to this only moſt principal Mark bent all his Devices, to take this our happy and dear Sovereign out of the Way; as both by his Words and Doings before notified, may ſufficiently appear.

But ſuch was the gracious and favourable Providence of the Lord, to the Preſervation not only of her Royal Majeſty, but alſo of the miſerable and woful State of this whole Iſland, and poor Subjects of the ſame, whereby the proud Platforms and peeviſh Practices of this wicked Achitophel prevailed not: But contrariwiſe, both he, and all the Snares and Traps of his pernicious Counſel laid againſt another, were turned to a Net to catch himſelf, according to the Proverb, Malum conſilium conſultori peliſſimum.

After the Death of this Gardiner, followed the Death alſo and drooping away of other her Enemies, where by little and little her Jeopardy decreaſed, Fear diminiſhed, hope of Comfort began to appear as out of a dark Cloud: And albeit as yet her Grace had no full Aſſurance of perfect Safety, yet more gentle Entertainment daily did grow unto her, till at length in the Month of November, and ſeventeenth Day of the ſame, three Years after the Death of Stephen Gardiner, followed the Death of Queen Mary.

Although this Hiſtory following be not directly appertaining to the former Matter, yet the ſame may here not unaptly be inſerted, for that it doth diſcover and ſhew forth the malicious Hearts of the Papiſts to the Lady Elizabeth in the Time of Queen Mary her Siſter, which is reported, by ſundry honeſt Perſons, of unqueſtionable Credit. The Matter whereof is this.

Soon after the Stir of Wyat, and the Troubles that happen'd to the Lady Elizabeth for that Cauſe, it happened that one Robert Farrer a Haberdaſher of London, dwelling near Newgate-market, in a certain Morning to be at the Roſe Tavern, where chanced to meet him one Laurence Shiriff, Grocer, dwelling alſo not far from thence, they drinking together as good Friends (as they had been for a long Time before) Farrer being a little elevated, and not conſidering who were preſent, began to talk at large againſt the Lady Elizabeth, and ſaid, That Jilt hath been one of the chief Doers in this Rebellion of Wyat, and before all be done, ſhe and all the Hereticks ſhall well underſtand it. Some of them hope that ſhe ſhall have the Crown, but ſhe and they (I truſt) that ſo hope, ſhall hop headleſs, or be fry'd with Faggots before ſhe come to it.

Laurence the Grocer being ſworn Servant to the Lady Elizabeth, could no longer bear theſe ſcandalous Expreſſions of his old Acquaintance concerning his Miſtreſs, but ſaid to him, Farrer, I have loved thee as a Neighbour, and have had a good Opinion of thee, but in this I defy thee; and I tell thee I am her Grace's ſworn Servant, and ſhe is a Princeſs, and the Daughter of a noble King, and it doth not become thee to call her a Jilt; and for thy ſo ſaying, I ſay thou art a Knave, and I will complain of thee. Do thy worſt, ſaid Farrer, for what I ſaid I will ſay again; and ſo Shiriff went out of his Company.

Shortly after the ſaid Shiriff, taking an honeſt Neighbour with him, went before the Commiſſioners to complain, who ſat then at Biſhop Bonner's Houſe near St. Paul's, Bonner being then the chief Commiſſioner, the Lord Mordant, Sir John Baker, Dr. Darbyſhire Chancellor to the Biſhop, Dr. Story, Dr. Harpsfield, and others, being preſent.

Mr. Shiriff coming before them, declared the Manner of Farrer's Talk againſt the Lady Elizabeth. Bonner anſwered, Peradventure you took him worſe than he meant.

Yea my Lord, ſaid Dr. Story, if you knew the Man as I do, you would ſay there is not a better Catholick, nor an honeſter Man in the City of London.

Well, ſaid Mr. Shiriff, my Lord, ſhe is my gracious Lady and Miſtreſs, and it is not to be ſuffered that ſuch a Varlet as he is ſhould call ſo honourable a Princeſs by the Name of Jilt: And I ſaw yeſterday at Court that my Lord Cardinal Pool, meeting her in the Chamber of Preſence, kneeled down on his Knees and kiſſed her Hand; and I ſaw alſo that King Philip meeting her, made her ſuch Obeiſance, that his Knee touched the Ground; and then me-thinketh it were too much to ſuffer ſuch a Varlet as this is, to call her Jilt, and to wiſh them to hop headleſs that ſhall wiſh her Grace to enjoy the Poſſeſſion of the Crown, when God ſhall ſend it unto her, as in the Right of her Inheritance.

Yea? ſtay there quoth Bonner. When God ſendeth it unto her, let her enjoy it. But truly (ſaid he) the Man that ſpake the Words that you have reported, meant nothing againſt the Lady Elizabeth your Miſtreſs, and no more do we: But he like an honeſt and zealous Man feared the Alteration of Religion, which every good Man ought to fear: And therefore (ſaid Bonner) good Man go your ways home and report well of us to your Miſtreſs, and we will ſend for Farrer and rebuke him for raſh and undiſcreet Words, and we truſt he will not do the like again. And thus Shiriff came away, and Farrer had a Slap with a Fox Tail.

Queen Mary, being long ſick before, upon the 17th Day of November, in the Year aboveſaid, about three or four o'Clock in the Morning, yielded her Life to Nature, and her Kingdom to Queen Elizabeth her Siſter. Concerning whoſe Death, ſome ſay that ſhe died of a Tympany, ſome (by her much ſighing before her Death) ſuppoſed ſhe died of Thought and Sorrow. Whereupon her Council ſeeing her ſighing, and deſirous to know the Cauſe, to the end they might the more ready miniſter Conſolation unto her, feared, as they ſaid, that ſhe took that Thought for the King her Husband, who was gone from her. To whom ſhe anſwering, ſaid, Indeed that may be one Cauſe, but that is not the greateſt Wound that pierceth my oppreſſed Mind: But what that was ſhe would not expreſs to them.

Albeit afterward ſhe opened the Matter more plainly to Mr. Riſe and Mrs. Clarencius (if it be true that they told me, who heard it of Mr. Riſe himſelf,) who then being moſt familiar with her, told her, that they feared ſhe took Thought for King Philip's departing from her. Not that only, ſaid ſhe, but when I am dead and opened, you ſhall find Calice lying in my Heart, &c. And here an End of Queen Mary and of her Perſecution.

Of which Queen this truly may be affirmed, and left in Story for a perpetual Memorial or Epitaph for all Kings and Queens that ſhall ſucceed her, to be noted, That before her never was read in Story of any King or Queen of England ſince the Time of King Lucius, under whom in Time of Peace, by hanging, heading, burning and impriſoning, ſo much Chriſtian Blood, ſo many Engliſhmens Lives were ſpilled within this this Realm, as under the ſaid Queen Mary for the Space of four Years was to be ſeen, and I beſeech the Lord never may be ſeen hereafter.

The ſevere Puniſhment of God upon the Perſecutors of his People and Enemies to his Word, with ſuch alſo as have been Blaſphemers, Contemners, and Mockers of his Religion.

QUEEN Mary being dead and gone, we'll now leave her, and treat of thoſe under her who were the chief Inſtruments in this Perſecution, namely, the Biſhops and Clergy: Beginning firſt with Stephen Gardiner the Arch-perſecutor of Chriſt's Church, whom he took away about the midſt of the Queen's Reign; of whoſe poiſoned Life and ſtinking End, forſomuch as ſufficient hath been touched before, I need not here make Rehearſal thereof.

After him dropped others away alſo, ſome before the Death of Queen Mary and ſome after, as Morgan Biſhop of St. Davids, who ſitting upon the Condemnation of Biſhop Farrer, and unjuſtly uſurping his Room, not long after was ſtruck by God's Hand in ſuch a ſtrange Manner, that his Meat would not go down, but riſe and pick up again, ſometimes at his Mouth, ſometimes blown out at his Noſe, moſt nauſeous to behold, and ſo he continued till his Death.

Where note moreover that when Mr. Leyſon, being then Sheriff at Biſhop Farrer's Burning, had brought away the Cattle of the ſaid Biſhop from his Servant's Houſe named Matthew Harbottel, into his own Cuſtody, the Cattle coming into the Sheriff's Ground, divers of them would never eat Meat, but lay bellowing and roaring, and ſo died.

What a Stroke of God's Hand was brought upon the cruel Perſecutor of the holy Saints of God, Biſhop Thornton, Suffragan of Dover, who after he had exerciſed his cruel Tyranny upon ſo many pious Men at Canterbury, at length coming upon a Saturday from the Chapter-houſe at Canterbury to Bourne, and there upon Sunday following looking upon his Men playing at Bowls, fell ſuddenly in a Palſy, and ſo had to Bed, was willed to remember God: Yea ſo I do, ſaid he, and my Lord Cardinal too, &c.

After him ſucceeded another Biſhop or Suffragan, ordained by the aforeſaid Cardinal. It is reported that he had been Suffragan before to Bonner, who, not long after being made Biſhop or Suffragan of Dover, brake his Neck falling down a Pair of Stairs in the Cardinal's Chamber at Greenwich, as he had received the Cardinal's Bleſſing.

John Cooper, of the Age of 44 Years, dwelling at Watſam in the County of Suffolk, a Carpenter by Trade, a Man of a very honeſt Report and a good Houſekeeper, a Harbourer of Strangers that travell'd for Conſcience, and one that favoured Religion, and thoſe that were religious. This Man being at home, there came unto him one William Fenning, a Servingman, dwelling in the ſaid Town of Watſam, and underſtanding that the ſaid Cooper had a Couple of fair Bullocks, did deſire to buy them of him; Cooper told him that he was loth to ſell them, becauſe he had brought them up for his own Uſe, and if he ſhould ſell them, he then muſt be compelled to buy others, and ~~that~~ he would not do.

When Fenning ſaw he could not get them (for he had often try'd) he ſaid, he would ſit as much in his Light, and ſo departed, and went and accuſed him of High-Treaſon. The Words he was charged with were theſe, How he ſhould pray, if God would not take away Queen Mary, that then the Devil would take her away. Of theſe Words did this Fenning charge him before Sir Henry Doel, Knight (unto whom he was carried by Mr. Timperley of Hincleſam in Suffolk, and one Grimwood of Lowſham, Conſtable) which Words Cooper flatly denied; and ſaid he never ſpake them; but that did not avail.

Notwithſtanding that, he was arraigned at Bury before Sir Clement Higham, at a Lent Aſſize, and there this Fenning brought two vile Men, that witneſſed to the ſpeaking of the foreſaid Words, whoſe Names were Richard White of Watſam, and Grimwood of Hitcham, in the ſaid County of Suffolk. Whoſe Teſtimonies were received as Truth, although this good Man John Cooper had ſaid what he could to declare himſelf innocent therein, but to no purpoſe, God knows. For his Life was determined, as in the End appeared by Sir Clement Higham's Words, who ſaid he ſhould not eſcape, for an Example to all Hereticks, as indeed he thoroughly performed: For immediately he was ſentenced to be hanged, drawn, and quartered, which was accordingly performed ſoon after, to the great Grief of many a good Heart. Here good Cooper is bereft of his Life, and leaves behind him a Wife and nine Children, with Goods and Cattle to the Value of 300 Marks, all which Subſtance was taken away by the ſaid Sir Henry Doel, Sheriff, but his Wife and poor Children were left to the wide World in their Cloaths, and ſuffered not to enjoy one Penny of that they had ſore laboured for, unleſs they made Friends to buy it with Money of the ſaid Sheriff, ſo cruel and greedy was he and his Officers upon ſuch Things as were there left.

Now, this innocent Man being dead, his Goods ſpoiled, his Wife and Children left deſolate and comfortleſs, and all Things huſh'd, and nothing feared of any Part: Yet the Lord, who doth revenge the guiltleſs Blood, would not ſtill ſo ſuffer it, but at length began to puniſh it himſelf. For in the Harveſt following, as the ſaid Grimwood of Hitcham, one of the Witneſſes before-mentioned, was in his Labour ſtaking up a Goff of Corn, being in Health, and fearing no Danger, ſuddenly his Bowels fell out of his Body, and thus moſt miſerably he died: Such was the terrible Judgment of God, to ſhew his Diſpleaſure againſt his bloody Act, and to warn the reſt by theſe his Judgments to Repentance. The Lord grant us to honour the ſame, for his Mercies Sake. Amen.

Before in the Story of Mr. Bradford mention was made of Mr. Woodroffe, who being the Sheriff, uſed much to rejoice at the Death of the poor Saints of Chriſt, and ſo hard was he in his Office, that when Mr. Rogers was in the Cart going towards Smithfield, and in the Way his Children were brought unto him, the People making a Lane for them to come; Mr. Woodroffe had the Carman's Head broken, becauſe of his ſtopping his Cart. But what happened? He was not come out of his Office the Space of a Week, but he was ſtricken ſuddenly by the Hand of God, the one half of his Body in ſuch ſort, that he lay benumbed and Bed-rid, not able to move himſelf, but as he was lifted by others, and ſo he continued in that Infirmity the Space of ſeven or eight Years, till his dying Day.

Likewiſe touching Ralph Lardin, the Betrayer of George Eagles, it is thought of ſome, that the ſaid Ralph was afterwards attach'd himſelf, arraigned, and hanged. Who, being at the Bar, before the Judges, and a great Number of People, ſpake theſe Words: This is moſt juſtly fallen upon me, for that I have betrayed the innocent Blood of a good and juſt Man George Eagles, who was here condemned in the Time of Queen Mary's Reign through my Procurement, who ſold his Blood for a little Money.

Among other Perſecutors, there came alſo to our Hands the Cruelty of one Mr. Swingfield, an Alderman's Deputy about Thames-ſtreet, who hearing one

Angel's

Angel's Wife, a Midwife, that kept herself from their Popish Church, to be at the Labour of one Mrs. Walter at Crooked-lane End, took with him three more, and beset the House about, and took her and carried her to Bonner's Officers, big with Child, twenty-eight Weeks gone, who laid her in Lollard's-Tower; where, the same Day she came in, through Fear and a Fall at her taking, she was delivered of a Man-child, and could have no Women to assist her in that needful Time. Lying there five Weeks, she was delivered under Sureties by Friendship; and Dr. Story hearing thereof, charged her with Felony, and so sent her to Newgate. The Cause was, for that she had a Woman at her House that died in Labour, and the Child also, and so charged her with their Deaths.

But when Sir Roger Cholmley heard her tell her Tale, he delivered her; and not much more than ten Weeks after, if it were so long, died the said Mr. Swingfield, and the other three that came to take her.

Because some there be, and not a few, who have such great Devotion in setting up the Popish Mass, I would desire them to mark well the following Story. There was a certain Bailiff of Crowland in Lincolnshire, named Burton, who pretending an earnest Friendship to the Gospel in King Edward's Days, at least in outward Shew (although inwardly he was a Papist or Atheist, and well known to be a Man of a wicked and adulterous Life) set forth the King's Proceedings lustily, till the Time that King Edward was dead, and Queen Mary placed quietly in her Estate.

Then perceiving by the first Proclamation concerning Religion, how the World was like to turn, the Bailiff turned his Religion likewise; and so he moved the Parish to shew themselves the Queen's Friends, and to set up the Mass speedily. Nevertheless the most substantial of the Parish marvelling much at the Bailiff's Inconstancy, considering also his abominable Life, and having no great Devotion unto his Request, knowing moreover that their Duty and Friendship to the Queen stood not in setting up the Mass, spared to provide for it, as long as they might: But the Bailiff called on them still in the Queen's Name.

At last, when he saw his Words were not regarded, and purposing to win his Spurs by playing the Man in the Masses Behalf and the Queen's, he got him to Church upon a Sunday Morning, and when the Curate was beginning the English Service, according to the Statute set forth by King Edward the Sixth, the Bailiff cometh in a great Rage to the Curate, and saith, Sirrah, will you not say Mass? Buckle yourself to Mass you Knave, or by God's Blood I shall sheath my Dagger in your Shoulder. The poor Curate for Fear settled himself to the Mass.

Not long after this, the Bailiff rode from Home upon certain Business, accompanied with one of his Neighbours, and as they came riding together upon the Fennebank homeward again, a Crow sitting in a Willow-tree took her Flight over his Head, singing after her wonted Note, Knave, Knave, and withal let fall upon his Face, so that her Excrements ran from the Top of his Nose down to his Beard.

The poisoned Scent and Savour whereof so annoyed his Stomach, that he never ceased vomiting until he came home, wherewith his Heart was so sore and his Body so distempered, that for extreme Sickness he got him to Bed, and so lying, he was not able for the Stink in his Stomach and painful Vomiting, to receive any Relief of Meat or Drink, but cried out still, sorrowfully complaining of that Stink, and with no small Oaths cursed the Crow that poisoned him. To make short, he continued but a few Days, but with extreme Pain of vomiting and crying, he desperately died, without any Token of Repentance of his former Life.

Reported and testified for a Certainty, by divers of his Neighbours, both honest and credible Persons.

As James Abbes was led by the Sheriff towards his Martyrdom divers poor People stood in the Way, and asked their Alms. He then having no Money to give them, and desirous yet to distribute something amongst them, did pull off his Apparel saving his Shirt, and gave the same unto them, to some one Thing, to some another; in the giving whereof he exhorted them to be strong in the Lord, and as faithful Followers of Christ, to stand stedfast unto the Truth of the Gospel, which he (through God's Help) would then in their Sight seal and confirm with his Blood. While he was thus charitably occupied, and zealously instructing the People, a Servant of the Sheriff's going by and hearing him, cried out aloud unto them, and blasphemously said, believe him not good People, he is an Heretick and a Madman, out of his Wits, believe him not, for it is Heresy that he saith. And as the other continued in his godly Admonitions, so did this wicked Wretch still blow forth his blasphemous Exclamations, until they came unto the Stake where he should suffer. Unto which this constant Martyr was tied, and in the End cruelly burned, as in his Story more fully is already declared.

But immediately after the Fire was put unto him (such was the fearful Stroke of God's Justice upon this blasphemous Railer) that he was there presently, in the Sight of all the People, striken with a Frenzy, wherewith he had before most railingly charged that good Martyr of God, who in this furious Rage and Madness casting off his Shoes with all the rest of his Cloaths, cried out unto the People, and said, Thus did James Abbes the true Servant of God, who is saved, but I am damned. And thus ran he round about the Town of Bury, still crying out, that James Abbes was a good Man and saved, but he was damned.

The Sheriff then being amazed, caused him to be taken and tied in a dark House, and by Force compelled him again to put on his Cloaths thinking thereby within awhile to bring him to some Quietness. But he (all that notwithstanding) as soon as they were gone, continued in his former raging, and cast off his Cloaths, cried as he did before, James Abbes is the Servant of God and is saved, but I am damned.

At length he was tied at a Cart, and brought home unto his Master's House, and within half a Year or thereabouts, he being at the Point of Death, the Priest of the Parish was sent for: Who coming unto him, brought with him the Crucifix, and their housling Host of the Altar. Which when the poor Wretch saw, he cried out of the Priest, and defied all that Baggage, saying, that the Priest, with such others as he was, was the Cause of his Damnation, and that James Abbes was a good Man and saved. And so shortly after he died.

Dale the Promoter was eaten into his Body with Lice, and so died, as it was well known of many, and confessed also by his Fellow John Avales, before credible Witness.

Alexander the Keeper of Newgate, a cruel Enemy to those that lay there for Religion, died very miserably, being so swollen, that he was more like a Monster than a Man, and so rotten within, that no Man could abide the Smell of him. This cruel Wretch to hasten the poor Lambs to the Slaughter, would go to Bonner, Story, Cholmley, and others, crying out, Rid my Prison, rid my Prison. I am too much pestered with these Hereticks.

The Son of the said Alexander called James, having left unto him by his Father great Substanee, within three Years wasted all to nought: And when some marvelled how he spent these Goods so fast: O, said he, evil gotten, evil spent; and shortly after as he went in Newgate-Market, he fell down suddenly, and there wretchedly died.

John Peter, Son-in-law to this Alexander, and a horrible Blaſphemer of God, and no leſs cruel to the ſaid Priſoners, rotted away, and ſo moſt miſerably died. Who commonly when he would affirm any thing, were it true or falſe, uſed to ſay, If it be not true, I pray God I rot ere I die.

And what a notable Spectacle of God's revenging Judgment have we to conſider in Sir Ralph Ellerker who as he was deſirous to ſee the Heart taken out of Adam Damlyp, whom they moſt wrongfully put to Death: So ſhortly after the ſaid Sir Ralph Ellerker being ſlain by the Frenchmen, they, after they had cut off his Privy Members, would not ſo leave him, before they might ſee his Heart cut out of his Body.

Stephen Gardiner, hearing of the pitiful End of Judge Hales after he had drowned himſelf, taking Occaſion thereby, called the following and Profeſſion of the Goſpel a Doctrine of Deſperation. But as Judge Hales never fell into that Inconvenience before he had conſented to Popery: So whoſo well conſidereth the End of Dr. Pendleton (who at his Death full ſore repented that ever he had yielded to the Doctrine of the Papiſts, as he did) and likewiſe the miſerable End of the moſt part of the Papiſts beſides, and eſpecially of Stephen Gardiner himſelf (who after ſo long profeſſing the Doctrine of Popery, when there came a Biſhop to him on his Death-bed, and put him in Remembrance of Peter denying his Maſter: He anſwering again, ſaid, That he had denied with Peter, but never repented with Peter; and ſo both ſtinkingly and unrepentedly died) will ſay, as Stephen Gardiner alſo himſelf gave an evident Example of the ſame to all Men, to underſtand that Popery rather is a Doctrine of Deſperation, procuring the Vengeance of Almighty God to them that willfully do cleave unto it.

And thus much concerning thoſe Perſecutors.

The perſecuting Clergy who died in the Time of Perſecution, we ſhall take no Notice of, but thoſe who remained after the Death of Queen Mary were deprived, and committed to ſeveral Priſons.

It happened in the firſt Year of Queen Elizabeth, that one William Mauldon was bound Servant to one Mr. Hugh Aparry then a Wheat-taker for the Queen, dwelling at Greenwich. Who being newly come to him, and having no Book there to look upon, looked about the Houſe, and found a Primmer in Engliſh, wherein he read in a Winter's Evening. While he was reading, there ſate one John Apowel that had been a ſerving Man, about thirty Years of Age, born toward Wales, whom the ſaid Mr. Hugh gave Meat and Drink unto, till ſuch Time as he could get a Service. And as William Mauldon read in the Book, the ſaid John Apowel mocked him after every Word, with contrary Gauds and flouting Words unreverently, inſomuch that he could no longer abide him for Grief of Heart, but turned to him and ſaid, John, take heed what thou doſt; thou doſt not mock me, but thou mockeſt God: For in mocking of his Word, thou mockeſt him; and this is the Word of God, tho' I be ſimple that read it; and therefore beware what thou doſt.

Then Mauldon fell to reading again, and ſtill he proceeded on in his mocking; and when Maulden had read certain Engliſh Prayers, in the End he read, Lord have Mercy upon us, Chriſt have Mercy upon us, &c.

And as Mauldon was reciting theſe Words, the other with a Start ſuddenly ſaid, Lord have Mercy upon me.

With that Mauldon anſwered and ſaid, what aileſt thou John?

He ſaid, I was afraid.

Whereof waſt thou afraid ſaid Mauldon?

Nothing now, ſaid the other: And ſo he would not tell him. After this, when Mauldon and he went to Bed, Mauldon asked him what he was afraid of.

He ſaid, when you read, Lord have Mercy upon us, &c. methought the Hair of my Head ſtood upright, with a great Fear which came upon me.

Then ſaid Mauldon, John thou may'ſt ſee, the evil Spirit could not abide that Chriſt ſhould have Mercy upon us. Well John, ſaid Mauldon, repent and amend thy Life, for God will not be mocked. If we mock and jeſt at his Word, he will puniſh us.

Alſo you uſe ribaldry Words, and ſwearing very much: Therefore for God's Sake, John, amend thy Life. So I will (ſaid he) by the Grace of God; I pray God I may. Amen, ſaid the other, with other Words, and ſo went to Bed.

On the Morrow, about eight of the Clock in the Morning, John came running down out of his Chamber in his Shirt into the Hall, and wreſtled with his Miſtreſs as if he would have thrown her down. Whereat ſhe ſhrieked out, and her Servants holp her, and took him by Strength and carried him up into his Bed, and there bound him; for they perceived plainly that he was out of his right Mind.

After that, as he lay, almoſt a Day and a Night his Tongue never ceaſed, but he cried out of the Devil of Hell, and his Words were ever ſtill, O the Devil of Hell; now the Devil of Hell; I would ſee the Devil of Hell; there he is, there he goeth, &c.

Thus he lay without Amendment about ſix Days, that his Maſter and all the Family being weary of the Noiſe, agreed with the Keepers of Bedlam, and gave a Piece of Money, and ſent him thither.

This is a terrible Example to you that be Mockers of God: Therefore repent and amend, leſt the Vengeance of God fall upon you in like Manner. Witneſs hereof William Mauldon of Newington.

The ſame William Mauldon chanced afterwards to dwell at a Town ſix Miles from London called Walthamſtow, where his Wife taught young Children to read, which was about the Year of our Lord, 1563, and the fourth Year of Queen Elizabeth's Reign. Unto this School, amongſt other Children, came one Benfield's Daughter, named Dennis, about the Age of twelve Years.

As theſe Children were talking together, they happened among other Talk (as the Nature of Children is to be buſy with many Things) to fall into Communication of God, and to reaſon among themſelves, after their childiſh Diſcretion, what he ſhould be. Some anſwered one Thing, and ſome another. Among whom, when one of the Children had ſaid, He was a good old Father; but Dennis Benfield ſaid, He is an old doting Fool.

What wretched and blaſphemous Words were theſe ye hear. Now mark what followed.

When Mauldon heard of theſe abominable Words of the Girl, he deſired his Wife to correct her for the ſame; which was appointed to be done the next Day; but when the Morrow came, her Mother would needs ſend her to the Market to London, the Girl greatly intreated her Mother that ſhe might not go. However, through her Mother's Compulſion ſhe was forced to go. And what happened? Her Buſineſs being done at London, as ſhe was returning again homeward, and being a little paſt Hackney, ſuddenly ſhe was ſo ſtruck, that all the one Side of her was black, and ſhe ſpeechleſs. Whereupon ſhe was carried back to Hackney, and there the ſame Night died. Witneſs of the ſame Story William Mauldon and his Wife, alſo Benfield her Father, and Mother.

A terrible Example (no doubt) both to Old and Young, what it is for Children to blaſpheme the Lord their God, and what it is for Parents to ſuffer their young Ones to grow up in ſuch blaſphemous Blindneſs, and not to nurture them betimes in the Rudiments of the Chriſtian Catechiſm, to know firſt their Creation, and then their Redemption in Chriſt our Saviour, to fear the Name of God, and to reverence his Majeſty. For elſe what do they deſerve but to be taken away by Death, who contemptuouſly deſpiſe him, of whom they take the Benefit of Life?

And therefore let all young Maids, Boys, and young Men, take Example by this wretched Creature, not only not to blaſpheme the ſacred Majeſty of the omnipotent God their Creator, but alſo not once to take his Name in vain, according as they are taught in his Commandments.

Secondly, let all Fathers, Godfathers, and Godmothers, take this for a Warning, to ſee to the Inſtruction and catechiſing of their Children, for whom they have bound themſelves in Promiſe both to God and to his Church. Which if the Father and Godfather, the Mother and Godmothers had done to this young Girl, verily it may be thought this Deſtruction had not fallen upon her.

Thirdly, let all blind Atheiſts, Epicures, Mammoniſts, Belly-gods of this World, and Sons of Belial, Hypocrites, Infidels, and Mockers of Religion, who ſay in their Hearts, there is no God, learn alſo hereby not only what God is, and what he is able to do, but alſo in this miſerable Creature here puniſhed in this World, behold what ſhall likewiſe fall on them in the World to come, unleſs they will be warned betimes by ſuch Examples as the Lord God doth give them.

Fourthly and laſtly, Here may alſo be a Spectacle for all them who be Blaſphemers and abominable Swearers, or rather Tearers of God, abuſing his glorious Name in ſuch a contemptuous and deſpiteful Manner as they uſed to do: Whom if neither the Command of God, nor the Calling of the Preacher, nor Remorſe of Conſcience, nor Rule of Reaſon, nor their withering Age, nor hoary Hairs will admoniſh, yet let theſe terrible Examples of God's ſtrict Judgment ſomewhat move them to take heed to themſelves. For if this young Maiden, who was not full twelve Years old, for her unreverent ſpeaking of God did not eſcape the Stroke of God's terrible Hand, what then have they to look for, who being Men grown in Years, and often warned by the Preacher, yet ceaſe not continually with their blaſphemous Oaths, not only to abuſe his Name, but alſo moſt contumelioufly to tear him (as it were) and all his Parts to Pieces?

Did not Thomas Arundel, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, give Sentence againſt the Lord Cobham, and died himſelf before him, being ſo mortify'd in his Tongue, that he could neither ſwallow nor ſpeak for ſome Time before his Death?

William Swallow, the cruel Tormentor of George Eagles, was ſhortly after ſo plagued of God, that all the Hairs of his Head, and Nails of his Fingers and Toes went off, his Eyes almoſt cloſed up, that he could ſcarce ſee.

And foraſmuch as Examples many times work effectually in the Minds and Memories of Men, I think it not improper in this Place to ſet down a terrible Example of God's Vengeance againſt a notorious wicked Man, as a wholſome Leſſon and Admonition to all ill Livers, to leave their inordinate Rioting and Drunkenneſs, and Profaneneſs of Life. And as the Story is true, ſo is the Name of the Party not unknown, being called Chriſtopher Landeſdale, dwelling in Hackney in Middleſex, in the Year 1568. The Order of whoſe Life, and Manner of his Death being worthy to be noted, is as followeth.

This Landeſdale being married to an ancient Woman yet living, having by her both Goods and Lands, notwithſtanding lived long in filthy Whoredom with a younger Woman, by whom he had two Children, a Son and a Daughter, and kept them in his Houſe unto the Day of his Death. Alſo when he ſhould have been in ſerving God on the Sabbath-Day, he uſed to walk or ride about his Fields, and ſeldom he or any of his Houſe came to Church after the Engliſh Service was again received. Beſides this, he was a great Swearer, and a great Drunkard, and had great Delight alſo in making other Men drunk, and would have them whom he had made Drunkards, to call him Father, and he would call them his Sons; and of theſe Sons, by Report, he had above forty. And if he had ſeen one that would drink freely, he would mark him, and ſpend his Money with him liberally in Ale or Wine, but moſt in Wine, to make him the ſooner drunk. Theſe bleſſed Sons of his ſhould have great Cheer oftentimes, both at his own Houſe and at Taverns: And not long before his Death he was ſo beaſtly drunk in a Tavern over-againſt his Door, that he fell down in the Tavern Yard, and could not riſe alone, but lay grovelling till he was holpen up, and ſo carried home.

This Father of Drunkards, as he was a great Feaſter of the rich and wealthy of Hackney, and others; ſo his poor Neighbours and poor Tenants fared little the better for him, except it were with ſome broken Meat, which after his Feaſts his Wife would carry and ſend unto them, or ſome Alms given at his Door.

Beſides all this, he did much Injury to his poor Neighbours, in oppreſſing the Commons near about him, which was a ſpecial Relief unto them, ſo that his Cattle did eat up all without Pity or Mercy.

There chanced after this, about two Years before he died, a poor Man, being ſick of the bloody Flux, for Weakneſs to lie down in a Ditch of the ſaid Landeſdale's, not a Stone's Caſt from his Houſe, where he had a little Straw brought him. Notwithſtanding the ſaid Landeſdale had back Houſes and Barns enough to have laid him in, but would not ſhew him ſo much Pity. And thus poor Lazarus lay there Night and Day, about ſix Weeks ere he died.

Certain good Neighbours hearing of this, procured Things neceſſary for his Relief, but he was ſo far ſpent, that he could not be recovered; who lay broiling in the hot Sun, with a horrible Smell, moſt pitiful to behold.

This poor Man, a little before he died, deſired to be moved to another Ditch more ſhady. Whereupon one of the Neighbours coming to Landeſdale's Wife for a Bundle of Straw for him to ſit upon, ſhe requir'd to have him removed to Newington Side, becauſe, ſhe ſaid, if he ſhould die, it would be very far to carry him to the Church.

Beſides this, there was a Marriage in this Landeſdale's Houſe, and the Gueſts that came to the Marriage gave the poor Man Money as they came and went by him, but Landeſdale diſdaining to contribute any any Relief unto him, notwithſtanding that he had promiſed to Mr. Searles, one of the Queen's Guard (who had more Pity of him) to miniſter to him Things neceſſary.

To be ſhort, the next Day poor Lazarus departed this Life, and was buried in Hackney Church-yard; upon whom Landeſdale did not ſo much as beſtow a winding Sheet towards his Burial. And thus much concerning the End of poor Lazarus. Now let us hear what became of the rich Glutton.

About two Years after, the ſaid Landeſdale being full of Drink (as his Cuſtom was) came riding in great haſte from London on St. Andrew's Day, Anno 1568. and coming by a Ditch, tumbled headlong into it. Some ſay that the Horſe fell upon him, but that is not like. This is true, the Horſe, more ſober than the Maſter, came home, leaving his Maſter behind him. Whether he brake his Neck with the Fall, or was drowned (for the Water was ſcarce a Foot deep) it is uncertain; but certain it is, that he was there found dead.

The Neighbours hearing of the Death of this Man, and conſidering the Manner thereof, ſaid it was juſtly fallen upon him, that as he ſuffered the poor Man to lie and die in the Ditch near unto him, ſo his End was to die in a Ditch likewiſe. And thus haſt thou in this Story (Chriſtian Brother and Reader) the true Image of a rich Glutton and poor Lazarus ſet out before thine Eyes: Whereby we have all to learn, what happeneth in the End to ſuch voluptuous Epicures and Atheiſts, who being void of all Senſe of Religion, and Fear of God, yield themſelves over to all Prophanity of Life, neither regarding any Honeſty at home, nor ſhewing any Mercy to their needy Neighbours abroad.

The Puniſhments of them that be dead, be wholeſome Documents to them that be alive. And therefore as the Story above exemplified may ſerve to warn all wicked Perſons; ſo by this that followeth, I would wiſh all Gentlemen to take good Heed and Admonition betime, to leave their outragious ſwearing and blaſpheming of the Lord their God.

In the Time and Reign of King Edward, there was in Cornwal a certain luſty young Gentleman, who rode in Company with other Gentlemen, together with their Servants, being about the Number of twenty Horſemen. Among whom this Yonker entering into Talk, began to ſwear moſt horribly, blaſpheming the Name of God, with other ribaldry Words beſides. Unto whom one of the Company not able to abide the hearing of ſuch blaſphemous Abomination, in gentle Words ſpeaking to him, ſaid, he ſhould give Anſwer and Account for every idle Word.

The Gentleman offended thereat, ſaid, Why takeſt thou Thought for me? Take thought for thy winding Sheet. Well (quoth the other) amend, for Death giveth no Warning? for as ſoon cometh a Lamb's Skin to the Market, as an old Sheep's. God's wounds, ſaith he, care not thou for me; raging ſtill after his Manner worſe and worſe in Words, till at length paſſing on their Journey, they came riding over a great Bridge, ſtanding over a Piece of an Arm of the Sea. Upon which Bridge this Gentleman-ſwearer ſpurred his Horſe in ſuch ſort, as he ſprang clean over with the Man on his Back. Who as he was going, cried ſaying, Horſe and Man, and all to the Devil. This terrible Story happening in a Town in Cornwal, I would have been afraid amongſt theſe Stories here to recite, were it not that he, who was then both Reprehender of his Swearing, and Witneſs of his Death, is yet alive, and now a Miniſter, named Heynes. Beſides this, Biſhop Ridley, then Biſhop of London, preached and uttered even the ſame Fact and Example at Paul's Croſs. The Name of the Gentleman I could by no Means obtain of the Party and Witneſs aforeſaid, for Dread of thoſe (as he ſaid) which yet remain of his Kindred in the ſaid Country.

Foreign Examples.

Hoimeiſter the great Arch-papiſt, and chief Maſterpillar of the Pope's falling Church, as he was in his Journey toward the Council of Ratisbon, to diſpute againſt the Defenders of Chriſt's Goſpel, ſuddenly in his Journey, not far from Ulm, was prevented by the Stroke of God's Hand, and there miſerably died, with horrible roaring and crying out.

Another Example we have of one Arnoldus Bomelius, a young Man of the Univerſity of Lovane, well commended for his flouriſhing Wit and Ripeneſs of Learning, who ſo long as he favoured the Cauſe of the Goſpel, and took part with the ſame againſt the Enemies of the Truth, he proſpered and went well forward; but after he drew to the Company of Tyleman, Maſter of the Pope's College in Lovane, and framed himſelf after the Rule of his unſavoury Doctrine, that is, to ſtand in Fear and Doubt of his Juſtification, and to work his Salvation by Merits and Deeds of the Law, he began more and more to grow in doubtful Deſpair and Diſcomfort of Mind; as the Nature of that Doctrine is, utterly to pluck away a Man's Mind from all Certainty and true Liberty of Spirit, to a ſervile Doubtfulneſs, full of Diſcomfort and Bondage of Soul.

Thus the young Man ſeduced and perverted thro' this blind Doctrine of Ignorance and Dubitation, fell into a great Agony of Mind, wandering and wreſtling in himſelf a long Time till at length being overcome with Deſpair, and not having in the Popiſh Doctrine wherewith to raiſe up his Soul, he went out of the City on a Time to walk, accompanied with three other Students of the ſame Univerſity, his ſpecial Familiars. Who as they returned home again, Arnoldus for Wearineſs, as it ſeemed, ſate down by a Spring ſide to reſt himſelf: The others thinking no ill, went forward, and in the mean Time Arnoldus ſuddenly took out his Dagger, and ſtruck himſelf into the Body.

His Fellows ſeeing him ſhrinking down, and the Fountain to be coloured with the Blood which iſſued out of the Wound, came running to him, took him up, and brought him into an Houſe next at Hand, and there exhorted him, as well as they could to repent his Fact; who then by outward Geſture ſeemed to give ſome ſhew of Repentance. Notwithſtanding, he eſpying one of his Friends there buſy about him to have a Knife hanging at his Girdle, violently plucked out the Knife, and with main Force ſtabbed himſelf to the Heart.

Joannes Sleidanus in his 23d Book giveth a Relation of Cardinal Creſentius, the chief Preſident and Moderator of the Council of Trent Anno 1552. The Story of whom is certain, the Thing that happened to him was ſtrange and notable, Example of him may be profitable to others, ſuch as have Grace to be warned by other Mens Evils. The Narration is this.

The twenty-fifth Day of March in the Year aforeſaid, Creſentius the Pope's Legate, and Vicegerent in the Council of Trent, was ſitting all the Day long until dark Night, in writing Letters to the Pope. After his Labour, when Night was come, thinking to refreſh himſelf, he began to riſe; and at his riſing, behold there appeared to him a mighty black Dog, of a huge Bigneſs, his Eyes flaming with Fire, and his Ears hanging low down well near to the Ground, to enter in, and ſtrait to come towards him, and ſo to couch under the Table. The Cardinal not a little amazed at the Sight thereof, ſomewhat recovering himſelf, called to his Servants, who were in the outward Chamber next by, to bring in a Candle, and to ſeek for the Dog. But when the Dog could not be found, neither there, nor in any other Chamber about, the Cardinal thereupon ſtruck with a ſudden Conceit of Mind, immediately fell into ſuch a Sickneſs, whereof his Phyſicians, which he had about him, with all their Art and Induſtry could not cure him. And ſo in the Town of Verona died this Popiſh Cardinal, the Pope's holy Legate, and Preſident of this Council wherein his Purpoſe was (as Sleidan ſaith) to recover and heal again the whole Authority and Doctrine of the Romiſh See, and to ſet it up for ever.

There were in this Council, beſides the Pope's Legates and Cardinal of Trent, 24 Biſhops, Doctors of Divinity 62. And thus was the End of that Popiſh Council, by the provident Hand of the Almighty, diſpatched and brought to nought.

This Council of Trent, being then diſſolved by the Death of this Cardinal, was afterwards notwithſtanding recollected again about the Year of our Lord 1562, againſt the erroneous Proceedings of which Council other Writers there be that ſay enough. So much as pertaineth only to Story, I thought hereunto to add concerning two filthy adulterous Biſhops to the ſaid Council belonging, of whom the one, haunting to an honeſt Wife, was ſlain by the juſt Stroke of God with a Boreſpear. The other Biſhop, whoſe Haunt was to creep thorow a Window, in the ſame Window was ſubtilly taken and hanged in a Gin laid for him of purpoſe, and ſo contrived, that in the Morning he was ſeen openly in the Street hanging out of the Window, to the Wonder of all that paſſed by.

In the City of Antwerp lived one named John Vander Warſe, of good Eſtimation amongſt the Chief in Antwerp. Who, as he was of Nature cruel, ſo was he of Judgment perverſe and corrupt, and a ſore Perſecutor of Chriſt's Flock, with Greedineſs ſeeking and ſhedding innocent Blood, and had drowned divers good Men and Women in the Water, for which he was much commended of the bloody Generation. Of ſome he was called a Blood-hound or bloody Dog. Of others he was called * Shilpad, that is to ſay, Shel-toad, for that he being a ſhort grundy, and of little Stature, did ride commonly with a great broad Hat, as a Churl of the Country.

This Man being weary of his Office (wherein he had continued above 20 Years) he gave it over; and becauſe he was now grown rich and wealthy, he intended to paſs the Reſidue of his Life in Pleaſure and Quietneſs.

About the ſecond Year after, he came to Antwerp to the Feaſt called our Lady's Oumegang, to make merry; which Feaſt is uſually kept on the Sunday following the Aſſumption of our Lady. The ſame Day about four of the Clock in the Afternoon, he being well loaden with Wine, rode homewards in his Waggon, with his Wife and a Gentlewoman waiting on her, and his Fool. As ſoon as the Waggon was come without the Gate of the City, upon the wooden Bridge being at that Time made for a Shift with Rails or Barrers on both Sides for more Surety of the Paſſengers (above half the Height of a Man) the Horſes ſtood ſtill, and would by no Means go forward, whatſoever the Guider of the Waggon could do.

Then he cried out to him that guided the Waggon, ſaying, Ride on, in the Name of a thouſand Devils, ride on. The poor Man anſwered, that he could not make the Horſes go forward. By and by, while they were yet thus talking, ſuddenly aroſe, as it were a wighty Whirlwind, with a terrible Noiſe (the Weather being very fair, and no Wind ſtirring before) and toſt the Waggon into the Town-ditch, the Ropes whereat the Horſes had been tied being broken aſunder in ſuch a Manner as if they had been cut wirh a ſharp Knife, the Waggon alſo being caſt upſide down, by the Fall whereof he both broke his Neck and was ſmother'd in the Mire. His Wife was taken up alive but died in three Days after. But the Gentlewoman and the Fool, by God's Providence, were preſerved from Harm. The Fool hearing the People ſay his Maſter was dead, ſaid, And was not I dead, was not I dead too? This was done in the Year 1553. Witneſs hereof not only the Printer of the ſame Story in Dutch, dwelling then in Antwerp, whoſe Name was Francis Fraet, a good Man, and afterwards for Hatred put to Death by the Papiſts, but alſo divers Dutchmen, and a great Number of Engliſh Merchants, who were then at Antwerp.

In the Year 1565, there was in the Town of Gaunt in Flanders, one William de Wever, accuſed and impriſoned by the Provoſt of St. Peter's in Gaunt (who had in his Cloyſter a Priſon and a Place of Execution) and the Day when the ſaid William was called to the Place of Judgment, the Provoſt ſent for Mr. Giles Brackleman, principal Advocate of the Council of Flanders, and Burgh-maſter and Judge of St. Peter's in Gaunt, with other Rulers of the Town of Gaunt, to ſit in Judgment upon him, and as they ſat in Judgment, Mr. Giles Brackleman reaſoned with the ſaid William de Wever upon divers Articles of his Faith. One whereof was,

Why he deny'd that it was lawful to pray to Saints; and he anſwer'd, For three Cauſes; the one was, That they were but Creatures, and not the Creator. The ſecond was,

That if he ſhould call upon them, the Lord did both ſee it and hear it; and therefore he durſt give the Glory to none other but God. The third and chief Cauſe was,

That the Creator had commanded in his holy Word to call upon him in Trouble, unto which Commandment he durſt neither add nor take from.

He alſo demanded, whether he did not believe that there was a Purgatory which he ſhould go into after this Life, where every one ſhould be purify'd and cleanſed.

He anſwered, That he had read over the whole Bible, and could find no ſuch Place, but the Death of Chriſt was his Purgatory: With many other Queſtions, proceeding after their Order, till he came to pronounce his Condemnation. But ere it was read, he was ſo ſtruck with a Palſy, that his Mouth was almoſt drawn up to his Ear, and ſo he fell down, the reſt of the Lords ſtanding before him, that the People might not ſee him: And the People were deſired to depart. Then they took him up, and carry'd him to his Houſe, where he died the very next Day. Yet notwithſtanding all this, they burnt William de Wever within three Hours after.

About the Borders of Suevia in Germany, there was a Monaſtery of ciſtercian Monks, founded in the Days of Pope Innocent the ſecond by a noble Baron, about the Year 1110. This Cell, in Proceſs of Time was enlarged with more ample Poſſeſſions, finding many and great Benefactors liberally contributing to the ſame; as Emperors, Dukes, and rich Barons.

The Earls of Montford had beſtowed upon it great Privileges, upon this Condition, that they ſhould receive with free Hoſpitality any Stranger both Horſeman or Footman, for one Night's Lodging, whoſoever came. But this Hoſpitality did not long ſo continue, through a ſubtle and deviliſh Device of one of the Monks, who took upon him to play the Part of the Devil, ratling and raging in his Chains, near the Room where the Strangers lay, in a frightful Manner, in the Night-time to terrify the Gueſts; by reaſon whereof no Stranger nor Traveller durſt there abide, and thus he continued for a long Time.

At length it happened, that one of the Earls of Montfort, a Benefactor to that Abbey, coming to the Monaſtery, was there lodged; when Night came, and the Earl at reſt, the Monk after his wonted Manner began to play the Devil. There was Stamping, Ramping, Spitting of Fire, Roaring, Thundering, Bouncing of Boards, and Rattling of Chains, enough to make a Man ſtark mad. The Earl hearing the ſudden Noiſe, and peradventure afraid at firſt, tho' he had not the Art of Conjuring, yet taking a good Heart, and running to his Sword, he laid about him ſo well, and followed ſtill the Noiſe of the Devil ſo cloſe, that at laſt the jeſting Devil was ſlain by the Earl in earneſt.

* Shilpad, a kind of Shelfiſh, faſhioned like a Toad, with a hard and a broad Shell upon his Back.

The Conference had and begun at Weſtminſter the laſt of March, upon certain Articles of Religion propoſed, and alſo of the breaking up of the ſame, at the firſt Beginning of Queen Elizabeth.

SO it pleaſed the Queen's moſt excellent Majeſty, having heard of the Diverſity of Opinions in certain Matters of Religion amongſt ſundry of her loving Subjects, and being very deſirous to have the ſame reduced to ſome Godly and Chriſtian Concord (by the Advice of the Lords and others of the Privy Council, as well for the Satisfaction of Perſons doubtful, as alſo for the Knowledge of the very Truth in certain Matters of Difference) to have a convenient choſen Number of the beſt learned of either Part, and to confer together their Opinions and Reaſons, and thereby to come to ſome good and charitable Agreement. And hereupon by her Majeſty's Commandment, certain of her Privy Council declared this Purpoſe to the Archbiſhop of York (being alſo one of the ſame Privy Council) and required him that he would impart the ſame to ſome of the Biſhops, and to make Choice of eight, nine, or ten of them, and that there ſhould be the like Number named of the other Part. And further alſo they declared to him (as then was ſuppoſed) what the Matter ſhould be. And as for the Time, it was thought meet to be as ſoon as poſſible might be agreed upon. And then after certain Days paſt, it was ſignified by the ſaid Archbiſhop, that there were appointed, by ſuch of the Biſhops to whom he had imparted this Matter, nine Perſons, that is to ſay, five Biſhops and four Doctors. The Names of whom here follow under written.

The Papiſts.	The Proteſtants.
The Biſhop of Wincheſter.	Dr. Scory, Bp. of Chicheſter.

Who were content at the Queen's Command, to ſhew their Opinions, and, as the ſaid Archbiſhop termed it, render Account of their Faith in thoſe Matters which were mentioned, and that eſpecially in Writing, although he ſaid, he thought the ſame ſo determined, as there was no Cauſe to diſpute upon them. The Matter they were to talk upon, was comprehended in theſe three Propoſitions hereunder ſpecify'd.

1. It is againſt the Word of God, and the Cuſtom of the antient Church, to uſe a Tongue unknown to the People, in Common Prayer and Adminiſtration of the Sacraments.
2. Every Church hath Authority to appoint, take away, and change Ceremonies and eccleſiaſtical Rites, ſo the ſame be to Edification.
3. It cannot be proved by the Word of God, that there is in the Maſs offered up a Sacrifice propitiatory for the Quick and the Dead.

It was hereupon fully reſolved by the Queen's Majeſty, with the Advice aforeſaid, that according to their Deſire, it ſhould be in Writing on both Parts, for avoiding of much Altercation in Words; and that the ſaid Biſhops would, becauſe they were in Authority of Degree ſuperior, firſt declare their Opinions in the Matter, with their Reaſons in Writing. And the other Number, being alſo nine Men of good Degree in Schools, and ſome having been in Dignity in the Church of England, if they had any thing to ſay to the contrary, ſhould the ſame Day declare their Opinions in like Manner, and ſo each of them ſhould deliver their Writings to the other, to be conſidered what were to be improved therein, and the ſame to declare again in Writing at ſome other convenient Day, and the like Order to be kept in all the reſt of the Matters. All this was fully agreed upon with the Archbiſhop of York, and ſo alſo ſignify'd to both Parties.

And immediately hereupon divers of the Nobility and States of the Realm underſtanding that ſuch a Meeting and Conference was intended, concerning ſuch Matters as were to be confirmed by Parliament according to the Deciſion of theſe learned Doctors; they petition'd her Majeſty that the Parties of this Conference might be put to read their Aſſertions in the Engliſh Tongue, and that in the Preſence of them of the Nobility and others of her Parliament-Houſe, for the better Satisfaction and enabling of their own Judgments, to treat and conclude of ſuch Laws as might depend hereupon.

This alſo, being thought very reaſonable, was ſignify'd to both Parties, and ſo fully agreed upon, and the Day appointed for the firſt Meeting to be on Friday in the Forenoon, being the laſt Day of March, at Weſtminſter Church. Where were preſent by the Queen's Command, the Lords and others of the Privy Council, and a great Part of the Nobility, both to honour and ſee good Order in the Conference. And notwithſtanding this former Order appointed, and conſented unto by both Parties, yet the Biſhop of Wincheſter and his Colleagues alledged, they had miſtaken that their Aſſertions and Reaſons ſhould be written, and ſo only recited out of the Book, ſaying, their Book was not then ready written, but they were ready to argue and diſpute, and therefore they would for that Time repeat in Speech, that which they had to ſay to the firſt Probation.

This Variation from the former Order, and eſpecially from that which themſelves had by the ſaid Archbiſhop in Writing before required, adding thereto the Reaſon of the Apoſtle, that to contend with Words is profitable to nothing, but to the Subverſion of the Hearer, ſeemed to the Queen's Council ſomewhat ſtrange, and yet was it permitted without any great Reprehenſion, becauſe they excuſed themſelves with miſtaking the Order, and agreed that they would not fail but put it in Writing, and, according to the former Order, delivered it to the other Part; and ſo the ſaid Biſhop of Wincheſter and his Colleagues, appointed Doctor Cole, Dean of St. Pauls, to be the Utterer of their Minds; who partly by Speech only, and partly by reading of Authorities written, and at certain Times being informed of his Colleagues what to ſay, made a Declaration of their Meanings, and their Reaſons to their firſt Propoſition: Which being ended, they were asked by the Privy Council if any of them had any more to be ſaid, and they ſaid No. So as the other Part was licenſed to ſhew their Minds, which they did according to the firſt Order, exhibiting all that which they meant to be propounded, in a Book written, which, after a Prayer and Invocation, made moſt humbly to Almighty God for the enduing of them with his Holy Spirit, and a Proteſtation alſo to ſtand to the Doctrine of the catholick Church built upon the Scriptures, and the Doctrine of the Prophets and the Apoſtles, was diſtinctly read by one Robert Horne, Batchelor in Divinity, late Dean of Durham, and after Biſhop of Winchester. The Copy of which their Proteſtation here followeth, according as it was by him penned and exhibited, with their Preface alſo before the ſame.

FOraſmuch as it is thought good unto the Queen's moſt excellent Majeſty (unto whom in the Lord all Obedience is due) that we ſhould declare our Judgment in Writing upon certain Propoſitions; we, as becometh us to do herein, moſt gladly obey.

Seeing that Chriſt is our only Maſter, whom the Father hath commanded us to hear; and ſeeing alſo his Word is the Truth, from which it is not lawful for us to depart, no not one Hair's Breadth, and againſt which (as the Apoſtle ſaith) we can do nothing; we do in all Things ſubmit ourſelves unto this Truth, and do proteſt that we will affirm nothing againſt the ſame.

And foraſmuch as we have for our Mother the true and catholick Church of Chriſt, which is grounded upon the Doctrine of the Apoſtles and Prophets, and is of Chriſt the Head in all Things governed; we do reverence her Judgment, we obey her Authority as becometh Children; and we do devoutly profeſs, and in all Points follow the Faith which is contained in the three Creeds, that is to ſay, of the Apoſtles, of the Council of Nice, and of Athanaſius.

And ſeeing that we never departed, neither from the Doctrine of God which is contained in the holy canonical Scriptures, nor yet from the Faith of the true and catholick Church of Chriſt; but have preached truly the Word of God, and have ſincerely miniſtred the Sacraments according to the Inſtitution of Chriſt, unto which our Doctrine and Faith the moſt part alſo of our Adverſaries did ſubſcribe not many Years paſt (although now as unnatural they are revolted from the ſame) we deſire that they render Account of their Backſliding, and ſhew ſome Cauſe wherefore they do not only reſiſt that Doctrine which they have before profeſſed, but alſo perſecute the ſame by all Means they can. We do not doubt, but through the Equity of the Queen's moſt excellent Majeſty, we ſhall in theſe Diſputations be treated more gently than in Years late paſt, when we were handled moſt unjuſtly and ſcantly after the common Manner of Men. As for the Judgment of the whole Controverſy, we refer unto the moſt holy Scriptures, and the catholick Church of Chriſt (whoſe Judgment unto us ought to be moſt ſacred:) notwithſtanding by the Catholick Church we underſtand not the Romiſh Church, whereunto our Adverſaries attribute ſuch Reverence, but that which St. Auguſtine and other Fathers affirm, ought to be ſought in the Holy Scriptures, and which is governed and led by the Spirit of Chriſt.

It is againſt the Word of God, and the Cuſtom of the Primitive Church, to uſe a Tongue unknown to the People in common Prayers and Adminiſtration of the Sacraments.

By theſe Words (the Word of God) we mean only the written Word of God, or canonical Scriptures.

And by the Cuſtom of the Primitive Church, we mean the Order moſt generally uſed in the Church for the Space of 500 Years after Chriſt, in which Times lived the moſt notable Fathers, Juſtin, Ireneus, Tertullian, Cyprian, Baſil, Chryſoſtome, Hierom, Ambroſe, Auguſtine, &c.

This Aſſertion above-written hath two Parts: Firſt, That the Uſe of the Tongue not underſtood of the People, in common Prayers of the Church, or in the Adminiſtration of the Sacraments, is againſt God's Word.

The ſecond, That the ſame is againſt the Uſe of the primitive Church.

The firſt part is moſt manifeſtly proved by the fourteenth Chapter of the Epiſtle to the Corinthians, almoſt throughout the whole Chapter. In the which Chapter St. Paul intreateth of this Matter, Ex profeſſo, purpoſely. And although ſome do cavil that St. Paul ſpeaketh not in that Chapter of praying, but of preaching, yet is it moſt evident to any indifferent Reader of Underſtanding, and appeareth alſo by the Expoſition of the beſt Writers, that he plainly there ſpeaketh not only of preaching and prophecying, but alſo of Prayer and Thankſgiving, and generally of all other publick Actions, which require any Speech in the Church or Congregation. For of praying he ſaith; I will pray with my Spirit, and I will pray with my Mind. And of Thankſgiving (which is a kind of Prayer) thou giveſt Thanks well, but the other is not edified. And how ſhall he which occupieth the room of the Unlearned ſay, Amen, to thy giving of Thanks, when he underſtandeth not what thou ſayeſt? And in the End deſcending from Particulars to a general Propoſition, concludeth, that all Things ought to be done to Edification. Thus much is clear by the very Words of St. Paul; and the ancient Doctors, Ambroſe, Auguſtine, Hierom, and others, do ſo underſtand this Chapter, as it ſhall appear by their Teſtimonies which ſhall follow afterward.

Upon this Chapter of St. Paul we gather theſe Reaſons following.

1. All Things done in the Church or Congregation, ought ſo to be done as they may edify the ſame.

But the Uſe of an unknown Tongue, in publick Prayer or Adminiſtration of Sacraments, doth not edify the Congregation.

Therefore the Uſe of an unknown Tongue, in publick Prayer or Adminiſtration of Sacraments, is not to be had in the Church.

The firſt part of this Reaſon is grounded upon St. Paul's Words, commanding all Things to be done to Edification.

The ſecond part is alſo proved by St. Paul's plain Words. Firſt by this Similitude. If the Trumpet give an uncertain Sound, who ſhall be prepared for Battle? Even ſo likewiſe when ye ſpeak with Tongues, except ye ſpeak Words that have Signification, how ſhall it be underſtood what is ſpoken? For ye ſhall but ſpeak in the Air, that is to ſay, in vain, and conſequently without edifying.

And afterward in the ſame Chapter he ſaith, how can he that occupieth the Place of the Unlearned, ſay Amen, at thy giving of Thanks, ſeeing he underſtandeth not what thou ſayeſt? For thou verily giveſt Thanks well, but the other is not edified.

Theſe be St. Paul's Words, plainly proving, that a Tongue not underſtood, doth not edify. And therefore both the parts of the Reaſon thus proved by St. Paul, the Concluſion followeth neceſſarily.

2. Secondly, nothing is to be ſpoken in the Congregation in an unknown Tongue, except it be interpreted to the People, that it may be underſtood. For ſaith St. Paul, if there be no Interpreter to him that ſpeaketh in an unknown Tongue, Taceat in Eccleſia, let him hold his Peace in the Church. And therefore the Common Prayers and Adminiſtration of Sacraments, neither done in a known Tongue, neither interpreted, are againſt the Commandment of Paul, and not to be uſed.

The Miniſter in Prayer or Adminiſtration of Sacraments uſing Language not underſtood of by the Hearers, is to them barbarous, and alien, which of St. Paul is accounted a great Abſurdity.

It is not be counted a Chriſtian Common Prayer, where the People preſent declare not their Aſſent unto it it by ſaying Amen, wherein is implied all other Words of Aſſent.

But St. Paul affirmeth, that the People cannot declare their Aſſent in ſaying Amen, except they underſtand what is ſaid, as afore.

Therefore it is no chriſtian Common Prayer where the People underſtand not what is ſaid.

Paul would not ſuffer in his Time a ſtrange Tongue to be heard in the common Prayer in the Church, notwithſtanding that ſuch a kind of Speech was then a Miracle, and a ſingular Gift of the Holy Ghoſt, whereby Infidels might be perſuaded and brought to the Faith; much leſs is it to be ſuffered now amongſt chriſtian and faithful Men, eſpecially being no Miracle nor eſpecial Gift of the Holy Ghoſt.

Some will peradventure anſwer, that to uſe any kind of Tongue, in Common Prayer or Adminiſtration of Sacraments, is a Thing indifferent.

But St. Paul is to the contrary: For he commandeth all Things to be done to Edification; he commandeth to keep Silence if there be no Interpreter; and in the End of the Chapter he concludeth thus: If any Man be ſpiritual, or a Prophet, let him know that the things which I write, are the Commandments of the Lord. And ſo ſhortly to conclude, the Uſe of a ſtrange Tongue, in Prayer and Adminiſtration, is againſt the Word and Commandment of God.

To theſe Reaſons, grounded upon St. Paul's Words, which are the moſt firm Foundation of this Aſſertion, divers other Reaſons may be joined, gathered out of the Scriptures and otherwiſe.

In the Old Teſtament all Things pertaining to the publick Prayer, Benedictions, Thankſgivings, or Sacrifices, were always in their vulgar and natural Tongue. In the Second Book of Paralipom. Chap. 29. it is written, that Ezechias commanded the Levites to praiſe God with the Pſalms of David and Aſaph the Prophet, which doubtleſs were written in Hebrew, their vulgar Tongue. If they did ſo in the Shadows of the Law, much more ought we to do the like, who (as Chriſt ſaith) muſt pray, in Spirit and Truth.

The final End of our Prayer (as David ſaith) is, That the People aſſembled together may declare the Name of the Lord in Sion, and his Praiſe in Jeruſalem.

But the Name and Praiſes of God cannot be ſet forth to the People, unleſs it be done in ſuch a Tongue as they may underſtand, therefore common Prayer muſt be had in the vulgar Tongue.

The Definition of publick Prayer out of the Words of St. Paul is, That common Prayer is to lift up our common Deſires to God with our Minds, and to teſtify the ſame outwardly with our Tongues, which Definition is approved by St. Auguſtine, De Magiſtro, Cap. 1.

The Miniſtration of the Lord's Supper and Baptiſm are as it were Sermons of the Death and Reſurrection of Chriſt.

But Sermons to the People muſt be had in ſuch Language as the People may perceive, otherwiſe they ſhould be had in vain.

It is not lawful for a Chriſtian Man to abuſe the Gifts of God; but he that prayeth in the Church in a ſtrange Tongue, abuſeth the Gifts of God. For the Tongue ſerveth only to expreſs the Mind of the Speaker to the Hearer. And St. Auguſtine ſaith, De doctrina Chriſtiana, lib. 4. cap. 10. There is no Cauſe why we ſhould ſpeak, if they for whoſe Cauſe we ſpeak, underſtand not our Speaking.

The Heathen and barbarous Nations of all Countries and Sorts of Men, were they never ſo wild, evermore made their Prayers and Sacrifices to their Gods in their own Mother Tongue. Which is a manifeſt Declaration that it is the very Light and Voice of Nature.

Thus much upon the Ground of St. Paul and other Reaſons out of the Scriptures, joining therewith the common Uſage of all Nations, as a Teſtimony of the Law of Nature.

Now for the ſecond part of the Aſſertion, which is, that the Uſe of a ſtrange Tongue in publick Prayer and Adminiſtration of Sacraments, is againſt the Cuſtom of the primitive Church; it is a Matter ſo clear, that the Denial of it muſt needs proceed either of great Ignorance, or elſe of wilful Malice.

For firſt of all Juſtine Martyr deſcribing the Order of the Communion in his Time, ſaith thus, Upon the Sunday Aſſemblies are made both of the Citizens and Countrymen, whereas the Writings of the Apoſtles and of the Prophets are read, as much as may be. Afterwards when the Reader doth ceaſe, the head Miniſter maketh an Exhortation, exhorting them to follow ſo honeſt Things. After this we riſe all together and offer Prayers, which being ended (as we have ſaid) Bread and Water are brought forth. Then the head Miniſter offereth Prayers and Thankſgiving, as much as he can, and the People anſwer Amen.

Theſe Words of Juſtine, who lived about 160 Years after Chriſt, conſidered with their Circumſtance, declare plainly, that not only the Scriptures were read, but alſo that the Prayers and Adminiſtration of the Lord's Supper were done in a Tongue underſtood.

The Liturgies both of Baſil and Chryſoſtom declare, that in the Celebration of the Communion, the People were appointed to anſwer to the Prayer of the Miniſter, ſometimes Amen, ſometimes, Lord have Mercy upon us, ſometimes, And with thy Spirit, and, We have our Hearts lifted up unto the Lord, &c. Which Anſwers they could not have made in due Time, if the Prayer had not been made in a Tongue underſtood.

And for further Proof, let us hear what Baſil writeth in this Matter to the Clerks of Neocæſarea. As touching that is laid to our Charge in Pſalmodies and Songs, wherewith our Slanderers do fray the Simple, I have thus to ſay, that our Cuſtoms and Uſages in all Churches be uniform, and agreeable.

For in the Night the People with us riſeth, goeth to the Houſe of Prayer, and in Travel, Tribulation, and continual Tears, they confeſs themſelves to God, and at the laſt riſing again, go to their Songs or Pſalmody, where being divided into two Parts, they ſing by Courſe together, both deeply weighing and confirming the Matter of the heavenly Sayings, and alſo ſtirring up their Attention and Devotion of Heart, which by other Means be alienated and plucked away. Then appointing one to begin the Song, the reſt follow, and ſo with divers Songs and Prayers paſſing over the Night, at the Dawning of the Day, all together, even as it were with one Mouth and one Heart, they ſing unto the Lord a Song of Confeſſion, every Man framing to himſelf meet Words of Repentance.

If you will fly us from henceforth for theſe Things, ye muſt fly alſo the Egyptians, and both Libyans, ye muſt eſchew the Thebanes, Paleſtines, Arabians, the Phænices, the Syrians, and all thoſe with whom Watchings, Prayers, and common ſinging of Pſalms are had in Honour.

Teſtimonies of St. Ambroſe, writting upon the fourteenth Chapter of the firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians.

THIS is it that he ſaith; becauſe he who ſpeaketh in an unknown Tongue, ſpeaketh to God. For he knoweth all Things, but Men know not, and therefore there is no Profit of this Thing.

The ſame Author afterwards upon theſe Words, If thou bleſs or give Thanks with the Spirit, how ſhall he that occupieth the room of the Unlearned, ſay, Amen, at thy giving of Thanks, ſeeing he underſtandeth not what thou ſayeſt? That is (ſaith Ambroſe) if thou ſpeak the Praiſe of God in a Tongue unknown to the Hearers. For the Unlearned, hearing that which he underſtandeth not, knoweth not the End of the Prayer, and he anſwereth not Amen. That is as much as to ſay (true) that the Bleſſing or Thankſgiving may be confirmed. For the Confirmation of the Prayer is fulfilled by them which do anſwer, Amen. That all Things ſpoken might be confirmed in the Minds of the Hearers, through the Teſtimony of the Truth.

Afterward in the ſame Place upon theſe Words, If any Infidel or Unlearned come in.

For when he underſtandeth, and is underſtood, hearing God to be praiſed and Chriſt to be worſhipped, he ſeeth perfectly that the Religion is true, and to be reverenced, wherein he ſeeth nothing to be done colourably, nothing in Darkneſs, as among the Heathen, whoſe Eyes are covered, that they ſeeing not the Things which they call holy, might perceive themſelves to be deluded with divers Vanities. For all Falſhood ſeeketh Darkneſs, and ſheweth falſe Things for true. Therefore with us nothing is done privily, nothing covertly, but one God is ſimply praiſed, of whom are all Things, and one Lord Jeſus, by whom are all Things. For if there be none which can underſtand, or of whom he may be tried, he may ſay, there is ſome Deceit and Vanity, which is therefore ſung in Tongues (not underſtood, he meaneth) becauſe it is Shame to open it.

Upon this place, Let all Things be done to edify. This is the Concluſion, that nothing ſhould be done in the Church in vain, and that this Thing ought chiefly to be laboured for, that the Unlearned alſo might profit leſt any part of the Body ſhould be dark through Ignorance.

Again if there be no Interpreter, let him keep Silence in the Church.

That is, let him pray ſecretly, or ſpeak to God within himſelf, who heareth all dumb Things: For in the Church he ought to ſpeak which may profit all Men.

Teſtimonies out of Saint Hierom, upon the aforeſaid Place of St. Paul.

IT is the Lay-man, ſaith he, whom Paul here underſtandeth to be in the Place of the ignorant Man, which hath no eccleſiaſtical Office. How ſhall he anſwer Amen to the Prayer that he underſtandeth not?

And a little after upon theſe Words, For if I pray in an unknown Tongue, &c.

This is Paul's Meaning, ſaith Hierom, if any Man ſpeaketh in ſtrange and unknown Tongues, his Mind is not to himſelf without Fruit and Profit, but he is not profited that heareth him.

And in the End of his Commentary upon the Epiſtle to the Galatians, he ſaith thus:

That (Amen) ſignifieth the Conſent of the Hearer, and is the ſealing of the Truth, Paul in the firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians teacheth, ſaying, But if thou ſhalt bleſs in Spirit, who ſupplieth the Place of the Ignorant? How ſhall he at thy Prayer anſwer (Amen) ſeeing he knoweth not what thou ſayeſt? whereby he declareth that the unlearned Man cannot anſwer, that that which is ſpoken is true, unleſs he underſtand what is ſaid.

The ſame Hierom ſaith in the Preface of St. Paul's Epiſtle to the Galatians, that the Noiſe of (Amen) ſoundeth in the Roman Church like an heavenly Thunder.

As Hierom compareth this Sound of Common Prayer to Thunder, ſo compareth Baſil it to the Sound of the Sea, in theſe Words, If the Sea be fair, how is not the Aſſembly of the Congregation much fairer? In the which a joined Sound of Men, Women and Children, as it were of the Waves beating on the Shore, is ſent forth in our Prayers unto our God.

When the People once hear theſe Words (World without End) they all forthwith anſwer, Amen.

And the ſame Writer upon the ſame Chapter, upon theſe Words, How ſhall he that occupieth the room of the Unlearned, ſay Amen? Behold again, he applieth the Stone unto the Square (as the Proverb is) requiring the edifying of the Congregation in all Places. The Unlearned he calleth the common People, and ſheweth that it is no ſmall Diſcommodity, if they cannot ſay, Amen.

And again the ſame Chryſoſtom, ſaith, Yea in Prayers you may ſee the People offer largely, both for the Poſſeſſed and the Penitents. For the Prieſts and the People pray altogether commonly, and all one Prayer, a Prayer full of Mercy and Pity. And excluding out of the Prieſts Limits all ſuch as cannot be Partakers of the holy Table, another Prayer muſt be made, and all in one Manner lie down upon the Earth, and all again after one Manner riſe up together. Now when the Peace is giving, we all in like Manner ſalute one another, and the Prieſt in the reverend Myſteries wiſheth well to the People, and the People unto him: For (And with thy Spirit) is nothing elſe but this. All Things that belong to the Sacrament of Thankſgiving, are common to all. But he giveth not Thanks alone, but all the People with him.

Hereby it may appear, that not the Prieſt alone communicated nor prayed alone, nor had any peculiar Prayer, but ſuch as was common to them all, ſuch as they all underſtood, and all were able to ſay with the Prieſt, which could not have been, if he had uſed a ſtrange Tongue in the Miniſtration of the Sacraments.

Dionyſius deſcribing the Manner of the Miniſtration of the Lord's Supper, ſaith, That Hymns were ſaid of the whole Multitude of the People.

Cyprian ſaith, The Prieſt doth prepare the Minds of the Brethren, with a Preface before the Prayer ſaying (Lift up your Hearts:) That while the People doth anſwer, (We have our Hearts lifted up to the Lord) they may be admoniſhed that they ought to think of none other Thing than of the Lord.

St. Auguſtine, What this ſhould be we ought to underſtand, that we may ſing with Reaſon of Man, not with chatting of Birds, for Owſels and Popinjaies, and Ravens, and Pies, and other ſuch like Birds are taught by Men to prate they know not what. But to ſing with Underſtanding, is given by God's holy Will to the Nature of Man.

The ſame Auguſtine, There needeth no Speech when we pray, ſaving perhaps as the Prieſts do, to declare their Meaning; not that God, but that Men may hear them, and ſo, being put in Remembrance by conſenting with the Prieſts, may hang upon God.

To theſe Teſtimonies of the ancient Writers, we will join one Conſtitution of Juſtinian the Emperor, who lived 527 Years after Chriſt, which ſaith, We command that all Biſhops and Prieſts do celebrate the holy Oblation, and the Prayers uſed in holy Baptiſm, not ſpeaking low, but with a clear and loud Voice, which may be heard of the People, that thereby the Minds of the Hearers may be ſtirred up with greater Devotion, in uttering the Praiſes of the Lord God. For ſo the holy Apoſtle teacheth in his firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians, ſaying, Truly, if thou only bleſs or give Thanks in Spirit, how doth he which occupieth the Place of the Unlearned ſay, Amen, at the giving of Thanks unto God? For he underſtandeth not what thou ſayeſt. Thou verily giveſt Thanks well, but another is not edified. And again, in the Epiſtle to the Romans he ſaith, With the Heart a Man believeth unto Righteouſneſs, and with the Mouth Confeſſion is made unto Salvation.

Therefore for theſe Cauſes it is convenient, that amongſt other Prayers thoſe Things alſo which are ſpoken in the holy Oblation, be uttered and ſpoken of the moſt religious Biſhops and Prieſts unto our Lord Jeſus Chriſt our God with the Father and the Holy Ghoſt, with a loud Voice. And let the moſt religious Prieſts know this, that if they neglect any of theſe Things, neither the dreadful Judgment of the great God and our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, neither will we, when we know it, reſt, and leave it unrevenged.

Out of this Conſtitution of Juſtinian the Emperor, three Things are worthy to be noted.

Firſt, That the Common Prayer and Miniſtration done with a loud Voice, ſo as may be heard and underſtood of the People, is a Means to ſtir up Devotion in the People, contrary to the common Aſſertion of Eckius and other Adverſaries, who affirm, that Ignorance maketh a great Adminiſtration and Devotion.

Secondly, That Juſtinian maketh this Matter of not ordering common Miniſtration and Prayers, ſo as it may be underſtood of the People, not a Matter of Indifferency, but ſuch a Thing as muſt be anſwered for at the Day of Judgment.

Thirdly, That this Emperor, being a Chriſtian Emperor, doth not only make Conſtitution of eccleſiaſtical Matters, but alſo threatneth Revenge and ſharp Puniſhment to the Violaters of the ſame.

Theſe are ſufficient to prove that it is againſt God's Word, and the Uſe of the primitive Church, to uſe a Language not underſtood of the People, in common Prayer and Miniſtration of the Sacraments. Wherefore it is to be marvelled at, not only how ſuch an Untruth and Abuſe crept at the firſt into the Church, but alſo how it is maintained ſo ſtiffly at this Day, and upon what Ground theſe, that will be thought Guides and Paſtors of Chriſt's Church, are ſo loth to return to the firſt Original of St. Paul's Doctrine, and the Practice of the primitive Catholick Church of Chriſt.

The God of Patience and Conſolation, give us Grace to be like minded one towards another in Chriſt Jeſus, that we all agreeing together, may with one Mouth praiſe God the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, Amen.

And the ſame being ended with ſome Likelihood, as it ſeemed, that the ſame was much allowable to the Audience; certain of the Biſhops began to ſay contrary to their former Anſwer, that they had now much more to ſay to this Matter, wherein although they might have been well reprehended for ſuch Manner of Cavillation; yet for avoiding of any more miſtaking of Orders in this Colloquy or Conference, and for that they ſhould utter all that which they had to ſay, it was both ordered and thus openly agreed upon of both parts in the full Audience, that upon the Monday following, the Biſhops ſhould bring their Minds and Reaſons in writing to the ſecond Aſſertion, and the laſt alſo if they could, and firſt read the ſame: And that done, the other part ſhould bring likewiſe theirs to the ſame. And being read, each of them ſhould deliver to other the ſame Writings. And in the mean Time, the Biſhops ſhould put in writing, not only all that which Doctor Cole had that Day uttered, but all ſuch other Matters as they any otherwiſe could think of for the ſame: And as ſoon as they might poſſible, to ſend the ſame Book touching that firſt Aſſertion to the other Part, and they ſhould receive of them that Writing which Mr. Horn had there read that Day, and upon Monday it ſhall be agreed what Day they ſhould exhibit their Anſwers touching the firſt Propoſition. Thus both parts aſſented thereto, and the Aſſembly was quietly diſmiſſed.

The Order of the Second Day's Talk.

The Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, the Archbiſhop of York, the Duke of Norfolk, and all the Council being ſet, the Biſhops on the one Side, and the Proteſtants, that is, the late baniſhed Preachers on the other Side, thus began the Lord Keeper:

MY Lord and Maſters, I am ſure ye remember well, what Order of Talk and Writing was appointed to be had this Day in this Aſſembly, at our laſt Meeting, which I will not refuſe now to repeat again for the Shortneſs of it, which was, that ye appointed that on both Sides ye ſhould bring in Engliſh Writing, what ye had to ſay in the ſecond Queſtion, and in this Place appointed to read the ſame. Therefore begin my Lords.

Wincheſt. I am determined for my Part that there ſhall be now read, that which we have to ſay for the firſt Queſtion.

L. Keeper. Will ye not then proceed in the Order appointed you.

Wincheſt. I am, as I ſaid, provided for the firſt Queſtion or Propoſition: And we ſhould ſuffer Prejudice, if ye permit us not to intreat of that firſt, and ſo we would come to the ſecond Queſtion, and this is the Order we would uſe. I judge all my Brethren are ſo minded.

Biſhops. We are ſo determined.

L. Keeper. I know not what you would do for your determined Order: But ye ought to look what Order is appointed you to keep, which ye by this Means do break and little regard.

Wincheſter. Since our Adverſaries part, if it pleaſe your Grace and Honours, have ſo confirmed their Aſſertion and Purpoſe, we ſuffer a Prejudice or Damage if ye permit us not the like. Hereat Doctor Watſon Biſhop of Lincoln, being at this Talk very deſirous to have ſpoken, ſaid now to the Biſhop of Wincheſter; I pray you let me ſpeak, which was permitted him: We are not uſed indifferently, ſince that you allow us not to open in preſent Writing what we have to ſay for the Declaration of the firſt Queſtion, inſomuch as that which ye take for the Infirmation of the ſame, was meant nothing to that purpoſe, for that which Mr. Cole ſpake in this laſt Aſſembly, was not prepared to ſtrengthen our Cauſe, but he made his Oration of himſelf, and ex tempore, that is, with no fore-ſtudied Talk.

At ſuch the Biſhop's Words the Nobility and other of the Audience much frowned and grudged, ſince that they all well knew, that Mr. Cole ſpake out of a Writing which he held in his Hand, and often read out of the ſame, and in that the ſame Places which the Biſhops informed him, and appointed him unto with their Fingers; all which Things do well declare the Matter to be premeditate, and not done ex tempore, for that Mr. Cole was appointed by them to be their Speaker. Whereupon this of the Biſhop of Lincoln was the worſe taken, notwithſtanding he went onward complaining, and ſaid; We are alſo evil ordered as touching the Time, our Adverſaries part having Warning long before, and we were warned only two Days before the laſt Aſſembly in this Place. What with this Buſineſs, and other Trouble we have been driven to, have been occupied the whole laſt Night. For we may in no wiſe berray the Cauſe of God, nor will do, but ſuſtain it to the utmoſt of our Power, as we ought ſo to endeavour by all manner of Means. But now we have no impartial Hearing.

L. Keeper. Take ye heed that ye deceive not yourſelves when it ſhall come to juſt Trial of the Matter, and that then it be not proved againſt you, that ye complain without Cauſe, when the Order and your Manner towards it ſhall be duly weighed. I am willing and ready to hear you after the Order taken and appointed for you to reaſon therein, and further or contrary to that I cannot deal with you.

Lich. Cov. Let us ſuffer no Miſorder or Injury herein, but be heard impartially, that is convenient and meet we ſhould have here.

L. Keeper. I pray you, Sirs, hear me, and mark it you well. It was concluded on by my Lords of the Council, who you well know of, that their Writing, which ye are now ſo willing to have heard, ſhould have been read the firſt Day, and then we underſtood that Mr. Cole had ſaid what you would have him, and as much as you willed him to ſay. I judge ye were asked in the End of Mr. Cole's Rehearſal, whether that which he ſpake, was what ye would have him ſay, and ye granted it. Then, whether ye would that he ſhould ſay any more in the Matter, ye anſwered no, whereupon the other Part was heard, which you hearing, then indeed without all good Indifferency or plain Dealing, ye pretended that ye had more to ſay. So mark you with how ſmall Equity you uſed yourſelves.

The Biſhop. We had indeed more to ſay, if we might have been indifferently heard.

L. Keeper. Give me Leave I ſay, and look what Gains you ſhould have if your preſent Requeſt ſhould be granted you, that call ſo much of indifferent uſing, how you ſhould uſe thoſe other Men? For many who are here preſent, were then away, ſo would you have your Writing now read to them, which heard not this. Mark ye whether it had not been more fit that ye had provided it againſt the firſt Day, when they orderly read theirs, ſince to my Knowledge, and as far as I have had to do in the Matter, you were of both Sides (I am ſure) warned at one Time. Howbeit to ſatisfy your Importunity and Earneſtneſs of this crying out to have your firſt Writing heard, I might well allow, if it ſo pleaſed the reſt of the Queen's moſt honourable Council, that you diſpatch the Work of the ſecond Queſtion, appointed for this Day, and give us up your Writing for the firſt, ſo that when the Day cometh that each of you ſhall anſwer the other in Confirmation of the firſt Queſtion, then the ſame Day ye ſhall have Time to read this your firſt Writing, which ye now would ſo fain read. To this Order all the Council willingly condeſcended.

Lich. Cov. Nay my Lords, they reading one, and we two Books in one Day, we ſhould not have Time enough to read them both. It would occupy too much Time.

L. Keeper. For my Part I might well ſtay at the hearing of them both, and ſo I judge would the reſt of the Council, and likewiſe the whole Audience. At which Words there was a general Shout, ſaying, Yea, yea, we would hear it gladly.

Lincoln. We cannot read them both at one Time: For their Writing (I am ſure) would require an Hour and a half, if ſo be it be ſo long as their laſt was, and then our Anſwer would require no leſs Time after the firſt Queſtion.

L. Keeper. I have ſhewed you we could be well contented to tarry out the Time when it cometh thereunto. Therefore ye need not be therein ſo curious, and we granting you thus much, and yet ye will obey no Orders; I cannot tell what I ſhall ſay unto you.

Lincoln. We have been wonderfully troubled in the Order of this Diſputation. For firſt it was appointed us by my Lord the Archbiſhop, that we ſhould diſpute in Latin, and then we were commanded to bring a Latin Writing, and now at laſt we are ordered to bring our Writing in Engliſh.

At theſe Words the Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, the Archbiſhop, with all the Council, much muſed, and many murmured at ſuch a baſe and falſe Report of the Order well taken. Whereupon with an Admiration the Lord Keeper anſwered, I marvel much of the uſing of yourſelf in this Point, ſince I am aſſured the Order was never otherwiſe taken, than that you ſhould bring forth in Engliſh Writing what you had to ſay for your Purpoſe.

Hereupon the Biſhops of Litchfield and Chicheſter, to excuſe my Lord of Lincoln, ſaid, We ſo underſtood the Order, my Lords.

L. Keeper. How likely is that, ſince it was ſo plainly told you? But to end theſe Delays, I pray you follow the Order appointed, and begin to treat of the ſecond Queſtion.

Lich. Cov. We were appointed this Day by your Honours to bring in what we had to ſay in the firſt Queſtion.

At which Words the Audience murmured, who heard the former Talk, contrary to ſuch his Report.

L. Keeper. The Order was taken, for that your Writings were not ready the laſt Time, that ye ſhould yield the ſame to theſe Men (meaning the Proteſtants) as ſoon as ye might, and upon the Receipt of your Writings, you ſhould have theirs, and this Day you ſhould treat of the ſecond Queſtion, and of the third, if that ye had Leiſure enough. This was the Order, my Lords, except my Memory much fail me. The ſame all the Council affirmed.

Lincoln. We are willed then to bring in this Day our Writing for the firſt Queſtion alſo.

L. Keeper. Ah Sirs, if ye be ſo hard to be ſatisfy'd, and to incline to the Truth, let my Lords here ſay what was then determined.

B. York. Ye are to blame to ſtand in this Iſſue, for there was a plain decreed Order taken for you to treat of the ſecond Queſtion. Wherefore leave you your Contention herein, and ſhew what you have to ſay in the ſecond Queſtion.

L. Keeper. Go to now, begin, my Lords.

Lich. Cov. It is contrary to the Order in Diſputations, that we ſhould begin.

Cheſter. We have the Negative, they the Affirmative, therefore they muſt begin.

Lich. Cov. They muſt firſt ſpeak what they can bring in againſt us, ſince we are the defending Party.

Cheſter. So is the School manner, and likewiſe the Manner in Weſtminſter-hall is, that the Plaintiff's Part ſhould ſpeak firſt, and then the accuſed Party to anſwer.

Lich. Cov. I pray you let the Propoſition be read, and then let us ſee who hath the negative Part, and ſo let the other begin.

L. Keeper. The Order was taken that ye ſhould begin.

Lich. Cov. But then we ſhould do againſt the School Order.

L. Keeper. My Maſters, ye inforce much the School Orders. I wonder much at it, ſince divers of thoſe Orders are oftentimes taken for the Exerciſe of Youth, and ought to maintain a Faſhion, and many Preſcriptions, which we need not here to recite, much leſs obſerve. We are come hither to keep the Order of God, and to ſet forth his Truth, and hereunto we have taken as good Order as we could, which lieth not in my Power to change.

Carliſle. We are of the Catholick Church, and abide therein, therein, and ſtand in the Poſſeſſions of the Truth; and therefore they may ſay what they have to alledge againſt us, and ſo we maintain and defend our Cauſe.

Lich. Cov. Yea, even ſo muſt the Matter be ordered.

Cheſter. When they bring any thing againſt us, it is ſufficient for us to deny it: Therefore they muſt begin.

Lich. Cov. And when they affirm any thing, and we ſay nay, the Proof belongeth to them, and ſo it behoveth them to ſhew firſt what they affirm, and for what Cauſe or Purpoſe.

L. Keeper. Here reſteth our Purpoſe and whole Matter, whether you will begin, if they do not, ſince it was determined ye ſhould begin.

Lich. Cov. We heard of no ſuch Order.

L. Keeper. No? Yes, and in the firſt Queſtion ye began willingly. How cometh it to paſs that ye will not do ſo now?

Cheſter. Then had we the Affirmation, which ſince that our Adverſaries have now, they ſhould now begin.

This the Proteſtants deny'd, ſaying, that they in the firſt Day had the Negative, wherein they did not yet refuſe to begin.

L. Keeper. If you have any thing to ſay, my Lords, to the Purpoſe, ſay on.

Lich. A particular Sort of Men can never break an univerſal Church, which we now maintain: And as for theſe Men, our adverſary Part, I never thought that they would have done ſo much as have named themſelves to be of the catholick Church, challenging the Name as well as we.

Proteſtants. We do ſo, and we are of the true catholick Church, and maintain the Verity thereof.

Lincoln. Yet would ye overthrow all catholick Order.

Horne. I wonder that ye ſo much ſtand who ſhould begin.

Lincoln. You count it requiſite that we ſhould follow your Orders, as we have taken the Queſtions at your Hands, in that Manner as you have aſſigned them.

Lich. Cov. Yea, even ſo we be driven to do now.

L. Keeper. Nay, I judge if ye mark the Matter well, the Queſtions are neither of their propounding them to you, nor of your Device to them, but equally offered to you both.

Horne. Indeed, my Lords of the Queen's moſt honourable Privy Council, theſe Queſtions or Propoſitions were propoſed unto us by your Honours, and they then having the Preheminency, choſe to themſelves the Negative, and yet freely began firſt; now again why do they not the like?

Lichfield being very angry that he ſhould ſo ſpeak againſt them, went from the Matter, ſaying, My Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, and you the reſt of the Queen's moſt honourable Council, I hope that you all, and the Queen's Majeſty herſelf, are inclined to favour the Verity in all Things, and the Truth of the Catholick Church, which we muſt and will do to the utmoſt of our Power, and to this Purpoſe let us now well weigh who are of the true catholick Church, they, or we.

L. Keeper. Tarry, now you go from the Matter, and make Queſtions of your own.

Lichfield going on with his Digreſſion, ſaid thus: We muſt needs go to work, and try that firſt, what Church they be of; for there are many Churches in Germany. Maſter Horne, Maſter Horne, I pray you which of theſe Churches are you of?

Horne. I am of Chriſt's Catholick Church.

L. Keeper. Ye ought not thus to run into voluntary Talk of your own inventing, nor to deviſe new Queſtions of your own Appointment, and thereby enter into that Talk; ye ought not ſo to do. But ſay on, if you have any thing to ſay in this Matter.

Lich. Cov. Nay, we muſt firſt thus go to work with them, as I have ſaid, if that we will ſearch a Truth: Howbeit of the Truth we have no doubt, for that we aſſuredly ſtand in it. Theſe Men come in, and they pretended to be doubtful. Therefore they ſhould begin what they have to impugn or withſtand us withal.

Winch. Let them begin; ſo will we go onward with our Matter.

Cheſter. Otherwiſe, my Lords, if they ſhould not begin, but end the Talk, then would the Verity on our Sides be not ſo well marked; for they would depart, ſpeaking laſt, with the rejoycing Triumph of the People.

Winch. Therefore I am reſolved that they ſhall begin ere that we ſay any Thing.

Cheſter. I am ſorry, my Lords, that we ſhould ſo long ſtand in the Matter with your Honours, and make ſo many Words, and ſo much ado with you, whom we ought to obey: Howbeit there is no Indifferency if they begin not; and ſurely we think it meet, that they ſhould, for their Parts, give us Place.

Lichfield. Yea, that they ſhould, and ought to do, where any Indifferency is uſed.

Aelmer. We give you the Place (do we not?) and deprive you not of the Preheminence, becauſe you are Biſhops; therefore I pray you begin.

The Biſhop. A goodly giving of Place, I aſſure you: Yea marry, ye gave Place: Such Words they uſed with more Scoffs.

L. Keeper. If ye make this Aſſembly gathered in vain, and will not go to the Matter, let us riſe and depart.

Winch. Contented, let us be gone; for we will not in this Point give over.

I pray you my Lords, require not at our Hands that we ſhould be any Cauſe of Hinderance to our Religion, or give any ſuch evil Example to our Poſterity, which we ſhould do if we gave over to them, which in no wiſe we may, or will do.

L. Keeper. Let us then break up, if you be thus minded. With theſe Words the Biſhops were riſing. But then ſaid the Lord Keeper, let us ſee whether every one of you be thus minded. How ſay you my Lord of Wincheſter, will you not begin to read your Writing?

Winch. No ſurely, I am fully determined, and fully at a Point therein, howſoever my Brethren do.

Then the Lord Keeper asked the Biſhop of Exeter his Mind herein: Who anſwered that he was none of them. Then the Lord Keeper asked the others in Order; and firſt Lincoln, who ſaid he was of the ſame Mind that Wincheſter was of: And likewiſe anſwered Lichfield and Coventry, Dr. Cole, and Dr. Chadſey. Then Cheſter, being asked his Mind, ſaid, My Lords, I ſay not that I will not read it, if ye command us; but we ought not to do it; yet I deſire your Honours not ſo to take it, as tho' I would not have read it. I meant not ſo.

L. Keeper. How ſay you to it, my Lord of Carliſle?

Carliſle. If they ſhould not read theirs this Day, ſo that our Writing may be laſt read, ſo am I contented that ours ſhall be firſt read.

L. Keeper. So would ye make Orders yourſelves, and appoint that we ſhould ſpend one Day in hearing you.

Abbot. Then the Abbot of Weſtminſter was asked his Mind, who ſaid, if it pleaſe your Honours, I judge that my Lords here ſtay moſt on this Point, that they fear when they ſhall begin firſt, and the other anſwer thereupon, there ſhall be no Time given to them to ſpeak, which my Lord miſliketh.

L. Keeper. How can it otherwiſe be in Talk appointed in ſuch Aſſembly and Audience: Think you that there can be continual anſwering one another? when ſhould it after that ſort have an End?

Lich. Coven. It muſt be ſo in Diſputation to ſeek out the Truth.

L. Keeper. But how ſay you my Lord Abbot, are you of the Mind it ſhall be read?

Abbot. Yea forſooth, my Lord, I am very well pleaſed withal. Harpsfield being inquired his Mind, thought as the other did.

L. Keeper. My Lords, ſince that ye are not willing, but refuſe to read your Writing after the Order taken, we will break up and depart: And for that ye will not that we ſhould hear you, you may perhaps ſhortly hear of us.

Thus have we declared the Order and Manner of this Conference at Weſtminſter, between theſe two Parties, wherein if any Law or Order were broken, judge (good Reader) where the Fault was, and conſider withal what theſe Papiſts be, from whom if ye take away their Sword and Authority, you ſee all their Cunning, how ſoon it lieth in the Duſt, or elſe why would they not abide the Trial of Writing? Why would they, or durſt they not ſtand to the Order agreed upon? Whether ſhould we ſay Ignorance or Stubbornneſs to be in them more, or both together? who firſt being gently (as is ſaid) and favourably required to keep the Order appointed, they would not. Then being ſecondly (as appeared by the Lord Keeper's Words) preſſed more earneſtly, they neither regarding the Authority, &c. of that Place, nor their own Reputation, nor the Credit of the Cauſe, utterly refuſed that to do. And finally, being again particularly every of them apart diſtinctly by Name required to underſtand their Opinions therein, they all except one (which was the Abbot of Weſtminſter, having ſome more Conſideration of Order and his Duty of Obedience than the reſt) utterly and plainly deny'd to have their Book read, ſome of them as more earneſtly than others, ſo alſo ſome others more undiſcreetly and more unreverently than others. Whereupon giving ſuch Example of Diſorder, Stubbornneſs, and Self-will, as hath not been ſeen and ſuffered in ſuch an honourable Aſſembly, being of the two Eſtates of this Realm, the Nobility and Commons, beſides the Preſence of the Queen's Majeſty's moſt honourable Privy Council, the ſame Aſſembly was diſmiſſed, and the godly and moſt Chriſtian Purpoſe of the Queen's Majeſty made fruſtrate. And afterward, for the Contempt ſo notoriouſly made, the Biſhops of Wincheſter and Lincoln, having obſtinately both diſobey'd common Authority, and varied manifeſtly from their own Order, and eſpecially Lincoln, who ſhewed more Folly than the others, were condignly committed to the Tower of London, and the reſt (ſaving the Abbot of Weſtminſter) ſtood bound to make their perſonal Appearance daily before the Council, and not to depart the City of London and Weſtminſter, until further Order were taken with them for their Diſobedience and Contempt.

Beſides the former Proteſtation or Libel written and exhibited by the Proteſtants concerning the firſt Queſtion, there was alſo another Writing of the Proteſtants made of the ſecond Queſtion, but not publiſhed.

As theſe Biſhops above-named were committed to the Tower, ſo Bonner Biſhop of London about the ſame Time was committed to the Marſhalſea, where he both in his blind bloody Hereſy, and alſo in his deſerved Captivity, long remained, even till his Death.

About this Time, at the Beginning of the flouriſhing Reign of Queen Elizabeth, was a Parliament ſummoned and held at Weſtminſter, wherein was much debating about Matters of Religion, and great Study on both Parts employ'd, the one to retain ſtill, the other to impugn the Doctrine and Faction which in Queen Mary's Time had been eſtabliſhed. Yet notwithſtanding the great Induſtry of the Papiſts, by the Providence of God their Deſigns were fruſtrated, and the true Catholick Religion reſtored. Many of the Pope's Champions having been cut off by Death, their Power was much diminiſh'd; Dr. Story was one of the Chief that was left to ſtand up for his Maſter's Cauſe, as may be ſeen by his impudent Expreſſions (I can term them no better) in the Parliament-houſe.

The Sum of which ſhameleſs Talk was to this Effect: Firſt, beginning with himſelf, he declared, that whereas he was noted commonly abroad, and much complained of, to have been a great Doer, and a Setter forth of ſuch Religion, Orders, and Proceedings, as of his late Sovereign that is dead, Queen Mary, were ſet forth in this Realm, he denied not the ſame, proteſting moreover that he therein had done nothing, but that both his Conſcience did lead him to, and alſo his Commiſſion did as well then command him, as now alſo doth diſcharge him for the ſame, being no leſs ready now alſo to do the like, and more, in caſe he by this Queen were authorized likewiſe, and commanded thereunto. Wherefore, as I ſee (ſaith he) nothing to be aſhamed of, ſo leſs I ſee to be ſorry for, but rather ſaid that he was ſorry for this, becauſe he had done no more than he did, and that in executing thoſe Laws they had not been more vehement and ſevere. Wherein he ſaid there was no Default in him, but in them, whom he both oft and earneſtly had exhorted to the ſame, being therefore not a little grieved with them, for that they laboured only about the young and little Sprigs and Twigs, while they ſhould have ſtricken at the Root, and clean have rooted it out, &c. And concerning his perſecuting and burning them, he denied not, but that he was once at the burning of an Earwig (for ſo he termed a Proteſtant) at Uxbridge, where he toſt a Fagot at his Face as he was ſinging Pſalms, and ſet a Winebuſh of Thorns under his Feet, a little to prick him, with many other Words of like Effect. In which Words he named moreover Sir Philip Hobby, and another Knight of Kent, with ſuch other of the richer and higher Degree, whom his Counſel was to pluck at, and to bring them under Coram, wherein (ſaid he) if they had followed my Advice, then had they done well and wiſely. This, or much like was the Effect of the ſhameleſs and tyrannical Excuſe of himſelf, more meet to ſpeak with the Voice of a Beaſt, than a Man.

Although in this Parliament ſome Diverſity there was of Judgment and Opinion between Parties, yet notwithſtanding, through the merciful Goodneſs of God, the true Cauſe of the Goſpel had the Upperhand, the Papiſts Hope was fruſtrated, and their Rage abated, the Order and Proceedings of King Edward's Time concerning Religion was revived again, the Supremacy of the Pope aboliſhed, the Articles and bloody Statutes of Queen Mary repealed; briefly, the furious Fire-brands of cruel Perſecution, which had conſumed ſo many poor Mens Bodies, were now extinct and quenched.

Finally, the old Biſhops were depoſed, for that they refuſed the Oath in renouncing the Pope, and not ſubſcribing to the Queen's juſt and lawful Title. In whoſe Rooms and Places, firſt for Cardinal Poole ſucceeded Dr. Matthew Parker, Archbiſhop of Canterbury; in the place of Heath ſucceeded Dr. Young; inſtead of Bonner, Edmund Grindall was Biſhop of London; for Hopton, Thurlby, Tonſtall, Pates, Chriſtopherſon, Peto, Coates, Morgan, Feaſie, White, Oglethorpe, &c. were placed Dr. John Parkhurſt in Norwich, Dr. Coxe in Ely, Jewel in Salisbury, Pilkenton in Durham, Dr. Sands in Worceſter, Mr. Downam in Weſtcheſter, Bentam in Coventry and Lichfield, David in St. Davids, Ally in Exeter, Horne in Wincheſter, Scory in Hereford, Beſt in Carliſle, Bullingham in Lincoln, Scamler in Peterborough, Bartlet in Bath, Geſt in Rocheſter, Barlo in Chicheſter, &c.

A Treatiſe of Mr. Nicholas Ridley, in the Name of the whole Clergy, to King Edward the Sixth, concerning Images not to be ſet up, nor worſhipped in Churches.

Certain Reaſons which move us that we cannot with ſafe Conſciences give our Aſſent, that the Images of Chriſt, &c. ſhould be placed and erected in Churches.

FIRST, the Words of the Commandment, Exod. 20. Thou ſhalt not make to thyſelf any graven Image, &c. And the ſame is repeated more plainly, Deut. 27. Curſed is the Man which maketh a molten Image, &c. and ſetteth it in a ſecret Place; and all the People ſhall ſay, Amen.

In the firſt Place, theſe Words are to be noted, Thou ſhalt not make to thyſelf, that is, to any Uſe of Religion.

In the latter Place, theſe Words, And ſetteth it in a ſecret Place; for no Man durſt then commit Idolatry openly. So that conferring the Places, it doth evidently appear, that Images both for Uſe of Religion, and in place of Peril for Idolatry, are forbidden.

God, knowing the Inclination of Man to Idolatry, ſheweth the Reaſon why he made his general Prohibition, leſt peradventure thou being deceived, ſhouldſt bow down to them and worſhip them.

This general Law is generally to be obſerved, notwithſtanding that peradventure a great Number cannot be hurt by them, which may appear by the Example following.

God forbad the People to join their Children in Marriage with Strangers, adding the Reaſon; For ſhe will ſeduce thy Son, that he ſhall not follow me, Deut. 7.

Moſes was not deceived or ſeduced by Jethro's Daughter, nor Boaz by Ruth, being a Woman of Moab. And yet for all that, the general Law was to be obſerved, Thou ſhalt join no Marriage with them. And ſo likewiſe, Thou ſhalt not make to thyſelf any graven Image, &c.

Deut. 4. God giveth a ſpecial Charge to avoid Images. Beware (ſaith he) that thou forget not the Covenant of the Lord thy God which he made with thee, and ſo make to thyſelf any graven Image of any Thing which the Lord hath forbidden thee, for the Lord thy God is a conſuming Fire, and a jealous God.

If thou have Children and Nephews, and do well in the Land, and being deceived, do make to yourſelves any graven Image, doing Evil before the Lord your God, and provoke him to Anger, I do this Day call Heaven and Earth to witneſs, that you ſhall quickly periſh out of the Land which ye ſhall poſſeſs, ye ſhall not dwell in it any longer Time, but the Lord will deſtroy you, and ſcatter you amongſt all Nations.

Note what ſolemn Obteſtation God uſeth, and what grievous Puniſhments he threatneth to the Breakers of the ſecond Commandment.

In the Tabernacle and Temple of God no Image was by God appointed openly to be ſet, nor by Practice afterwards uſed or permitted, ſo long as Religion was purely obſerved; ſo that the Uſe and Execution of the Law is a good Interpreter of the true Meaning of the ſame.

If by virtue of the ſecond Commandment Images were not lawful in the Temple of the Jews, then by the ſame Commandment they are not lawful in the Churches of Chriſtians. For being a moral Commandment, and not ceremonial (for by Conſent of Writers, only a part of the Precept of obſerving the Sabbath is ceremonial) it is a perpetual Commandment, and bindeth us as well as the Jews.

The Jews by no Means would conſent to Herod, Pilate or Petronius, that Images ſhould be placed in the Temple at Jeruſalem, but rather offered themſelves to the Death, than to aſſent unto it. Who, beſides that they are commended by Joſephus for obſerving the Meaning of the Law, would not have indangered themſelves ſo far, if they had thought Images had been indifferent in the Temple of God. For as St. Paul ſaith, 2 Cor. 6. What Agreement hath the Temple of God with Idols; Joſeph. Antiq. lib. 17. cap. 8. lib. 18. cap. 5. & 15.

God's Scripture doth in no Place commend the Uſe of Images, but in a great Number of Places doth diſallow and condemn them. They are called in the Book of Wiſdom, The Trap and Snare of the Feet of the Ignorant.

It is ſaid that the Invention of them was the Beginning of ſpiritual Fornication: And that they were not from the Beginning, neither ſhall they continue to the End. In the 15th Chapter of the aforeſaid Book, it is ſaid to be a Labour without Fruit. And again, They are worthy of Death both that put their Truſt in them, and that make them, and that love them, and that worſhip them.

The Pſalms and Prophets are full of like Sentences, and how can we then praiſe the Thing which God's Spirit doth always diſpraiſe?

Furthermore, an Image made by a Father (as appeareth in the ſame Book) for the Memorial of his Son departed, was the firſt Invention of Images, and Occaſion of Idolatry, Wiſdom 14.

How much more then ſhall an Image made in the Memory of Chriſt, and ſet up in the Place of Religion, occaſion the ſame Offence? Euſeb. Eccl. Hiſt. lib. 7. cap. 18. Images have their Beginning from the Heathen, and of no good Ground; therefore they cannot be profitable to Chriſtians. Whereunto Athanaſius agreeth, writing of Images againſt the Gentiles, The Invention of Images (ſaith he) came of no Good, but of Evil, and whatſoever hath an evil Beginning, can never in any Thing be good, ſeeing it is wholly naught.

St. John ſaith, My little Children, beware of Images: But to ſet them in the Churches, which are Places dedicated to the Service and Invocation of God, and that over the Lord's Table, being the higheſt and moſt honourable Place, where moſt Danger of Abuſe both is, and ever hath been, is not to beware of them, nor to flee from them, but rather to embrace and receive them. Tertullian expounding the ſame Words, writeth thus, Little Children, keep yourſelves from the Shape itſelf, or Form of them.

Images in the Church either ſerve to edify or to deſtroy. If they edify, then there is one kind of Edification which the Scriptures neither teach nor command, but always diſallow; if they deſtroy, they are not to be uſed; for in the Church of God all Things ought to be done to edify, 1 Cor. 14.

The Commandment of God is, Thou ſhalt not lay a Stumbling-block or a Stone before the Blind: And curſed is he that maketh the Blind wander in his Way.

The ſimple and unlearned People, who have been ſo long under blind Guides, are blind in Matters of Religion, and inclined to Error and Idolatry. Therefore to ſet Images before them to ſtumble at (They be Snares and Traps for the Feet of the Ignorant) or to lead them out of the true Way, is not only againſt the Commandment of God, but deſerveth alſo the Malediction and Curſe of God, Wiſd. 14.

The Uſe of Images is to the learned and confirmed in Knowledge, neither neceſſary nor profitable. To the Superſtitious a Confirmation in Error; to the Simple and Weak an Occaſion of Fall, and very offenſive and wounding of their Conſciences; and therefore very dangerous. For St. Paul ſaith, 1 Cor. 9. offending the Brethren, and wounding their weak Conſciences, they

they ſin againſt Chriſt. And Matth. 18. Wo be to him by whom Offence or Occaſion of falling cometh, it were better that a Millſtone were tied about his Neck, and he caſt into the Sea, than to offend one of the little Ones that believe in Chriſt. And where Objection may be made, that ſuch Offence may be taken away by ſincere Doctrine and Preaching; it is to be anſwered, that that is not ſufficient, as hereafter more at large ſhall appear.

And tho' it ſhould be admitted as true, yet would it follow, that ſincere Doctrine and Preaching ſhould always and in all Places continue as well as Images; and ſo whereſoever an Image to offend were erected, there ſhould alſo of Reaſon a godly and ſincere Preacher be continually maintained: For it is Reaſon that the Remedy be as large as the Offence, the Medicine as general as the Poiſon, but that is not poſſible in the Realm of England, that Images ſhould be generally allowed, as Reaſon and Experience may teach.

As good Magiſtrates, which intend to baniſh all Whoredom, do drive away all naughty Perſons, eſpecially out of ſuch Places as be ſuſpected; even ſo Images, being Whores, for that the worſhipping of them is called in the Prophets Fornication and Adultery, ought to be baniſhed, and eſpecially out of Churches, which is the moſt ſuſpected Place, and where the ſpiritual Fornication hath been moſt committed.

It is not expedient to allow and admit the Thing which is hurtful to the greateſt Number, but in all Churches and Common-wealths the ignorant and weak are the greateſt Number, to whom Images are hurtful, and not profitable.

And where it is commonly alledged, that Images in Churches do ſtir up the Mind to Devotion, it may be anſwered, that contrariwiſe they do rather diſtract the Mind from Prayer, Hearing of God's Word, and other godly Meditations, as we read, that in the Council-chamber of the Lacedemonians no Picture or Image was ſuffered, leſt in Conſultation of weighty Matters of the Common-weal, their Minds by the Sight of the outward Image might be occaſioned to be withdrawn, or to wander from the Matter.

The Experience of this preſent Time doth declare, that thoſe Parts of the Realm which think and are perſwaded that God is not offended by doing outward Reverence to an Image, do moſt deſire the Reſtitution of Images, and have been moſt diligent to ſet them up again: Reſtitution therefore of them by common Authority ſhall confirm them more in their Error to the Danger of their Souls, than ever they were before. For as one Man writeth, nothing is more certain or ſure, than that which of doubtful is made certain.

The Profit of Images is uncertain; the Peril, by Experience of all Ages and States of the Church (as afore) is moſt certain.

The Benefit to be taken of them (if there be any) is very ſmall; the Danger in ſeeing of them, which is the Danger of Idolatry, is the greateſt of all other. Now to allow a moſt certain Peril, for an uncertain Profit, and the greateſt Danger for the ſmalleſt Benefit, in Matters of Faith and Religion, is a tempting to God, and a grievous Offence.

Probations out of the Fathers, Councils, and Hiſtories.

FIRST, it is manifeſt, that in the Primitive Church Images were not commonly uſed in Churches, Oratories, and Places of Aſſembly for Religion; but they were generally deteſted and abhorred, inſomuch that the Want of Imagery was objected to the Chriſtians for a Crime.

Origen reporteth, that Celſus objected the Lack of Images, Lib. 4. contra Celſum.

Arnobius ſaith alſo, That the Ethnicks accuſed the Chriſtians that they had neither Altars nor Images.

Zephirus in his Commentary upon the Apology of Tertullian, gathereth thus of Tertullian's Words, which Place of Perſwaſion were very cold, and to no Purpoſe at all, except we hold this always, that Chriſtians in thoſe Days did hate moſt of all Images with their trim Decking and Ornaments.

Ireneus, lib. 1. cap. 4. reproveth the Hereticks called Gnoſtici, for that they carried about the Image of Chriſt made in Pilate's Time after his own Proportion (which were much more to be eſteemed than any that can be made now) uſing alſo for Declaration of their Affection towards it, to ſet Garlands upon the Head of it.

Lactantius affirmeth plainly, Inſtit. cap. 19. That it is not to be doubted, that there is no Religion whereſoever is any Image. If Chriſtians then had uſed Images, he would not have made his Propoſition ſo large.

St. Auguſtine, De Civitate Dei, lib. 4. cap. 31. commendeth Varro the Roman in theſe Words: When as Varro thought Religion might be kept more purely without Images, who doth not ſee how near he came to the Truth? So that not only by M. Varro's Judgment, but alſo by St. Auguſtine's Approbation, the moſt pure and chaſte Obſervation of Religion, and neareſt the Truth, is to be without Images.

The ſame St. Auguſtine in Pſal. 113. hath theſe Words: Images have more Force to bow down and crook the ſilly Soul, than to teach it.

And upon the ſame Pſalm he moveth this Queſtion, Every Child, yea every Beaſt knoweth that it is not God which they ſee, why then doth the Holy Ghoſt ſo oft give Warning to beware of that Thing which all do know.

St. Auguſtine's Anſwer.

For when they are ſet in Churches, and begin once to be worſhipped of the Multitude or common People, ſtraightway ſpringeth up a moſt filthy Affection of Error.

This Place of St. Auguſtine doth well open how weak a Reaſon it is to ſay, Images are a Thing indifferent in Chambers and in Churches. For the Alteration of the Place, Manner, and other Circumſtances, doth alter oftentimes the Nature of the Thing. It is lawful to buy and ſell in the Market, but not ſo in Churches. It is lawful to eat and drink, but not ſo in Churches. And therefore ſaith St. Paul, Have you not Houſes to eat and drink in? do you contemn the Church of God?

Many other Actions there be which are lawful and honeſt in private Places, which are neither comely nor honeſt, not only in Churches, but alſo in other Aſſemblies of honeſt People.

Tertullian ſaith, he uſed ſometimes to burn Frankincenſe in his Chamber, which was then uſed of Idolaters, and is yet in the Roman Churches, but he joyneth withal, but not after ſuch a Rite or Ceremony, nor after ſuch a Faſhion, nor with ſuch Preparation or Sumptuouſneſs, as is done before the Idols.

So that Images placed in Churches, and ſet in an honourable Place of Eſtimation, as St. Auguſtine ſaith, and eſpecially over the Lord's Table, which is done (uſing the Words of Tertullian) after the ſame Manner and Faſhion which the Papiſts did uſe, eſpecially after ſo long Continuance of Abuſe of Images, and ſo many being blinded with ſuperſtitious Opinion towards them, cannot be counted a Thing indifferent, but a moſt certain Ruin of many Souls

Epiphanius in his Epiſtle to John Biſhop of Jeruſalem (which Epiſtle was tranſlated out of the Greek by St. Jerom, being a Likelihood that Jerom miſliked not the Doctrine of the ſame) doth write a Fact of his his own, which doth moſt clearly declare the Judgment of that notable learned Biſhop concerning the Uſe of Images, his Words are theſe: When I came to a Village called Anablatha, and ſaw there, as I paſſed by, a Candle burning, and enquiring what Place it was, and learning that it was a Church, and had entered into the ſame to pray, I found there a Vail or Cloth hanging at the Door of the ſame Church, dyed and painted, having on it the Image of Chriſt as it were, or of ſome Saint (for I remember not well whoſe it was.) Then when I ſaw this, that in the Church of Chriſt, againſt the Authority of the Scriptures, the Image of a Man did hang, I cut it in Pieces, &c. And commanded that ſuch manner of Vails or Clothes, which are contrary to our Religion, be not hanged in the Church of Chriſt.

Out of this Place of Epiphanius divers Notes are to be obſerved.

Firſt, that by the Judgment of this ancient Father, to permit Images in Churches is againſt the Authority of the Scriptures, meaning againſt the ſecond Commandment, Thou ſhalt not make to thyſelf any graven Image, &c.

Secondly, That Epiphanius doth reject not only graven or molten, but alſo painted Images: Forſomuch as he cut in Pieces the Image painted in a Vail hanging at the Church-door; what would he have done, if he had found it over the Lord's Table?

Thirdly, That he ſpareth not the Image of Chriſt: For no doubt that Image is moſt perillous in the Church of all other.

Fourthly, That he did not only remove it, but with a Vehemency of Zeal cut it in Pieces, following the Example of the good King Ezechias, who brake the brazen Serpent, and burnt it to Aſhes.

Laſt of all, That Epiphanius thinketh it the Duty of vigilant Biſhops to be careful, that no kind of Images be permitted in the Church.

Serenus Biſhop of Maſſilia broke down Images, and deſtroyed them when he ſaw them begin to be worſhipped, Greg. in regiſt. epiſt. 109.

Experience of the Times ſince hath declared, whether of theſe two Sentences were better. For ſince Gregorius's Time, the Images ſtanding in the Weſt-church, it hath been overflowed with Idolatry, notwithſtanding his or other Mens Doctrine: Whereas if Serenus's Judgment had univerſally taken Place, no ſuch Thing had happened. For if no Images had been ſuffered, none could have been worſhipped: And conſequently, no Idolatry committed by them.

It is manifeſt to them that read Hiſtories, that not only Emperors, but alſo divers and ſundry Councils in the Eaſt-church have condemned and aboliſhed Images both by Decrees and Examples.

Petrus Crinitus in his Book of honeſt Diſcipline, Book 9. chap. 9. wrote out of the Emperors Books theſe Words: Valens and Theodoſius the Emperors wrote to the High-marſhal or Lieutenant in this ſort. Whereas we are very careful that the Religion of Almighty God ſhould be in all Things kept, we permit no Man to caſt, grave, or paint the Image of our Saviour Chriſt, either in Colours, Stone, or other Matter; but whereſoever it be found, we command it to be taken away, puniſhing them moſt grievouſly that ſhall attempt any Thing contrary to our Decrees and Empire.

Leo the third, a Man commended in Hiſtories for his excellent Virtues and Godlineſs, who (as is judged of ſome Men) was the Author of the Book De re militari, that is, of the Feat of War, being tranſlated out of the Greek by Sir John Cheeke, and dedicated to King Henry the Eighth, your Highneſſes Father, by publick Authority, commanded aboliſhing of Images; and in Conſtantinople cauſed all the Images to be gathered together on a Heap, and burned them to Aſhes.

Conſtantine the firſt his Son, aſſembled a Council of the Biſhops of the Eaſt-church; in which Council it was decreed as followeth. It is not lawful for them that believe in God thro' Jeſus Chriſt, to have any Images, either of the Creator, or of any Creatures ſet up in Temples to be worſhipped, but rather that all Images by the Law of God, and for the avoiding of Offence, ought to be taken out of Churches. Which Decree was executed in all Places where any Images were, either in Greece or in Aſia. But in all theſe Times, the Biſhops of Rome rather maintaining the Authority of Gregory, weighing like Chriſtian Biſhops the Peril of the Church, always in their Aſſemblies allowed Images.

Not long after, the Biſhop of Rome, practiſing with Tharaſſus Patriarch of Conſtantinople, obtained of Irene the Empreſs, her Son Conſtantine being then young, that a Council was called at Nice, in which the Pope's Legates were Preſidents, which appeared well by their Fruits: For in that Council it was decreed, That Images ſhould not only be permitted in Churches, but alſo worſhipped: Which Council was confuted by a Book written by Carolus Magnus the Emperor, calling it a fooliſh and an ignorant Council.

Soon after this Council, aroſe a ſharp Contention between Irene the Empreſs, and her Son Conſtantine the Sixth, the Emperor, who deſtroyed Images. And in the End, as ſhe had before wickedly burned the Bones of her Father-in-law, Conſtantine the Fifth, ſo afterward unnaturally ſhe put out the Eyes of her Son Conſtantine the Sixth.

About which Time, as Eutropius writeth, the Sun was darkned moſt terribly for the Space of ſeventeen Days, God ſhewing, by that dreadful Sign, how much he miſliked that kind of proceeding.

To be ſhort, there was never Thing that made more Diviſion, or brought more Miſchief into the Church, than the Controverſy of Images: By reaſon whereof, not only the Eaſt-church was divided from the Weſt, and never ſince perfectly reconciled, but alſo the Empire was cut aſunder and divided, and the Gate opened to the Saracens and Turks to enter and overcome a great Piece of Chriſtendom. The Fault whereof moſt juſtly is to be aſcribed to the Patrons of Images, who could not be contented with the Example of the primitive Church, being moſt ſimple and ſincere, and moſt agreeable to the Scripture: (for as Tertullian ſaith, That as is firſt, is true, and that that is latter is counterfeit.) But with all Extremity maintained the Uſe of Images in Churches, whereof no Profit nor Conveniency did ever grow to the Church of God. For it is evident, that infinite Millions of Souls have been caſt into eternal Damnation by the Occaſion of Images uſed in place of Religion, and no Hiſtory can record, that ever any one Soul was won unto Chriſt by having of Images. But leſt it might appear that the Weſt-church had always generally retained and commended Images, it is to be noted, that in a Council holden in Spain, called Concilium Eliberinum, the Uſe of Images in Churches was clearly prohibited in theſe Form of Words; We decree, that Pictures ought not to be in Churches, leſt that be painted upon the Walls which is worſhipped or adored.

But this notwithſtanding Experience hath declared, that neither aſſembling in Councils, neither Writings, Preachings, Decrees, making of Laws, preſcribing of Puniſhments, hath holpen againſt Images, to which Idolatry hath been committed, nor againſt Idolatry whilſt Images ſtood. For theſe blind Books and dumb School-maſters (which they call Lay-mens Books) have more prevailed by their carved and painted preaching of Idolatry, than all other written Books and Preachings in teaching the Truth, and the Horror of that Vice.

Having thus declared unto your Highneſs a few Cauſes of many which do move our Conſciences in this Matter; we beſeech your Highneſs moſt humbly not to ſtrain us any further, but to conſider that God's Word doth threaten a terrible Judgment unto us, if we, being Paſtors and Miniſters in his Church, ſhould aſſent unto the Thing which in our Learning and Conſcience we are perſuaded doth tend to the Confirmation of Error, Superſtition and Idolatry: And finally, to the Ruin of the Souls committed to our Charge, for which we muſt give an Account to the Prince of Paſtors at the laſt Day, Hebrews 12. 1 Pet. 5. We pray your Majeſty alſo not to be offended with this our Plainneſs and Liberty, which all good and Chriſtian Princes have ever taken in good Part at the Hands of godly Biſhops.

Saint Ambroſe writing to Theodoſius the Emperor, uſeth theſe Words, But neither is it the Part of an Emperor to deny free Liberty of ſpeaking, nor yet the Duty of a Prieſt not to ſpeak what he thinketh. And again; in God's Cauſe whom wilt thou hear, if thou wilt not hear the Prieſt, to whoſe great peril the Fault ſhould be committed? Who dare ſay the Truth unto thee, if the Prieſt dare not? Theſe and ſuch like Speeches of St. Ambroſe, Theodoſius, and Valentinianus the Emperors did always take in good Part, and we doubt not but your Grace will do the like, of whoſe not only Clemency, but alſo Beneficence, we have largely taſted.

We beſeech your Majeſty alſo, in theſe and ſuch like Controverſies of Religion, to refer the Diſcuſſment and deciding of them to a Synod of our Biſhops and other godly learned Men, according to the Example of Conſtantinus Maximus, and other Chriſtian Emperors, that the Reaſons of both Parts being examined by them, the Judgment may be given uprightly in all doubtful Matters.

And to return to this preſent Matter, we moſt humbly beſeech your Majeſty to conſider, that beſides weighty Cauſes in Policy, which we leave to the Wiſdom of your honourable Counſellors, the Eſtabliſhment of Images by your Authority ſhall not only utterly diſcredit our Miniſters, as Builders up of the Things which we have deſtroyed, but alſo blemiſh the Fame of your moſt godly Father, and ſuch notable Fathers as have given their Life for the Teſtimony of God's Truth, who by publick Law removed all Images.

The Almighty and everlaſting God plentifully indue your Majeſty with his Spirit and heavenly Wiſdom, and long preſerve your moſt gracious Reign and proſperous Government over us, to the Advancement of his Glory, to the Overthrow of Superſtition, and to the Benefit and Comfort of all your Highneſs's loving Subjects.

Note, Dr. Ridley ſometime Biſhop of London was a Man ſo reverenced for his Learning and Knowledge in the Scripture, that even his very Enemies have reported him to have been an excellent Scholar, whoſe Life if it might have been redeemed with the Sum of 10,000 Marks, yea, 10,000 Pounds, the Lord Dacres of the North, being his Kinſman, would have given it to Queen Mary, rather than he ſhould have been burned. And yet was ſhe ſo unmerciful, for all his Gentleneſs in King Edward's Days, that it would not be granted for any Sute that could be made. Oh, that ſhe had remembred his Labour for her to King Edward the Sixth, with Archbiſhop Cranmer, in ſuch ſort that even ſhe had yielded but the Reward of a Publican, Mat. 5. then had the Earth not ſo been bereft of him as it was; but the Lord forgive us our Sins which were the Cauſe thereof, and grant that we never ſo provoke his Anger again, if it be his bleſſed Will, Amen.

IT is given to the Queen's Majeſty to underſtand, that certain of her Subjects by their evil Diſpoſitions do ſow and ſpread abroad divers Seditions, to the Derogation and Diſhonour of Almighty God, in the State of Religion eſtabliſhed by the Laws of this Realm, and alſo to the Diſhonour of her Highneſs, in diſproving her lawful Right of Supremacy amongſt her Subjects. And this that they do, is not done as in Secrecy or by Stealth, but openly avouched, and in all Companies diſputed on. And thus by their bold Attempts they ſeem not to obey or regard the Authority of Laws, nor the Quiet of her Subjects. As for Example, by bringing in and ſpreading abroad divers lewd Libels, and ſeditious Books from byond the Seas, and in ſuch Boldneſs, that they do commend thoſe Writers in their ſeditious Books, containing manifeſt Matter againſt the Eſtate eſtabliſhed. Which Boldneſs of Men, ſo univerſally and every where ſeen and heard, cannot be thought to be done but by the Comfort and Aid, or at the leaſt winkt at by them whom the Queen's Highneſs hath placed in Authority to repreſs theſe Inſolencies. And the Queen's Highneſs cannot more juſtly charge any for this Diſorder, than ſuch who be in Commiſſions choſen to repreſs theſe Diſorders. If it be anſwered me, that they cannot ſee ſuch open Boldneſs and factious Diſorders, I muſt ſay that they have no Eyes to ſee: And if they hear not of ſuch contemptuous Talk I may ſay that they have no Ears. I would have thoſe Men judge what will come of theſe unbridled Speeches in the End, if Reformations be not had thereof. What cometh of Factions and Seditions, we have been taught of late Years, and what the Fruits thereof be, which I beſeech God long to defend us from. If ſuch Diſorders be not redreſſed by Law, then muſt Force and Violence reform. Which when they take Place, may happen to fall as ſoon on them that ſeem to have leaſt Conſideration in this Matter. If Force and Violence prevail, then ye know that Law is pu to Silence, and cannot be executed, which ſhould only maintain good Order. If it be reply'd againſt me, that to the ſuppreſſing of theſe open Talks there is no Law, which by ſpecial Letter can charge any Man Offender; I muſt ſay, that whatſoever the Letter of the Law be, the Meaning of the Law was and is clean contrary to the Liberty of theſe Doings. If it be ſaid, that no Man can be charged by the Law, except it can be proved againſt him, that his Speech and Deeds be done maliciouſly; what ye call Malice I cannot tell. But if the bringing in of theſe ſeditious Books make Mens Minds to be at Variance one with another, Diſtraction of Minds maketh Seditions, Seditions bring in Tumults, Tumults work Inſurrections and Rebellion, Inſurrections make Depopulations and Deſolations, and bring in utter Ruin and Deſtruction of Mens Bodies, Goods, and Lands: And if any ſow the Root whereof theſe Men come, and yet it can be ſaid that he hath no Malice, or that he doth not maliciouſly labour to deſtroy both publick and private Wealth, I cannot tell what Act may be thought to be done maliciouſly. And further, if it be ſaid to me, that the Man whoſhould be charged with Offence, muſt be proved to have done his Act adviſedly: To that I anſwer, if any bring in thoſe Books, diſtribute them to others, commend and defend them, and yet cannot be charged to have done adviſedly, I have no Skill of their Adviſedneſs. If it be ſaid, that the Law treateth of ſuch Acts as be directly derogatory and of none other, what is direct overthwarting the Law, when the contrary thereof is plainly treated, holden, and defended, and the Truth by Arguments condemned? It may be ſaid again, that the World doth not now like Extremity in Laws penal, and calleth them bloody Laws. As for extream and bloody Laws, I never liked of them; but where the Execution of ſuch Laws toucheth half a Dozen Offenders, and the non Execution may bring in Danger half an hundred, I think this Law nor the Execution thereof may juſtly be called extream and bloody. In ſuch like Compariſon I may utter my Meaning, as to make a Difference between Whipping and Hanging. Indeed, though Whipping may be thought extreme, yet if by whipping a Man may eſcape hanging, in this reſpect, not whipping bringeth in this Bloodineſs and Extremity, and not the Execution of the Law, and better it were, a Man to be twice whipped, than once hanged: The Pains do differ, but wiſe Men will ſoon conſider the Diverſity. The Truth is, to ſuffer diſobedient Subjects to take Boldneſs againſt the Laws of God and their Prince, to wink at the obſtinate Minds of ſuch as be unbridled in their Affections; to maintain a foreign Power of the Biſhop of Rome, directly againſt the Prince's Prerogative eſtabliſhed by Laws, is not this to hatch Diſſention, and to cheriſh Sedition? To extol the Writings of ſuch, who by all their Wits deviſe to ſupplant the Prince's lawful Authority. If theſe Doings be not Means to the Diſturbance and utter Ruin of this Realm, I know not what is good Government. If theſe be not the Sparks of Rebellion, what be they? Thus much having ſpoken to your Wiſdoms, I doubt not of your aſſenting with me; the rather alſo becauſe I utter them unto you as from the Queen's Majeſty by Commandment, who doth require of us all more Diligence in Execution of Laws, than commonly hath been obſerved: Whereby we ſhall do our Duty to Almighty God the better, declare our Allegiance to our Sovereign, regard the Majeſty of the Laws, love the Quiet of our Country, and procure the Safety of ourſelves.

God ſave the Queen.

A true Report of the Martyrdom of one Richard Atkins, an Engliſhman, at Rome.

ABOUT the Month of July, Anno 1581, one Richard Atkins born in Hertfordſhire, an Engliſhman, came to Rome, and having found the Engliſh College, knocked at the Door, to whom divers of the Students there came out, to welcome him, underſtanding that he was an Engliſhman. They willed him to go to the Hoſpital, and there to receive his Meat and Lodging, according as the Order was appointed: Whereunto he anſwered, I come not (my Countrymen) to any ſuch Intent, as you judge, but I come lovingly to rebuke the great Miſorder of your Lives, which I grieve to hear, and pity to behold: I come likewiſe to let your proud Antichriſt underſtand, that he doth offend the heavenly Majeſty, rob God of his Honour, and poiſoneth the whole World with his abominable Blaſphemies, making them do Homage to Stocks and Stones, and that filthy Sacrament, which is nothing elſe but a fooliſh Idol. When they heard theſe Words, one Hugh Griffin, a Welchman, and Student in the College, cauſed him to be put in the Inquiſition? Where, how they examined him, and how he anſwered them I know not, but after certain Days he was ſet at Liberty again and one Day going in the Street, he met a Prieſt carrying the Sacrament; which offended his Conſcience, to ſee the People ſo crouch and bow down to it, he caught at it to have thrown it down, but miſſing of his Purpoſe, and it being judged by the People, that he did catch at the Holineſs that (they ſay) cometh from the Sacrament, upon meer Devotion, he was let paſs, and nothing ſaid to him: Few Days after he came to St. Peter's Church, where divers Gentlemen and others were hearing Maſs, and the Prieſt at the Elevation; he uſing no Reverence, ſtepped among the People to the Altar, and threw down the Chalice with the Wine, ſtriving likewiſe to have pulled the Cake out of the Prieſt's Hands; for which divers roſe up and beat him with their Fiſts, and one drew his Rapier, and would have ſlain him: So that in brief he was carried to Priſon, where he was examined, wherefore he had committed ſuch a heinous Offence; whereunto he anſwered, that he came purpoſely for that Intent, to rebuke the Pope's Wickedneſs and their Idolatry. Upon this he was condemned to be burned; which Sentence (he ſaid) he was right willing to ſuffer, and the rather, becauſe the Sum of his Offence pertained to the Glory of God. During the Time he remained in Priſon, ſundry Engliſhmen came unto him, willing him to be ſorry for what he had done, and to recant from his damnable Opinion; but all the Means they uſed were in vain, he confuted their Dealings by divers Places of Scripture, and willed them to be ſorry for their Wickedneſs, while God did permit them Time, elſe they were in Danger of everlaſting Damnation; theſe Words made the Engliſhmen depart: For they could not abide to hear them. Within awhile after, he was ſet upon an Aſs without any Saddle, he being from the Middle upward naked, having ſome Engliſh Prieſts with him to talk with him, but he regarded them not, but ſpake to the People in as good Language as he could, and told them they were in a wrong Way, and willed them for Chriſt's Sake to have regard to the ſaving of their Souls. All the Way as he went, there were four that did nothing elſe but thruſt at his Body with burning Torches, whereat he never moved, nor ſhrunk one Jot, but with a chearful Countenance laboured to perſuade the People, often bending his Body to meet the Torches, as they were thruſt at him, and would take them in his own Hand, and hold them burning ſtill upon his Body, whereat the People not a little wondred. Thus he continued almoſt the Space of half a Mile, till he came before St. Peter's, where the Place of Execution was. When he was come to the Place of Execution, there they had made a Device, not to make the Fire about him, but to burn his Legs firſt, which they did, he not diſmaying any whit, but ſuffered all marvellous chearfully; which moved the he People to ſuch a Quandary as was not in Rome many a Day. Then they offered him a Croſs, and willed him to embrace it, in Token that he died a Chriſtian; but he put it away with his Hand, telling them that they were evil Men to trouble him with ſuch Paltry, when he was preparing himſelf to God, whom he beheld in Majeſty and Mercy, ready to receive him into eternal Reſt. They ſeeing him in this Mind, departed, ſaying, let us go and leave him to the Devil, whom he ſerves. Thus this faithful Soldier and Martyr of Chriſt ended his Days.

This is faithfully avouched by John Young, who was at that Time, and a good while after in Rome, in Service with Maſter Doctor Morton; who ſeeing the Martyrdom of this Man, when he came home to his Houſe, in Preſence of Mr. Smith his Son, Mr. Creed, and the ſaid John Young, ſpake as followeth: Surely this Fellow was marvellouſly obſtinate, he nothing regarded the good Counſel which was uſed to him, nor ſhrunk all the Way when the Torches were thruſt at his naked Body. Beſide, in the Place of Execution he did not faint nor cry one Jot in the Fire, albeit they tormented him very cruelly, and burned him by Degrees, as his Legs firſt, to put him to the greater Pain; yet all this he did but ſmile at. Doubtleſs, but that the Word of God cannot be but true, elſe we might judge this Fellow to be of God; for who could have ſuffered ſo much Pain as he did? but truly I believe the Devil was in him.

The Life and Death of Dr. Story, a cruel Perſecutor.

THIS Dr. Story being an Engliſhman by Birth, and from his Infancy not only nurſled in Popery, but alſo even as it were by Nature earneſtly affected to the ſame, and growing ſomewhat to riper Years, in the Days of Queen Mary became a bloody Tyrant, and cruel Perſecutor of Chriſt in his Members (as all the Stories in this Book almoſt do declare.) Thus he raging all the Reign of the foreſaid Queen Mary againſt the infallible Truth of Chriſt's Goſpel, and the true Profeſſors thereof, never ceaſed till he had conſumed to Aſhes two or three hundred bleſſed Martyrs, who willingly gave their Lives for the Teſtimony of his Truth; and thinking their Puniſhment in the Fire not cruel enough, he went about to invent new Torments for the holy Martyrs of Chriſt, ſuch was his Hatred to the Truth of Chriſt's Goſpel: But in the End the Lord God looking upon the Affliction and cruel Bloodſhedding of his Servants, took away Queen Mary the great Pillar of Popery. After whom ſucceeded Lady Elizabeth, now Queen of England, who ſtaying the bloody Sword of Perſecution from raging any further, cauſed the ſame Dr. Story to be apprehended, and committed to Priſon, with many other his Accomplices, ſworn Enemies to Chriſt's glorious Goſpel. The ſaid Story having been awhile detained in Priſon, at laſt, by what Means I know not, got out, and convey'd himſelf over the Seas, where he continued a moſt bloody Perſecutor, ſtill raging againſt God's Saints with Fire and Sword. Inſomuch as he growing to be familiar and right dear to Duke d'Alva in Antwerp, received ſpecial Commiſſion from him to ſearch the Ships for Goods forfeited, and for Engliſh Books, and ſuch like.

And in this Favour and Authority he continued there for a Space, by which Means he did much Hurt, and brought many a good Man and Woman to Trouble and extreme Peril of Life thro' his bloodthirſty Cruelty: But at laſt the Lord (when the Meaſure of his Iniquity was full) proceeded in Judgment againſt him, and cut him off from the Face of the Earth, according to the Prayers of many a good Man; which came to paſs in Order as followeth. It being certainly known that he not only intended the Subverſion and Overthrow of his native Country of England, by bringing in foreign Hoſtility, if by any Means he might compaſs it; but alſo daily and hourly murthered God's People, there was this Platform laid, that one Mr. Parker, a Merchant, ſhould ſail unto Antwerp, and by ſome Means convey Story into England.

This Parker arriving at Antwerp, ſent ſeveral Perſons to Dr. Story, to ſignify unto him, that there was an Engliſh Ship came, fraught with Merchandize, and that if he would make Search thereof himſelf, he ſhould find Store of Engliſh Books, and other Things for his Purpoſe. Story hearing this, and ſuſpecting nothing, made Haſte towards the Ship, thinking to make the ſame his Prey; and coming on board ſearched for Engliſh heretical Books (as he called them) and going down under the Hatches, becauſe he would be ſure to have their Blood if he could, they clapped down the Hatches, hoiſted up their Sails, having a good Gale, and ſailed away into England. Where they arriving, preſented this bloody Butcher, and traiterous Rebel Story, to the no little Rejoycing of many an Engliſh Heart. He being now committed to Priſon, continued there a good Space: During all which Time he was laboured and ſolicited daily by wiſe and learned Fathers, to recant his deviliſh and erroneous Opinions, to conform himſelf to the Truth, and to acknowledge the Queen's Supremacy. All which he utterly denied to the Death, ſaying, that he was ſworn Subject to the King of Spain, and was no Subject to the Queen of England, nor ſhe his Sovereign Queen; and therefore (as he well deſerved) he was condemned (as a Traitor to God, the Queen's Majeſty, and the Realm) to be drawn, hanged, and quartered; which was performed accordingly; he being laid upon a Hurdle, and drawn from the Tower along the Streets to Tyburn, where he being hanged till he was half dead, was cut down and ſtripped; and (which is not to be forgot) when the Executioner had cut off his privy Members, he ruſhing up upon a ſudden, gave him a Blow upon the Ear, to the great Wonder of all that ſtood by: And thus ended this bloody Nimrod his wretched Life, whoſe Judgment I leave to the Lord.

A brief Relation of the horrible Maſſacre in France, Anno 1572.

AND firſt for Brevity-ſake to overpaſs the bloody Butchery of the Roman Catholicks in Orange againſt the Proteſtants, moſt fiercely and unawares breaking into their Houſes, and there, without Mercy, killing Man, Woman and Child; of whom ſome being ſpoiled and naked, they threw out of their Lofts into the Streets; ſome they ſmothered in their Houſes with Smoak, with Sword and Weapon ſparing none, the Carcaſſes of ſome they threw to Dogs, which was in the Year 1570, in the Reign of Charles IX. Likewiſe to paſs over the cruel Slaughter at Roan, where the Proteſtants being at a Sermon without the City Walls upon the King's Edict, the Papiſts in Fury ran upon them coming home, and ſlew of them about 40 at leaſt, many more they wounded. This Example at Roan, ſtirred up the Papiſts in Diepe, to practiſe the like Rage alſo againſt the Chriſtians there returning from the Sermon; whoſe Slaughter had been the greater, had they not more wiſely before been provided of Weapons for their own Defence at Need. All which happened about the ſame Year aforeſaid, Anno 1570. But theſe with ſuch like I briefly overſlip, to enter now into the Matter above promiſed, that is, briefly to treat of the horrible and moſt barbarous Maſſacre wrought in Paris, ſuch as I ſuppoſe was never heard of before in any civil Diſſenſion amongſt the very Heathen. In few Words to touch the Subſtance of the Matter.

After long Troubles in France, the Papiſts foreſeeing no Good to be done againſt the Proteſtants by open Force, began to deviſe how by crafty Means to entrap them, and that by two Manner of Ways; the one by pretending a Power to be ſent into the lower Country, whereof the Admiral to be the Captain; not that the King ſo meant indeed, but only to underſtand thereby what Power and Force the Admiral had under him, who they were, and what were their Names. The ſecond was by a certain Marriage ſuborned, between the Prince of Navarre, and the King's Siſter. To this pretenſed Marriage, it was deviſed that all the chief Proteſtants of France ſhould be invited, and meet in Paris. Among whom firſt they began with the Queen of Navarre, Mother to the Prince, that was to marry the King's Siſter, attempting by all Means poſſible to obtain her Conſent thereunto. She being then at Rochel, and allured by many fair Words to repair unto the King, conſented at length to come, and was received at Paris; where ſhe after much ado, at length being won to the King's Mind, and providing for the Marriage, ſhortly upon the ſame fell ſick, and within five Days departed, not without Suſpicion, as ſome ſaid, of Poiſon. But her Body being opened, no Sign of Poiſon could there be found, ſave only that a certain Apothecary made his Brag, that he had killed the Queen by certain venemous Odours and Smells by him confected.

After this notwithſtanding the Marriage ſtill going forward, the Admiral, Prince of Navarre, Conde, with divers other chief States of the Proteſtants, induced by the King's Letters and many fair Promiſes, at laſt were brought to Paris. Where with great Solemnity they were received, but eſpecially the Admiral. To make the Matter ſhort, the Day of the Marriage came, which was the eighteenth of Auguſt, Anno 1572. Which Marriage being ſolemnized by the Cardinal of Borbonne, upon an high Stage ſet up of Purpoſe without the Church Walls, the Prince of Navarre and Conde came down, waiting for the King's Siſter, being then at Maſs. This done, they reſorted all together to the Biſhop's Palace to Dinner. At Evening they were had to a Palace in the Middle of Paris to Supper. Not long after this, being the two and twentieth of Auguſt, the Admiral coming from the Council Table, by the Way was ſtruck with a Piſtolet, charged with three Pellets, in both his Arms. He being thus wounded, and yet ſtill remaining in Paris, although the Vidam gave him Counſel to flee away, it ſo fell out that certain Soldiers were appointed in divers Places of the City to be ready at a Watch-word at the Command of the Prince, upon which Watch-word given, they burſt out to the Slaughter of the Proteſtants, firſt beginning with the Admiral himſelf, who being wounded with many ſore Wounds, was caſt out of the Window into the Street, where his Head being firſt ſtruck off, and embalmed with Spices to be ſent to the Pope, the ſavage People raging againſt him, cut off his Arms and Privy Members, and ſo drawing him three Days through the Streets of Paris, they dragged him unto the Place of Execution out of the City, and there hanged him up by his Heels, to the greater Shew and Scorn of him.

After the Martyrdom of this good Man, the armed Soldiers with Rage and Violence ran upon all the others of the ſame Profeſſion, ſlaying and killing all the Proteſtants they knew or could find within the City Gates incloſed. This bloody Slaughter continued the Space of many Days, but eſpecially the greateſt Slaughter was in the three firſt Days, in which were numbered to be ſlain, as the Story writeth, above 10,000 Men, Women, old and young, of all Sorts and Conditions. The Bodies of the Dead were carried in Carts to be thrown in the River; ſo that not only the River was all ſtained therewith, but alſo whole Streams in certain Places of the City did run with gore Blood of the ſlain Bodies. So great was the Outrage of that helliſh Perſecution, that not only the Proteſtants, but alſo certain, whom they thought indifferent Papiſts, they put to the Sword inſtead of Proteſtants. In the Number of them that were ſlain of the more learned Sort, was Petrus Ramus, alſo Lambinus, another notorious learned Man; Plateanus, Lomenius, Chapeſius, with others.

And not only within the Walls of Paris this Uproar was contained, but it extended further into other Cities and Quarters of the Realm, eſpecially Lyons, Orleans, Tholouſe, and Roane. In which Cities it is almoſt incredible, nor ſcarce ever heard of in any Nation, what Cruelty was ſhewed, what Numbers of good Men were deſtroyed; inſomuch that within the Space of one Month thirty thouſand at leaſt of religious Proteſtants are numbred to be ſlain, as is credibly reported in the Commentaries of them which teſtify purpoſely of the Matter.

Furthermore here is to be noted, that when the Pope firſt heard of this bloody Stir, he with his Cardinals made ſuch Joy at Rome, with their Proceſſion, with their Gunſhot, and ſinging of Te Deum, that in honour of that feſtival Act, a Jubilee was commanded by the Pope with great Indulgence, and much Solemnity. Whereby thou haſt here to diſcern and judge, with what Spirit and Charity theſe Papiſts are moved to maintain their Religion, which otherwiſe would fall to the Ground without all hope of Recovery. Likewiſe in France no leſs rejoycing there was upon the 28th Day of the Month, the King commanding publick Proceſſions through the whole City to be made, with Bonefires, ringing, and ſinging; where the King himſelf, with the Queen his Mother, and his whole Court reſorting together to the Church, gave Thanks and Praiſe to God, for that ſo worthy Victory atchieved upon St. Bartholomew's Day againſt the Proteſtants, whom they thought to be utterly overthrown and vanquiſhed in all the Realm for ever.

And indeed to Man's thinking it might appear no leſs after ſuch a great Deſtruction of the Proteſtants, having loſt ſo many worthy and noble Captains as then were cut off, whereupon many, for Fear revoking their Religion, returned to the Pope, divers fled out of the Realm, ſuch as would not turn, keeping themſelves ſecret, durſt not be known nor ſeen, ſo that it was paſt all hope of Man, that the Goſpel ſhould ever have any more Place in France: But ſuch is the admirable Working of God, where Man's Help and Hope moſt faileth, there he moſt ſheweth his Strength and helpeth, as here is to be ſeen. For whereas the little ſmall Remnant of the Goſpel Side, being now brought to utter Deſperation, were now ready to give over unto the King, and many were gone already againſt Conſcience, yielding to Time, yet the Lord of his Goodneſs ſo wrought, that many were ſtayed and reclaimed again through the Occaſion firſt of them in Rochel: who hearing of the cruel Maſſacre in Paris, and Slaughter at Tholouſe, moſt conſtantly with valiant Hearts (the Lord ſo working) thought to ſtand to their Defence againſt the King's Power, by whoſe Example certain other Cities hearing thereof took no little Courage to do the like; as, namely Montalbane, the City called Nemanſium, Sanſer in Occitamia, Millialdum, Mirebellum, Fuduzia, with other Towns and Cities more: Who being confederate together, exhorted one another to be circumſpect, and take good heed of the falſe diſſembling Practices not to be truſted of the mercileſs Papiſts, intending nothing but Blood and Deſtruction.

Theſe Things thus paſſing at Rochel, the King hearing thereof, giveth in Commandment to Captain

Strozzius

Strozzius and Guardius to ſee to Rochel. After this he ſendeth a Nobleman, one Bironius, requiring of the Rochel Men to receive him for their Governour under the King. Of this great Conſultation being had, at length the Rochel Men began to condeſcend upon certain Conditions; which being not eaſily granted unto, and eſpecially they hearing in the mean Time what was done to others of their Fellows, which had ſubmitted themſelves, thought it ſo better to ſtand to the Defence of their Lives and Conſciences, and to adventure the worſt. Whereupon began great Siege and Battery to be laid againſt Rochel both by Land and Sea, which was Anno 1572. about the fourth Day of December. It would require another Volume to deſcribe all Things during the Time of this Siege, that paſſed on either Side, between the King's Part, and the Town of Rochel; briefly to run over ſome Parts of the Matter: In the Beginning of the next Year following which was Anno 1573. in the Month of January, Commandment was given out by the King to all and ſundry Nobles and Peers of France, upon great Puniſhment, to addreſs themſelves in a moſt forcible Manner to the aſſaulting of Rochel. Whereupon a great Concourſe of all the Nobility, with the whole Power of France, was there aſſembled, amongſt whom was alſo the Prince of Anjou, the King's Brother (who there not long after was proclaimed King of Poland) accompanied with his other Brother Duke Alanſon, Navarre, Conde, and a great Number of States beſides. Thus the whole Power of France being gathered againſt one poor Town, had not the mighty Hand of God ſtood on their Side, it had been impoſſible for them to eſcape. During the Time of this Siege, which laſted ſeven Months, what Skirmiſhes and Conflicts were on both Sides, it would require a long Tractation. To make ſhort, ſeven principal Aſſaults were given to the poor Town of Rochel, with all the Power that France could make. In all which Aſſaults ever the Pope's catholick Side had the worſt. Concerning the firſt Aſſault thus I find written, that within the Space of 26 Days were charged againſt the Walls and Houſes of Rochel, to the Number of thirty thouſand Shot of Iron Bullets and Globes, whereby a great Breach was made for the Adverſary to invade the City: But ſuch was the Courage of them within, not Men only, but alſo of Women, Matrons, and Maidens, with Spits, Fire, and ſuch other Weapons as came to hand, that the Adverſary was driven back, with no ſmall Slaughter of their Soldiers: Only of the Townſmen were ſlain and wounded to the Number of ſixty Perſons. Likewiſe in the ſecond Aſſault 2000 great Field-pieces were laid againſt the Town; whereupon the Adverſary attempted the next Day to invade the Town, but through the Induſtry of the Soldiers and Citizens, and alſo of the Women and Maids, the Invaders were forced at length to fly away faſter than they came. No better Succeſs had all the Aſſaults that followed: Whereby conſider (gentle Reader) with thyſelf, in what great Diſtreſs theſe good Men were, not of Rochel only, but of other Cities alſo, during theſe ſeven Months above-mentioned, had not the mighty Hand of the Lord Almighty ſuſtained them. Concerning whoſe wondrous Operation for his Servants in theſe hard Diſtreſſes, three memorable Things I find in Hiſtory to be noted.

The one concerning the Siege of Sanſer; which City being terribly battered and razed with Gunſhot of great Cannons, and Field-pieces, having at one Siege no leſs than three thouſand Bullets and Gunſtones flying upon them, wherewith the Creſts of their Helmets were pierced, their Sleeves, their Hoſe, their Hats pierced, their Weapons in their Hands broken, their Walls ſhaken, their Houſes rent down; yet not one Perſon ſlain or wounded with all this, ſave only at the firſt a certain Maiden, with the Blaſt of the Shot flying by her, was ſtruck down, and died.

The ſecond Thing to be noted is this, that in the ſame City during all the Time of the Siege, which laſted ſeven Months and a half, for all ths Ordnance and Battering-pieces diſcharged againſt them, which are numbred to ſix thouſand, nor ſo much as 25 Perſons in all were ſlain.

The third Example, no leſs memorable, was at Rochel: Whereas the poorer ſort began to lack Corn and Victuals, there was ſent to them every Day in the River (by the Hand of the Lord no doubt) a great Multitude of Fiſh (called Surdones) which the poorer People did uſe inſtead of Bread. Which Fiſh, the ſame Day as the Siege brake up, departed and came no more. Teſtified by them which were preſent there in Rochel all the Time.

What Number was loſt on both Sides during all this ſeven Months War, it is not certainly known. Of the King's Camp what Number was ſlain, by this it may be conjectured, that 132 of their Captains were killed and ſlain, of whom the chief was Duke Damoule.

To cloſe up this tragical Story, concerning the breaking up of this ſeven Months Siege: Thus it fell out, that ſhortly after the ſeventh Aſſault given againſt Rochel, which was Anno 1573. about the Month of June, Word came to the Camp, that Duke Anjou the King's Brother was proclaimed King of Poland. Whereat great Joy was in the Camp. By occaſion whereof the new King, more willing to have Peace, entred Talk with them of Rochel: Who, as he ſhewed himſelf to them not ungentle, ſo found he them again to him not unconformable. Whereupon a certain Agreement pacificatory was concluded between them upon Conditions. Which Agreement the new King of Poland ſoon preferred to the French King his Brother, not without ſome Sute and Interceſſion to have it ratified. The King alſo himſelf, partly being weary of theſe chargeable Wars, was the more willing to aſſent thereunto. And thus at length, through the Lord's great Work, the King's royal Conſent under Form of an Edict was ſet down in Writing, and confirmed by the King, containing 25 Articles. In which alſo were included certain other Cities of the Proteſtants, granting to them Benefit of Peace and Liberty of Religion. This Edict or Mandate ſent down from the King by his Herald at Arms, Bironius in the King's Name cauſed to be ſolemnly proclaimed at Rochel, Anno 1573. the tenth Day of June.

The Year next following, 1574, for two Things ſeemeth fatal and famous; for the Death firſt of Charles the Ninth the French King, alſo moſt of all for the Death of Charles, Cardinal of Loraine, Brother to Guiſe. Of the Manner of the Cardinal's Death, I find little mention in Stories. Touching the King's Death, although Ric. Dinothus ſaith nothing, for Fear belike, becauſe he being a Frenchman, his Name is expreſſed and known: But another Story (whom the ſaid Dinothus doth follow) bearing no Name, ſaith thus: That he died the 25th Day of May, upon Whitſun-Eve, being of the Age of 25 Years: And addeth more, certain it is, that his Sickneſs came of bleeding. And ſaith further: The conſtant Report ſo goeth, that his Blood guſhing out by divers Parts of his Body, he toſſing in his Bed and caſting out many horrible Blaſphemies, laid upon Pillows with his Heels upward and Head downward, voided ſo much Blood at his Mouth that in few Hours he died. Which Story, if it be true, as is recorded and teſtified, may be a Spectacle and Example to all perſecuting Kings and Princes polluted with the Blood of Chriſtian Martyrs. And thus much briefly touching the late terrible Perſecution in France.

Edward Bulkley to the Chriſtian Reader.

'WHereas that excellent Man, both for Learning and Godlineſs, Mr. John Fox of bleſſed Memory, ended this worthy Work with this ſhort Declaration of that horrible Maſſacre and Murder of God's Saints and Servants in France; I have thought good to ſet down the ſame more particularly and largely, and afterward to add thereunto a Declaration of other outragious Cruelties, committed in France by the Favourers and Followers of the Church of Rome upon faithful Chriſtians, both before and after the ſaid Maſſacre: All faithfully collected and taken out of the Hiſtory of that honourable Man James Auguſt Thuanus, Preſident of the Parliament of Paris, and Counſellor of State to the late French King Henry the Fourth. And thus I have done, that we may thereby be the more moved to hate and abhor that bloody Babylon of Rome, and to take the better Heed, that by our Sins and Contempt of God's holy Word, by his great Mercy committed unto us, we do not again fall into the cruel Claws thereof, and into the bloody Hands of her Followers; as moſt certainly we had done, if God in great Mercy had not prevented that ſavage, barbarous, and moſt monſtrous Powder-Treaſon: Of which great and merciful Deliverance God make us mindful and truly thankful in glorifying his Name, and ſerving him in true Holineſs and Righteouſneſs all the Days of our Life, Amen.'

WHEN the Admiral was wounded in both his Arms, he immediately thereupon ſaid to Maure, Preacher to the Queen of Navarre deceaſed; O my Brother, I do now perceive that I am beloved of my God, ſeeing that for his moſt holy Name's ſake I do ſuffer theſe Wounds. Then he whiſpered in the Ear of one of them that bare up his Arm, that he ſhould deliver an hundred Crowns to Marlin his Preacher, to be given to the Poor of the Church of Paris.

The Admiral was ſlain by Bemjus, of whom Alienus (one of them that came to kill him) did afterwards report, that he never ſaw Man in ſo preſent Peril, ſo conſtantly and confidently ſuffer Death.

Many honourable Men and great Perſonages were then murdered, as Count Rochfulcaud, Telinius the Admiral's Son-in-law, Antonius Claromontus Marqueſs of Ravely, Lewes Buſſius, Bandineus, Pluvialius, Bernius, &c.

Francis Nompar Caumontius, being in Bed with his two Sons, was ſlain with one of them: The other was ſtrangely preſerved, who after came to great Honour and Dignity.

Stephen Cevalerie Prime, chief Treaſurer to the King in Poictiers, a very good Man, and careful of the Common-wealth, after he had paid for his Life a good Sum of Money, was cruelly murdered by ſome Cutthroats, whom Stephen Fargon Petandery, that gaped for his Office, had ſent for that Purpoſe.

Magdalen Briſſonet, an excellent Woman and learned, the Widow of Ivermus, Maſter of Requeſts to the King, flying out of the City in poor Apparel, was taken, cruelly murdered, and caſt into the River.

Two thouſand were murdered in one Day; and the ſame Liberty of killing and ſpoiling continued certain Days after.

Peter Placie was ſtabbed in with Daggers, and killed.

At Meldis two hundred were caſt into Priſon, and being brought out as Sheep to the Slaughter were cruelly murdered. There alſo 25 Women were ſlain.

At Orleans a thouſand of Men, Women and Children were murdered.

The Citizens of Auguſtobona, when they heard of the Maſſacre at Paris, ſhut the Gates of their Town that no Proteſtant might eſcape, and caſt all that they ſuſpected into Priſon, which afterward were brought forth and murdered.

At Avaricum in like Manner the ſuſpected for Religion were caſt into Priſon, and afterward murdered.

At the Town of Charite, a Troop of Lewes Gonzaga's Horſemen killed 18 Perſons.

At Lions there were 800 moſt miſerably and cruelly murdered; the Children hanging at their Fathers Necks, and the Fathers embracing their Children, &c. Three hundred were ſlain in the Archbiſhop's Houſe. The Monks would not ſuffer their Bodies to be buried.

At Romanium ſeven were killed.

At Tholoſſa 200 were murdered.

At Roan 500 were put to Death. At laſt Thuanus writeth thus; this Example paſſed unto other Cities, and from Cities to Towns and Villages, ſo that it is by many publiſhed, that in all the Kingdom above 30,000 were in theſe Tumults divers Ways deſtroyed; although I think the Number was ſomewhat leſs.

A little before this Maſſacre, a Man, Nurſe, and Infant carried to be baptized, were all three murdered.

There was wonderful great Joy in Rome for this Maſſacre, and the Pope with his Cardinals went in ſolemn Proceſſion to the Church of St. Mark, to give Thanks to God for this great Benefit beſtowed upon the See of Rome and the Chriſtian World. And the Monday following there was ſolemn Service in the Church of Minerva, at which the Pope and the Cardinals were preſent. A Jubilee alſo was publiſhed, and in the Evening the great Ordnance was ſhot off in the Caſtle of St. Angelo. The Cardinal of Lorain gave a thouſand Crowns to him that brought News of it.

Bricamotius an old Man of ſeventy Years, and Cavagnius, were laid upon Hurdles and drawn to Execution: And being in the Way reviled, and defiled with Dirt caſt upon them, they were hanged. Bricamotius might have been pardoned, if he would publickly confeſs, that the Admiral had conſpired againſt the King; which he refuſed to do.

Caſter a City in the County of the Albingens, held by the Proteſtants, being upon the King's great Promiſes of their Safety, delivered up into the Hands of Crucete a Nobleman, was notwithſtanding with Murders and Spoil cruelly waſted.

At Bourdeaux, by the Inſtigation of a Monk, called Enimund Angerius, were 264 cruelly murdered, of whom ſome were Senators. This Monk continually provoked them in his Sermons to this Slaughter.

At Agendicum in Main, a cruel Slaughter of the Proteſtants was committed by the Inſtigation of Æmarus, Inquiſitor of criminal Cauſes. A Rumour being ſpread abroad, that the Proteſtants had taken ſecret Council to invade and ſpoil the Churches, above an hundred of every Eſtate and Sex were by the enraged People killed or drowned in the River Igonna, which runneth by the City, the Houſes of many were ſpoiled; the Church without the City where the Proteſtants aſſembled, was pulled down and made equal to the Ground, and their Vines pulled up by the Roots.

The Duke of Guiſe entered into Bloeſe; which altho' he got without any Fight, yet all furious Liberty was permitted to the Soldiers, Houſes were ſpoiled, many Proteſtants which had remained were ſlain, or drowned in the River; neither were Women ſpared, of whom ſome were defiled, and more murdered. Amongſt whom one Matron of good Birth, having eſcaped drowning in Water, could not eſcape from the Hands of the Murderers. From thence he went to Mere, a Town two Leagues from Bloeſe, where Proteſtants had frequent Aſſembly at Sermons; which for many Days together was ſpoiled, and many killed, and Caſſebonius the Paſtor was drowned in the next River.

At Anjou, Albiacus the Paſtor was murdered, certain Women ſlain, and ſome defiled; amongſt which, two Siſters were abuſed in the Sight of their Father, who was bound to a Well to behold that Sight.

John Burgeolus, Preſident of Turin, an old Man, being ſuſpected to be a Proteſtant, having bought with a great Sum of Money his Life and Safety, was notwithſtanding taken and beaten cruelly with Clubs and Staves, and being ſtripped of his Cloaths, was brought to the Bank of the River Liger, and was hanged his Feet upward, and his Head downward in the Water up to his Breaſt; then (he yet alive) they opened his Belly, plucked out his Guts, and threw them into the River; and taking his Heart, put it upon a Spear, carrying it with contumelious Words about the City.

The Town of Barre being taken by the Papiſts, all kind of Cruelty was there uſed, Children were cut up, and the Guts of ſome of them and Hearts pulled out, which in Rage they gnawed with their Teeth. They that were in the Caſtle, when they had yielded themſelves to the Will of the Conqueror, were almoſt all hanged. One Ralet ſpared not his own Son, but ſuffered him in that Tumult to be hanged.

When the City Matiſcon was taken by corrupting the Keeper of the Keys, whom yet they killed, great Cruelty was ſhewed, ſo that they counted it a Sport to cut off Men's Legs and Arms.

Sanpontius inviting Gentlewomen to Supper, would walk with them, and having his Soldiers about him, uſed to caſt ſome of his Priſoners (of which he had many) from the Bridge into the River, and with that Spectacle did ſatisfy the Eyes of his Gueſts; of whom he would often ask, whether they did ever ſee Men leap better.

At Albia of Cahors, upon the Lord's Day the 16th of December, the Papiſts at the Ringing of a Bell broke open the Doors, where the Proteſtants were aſſembled, and killed without Difference, ſome in the Place, ſome as they were getting away, were here and there ſlain, among whom was one Guacerius a rich Merchant; who being drawn into his Houſe, was with his Wife and Children murdered, and his Houſe ſpoiled. About forty-five were in that Tumult murdered, and their Bodies contumelioufly uſed.

In a Town called Penna, 300 (notwithſtanding the Safety of their Lives was promiſed them) were cruelly murdered by Spaniards, which were newly come to ſerve the French King; who alſo killed certain Women there; ſcoffingly ſaying, that they were Lutheran Men, diſſembling their Sex by their Apparel.

The Town of Nonne being yielded to the Papiſts, upon Condition that the foreign Soldiers ſhould depart ſafe with Horſe and Armour, leaving their Enſigns, and that the Enemies Soldiers that were Footmen ſhould not enter into the Town, and that no Harm ſhould be done to the Townſmen; but that they might (if they would) go into the Caſtle: After the yielding of it, the Gates were ſet open, and ſtraight they came to murdering and ſpoiling without any Regard of the foreſaid Conditions. Men and Women without Difference were killed; the Streets ſounded with miſerable Mourning, Blood flowing in the Ways, and the laſcivious Soldiers Swords ſhining in the Flames of Fire, which they had caſt upon the Houſes. Many were cruelly killed, being thrown down headlong from on high. Among others, this Example of inordinate Filthineſs and Cruelty is reported: A certain Woman being drawn out of a private Place, into which to avoid the Rage of the Soldiers ſhe had fled with her Husband, was in his Sight ſhamefully defiled; and then being commanded to draw a Sword, not knowing to what End, was forced by others, who ordered her Hand, to give her Husband a deadly Wound, whereof he died; the Soldiers not being content to defile her Body, but alſo to make her to defile her Hands with the Slaughter of her Husband.

At Samarobridge in Picardy, in the Time of Peace, above 100 Proteſtants were murdered: And at Antiſſiodore, which the Proteſtants having held in the laſt War, had now yielded up, 150 were cruelly killed, and their dead Bodies were drawn, and caſt partly into Jakes, and partly into the River.

Bordius, a Captain under the Prince of Conde at Mirabellum, was contrary to Promiſe cruelly killed, and his naked Body caſt into the Street, that being unburied the Dogs might eat it.

The Prince of Conde being taken Priſoner, and his Life promiſed him, was ſhot in the Neck by Montiſquius, Captain of the Duke of Anjou's Guard, of whom Thuanus writeth thus: This was the End of Lewis Bourbon Prince of Conde, of the King's Blood, a Man above the Honour of his Birth moſt honourable in Courage and Vertue; who in Valour, Conſtancy, Wit, Wiſdom, Experience, Courteſy, Eloquence, and Liberality, all which Vertues excelled in him, had few his Equals, and none, even by the Confeſſion of his Enemies, ſuperior to him.

Robert Stuart (a valiant Scottiſh Gentleman) being taken Priſoner, was notwithſtanding ſtabbed with Daggers, and killed.

At Orleans an hundred Men and Women being committed to Priſon, were by the furious People that ruſhed in moſt cruelly murdered.

Hitherto out of the Hiſtory of Jacobus Auguſtus Thuanus (who is reported to be a Catholick) which endeth in the Year 1578, wherein I have for Shortneſs Sake omitted ſundry particular Outrages and Murders committed by that bloody Babylonical Generation; from whoſe bloody Hands God in Mercy defend and preſerve us.

The Hiſtory of Robert Oguier and his Wife, Baudicon and Martin their two Sons, who were burnt at Liſle in Flanders.

UPON Saturday March 6, 1556, between nine and ten of the Clock in the Night, the Provoſt of the City with his Sergeants armed themſelves to make Search, if they could find any met together in Houſes; but as then there was no Aſſembly. Therefore they came to the Houſe of Robert Oguier, which was a little Church, for all both great and ſmall, Men-Servants and Maids, were familiarly inſtructed there in the Knowledge of God.

Being enter'd into the ſaid Houſe, and ſeeking here and there for their Prey, they found certain Books which they carry'd away. But he whom they principally aimed at was then in the Houſe; namely, Baudicon, the Son of the ſaid Robert Oguier, who at that Time was gone abroad to commune and talk of the Word of God with ſome of the Brethren, as he oft uſed to do. Returning home, he knocked at the Door;

Door; Martin his younger Brother, watching his coming, bad him be gone: But Baudicon, thinking his Brother miſtook him for ſome other, ſaid, It is I, open the Door: With that the Serjeants opened the ſame, and let him in, ſaying, Ah, Sir, you are well met; to whom he anſwer'd, I thank you, my Friends, you alſo are welcome hither. Then ſaid the Provoſt, I arreſt you in the Emperor's Name; and with that commanded each of them to be bound, to wit, the Husband and his Wife with their two Sons, leaving their two Daughters to look to the Houſe and confin'd them in ſeveral Priſons. Within a few Days after, the Priſoners were preſented before the Magiſtrates of the City, and examined concerning their Courſe of Life, who directed their Speech firſt to Robert Oguier in theſe Words: It is told us that you never come to Maſs, yea, and alſo diſſuade others from coming thereto; we are further informed that you maintain Conventicles in your Houſe, cauſing erroneous Doctrines to be preached there contrary to the Ordinance of our holy Mother the Church, whereby you have tranſgreſſed the Laws of his imperial Majeſty.

Robert Oguier anſwered, Whereas firſt of all you lay to my Charge that I go not to Maſs; I refuſe ſo to do, indeed, becauſe the Death and precious Blood of the Son of God, and his Sacrifice, is utterly aboliſh'd there, and trodden under Foot; For Chriſt by one Sacrifice hath perfected for ever them that are ſanctified. The Apoſtle ſaith by one Offering. For do we read in all the Scriptures, that either the Prophets, Chriſt, or any of his Apoſtles ever ſaid Maſs? For they knew not what it meant. Chriſt indeed inſtituted the holy Supper, in which all Chriſtian People do communicate together, but they ſacrificed not. If you pleaſe to read the Bible over, you ſhall never find the Maſs once mentioned therein. And therefore it is the meer Invention of Men. You know then what Chriſt ſaith, In vain do they worſhip me, teaching for Doctrines the Commandments of Men. If either myſelf, or any of mine had been at Maſs which is ordained by the Commandment of Men, Chriſt would have told us, We had worſhipped him in vain.

As for the ſecond Accuſation, I cannot nor will deny, but there have met together in my Houſe honeſt People fearing God; I aſſure you not with Intention to wrong or harm any, but rather for the Advancement of God's Glory, and the Good of many. I knew indeed that the Emperor had forbidden it, but what then? I knew alſo that Chriſt in his Goſpel had commanded it. Where two or three, ſaith he, are gathered together in my Name, there am I in the midſt of them. Thus you ſee I could not well obey the Emperor, but I muſt diſobey Chriſt. In this Caſe then, I chooſe rather to obey my God, than Man.

One of the Magiſtrates demanded what they did when they met together. To which Baudicon the eldeſt Son anſwered; If it pleaſe you my Maſters to give me Leave, I will open the Buſineſs at large unto you.

The Sheriffs ſeeing his Promptneſs, looking one upon another, ſaid, Well, let us hear it then. Baudicon, lifting up his Eyes to Heaven, began thus: When we meet together in the Name of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt to hear the Word of God, we firſt of all proſtrate upon our Knees before God, and in the Humility of our Spirits do make a Confeſſion of our Sins before his divine Majeſty. Then we pray that the Word of God may be rightly divided, and purely preached: We alſo pray for our Sovereign Lord the Emperor, and for all his honourable Counſellors, that the Common-wealth may be peaceably governed to the Glory of God; yea we forgot not you whom we acknowledge our Superiors; intreating our good God for you, and for this whole City, that you may maintain it in all Tranquility. Thus I have ſummarily related unto you what we do: Think you now, whether we have offended ſo highly in this Matter of our Aſſemblies.

Whilſt they were thus examined, each of them made an open Confeſſion of the Faith which they held. After this, being returned again to Priſon, they not long after were put to the Torture, to make them confeſs who they were that frequented their Houſe, but they would diſcover none, unleſs ſuch as were well known to the Judges, or elſe were at that Time abſent. About four or five Days after, they were convented again before their Judges, namely, the Father and his two Sons; and after many Words paſſed, they asked them whether they would ſubmit themſelves to the Will of the Magiſtrates. Robert Oguier and Baudicon his Son, with ſome Deliberation, ſaid, yea, we will.

Then demanding the ſame of Martin the younger Brother, he anſwered, that he would not ſubmit himſelf thereto, but would accompany his Mother; ſo he was ſent back again to Priſon, whilſt the Father and the Son were adjudged to be burnt alive to Aſhes. Now as they went to receive the Sentence, one of the Judges ſitting in his Place, after Sentence pronounced, ſaid, To-day you ſhall go to dwell with all the Devils in Hell-fire; (which he ſpake as one tranſported with Fury in beholding the great Patience of theſe two Servants of Chriſt) having received the Sentence of Death, they were returned to the Priſon whence they came, being joyful that the Lord did them that Honour to be enrolled in the Number of his Martyrs. No ſooner entred they the Priſon, but a Band of Friars came in thither: One amongſt the reſt told them, the Hour was come in which they muſt finiſh their Days. Robert Oguier and his Son anſwered, We know it well: But bleſſed be the Lord our God, who now delivering our Bodies out of this vile Priſon, will receive our Souls into his glorious and heavenly Kingdom.

One of the Fryars whoſe Name was Lazard, endeavoured to turn them from their Faith, ſaying, Father Robert, thou art an old Man, let me intreat thee in in this thy laſt Hour to think of ſaving thine own Soul; and if thou wilt give an Ear to me, I warrant thee thou ſhalt do well.

The old Man anſwered, Poor Man, how dareſt thou attribute that to thyſelf which belongs to the eternal God, and ſo rob him of his Honour? For it ſeems by thy Speech, that if I will hearken to thee, thou wilt become my Saviour. No, no, I have one only Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, who by and by will deliver me from this miſerable World. I have one Doctor, whom the heavenly Father hath commanded me to hear, and I purpoſe to hearken to none other.

A Frier, called the Father of Saint Clare, exhorting him to take Pity of his Soul which Chriſt hath redeemed: Thou willeſt me, ſaid Robert, to pity mine own Soul, doſt thou not ſee what Pity I have on it, when for the Name of Chriſt I willingly abandon this Body of mine to the Fire, hoping To-day to be with him in Paradiſe? I have put all my Confidence in God, and my Hope wholly is fixed upon the Merits of Chriſt his Death and Paſſion, he will direct me the right Way to his Kingdom. I believe whatſoever the holy Prophets and Apoſtles have written, and in that Faith will I live and die.

The Frier hearing this, ſaid, Out Dog, thou art not worthy the Name of a Chriſtian; thou and thy Son with thee are both reſolved to damn your Bodies and Souls with all the Devils in the Bottom of Hell.

As they were about to ſever Baudicon from his Father, he ſaid, Let my Father alone, and trouble him not thus, he is an old Man, and hath an infirm Body, hinder him not I pray you from receiving the Crown of Martyrdom.

Baudicon was then conveyed into a Chamber apart, and there being ſtripped of his Clothes, was fitted to be ſacrificed; now as one brought him Gunpowder to put to his Breaſt, an odd Fellow ſtanding by ſaid, Wert thou my Brother, I would ſell all that I am worth to buy Faggots to burn thee, thou findeſt but too much Favour. The young Man anſwered, Well Sir, the Lord ſhew you more Mercy. Some that were preſent, ſaying, Good God, is it not a pitiful Sight to behold theſe poor Men? A Doctor being by anſwered, And what Pity would you have ſhewed towards them? I would inſtead of allowing them this Powder, have them fryed on Gridirons, as St. Laurence was.

Whilſt they ſpake thus to Baudicon, ſome of the Friers cloſed in with the old Man, perſwading him at leaſt to take a Crucifix into his Hands, leſt the People (ſaid they) ſhould murmur againſt you? Adding further, that he might for all that lift up his Heart to God, becauſe you know, ſaid they, it is but a Piece of Wood.

Thus they faſtened it between his Hands, but as ſoon as Baudicon was come down, and eſpied what they had done to his Father; he ſaid, Alas Father, what do you now, will you play the Idolater even at our laſt Hour. And then pulling the Idol out of his Hands which they had faſtned therein, he threw it away, ſaying, what Cauſe hath the People to be offended at us, for not receiving a Jeſus Chriſt, of Wood? We bear upon our Hearts the Croſs of Chriſt the Son of the everliving God, feeling his holy Word written therein in Letters of Gold.

As they were led to Execution, a Band of Soldiers were Attendants upon them, no leſs than if a Prince had been conducted into his Kingdom. Being come to the Place where they were to ſuffer, they aſcended up the Scaffold which was there prepared for them. Then Baudicon asked Leave of the Sheriffs to make a Confeſſion of his Faith before the People. Anſwer was made, that he was to look unto his ghoſtly Father and Confeſſor; Confeſs yourſelf (ſaid they) to him. He was then haled rudely to the Stake, where he began to ſing the ſixteenth Pſalm. The Frier cried out, do you not hear my Maſters, what wicked Errors theſe Hereticks ſing, to beguile the People withal. Baudicon hearing what he ſaid, replied thus; Now ſimple Idiot, calleſt thou the Pſalms of the Prophet David, Errors? but no Marvel, for thus you are wont to blaſpheme againſt the Spirit of God.

Then turning his Eyes towards his Father, who was about to be chained to the Stake, he ſaid, Be of good Courage Father, the worſt will be paſt by and by. As the Executioner was faſtening him to the Poſt, he chanced to hit him with his Hammer on the Foot, to make him ſtand nearer to the ſame. The old Man being ſenſible of the Blow, ſaid, Friend, thou hurteſt my Foot, why doſt thou abuſe me thus? The Frier hearing this, ſaid, Ah theſe Hereticks; they would be counted Martyrs forſooth; but if they be but touched a little, they cry out as they were killed. To which Baudicon thus replied: Think you then that we fear the Tormentors? no ſuch Matter; for had we feared the ſame, we had never expoſed our Bodies to this ſo ſhameful and painful a kind of Death.

Then he often reiterated theſe ſhort Breathings, O God, Father everlaſting, accept the Sacrifice of our Bodies, for thy well beloved Son Jeſus Chriſt's Sake. One of the Friers cried, Heretick, thou lieſt, he is none of thy Father, the Devil is thy Father. And thus, during theſe Conflicts, he bent his Eyes to Heaven, and ſpeaking to his Father, ſaid; behold, for I ſee the Heavens open, and Millions of Angels ready preſt to receive us, rejoycing to ſee us thus witneſſing the Truth in the View of the World. Father let us be glad and rejoyce, for the Joys of Heaven are ſet open to us.

Then ſaid one of the Friers, I ſee Hell open, and Millions of Devils preſent to carry you thither. But the Lord, who never forſakes any that put their Truſt in him, ſtirred up the Heart and opened the Mouth of a poor Man who ſtood among the Multitude, beholding this Spectacle, who being moved with Compaſſion, cried aloud, Be of good Comfort Baudicon, ſtand thou to it, thou fighteſt in a good Quarrel, I am on thy Side; after which Words he departed thence; and a Way being made for him, ſaved himſelf from Danger.

Fire was forthwith put to the Straw and Wood which burnt beneath, whilſt they (not ſhrinking for the Pains) ſpake one to another; Baudicon often repeating this in his Father's Ears, faint not Father, nor be afraid, Yet a very little while and we ſhall enter into the heavenly Manſions.

In the End the Fire growing hot upon them, the laſt Words they were heard to pronounce, were, Jeſus Chriſt, thou Son of God, into thy Hands we commend our Spirits. And thus theſe two ſlept ſweetly in the Lord.

In eight Days after, Jane the Mother, and Martin her Son, were executed in the ſame City.

But before we come to deſcribe their happy Ends, we will, as briefly as may be, note by the Way the great Conflicts of Spirit which both of them ſuſtained.

There were ſent unto them many of the Popiſh Rabble, to turn them from their Faith. Now that this their deviliſh Enterpriſe might the rather be affected, they ſundred one of them from the other, ſo as by the politick Device of a Monk, the poor Woman began to waver, and let go her firſt Faith. At this their Enemies rejoyced not a little, whilſt the poor little Flock of Chriſt, hearing ſuch ſad News, were in continual Perplexity, but the Lord left them not in their mournful Condition.

For on a Day one of the Monks reſorted to her in the Priſon, counſelling her to win her Son Martin, and to draw him from his Errors: Which ſhe promiſed to do. But when he was come to his Mother, and perceived that ſhe was not only fallen, but alſo quite turned out of the right Way, he began with Tears to bewail her miſerable Eſtate.

O Mother, ſaid he, what have you done? Have you denied him who hath redeemed you? alas, what Evil hath he done you, that you ſhould requite him with this ſo great an Injury and Diſhonour. Now I am plunged into that Woe, which I have moſt feared. Ah good God, that I ſhould live to ſee this, which pierceth me to the very Heart.

His Mother hearing theſe his pitiful Complaints, and ſeeing the Tears which her Son ſhed for her, began again to renew her Strength in the Lord, and with Tears cried out, O Father of Mercies, be merciful unto me miſerable Sinner, and cover my Tranſgreſſion under the Righteouſneſs of thy bleſſed Son; Lord enable me with Strength from above, to ſtand to my firſt Confeſſion, and make me to abide ſtedfaſt therein even unto my laſt Breath.

It was not long after this her Change, but the ſame Inſtruments of Satan, who had ſeduced her, came in, ſuppoſing to find her in the ſame Mind wherein they left her: Whom ſhe no ſooner eſpied, but with Deteſtation ſaid, Avoid Satan, get thee behind me: For henceforth thou haſt neither Part nor Portion in me. I will by the Help of God ſtand to my firſt Confeſſion; and if I may not ſign it with Ink, I will ſeal it with my Blood. And ſo from that Time this frail Veſſel, who for awhile relented, after her recovering grew ſtronger and ſtronger.

The Judges ſeeing their Conſtancy, delayed not to diſpatch them out of the Way, condemning them to be burned alive, and their Bodies being reduced to Aſhes, the ſame to be ſcattered and diſperſed in the Air. The Mother and the Son having heard their Sentence read, in the Way as they were going back again to Priſon, ſaid, Now bleſſed be our God, who cauſeth us thus to triumph over our Enemies: This is the wiſhed Hour, our gladſome Day is come, let us not then, ſaid Martin, forget to be thankful for the Honour he doth us, in thus conforming us unto the Image of his Son. Let us remember thoſe who have traced this Path before us: For this is the High-way to the Kingdom of Heaven. Let us then, good Mother, go on boldly out of the Camp with the Son of God, bearing his Reproach, with all his holy Martyrs; for ſo we ſhall find Paſſage into the glorious Kingdom of the everliving God.

Some of the Company hearing, but not being able to brook theſe Words, ſaid, We ſee now thou Heretick that thou art wholly poſſeſſed, Body and Soul, with a Devil, as was thy Father and thy Brother, who are both in Hell. Martin ſaid, Sirs, as for your Railings and Curſings, our God will this Day turn them into Bleſſings in the Sight of himſelf and of all his Angels.

A certain Temporizer ſaid to Martin, Thou ſilly Youth, thou ſayeſt thou knoweſt not what; thou art too well conceited of thyſelf and of thy Cauſe. Seeſt thou not all this People here about thee? What thinkeſt thou of them? they believe not as thou doſt, and yet I doubt not but they ſhall be ſaved. But you imagine to do that which will never come to paſs, tho' you pretend never ſo much that you are in the Faith, and have the Scriptures for you.

The good Woman hearing this, anſwered, Sir, Chriſt Jeſus our Lord ſaith, that it is the wide Gate and broad Way which leads to Deſtruction, and therefore many go in thereat: But the Gate, ſaith he, is narrow that leads to Life, and few there be that find it. Do ye then doubt whether we are in the ſtrait Way or no, when ye behold our Sufferings? Would you have a better Sign than this, to know whether we are in the right Way or no? Compare our Doctrine with that of your Prieſts and Monks: We for our Parts are determined to have but one Chriſt and him crucified, we only embrace the Scriptures of the Old and New Teſtament. Are we deceived in believing that which the holy Prophets and Apoſtles have taught?

Soon after Martin and his Mother were bound and brought to the Place of their Martyrdom: His Mother having aſcended the Scaffold, cried to Martin, come up, come up my Son. And as he was ſpeaking to the People, ſhe ſaid, ſpeak out Martin, ſaith ſhe, that it may appear to all, that we die not Hereticks. Martin would have made a Confeſſion of his Faith, but could not be ſuffered. His Mother being bound to the Stake, ſpake in the Hearing of the Spectators, We are Chriſtians, and that which we now ſuffer is not for Murder nor Theft, but becauſe we will believe no more than that which the Word of God teacheth us: Both rejoycing that they were counted worthy to ſuffer for the ſame.

The Fire being kindled, the Vehemency thereof did nothing cool or abate the Fervency of their Zeal, but they continued conſtant in the Faith, and with lifting up their Hands to Heaven, in an holy Accord ſaid, Lord Jeſus into thy Hands we commend our Spirits. And thus they bleſſedly ſlept in the Lord.

A briefly Relation of the Maſſacre at Vaſſy in the Country of Champaigne in France.

THE Duke of Guiſe being arrived at Joinville, asked ſome that he was familiar withal, whether thoſe of Vaſſy uſed to have Sermons preached conſtantly by their Miniſter. It was anſwered they had, and that they encreaſed daily more and more. At the hearing of which Report falling into a grievous Paſſion upon Saturday the laſt of February, 1562, that he might the more covertly execute his conceived Wrath againſt the religious Sort in Vaſſy, he departed from Joinville, accompanied with the Cardinal of Guiſe his Brother, and thoſe of their Train, and lodged in the Village of Dammartin the free, which is diſtant from Joinville about two French Miles and an half.

The next Day being Sunday, after he had heard Maſs very early in the Morning, being attended with about two hundred Men armed with Harquebuſſes, Piſtols, and Coutelaxes, he left Dammartin, paſſing along to Vaſſy. As he went by the Village of Bronzeval, which is diſtant from Vaſſy a ſmall quarter of a Mile, the Bell (after the uſual Manner) rang to the Sermon. The Duke hearing it, asked thoſe he met, why the Bell rang ſo loud at Vaſſy; they told him it was to give the People Warning of the Sermon which was to be made there. Then one called La Montague ſaid, It is for the aſſembling of the Hugonots; adding moreover, that there were many in the ſaid Bronzeval who frequented the Sermons preached at Vaſſy; and therefore that the Duke ſhould do well to begin there, and offer them Violence. But the Duke anſwered, March on, march on, we ſhall take them among the reſt of the Aſſembly. Many who followed the Duke, namely, Pages and Footmen, rejoiced not a little concerning this bloody Enterprize, not ſticking to ſay, that the Booty and Pillage would fall to their Shares; ſwearing by Blood and Wounds, that there would be good Store of Hugonots there.

Now there were certain Soldiers and Archers accompanying the Duke, who compaſſed about Vaſſy; for having been muſtered at Monthierender, inſtead of returning home, as they were wont to do after the Muſter was ended, they took their Way thence to Vaſſy, moſt of them being lodged in the Houſes of Papiſts. The Saturday before the Slaughter, they were ſeen to make ready their Weapons, Harquebuſſes, and Piſtols; but the Faithful not dreaming of ſuch a Conſpiracy, thought the Duke would offer them no hard Meaſure, being the King's Subjects; alſo, that not above two Months before the Duke and his Brethren paſſing by nigh unto the ſaid Vaſſy, gave no Sign of their Diſpleaſure.

The Duke of Guiſe being arrived at Vaſſy with all his Troops, a young Man a Shoemaker ſtepped out of his Houſe not far from the Door where the Aſſembly was, Montague pointing to him with his Finger, ſaid he was one of the Miniſters. Whereupon the Duke called this Shoemaker to him, and asked of him, whether he were a Miniſter, and of what Univerſity he was. He anſwered, that he was not of that Calling, neither was he a Scholar. Notwithſtanding he hardly eſcaped from this Troop, which had inviron'd him round about: Only one of the Company told him, That if he had been a Miniſter, he had taken upon him a very baſe calling.

From thence the Duke, La Broſſe, and La Montague paſſed on in the ſaid City with their Soldiers, as if they minded to take their Way towards the Village of Eſclairon, where it was given out he meant to dine.

* But

But paſſing by the Market-houſe of Vaſſy, which is near the Monaſtery, in the Way leading to Eſclairon, he turned and went directly toward the common Hall, or Market-houſe, and then entered into the Monaſtery; where having called to him one Deſſales, the Prior of Vaſſy, and another whoſe Name was Claud le Sain, being Provoſt of the ſaid Vaſſy, he talked awhile with them, and iſſuing haſtily out of the Monaſtery, was attended by many of his Followers. Then Command was given to ſuch as were Papiſts, to retire into the Monaſtery, and not to be ſeen in the Streets, unleſs they would venture the Loſs of their Lives. The Duke perceiving others of his Retinue to be walking to and fro under the Town-hall, and about the Church-yard, commanded them to march on towards the Place where the Sermon was, being in a Barn, about an hundred Paces diſtant from the Monaſtery, quite oppoſite to that Way which the Duke ſhould take to Eſclairon. This Command was by and by put in Execution by ſuch of the Company as went on Foot, going directly thither. He that marched foremoſt of this Rabble, was La Broſs, and on the Side of theſe marched the Horſemen, after whom followed the Duke with another Company, as of his own Followers, ſo likewiſe of thoſe of the Cardinal of Guiſe his Brother.

By this Time Mr. Leonard Morel the Miniſter, after the firſt Prayer ended, and having begun his Sermon before his Auditors, which might amount to about 1200 Perſons, conſiſting of Men, Women, and Children: The Horſemen firſt approaching to the Barn within about twenty-five Paces, ſhot off two Harquebuſſes right upon thoſe who were placed in the Galleries joining to the Windows. The People within perceiving that, endeavoured to ſhut the Door, but were prevented by the Ruffians ruſhing in upon them, who drawing their Swords, furiouſly cried out, Death of God, kill, kill theſe Hugonots.

The firſt they ſeized on was a poor Crier of Wine, that ſtood next the Door, asking him if he were not a Hugonot, and in whom he believed! Having anſwered that he believed in Jeſus Chriſt, they ſmote him twice with a Sword, which felled him to the Ground. Being got up again, thinking to recover himſelf, they ſtruck him the third Time, whereby being overcharged with Wounds, he fell down, and died inſtantly. Two other Men at the ſame Time were ſlain at the Entry of the ſaid Door, as they were preſſing out to eſcape.

Then did the Duke of Guiſe with his Company, violently enter in among them, ſtriking the poor People down with their Swords, Daggers, and Coutelaxes, not ſparing any Age or Sex, Beſides, they within were ſo aſtonied that they knew not which Way to turn them, but running hither and thither fell one upon another, flying as poor Sheep before a Company of ravening Wolves entring in among the Flock.

Some of the Murderers ſhot off their Pieces againſt them that were in the Galleries; others cut in Pieces ſuch as they lighted upon; others had their Heads cleft in twain, their Arms and Hands cut off, and did what they could to hew them all to Pieces; ſo as many of them gave up the Ghoſt even in the Place. The Walls and Galleries of the ſaid Barn were dyed with the Blood of thoſe who were every where murdered: Yea, ſo great was the Fury of the Murderers, that part of the People within were forced to break open the Roof of the Houſe, if peradventure that Way they might ſave themſelves on the Top thereof.

Being got thither, and then fearing to fall again into the Hands of theſe cruel Tygers, ſome of them leaped over the Walls of the City, which were very high, flying into the Woods and amongſt the Vines, which with moſt Expedition they could ſooneſt attain unto; ſome hurt in their Arms, others in their Heads and other Parts of their Bodies. The Duke preſented himſelf in the Houſe with his Sword drawn in his Hand, charging his Men to kill, eſpecially the young Men. Only in the End Women with Child were ſpared. But purſuing thoſe who preſſed to get upon the Houſe-top, they cried, Come down ye Dogs, come down, uſing many cruel threatning Speeches unto them.

The Cauſe why Women with Child eſcaped, was, as the Report went, for the Ducheſs Sake his Wife, who paſſing along by the Walls of the City, hearing ſo hideous Out-cries which were made amongſt theſe poor Creatures with the Noiſe of the Pieces and Piſtols continually diſcharged, ſent in all haſte to the Duke her Husband with much Intreaties to ceaſe this Perſecution, for frightning Women with Child.

During this Slaughter the Cardinal of Guiſe remained before the Church of the ſaid City of Vaſſy, leaning upon the Walls of the Church-yard, looking towards the Place where his Followers were buſied in killing and ſlaying whom they could. Many of this Aſſembly being thus hotly purſued, did in the firſt brunt ſave themſelves upon the Roof of the Houſe, not being diſcerned by thoſe who ſtood without: But at length ſome of this bloody Crew eſpying where they lay hid, ſhot at them with long Pieces, wherewith many of them were hurt and ſlain. The Houhold Servants of Deſſalles Prior of Vaſſy ſhooting at the People on the Roof, cauſed them to fall down like Pigeons: One of that wretched Company was not aſhamed to boaſt after the Maſſacre was ended, that he for his Part had cauſed ſix at the leaſt to tumble down in that pitiful Plight, ſaying, that if others had done the like, not many of them could poſſibly have eſcaped.

The Miniſter in the Beginning of the Maſſacre ceaſed not to preach, till one diſcharged his Piece againſt the Pulpit where he ſtood, after which falling down upon his Knees, he entreated the Lord not only to have Mercy upon himſelf, but alſo upon his poor perſecuted Flock. Having ended his Prayer, he left his Gown behind him, thinking thereby to keep himſelf, as unknown: But whilſt he approached towards the Door, in his Fear he ſtumbled upon a dead Body, where he received a Blow with a Sword upon his right Shoulder. Getting up again, and then thinking to get forth, he was immediately laid hold on, and grievouſly hurt on the Head with a Sword, whereupon being felled to the Ground, and feeling himſelf mortally wounded, he cried, Lord, into thy Hand I commend my Spirit, for thou haſt redeemed me, thou God of Truth.

While he thus prayed, one of this bloody Crew ran upon him to have ham-ſtring'd him, but it pleaſed God his Sword brake in the Hilts. Now to let you underſtand by what Means he was delivered from ſo imminent a Death, two Gentlemen taking Knowledge of him, as the reſt were about to kill him, ſaid, It is the Miniſter, let him be conveyed to my Lord Duke. Theſe leading him away by both the Arms, brought him before the Gate of the Monaſtery; from whence the Duke and the Cardinal his Brother coming forth, ſaid, Come hither; and asked him, ſaying, Art thou the Miniſter of this Place? Who made thee ſo bold to ſeduce this People thus? Sir, ſaid the Miniſter, I am no Seducer; for I have preached to them the Goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt. The Duke perceiving that this ſhort and dry Anſwer condemned his cruel Fact, began to curſe and ſwear; ſaying, Death of God, doth the Goſpel preach Sedition? Provoſt, go and let a Gibbet be ſet up, and hang this Bougrer.

At which Words the Miniſter was delivered into the Hands of two Pages, who miſuſed him vilely. The Women of the City, being ignorant Papiſts, caught caught up Dirt to throw in his Face, and with extended Outcries ſaid, kill him, kill this Varlet, who hath been the Cauſe of the Slaughter of ſo many. Much ado there was to hold off the Women from being revenged upon the poor Miniſter.

Whilſt the Pages had him thus in their Handling, the Duke went into the Barn, to whom they preſented a great Bible, which they uſed for the Service of God. The Duke taking it into his Hands, calling his Brother the Cardinal, ſaid, Lo here the Title of the Hugonot Books. The Cardinal viewing it, ſaid, there is nothing but good in this Book, for it is the Bible; to wit, the Holy Scriptures. The Duke being offended, for that his Anſwer ſuited not to his Humour, grew into a greater Rage than before, ſaying, Blood of God how now? what? the Holy Scripture. It is 1500 Year ago ſince Jeſus Chriſt ſuffered his Death and Paſſion, and it is but a Year ſince theſe Books were imprinted, how then ſay you that this is the Goſpel? By the Death of God you ſay you know not what. This unbridled Fury of the Duke diſpleaſed the Cardinal, ſo as he was heard ſecretly to mutter, An unworthy Brother.

This Maſſacre continued a full Hour, the Duke's Trumpeters ſounding the while two ſeveral Times. When any of theſe deſired to have Mercy ſhewed them for the Love of Jeſus Chriſt, the Murderers in Scorn would ſay unto them, You uſe the Name of Chriſt, but where is your Chriſt now become? And when they ſaid, Lord God, they blaſphemingly would ſay, Lord Devil.

There died in this Maſſacre, within a few Days, 50 or 60 Perſons; beſides theſe, there were about 250, as well Men as Women, that were wounded and ſpoiled, whereof ſome died, one loſing a Leg, another an Arm, another his Fingers. The Poor's Box, which was faſtened to the Door of the Church with two Iron Hooks, was wreſted thence, with twelve Pounds therein, and never reſtored again. Nothing was to be ſeen in the Streets but Women with their Hair hanging about their Ears, Faces beſmear'd with Blood, being wounded in many Places with Swords and Daggers, with Weeping and Lamentations. Barbers and Surgeons were ſo ſet on Work, that he that had leaſt had threeſcore under his Hand to be dreſſed, and many periſhed for Want thereof.

The Miniſter was kept cloſe Priſoner, ſo as for four and twenty Hours none were permitted to ſupply him with any Neceſſaries at all, nor any ſuffered to ſee him or ſpeak with him, and was oft threatned by his Keepers to be ſowed up in a Sack and drowned. Fain would they have drawn him to have kept his Eaſter after the popiſh Manner, under fair Promiſes of his Enlargement; but he would by no Means conſent thereto. Thus continued he Priſoner until the eighth Day of May 1563, at which Time he was ſet free by the Suit of the moſt illuſtrious Prince of Portien.

Whilſt the Duke was at Eſclairon, the Lackeys and others of their Sort put to Sale, unto ſuch as would give moſt, Cloaks, Hats, Girdles, Coifs, Kerchiefs, with other Things which they had ſpoiled the Maſſacred of; crying them with a loud Voice, as if a common Crier had carried Houſhold-Stuff to be ſold.

Of the Coming of Jane Queen of Navarre to the City of Paris in France, with the Manner of her Sickneſs and Death there.

THIS good Queen, before ſhe could be drawn to come to Paris to ſolemnize the Marriage of her Son, the Prince of Navarre, with the Siſter of Charles the Ninth, then King of France, received Letters upon Letters from the ſaid King, to accompany the Prince her Son in that Solemnity: Now, whereas ſhe had ſome Doubts concerning her Son's Marriage with one of another Religion, the King aſſured her that all Things ſhould be ſo wrought, as ſhould give her good Satisfaction and Content; promiſing that he would get a Diſpenſation from the Pope to that End. But when the Queen underſtood that the King was minded to have this Marriage ſolemnized at Paris, ſhe would by no Means hear of it: For I will not, ſaid ſhe, put any Confidence in ſo mutinous a People, being the ſworn Enemies both of myſelf and mine.

Still the King perſiſted in his Sute for the obtaining of the ſame at her Hands. Alſo having Intelligence by ſome of his Agents, that the Queen of Navarre began a little to waver, he ſolicited her yet once again to come, aſſuring her that all Things ſhould be carried in ſuch a peaceable Sort, that ſhe ſhould have no Cauſe to complain. At length the Queen came from Rochel to Bloys in the Month of March, 1572, with great Attendance, where it is incredible to think what Welcome ſhe had on all Sides, eſpecially from the King and his Brethren, &c. who yet, when all was done, could ſay to his Mother, Now Madam, have not I quit myſelf well? Let me alone, and I will bring them all into the Net.

In April following the Articles were concluded concerning the Marriage of the Prince of Navarre with the King's Siſter. In the Beginning of May the King wooes the Queen of Navarre again to come to Paris for preparing of Things fitting for this Marriage; which ſhe accordingly yielded unto, and parting from Blois on the ſixth of the ſaid Month, came to Paris on the fifteenth of the ſame.

The Queen-Mother could by no Means brook this good Queen; and therefore not finding with what Colour ſhe could diſpatch her with the reſt, and yet fearing the Height of her Spirit if ſhe ſhould ſurvive, as alſo that ſhe could not then ſo work upon the Flexibility of the Prince her Son as ſhe intended, ſhe conſulted with one Rene, an Apothecary, whoſe Practice it was to impoiſon Things; who by ſuch Means adventured to poiſon the Prince of Conde by the Scent of a poiſoned Apple, which upon ſome Suſpicion was firſt tried upon a Dog; and it had almoſt coſt the Prince's Surgeon his Life, by ſmelling too nigh thereunto. This Rene, ſelling to the Queen of Navarre his perfumed Drugs, found the Way how to poiſon her therewith, although others thought the contrary. But the ſaid Rene was heard afterwards to make his Brags, that he had the like in Store for two or three more, who ſuſpected no ſuch Matter.

On Wedneſday, June the 4th, the Queen fell ſick of a continual Fever, and kept her Bed; which proceeded, as it was given out, from the Grief ſhe had in her Lights, wherein by long Continuance was bred an Impoſthume, ſhe being alſo diſtempered with the Heat of the Seaſon and her extraordinary Journeys. This burning Fever grew ſo ſtrong upon her, that within five Days after ſhe died, to the great Grief of the better Sort, but the Joy of the ſecret Council.

The Malady indeed was in her Brain, which was not ſearched; in which the Queen-Mother had an Hand, though ſhe ſeemed much to mourn for the Affliction of her good Friend. Now foraſmuch as in the Time of her Sickneſs ſhe maniſeſted with what Spirit ſhe was guided, we will here ſet down the true Narration of her Behaviour, both in her Sickneſs, and at her Death.

Perceiving that ſhe could not long continue, ſhe made herſelf ready to receive from the Hand of God that which he had appointed concerning her; and to that End requeſted ſhe might have ſuch about her, as might comfort her in this Caſe out of the Word of God, as alſo to pray with her and for her, according to that which St. James ſaith, Is any Sick among you, let him call for the Elders of the Church, and let them pray over ſuch a one, that knowing the fervent Prayer of a righteous Man availeth much with God.

Thus, according to her Deſire, a Miniſter reſorting unto her, ſhewed out of the Scriptures, That Chriſtians ought in all Things to ſubmit themſelves to the Will of God as to the Father of Spirits, that they might live. And although the Rigour of his Chaſtiſements doth ſometimes ſeem to our Fleſh, as if they were ſent to none other End but for our Ruin and Deſtruction; yet ought we to conſider, that becauſe he is juſt, he can do nothing but juſtly; and being a Father, he cannot but therein ſeek the Welfare of his afflicted Children.

To which ſhe reply'd, I take all this as ſent from the Hand of God my moſt merciful Father; nor have I, during this Extremity, feared to die, much leſs murmured againſt him for inflicting the ſame upon me; knowing, that whatſoever he doth, he doth the ſame ſo, as all in the End ſhall turn to my everlaſting Good.

The Miniſter continuing in his Speech, added, That the Cauſes of Sickneſſes and Diſeaſes muſt be ſought beyond the Courſe of Phyſick, which always looks to the Corruption of the Humours, or to the more noble Parts of the Body any way diſtemper'd: For howſoever it was not amiſs to have reſpect to theſe Things, as to ſecond Cauſes, yet ought we to aſcend higher, namely, to the firſt, even to God himſelf, who diſpoſeth of all his Creatures as it pleaſeth him. He it is that makes the Wound and heals, that kills and makes alive. And therefore to him we ought to direct our Prayers for Comfort in all our Griefs and Sufferings, and in the End for full Deliverance; ſeeing it is no hard Matter with him to reſtore Health unto us, if his good Pleaſure be ſuch.

To this ſhe anſwered, That ſhe depended wholly upon God's Providence, knowing that all Things are wiſely diſpoſed by him, and therefore beſought him to furniſh her with all ſuch Graces as he ſaw to be neceſſary for her Salvation. As for this Life, ſaid ſhe, I am in a Manner weaned from the Love of it, in regard of the Afflictions which have followed me from my Youth hitherto, but eſpecially becauſe I cannot live without offending my good God, with whom I deſire to be with all my Heart.

The Miniſter told her, that long Life, how full of Troubles ſoever it were, was notwithſtanding to be eſteemed among the Bleſſings of God, ſeeing his Promiſe implies ſo much; and not only ſo, but becauſe our Life may many ways ſerve to his Glory, and is both an Honour and a Pledge of his Favour, even as it is to him whom his Prince employs long in his Service, having had Experience of his Fidelity for many Years together. In which Reſpect ſhe was earneſtly requeſted to pray, That if it were the Will of God to employ her yet longer in his Service, for the further Enlargement of his Goſpel, that he would grant unto her ſuch Recovery of Health, and good Diſpoſition of Body, that with renewed Strength ſhe might be encouraged to finiſh her Courſe much more nobly than heretofore.

Whereupon ſhe proteſted, that in regard of her own Particular, her Life was not dear unto her, ſeeing ſo long as ſhe lived in this frail Fleſh, ſhe was ſtill prone and apt to ſin againſt God: Only her Care was ſomewhat for her Children (which God had given her) in reſpect they ſhould ſo ſoon be deprived of her now in their young Years; yet not doubting (though it ſhould pleaſe God to take me from them) but that God himſelf will be a Father and Protector over them, as he hath been to me in my greateſt Afflictions; and therefore I commit them wholly to his Government and fatherly Care. Theſe were her very Words.

The Miniſter bleſſed God to find her Majeſty in this Aſſurance of Faith; adviſing her to make Choice of ſuch, who, for their Sincerity both in Life and Doctrine, might continue to water in theſe young princely Plants the Seeds of Piety, which had been ſown in them by her indefatigable Care and Induſtry; telling her, that it was to be hoped, that the Example of her Faith and Conſtancy in the Service of God, which ſhe had ſet before them, would ſerve as a perpetual Inducement to imitate her ſo noble Virtues.

She again declared, That Death was not terrible unto her, becauſe it was the Way by which we paſs hence to our eternal Reſt: Upon this Expreſſion the Miniſter told her, That Chriſtians had little Cauſe to fear Death, in regard they ſhould not die at all according to Chriſt's Words in the Goſpel of St. John, He that liveth and believeth in me, ſhall never die. For Death (to ſpeak properly) is no Death to them, but a Sleep; being often ſo called in the Scriptures; and therefore Chriſt for their Sakes hath overcome and triumphed over it in his own Perſon: So as now we may cry out with St. Paul, O Death, where is thy Sting? O Grave, where is thy Victory?

She was often admoniſhed by him to make Confeſſion of her Sins before God, ſhewing, That bodily Diſeaſes tended to the Diſſolution of Nature, and that Death was the Wages of Sin; declaring moreover, that by this her Chaſtiſement ſhe might diſcern what ſhe had deſerved, if God ſhould now enter into Judgment with her, not only in regard of the Fall of our Parents, in which Guilt ſhe was enrapped, as well as others, but alſo by her own perſonal Sins, ſeeing the beſt of Men or Women in the World are in themſelves but poor, miſerable and wretched Offenders; yea, if the Lord ſhould puniſh us according to our Demerits, we could expect nothing at his Hands but eternal Death and Condemnation.

At theſe Words ſhe began, with her Hands and Eyes lifted up to Heaven, to acknowledge that her Sins which ſhe had committed againſt the Lord were innumerable: But ſhe hoped that God for Chriſt's Sake, in whom ſhe put her whole Truſt, would be merciful unto her.

The Miniſter, fearing his long Diſcourſe might be too tedious for her (and eſpecially becauſe the Phyſicians thought it might be hurtful) held his Peace; but her Majeſty earneſtly requeſted him not to forbear ſpeaking to her about theſe Matters of Life and eternal Salvation; adding, that ſhe now felt the Want of it, in regard that ſince her coming to Paris, ſhe had been ſomewhat remiſs in hearing ſuch Exhortations out of the Word of God: And therefore I am now the more glad (ſaid ſhe) to receive Comfort out of it in this my ſo great Extremity.

The Miniſter then endeavoured to ſet before her the Happineſs of Heaven, and what thoſe Joys are which the Faithful there poſſeſs in the Preſence of God: Which when the Scriptures intend to diſcover unto us, they only tell us that The Eye hath not ſeen, nor hath the Ear heard, neither hath it enter'd into the Heart of Man, to conſider what thoſe Things are, which God hath prepared for them that love him. To which Purpoſe he uſed this Similitude, As if a King, minding greatly to honour ſome noble Perſonage, ſhould bring him to his Court, and there ſhew him his State and Attendance, his Treaſures, with all his moſt precious Jewels: Even ſo, ſaid he, will the Lord one Day reveal to all his elect and faithful People, his Magnificence and Glory, with all the Treaſures of his Kingdom, after he hath gathered them home to himſelf, decking and adorning them with Light, Incorruption, and Immortality.

This Happineſs therefore being ſo great, her Highneſs, he ſaid, ought to be the leſs careful about the leaving of this tranſitory Life, ſeeing that for an earthly Kingdom, which ſhe was now to forego, ſhe ſhould inherit an heavenly; and for temporal good Things, which vaniſh and come to nothing in the uſing, ſhe ſhould for ever enjoy thoſe that were eternal and everlaſting: For her Faith being now firmly ſettled upon our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, ſhe might be ſuffered to obtain eternal Salvation by him. On which Words he took Occaſion to direct his Speech more particularly unto her, ſaying:

Madam, do you verily believe that Jeſus Chriſt came into the World to ſave you? and do you expect the full Forgiveneſs of all your Sins, by the ſhedding of his Blood for you?

To which ſhe readily anſwered ſhe did; believing that he was her only Saviour and Mediator, looking for Salvation from none other, knowing that he hath abundantly ſatisfied for the Sins of the whole World, and therefore was aſſured that God for his Sake, according to his gracious Promiſes in him, would have Mercy upon her.

Thus you have in part the godly Speeches which paſſed from this religious Lady in the Beginning of her Sickneſs; all which was within the Space of three or four Days.

In the End, feeling her Strength to decay more and more, ſhe gave order to have her laſt Will and Teſtament made, wherein ſhe above all wiſhed, that her Children might have but the Grace to honour and fear the Lord, exhorting them conſtantly to continue in the Profeſſion of the Goſpel, in which they had been trained up from their Youth; ordaining eſpecially that her Daughter, the Princeſs, ſhould be educated and inſtructed therein, by the four Ladies which ſhe had appointed, and brought with her out of Bearne for that End and Purpoſe. And being come to Age, her Deſire was that ſhe might be joyned in Marriage to ſome Prince of the ſame Religion, by the Counſel and Advice of the Cardinal of Bourbon, and Gaſpar Count of Colligny, Admiral of France, whom ſhe made Executors and Overſeers of her ſaid Teſtament.

This good Queen departed this Life, to take Poſſeſſion of a far better, June 9. 1572, ſweetly yielding up her Spirit into the Hands of God, the ſixth Day after ſhe fell ſick, and in the 44th Year of her Age.

After the Death of the Queen, certain Princes were ſolicited by the King to give their Attendance at Paris for the ſolemnizing the Marriage of the Prince of Navarre (now made King by the Death of his Mother) according to the Ceremonies which were thereunto appertaining. Among the reſt, Letters were directed to the Admiral by the King himſelf, to come to this Marriage; wherein the King aſſured him he would not tarry long after him; willing him not to be afraid of the Fury of the Pariſians, nor of their Threats which they had formerly uttered againſt him: For he was not ignorant of the deadly Hatred they bare him, and therefore wrote unto the Mayor of the City, to look unto it at his Peril, that the Admiral had no Wrong offered him by the Citizens, either at his Entrance or Continuance in the City.

The Queen-Mother and the Duke of Anjou wrote unto the Mayor alſo, aud likewiſe to the reſt of the Magiſtrates to the ſame Effect, but eſpecially to their Servants, ſome whereof had a little Light given them, touching that Device. To be ſhort, they endeavoured to take all Rubs out of his Way, that he might with the leſs Miſtruſt fall into the ſame.

The Admiral, not caſting any Perils, reſolved to take his Journey to Paris. Albeit he lacked not ſundry Advertiſements from his own Followers, and others his Well-willers in the Kingdom, who honoured him much, deſiring him, that howſoever he had no ſiniſter Opinion of the King, of his Mother, or any of theirs, yet at the leaſt he was to take into his Conſideration the Place whither he went, and amongſt what Enemies he was now to venture himſelf. But he always leaning upon the Teſtimony of a good Conſcience, and being confident in God's Providence, not moved by theſe Advertiſements, took his Journey to Paris with very few Attendants. Being come thither, he was honourably received of the King, and of his Brethren, and of the Queen-Mother, with others alſo.

The Marriage of the King of Navarre with the King's Siſter being ſolemnized on the ſeventeenth and eighteenth of Auguſt 1572, and all the Triumphs and Feaſtings accompanying the ſame being finiſhed, the Admiral determining to take his Leave at Court, and ſo return homewards, the Deputies of the reformed Churches brought him their Requeſts on a ſudden, to preſent the ſame to the King, in regard of many Wrongs the ſaid Churches had ſuſtained; and therefore they inſtantly beſought him, that he would not leave the Court till ſome Order might be taken for Redreſs thereof.

This, with other Impediments, were the Occaſions of detaining him ſtill there.

Mauravell coming to Paris whilſt theſe Feaſts laſted, having preſented his Service firſt to the King and his Mother, the Duke of Anjou, with thoſe of the Guiſe; after ſome Speech had with the King and Queen-Mother, one named Chaill had a Command to direct him to the Houſe whence the Blow ſhould be given; who left him with a Woman in the Houſe, which Woman was forbidden not only to ask his Name, but alſo ſo much as to enquire for what Cauſe he was lodged there.

On Friday, the two and twentieth of Auguſt, in the Morning, he trimm'd up his Harquebuſſe, watching ſecretly the Admiral's Coming.

The Admiral at his going forth out of the Louvre meeting the King coming out of a Chappel which is before the ſame, paſſing thence to play at Tennis, he ſcarcely had gone an hundred Paces from the Place, but as he returned to his Lodging on Foot to dine there, attended on by ſome twelve or fifteen Gentlemen, reading a Petition; out of the Window of a Lodging (where Villemur Tutor to the Duke of Guiſe uſually lay) he was ſhot with an Harquebuſſe charged with three braſs Bullets, one of which took off the Fore-finger on his Right-Hand, and he was hurt with another in his Left-Arm. Feeling himſelf thus wounded, he willed ſome of his Followers to enter that Houſe, and to enquire who it was that had done that, or who ſet him on Work to do it: And then to advertiſe the King thereof, giving him to underſtand how well his Commandment was obſerved.

Now whilſt they were buſy to force open the Door, the Murderer fled out by a back Way, eſcaping thence out of the Gate of St. Anthony; where one attended him, holding a Spaniſh Gennet brought out of the Duke of Guiſe's Stable; whereon he galloped away, yet not without ſome Difficulty; for flying thus in ſome Fear, he fell off his Horſe twice or thrice.

A Gentleman ſeeing the Admiral hurt, came to ſupport his Left Arm, binding up the Hurt thereon with his Handkerchief. And thus was he conducted to his Lodging, which was diſtant from thence about ſome twenty Paces. In his paſſing a Gentleman ſaid it was to be feared the Bullets were poiſoned: To which the Admiral replyed, All muſt be as it pleaſeth God.

The King hearing of the Admiral's Hurt, left his Game, where he was playing till then with the Duke of Guiſe, and throwing away his Racket as it ſeemed in an Anger, with a ſad and heavy Countenance withdrew himſelf into his Chamber; the Duke of Guiſe following him within a little while after.

The King of Navarre, the Prince of Conde, with many others of the Religion, having Notice of the Admiral's Hurt, complained to the King of this untimely Accident; entreating they might have Leave to depart out of the City, ſeeing they could expect little Safety there. The King made his Moan to them of the Miſchance that happened, ſwearing and proteſting that he would execute ſuch impartial Juſtice upon the Offender, and on all the Complotters, as ſhould give the Admiral and all his Friends Content; only he willed them to ſtay, promiſing them ere long to provide for their Security.

The Surgeons and Phyſicians were preſently ſent for, among whom was Ambroſe Pare the King's Surgeon, a Man very expert. He began firſt with the Admiral's Finger, which put him to much Pain, in regard the Sciſſars were not ſharp enough to cut it off at once; beſides he was fain to ſtop and open the Wound thrice, then he came to the left Arm, making Inciſions in two Places into which the Bullet had pierced. The Admiral endured all this with undaunted Countenance, and wonderful Patience; whilſt thoſe which ſtood by and ſaw him ſo mangled could not refrain from Tears. Captain Monins held him with both his Arms about the Middle, and Cornaton held his Hands. He ſeeing them aſtoniſhed, My Friends, ſaid he, why weep you? I think myſelf happy to be thus handled in the Cauſe of God. And anon caſting his Eyes upon a Miniſter called Merlin, he ſaid, Here ye ſee, my Friends, God's Bleſſings. I am hurt indeed; but I know it is come to paſs by the Will of my heavenly Father, humbly thanking his Majeſty in that he is pleaſed to honour me ſo far, as to ſuffer any Thing for his holy Name. Let us pray unto him, that he would grant unto me the Gift of Perſeverance.

Then looking upon the ſaid Miniſter who wept over him. O Maſter Merlin, ſaid he, what will you not comfort me? Yes, Sir, ſaid he; for wherein may you take greater Comfort, than in calling to Mind how greatly God hath always honoured you in eſteeming you worthy to ſuffer Reproach for his Name's Sake, and true Religion? The Admiral replied, Alas, if God ſhould deal with me according to my Deſerts, he might have put me to worſe Torments than theſe. But bleſſed be his holy Name, in that he is pleaſed to take Pity on me his poor and unworthy Servant. Be of good Chear then, Sir, ſaid another unto him; for ſeeing God hath ſpared your more noble Part whole, you have Cauſe therein to magnify his Goodneſs. In theſe Wounds you have received from God a Teſtimony of his Love, rather than of his Diſpleaſure, ſeeing he hath preſerved your Head and Underſtanding ſafe.

Then ſaid Merlin, Sir, you do well in turning your Thoughts away from him who hath committed this Outrage upon you, in looking only unto God; for no doubt it is his Hand that hath ſmitten you: Therefore for the preſent, ceaſe to think on the Malefactor. I aſſure you, ſaid the Admiral, I do freely forgive him from the Bottom of my Heart, and thoſe alſo that are his Abettors; being fully perſuaded that none of them all could have done me the leaſt Hurt, no, though with violent Hands they had put me to Death. For what is Death itſelf to God's Children, but an aſſured Paſſage to an eternal Reſt and Life?

The King of Navarre and the Prince of Conde having bitterly bewailed this Outrage committed upon the Admiral (as you heard before) about two of the Clock in the Afternoon, the King, accompanied with the Queen's Mother, his Brother, and other of the Lords, went to viſit the Admiral.

The King with Tears ſeemed to be exceeding ſorry for that which was come to paſs, promiſing him, with one blaſphemous Oath upon another, to revenge the Fact, no leſs than if it had been committed upon his own Perſon: Praying him to come and take up his Lodging with him, in the Louvre, for his greater Security and Safety. Whereupon, the Admiral, after ſome Diſcourſe made to the King in ſecret, gave him moſt humble Thanks for ſo great a Favour, as to viſit him in his own Perſon.

Upon the Motion made by the King, Mazilles his chief Phyſician was called, demanding of him, whether the Admiral might ſafely be removed thence into the Louvre, or no? His Anſwer to the King was, that it could not be done without Danger. Some of the Admiral's Friends thought it fitting to requeſt a Guard of Soldiers to be aſſigned by the King unto him for his better Security. The King anſwered, he liked well of that Advice, being fully determined to provide for the Admiral's Safety as his own, and would preſerve him no leſs than the Apple of his Eye. After the King called for the Bullet of Braſs wherewith the Admiral was hurt, that he might ſee it, asking whether he was not put to great Pain when his Finger was cut off, as likewiſe touching the dreſſing of his Arm? Now as Cornaton ſhewed the Bullet, having his Sleeve all bloody (becauſe he was appointed to hold the Admiral's Arm, while it was in dreſſing) the King asked if that were of the Admiral's Blood? and whether ſo much Blood iſſued out of his Wounds? adding (after Cornaton's Anſwer) he never ſaw Man in his Life ſhew greater Conſtancy and Magnanimity of Spirit than the Admiral did.

Then was the Queen-mother deſirous to ſee the Bullet, ſaying, I am glad the Bullet is taken out; for I remember when the Duke of Guiſe was killed before Orleans, the Phyſician told me, that if the Bullet was gotten out, there was no Danger of Death, tho' it were poiſoned.

Then Cornaton anſwered, we have foreſeen that, Madam; for being careful to prevent that Danger, the Admiral had a Medicine given him to expel the Poiſon, if peradventure any ſuch Thing ſhould be.

The Saturday before the Admiral was ſlain, he began to be ſomewhat cheered, ſo as the Surgeons and Phyſicians gave out, they would warrant the Admiral's Life: Becauſe his Arm, having loſt but little of its Strength, would ſoon be healed. This News was brought to the King, who ſeemed to entertain the ſame joyfully. The new married Wife came alſo to viſit the Admiral. But all this was but a Lightning before Death. For that Night there was heard a great clattering of Armour in the City, and many Torches lighted every where, borne by many of the People. Some Gentlemen, whoſe Lodgings were nigh to the Admiral's, roſe, and went out, asking ſome of their Acquaintance the Reaſon why there were ſo many up in Arms at that Hour of the Night: They anſwered; that the King much deſired to ſee a Caſtle aſſayled and defended, deviſed only in ſport to give him Content. They paſſing yet further came to the Louvre, where they likewiſe ſaw many Torches lighted, and Troops of armed Men.

The Guard there could no longer contain themſelves, but began to pick a Quarrel with them; and as one of the ſaid Gentlemen was about to ſpeak, a Gaſcoine Soldier ſtruck him with a Partizan, and then they fell upon the reſt. The Noiſe hereof ſpreading, the Queen-mother ſaid, ſeeing it is not poſſible to retain the Fury of the Soldiers any longer from breaking out, Let the Bell of the Church of St. German be tolled, ſaid ſhe; which was the Signal to begin the Maſſacre.

The Admiral coming to the Knowledge of this Uproar (though he had but few of his Followers about him) was not much moved thereat; truſting (as

(as he often uſed to ſay) upon the King's Favour, whereof he had large Experience. Alſo he knew that when the Pariſians ſhould underſtand how much the King diſliked their Folly, though they had an Intention of doing him ſome Miſchief, yet would they be quieted as ſoon as they ſaw Coſſeins and his Guard.

This Coſſeins was appointed by the Duke of Anjou to defend the Admiral's Lodging, wherein the old Proverb was verified, That the Wolf was ſet to keep the Sheep.

About Break of Day, Auguſt the four and twentieth, 1572, being St. Bartholomew's Day, they began to knock at the Door where the Admiral lay. La Bonne, who lay not far from him, having the Keys, perceiving that there were ſome who came on a Meſſage from the King to the Admiral, came down quickly and opened the Door; preſently Coſſeins fell upon him and ſtabbed him with his Dagger, ſo that he died. Then with his Harquebuſiers ruſhing into the Houſe, killing ſuch as they met, others fled. Cornaton awaking with the Noiſe that he heard at the Door (for he lay in the next Chamber by) ran thither, cauſing the Switzers and other Officers to fortify it. Coſſeins hearing that, cried to him to open it in the King's Name, and he ſo handled the Matter, that with the Help he had, he forced the Door open, and after gained the Stairs. The Admiral and thoſe that were with him, taking Notice how they ſhot off Piſtols and Guns, finding themſelves incloſed in their Enemies Hands, fell to Prayer, begging Pardon of God for their Sins.

The Admiral riſing out of his Bed, and putting on his Night-gown, commanded Merlin the Miniſter to make the Prayer. He alſo, calling earneſtly upon Jeſus Chriſt his God and Saviour, commended his Spirit into his Hands. He that teſtified theſe Things and made Report thereof, coming into the Chamber, and being asked by the Admiral what that Tumult meant; Sir, ſaith he, God is now ſummoning us to look to our End. The Admiral ſeeing what would be the Iſſue, anſwered, I have long ſince expected Death: Save yourſelves if it be poſſible, for you cannot ſecure me; I commend my Soul into the Hands of the merciful God. Thoſe who were preſent and eſcaped, have affirmed, that the Admiral was no more affrighted at Death, which he ſaw preſent before his Eyes, than if there had been no Likelihood thereof at all.

Forthwith every one in the Chamber getting up to the Top of the Houſe, and having found a Window near the Roof, ſaved themſelves there; but the greater part, who were beneath in the next Room to the Admiral were ſlain, others miraculouſly eſcaped. In the mean while Coſſeins having made his Way, cauſed certain Switzers of the Duke of Anjou's Guard to enter into the Houſe.

Beſine, Coſſeins, and Sarlabour, with their Targets in one Hand, and their naked Swords in the other, broke open the Admiral's Chamber-door, and Beſine (who was afterwards ſlain himſelf by one Bertoville upon the Way, after he had eſcaped out of Priſon) coming towards the Admiral, holding the Point of his Sword to his Breaſt, ſaid thus, Art not thou the Admiral? I am the Man, ſaid he, with an undaunted Courage, as the Murderers afterwards confeſſed. Then beholding the naked Sword, Young Man, ſaid the Admiral, thou oughteſt ſomewhat to reſpect my Years, and my Infirmity of Body, but it is not thou that canſt ſhorten my Days. Beſine deſperately thruſt the Admiral into the Body with his Sword, and then ſmote him therewith on the Head, the reſt had every one a Blow at him; ſo as he preſently fell down wounded to Death.

Whilſt this Miſchief was in acting, the Duke of Guiſe being below in the baſe Court, with other Romiſh Catholick Lords, cried to the Murderer above, Beſine, haſt thou done? It is done, ſaith he. Then the Duke replied, Monſieur, our Knight (meaning King Henry's Baſtard) will not believe it unleſs he ſee it with his Eyes; throw him down out of the Window.

Then Beſine and Sarlabour, lifting up the Body of the Admiral, caſt him down unto them, where he lay naked on the Ground, expoſed to all ſort of Scorn and Mocks of the Multitude, ſome trampling on him with their Feet. Now becauſe the Blow which Beſine had given the Admiral on his Head, had ſo covered his Face with Blood iſſuing thence, that his Viſage could not be diſcerned, the Duke of Guiſe ſtooping down took his Handkerchief, and wiping his Face therewith, ſaid, It is he, I know him well enough; and giving this poor dead Body a Spurn on the Head with his Foot (whom all the Murderers in France feared whilſt he lived) he paſſed thence, encouraging his Soldiers, ſaying, We have made a good Beginning; now let us go on to the reſt, for the King hath ſo commanded, the King hath ſo commanded, repeating it over twice.

An Italian of the Duke of Nevers Guard cut off the Admiral's Head, and brought it to the King and Queen-mother; which being embalmed was ſent to Rome to the Pope, and to the Cardinal of Lorrain, being there at that Time. The common People on the next Day cut off his Hands and Privy Members, and then in this woful Plight being dragged up and down three Days in the Channels throughout the Streets, he was at the laſt carried out of the City to a Gibbet in Mount Faucon, where they hanged him by the Feet; from whence ſome that were well diſpoſed, going together in the Night to this Gibbet, took down the Body of the Admiral; which they interred ſo ſecretly, that do the Papiſts what they could, they could never find it out, but it lay buried ſtill, ſo as they were fain to make a Body of Straw, and hung that up inſtead of the Body itſelf, rather than none at all.

This following is the Sentence which the Court of Parliament in Paris denounced againſt Gaſper Coligni, Admiral of France, after he was maſſacred.

1. Firſt; That for his Conſpiracy againſt the King and State in the Year 1572, the ſaid Court hath condemned him for High-Treaſon.

2. That his Memory ſhall be utterly raſed out.

3. If his Body, or any Figure thereof, ſhall be taken, that the ſame ſhall be firſt drawn upon a Hurdle to the Place called Le Grene, and there hanged on a Gibbet.

4. After which a Gibbet ſhall be ſet upon Mount-Faucon, and he there to be hang'd in the moſt eminent Place.

5. His Arms and Armour to be drawn at a Horſe's Tail thro' the Streets of the ſaid City, and other Cities where they ſhould be found, and there to be broken in Pieces, as a Sign of his perpetual Ignominy.

6. All his Goods and Poſſeſſions to be forfeited to the King's Uſe.

7. All his Children to be pronounced ignoble; as alſo held unworthy of any Honour or Dignity whatſoever.

8. His Houſe and Caſtle of Chaſtillon upon the Loin, the baſe Court, and all Appurtenances thereunto appertaining, to be defaced and demoliſhed to the Ground.

9. Then in the ſaid Place this Sentence ſhall be ſet up engraven in Braſs.

10. Laſtly, That on the 24th of Auguſt, 1572, general Proceſſions be made thro' the City of Paris, by way of Thankſgiving to God for this Puniſhment inflicted upon the Conſpirator.

Pronounced and executed at Paris, the 27th and 29th of October, 1572.

Signed MALON.

At Rome ſolemn Maſſes were ſung, and Thanks rendred to God for the good Succeſs which the Roman Catholicks had obtained in maſſacring the Hugonots. At Night, in token of Joy and Gladneſs, were made many great Bonfires in ſundry Places: And, as the Report went, the Cardinal of Lorrain gave a thouſand Crowns to the Perſon that brought him this welcome News.

The ſame Day that the Admiral was hurt, the King adviſed the King of Navarre, his Brother-in-law, to lodge in his Chamber, with ten or twelve of his truſtieſt Servants, to protect him from the Deſigns of the Duke of Guiſe, whom he called an unhappy Boy.

The Admiral before his Death made his Will, in which he gave the King Counſel, that he ſhould not give his Brethren over-great Portions. The Queen-mother hearing this, and reading the ſame to the Duke of Alenſon the King's Brother; now you ſee, ſaith ſhe, the Heart of your Friend the Admiral, whom you ſo much loved and reſpected.

The Duke anſwered, I know not how much he loved me, but I well perceive by this how much he loved the King.

The Engliſh Ambaſſador made almoſt the like Anſwer when the ſaid Queen told him, how the Admiral had adviſed the King not to truſt the Engliſh too far.

Indeed Madam, ſaith he, hereby it appeared that tho' he bare but little good Will to the Engliſh, yet he manifeſted himſelf a loyal Servant to the Crown of France.

The Sieur de Brion, Governor of the little Marqueſs Conde, Son to the late Prince Conde, hearing theſe Stirs, taking his little Maſter even in his Shirt, thinking to convey him ſomewhere out of the Way, met theſe Murderers, who plucking from him the young Prince, maſſacred the old Man in his Preſence, whilſt the Prince with Tears entreated them to ſpare his Governor. But they dyed his white Hairs in his own Blood, and then barbarouſly dragged him thro' the Mire.

It was credibly reported that the Number of the Slain that Sunday Morning and two other Days following, in the City of Paris, and in the Suburbs, did amount to above ten thouſand, counting Lords, Gentlemen, Preſidents, Counſellors, Advocates, Lawyers, Scholars, Phyſicians, Merchants, Tradeſmen, Women, Maids, and Children. The Streets were covered with dead Bodies, the River was dyed with Blood, the Gates and Entrance into the King's Palace painted with the ſame Colour: But the Blood-thirſty were not yet ſatisfied.

But going from Houſe to Houſe with their Aſſociates, where they thought to find any Hugonots, they brake open the Doors, then cruelly murdered whomſoever they met, ſparing neither Sex nor Age. Carts were laden with dead Bodies of young Maidens, Women, Men and Children, which were diſcharged into the River, covered in a Manner all over with the Slain, and dyed red with their Blood, which alſo ſtreamed down the Streets from ſundry Parts thereof, whereat the Courtezans laughed their Fill, ſaying, That the Wars were now ended, and that hereafter they ſhould live in Peace, &c.

An Account of Monſieur Pierre de la Place.

MOnſieur Pierre de la Place Preſident of the Court of Requeſts, whoſe Story we will relate ſomewhat at large, becauſe his ſingular Piety requires the ſame. On Sunday Morning about ſix of the Clock, one Captain Michael, Harquebuſier of the King came into his Lodging, into which he had the more eaſy Acceſs for divers private Reſpects.

This Captain being armed, preſenting himſelf before the ſaid De la Place, the firſt Words he ſpake were, that the Duke of Guiſe had ſlain the Admiral by the King's Appointment, with many Hugonots beſides: And becauſe the reſt of them of what Quality ſoever were deſtinated to Death, he was come to his Lodging to exempt him from the common Deſtruction: Only he deſired to have a Sight of that Gold and Silver which was in the Houſe. The Lord De la Place ſomewhat amazed at the audacious Malapertneſs of the Man, who, in the midſt of ten or twelve Perſons which were preſent in the Room, durſt preſume to utter ſuch Language, ask'd him if he knew where he was, or whether he thought there was a King or no?

To this the Captain blaſpheming anſwered, That he willed him to go with him to know the King's Pleaſure. The Lord de la Place hearing this, fearing alſo ſome Danger towards himſelf by Sedition in the City, ſlipped forth at a Back-door behind his Lodging, purpoſing to get into a Neighbour's Houſe. In the mean while moſt of his Servants vaniſhed out of Sight, and this Captain having ſtored himſelf with a thouſand Crowns, was intreated by the Lady Marets, Daughter to the ſaid Lord, to convey her Father with the Lord Marets her Husband into the Houſe of ſome Roman Catholick, which he conſented to do, and alſo performed it.

After this, de la Place, being refuſed at three ſeveral Houſes, was conſtrained to retire back again into his own, where he found his Wife very penſive and grieved beyond Meaſure, fearing leſt this Captain in the End would caſt her Son-in-law and Daughter into the River, as alſo for the imminent Danger wherein her dear Husband and all his Family were.

But the Lord de la Place, being ſtrengthned by the Spirit of God, with incredible Conſtancy, ſharply rebuked her; and afterwards mildly demonſtrated unto her, that we muſt receive theſe and the like Afflictions from the Hand of God; and ſo having diſcourſed awhile upon the Promiſes of God, comforted her.

Then he commanded all his Servants that were in the Houſe to be called together; who being come into his Chamber, according to his Cuſtom on the Lord's Days, he made a Form of Exhortation to his Family: Then went to Prayer, and began to read a Chapter out of the Book of Job, with the Expoſition or Sermon of Mr. John Calvin upon it. So having ſpoken ſomewhat of God's Mercy and Juſtice, which as a good and wiſe Father uſeth to exerciſe his Elect with ſundry Chaſtiſements, leſt they ſhould be entangled here below with the Things of this World, he ſhewed how needful Afflictions were for Chriſtians, and that it was beyond the Power of Satan or Men to hurt or wrong them, unleſs the Lord of his good Pleaſure gave them Leave. What need have we then, ſaid he, to dread their Authority, which at the moſt can but prevail over our Bodies? Then he went to Prayer again, preparing himſelf and his whole Family rather to endure all Sorts of Torments, yea Death itſelf, than to ſpeak or do any Thing that might tend to the Diſhonour of God.

Having finiſhed his Prayer, Word was brought him, that Seneca the Provoſt-marſhal with many Archers were at the Door of his Lodging, commanding the ſame to be opened in the King's Name, ſaying that he came to ſecure the Perſon of the Lord De la Place, and to preſerve his Houſe from being pillaged by the common Rabble. The Lord De la Place having Intelligence of this Speech, commanded the Door to be opened to him, who entring in, declared the great Slaughter that was made upon the Hugonots every where in the City by the King's Command; adding this withal in Latin, that he would not ſuffer one to live, Qui mingat ad Parietem. Yet have I expreſs Charge from his Majeſty, ſaith he, to ſee that you ſhall ſuſtain no Wrong, but only conduct you to the Louvre, becauſe the King is deſirous to be informed touching many Things about the Affairs of thoſe of the Religion, which he hath now in hand, and therefore willed him to make himſelf ready to go to his Majeſty. The Lord de la Place anſwered, that he always thought himſelf happy before he left this Life, to gain any Opportunity by which he might render an Account to his Majeſty of his Behaviour and Actions.

But in regard ſuch horrible Maſſacres were every where committed, it was impoſſible for him to paſs to the Louvre, without certain Danger of his Perſon; praying him to aſſure his Majeſty of his Willingneſs to come, the while leaving in his Lodgings as many Archers as he thought fitting, until the Fury of the People was ſomewhat pacified. The Provoſt agreed to his Requeſt, and left with him one of his Lieuteants called Toute Voye, with four of his Archers.

Not long after came into his Lodging Preſident Charon, then Provoſt of the Merchants, with whom conferring a little in ſecret, going his Way, he left with the four Archers which were there before, four more of the City Archers. The whole Night following was ſpent in ſtopping up, and fortifying of all Paſſages from entring the Houſe; with Logs and Flint-ſtones, ſtopping up the Windows, as it ſeemed by this ſo exact and diligent a Defence, the Archers were left in the Houſe, to free the ſaid de la Place and all the Family from the common Calamity; till Seneca returning, the next Day after two of the Clock in the Afternoon, declared that he had expreſs Charge from the King to bring him to his Majeſty without Delay. He reply'd as before, that it was dangerous as yet to paſs thro' the City, in regard that even the ſame Morning there was an Houſe pillaged next to his.

Seneca on the contrary inſiſted, ſaying, it was the common Speech of theſe Hugonots to proteſt that they were the King's moſt loyal and obedient Subjects and Servants; but when they were to manifeſt their Obedience to his Commands, then they came off but ſlowly, ſeeming rather much to abhor and deteſt it. And whereas he pretended Danger, Seneca anſwered, that he ſhould have a Captain of Paris who was well known to the People, to accompany him. As Seneca continued his Speech, the Captain of Paris, ſirnamed Pazon, a principal Actor in this Sedition, entered the Chamber of the ſaid Lord of Place, offering his Service to conduct him through the City to the King; which de la Place would by no Means yield to, telling Seneca that he was one of the moſt cruel and bloody minded Men in all the City, and therefore ſeeing he muſt needs go to the King, he intreated that the ſaid Seneca would be his Guard. To whom Seneca anſwerſwered, that having now other Affairs to look unto, he could not conduct him above fifty Paces.

Then his Wife (tho' otherwiſe a very gracious and good Lady) out of that entire Love which ſhe bare to her Husband, proſtrated herſelf at the Feet of the ſaid Seneca, beſeeching and intreating him to accompany her Husband to the King, but the ſaid de la Place, who never ſhewed any Sign of a dejected Spirit, came to his Wife, took her up from the Ground, rebuked her, and told her, that it is not the Arm of Fleſh that we muſt ſtoop unto, but unto God only. Then turning himſelf about, he perceived in his Son's Hat a white Croſs, which through Infirmity he had placed there, thinking thereby to ſave himſelf, for which his Father ſharply chid him, commanding him to pluck that Mark of Sedition thence; telling him, that we muſt now ſubmit ourſelves to bear the true Croſs of Chriſt, namely, thoſe Afflictions and Tribulations which it ſhall pleaſe our good God to lay upon us, as ſure Pledges of that eternal Happineſs, which he hath treaſured up for all his elect Servants. Thus ſeeing himſelf preſſed by the ſaid Seneca, to go with him to the King, reſolving upon Death, which he ſaw he could not avoid, he took his Cloak, embracing his Wife, earneſtly wiſhing her above all Things to have the Fear of God and his Honour in precious Eſteem, and then boldly went on his Way. Coming into the Street where the Glaſshouſe is, certain Murderers, who attended for his coming, with their Daggers in Readineſs, killed him, about three of the Clock in the Afternoon, as an innocent Lamb, in the midſt of ten or twelve of Seneca's Archers, who led him into that Butchery: And then pillaged and embezzeled away what they found in his Lodging, for the Space of five or ſix Days together. His Body (whoſe Soul was now received into Heaven) being carried into a Stable, and covering his Face over with Dung, the next Day they threw him into the River.

Peter Ramus the King's Profeſſor in Logick, a Man renowned among the Learned, was not forgotten. He had many Enemies, particularly one James Carpenter, who ſent the Murderers to the College of Prieſts, where the ſaid Ramus was hidden. But being diſcovered, he offered a good Sum of Money to ſave his Life; yet he was maſſacred, and caſt down out of an high Chamber-window to the Ground, ſo that his Bowels iſſuing out on the Stones, were afterwards trailed through the Streets; the Carcaſs was whipped by certain Scholars, being ſet on by their Tutors, to the great Diſgrace of good Literature, of which Ramus was an eminent Profeſſor.

A young Man who preferred his Mother's Safety in theſe Broils before his own, about the Age of 32 Years, a ſincere Chriſtian of excellent Learning; going abroad early on this dreadful Sunday Morning upon ſome extraordinary Occaſion, and hearing the Rumour about the Death of the Admiral throughout the City of Paris, he out of his ſingular Affection to his Mother, haſtened home with all poſſible Speed, informing her what had happened, and without Delay, not regarding his own Safety, ſecured her in a Place fit for the Purpoſe. After which he went to Prayers in his Study, as his Cuſtom was, where being found, the furious Maſſacrers asked him, if he would obey the King; he anſwered, Yes, but I muſt alſo obey God. Then immediately they began with Battle-axes and Staves to load him with Blows on the Head, that he received his own Blood into his Hands; and then making an End of him, they threw him into the River.

Note, It could not be found that above two Miniſters were ſlain in this bloody Maſſacre.

Philip le Doux a great Jeweller, at his Return home from Guybray Fair, being gone to Bed, his Wife at that Time had the Midwife attending upon her, being ready to be delivered: She hearing theſe Furies below bouncing at the Door, commanding it to be opened to them in the King's Name; as ill as ſhe was, ſhe adventured down, and opened the Door to theſe Tygers, who preſently ſtabbed her Husband in his Bed. The Midwife ſeeing them bent to murder the Woman alſo, now ready to be deliver'd, inſtantly intreated them to ſtay, at leaſt ſo long as the Infant (which would be the 20th Child that God had given her) was born. Having conteſted ſome Time with them, they took this poor Woman half dead with Fear, and thruſt her into the Fundament with a Dagger to the very Hilt. She finding herſelf mortally wounded, and yet deſirous to bring forth her Fruit, ran into a Corn-loft, whither they purſued her, giving her another Stab into the Belly with a Dagger, and then threw her out of a Window into the Street: Upon which Fall the Child came from her Head foremoſt, gaping and yawning, to the great Aſtoniſhment and Confuſion of the Papiſts, who were conſtrained often with Deteſtation to acknowledge and confeſs the Cruelties of their Butchers.

One of the Maſſacrers having ſnatched up a little Child in his Arms, the poor innocent Babe began to play play with his Beard, and to ſmile upon him; but inſtead of being moved to Compaſſion therewith, this barbarous Wretch wounded it with his Dagger, and then threw it all in gore Blood into the River.

At the Maſſacre of Meaux in Brie, one Quintin Croyer, an Elder of the Reformed Church, ſeeing many of his Companions maſſacred before his Eyes, kneeled down, praying God to pardon theſe Murderers; at which Prayer they fell a Laughing, and not being able with their Daggers to pierce a Jerkin of double Buff which he wore, and which they were loth to ſpoil, (for it was a good Booty) they cut aſunder the Points, and then gave him five or ſix Stabs with a Dagger into his Body; and ſo this good Man wounded to Death, calling upon God, rendered up his Spirit into the Hands of him that gave it.

Faron Haren (at the ſame Time) a Man zealouſly affected to Religion, who had been Sheriff of the City in the firſt Troubles, having by his Endeavours chaſed the Maſs out of Meaux, for a Time was mortally hated of theſe ſeditious Papiſts; and therefore they were not contented ſimply to kill him, but firſt cut off his Noſe, Ears, and ſecret Parts, then giving him many ſmall Thruſts into divers Parts of the Body, they conſtrained him too and fro among them, as if he had gone thorough the Pikes. But being weakned, and not able any longer to hold out, in regard of the Blood that iſſued from all the Parts of his Body, he fell with his Face to the Ground, and inſtantly calling upon the Name of the Lord, received infinite Gaſhes and Wounds after he was dead.

Perſecution of the Faithful at Troys in Champaign.

NEWS coming to Troys of the Maſſacre executed at Paris, the greater part of the Judges and Officers of the King were ſent to the Bailiff of Troys, with Commandment diligently to make Search for all thoſe of the Religion from Houſe to Houſe, and to impriſon as many as they could meet withal.

In this City there was a Merchant called Peter Belin, a Man of a turbulent Nature. This Belin was at the Maſſacre in Paris on St. Bartholomew's Day; from whence he was ſent with Letters from the King, dated the eight and twentieth of Auguſt, to the Mayor and Sheriffs of Troys, to cauſe all theſe Perſecutions to ceaſe, and the Priſoners to be ſet at Liberty. On the third of September he came to Troys with theſe two Letters (which had been firſt publiſhed in Paris) with Commandment to deliver them to the foreſaid Magiſtrates to be proclaimed there alſo.

But at the firſt Entrance into the City, he began to enquire, that all might hear him, whether they had not executed the Hugonots there as they had done in Paris; which was his Language through the Streets till he came home. But even ſome of the Papiſts, who were not ſo cruelly minded, demanded of Belin the Contents of the King's Letters, whereof they had ſome Inkling before. But he, like a Bedlam ſwelling with Choler, ſware that whoſoever ſaid they contained any thing tending to Pacification, lyed. Haſtning therefore to the Bailiff's Houſe at Troys, after he had delivered him the Packet, and buzzed ſomewhat in his Ear, he put him on to ſee this Execution done. Now that the ſame might paſs the better for current, the Help of the Executioner of Troys was requeſted, whoſe Name was Charles.

Yet he ſhewing himſelf more juſt and humane than the reſt, peremptorily refuſed to have his Hand in an Act tending to ſo great Cruelty; anſwering, that it was contrary to his Office to execute any Man before Sentence of Death had been firſt pronounced by the Magiſtrates. If they had ſuch Sentence to ſhew againſt any of the Priſoners, he was ready to do Juſtice; otherwiſe he would not preſume, without a Warrant, to bereave any Man of his Life: And ſo with theſe Words he returned home to his Houſe.

Now albeit this Anſwer, proceeding from ſuch a kind of Perſon, whoſe Office and Cuſtom it was to ſhed Blood, might ſomewhat have aſſwaged and taken off the Edge of the moſt barbarous Tyger in the World; yet the Bailiff ſlighting it, was the further enraged. Upon this he ſent for one of the Gaolers of the Priſon who kept thoſe of the Religion; but he being ſick of a Tertian Ague, Martin de Bures was ſent to know his Pleaſure.

The Bailiff telling him at large what Belin had ſignified to him in private; as alſo, that on a ſudden all the Priſoners of the Religion muſt be put to Death, that ſo the Place might be purged of them: This (he ſaid) you muſt not fail to do.

But this de Bures made no Haſte to perform his Charge, acquainting no Man with ought that had paſſed between the Bailiff and him; no, not Perennet the Keeper, who then lay ſick in his Bed.

The next Day the Bailiff came into the Priſon about Seven of the Clock, and calling for Perennet, asked of him with a Smile, Perennet, is it done? Perennet, knowing nothing more or leſs, asked of him What? Then ſaith the Bailiff, Why are not the Priſoners diſpatched? and thereupon was ready with his Dagger to have ſtabbed him. But coming a little better to himſelf, he told Perennet what his Purpoſe was, and how he was to behave himſelf concerning the Execution thereof. At which Words this Perennet ſtanding amazed, though otherwiſe he was a Fellow forward enough of himſelf to commit any Outrages againſt the Proteſtants, certified the Bailiff, that ſuch an inhuman Act could not be committed over to him, fearing leſt in Time to come, Juſtice might be followed againſt him by the Parents or Allies of the Priſoners. No, no, ſaid the Bailiff, fear not, I will ſtand between you and all Harms. Others of the Juſtices have conſented thereto beſides myſelf, and would you have better Security than that?

Within awhile after, the Gaoler coming into the Court of the Priſon, where the Priſoners were abroad recreating themſelves, cauſed every one to reſort to his Cabbin, becauſe, ſaid he, the Bailiff will come by and by, to ſee whether the Keepers have done as he commanded them; which they did. Then began theſe poor Sheep to fear they were deſtinated to the Slaughter, and therefore went preſently to Prayers. Perennet inſtantly called his Companions about him, reporting to them what the Bailiff had given him in Charge. Then they all took an Oath, to execute the ſame; but approaching nigh to the Priſoners, they were ſo ſurprized with Fear, and their Hearts ſo failed them, that they ſtood gazing one upon another, having no Courage to act ſuch a barbarous Cruelty, and ſo returned to the Gaoler's Lodge, whence they came, without doing any thing.

But inſtead of laying this to Heart, as a Warning-piece ſent them from above; as if of ſet Purpoſe they meant to reſiſt againſt the Checks of their own Conſciences, they ſent to the Tavern for ſixteen Pints of the beſt Wine, and intoxicating their Brains they drew a Liſt of all the Priſoners; which they delivered to one who was to call them forth in Order; and as they came they maſſacred them.

One Meurs was no ſooner in their Sight, but one of them let drive at him with the Point of his Halbert, redoubling the ſame oft to have killed him, yet could not. The poor Man took hold on the Point of the Halbert, and himſelf pointing him to the Seat of the Heart, cryed to the Murderer with ſtedfaſt Voice, Here, Soldier, here, right at the Heart, right at the Heart, and ſo finiſhed this Life.

The Maſſacre (ſaith my Author) being ended, the Murderers made a great Pit on the Back-ſide of the Chappel of the Priſon, whereinto they caſt the Bodies one upon another, ſome of them yet breathing. So as one called Mauſere lying in the midſt of them, was eſpied to raiſe up himſelf above his fellow Martyrs in this Pit, upon whom they forthwith throwing Earth (as was reported) ſtifled him, being but half dead. The Blood ran in ſuch Abundance out at the Priſon Door, and thence through a Channel into a River, that it was turned into the Colour of Blood.

as

The next Day after, this worſhipful Bailiff of Troys, that he might apply the Plaiſter when the Parties were dead, cauſes the King's Letters, which he had received before, to be publiſh'd in all the Corners of the City with Sound of Trumpet. The Bailiff was preſent in Perſon at the Publication, and as the Notary read the Contents thereof to him, he pronounced the ſame jeeringly and not with a full and audible Voice, as Matters of ſuch Conſequence ought to be read.

One Dechampeaux Lord of Bonilli, a worthy Counſellor in the City of Orleans was murder'd in the following Manner: One called Texier came with a ſmall Troop to his Houſe, bidding himſelf and his Company to Supper with him. Dechampeaux bid them all kindly welcome, making them good Cheer, being ignorant of that which had happened at Paris. But Supper being ended, Texier bad him deliver his Purſe. Dechampeaux laughing thereat, thinking that he had been but in jeſt, this cruel and unthankful Gueſt with blaſphemous Oaths told him in few Words what had hapned in the City of Paris, and what Preparation there was among the Roman Catholicks of Orleans, to cut off and root out the Proteſtants there. Dechampeaux ſeeing there was no Time now to conteſt with him, gave Money to this Thief: who, to requite the Courteſy and good Entertainment he had had, embrued his Hands in the Blood of his honeſt Neighbour, a Man of as good and upright a Carriage as was in all the City, and afterwards himſelf with his Troop pillaged the whole Houſe.

The 26th Day of Auguſt following, the Maſſacrers began the Execution about the Ramparts in a violent Manner; in theſe Quarters there inhabited many of the Religion. All the Night long was heard nothing but ſhooting off of Guns and Piſtols, forcing open of Doors and Windows, fearful Outcries of the Maſſacred, both of Men, Women, and little Children, trampling of Horſes, and rumbling of Carts, hurrying of dead Bodies to and fro; the Street ſwarming with unwonted Exclamations of thoſe of the common Sort, with horrible Blaſphemies of the Murderers, laughing their Fill at their furious Exploits; ſome crying kill them all, and then take the Spoil; others, ſpoil not, but kill all.

On Wedneſday the Maſſacre began more fiercely, and ſo continued to the End of the Week, not ſparing to break theſe and the like Jeſts upon the poor Maſſacred: Where is now your God? What is become of all your Prayers and Pſalms now? Let your God, whom you have call'd upon, ſave you if he can. Yea ſome of them, who in Times paſt had been Profeſſors of the ſame Religion, whilſt they were maſſacring the poor Innocents, durſt ſing unto them in Scorn the Beginning of the three and fortieth Pſalm: Which runs, Judge me, O God, and plead my Cauſe. Others ſtriking them ſaid, ſing now, Have Mercy on me, O God; which Language they uſed to this poor People in Paris, and elſewhere. But theſe execrable Outrages no way daunted the Courage of the Faithful from dying ſtedfaſt in the Faith.

Touching the Multitude of the Slain, the Murderers did not ſtick to vaunt that in this City they cauſed 18,000 Men to periſh: Alſo an hundred and fifty Women, with a great Number of Children of nine Years old and upward. The Manner of their Death was, firſt to ſhoot them with Piſtols, then to ſtrip them of their Cloaths, and either drowning or elſe burying the dead Bodies in Pits.

On Tueſday at Night certain of this bloody Crew came and knocked at the Door of one that was a Doctor of the Civil Law, called Taillebous; who opening a Caſement, and underſtanding that they had ſomewhat to ſay to him, came down immediately, and opened the Door unto them. At the firſt greeting they told him he muſt die. Whereupon he fell to Prayer, and that with ſuch Conſtancy and Affection, that the Maſſacrers being aſtoniſhed, and by a ſecret celeſtial Power reſtrained, contented themſelves only with taking his Purſe, in which there were fifteen Crowns, and ſo left him, offering him no more Violence.

The Day following certain Scholars reſorting to his Lodging, requeſted of him that they might ſee his Library, into which having brought them, one asked this Book of him, and another another, which he gave them. At length they told him they were not as yet ſatisfied, their Purpoſe being to kill him. He proſtrating himſelf upon the Ground, and having ended his Prayer, willed them to kill him there, but they forced him out of his own Houſe from one Place to another and at length knocked him down.

A rich Burgeſs of the City called Nicholas Bougars Setur de Nove, a Man of ſingular Worth, and highly eſteemed of all, was at that Time deadly ſick. Some of the Murderers came into his Chamber with a Purpoſe to kill him; but ſeeing him in that Caſe ſpared him: Yet finding there Noel Chaperon, Apothecary, who brought him Phyſick, they cut off one of his Arms, then drew him into the open Market-place, where they made an End of him.

The next Day there came one to the Lodging of him that was ſick, who was wont heretofore to viſit him. Now as he was entring in, he met the Mother of the ſick Party at the Door going unto Maſs, and coming up into the Chamber he ſtabbed the ſaid ſick Man with a Dagger in many Places, and ſo killed a dying Man. Then with all Silence, as if he had done no ſuch Act, wiping his Dagger, he went down the Stairs again, and meeting one at the Door who came to viſit him that was ſick, this Fellow ſaluting him paſſed along by him without any Change either in his Behaviour or Countenance.

Francis Stample a rich Merchant, was threatned to have his Throat cut preſently, if he gave not the Murderers Money: But having none about him, he wrote a Letter to his Wife, to ſend him his Ranſom: He had no ſooner ſealed the Letter, but the Murderers deprived him thereof and his Life together, laughing at that they had done. And though they got from his Widow a round Sum of Money, yet could ſhe not obtain at their Hands the Body of her dead Husband. And theſe are the Fruits of Popery.

Among thoſe that confeſſed the Name of Jeſus Chriſt, Francis le Boſſu, a Merchant, with his two Sons, well deſerve our Notice; for whilſt he trampled in the Blood of his Brethren, being beſmeared therewith, and ſpirting, as it were in his Face, he encouraged his Children to take their Death willingly and patiently, uſing this Speech: Children, we are not to learn now that it hath always been the Portion of Believers, to be hated, cruelly uſed, and devoured by Unbelievers; as Chriſt's ſilly Sheep of ravening Wolves: If we ſuffer with Chriſt, we ſhall alſo reign with him. Let not theſe drawn Swords terrify us, they will be but as a Bridge whereby we ſhall paſs over out of a miſerable Life, into immortal Bleſſedneſs. We have breathed and lived long enough among the Wicked, let us now go and live with our God; let us joyfully march after this great Company which is here gone before us, and let us make Way for them, that they ſhall follow after.

When he ſaw the Murderers come, he claſped his Arms about his two Sons, and they likewiſe embraced their Father; as if the Father meant to be a Buckler to his Children, and the Children as if by the Bond of Nature (which binds them to defend his Life from whence they received it) they meant to ward off the Blows which were coming towards their Father, tho' with the Loſs of their own Lives; who when the Maſſacre was ended, were all three found dead, thus embracing one another.

Now after this furious Aſſault, theſe impudent Creatures went up and down the City, ſhewing their white Doublets all beſprinkled with Blood; boaſting, that ſome had killed an hundred, ſome more, ſome leſs.

As the Multitude were dragging the dead Bodies to the River, an Apothecary came and informed them, that Money might be made of the Greaſe that was taken out of their Bodies. Then were the moſt corpulent Bodies preſently ſought for, which when they had ripped up, a great Quantity of that Commodity being gotten thence, was ſold by theſe Merchants for three Shillings the Pound.

Thoſe of Dauphine, of Languedoc, and Provence, were amazed to ſee ſo many Bodies floating upon the Water, ſome diſmembred, others faſtned together with long Poles, others lying on the Shore, ſome having their Eyes put out, others their Noſes, Ears, and Hands cut off, ſtabbed in with Daggers in every Part of their Body, ſo as ſome among them had no human Shape remaining. Yea, ſo great a Number of theſe mangled Corpſes preſented themſelves on the Port of Tournon, that the Men and Women of the Place began to make an Outcry, as if the Enemies had been at their Gates.

Not many Months after, when all theſe bloody Tragedies were ended, the Pope ſent Cardinal Urſin as Legate to the King, who was received with great Solemnity at Lyons. Now having heard Maſs at St. John's Church, and returning by the ſame Door which he went in at, the greateſt Number of the Maſſacrers attended his coming there, and all kneeled down for his Abſolution. But the Legate not knowing the Reaſon of it, one of the principal Agents told him, that they were thoſe who had been the Actors in the Maſſacre. When the Legate perceived that, he abſolved them all with making the Sign of the Croſs.

As ſoon as the Maſſacre was begun at Paris, a Gentleman of Paris, called Monſoreau, obtained a Paſport with Letters to maſſacre thoſe of the Religion at Angiers. Who, being diſappointed of his Prey in one Place, came to the Lodging of a reverend and learned Miniſter, called Mr. John Maſon, ſirnamed de Launay, Sieur of Riviere. Meeting his Wife at his Entrance into the Houſe, he ſaluted her and kiſs'd her, as it is the Manner in France, eſpecially among the Courtiers, and asked her where her Husband was? She anſwered him, that he was walking in his Garden; and then directed him the Way unto him.

Monſoreau having lovingly embraced la Riviere, ſaid unto him, Do you know wherefore I am come? The King hath commanded me to kill you forthwith, and hath given me expreſs Charge to do it, as you ſhall ſee by his Letters. After which Words he ſhewed him a Piſtol ready charged. Riviere replyed, That he knew not wherein he had offended the King; but ſeeing, ſaith he, you ſeek my Life, give me a little Leave to cry to God for Mercy, and to recommend my Spirit into his Hands.

Having made a ſhort Prayer, he willingly preſented his Body to the Murderer, who ſhot him in with his Piſtol, and he immediately died.

And the Miniſter's Wife was ſoon after drowned with nine others.

Six thouſand were murder'd at Roan in much the ſame Manner.

Now touching the Prince of Conde, the King propounded to him three Things; either to go to Maſs, to die, or elſe perpetual Priſon; and therefore to bethink himſelf well which of the three he liked beſt. The Prince anſwered, as it is reported, that by God's Grace he would never chooſe the firſt; as for the two latter, he referred himſelf to the King's Pleaſure.

About three hundred were barbarouſly murdered at Tholouſe, and after taking all their Goods, they ſtripped them naked, and expos'd them to publick View for two Days, and then they threw them in Heaps into great Pits. There were certain Counſellors, who after they were maſſacred, were hung up in their long Gowns upon a great Elm which was in the Court of the Palace.

The Maſſacre at Bourdeaux was begun and carry'd on much in the ſame Manner of thoſe before-mention'd. But their Miniſters found Means to eſcape, hiding themſelves in the Rocks and Marſhes, till they had an Opportunity to take Shipping for England.

One Thing here may be noted, The Houſe of a Counſellor in Parliament, was forced open, pillaged and ſpoiled, and himſelf cruelly murdered. His Clerk ſeeing his Maſter about to be maſſacred, embraced him and comforted him: And being asked whether he were of the Religion, he anſwered Yea, and would die with his Maſter for the ſame. And they were ſlain in one another's Arms.

A Deacon of the reformed Church, named Du Tour, an old Man, who in the Days of his Ignorance had been a Prieſt in the Popiſh Church, being ſick in his Bed, was haled forth into the open Street; of whom it being demanded, whether he would go to Maſs, and thereby ſave his Life; he freely anſwered, no, eſpecially now drawing ſo near his End, both in regard of his Years and grievous Sickneſs: I hope (ſaith he) I ſhall not ſo far forget the eternal Salvation of my Soul, as for Fear of Death to prolong this Life for a few Days; for ſo I ſhould buy a ſhort Term of Life at too dear a Rate. They hearing him ſay ſo, murdered him inſtantly.

It was lamentable to ſee the poor Proteſtants wandring up and down, not knowing where to ſave their Lives: Some were rejected of their own Parents and Kinsfolks, who ſhut their Doors againſt them, pretending as if they knew them not; others were betrayed and delivered up by thoſe, to whoſe Truſt they had committed themſelves: Many were ſaved even by Prieſts and others, from whom a Man would have expected no ſuch Security. Some were ſaved by their very Enemies, whoſe Hearts abhorred ſuch deteſtable Outrages.

All the City was full of Terrors and horrible Threats againſt thoſe of this Religion, ſaying, that the King's Commandment was, that he would not have ſo much as one of them left in his Kingdom. And if any refuſed to go to Maſs, that an Hole ſhould be digged for him in the Earth, in which he ſhould be buried without any more ado.

The Judgment of God fell not long after upon one of theſe Maſſacrers called Vincent, he fell dangerouſly ſick, but in the End recovering again, and as he thought being in good Health, told ſome of his Friends that he felt his Arms ſtrong enough to handle his Coutlax as well as ever he had done. But within awhile after he was overtaken by the Hand of God, with ſuch a Flux of bleeding at his Noſe, as could not be reſtrained nor diverted by any of the Remedies that were then uſed. It was an hideous Sight to ſee him ſtill bowing his Head over a Baſon full of Blood, which without ceaſing iſſued out of his Noſe and Mouth, even until his laſt Gaſp.

Another was taken with ſuch a Swelling in all the Parts of his Body, that there was ſcarcely to be diſcerned in him the Form of a Man, and ſo continued ſwelling till at length he burſt in ſunder.

Thus we have taken a View of the extream Afflictions of the reformed Churches in many Parts of France, wherein within a few Weeks nigh thirty thouſand were put to Death.

In the Year 1573, the Place whither the Faithful fled for Refuge, was aſſailed by open War; namely, Sancerre, the Hiſtory whereof you have here in a ſhort View.

Sancerre being compaſſed about with irreconcileable Enemies, from about the Beginning of April; the want of Victuals having cauſed them to gather together all the Aſſes and Mules they had in the City, they were eaten up in leſs than a Month.

Then they came to Horſes, Cats, Rats, Moles, Mice and Dogs. After theſe were ſpent, they fell to Ox and Cow Hides, Sheep-skins, Parchment, old Shoes, Bullocks and Horſe-hoofs, Horns, and Lanthorns, Ropes, and Horſe-harneſs, Leather Girdles, &c.

In the End of June the third Part of the Beſieged had not Bread to eat. Such as could get Hempſeed, ground it, or ſtamped it in Mortars, and made Bread of it, the like they did with all ſorts of Herbs, mingling the ſame with Bran if they had it. There they eat Meal of Chaff, Nut-ſhells, and of Slate, Execrements of Horſes, and Men, yea, the Offal which lay in the Streets was not ſpared.

The nine and twentieth of July, a poor Man and his Wife were executed for having eaten the Head, Brains, and Entrails of a young Child about three Years old which died of Hunger; having made ready the other Parts to eat at another Meal. An old Woman who lodged in their Houſe, eating a Part of this mournful Dyet, died in Priſon, within a few Hours after her Impriſonment.

They were found guilty of other Offences; but this aggravated the ſame the more. All Children under twelve Years of Age died. It was lamentable to hear the pitiful Voices uttered by poor Parents, for the Miſery wherein their Eyes beheld their languiſhing and dying Infants.

To which Purpoſe you may take Notice here of a memorable Accident. A Boy of ten Years old, being ready to yield up the Ghoſt, ſeeing his Father and Mother weeping over him (whoſe Arms and Legs when they handled, felt as if they had been dried Sticks) ſaid unto them, Wherefore weep ye thus, in ſeeing me famiſhed to Death? Mother, ſaith he, I ask you for no Bread, I know you have none: But ſeeing it is God's Will I muſt die this Death, let us be thankful for it. Did not the holy Man Lazarus die of Famine? Have I not read it in my Bible? In uttering theſe with the like Speeches he yielded up the Ghoſt the thirteenth Day of July.

That all the People died not of a Famine in the End of this Month, it was by reaſon of certain Horſes which were reſerved for Service if need ſhould be, and ſix Kine which were left to give Milk for the Suſtenance of young Infants. Theſe Beaſts were killed, and their Fleſh ſold for the Relief of ſuch as were living, with a little Corn, which by Stealth ſome brought into the City; ſo that a Pound of Wheat was ſold for half a Crown.

There died by Fight in Sancerre but eighty-four Perſons, but of the Famine more than five hundred. Many Soldiers getting forth as they could out of the City, flying from the Famine, choſe rather to die by the Sword of the Enemy; whereof ſome were ſlain, others impriſoned, and the reſt put to Death by the Executioner.

But when all Help of Man failed, the King having ſworn that he would make them eat up one another, the King of Kings delivered them by his wonderful Providence. For at this Inſtant the Ambaſſadors from Poland came into France to accept the Duke of Anjou for their King, at whoſe Intreaty (which could not well be denied) poor Sancerre, more than half famiſhed, was now ſet at Liberty by raiſing the Siege, who otherwiſe were determined to leave their Bones there, rather than to yield themſelves into their Enemies Hands, in regard they had oft threatned them with a general Maſſacre. Whereas now by the King's Appointment they were permitted to paſs out of the City armed; if any would tarry, that they ſhould not be moleſted: Having Liberty granted them to diſpoſe of their Affairs, as they pleaſed, with Promiſe of conſerving the Honour and Chaſtities as well of Virgins, as Women, &c.

There alſo died in the Siege of Rochel, October 20, 1628, ſixteen thouſand Perſons, the reſt enduring a World of Miſeries; moſt of their Food being Hides, Leather, and old Gloves: Other Proviſions being very ſcarce were at an exceſſive Rate, viz.

A Buſhel of Wheat, twenty Pound; a Pound of Bread, twenty Shillings; a Quarter of Mutton, ſix Pounds odd Money; a Pound of Butter, thirty Shillings; an Egg, eight Shillings; an Ounce of Sugar, half a Crown; a dry'd Fiſh, twenty Shillings; a Pint of Wine, twenty Shillings; a Pound of Grapes, three Shillings; a Pint of Milk, thirty Shillings.

Alſo it is reported, that thro' the Famine, young Maids of fourteen or ſixteen Years of Age did look like Women of an hundred Years old. The Famine was ſuch, that the poor People would cut off the Buttocks of the Dead as they lay in the Church-yard unburied. All the Engliſh that came out looked like Anatomies. They lived two Months with nothing but Cow-hides and Goat-skins boiled; the Dogs, Cats, Mice and Frogs being all ſpent.

A brief Diſcourſe of the great Preparations of the Spaniards in order to invade England, in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth.

THE Duke of Parma in Flanders, by Command of the Spaniards, built Ships, and a great Company of ſmall broad Veſſels, each one able to tranſport thirty Horſe, with Bridges fitted for them ſeverally; and hired Mariners from the Eaſt Part of Germany, and provided long Pieces of Wood, ſharpned at the End, and covered with Iron, with Hooks on the one Side, and twenty thouſand Veſſels, with an huge Number of Faggots, and placed an Army ready in Flanders, of 103 Companies of Foot, and four thouſand Horſemen. Among theſe ſeven hundred Engliſh Vagabonds, who were had of all others in moſt Contempt. Neither was Stanly reſpected or heard, who was ſet over the Engliſh, nor Weſtmoreland, nor any other who offer'd their Help: But for their Unfaithfulneſs to their own Country were ſhut out from all Conſultations, and as Men unanimouſly rejected with Deteſtation. And becauſe Pope Sixtus V. in ſuch a Caſe would not be wanting, he ſent Cardinal Alan into Flanders, and renewed the Bulls Declaratory of Pope Pius V. and Gregory XIII. He excommunicateth and depoſeth Queen Elizabeth, abſolveth her Subjects from all Allegiance, and, as if it had been againſt the Turks and Infidels, he ſet forth in Print a Conceit, wherein he beſtowed plenary Indulgences, out of the Treaſure of the Church, beſides a Million of Gold, or ten hundred thouſand Ducats, to be diſtributed (the one half in hand, the reſt when either England, or ſome famous Haven therein ſhould be won) upon all them that would join their Help againſt England. By which Means the Marquiſs of Burgaw, of the Houſe of Auſtria, the Duke of Paſtrana, Armady Duke of Savoy, Veſpaſian, Gonzaga, John Medices, and divers other Noblemen were drawn into theſe Wars.

Queen Elizabeth, that ſhe might not be ſurprized unawares, prepared as great a Navy as ſhe could, and with ſingular Care and Providence made all Things ready neceſſary for War. And ſhe herſelf, who was ever moſt judicious in diſcerning of Mens Wits and Aptneſs, and moſt happy in making Choice, when ſhe made it out of her own Judgment, and not at the Direction of others, deſigned the beſt and moſt ſerviceable to each ſeveral Employment. Over the whole Navy ſhe appointed the Lord Admiral Charles Howard, in whom ſhe repoſed much Truſt; and ſent him to the Weſt part of England, where Captain Drake, whom ſhe made Vice-Admiral, joyned with him. She commanded Henry Seymor, ſecond Son to the Duke of Somerſet, to watch upon the Belgick Shore with forty Engliſh and Dutch Ships, that the Duke of Parma might not come out with his Forces. Albeit ſome were of Opinion, that the Enemy was to be expected and ſet upon by Land Forces, according as it was upon Deliberation reſolved in the Time of Henry VIII. when the French brought a great Navy on the Engliſh Shore.

For the Land Fight, there were placed on the South Shores 20,000; and two Armies beſides were muſter'd of the choiceſt Men for War. The one of theſe which conſiſted of 1000 Horſe, 22,000 Foot, was the Earl of Leiceſter ſet over, and encamped at Tilbury on the ſide of the Thames: For the Enemy was reſolved firſt to ſet upon London. The other Army was govern'd by the Lord Hunſdon, conſiſting of 34,000 Foot, and 2000 Horſe, to guard the Queen.

The Lord Grey, Sir Francis Knolles, Sir John Norris, Sir Richard Bingham, Sir Roger Williams, Men famouſly known for military Experience, were choſen to confer of the Land Fight. Theſe thought fit that all thoſe Places ſhould be fortified, with Men and Ammunition, which were commodious to land in, either out of Spain, or out of Flanders, as Milford-Haven, Falmouth, Plymouth, Portland, the Iſle of Wight, Portſmouth, the open Side of Kent called the Downs, the Thames Mouth, Harwich, Yarmouth, Hull, &c. That trained Soldiers through all the maritime Provinces ſhould meet upon Warning given, to defend theſe Places, that they ſhould, by their beſt Means, hinder the Enemy from landing; and if they did happen to land, then they were to deſtroy the Fruits of the Country all about, and ſpoil every thing that might be of any Uſe to the Enemy, that ſo he might find no more Victuals than what he brought upon his Soldiers with him. And that by continual Alarums the Enemy ſhould find no Reſt Day or Night; but they ſhould not try any Battle, until divers Captains were met together with their Companies. That one Captain might be named in every Shire which might command.

Two Years before, the Duke of Parma conſidering how hard a Matter it was to end the Belgick War, ſo long as it was continually nouriſhed and ſupported with Aid from the Queen, he moved for a Treaty of Peace, by the Means of Sir James Croft, one of the Privy Council, a Man deſirous of Peace, and Andrew Loe a Dutchman, and profeſſed that the Spaniard had delegated Authority to him for this Purpoſe. But the Queen fearing that the Friendſhip between her and the Confederate Princes might be diſſolved, and that ſo they might ſecretly be drawn to the Spaniard; ſhe deferred that Treaty for ſome Time. But now, that the Wars on both Sides prepared might be turned away, ſhe was content to treat of Peace; but ſo, as ſtill holding the Weapons in her Hand.

For this Purpoſe in February Delegates were ſent into Flanders, the Earl of Darby, the Lord Cobham, Sir James Croft, Doctor Dale, and Doctor Rogers. Theſe were received with all Humanity on the Duke's Behalf, and they preſently ſent Dr. Dale to him, that a Place might be appointed for their treating, and that they might ſee the Authority delegated to him by the Spaniſh King. He appointed the Place near to Oſtend, not in Oſtend, which then was holden of the Engliſh againſt the King. His Authority delegated he promiſed then to ſhew, when they were once met together. He wiſhed them to make good Speed in the Buſineſs, leſt ſomewhat might fall out in the mean Time which might trouble the Motions of Peace. Richardotus ſpake ſomewhat more plainly, That he knew not what in this Interim ſhould be done againſt England.

Not long after, Dr. Rogers was ſent to the Prince, by an expreſs Commandment from the Queen, to know the Truth, whether the Spaniard had reſolved to invade England, which he and Richardotus ſeemed to ſignify. He affirmed, that he did not ſo much as think of the Invaſion of England, when he wiſhed that the Buſineſs might proceed with Speed: And was in a Manner offended with Richardotus, who denied that ſuch Words fell from him.

The 12th of April the Count Aremberg, Champigny, Richardotus, Dr. Maeſius, and Garnier, delegated from the Prince of Parma, met with the Engliſh, and yielded to them the Honour both in Walking and Sitting. And when they affirmed that the Duke had full Authority to treat of Peace, the Engliſh moved, that firſt a Truce might be made. Which they denied; alledging, that that Thing muſt needs be hurtful to the Spaniard, who had for ſix Months maintained a great Army, which might not be diſmiſſed upon a Truce, but upon an abſolute Peace. The Engliſh urged, that a Truce was promiſed before they came into Flanders. The Spaniard againſt that held, That ſix Months ſince a Truce was promiſed; which they granted, but was not admitted. Neither was it in the Queen's Power to undertake a Truce for Holland and Zealand, who daily attempted Hoſtility. The Engliſh moved inſtantly, that the Truce might be general for all the Queen's Territories, and for the Kingdom of Scotland: But they would have it but for four Dutch Towns which were in the Queen's Hands, that is, Oſtend, Fluſhing, Bergen ap Zoom, and the Briel; and theſe only during the Treating, and twenty Days after; and that in the mean Time it might be lawful for the Queen to invade Spain, or for the Spaniard to invade England, either from Spain or Flanders. At laſt, when the Engliſh could not obtain an Abſtinence from Arms, and could by no Means ſee the Charter by which the Duke of Parma was authoriſed to treat of Peace; they propoſed theſe Things, that the antient Leagues between the Kings of England and the Dukes of Burgundy might be renewed and confirmed; that all the Dutch might fully enjoy their own Privileges; that with Freedom of Conſcience they might ſerve God; that the Spaniſh and foreign Soldiers might be put out of Dutchland, that neither the Dutch nor their neighbouring Nations might fear them. If theſe Things might be granted, the Queen would come to equal Conditions concerning the Towns which now ſhe held (that all might know, that ſhe took up Arms not for her own Gain, but for the neceſſary Defence both of herſelf and of the Dutch) ſo that the Money which is owing therefore be repay'd. To which they anſwered, That for renewing the old Leagues there ſhould be no Difficulty, when they might have a friendly Conference of that Thing. That concerning the Privileges of the Dutch, there was no Cauſe why foreign Princes ſhould take Care, which Privileges were moſt favourably granted not only to Provinces and Towns reconciled, but even to ſuch as by Force of Arms are brought into Subjection. That foreign Soldiers were held upon urgent Neceſſity, when as Holland, England, and France were all in Arms.

Touching thoſe Towns taken from the King of Spain, and the repaying of the Money, they anſwer'd, That the Spaniard might demand as many Myriads of Crowns to be from the Queen repaid him, as the Belgick War hath coſt him ſince the Time that ſhe hath favoured and protected the Dutch againſt him.

At this Time Dr. Dale by the Queen's Command, going to the Duke of Parma, gently expoſtulated with him touching a Book printed there, ſet out lately by Cardinal Allen, where he exhorts the Nobles and People

ple of England and Ireland to join themſelves to the King of Spain's Forces, under the Conduct of the Prince of Parma, for the Execution of the Sentence of Pope Sixtus V. againſt the Queen, declared by his Bull; in which ſhe is declared an Heretick, illegitimate, cruel againſt Mary Queen of Scots, and her Subjects were commanded to help Parma againſt her: For at that Time a great Number of thoſe Bulls and Books were printed at Antwerp to be diſperſed thro' England. The Duke denied that he had ſeen ſuch a Bull or Book, neither would he do any thing by the Pope's Authority; as for his own King, him he muſt obey. Yet he ſaid, he ſo obſerved the Queen for her princely Virtues, that after the King of Spain, he offered all Service to her. That he had perſuaded the King of Spain to yield to this Treaty of Peace, which is more profitable for Engliſh than Spaniſh: For if they ſhould be overcome they would eaſily repair their Loſs, but if you be overcome, the Kingdom is loſt.

To whom Dale reply'd, That our Queen was ſufficiently furniſhed with Forces to defend the Kingdom. That a Kingdom will not eaſily be gotten by the Fortune of one Battle, ſeeing the King of Spain, in ſo long a War is not yet able to recover his ancient Patrimony in the Netherlands.

Well, quoth the Duke, be it ſo, theſe Things are in God's Hands.

After this the Delegates contended among themſelves by mutual Replications, weaving and unweaving the ſame Web. The Engliſh were earneſt in this, That Freedom of Religion might be granted at leaſt for two Years to the confederate Princes. They anſwered, That as the King of Spain had not intreated that for Engliſh Catholicks; ſo they hoped the Queen in her Wiſdom would not intreat any Thing of the King of Spain which might ſtand againſt his Honour, his Oath, and his Conſcience.

Then they demanded the Money due from the States of Brabant; it was anſwered, That the Money was lent without the King's Knowledge: But let the Account be taken, how much the Money was, and how much the King hath ſpent in theſe Wars, and then it may appear who ſhould look for Repayment.

Thus the Engliſh of ſet Purpoſe were from Time to Time driven off, until the Spaniſh Fleet was come near the Engliſh Shore, and the Noiſe of Guns were heard from the Sea. Then had they Leave to depart, and were by the Delegates honourably brought to the Borders near to Calis. The Duke of Parma had in the mean Time brought all his Forces to the Sea Shore.

Thus this Conference came to nothing; undertaken by the Queen, as the wiſer then thought, to avert the Spaniſh Fleet; continued by the Spaniard that he might oppreſs the Queen, being as he ſuppoſed unprovided, and not expecting the Danger. So both of them tried to uſe Time to their beſt Advantages.

In fine, the Spaniſh Fleet, well furniſhed with Men, Ammunition, Engines, and all warlike Preparation, the beſt indeed that was ever ſeen upon the Ocean, called by that arrogant Title, The Invincible Armada, conſiſting of 130 Ships, wherein there were in all 19,290: Mariners 8350; chained Rowers 11080; great Ordnance 11,630. The chief Commander was Perezius Guſmannus, Duke of Medina Sidonia; and under him Joannes Martinus Ricaldus, a Man of great Experience in Sea Affairs.

The 30th of May they looſed out of the River Tagus, and purpoſing to hold their Courſe to the Groin, in Gallicia, they were beaten and ſcattered by a Tempeſt: The Gallies by the Help of David Gwin an Engliſh Servant, and by the Perfidiouſneſs of Turks which rowed, were carried away into France. The Fleet with much ado after ſome Days came to the Groin and other Harbours near adjoining. The Report was, that the Fleet was ſo ſhaken with this Tempeſt, that the Queen was perſuaded, that ſhe was not to expect that Fleet this Year. And Sir Francis Walſingham, Secretary, wrote to the Lord Admiral, that he might ſend back four of the greateſt Ships, as if the War had been ended. But the Lord Admiral did not eaſily give Credit to that Report; yet with a gentle Anſwer entreated him to believe nothing haſtily in ſo important a Matter: As alſo that he might be permitted to keep thoſe Ships with him which he had, though it were upon his own Charges. And finding a favourable Wind, turned Sails towards Spain, to ſurpriſe the Enemies ſhaken Ships in their Harbours. When he was not far from the Shore of Spain, the Wind turning, and he being charged to defend the Engliſh Shore, fearing that the Enemies unſeen might by the ſame Wind be driven to England, he returned unto Plymouth.

Now with the ſame Wind, the 12th of July the Duke of Medina with his Fleet departed from the Groin. And after a few Days he ſent Rodericus Telius into Flanders, to advertiſe the Duke of Parma, giving him Warning that the Fleet was approaching, and therefore he was to make himſelf ready. For Medina his Commiſſion was to join himſelf with the Ships and Soldiers of Parma; and under the Protection of his Fleet, to bring them into England, and to land his Land Forces upon the Thames Side.

The ſixteenth Day (ſaith the Relator) there was a great Calm, and a thick Cloud was upon the Sea till Noon: Then the North-Wind blowing roughly; and again the Weſt-Wind till Midnight, and after that the Eaſt; the Spaniſh Navy was ſcattered, and hardly gathered together until they came within the Sight of England the nineteenth Day of July. Upon which Day the Lord Admiral was certified by Flemming (who had been a Pyrate) that the Spaniſh Fleet was entred into the Engliſh Sea, which the Mariners call the Channel, and was deſcryed near to the Lizard. The Lord Admiral brought forth the Engliſh Fleet into the Sea, but not without great Difficulty, by the Skill, Labour, and Alacrity of the Soldiers and Mariners, every one labouring; yea the Lord Admiral himſelf put his Hand to this Work.

The next Day the Engliſh Fleet viewed the Spaniſh Fleet coming along with Towers like Caſtles in Height, her Front crooked like the Faſhion of the Moon, the Horns of the Front were extended one from the other about ſeven Miles, or as ſome ſay eight Miles aſunder, ſailing with the Labour of the Winds, the Ocean as it were groaning under it; their Sail was but ſlow, and yet at full Sail before the Wind. The Engliſh were willing to let them hold on their Courſe, and when they were paſſed by, got behind them, and ſo got the Help of the Wind.

Upon the one and twentieth of July, the Lord Admiral of England ſent a Pinnace before, called the Defiance, to denounce the Battle by ſhooting off Pieces, And being himſelf in the Arch-Royal (the Engliſh Pretorian Ship or Admiral) he ſet upon a Ship which he took to be the Spaniſh Admiral, but it was the Ship of Alfonſus Leva. Upon that he beſtowed much Shot. Preſently Drake, Hawkins, and Forbiſher came in upon the Spaniſh hindmoſt Ships, which Ricaldus governed. Upon theſe they thundred. Ricaldus laboured as much as lay in him to ſtay his Men, who fled away in their Navy, until his Ship beaten and much battered with many Shot hardly recovered the Fleet. Then the Duke Medina gathered together his diſſipated Fleet, and ſetting up more Sail, held on their Courſe. Indeed they could do no other, for the Engliſh had gotten the Advantage of the Wind, and their Ships were much more nimble, and ready with incredible Celerity to come upon the Enemy with a full Courſe and then to turn and return, and be on every Side at their Pleaſure. After a long Fight, and that each of them had taken ſome Trial, as of their own Courage, ſo of the Spaniards alſo, the Lord Admiral thought good not to continue the ſame any longer, in regard that forty Ships were then abſent, which at that Inſtant were ſcarce drawn out of Plymouth Haven.

The Night following, St. Katherine, a Spaniſh Ship, being ſadly torn in the Battle, was received into the midſt of the Navy to be mended. Here a great Cantabrian Ship of Oquenda, wherein was the Treaſurer of the Camp, by Force of Gunpowder took Fire, yet it was quenched in Time by the Ships that came to help her. Of theſe that came to help the fired Ship, one was a Galleon, in which was Petrus Waldez; the Foremaſt of the Galleon was caught in the Tackling of another Ship, and broken. This was taken by Drake, who ſent Waldez to Dartmouth, and a great Sum of Money, viz. fifty-five thouſand Ducats, which he diſtributed among the Soldiers. This Waldez coming into Drake's Preſence, kiſſed his Hand, and told him, they had all reſolved to die, if they had not been ſo happy as to fall into his Hands, whom he knew to be noble. That Night he was appointed to ſet forth Light, but neglected it; and ſome German Merchant Ships coming by that Night, he thinking them to be Enemies, followed them ſo far, that the Engliſh Navy reſted all Night when they could ſee no Light ſet forth. Neither did he or the reſt of the Navy find the Admiral until the next Day at Even. The Admiral all Night proceeding with the Bear and the Mary Roſe, carefully followed the Spaniards with Watchfulneſs. The Duke was buſy in ordering his Navy. Alfonſus Leva was commanded to join the firſt and laſt Companies. Every Ship had his Station aſſigned, according to that preſcribed Form which was appointed in Spain; it was preſent Death to forſake his Station. This done, he ſent Gliclius an Anceani to Parma, which might declare to him in what Caſe they were, and left that Cantabrian Ship of Oquenda to the Wind and Sea, having taken out the Money and Mariners, and put them into other Ships. Yet it ſeemeth that he had not Care of all; for that Ship the ſame Day with fifty Mariners and Soldiers lamed, and half burnt, fell into the Hands of the Engliſh, and was carried to Weymouth.

The three and twentieth of the ſame Month, the Spaniards having a favourable North Wind, turned Sails upon the Engliſh; the Engliſh being much readier in the Uſe of their Ships, ſet about a Compaſs for the Wind; having gotten Advantage of the Wind, they came to the Fight on both Side. They fought a while confuſedly with variable Succeſs; whilſt on the one Side the Engliſh with great Courage delivered the London Ships which were incloſed about by the Spaniards: On the other Side the Spaniards by Valour freed Ricaldus from the extreme Danger he was in: Great were the Effulminations which by beating of Ordnances were heard this Day. But the Loſs (by the good Providence of God) fell upon the Spaniſh Side, their Ships being ſo high that the Shot went over our Engliſh Ships; and the Engliſh having ſuch a fair Mark at their taller Ships, never ſhot in vain. Amidſt which Encounters, Cock, an Engliſhman, being caught indeed in the Midſt of the Spaniſh Ships, could not be recovered, but periſhed, howbeit with great Honour he revenged himſelf. Thus a long Time the Engliſh Ships with great Agility were ſometimes upon the Spaniards, giving them the one Side, and then the other, and preſently were off again, and ſtill took the Sea, to make themſelves ready to come in again. Whereas the Spaniſh Ships being of great Burden were troubled and hindred, and ſtood to be Marks for the Engliſh Bullets. For all that, the Admiral would not admit the Engliſh to come to board their Ships, becauſe they had a full Army in their Ships, which he had not; their Ships were many in Number, and greater, and higher, that if they had come to grapple, as ſome would have had it, the Engliſh being much lower than the Spaniſh Ships, muſt needs have had the worſt of them that fought from the higher Ships. And if the Engliſh had been overcome, the Loſs would have been greater than the Victory could have been; for ours being overcome, would have put the Kingdom in Hazard.

The 24th Day of July they gave over fighting on both Sides. The Admiral ſent ſome ſmall Barks to the Engliſh Shore, to ſupply the Proviſion; and divided all his Navy into four Squadrons; the firſt whereof was under his own Government; the next Drake governed; the third, Hawkins; the laſt, Forbiſher. And he appointed out of every Squadron certain little Ships, which on divers Sides might ſet upon the Spaniards in the Night, but a ſudden Calm took them, and ſo that Advice was without Effect.

The 25th Day, St. Anne, the Galleon of Portugal, not being able to hold Courſe with the reſt, was ſet upon by ſome ſmall Engliſh Ships. To whoſe Aid came in Leva, and Didacus Telles Enriques with three Galeaſſes; which the Admiral and the Lord Thomas Howard eſpying, made in againſt the Galeaſſes (the Calm being ſo great that they were drawn in by Boats with Cords) and did ſo beat upon the Galeaſſes with great Shot, that with much ado, and with great Loſs, they hardly recovered the Galeon. The Spaniards reported that the Admiral of Spain was that Day in the hindmoſt Company, and being come nearer the Engliſh Ships than before, was ſore beaten with the Engliſh great Ordnance, many Men ſlain in her, and her great Maſt overthrown. And after that the Admiral of Spain, accompanied with Ricaldus and others, did ſet upon the Engliſh Admiral, who by the Benefit of the Wind ſuddenly turning, eſcaped. The Spaniards hold on their Courſe again, and ſend to the Duke of Parma, that with all Speed he ſhould join his Ships with the King's Fleet. Theſe Things the Engliſh knew not, who write that they had ſtricken the Lanthorn from one of the Spaniſh Ships, the Stem from another, and had ſore beaten the third, doing much Harm to her. That the Non-Parigly, and the Mary-Roſe, fought a while with the Spaniards; and the Triumph being in Danger, other Ships came in good Time to help her.

The next Day the Lord Admiral knighted the Lord Thomas Howard, the Lord Sheffield, Roger Townſend, John Hawkins, and Martin Forbiſher, for their Valour well employed in the laſt Fight. After this they reſolved not to ſet upon the Enemy until they came into the Streight of Calis, where Henry Seimor, and William Winter ſtaid for their coming. Thus with the fair Gale the Spaniſh Fleet went forward, and the Engliſh followed. This great Spaniſh Armada was ſo far from being eſteemed invincible in the Opinion of the Engliſh, that many young Men and Gentlemen, in Hope to be Partakers of a famous Victory againſt the Spaniards, provided Ships of their own Charges, and joined themſelves to the Engliſh Fleet; among whom were the Earls of Eſſex, of Northumberland, of Cumberland, Thomas and Robert Cecil, Henry Brooks, William Hatton, Robert Cary, Ambroſe Willoughby, Thomas Gerard, Arthur Gorge, and other Gentlemen of good Note and Quality.

The ſeven and twentieth Day at Even, the Spaniards caſt Anchor near to Calis, being admoniſhed by their ſkilful Seamen, that if they went any further, they might be endangered by Force of that Tide to be driven into the North Ocean. Near to them ſtood the Engliſh Admiral with his Fleet within a great Gun's Shot. To the Admiral, Seimor and Winter now join their Ships; ſo that now there were an hundred and forty Ships in the Engliſh Fleet, able and well furniſhed for Fight, for Sail, and to turn which Way was needful; and yet there were but fifteen of theſe which bore the Burden of Battle and repulſed the Enemy. The Spaniard, as often he had done before, fore, ſo now with great Earneſtneſs ſent to the Duke of Parma to ſend forty Flie-boats, without which they could not fight with the Engliſh, becauſe of the Greatneſs and Slowneſs of their own Ships, and the Agility of the Engliſh Ships: And intreating him by all means now to come to Sea with his Army, which Army was now to be protected as it were under the Wings of the Spaniſh Armada until they took Land in England.

But the Duke was unprovided, and could not come out at an Inſtant. The broad Ships with flat Bottoms being then full of Chinks muſt be mended. Victuals wanted and muſt be provided. The Mariners being long kept againſt their Wills, began to ſhrink away. The Ports of Dunkirk and Newport, by which he muſt bring his Army to the Sea, were now ſo beſet with the ſtrong Ships of Holland and Zealand, which were furniſhed with great and ſmall Ammunition, that he was not able to come to Sea, unleſs he would come upon his own apparent Deſtruction, and caſt himſelf and his Men wilfully into a headlong Danger. Yet he omitted nothing that might be done, being a Man eager and induſtrious, and inflamed with a Deſire of overcoming England.

But Queen Elizabeth's Providence and Care prevented both the Diligence of this Man, and the credulous Hope of the Spaniard: For by her Command the next Day the Admiral took eight of their worſt Ships, charging the Ordnance therein up to the Mouth with ſmall Shot, Nails, and Stones, and dreſſed them with Wild-fire, Pitch and Roſin, and filled them full of Brimſtone and ſome other Matter fit for Fire, and theſe being ſet on Fire by the Management of Young and Prowſe, were ſecretly in the Night, by the Help of the Wind, ſet full upon the Spaniſh Fleet, which on Sunday the ſeventh of Auguſt they ſent in among them as they lay at Anchor.

When the Spaniards ſaw them come near, the Flame giving Light all over the Sea; they ſuppoſing thoſe Ships, beſides the Danger of Fire, to have been alſo furniſhed with deadly Engines, to make horrible Deſtruction among them; lifting up a moſt hideous Cry, ſome pull up Anchors, ſome for Haſte cut their Cables, they ſet up their Sails, they apply their Oars, and ſtricken with a pannick Terror, in great Haſte they fled moſt confuſedly. Among them the Pretorian Galleaſs floating upon the Seas, her Rudder being broken, in great Danger and Fear drew towards Calis, and ſticking in the Sand was taken by Amias Preſton, Thomas Gerard, and Harvey; Hugh Moncada the Governor was ſlain, the Soldiers and Mariners were either killed or drowned; in her there was found great Store of Gold, which fell to be the Prey of the Engliſh. The Ship and Ordnance went to the Governor of Calis.

The Spaniards report, that the Duke, when he ſaw the fiery Ships coming, commanded all the Fleet to pull up their Anchors, but ſo as the Danger being paſt, every Ship might return again to his Station: And he himſelf returned, giving a Sign to the reſt by ſhooting off a Gun; which was heard but by a few, for they were far off ſcattered, ſome into the open Ocean, ſome thro' Fear were driven upon the Shallows of the Coaſt of Flanders.

Over-againſt Graveling the Spaniſh Fleet began to gather themſelves together. But upon them came Drake and Fenner, and battered them with great Ordnance: To theſe Fenton, Southwel, Beeſton, Croſs, Riman, and preſently after the Lord Admiral, Thomas Howard, and Sheffield came in and all joined together. The Duke Medina, Leva, Oquenda, Ricaldus, and others with much ado getting themſelves out of the Shallows ſuſtained the Engliſh Force as well as they might, until moſt of their Ships were pierced and torn; the Galleon St. Matthew, governed by Diego Pimentellus, coming to aid Francis Toletan, being in the St. Philip, was pierced and ſhaken with the reiterated Shots of Seimor and Winter, and driven to Oſtend, and was at laſt taken by the Fluſhingers. The St. Philip came to the like End; ſo did the Galleon of Biſcay and divers others.

The laſt Day of this Month, the Spaniſh Fleet ſtriving to recover the Straights again, were driven toward Zealand. The Engliſh left off purſuing them, as the Spaniards thought, becauſe they ſaw them in a manner caſt away; for they could not avoid the Shallows of Zealand. But the Wind turning, they got them out of the Shallows, and then began to conſult what were beſt for them to do. By common Conſent they reſolved to return into Spain by the northern Seas, for they wanted many Neceſſaries, eſpecially Shot, their Ships were torn, and they had no hope that the Duke of Parma could bring forth his Forces. And ſo they took to the Sea, and followed the Courſe toward the North. The Engliſh Navy followed, and ſometimes the Spaniſh turned upon the Engliſh, inſomuch that it was thought by many that they would turn back again.

Queen Elizabeth cauſed an Army to encamp at Tilbury, a Place by the Sea-ſide upon the River of Thames. After the Army was come thither, her Majeſty, to ſhew her own Courage, and for the Comfort of her People, went in Perſon to viſit the Camp, which then lay between the City of London and the Sea, under the Charge of the Earl of Leiceſter, where placing herſelf between the Enemy and her City, ſhe viewed her Army, paſſing thro' it divers Times, and lodging in the Borders of it, returned again and dined in the Army. Firſt viewing from Place to Place the People as they were by their Countries lodged and quartered by their ſeveral Camps. Afterwards when they were all reduced into Battle, prepared as it were for Fight, ſhe rode round about with a Leader's Staff in her Hand, only accompany'd with the General, and three or four others attending upon her: But yet to ſhew her State (I well marked it) ſhe had the Sword carry'd before her by the Earl of Ormond. There ſhe was generally ſaluted with Shouts, with all Tokens of Love, Obedience, and Readineſs to fight for her, as the like hath ſeldom been ſeen in an Army. All which tended to ſhew a marvellous Concord, and mutual Love between a Queen and her Subjects; which ſhe requited with very princely Thanks.

I could enlarge the Deſcription hereof with many more Particulars of mine own Obſervation (ſays the Author) for I wandered, as many others did, from Place to Place all the Day, and never heard a Word ſpoke of her, but in praiſing her for her ſtately Perſon and princely Behaviour, in praying for her long Life, and earneſtly deſiring to venture their Lives for her Safety. In her Preſence they ſung Pſalms of Praiſe to Almighty God, for which ſhe greatly commended them, and devoutly praiſed God with them. This that I write you may be ſure I do not with any Comfort, but to give you theſe manifeſt Arguments, that neither this Queen doth diſcontent her People, nor her People do ſhew any Diſcontent in any Thing they be commanded to do for her Service, as heretofore hath been imagined.

This Account was related by a popiſh Spy, in a Letter written here in England to Mendea. The Copy of which Letter was found upon Richard Leigh a Seminary Prieſt, in French and Engliſh: Which Prieſt was executed for High-Treaſon whilſt the Spaniſh Armada was on the Sea.

The ſame Day wherein the laſt Fight was, the Duke of Parma, after his Vows offered to the Lady of Halla, came ſomewhat late to Dunkirk, and was received with opprobrious Words by the Spaniards, as if in Favour of Queen Elizabeth he had ſlipped the faireſt Opportunity that could be to do the Service.

He, to make ſome Satisfaction, puniſhed the Purveyors that had not made Proviſion of Beer, Bread, &c. which was not yet ready nor imbarked, ſecretly ſmiling at the Inſolence of the Spaniards, when he heard them glorying, that what Way ſoever they came upon England, they would have an undoubted Victory; that the Engliſh were not able to endure the Sight of them. Bernardinus Mendoza did indeed by Books in France ſing a fooliſh and triumphant Song before the Victory. The Engliſh Admiral appointed Seimor and the Hollanders to watch upon the Coaſt of Flanders, that the Duke of Parma ſhould not come out; himſelf followed the Spaniards upon their Backs, until they were paſt Edinborough Frith.

The Spaniards ſeeing all Hopes fail, fled amain; and ſo this great Navy, being three Years preparing with great Coſt, was within a Month overthrown, and after many were killed, being chaſed away, was driven about all Britain by Scotland, Orcades, Ireland, toſſed and ſhaken with Tempeſts, and much leſſened, and went home without Glory. There were not an hundred Men of the Engliſh loſt, and but one Ship. Whereupon Money was coined with a Navy fleeing away at full Sail, and this Inſcription, Venit, Vidit, Fugit. Others were coined with the Ships fired, the Navy confounded, in honour of the Queen, inſcribed, Dux Fœmina Facti. As they fled, it is certain that many of their Ships were caſt away upon the Shores of Scotland and Ireland. Above ſeven hundred Soldiers and Mariners were caſt up upon the Scotiſh Shore, who at the Duke of Parma's Interceſſion with the Scots King, the Queen of England conſenting, were after a Year ſent into Flanders. But they that were caſt upon the Iriſh Shore came to more miſerable Fortunes; for ſome were killed by the wild Iriſh, and others were deſtroyed for Fear they ſhould join themſelves with the wild Iriſh (which Cruelty Queen Elizabeth much condemned) and the reſt being afraid, ſick, and hungry, with their torn Ships, committed themſelves to the Sea, and many were drowned.

The Queen came to publick Thankſgiving in St. Paul's Church, accompany'd with a glorious Train of Nobility thro' the Sreets of London, which were hung with blue Cloth: The Companies ſtanding on both ſides in their Liveries, the Banners that were taken from the Enemies were ſpread; ſhe heard the Sermon, and publick Thanks was render'd unto God with great Joy. This publick Joy was augmented when Sir Robert Sidney, returning out of Scotland, brought from the King Aſſurance of his noble Mind and Affection to the Queen, and to Religion; which as in Sincerity he had eſtabliſhed, ſo he purpoſed to maintain with all his Power. Sir Robert Sidney was ſent to him when the Spaniſh Fleet was coming, to congratulate and to give him Thanks for his propenſe Affection towards the Maintenance of the common Cauſe; and to declare how ready ſhe would be to help him if the Spaniard ſhould land in Scotland; and that he might recal to Memory with what ſtrange Ambition the Spaniard had gaped for all Britain, urging the Pope to excommunicate him, to the End that he might be thruſt from the Kingdom of Scotland, and from the Succeſſion in England: And to give him Notice of the Threatning of Mendoza, and the Pope's Nuncio, who threatned his Ruin if they could work it; and therefore warned him to take ſpecial Heed to the Scotiſh Papiſts.

The King pleaſantly anſwered, That he looked for no other Benefit from the Spaniard, than that which Polyphemus promiſed to Ulyſſes, to devour him laſt, after his Fellows were devoured.

To cloſe up this whole Relation, hear what Theodore Beza ſays in his Gratulatory Verſes written in Latin, and ſent to her Majeſty: The Effect of which in Engliſh is this:

With Navy huge the Spaniard proud
The Engliſh Seas had ſpread,
And all to ſet the Engliſh Crown
Upon the Spaniſh Head.
And would you gladly underſtand
The Cauſe of all this Rout,
Ambition firſt did lay the Plot,
And Lucre brought them out.
How well this Pride thus puffed up,
A Puff did overthrow:
And ſwelling Wave ſuch ſwelling Wights,
How well did overflow.
How well that Warrior of Mankind,
That Spaniſh cruel Wolf,
Was toſt and tumbled up and down
Within the Ocean Gulph.
And you for whom both all the Winds
And all the Waters fight;
O noble Queen, of all the World
The only true Delight,
Go forward ſtill to rule for God;
Ambition lay aſide;
Go forward ſtill for Chriſt his Flock
In Bounty to provide.
That thou may'ſt England govern long,
Long England thee enjoy,
As well a Love unto the Good,
As to the Bad annoy.

From Geneva, beſieged by the Duke of Savoy, the 12th Day of Auguſt, 1589.

Your Majeſty's moſt humble Orator,

Theodore Beza.

A Relation of the Diſcovery of the Gunpowder-Treaſon, in the Year 1605, in the Reign of King James I.

WHilſt every Thing ſeemed to procure King James a quiet and peaceable Reign, the Devil envying the Happineſs of the Engliſh, inſpired ſome of his Agents with one of the moſt horrible Plots that ever was heard of. I mean the Gunpowder-Treaſon Plot, which has made ſo much Noiſe in the World, and of which I ſhall relate the Particulars without any Aggravation.

The chief Perſons concerned in this helliſh Contrivance were, Robert Catesby, a Gentleman of Northamptonſhire; Thomas Percy, the Earl of Northumberland's Couſin, John Grant, Ambroſe Rookwood, John and Chriſtopher Wright, Francis Treſham, Guy Fawkes, Sir Everard Digby, Robert and Thomas Winter, Thomas Bates, and Robert Keyes: Some of theſe conſulting together how they might reſtore the Popiſh Religion in England, Percy one of the moſt zealous, propoſed to kill the King, and offered to perform it himſelf. To which Catesby anſwered, That if the King was taken off, there were ſtill two young Princes and the Princeſs, with the greateſt part of the Nobility and Gentry, devoted to the Proteſtant Religion; and unleſs theſe were involved in the ſame Fate with the King, they ſhould render their Condition rather worſe than better, by attempting his Majeſty's Life only: He propoſed therefore the blowing up the King, Queen, and Prince, with both the Houſes of Lords and Commons, at the next Aſſembly of the Parliament, when the King ſhould come to the Houſe, and make his Speech there, at the opening of it; which being approved by the reſt as a moſt glorious Undertaking, it was reſolved to put it in Execution; only ſome, ſcrupling the Lawfulneſs of committing ſo terrible a Slaughter on a religious Account, they agreed, before they they proceeded in it, to demand the Opinion of their Confeſſors; whereupon Henry Garnet, the Superior, with Oſwald Teſmond and John Gerard, two other Prieſts of the Jeſuits Order, were conſulted; who did not only declare the Enterpriſe lawful, but applauded the Deſign as juſt, and even pious; ſince it was to be executed upon excommunicated Hereticks.

Then an Oath of Secrecy was taken by the Conſpirators; and Maſs being celebrated by Gerard, they alſo took the Sacrament to be true to each other, and promote the Plot with all their Powers: After which, Percy took a Houſe adjoining to the Houſe of Lords, from whence they propoſed to dig a Mine under it, which would contain a ſufficient Quantity of Gunpowder to blow up the whole Building; and they began to work on their Mine about Chriſtmas 1604. But the Parliament being prorogued firſt to February, then to October, and again to the 5th of November 1605, they had Time enough, or rather too much, to effect their Deſign, tho' they were obliged to dig through the Foundation of a very thick Wall. When the Conſpirators had almoſt conquer'd this Difficulty, they were ſurpriſed to hear a Noiſe and the talking of People near the Place where they were at work, and began to conclude they were diſcovered; but ſending out Guy Fawkes for Intelligence, he brought them Word, that the Voices he had heard were in an adjoining Cellar, where Coals were expoſed to Sale; that it was exactly under the Houſe of Lords, and now offered to be let: Whereupon Percy went immediately and hired it, putting 36 Barrels of Gunpowder into it, which he imported from Holland, and covered them with Coals and Faggots.

Having made this Proviſion for their grand Deſign, it was conſidered, that tho' the King and Prince might be taken off by this Means, yet the Duke of York and the Princeſs Elizabeth would be out of their Power; and conſequently the Succeſs of their Enterprize muſt ſtill be very doubtful: But Percy, being one of the Band of Penſioners, and well acquainted with the Palace, undertook to ſecure the Duke of York; and it was looked upon as no difficult Matter to ſurpriſe the Princeſs, who reſided at the Lord Harrington's in Warwickſhire, under a Pretence of a Hunting-match. It was next conſider'd, what Money and Horſes they could raiſe towards effecting their Purpoſe: Whereupon Digby promiſed fifteen hundred Pounds, Treſham two hundred, Percy the Rents of Northumberland, which he was empower'd to receive, and computed they would amount to 4000 l. He alſo ingaged to provide ten Horſes from the ſame Quarter; and the reſt of the Conſpirators promiſed to raiſe what Money and Troops they could, that they might be able to make a Stand, and encourage their Friends to take Arms in Defence of their Religion, when the great Blow was given. It was debated alſo, whether they ſhould require the Aſſiſtance of any Princes of their Communion; but it was thought proper to defer this till after the Fact was committed, leſt the Plot ſhould be diſcovered by being communicated to too many. And it was reſolved to proclaim the Princeſs Elizabeth Queen, when they had aſſembled their Troops, a Proclamation being drawn up with this View, in which they made no Mention of the intended Alteration of Religion; this being agreed to be defer'd till their Forces ſhould be joined by ſome of the Catholick Powers. In the mean Time, they reſolved to charge the Puritans with the Deſtruction that was intended: And it is ſuppoſed, they deſigned to aſſaſſinate the Duke of York, by their promiſing to proclaim the Princeſs Elizabeth.

Thus had the Conſpirators form'd their Scheme, and proceeded ſo far in the Execution of it, that there remained little more for them to do, than to ſet Fire to the Train they had laid for blowing up the King, the Queen, the Prince, the Nobility, and the Repreſentatives of a great and flouriſhing People. When, on a ſudden, an unaccountable Fit of Tenderneſs ſeiz'd one of theſe mercileſs Wretches, who, by his endeavouring to reſcue a Friend from this unparallel'd Deſtruction, diſcover'd the deep-laid Deſign, which Lucifer only could be the Contriver of. This Diſcovery was made by the following Letter, ſent to the Lord Monteagle by one of the Conſpirators, about ten Days before the Meeting of the Parliament, viz.

My Lord,

OUT of the Love I bear to ſome of your Friends, I have Regard to your Preſervation; therefore would adviſe you, as you tender your Life, to invent ſome Excuſe to ſhift off your Attendance at this Parliament; for God and Man have concurr'd to puniſh the Wickedneſs of this Time. Think not ſlightly of this Advertiſement, but retire yourſelf into the Country, where you may expect the Event in Safety, for tho' there be no Appearance of any Stir, yet, I ſay, they ſhall receive a terrible Blow in this Parliament, and ſhall not ſee who hurt them. This Counſel is not to be contemn'd, becauſe it may do you Good, and can do you no Harm, for the Danger is paſt, as ſoon as you have burnt the Letter: And I hope God will give you the Grace to make good Uſe of it. To whoſe holy Protection I commit you.

This Lord carried the Letter, the ſame Evening he received it, to Secretary Cecil; who communicated it to ſome other Members of the Council: But they did not think it of that Conſequence, to make any Enquiries about the Matter, till the King ſhould return from Royſton, whither he was gone to hunt, and did not return till the laſt Day of October. The next Day this Letter was ſhewn to his Majeſty; who, upon peruſing it, ſaid, he did not think it was to be contemn'd: To which Cecil anſwer'd, he was of Opinion, that it was written either by a Fool or a Madman, by that Expreſſion in it, The Danger is paſt as ſoon as you have burnt the Letter: For he obſerved, the Warning given by it could be of no Uſe, if the burning the Letter would remove the Danger: But the King interpreted it, That the Danger would be over in as little Time as he could burn the Letter; having great Regard to that Paſſage, They ſhould receive a terrible Blow this Parliament, and yet ſhould not ſee who hurt them. Which ſudden Blow, he apprehended, would be the Effect of Gunpowder; and therefore order'd the Cellars, and all other Places near the Parliament-houſe, to be ſearched. The Earl of Suffolk, who was then Lord-chamberlain, and whoſe proper Buſineſs it was to ſee all Places prepared for the King's Reception, put off the Search till the Day before the Parliament was to meet; and then, taking the Lord Monteagle with him, view'd all the Rooms about the Parliament-houſe, and particularly the Cellar under the Houſe of Lords; which he found full of Wood and Coals; and having asked, who it belonged to? was anſwer'd, to Mr. Percy; who being a Servant of his Majeſty, and one who made ſome Figure at Court, the Earl returned, and acquainted the King in what State he found Things, without ſearching further. But the King's Suſpicion being rather increaſed than diminiſhed by this Report, he ordered all the Wood and Coals in the Cellar, already mentioned, to be removed forthwith; and Sir Thomas Knevet, a Juſtice of Peace of Weſtminſter, and Gentleman of the Privy-Chamber, was ordered to ſee it done, tho' it was then late at Night. This Gentleman was ſo fortunate, as to diſcover the ſix and thirty Barrels of Powder hidden under the Coals; he found alſo a Man ſtanding near the Place, booted and ſpurr'd, with his Cloak on, whom he ſearched, and found upon him a Dark-lanthorn and three Matches. This Perſon proved to be Guy Fawkes, one of the Conſpirators, who paſſed for Percy's Man; who ſeeing their hopeful Plot diſappointed, ſwore, when he was apprehended, that had he been found within the Cellar, he would have blown up himſelf and all of them. This Diſcovery being made, the Secretary and the Lord-Chamberlain immediately acquainted the King with it, who was then in Bed; and the Priſoner, being examined before the Council, was ſo far from being in any Conſternation, that he acknowledged the villainous Deſign, took it all upon himſelf, ſaid his Religion and Conſcience prompted him to it, and would name none of his Accomplices; only obſerv'd, That the Devil had betrayed a very good Deſign, and that there was no Crime in deſtroying an heretical King. However, being carried to the Tower the next Day, and threatned with the Rack, he confeſſed the Conſpiracy, and named his Accomplices; who having ſome Intimation of the Diſcovery, fled into Warwickſhire; where ſome of their Friends were preparing to riſe in Arms, and ſurpriſe the Princeſs Elizabeth, according to the Scheme they had laid; and they actually had broke open a Stable of one Benock, and ſeized ſeven or eight managed Horſes for their Purpoſe: But underſtanding by their Friends who fled from London, that the Enterprize was entirely defeated, they aſſembled about an hundred Horſe, and endeavoured to perſuade their Brethren the Papiſts, to take Arms in the Defence of their Religion: But no body joining them, they fled, and were purſued by Sir Foulk Grevill, Deputy-lieutenant of Warwickſhire, and the Sheriffs of that and the neighbouring Counties, till the Rebels took Shelter at a Houſe called Holbach, in Staffordſhire. Here they endeavoured to defend themſelves, when a Spark of Fire falling into a Parcel of Gunpowder, which they were drying by the Fire, blew up part of the Houſe; whereupon they endeavoured to ſally out of the Gate, and make their Way with their Swords in their Hands, but were repulſed; Catesby, Percy, and Winter, ſetting themſelves Back to Back, reſolved to die fighting: The two firſt had their Deſire, but Winter was wounded and taken; Digby, Rockwood, Grant and Boter ſurrender'd, and Treſham, Robert Winter, and Littleton, were apprehended at their Lodgings at London, and all of them committed to the Tower.

Thomas Winter, upon his Examination, confeſſed the whole Conſpiracy, and acknowledged their Crimes too great to be forgiven; while Digby, on the other hand, ſaid they were provoked to this deſperate Attempt by the ſevere Uſage they met with from the Government, after Hopes had been given them of a Toleration; and Treſham, in his Examination, accuſed Garnet the Jeſuit as privy to the Conſpiracy, tho' he afterwards retracted it, and pretended he had not ſeen Garnet in 16 Years.

And thus theſe reſolute and high aſpiring Papiſts, who dreamed of no leſs than the Deſtruction of King and Kingdoms, promiſed to themſelves no lower Eſtate than the Government of great and ancient Monarchies, were miſerably defeated, and quite overthrown in an Inſtant; falling in the Pit which they had prepared for others, and ſo fulfilling that Sentence which his Majeſty did in a manner prophecy of them in his Oration to the Parliament; ſome immediately ſlain, others wounded, and ſtripped of their Cloaths, left lying miſerably naked, and ſo died rather by Cold than by their Wounds; and the reſt, that either were whole, or but ſlightly wounded, were taken and led by the Sheriff, the ordinary Miniſter of Juſtice, to the Goal, the ordinary Place even of the baſeſt Malefactors, where they remained till they were ſent up to London, being met by an huge Confluence of all Sorts of People, deſirous to ſee them as the rareſt ſort of Monſters; Fools to laugh at them, Women and Children to wonder, all the common People to gaze, the wiſer ſort to ſatisfy their Curioſity in ſeeing the outward Caſes of ſo unparallel'd a Villany, and generally all Sorts of People to gratify their Eyes with the Sight of thoſe whom in their Hearts they deteſted: Serving ſo for a fearful and publick Spectacle of God's fierce Wrath and juſt Indignation.

The Troubles and Perſecution of Bartholomew Copin, Martyr of Chriſt.

IN the Year 1601, Bartholomew Copin of the Valley of Lucerne reſorted unto a Place called Aſt in Piedmont, with certain Merchandiſe, purpoſing to vend the ſame at a Fair there, which was to be kept the Day following. It ſo fell out, that ſitting at Supper in the Evening with ſundry other Merchants, one amongſt the reſt began to uſe ſome Speech about the Diverſities of Religions, and therewithal ſpake ſomething tending to the Diſgrace of thoſe of the Vallies of Angrougne and the neighbouring Villages.

Copin hearing ſuch Speeches caſt forth againſt his Brethren, as he little expected from Men of that ſort, and alſo againſt their Religion, all which tended to the Diſhonour of God; he feared leſt it ſhould be offenſively taken, if he ſhould not make ſome Reply unto thoſe Blaſphemies which he heard with his Ears, and ſo anſwer him who held ſuch a Diſcourſe againſt the Religion which himſelf profeſſed. He who reproved Copin asked, Are you one of Vaudois? He anſwered, Yes I am. And what, ſaid the other, believe you not that God is in the Hoſt? No, ſaid Copin. Oh, ſaid the other, ſee how falſe your Religion is? My Religion, ſaid Copin, is no leſs true than God is God, and as certain as I am ſure to die.

The next Day Copin was called before the Biſhop of Aſt, who told him that Report had been made to him of ſome offenſive Speeches which he had uſed the Night paſt in his Lodging: And therefore it behoved him now to acknowledge his Fault, if he meant to obtain Pardon for the ſame, otherwiſe he muſt look to be chaſtiſed according to his Demerits.

Copin anſwered, he had uttered nothing, but that which he was firſt provided to ſpeak; nor had he ſaid ought, but what he was reſolved to maintain to the Hazard of his Life. He affirmed, that God had beſtowed upon him ſome worldly Goods, as alſo a Wife and Children, but that he was not ſo glued in his Affection to any of them, but he could be content to forego them all rather than the Peace of a good Conſcience.

As touching his Carriage and Behaviour, if it pleaſed him, he ſaid, to make Enquiry thereof among the Merchants of Aſt, they could all reſolve him as touching his honeſt Dealing: Who alſo he knew would witneſs with him, that he had wronged none in all that Time he had converſed among them. And inaſmuch as he was a Merchant trafficking in and about his lawful Calling, he ought to be diſmiſſed and to be no further moleſted. For if it were lawful for Jews and Turks to trade in Fairs and Markets, and to uſe Commerce throughout Piedmont; that Favour ought much more to be permitted unto him who was a Chriſtian. And as touching the Matter of Religion, whereabout he was accuſed, he medled not at all therewith for his own Particular, but had Queſtions propounded to him concerning the ſame by others: In which Regard Leave was granted him to anſwer, and to yield a Reaſon of his Faith in any Place, to any whomſoever they were that ſhould ask what he thought of the ſame: Yea a Liberty was granted even by his Excellency to thoſe of the Valleys of Vaudois, to anſwer any Man to a Queſtion demanded; provided that he proceeded not to teach and inſtruct others.

The Biſhop regarded none of theſe Allegations, but commanded he ſhould be put into Priſon. The next Day the Biſhop's Secretary came to viſit Copin, teſtifying how much good Will he bore him; adviſing him as a Friend, that if he acknowledged not his Fault, he was in great Danger of his Life.

Copin anſwer'd, That his Life was in the Hands of God, and that he would never ſeek to ſave it to the Prejudice of God's Glory: Alſo, that he had not above two or three Turns to fetch here in this World before he arrived in Heaven; and therefore pray'd God ſo to aſſiſt him by his Grace, that he might never leave the ſtrait Way which leadeth thereto.

A few Days after he was examin'd by a Monk, who was an Inquiſitor, in the Preſence of the Biſhop, who vexed him a long while with his ſugared Diſcourſe, and by fair Words endeavoured to draw him to abjure his Religion. But Copin reſiſted him ſtill by the holy Scriptures; ſhewing that if he ſhould now be aſhamed of Chriſt, and deny him, Chriſt might juſtly be aſhamed of him, and utterly deny him before his heavenly Father.

The Monk finiſhed his Diſpute with this dogged Farewel, Away thou curſed Lutheran, thou ſhalt go to all the Devils in Hell; and when thou comeſt to be tormented among thoſe unclean Spirits, then wilt thou remember theſe holy Admonitions which we have tendered unto thee for the Saving of thy Soul, but thou hadſt rather go to Hell, than to reconcile thyſelf to thy holy Mother the Church. To which Copin anſwered, It is not long ſince I was reconciled to the true Church.

After many violent Aſſaults they gave Leave for his Wife to come unto him, and with her one of his Sons, promiſing them to ſet him at Liberty to go home with them, if he would make Amends for his Fault, by acknowledging the ſame. His Wife and Son ſtaid to Supper with him in Priſon: During which Time he uſed many Exhortations tending to Patience; albeit the Wife ſhould depart to her Houſe without an Huſband, or the Child without his Father: For be you well aſſured, ſaid he, that God will be a better Husband and Father unto you than ever I was or can be. For his own Part, he ſaid, he was not bound to love Wife or Children more than Chriſt: Beſides, they had Cauſe to rejoice, and to think him happy, that God would honour him ſo far as to bear Witneſs to his Truth with the Loſs of his Life, and hoped, he ſaid, that God would be ſo favourable to him, as to ſupport him under any Torments he was to endure for his Glory's Sake.

In Concluſion, he committed his Son and Daughter to his Wife's Care, which God had given them in holy Wedlock, charging her again and again, to ſee them brought up virtuouſly and in the Fear of God. He charged his Son to obey his Mother, ſo ſhould he be made Partaker of the promiſed Bleſſing. He intreated them both to pray for him, that God would fortify him againſt all Temptations. And thus having bleſſed his Son, and taken Leave of his Wife, they were conducted out of the Priſon, and he ſhut up as he was before.

The Woman and her Son were diſſolved into Tears, ſighing and crying out, that it would have moved the ſtonieſt Heart to Compaſſion: But this holy Man not contenting himſelf with what he had ſaid to them by Word of Mouth, writ unto his Wife this following Letter:

To my well-beloved Wife, Suſanna Copin, from the Tower of Lucerna.

DEAR Yoke-fellow, I received much Conſolation by your coming to this Place, and by ſo much the more as it were beyond my Expectation; and I ſuppoſe you alſo were not a little comforted that you had ſuch an Opportunity offered you, as to ſup with me the laſt Night. I know not well what they aimed at in permitting you ſo to do. But God ordereth all theſe Things. But as far as I can gueſs, it ſhall be the laſt Time that we ſhall ever ſup together in this Life: And therefore pray to God that he will not ceaſe to be a Comfort unto you. Truſt you ſtill in him, for he hath promiſed never to leave nor forſake thoſe that put their Truſt in him.

Dear Wife, be not over-penſive for me, for if God hath ordained me now to attain unto the End of my Race, and that I muſt render into the Hands of the Almighty my Soul, which ſo long Time he hath lent me; my Hope is, that of his holy and divine Mercy he will receive it into his Kingdom, for his own beloved Son's Sake Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, thro' whom I believe that my Sins are forgiven, for the only Merit of his holy Death and Paſſion. Alſo my Prayer is, that he will aſſiſt me by the Power of his holy Spirit unto my laſt Breath.

Be fervent in Prayer, and in all other Parts of God's Worſhip and Service, for this is the Way to true Bleſſedneſs. Take no Care about ſending any thing unto me for theſe three Weeks, and then I pray you ſend me ſome Money, if you think good, to give the Jaylor, and ſomewhat more for mine own Neceſſaries, if it pleaſe God I live ſo long. Alſo I pray you call to Mind what I have often told you, namely, how God prolonged King Hezekiah's Life for fifteen Years. But he hath preſerved my Life much longer; for it is many Years ago ſince you ſaw me at the Point of Death, and thro' God's Goodneſs I am alive; and I hope, yea I am aſſured, that he will ſo long preſerve me as ſhall be for his Glory and my Good, thro' his eternal Goodneſs.

From the Priſon of Aſt, Sept. 16. 1601.

The Biſhop of Aſt was ſomewhat troubled about this his Priſoner; for if he had let him go, he feared it would breed ſome Scandal, and many might thereby be emboldned to open their Mouths wide againſt the Roman Religion. Beſides, there was a Clauſe in the Contract made between his Excellency and the People of Vaudois, which exempted thoſe of the Religion from Offence, in theſe Words; and if it ſhall fall out that they be asked or queſtioned withal in Piedmont, about the Cauſe of Religion, by any of his Excellency's Subjects, it ſhall be lawful for thoſe of the ſaid Religion to anſwer without ſuffering any penal or perſonal Puniſhment for the ſame.

Now Copin had a Queſtion put to him, in which Reſpect he ought to have been cleared. But the Biſhop would by no Means hear that he had unjuſtly impriſoned him; and therefore that his Death ſhould not be laid to his Charge, nor yet that he ſhould be ſent away abſolved, he ſent the Cauſe of his Indictment to Pope Clement VIII. to know what ſhould be done with him. We cannot learn what Anſwer the Pope returned to the Biſhop; but not long after this good Man was found dead in Priſon, nor without ſome apparent Suſpicion of his being ſtrangled there.

Being dead, he was condemned to be burned, and therefore having cauſed him to be brought out of Priſon, they read his Sentence openly, and the Body was caſt into the Fire.

The Death of Henry III. King of France.

A Friar of the Order of St. Dominick pretended he had Matters of great Conſequence to impart to the King: Who being admitted into his Preſence, upon his Knees preſented a Letter to him, which he drew out of one Sleeve; which whilſt the King attentively read, the Fryar pull'd forth a poiſon'd Knife out of his other Sleeve, wherewith he ſtabbed the King into the lower Part of his Belly. The King finding himſelf wounded, ſnatch'd out the Knife, and ſtruck it into the Friar's Eye, who haſtening to get away, the King cry'd out. His Lords and Gentlemen perceiving what the Friar had done, ſlew him immediately with Rapiers and Swords.

A

A Narration of a bloody Maſſacre in the Valtoline, in the Year 1620.

THE Beginning of the Murders were at Tyrane. The Ringleaders of this cruel Maſſacre gave Orders, that all the Paſſages ſhould be well guarded, that their bloody Deſigns might not be ſo readily diſcovered, and they leſs troubled in the Execution. Then about ſix of the Clock in the Night they entered the Country, like ſo many foaming wild Boars, and cauſed four Muskets to be diſcharged before the Palace of the Seignior Podeſta the principal Magiſtrate of the Place, and rung the great Bell of Tyrane; upon upon which Signal all the Inhabitants of that Vicinity took the Alarm, and made Head toward the ſaid Houſe. They gave Order to break the Bridges which lay towards Bruce, and on the Place they planted a ſtrong Guard, and this was done before Day. Upon the Dawning of the Day the Bells began to ring another Peal at Matello, and then theſe Traitors began to range themſelves together. The Proteſtants who without Fear or Suſpicion came out of their Houſes to ſee what the Matter was, were ſuddenly ſhot in the Place. Others by Force enter'd into the Houſes of Proteſtants, drew them out of their Beds, and without any Compaſſion, ſlew all they could meet with.

One poor Gentleman hid himſelf in a Garret, but the Villains finding him out, threw him out of the Window; and when they found him yet alive, they diſpatch'd him with a Piece of Timber.

Antonia de Salva, a Chancellor in that Valley being appointed Judge upon criminal Cauſes, a Man of the greateſt Authority in the Place, being deſirous to ſave himſelf, together with his Deputy, was drawn out of the Houſe, and ſhot.

Another Gentleman of great Worth, very ſingularly learned, and skilful in many Languages, being at that Time Governour of Teglie, being by Chance in this Hurly-Burly at Tyrane, was alſo with his Servant ſtrangled to Death in the Chamber where he was found.

The Reverend Paſtor of the Church of Tyrane, a Man of great Sanctity and Wiſdom, and a Lover of the Peace of the Country, hearing the Noiſe of theſe Uproars, he and the Paſtor of Mello withdrew themſelves into a Hall, where having commended their Souls to God, were there murdered.

The furious Wretches cut off Baſſo's Head, and carried it into the Church, and fixed it upon a Pole in the Pulpit where he was wont to preach, ſcornfully ſaying, Come down, Baſſo, thou haſt preached long enough already.

In like Manner at the ſame Time the Palace of the Chequer of Tyrane was beſieged by thoſe Hell-hounds, wherein dwelt Seignior John de Cappaul being at that Time Governor. To which Place Michael Lazarone, Chancellor of that Office, had retired himſelf to ſave his Life. But becauſe he was extremely hated by the Papiſts, for his ſingular Piety and Sincerity, he was eſpecially purſued by them; inſomuch as thoſe Rebels followed him even to the Palace, threatning to ſet Fire to the ſame, if he were not delivered into their Hands. Lazarone ſeeing that, was forced that Evening to leave the Houſe, and hide himſelf about the Banks of the River Adda, wherein he covered himſelf, and lay cloſe three whole Hours naked, poor Gentleman, to ſave himſelf. But his Enemies followed him hotly, and at laſt found him, and dragged him out of the Water; and tho' with Tears in his Eyes he begged for his Life, in Conſideration of his dear ſmall Children; but they anſwer'd, That this was no Time for Pity and Favour: But if he would ſwear by the Pope's Bull, and abjure his Faith, they would grant him his Life. But he, with a couragious Reſolution, anſwered, God forbid that I for Love of this temporal Life ſhould deny my Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who with his precious Blood did at ſo dear a Rate redeem me, and after I have ſo long Time, thro' his Grace, freely and publickly confeſſed him, ſhould now hazard the Loſs of eternal Life; I ſay, God forbid. Upon this they immediately murdered him.

The very ſame Evening the Gate of the Palace was burnt to the Ground by thoſe Rebels, who the next Morning entered into the ſame, raging with Fury, and took the Governor Priſoner with his young Son; ſpoiling and ranſacking Wives and Maidens, and carrying away all they could lay Hands on. The Governor of the Place was carry'd away Priſoner, and after he had been a long Time tugged to and fro, he was ſhot.

John Antonio Mazano endeavouring to make Reſiſtance againſt thoſe Rebels, and his Wife defending him, was with herſelf and two young Children miſerably killed.

Another called John Antonio Schloſſer, a Gardoneſe, having made long Reſiſtance, and killed one of the Rebels, was at the laſt taken, and tied to a Tree, and ſo ſhot to Death.

To be ſhort, theſe Villains had no Regard of any Perſon, neither young, nor old, nor weak, nor ſtrong, but all of all Sorts were either ſhot unto Death, or cut in Pieces, or in one Manner or other deſtroyed.

The Ladies who were not ſlain were conſtrained to change their Religion, and go to Maſs; ſaving the Wife of the ſaid Lazarone and her Daughters, and her Niece, being the Wife of one Egido, who by the Aſſiſtance of Almighty God continued in Safety. And there alſo the 8th of Auguſt, the ſaid Ladies were releaſed, who retired themſelves into Retia, viz. the Wife of this Lazarone, and her two Daughters, leaving behind them in the Valtoline one Daughter and two young Sons, who could not obtain Leave to depart the Country.

At the Maſſacre of Teglio were murdered about ſixty Perſons. Theſe wicked Wretches, apparelled in red Caſſocks, and well mounted on Horſeback, marched in the Morning to Tellat, the Hour when the Sermon was, and ran like ravening Wolves to the Volta Church: The Proteſtants who were in the Church, obſerving the evil Intention of thoſe Villains, aroſe ſuddenly from their Seats, and endeavoured to ſhut the Church-door, and to barricado the Place with the Benches. They without laboured with all their Power to enter the Church: But not being able ſo ſpeedily to do it, ſome of them climbed up unto the Windows, and diſcharged their Muskets among the People without reſpect of any Perſon, and killed many of them. At laſt they forced the Door, entred, and ſlew all they found, ſaving a few who promiſed to go to Maſs. Some of the Men and Ladies with their Children fled into the Belfrey to ſave themſelves; but they ſet Fire to the Place, and burnt all that were within.

At the Maſſacre at Sondres in the Mountain of Sondrium and Malenk, were left dead above 140 Perſons. But the Chancellor Giovan Andrea Migardino, with his Brother Gregory, and others of the Church of Sondres withdrew themſelves to the Number of eighteen together, with certain Ladies and their young Children into their own Houſe, which joined to the Palace, and there they fortify'd themſelves with Reſolution to defend themſelves even to the Death, ſeeing that in the Street wherein they dwelt none durſt come out of the Doors, nor enter into the Church which ſtood over againſt them. Nevertheleſs, the Enemy reſolved to ſet upon the Houſe with a thouſand armed Men, threatning alſo to kill the Magiſtrate, in caſe any of them ſhould take any Harm by thoſe who were in the Houſe. Whereupon the Magiſtrate commanded thoſe in the Houſe to depart; who being well armed, immediately took their Way by Sondres towards the Bridge, where for a Time they fortify'd themſelves, then returning again, they drew unto them certain others, and marched towards the Church of the Mountain of Sondres. In which Place being gathered together with the Paſtor, they made their Prayers to God, and afterwards to the Number of threeſcore and thirteen Perſons in all they paſſed the Valley of Malenco, which was beſet by the Enemy on two Sides: But thoſe that kept thoſe Places were by the Providence of God ſo aſtoniſhed, that they fled away, and the Proteſtants, tho' they were purſued to the Tops of the Hills did miraculouſly eſcape with Safety.

Annaidi Lita, Wife of Anthoni Grotti of Chio in the Territory of Vincentine, of an honourable and ancient Houſe, was come out of Italy but few Years before for the Liberty of her Conſcience. She was firſt by them exhorted with fair Words to change her Religion; but ſhe conſtantly perſevering therein, was admoniſhed that ſhe would at leaſt have a Care of her young Infant which ſhe held in her Arms, being about two Months old; otherwiſe ſhe would make Reckoning, that in the twinkling of an Eye both ſhe and her Babe ſhould die: But ſhe with a bold and undaunted Courage, anſwered, That ſhe had not departed out of Italy her native Country, neither had ſhe forſaken all the Eſtate ſhe had, to renounce at laſt that Faith which had been inſpired unto her by the Lord Jeſus Chriſt; yea, that ſhe would rather ſuffer, if it were poſſible a thouſand Deaths. And how, ſaid ſhe, ſhould I have Regard in this Cauſe of my Infant, ſince God our heavenly Father ſpared not his only Son, my Lord Jeſus, but delivered him up to Death for the Love of me and of all Sinners? Then giving them the Child, ſhe ſaid, Behold the Child; the Lord God, who hath Care of the Birds of the Air, will much more be able to ſave this poor Creature, although by you it were abandoned and left in thoſe wild Mountains. So unlacing her Gown, ſhe opened her Breaſt, and ſaid, Here is the Body which you have Power to kill; but my Soul, on which you have no Power to lay Hands, that I commend to my God, and immediately ſhe was cut in Pieces, being 35 Years old. The Infant, becauſe it was a lovely and a ſweet Babe to look on, was ſuffered to live, and was delivered to a Popiſh Woman to nurſe. The Husband of this Gentlewoman was murder'd for the Faith before.

Some Women were by Force taken up to the Top of high and craggy Mountains, and threatned to be thrown down headlong with their Children, unleſs they would go to Maſs. And although ſome being moved and terrify'd with the Horror of Death, had conſented to change their Religion, yet were they murdered for all that without any Pity at all.

The ſame befel a Gentleman of Soglio in the Pregaglia; for though his Life was promiſed him, he was brought into the Market-place pinioned with a Cord, and miſerably ſlain by two Musketiers, being 72 Years of Age, after he had been robbed of his Gold and Silver, where of great Store was found in his Houſe, according to the common and too much practiſed Rule of Roman Catholicks.

An aged Man of 67 Years, was ſet upon an Aſs, his Face turned to the Tail, which he held in his Hand inſtead of a Bridle, and in his other Hand a Book, whom in this Manner they carried through Sondres, with great Joy and Triumph. Then they cut off his Ears, Noſe, and Cheeks, boring Holes into divers parts of his Body, with a ſtrange and unparallel'd Barbarity, until they had quite killed him; but he for the Love of Chriſt his Saviour with great and incredible Courage endured all thoſe Varieties of Torments.

Anthony de Prati of the Hills was with many Words exhorted to abjure his Religion; but he conſtantly perſevered, and with a generous Courage replied in theſe Words, My Soul ſhall be taken up into Abraham's Boſom, and after my Death my Enemies ſhall ſee the Angel of God hard by me, &c. And accordingly an Angel appeared over his Body in a white Garment, being ſeen by thoſe who ſtood near him, who of their own Accord have publickly confeſſed the ſame.

An aged Man of 75 Years, being ſet upon by thoſe inhuman Wretches, leaped out of a Window and paſſed the River Maleto, and having got to his Houſe, and ſhifted his Cloaths, he was aſſailed again, taken Priſoner, and carried to the Palace, put often to the Strapado, and at laſt was ſo hewn and ſliced with a Sword that he had nothing left him but the Arms which were faſtened to the Cord.

Paulo Beretta of Chio in the County of Vicence, a Virgin of the Age of 75 Years, of an honourable, noble, and ancient Family, who came 27 Years before to Sondres to embrace the Goſpel, was by theſe Villains carry'd through Sondres, with all Diſgrace, Shame, and Scorn, having a Mitre of Paper put upon her Head, her Face beſmeared with Dirt, and many Buffets given in her Cheeks, and in many other Faſhions abuſed. Being required to call upon the holy Virgin Mary and the Saints, and to place her Truſt in them: She ſmiling, readily anſwer'd them, My Truſt and my Salvation is in my only Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, and in him only will I reſt. And it is alſo true, That I acknowledge the Virgin Mary for the moſt holy Virgin above all others, which ever was, or ever will be; who was a Virgin before the Birth, a Virgin in the Birth, and after Birth, and ſo ſhall remain. Who tho' ſhe be favour'd and belov'd of God, above all Women in the World, to be made the Mother of my Lord Jeſus the Saviour of the World: Nevertheleſs, becauſe ſhe is not able to know our Neceſſities, as not being omnipotent (for otherwiſe ſhe would be God himſelf) and beſides hath had need of the Merits of her Son, it was not lawful for her to call upon any other than the eternal God, who knoweth all Tnings, and upon no Creature of any Quality whatſoever, &c. In this Manner ſhe endured the Scorns and Outrages with an incredible Conſtancy and Chearfulneſs, ſaying continually, I do willingly endure as becometh me to do, deſiring no better Uſage, ſince the very ſame hath been done to my Lord and Saviour Jeſus, and to his Apoſtles, and to thouſands of the holy Martyrs. At laſt ſhe was carried away to be ſent to Milan. On the 18th of July an elderly Woman was found murder'd in the Highway in the Plain of St. Gregory in the Valtoline, which ſome conjectur'd to be the Body of this Gentlewoman, who 'twas thought was murder'd by the Aſſaſſines in that Place.

Many hid themſelves in Holes and Caves, and Woods, out of which they durſt not come but by Night only to get ſome Food, and that with great Fear and Terror of the watching Enemy; others for want of convenient Food to eat, and others that fed only upon Roots, Leaves, and Graſs, made an End of their Lives; and many were murdered in divers Places, who had no Burial at all; ſo as many Carcaſſes were to be ſeen in Groves and Woods, in the Mountains, and in Waters in many Places.

At the Maſſacre of Berbenno, were ſlain about eleven Perſons. And likewiſe

At Caſpano and Trahorn about the ſame Number; one of them was by his Trade a Taylor, who being diſcovered by his Countrymen and Kindred, was taken and carried to Morbegnio, and being ſollicited to forſake the true Religion, and to embrace the Ro- man, and ſtanding with great Manfulneſs thereto, was condemned to the Fire, and was placed between two Heaps of Wood, to make him recant; but all was in vain; for being asked if he were a Catholick, he anſwered, that he was. Then, if he were a Roman Catholick; he likewiſe affirmed he was ſo. But being demanded if he held the Roman Faith as it is at this Day, he anſwered, No. It is true, ſaid he, that I hold the ancient Catholick Roman Faith, which was preached by St. Paul, That a Man is ſaved by Grace by the Means of Faith, and not by Works, leſt any Man ſhould boaſt. Being demanded, if he believed the Pope to be Head of the Church, he anſwered, No; becauſe Chriſt only is the Head of the Church, according to the Promiſe, I will be with you unto the End of the World. And tho' the Fire was kindled and put out again on purpoſe to draw him to a Recantation, nevertheleſs he perſevered and endured that cruel Death with admirable Conſtancy, the 15th of Auguſt, being 60 Years old.

man,

Giovan Pietro Malacrida, although he were little of Stature, yet was he great and mighty in the Confeſſion of the Truth, inſomuch that for the Love of his Saviour he ſuffered Death with ſingular Chearfulneſs, being forty Years of Age. His Example was devoutly and conſtantly imitated by Elizabeth his Wife, who was killed in the 38th Year of her Age: And moreover theſe Herodian Murderers not therewith content, but joining one barbarous Inhumanity to another, obſerving a Daughter of hers, being an Infant of three Years old, to lie in the Cradle, although it was a Child of a ſweet Countenance, and theſe Wretches ſeeing that the Babe looked lovingly and pleaſantly upon them, which would have been enough to have moved any adamantine Heart to Compaſſion, yet notwithſtanding they took this pretty innocent Babe by the Feet, and daſhed her Brains againſt the Wall.

Upon the moſt ſerious Conſideration it every way appeareth, that the foreſaid Perſons underwent thoſe Sufferings for no other Cauſe, but only for the Truth of the Goſpel! even as by the eternal Decree of God the holy Prophets St. John the Baptiſt, the holy Apoſtles, yea even our Lord Jeſus Chriſt himſelf, and after him thoſe many Millions of the Martyrs in all Ages have done before, and eſpecially in theſe miſerable laſt Times, in Germany, France, England, Scotland, Low-Countries, Bohemia, Italy, Spain, Portugal, &c.

Which Martyrdom they endured willingly, rejoycing that they were counted worthy to ſuffer Blame for the Name of Jeſus, remembring the Promiſe of our Lord, Bleſſed are they who are perſecuted for Righteouſneſs Sake, becauſe the Kingdom of Heaven is theirs. Bleſſed are you when others ſhall revile and perſecute you, and ſhall falſely ſpeak all Evil of you for my Sake: Rejoice and triumph, for your Reward is great in Heaven, for ſo have they perſecuted the Prophets who were before you. Read to this Purpoſe, 1 Pet. 4. Verſes 12, 13, 14, 15, 16. which Words, of all good Chriſtians are to be well pondered and weighed: For firſt by ſuch Trial we periſh not. Secondly, we are thereby made conformable to Chriſt our Head. Thirdly, ſuch Sufferings cauſe unto us greater Joy than Sorrow. Fourthly, they are infallible Marks that the Spirit of God reſts upon us. Fifthly, they manifeſt to all our unfeigned Love to Chriſt and his Goſpel. Sixthly, hereby we have good Proof that the Lord doth correct us, not as a ſevere Judge, but as a moſt loving and tender hearted Father: To whom therefore with his bleſſed Son, and holy Spirit, be all Glory and Honour aſcribed in all the Churches of the Saints, World without End, Amen.

Signs and Prodigies, which happened before and after the Maſſacre in the Valtoline.

THE Proteſtants having appointed Guards in the Churches of the Valtoline, beſides others which were commanded to watch in certain Places to give the Sign by Fire, to the Intent that the whole Valley being warned partly by the Beacons, partly by the Sound of the Bells, might together be ready on a ſudden to take Arms for their Defence againſt the Spaniard, if he ſhould make any Incurſion upon the Valley: About the Month of May 1620, in Sondres, the foreſaid Sentinels reported, that in a Night as they watched, they heard in the Church of Gervaſe a Murmuring as it were of many Perſons, with great Earneſtneſs and Vehemency of arguing and conteſting among themſelves: And from the Church there ſhined upwards through the Steeple a great Brightneſs, inſomuch as the Sentinels lighted their Torches, and aſſembled themſelves to go down into the Church to ſee what the Matter might be. But as they were deſcending down the Stairs, their Lights were put out, and returning afreſh to light their Torches they were put out again with greater Strength, and with much Aſtoniſhment and Trembling; and the Brightneſs which filled the Church ſuddenly vaniſhed, the Weights alſo of the great Clock fell down, and they heard about ten Tolls of a Bell, in ſuch Manner as it uſeth to ring to give the Alarm, which was heard by very many.

Likewiſe in Tyrane, the great Bell was heard in like Manner; and the Magiſtrate commanded them ſuddenly to go and know the Cauſe, but he found that it was not done by the Act of Men, and inſtantly the Servants running from the Belfrey, and diligently attending to ſee this Buſineſs, they diſcerned a Thing like a Cat to deſcend down into the Place.

After the Maſſacre, in the Valtoline, the Evangelick Proteſtant Church, and principally from Teglio and Tyrane a Voice hath been heard to cry, Woe, Woe to you, the Vengeance of God is upon you for the Blood of the Innocent.

Alſo the Bell of the Evangelick Church of Tyrane uſed to ring even at the ſame time that the Sermon was wont to be: and in that Church a Voice was heard, like the Voice of Seinor Anthonio Baſſo, who ſometimes had been there a Miniſter, and was murdered in the ſaid Place, as if himſelf had been preaching in the ſame Place.

In Sondres there was ſeen to deſcend an Army from the Mountains every way furniſhed; which Sight was the Cauſe that many took their Flight, and departed out of Sondres; but ſuddenly this Apparition vaniſhed like a Cloud. Which ſtruck a great Terror into the Minds of the People, inſomuch as many departed out of the Valley, as fearing a dreadful Puniſhment from Heaven.
